THE sustained and growing popularity of BLACK'S LAW DICTIONARY since its appearance more than seventy five years ago is a striking tribute to the scholarship and learning of Henry Campbell Black, and to the essential soundness of the plan adopted by him for the compilation of a legal lexicon.

In accordance with the original plan of this work, consistently adhered to in all subsequent editions, the law student, confronted in his casebooks with reports from the Year Books, or with extracts from Glanvil, Bracton, Littleton, or Coke, will find in this dictionary an unusually complete collection of definitions of terms used in old English, European, and feudal law. The student will also find in this volume, on page 1795, a useful Table of British Regnal Years, listing the sovereigns of England for more than 900 years, together with the date of accession to the throne, and the length of reign.

BLACK'S LAW DICTIONARY has proven its value through the years to the busy practitioner, judge and law student who requires quick and convenient access to the meanings of legal terms and phrases found in statutes or judicial opinions, as well as to the special legal meanings of standard English words—meanings which frequently cannot be found in the ordinary English language dictionaries.

In the period of more than thirty five years since the publication of the Third Edition, the law has undergone substantial changes and developments. The vocabulary of the law has shown corresponding change and growth. A word, in the often quoted dictum of Mr. Justice Holmes, is "the skin of a living thought," and the words of statutes and judicial opinions reflect the contemporary thinking of legislators and jurists. In order adequately to represent this thinking in the fourth edition, a patient examination was made of the thousands of opinions handed down by the appellate courts each year. Some revisions and additions have been included in this Revised Fourth Edition.

Abbreviations of common words and phrases likely to be encountered by the user are explained in appropriate places throughout the main body of the work. A Table of Abbreviations of the titles of law reports, textbooks, and other legal literature is contained in the back of the volume and a Guide to Pronunciation is included in the front of the volume.

New features in this Revised Fourth Edition include the following:

- Code of Professional Responsibility
- Canons of Judicial Ethics
- An Outline of the Minimum Requirements for Admission to Legal Practice in the United States
In order that BLACK’S LAW DICTIONARY should continue to be a handy one-volume work of ready reference, the enlarged contents of the Fourth Edition necessitated an improved typographical style. The type for the Fourth Edition was accordingly completely reset and arranged in wider columns, in a more attractive and readable manner.

The Publisher has drawn freely on its wide experience to make the present edition of BLACK’S LAW DICTIONARY superior to any of the earlier editions. It is confidently believed that this edition, both in content and format, sets new standards of excellence among law dictionaries.

GUIDE TO PRONUNCIATION

A NOTE ON PRONUNCIATION OF LATIN

One of the difficulties in pronouncing legal terms is that one commonly hears both the English system and the Roman system of pronouncing Latin words. Before 1900, the English pronunciation of Latin had developed for legal, medical, and other scientific terms. During the second half of the nineteenth century, scholars established that what is now known as the Roman pronunciation was used between 50 B.C. and 50 A.D. Nearly all schools in English-speaking countries adopted the Roman system of pronunciation. But by and large, the English pronunciation has persisted among lawyers, physicians, and scientists.

The main difference between the Roman and the English pronunciation of Latin is in the long sounds of a, e, and i. In English these sounds are a, ë, and I; in Roman, a is a; e is a; and i is -ë.

The dominant usage among lawyers today is probably the English pronunciation, but the Roman system taught in the schools still has its influence. Lawyers who studied Latin in school often tend toward the Roman, and others often tend toward the English. Yet nearly all use both systems, or variations from both systems, to some extent.

For instance, many lawyers use the English pronunciation, réz jōO'di-kalia, but many lawyers prefer to say raz is neither English nor Roman but a mixture. The Roman ras yOrYdl-ca-ta is seldom if ever heard. Probably all lawyers use the English ha'be-as corpus or ha'bèz corpus; a lawyer who tries to get his client out of jail by asking for a writ of ha'bd-as corpus might not be understood. Yet the prevailing practice is probably to use the Roman d-mè'cils cure-I, and not the English d-mi'cils cferi-ë. One usually hears the mixture, sine qua non; one seldom if ever hears the English One qua non.

The following list is devoted mostly but not altogether to Latin words. For those words the English pronunciation is always in first place, followed by the Roman or a variation of the Roman whenever it is known to be widely used. The English pronunciation is never incorrect in the view of lexicographers, although local or general usage may often cause some lawyers to prefer a pronunciation other than the English. As the study of Latin in the schools declines still further, the English pronunciation is likely to continue to increase.

If a uniform system is ever achieved, it is much more likely to be the English than the Roman.

DEFINITIONS ............................................................................................................................................ LXVII
The continued existence of a free and democratic society depends upon recognition of the concept that justice is based upon the rule of law grounded in respect for the dignity of the individual and his capacity through reason for enlightened self-government. Law so grounded makes justice possible, for only through such law does the dignity of the individual attain respect and protection. Without it, individual rights become subject to unrestrained power, respect for law is destroyed, and rational self-government is impossible.

Lawyers, as guardians of the law, play a vital role in the preservation of society. The fulfillment of this role requires an understanding by lawyers of their relationship with and function in our legal system. A consequent obligation of lawyers is to maintain the highest standards of ethical conduct.

In fulfilling his professional responsibilities, a lawyer necessarily assumes various roles that require the performance of many difficult tasks. Not every situation which he may encounter can be foreseen, but fundamental ethical principles are always present to guide him. Within the framework of these principles, a lawyer must with courage and foresight be able and ready to shape the body of the law to the ever-changing relationships of society.

The Code of Professional Responsibility points the way to the aspiring and provides standards by which to judge the transgressor. Each lawyer must find within his own conscience the touchstone against which to test the extent to which his actions should rise above minimum standards. But in the last analysis it is the desire for the respect and confidence of the members of his profession and of the society which he serves that should provide to a lawyer the incentive for the highest possible degree of ethical conduct. The possible loss of that respect and confidence is the ultimate sanction. So long as its practitioners are guided by these principles, the law will continue to be a noble profession. This is its greatness and its strength, which permit of no compromise.

In furtherance of the principles stated in the Preamble, the American Bar Association has promulgated this Code of Professional Responsibility, consisting of three separate but interrelated parts: Canons, Ethical Considerations, and Disciplinary Rules. The Code is designed to be adopted by appropriate agencies both as an inspirational guide to the members of the profession and as a basis for disciplinary action when the conduct of a lawyer falls below the required minimum standards stated in the Disciplinary Rules.

Obviously the Canons, Ethical Considerations, and Disciplinary Rules cannot apply to non-lawyers; however, they do define the type of ethical conduct that the public has a right to expect not... only of lawyers but also of their non-professional employees and associates in all matters pertaining to professional employment. A lawyer should ultimately be responsible for the conduct of his employees and associates in the course of the professional representation of the client.

The Canons are statements of axiomatic norms, expressing in general terms the standards of professional conduct expected of lawyers in their relationships with the public, with the legal system, and with the legal profession. They embody the general concepts from which the Ethical Considerations and the Disciplinary Rules are derived.

The Ethical Considerations are aspirational in character and represent the objectives toward which every member of the profession should strive. They constitute a body of principles upon which the lawyer can rely for guidance in many specific situations.

The Disciplinary Rules, unlike the Ethical Considerations, are mandatory in character. The Disciplinary Rules state the minimum level of conduct below which no lawyer can fall without being subject to disciplinary action. Within the framework of sufficient gravity to warrant sanctions if they are not obeyed.

7 “Under the conditions of modern practice it is peculiarly necessary that the lawyer should understand, not merely the established standards of professional conduct, but the reasons underlying these standards. Today the lawyer plays a changing and increasingly varied role. In many developing fields the precise contribution of the legal profession is as yet undefined.” Professional Responsibility: Report of the Joint Conference, 44 A.B.A.J. 1159 (1958).

8 "Disbarment, designed to protect the public, is a punishment or penalty imposed on the lawyer... He is accordingly entitled to procedural due process, which includes fair notice of the charge.” In re Ruffalo, 390 U.S. 544, 550, 20 L.Ed.2d 117, 122, 88 S.Ct. 1222, 1226 (1968), rehearing denied, 391 U.S. 961, 20 L.Ed.2d 874, 88 S.Ct. 1833 (1968).

9 A State cannot exclude a person from the practice of law or from any other occupation in a manner or for reasons that contravene the Due Process or Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment... A State can require high standards of qualification... but any qualification must have a rational connection with the applicant’s fitness or capacity to practice law.” In re Moore v. Bd. of Bar Examiners, 353 U.S. 232, 239, 1 L.Ed.2d 796, 801-02, 77 S.Ct. 752, 756 (1957).

10 “[An accused lawyer may expect that he will not be condemned out of a capricious self-righteousness or denied the essentials of a fair hearing.” Kingsland v. Dorsey, 338 U. S. 318, 320, 94 L. Ed. 123, 126, 70 S.Ct. 123, 124-25 (1949).

11 "The canons of professional ethics must be enforced by the Courts and must be respected by members of the Bar.... They are to maintain public confidence in the integrity and impartiality of the administration of justice.” In re Meeker, 76 N.M. 354, 357, 414 P.2d 862, 864 (1966), appeal dismissed, 385 U.S. 449 (1967).

12 "Certainly an erring lawyer who has been disciplined and who having paid the penalty has given satisfactory evidence of repentance and has been rehabilitated and retrained as a member of the Bar if we are to maintain public confidence in the integrity of the Bar.” Note, 43 Cornell L.Q. 489, 495 (1958).

13 The Code seeks only to specify conduct for which a lawyer should be disciplined. Recommendations as to the procedures to be used in disciplinary actions and the gravity of disciplinary measures appropriate for violations of the Code are within the jurisdiction of the American Bar Association Special Committee on Evaluation of Disciplinary Enforcement.

14 The severity of the judgment of this court should be in proportion to the gravity of the offenses, the moral turpitude involved, and the extent that the defendant’s acts and conduct affect his professional qualifications to practice law.” Louisiana State Bar Ass’n v. Steiner, 204 La. 1073, 1092-93, 15 So.2d 843, 850 (1944) (Higgins, J., concurring in decree).

15 "Certainly an erring lawyer who has been disciplined and who having paid the penalty has given satisfactory evidence of repentance and has been rehabilitated and retrained as a member of the Bar if we are to maintain public confidence in the integrity of the Bar.” Note, 43 Cornell L.Q. 489, 495 (1958).

CANON 1
A Lawyer Should Assist in Maintaining the Integrity and Competence of the Legal Profession

ETHICAL CONSIDERATIONS
EC 1-1 A basic tenet of the professional responsibility of lawyers is that every person in our society should have ready access to the independent professional services of a lawyer of integrity and competence. Maintaining the integrity and improving the competence of the bar to meet the highest standards is the ethical responsibility of every lawyer.

EC 1-2 The public should be protected from those who are not qualified to be lawyers by reason of a deficiency in education or moral standards but who nevertheless seek to practice law. To assure the maintenance of high moral and educational standards of the legal profession, lawyers should affirmatively assist courts and other appropriate bodies in promulgating, enforcing, and improving requirements for admission to the bar. In like manner, the bar has a positive obligation to aid in the continued improvement of all phases of pre-admission and post-admission legal education.

EC 1-3 Before recommending an applicant for admission, a lawyer should satisfy himself that the applicant is of good moral character. Although a lawyer should not become a self-appointed investigator or judge of applicants for admission, he should report to proper officials all unfavorable information he possesses relating to the character or other qualifications of an applicant.

EC 1-4 The integrity of the profession can be maintained only if conduct of attorneys in violation of the Disciplinary Rules is brought to the attention of the proper officials. A lawyer should reveal voluntarily to those officials all unprivileged knowledge of conduct of attorneys which he believes clearly to be in violation of the Disciplinary Rules. A lawyer should, upon request, serve on and assist committees and boards having responsibility for the administration of the Disciplinary Rules.

EC 1-5 A lawyer should maintain high standards of professional conduct and should encourage fellow lawyers to do likewise. He should be temperate and dignified, and he should refrain from all court in the administration of justice. Into their hands are committed the property, the liberty and sometimes the lives of their clients. This commitment demands a high degree of intelligence, knowledge of the law, respect for its function in society, sound and faithful judgment and, above all else, integrity of character in private and professional conduct. In re Monaghan, 126 Vt. 53, 222 A.2d 665, 676 (1966) (Holden, C. J., dissenting).

4 A bar composed of lawyers of good moral character is a worthy objective but it is unnecessary to sacrifice vital freedoms in order to obtain that goal. It is also important both to society and the bar itself that lawyers be unimpeachable—free to think, speak, and act as members of an Independent Bar.” Konigsberg v. State Bar, 353 U.S. 252, 273, 1 L.Ed.2d 810, 825, 77 S.Ct. 722, 733 (1957).

5 See ABA Canon 29.

6 ABA Canon 28 designates certain conduct as unprofessional and then states that: “A duty to the public and to the profession devolves upon every member of the Bar having knowledge of such practices upon the part of any practitioner immediately to inform thereof, to the end that the offender may be disbarred.” ABA Canon 29 states a broader admonition: “Lawyers should expose without fear or favor before the proper tribunals corrupt and dishonest conduct in the profession.”

7 “It is the obligation of the organized Bar and the individual lawyer to give unstinted cooperation and assistance to the highest court of the state in discharging its function and duty with respect to discipline and in purging the profession of the unworthy.” Report of the Special Committee on Disciplinary Procedures, 80 A.B.A.Rep. 463, 470 (1955).

illegal and morally reprehensible conduct. Because of his position in society, even minor violations of law by a lawyer may tend to lessen public confidence in the legal profession. Obedience to law exemplifies respect for law. To lawyers especially, respect for the law should be more than a platitudinous concept.

EC 1-6 An applicant for admission to the bar or a lawyer may be unqualified, temporarily or permanently, for other than moral and educational reasons, such as mental or emotional instability. Lawyers should be diligent in taking steps to see that during a period of disqualification such person is not granted a license or, if licensed, is not permitted to practice. In like manner, when the disqualification has terminated, members of the bar should assist such person in being licensed, or, if licensed, in being restored to his full right to practice.

DISCIPLINARY RULES

DR 1-101 Maintaining Integrity and Competence of the Legal Profession.

(A) A lawyer is subject to discipline if he has made a materially false statement in, or if he has deliberately failed to disclose a material fact requested in connection with, his application for admission to the bar.

8 Cf. ABA Canon 32.

9 We decline, on the present record, to disbar Mr. Sherman, warranting a refusal to permit him to further practice law in this state unless he can establish his mental irresponsibility at the time of the offenses charged. The burden of proof is upon him.

10 "We make it clear that we are satisfied that a case has been made against Mr. Sherman, warranting a refusal to permit him to further practice law in this state unless he can establish his mental irresponsibility at the time of the offenses charged. The burden of proof is upon him.

11 "If he establishes such mental irresponsibility, the burden is then upon him to establish his present capability to practice law." In re Sherman, 58 Wash.2d 1, 6-7, 354 P.2d 888, 890 (1960), cert. denied. 371 U.S. 951, 9 L.Ed.2d 506 (1963).

10 "This Court has the inherent power to revoke a license to practice law in this State, where such license was issued by this Court, and its issuance was procured by the fraudulent concealment, or by the false and fraudulent representation by the applicant of a fact which was manifestly material to the issuance of the license." North Carolina ex rel. Attorney General v. Gorson, 209 N.C. 320, 326, 183 S.E. 392, 395 (1936), cert. denied, 298 U.S. 662, 80 L.Ed. 1387, 56 S.Ct. 752 (1936).

See also Application of Patterson, 318 P.2d 907, 913 (Or. 1957), cert. denied, 356 U.S. 947, 2 L.Ed.2d 822, 78 S.Ct. 795 (1958).

(B) A lawyer shall not further the application for admission to the bar of another person known by him to be unqualified in respect to character, education, or other relevant attribute.

DR 1-102 Misconduct.

(A) A lawyer shall not:

(1) Violate a Disciplinary Rule.

(2) Circumvent a Disciplinary Rule through actions of another.

(3) Engage in illegal conduct involving moral turpitude.

11 See ABA Canon 29.

12 In ABA Opinion 95 (1933), which held that a municipal attorney could not permit police officers to interview persons with claims against the municipality when the attorney knew the facts and, therefore, should not be grounded by counsel, the Committee on Professional Ethics said:

"The law officer is, of course, responsible for the acts of those in his department who are under his supervision and control." Opinion 85. In re Robinson, 136 N.Y.S. 548 (affirmed 209 N.Y. 354-1912) held that it was a matter of disbarment for an attorney to adopt a general course of approving the unethical conduct of employees of his client, even though he did not actively participate therein, because "the attorney should not advise or sanction acts by his client which he himself should not do." Opinion 75.

13 "The most obvious non-professional ground for disbarment is conviction for a felony. Most states make conviction for a felony grounds for automatic disbarment. Some of these states, including New York, make disbarment mandatory upon conviction for any felony, while others require disbarment only for those felonies which involve moral turpitude. There are strong arguments that some felonies, such as involuntary manslaughter, reflect neither on an attorney’s fitness, trustworthiness, norcompetence, and, therefore, should not be grounds for disbarment, but most states tend to disregard these arguments and, following the common law rule, make disbarment mandatory on conviction for any felony." Note, 43 Cornell L.Q. 489, 490 (1958).

"Some states treat conviction for misdemeanors as grounds for automatic disbarment... However, the vast majority, accepting the common law rule, require that the misdemeanor involve moral turpitude. While the definition of moral turpitude may prove difficult, it seems only proper that those minor offenses which do not affect the lawyer’s fitness to continue in the profession should not be grounds for disbarment. A good example is a assault and battery conviction which would not involve moral turpitude unless done with malice and deliberation." Id. at 491.

"The term ‘moral turpitude’ has been used in the law for centuries. It has been the subject of many decisions by the courts but has never been clearly defined because of the nature of the term. Perhaps the best general definition of the term ‘moral turpitude’ is that it imports an act of baseness, vileness or depravity in the duties which one person owes to another or to society in general, which is contrary to the usual, accepted and customary rule of right and duty which a person should follow. 58 C.J.S. at page 1201. Although offenses against revenue laws have been held to be crimes of moral turpitude, it has also been held that the attempt to evade the payment of taxes due to the government or any subdivision thereof, while wrong and unlawful, does not involve moral turpitude. 58 C.J.S. at page 1205. Comm. on Legal Ethics v. Scheer, 149 W.Va. 721, 726-27, 143 S.E.2d 141, 145 (1965).
DR 1-103 Disclosure of Information to Authorities.

(A) A lawyer possessing unprivileged knowledge of a violation of DR 1-102 shall report such knowledge to a tribunal or other authority empowered to investigate or act upon such violation.15

(B) A lawyer possessing unprivileged knowledge or evidence concerning another lawyer or a judge shall reveal fully such knowledge or evidence upon proper request of a tribunal or other authority empowered to investigate or act upon the conduct of lawyers or judges.16

A Lawyer Should Assist the Legal Profession in Fulfilling Its Duty to Make Legal Counsel Available

ETHICAL CONSIDERATIONS
EC 2-1 The need of members of the public for legal services is met only if they recognize their need of it.14

"The right and power to discipline an attorney, as one of its officers, is inherent in the court. . . . This power is not limited to those instances of misconduct wherein he has been employed, or has acted, in a professional capacity; but, on the contrary, this power may be exercised where his misconduct outside the scope of his professional relations shows him to be an unfit person to practice law." In re Wilson, 391 S.W.2d 914, 917-18 (Mo. 1965).

EC 2-2 The legal profession, as one of its officers, has need for more than a system of law; they have need for a system of law which functions, and that legal problems, appreciate the importance of seeking assistance,2 and are able to obtain the services of acceptable legal counsel.3 Hence, important functions of the legal profession are to educate laymen to recognize their legal problems, to facilitate the process of intelligent selection of lawyers, and to assist in making legal services fully available.4

Recognition of Legal Problems
EC 2-2 The legal profession should assist laymen to recognize legal problems because such problems may not be self-revealing and often are not means they have need for lawyers." Cheatham, The Lawyer’s Role and Surroundings, 25 Rocky Mt.L.Rev. 405 (1953).

"Law is not self-applying; men must apply and utilize it in concrete cases. But the ordinary man is incapable. He cannot know the principles of law or the rules guiding the machinery of law administration; he does not know how to formulate his desires with precision and to put them into writing; he is ineffective in the presentation of his claims." Address by E. Clinton Bamberger, Association of American Law Schools 1965 Annual Meeting, Dec. 28, 1965, in Proceedings, Part II, 1965, 61, 63-64 (1965).

"A wide gap separates the need for legal services and its satisfaction, as numerous studies reveal. Looked at from the side of the layman, one reason for the gap is poverty and the consequent inability to pay legal fees. Another set of reasons is ignorance of the need for and the value of legal services, and ignorance of where to find a dependable lawyer. There is fear of the mysterious processes and delays of the law, and there is fear of over-reaching and overcharging by lawyers, a fear stimulated by the occasional exposure of shysters." Cheatham, Availability of Legal Services: The Responsibility of the Individual Lawyer and of the Organized Bar, 12 U.C.L.A.L. Rev. 438 (1965).

"It is not only the right but the duty of the profession as a whole to utilize such methods as may be developed to bring the services of its members to those who need them, so long as this can be done ethically and with dignity." ABA Opinion 320 (1968).

"[T]here is a responsibility on the bar to make legal services available to those who need them. The maxim, ‘privilege brings responsibilities,’ can be expanded to read, exclusive privilege to render public service brings responsibility to assure that the service is available to those in need of it." Cheatham, Availability of Legal Services: The Responsibility of the Individual Lawyer and of the Organized Bar, 12 U.C.L.A.L.Rev. 438, 443 (1965).

"The obligation to provide legal services for those actually caught up in litigation carries with it the obligation to make preventive legal advice accessible to all. It is among those unaccustomed to business affairs and fearful of the ways of the law that such advice is often most need- ed. If it is not received in time, the most valiant and skilful representation in court may come too late." Professional Responsibility: Report of the Joint Conference, 44 A.B.A.J. 1159, 1216 (1958).
timely noticed. Therefore, lawyers acting under proper auspices should encourage and participate in educational and public relations programs concerning our legal system with particular reference to legal problems that frequently arise. Such educational programs should be motivated by a desire to benefit the public rather than to obtain publicity or employment for particular lawyers. Examples of permissible activities include preparation of institutional advertisements and professional articles for lay publications and participation in seminars, lectures, and civic programs. But a lawyer who participates in such activities should shun personal publicity.

EC 2-3 Whether a lawyer acts properly in volunteering advice to a layman to seek legal services depends upon the circumstances. The giving of advice that one should take legal action could well be in fulfillment of the duty of the legal profession to assist laymen in recognizing legal problems. The advice is proper only if motivated by a desire to protect one who does not recognize that he may have legal problems or who is ignorant of his legal rights or obligations. Hence, the advice is improper if motivated by a desire to obtain personal benefit, secure personal publicity, or cause litigation to be brought merely to harass or injure another. Obviously, a lawyer should not contact them with their opinion, as well as by the courts.

"To the same effect are opinions of this Committee: Opinion 179 dealing with radio programs presenting a situation in which legal advice is suggested in connection with a drafting of a will; Opinions 205 and 227 permitting institutional advertising of lawyer referral plans; Opinion 191 holding that advertising by lawyer members of a non-bar associated sponsored plan violated Canon 27. The Illinois Ethics Committee, in its Opinion 201, sustained bar association institutional advertising of a checking-up plan.

"This Committee has passed squarely on the question of the propriety of institutional advertising in connection with a legal check-up plan. Informal Decision C-171 quotes with express approval the Michigan Ethics Committee as follows:

As a public service, the bar has in the past addressed the public as to the importance of making wills, consulting counsel in connection with real estate transactions, etc. In the same way, the bar, as such, may recommend this program, provided always that it does it in such a way that there is not suggestion of solicitation on behalf of any individual lawyer." ABA Opinion 307 (1962).

6 We recognize a distinction between teaching the lay public the importance of securing legal services preventively in character and the solicitation of professional employment by or for a particular lawyer. The former tends to promote the public interest and enhance the public estimation of the profession. The latter is calculated to injure the public and degrade the profession.

"Advertising which is calculated to teach the layman the benefits and advantages of preventive legal services will benefit the lay public and enable the lawyer to render a more desirable and beneficial professional service. ..." ABA Opinion 179 (1938).

7 [A bar association] may engage in a dignified institutional educational campaign so long as it does not involve the identification of a particular lawyer with the check-up program. Such educational material may point out the value of the annual check-up and may be printed in newspapers, magazines, pamphlets, and brochures, or produced by means of films, radio, television or other media. The printed materials may be distributed in a dignified way through the offices of persons having close dealings with lawyers as, for example, banks, real estate agents, insurance agents and others. They may be available in lawyers' offices. The bar association may prepare and distribute to lawyers materials and forms for use in the annual legal check-up." ABA Opinion 307 (1962).

8 A lawyer may with propriety write articles for publications in which he gives information upon the law ... ABA Canon 40.

"The newsletters, by means of which respondents are alleged to have advertised their wares, were sent to the officers of union clients represented by their firm."

9 Cf. ABA Opinions 307 (1962) and 179 (1938).

There is no ethical or other valid reason why an attorney may not write articles on legal subjects for magazines and newspapers. The fact that the publication is a trade journal or magazine, makes no difference as to the ethical question involved. On the other hand, it would be unethical and contrary to the precepts of the Canons for the attorney to allow his name to be carried in the magazine or other publication . . . as a free legal adviser for the subscribers to the publication. Such would be contrary to Canons 27 and 35 and Opinions heretofore announced by the Committee on Professional Ethics and Grievances. (See Opinions 31, 41, 42, and 56)." ABA Opinion 162 (1936).

10 See ABA Canon 28.

11 This question can assume constitutional dimensions: "We meet at the outset the contention that 'solicitation' is wholly outside the area of freedoms protected by the First Amendment. To this contention there are two answers. The first is that a State cannot foreclose the exercise of constitutional rights by mere labels. The second is that abstract discussion is not the only species of communication which the Constitution protects; the First Amendment also protects vigorous advocacy, certainly of lawful ends, against governmental intrusion.

"However valid may be Virginia's interest in regulating the traditionally illegal practice of barratry, maintenance and champerty, that interest does not justify the prohibition of the NAACP activities discored by this record. Malevolent intent was of the essence of the common-law offenses of fomenting or stirring up litigation. And whatever may be or may have been true of suits against governments in other countries, the exercise in our own, as in this case of First Amendment rights to enforce Constitutional rights through litigation, as a matter of law, cannot be deemed malicious." NAACP v. Button, 371 U.S. 415, 429, 439-40, 9 L.Ed.2d 405, 415-16, 422, 83 S.Ct. 328, 336, 341 (1963).

a non-client, directly or indirectly, for the purpose of being retained to represent him for compensation.

EC 2-4 Since motivation is subjective and often difficult to judge, the motives of a lawyer who volunteers advice likely to produce legal controversy may well be suspect if he receives professional employment or other benefits as a result. 13 A lawyer who volunteers advice that one should obtain the services of a lawyer generally should not himself accept employment, compensation, or other benefit in connection with that matter. However, it is not improper for a lawyer to volunteer such advice and render resulting legal services to close friends, relatives, former clients (in regard to matters germane to former employment), and regular clients.14

EC 2-5 A lawyer who writes or speaks for the purpose of educating members of the public to recognize their legal problems should carefully refrain from giving or appearing to give a general solution applicable to all apparently similar individual problems, 15 since slight changes in fact situations may require a material variance in the applicable advice; otherwise, the public may be misled and misadvised. Talks and writings by lawyers for laymen should caution them not to attempt to solve individual problems upon the basis of the information contained therein.10

13 “The Canons of Professional Ethics of the American Bar Association and the decisions of the courts quite generally prohibit the direct solicitation of business for gain by an attorney either through advertisement or personal communication; and also condemn the procuring of business by indirectness through touters of any kind. It is disreputable for an attorney to breed litigation by seeking out those who have claims for personal injuries or other grounds of action in order to secure them as clients, or to employ agents or runners, or to reward those who bring or influence the bringing of business to his office. . . . Moreover, it tends quite easily to the institution of baseless litigation and the manufacture of perjured testimony. From early times, this danger has been recognized in the law by the condemnation of the crime of common barratry, or the stirring up of suits or quarrels between individuals at law or otherwise.” In re Ades, 6 F.Supp. 467, 474-75 (D. Mary. 1934).

14 “Rule 2, §a. . .
[A] member of the State Bar shall not solicit professional employment by . . . (1) Volunteering counsel or advice except where ties of blood relationship or trust make it appropriate.” Cal. Business and Professions Code § 6076 (West 1962).

15 “Rule 18 . . . A member of the State Bar shall not advise inquirers or render opinions to them through or in connection with a newspaper, radio or other publicity medium of any kind in respect to their specific legal problems, whether or not such attorney shall be compensated for his services.” Cal. Business and Professions Code § 6076 (West 1962).

16 “In any case where a member might well apply the advice given in the opinion to his individual affairs, the lawyer rendering the opinion [concerning problems common to members of an association and distributed to the members through a periodic bulletin] should specifically state that this opinion should not be relied on by any

Selection of a Lawyer: Generally
EC 2-6 Formerly a potential client usually knew the reputations of local lawyers for competency and integrity and therefore could select a practitioner in whom he had confidence. This traditional selection process worked well because it was initiated by the client and the choice was an informed one.

EC 2-7 Changed conditions, however, have seriously restricted the effectiveness of the traditional selection process. Often the reputations of lawyers are not sufficiently known to enable laymen to make intelligent choices. 17 The law has become increasingly complex and specialized. Few lawyers are willing and competent to deal with every kind of legal matter, and many laymen have difficulty in determining the competence of lawyers to render different types of legal services. The selection of legal counsel is particularly difficult for transients, persons moving into new areas, persons of limited education or means, and others who have little or no contact with lawyers.18

EC 2-8 Selection of a lawyer by a layman often is the result of the advice and recommendation of third parties—relatives, friends, acquaintances, business associates, or other lawyers. A layman is best served if the recommendation is disinterested and informed. In order that the recommendation be disinterested, a lawyer should not seek to influence another to recommend his employment.10 A lawyer should not compensate another person for recommending him, for influencing a prospective client to employ him, or to encourage future recommendations.20

Selection of a Lawyer: Professional Notices and Listings
EC 2-9 The traditional ban against advertising by lawyers, which is subject to certain limited exceptions, is rooted in the public interest. Competitive advertising would encourage extravagant, artful, self-laudatory 21 brashness in seeking business and member as a basis for handling his individual affairs, but that in every case he should consult his counsel. In the publication of the opinion the association should make a similar statement.” ABA Opinion 273 (1946).

17 “A group of recent interrelated changes bears directly on the availability of legal services. . . . [One] change is the constantly accelerating urbanization of the country and the decline of personal and neighborhood knowledge of whom to retain as a professional man.” Cheatham, Availability of Legal Services: The Responsibility of the Individual Lawyer and of the Organized Bar, 12 U.C.L.A. Rev. 438, 440 (1965).

20 See ABA Canon 28.

21 "Self-laudation’ is a very flexible concept; Canon 27 does not define it, so what course of conduct would be said to constitute it under a given state of facts would no doubt vary as the opinions of men vary. As a famous English judge said, it would vary as the length of the chancellor’s foot. It must be in words and tone that will offend the traditions and lower the tone of our profession.” When it thus could mislead the layman.\textsuperscript{22} Furthermore, it would inevitably produce unrealistic expectations in particular cases and bring about distrust of the law and lawyers.\textsuperscript{23} Thus, public confidence in our legal system would be impaired by such advertisements of professional services. The attorney-client relationship is personal and unique and should not be established as the result of pressures and deceptions.\textsuperscript{24} History has demonstrated that public confidence in the legal system is best preserved by strict, self-imposed controls over, rather than by unlimited, advertising.

does this, it is ‘reprehensible.’ This seems to be the test by which ‘self-laudation’ is measured.” State v. Nichols, 151 So.2d 257, 259 (Fla. 1963).

\textsuperscript{22} “Were it not for the prohibitions of . . . [Canon 27] lawyers could, and no doubt would be forced to, engage competitively in advertising of all kinds in which each would seek to explain to the public why he could serve better and accomplish more than his brothers at the Bar.

“Susceptible as we are to advertising the public would then be encouraged to choose an attorney on the basis of which had the better, more attractive advertising program rather than on his reputation for professional ability.

“Thus this would certainly maim, if not destroy, the dignity and professional status of the Bar of this State.” State v. Nichols, 151 So.2d 257, 268 (Fla. 1963) (O’Connell, J., concurring in part and dissenting in part).

\textsuperscript{24} “The prohibition of advertising by lawyers deserves some examination. All agree that advertising by an individual lawyer, if permitted, will detract from the dignity of the profession, but the matter goes deeper than this. Perhaps the most understandable and acceptable additional reasons we have found are stated by one commentator as follows:

1. That advertisements, unless kept within narrow limits, like any other form of solicitation, tend to stir up litigation, and such tendency is against the public interest.

2. That if there were no restrictions on advertisements, the least capable and least honorable lawyers would be apt to publish the most extravagant and alluring material about themselves, and that the harm which would result would, in large measure, fall on the ignorant and on those least able to afford it.

3. That the temptation would be strong to hold out as inducements for employment, assurances of success or of satisfaction to the client, which assurances could not be realized, and that the giving of such assurances would materially increase the temptation to use ill means to secure the end desired by the client.

In other words, the reasons for the rule, and for the conclusion that it is desirable to prohibit advertising entirely, or to limit it within such narrow bounds that it will not admit of abuse, are based on the possibility and probability that this means of publicity, if permitted, will be abused.’ Harrison Hewitt in a comment at 15 A.B.A.J. 116 (1929) reproduced in Cheatham, Cases and Materials on the Legal Profession (2d Ed., 1955), p. 525.

“Of course, competition is at the root of the abuses in advertising. If the individual lawyer were permitted to compete with his fellows in publicity through advertising, we have no doubt that Mr. Hewitt’s three points, quoted above, would accurately forecast the result.” Jacksonville Bar Ass’n v. Wilson, 102 So.2d 292, 294-95 (Fla. 1958).

EC 2-10 Methods of advertising that are subject to the objections stated above\textsuperscript{25} should be and are prohibited.\textsuperscript{26} However, the Disciplinary Rules recognize the value of giving assistance in the selection process through forms of advertising that furnish identification of a lawyer while avoiding such objections. For example, a lawyer may be identified in the classified section of the telephone directory,\textsuperscript{27} in the office building directory, and on his letterhead and professional card.\textsuperscript{28} But at all times the permitted notices should be dignified and accurate.

EC 2-11 The name under which a lawyer conducts his practice may be a factor in the selection process.\textsuperscript{29} The use of a trade name or an assumed name could mislead laymen concerning the identity, responsibility, and status of those practicing thereunder.\textsuperscript{30} Accordingly, a lawyer in private practice should practice only under his own name, the name of a lawyer employing him, a partnership name composed of the name of one or more of the lawyers practicing in a partnership, or, if permitted by law, in the name of a professional legal corporation, which should be clearly designated as such. For many years some law firms have used a firm name retaining one or more names of deceased or retired partners and such practice is not improper if the firm is a bona fide successor of a firm in which the deceased or retired person was a member, if the use of the name is authorized by law or by contract, and if the public is not misled thereby.\textsuperscript{31} However, the name of a partner who withdraws from a firm but continues to practice law should be omitted from the firm name in order to avoid misleading the public.

“The continued use of a firm name by one or more surviving partners after the death of a member of the firm whose name is in the firm title is expressly permitted by the Canons of Ethics. The reason for this is that all of the partners have by their joint and several efforts over a period of years contributed to the good will attached to the firm name. In the case of a firm having widespread connections, this good will is disturbed by a change in firm name every time a name partner dies, and that reflects a loss in some degree of the good will to the building up of which the surviving partners have contributed their time, skill and labor during a period of years. To avoid this loss the firm name is continued, and to meet the requirements of the Canon the individuals constituting the firm from time to time are listed.” ABA Opinion 267 (1945).

“Accepted local custom in New York recognizes that the name of a law firm does not necessarily identify the individual members of the firm, and hence the continued use of a firm name after the death of one or more partners is not a deception and is permissible. . . . The continued use of a deceased partner’s name in the firm title is permissible by the fact that another partner withdraws from the firm and his name is dropped, or the name of the new partner is added to the firm name.” Opinion No. 43, Committee on Professional Ethics, New York State Bar Assn, 39 N. Y. St. B. J. 455 (1967).

EC 2-12 A lawyer occupying a judicial, legislative, or public executive or administrative position who has the right to practice law concurrently may allow his name to remain in the name of the firm if he actively continues to practice law as a member thereof. Otherwise, his name should be removed from the firm name, and he should not be identified as a past or present member of the firm; and he should not hold himself out as being a practicing lawyer.

EC 2-13 In order to avoid the possibility of misleading persons with whom he deals, a lawyer should be scrupulous in the representation of his professional status. He should not hold himself out as being a partner or associate of a law firm if he is not one in fact, and thus should not hold himself out as a partner or associate if he only shares offices with another lawyer.

EC 2-14 In some instances a lawyer confines his practice to a particular field of law. In the absence of state controls to insure the existence of special competence, a lawyer should not be permitted to hold himself out as a specialist or as having special training or ability, other than in the historically excepted fields of admiralty, trademark, and patent law.

EC 2-15 The legal profession has developed lawyer referral systems designed to aid individuals who are able to pay fees but need assistance in locating lawyers competent to handle their particular problems. Use of a lawyer referral system enables a layman to avoid an uninformed selection of a lawyer because such a system makes possible the employment of competent lawyers who have indicated an interest in the subject matter involved. Lawyers should support the principle of lawyer referral systems and should encourage the evolution of other ethical plans which aid in the selection of qualified counsel.

Financial Ability to Employ Counsel: Generally

EC 2-16 The legal profession cannot remain a viable force in fulfilling its role in our society unless its members receive adequate compensation for services rendered, and reasonable fees should be charged in appropriate cases to clients able to pay them. Nevertheless, persons unable to pay all or a portion of a reasonable fee should be able to obtain necessary legal services, and lawyers should support and participate in ethical activities designed to achieve that objective.

Financial Ability to Employ Counsel: Persons Able to Pay Reasonable Fees

EC 2-17 The determination of a proper fee requires consideration of the interests of both client and lawyers. A lawyer should not charge more than a reasonable fee, for excessive cost of legal service would deter laymen from utilizing the legal system in protection of their rights. Furthermore, an excessive charge abuses the professional relationship between lawyer and client. On the other hand, adequate compensation is necessary in order to enable the lawyer to serve his client effectively and to preserve the integrity and independence of the profession.

EC 2-18 The determination of the reasonableness of a fee requires consideration of all relevant circumstances, including those stated in the Disciplinary Rules. The fees of a lawyer will vary according to many factors, including the time required, his experience, ability, and reputation.

Cf. ABA Canon 33 and ABA Opinion 315 (1965).

See ABA Opinion 316 (1967).

The word ‘associates’ has a variety of meanings. Principally through custom the word when used on the letterheads of law firms has come to be regarded as designating those who are employees of the firm. Because the word has acquired this special significance in connection with the practice of the law the use of the word to describe lawyer relationships other than employer-employee is likely to be misleading. In re Sussman and Tanner, 241 Ore. 246, 248, 405 P.2d 355, 356 (1965).

According to ABA Opinion 310 (1963), use of the term "associates" would be misleading in two situations: (1) where two lawyers are partners and they share both responsibility and liability for the partnership; and (2) where two lawyers practice separately, sharing no responsibility or liability, and only share a suite of offices and some costs.

"For a long time, many lawyers have, of necessity, limited their practice to certain branches of law. The increasing complexity of the law and the demand of the public for more expertise on the part of the lawyer has, in the past few years—particularly in the last ten years—brought about specialization on an increasing scale." Report of the Special Committee on Specialization and Specialized Legal Services, 79 A.B.A.Rep. 582, 584 (1954).

"In varying degrees specialization has become the modus operandi throughout the legal profession. American society is specialization conscious. The present Canons, however, do not allow lawyers to make known to the lay public the fact that they engage in the practice of a specialty. . . ." Tucker, The Large Law Firm: Considerations Concerning the Modernization of the Canons of Professional Ethics, 1965 Wis.L.Rev. 344, 348-49 (1965).

nature of the employment, the responsibility involved, and the results obtained. Suggested fee schedules and economic reports of state and local bar associations provide some guidance on the subject of reasonable fees. It is a commendable and long-standing tradition of the bar that special consideration is given in the fixing of any fee for services rendered a brother lawyer or a member of his immediate family.

EC 2-19 As soon as feasible after a lawyer has been employed, it is desirable that he reach a clear agreement with his client as to the basis of the fee charges to be made. Such a course will not only prevent later misunderstanding but will also work for good relations between the lawyer and the client. It is usually beneficial to reduce to writing the understanding of the parties regarding the fee, particularly when it is contingent. A lawyer should be mindful that many persons who desire to employ him may have had little or no experience with fee charges of lawyers, and for this reason he should explain fully to such persons the reasons for the particular fee arrangement he proposes.

EC 2-20 Contingent fee arrangements in civil cases have long been commonly accepted in the United States in proceedings to enforce claims. The historical bases of their acceptance are that (1) they often, and in a variety of circumstances, provide the only practical means by which one having a claim against another can economically afford, finance, and obtain the services of a competent lawyer to prosecute his claim, and (2) a successful prosecution of the claim produces a res out of which the fee can be paid. Although a lawyer generally should decline to accept employment on a contingent fee basis by one who is able to pay a reasonable fixed fee, it is not necessarily improper for a lawyer, where justified by the particular circumstances of a case, to enter into a contingent fee contract in a civil case with any client who, after being fully informed of all relevant factors, desires that arrangement. Because of the human relationships involved and the unique character of the proceedings, contingent fee arrangements in domestic relation cases are rarely justified. In administrative agency proceedings contingent fee contracts should be governed by the same considerations as in other civil cases. Public policy properly condemns contingent fee arrangements in criminal cases, largely on the ground that legal services in criminal cases do not produce a res with which to pay the fee.

EC 2-21 A lawyer should not accept compensation or any thing of value incident to his employment or services from one other than his client without the knowledge and consent of his client after full disclosure.

EC 2-22 Without the consent of his client, a lawyer should not associate in a particular matter another lawyer outside his firm. A fee may properly be divided between lawyers properly associated if the division is in proportion to the services performed and the responsibility assumed by each lawyer and if the total fee is reasonable.

EC 2-23 A lawyer should be zealous in his efforts to avoid controversies over fees with clients and should attempt to resolve amicably any differences on the subject. He should not sue a client for a fee unless necessary to prevent fraud or gross imposition by the client.

49 See ABA Canon 38.

"Of course, as . . . [Informal Opinion 679] points out, there must be full disclosure of the arrangement [that an entity other than the client pays the attorney's fee] by the attorney to the client . . . : " ABA Opinion 320 (1968).

50 Only lawyers may share in . . . a division of fees, but . . . it is not necessary that both lawyers be admitted to practice in the same state, so long as the division was based on the division of services or responsibility." ABA Opinion 316 (1967).

51 See ABA Canon 34.

"We adhere to our previous rulings that where a lawyer merely brings about the employment of another lawyer but renders no service and assumes no responsibility in the matter, a division of the latter's fee is improper. (Opinions 18 and 53)."

"It is assumed that the bar, generally, understands what acts or conduct of a lawyer may constitute 'services' to a client within the intention of Canon 12. Such acts or conduct invariably, if not always, involve 'responsibility' on the part of the lawyer, whether the word 'responsibility' be construed to denote the possible resultant legal or moral liability on the part of the lawyer to the client or to others, or the onus of deciding what should or should not be done in behalf of the client.

The word 'services' in Canon 12 must be construed in this broad sense and may apply to the selection and retainer of associate counsel as well as to other acts or conduct in the client's behalf." ABA Opinion 204 (1940).

52 See ABA Canon 14.

53 Cf. ABA Opinion 320 (1968).

54 See ABA Canon 14.

"Ours is a learned profession, not a mere money-getting trade. . . . Suits to collect fees should be avoided. Only where the circumstances imperatively require, should resort be had to a suit to compel payment. And where a lawyer does resort to a suit to enforce payment of fees
Financial Ability to Employ Counsel: Persons Unable to Pay Reasonable Fees

EC 2-24 A layman whose financial ability is not sufficient to permit payment of any fee cannot obtain legal services, other than in cases where a contingent fee is appropriate, unless the services are provided for him. Even a person of moderate means may be unable to pay a reasonable fee which is large because of the complexity, novelty, or difficulty of the problem or similar factors.55

EC 2-25 Historically, the need for legal services of those unable to pay reasonable fees has been met in part by lawyers who donated their services or accepted court appointments on behalf of such individuals. The basic responsibility for providing legal services for those unable to pay ultimately rests upon the individual lawyer, and personal involvement in the problems of the disadvantaged can be one of the most rewarding experiences in the life of a lawyer. Every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional workload, should find time to participate in serving the disadvantaged. The rendition of free legal services to those unable to pay reasonable fees continues to be an obligation of each lawyer, but the efforts of individual lawyers are often not enough to meet the need.56 Thus it has been necessary for the profession to institute additional programs to provide legal services.57 Accordingly, legal aid offices,58 lawyer referral services,59 and other related programs have been developed, and others will be developed, by the profession.60 Every lawyer should support all proper efforts to meet this need for legal services.61 through primary or exclusive reliance on the uncompensated services of counsel will prove unsuccessful and inadequate. . . . A system of adequate representation, therefore, should be structured and financed in a manner reflecting its public importance. . . . We believe that fees for private appointed counsel should be set by the court within maximum limits established by the statute.” Report of the Att’y Gen’s Comm. on Poverty and the Administration of Criminal Justice 41-43 (1963).

57 “At present this representation [of those unable to pay usual fees] is being supplied in some measure through the spontaneous generosity of individual lawyers, through legal aid societies, and—increasingly—through the organized efforts of the Bar. If those who stand in need of this service know of its availability and their need is in fact adequately met, the precise mechanism by which this service is provided becomes of secondary importance. It is of great importance, however, that both the impulse to render this service, and the plan for making that impulse effective, should arise within the legal profession itself.” Professional Responsibility: Report of the Joint Conference, 44 A.B.A.J. 1159, 1216 (1958).

58 “Free legal clinics carried on by the organized bar are not ethically objectionable. On the contrary, they serve a very worthwhile purpose and should be encouraged.” ABA Opinion 191 (1939).

59 “We are of the opinion that the [lawyer referral] plan here presented does not fall within the inhibition of the Canon. No solicitation for a particular lawyer is involved. The dominant purpose of the plan is to provide as an obligation of the profession competent legal services to persons in low-income groups at fees within their ability to pay. The plan is to be supervised and directed by the local Bar Association. There is to be no advertisement of the names of the lawyers constituting the panel. The general method and purpose of the plan only is to be advertised. Persons seeking the legal services will be directed to members of the panel by the Bar Association. Aside from the initial filing of the panel with the Bar Association, there is to be no advertisement of the names of the lawyers constituting the panel. If these limitations are observed, we think there is no solicitation of business by or for particular lawyers and no violation of the inhibition of Canon 27.” ABA Opinion 205 (1940).

60 Whereas the American Bar Association believes that it is a fundamental duty of the bar to see to it that all persons requiring legal advice be able to attain it, irrespective of their economic status . . .

61 The defense of indigent citizens, without compensation, is carried on throughout the country by lawyers representing legal aid societies, not only with the approval, but with the commendation of those acquainted with the work. Not infrequently services are rendered out of sympathy or for other philanthropic reasons, by individual lawyers who do not represent legal aid societies. There is nothing whatever in the Canons to prevent a lawyer which involves a disclosure, he should carefully avoid any disclosure not clearly necessary to obtaining or defending his rights.” ABA Opinion 250 (1943).

But cf. ABA Opinion 320 (1968).

55 “As a society increases in size, sophistication and technology, the body of laws which is required to control that society also increases in size, scope and complexity. With this growth, the law directly affects more and more facets of individual behavior, creating an expanding need for legal services on the part of the individual members of the society. . . . As legal guidance in social and commercial behavior increasingly becomes necessary, there will come a concurrent demand from the layman that such guidance be made available to him. This demand will not come from those who are able to employ the best of legal talent, nor from those who can obtain legal assistance at little or no cost. It will come from the large ‘forgotten middle income class,’ who can neither afford to pay proportionately large fees nor qualify for ultra-low-cost services. The legal profession must recognize this inevitable demand and consider methods whereby it can be satisfied. If the profession fails to provide such methods, the laity will.” Comment, Providing Legal Services for the Middle Class in Civil Matters: The Problem, the Duty and a Solution, 26 U.Pitt.L.Rev. 811, 811-12 (1965).

“The issue is not whether we shall do something or do nothing. The demand for ordinary everyday legal justice is so great and the moral nature of the demand is so strong that the issue has become whether we devise, maintain, and support suitable agencies able to satisfy the demand or, by our own default, force the government to take over the job, supplant us, and ultimately dominate us.” Smith, Legal Service Offices for Persons of Moderate Means, 1949 Wis.L.Rev. 416, 418 (1949).

56 “Lawyers have peculiar responsibilities for the just administration of the law, and these responsibilities include providing advice and representation for needy persons. To a degree not always appreciated by the public at large, the bar has performed these obligations with zeal and devotion. The Committee is persuaded, however, that a system of justice that attempts, in mid-twentieth century America, to meet the needs of the financially incapacitated accused...

Compelling reasons do not include such factors as the repugnance of the subject matter of the proceeding, the identity or position of a person involved in the case, the belief of the lawyer that the defendant in a criminal proceeding is guilty or the belief of the lawyer regarding the merits of the civil case.

Acceptance and Retention of Employment

EC 2-26 A lawyer is under no obligation to act as adviser or advocate for every person who may wish to become his client; but in furtherance of the objective of the bar to make legal services freely available, a lawyer should not lightly decline proffered employment. The fulfillment of this objective requires acceptance by a lawyer of his share of tendered employment which may be unattractive both to him and the bar generally.

EC 2-27 History is replete with instances of distinguished and sacrificial services by lawyers who have represented unpopular clients and causes. Regardless of his personal feelings, a lawyer should not decline representation because a client or a cause is unpopular or community reaction is adverse.

EC 2-28 The personal preference of a lawyer to avoid adversary alignment against judges, other lawyers, public officials, or influential members of the community does not justify his rejection of tendered employment.

"We are of the opinion that it is not professionally improper for a lawyer to accept employment to compel another lawyer to honor the just claim of a layman. On the contrary, it is highly proper that he do so. Unfortunately, there appears to be a widespread feeling among laymen that it is difficult, if not impossible, to obtain justice when they have claims against members of the Bar because other lawyers will not accept employment to proceed against them. The honor of the profession, whose members proudly style themselves officers of the court, must surely be sullied if its members bind themselves by custom to refrain from enforcing just claims of laymen against lawyers." ABA Opinion 144 (1935).

EC 2-30 Employment should not be accepted by a lawyer when he is unable to render competent service or when he knows or it is obvious that the person seeking to employ him desires to institute or maintain an action merely for the purpose of harassing or maliciously injuring another. Likewise, a lawyer should decline employment if the intensity of his personal feeling, as distinguished from a community attitude, may impair his effective representation of a prospective client.

If a lawyer knows a client has previously obtained counsel, he should not accept employment in the matter unless the other counsel approves or withdraws, or the client terminates the prior employment.

EC 2-31 Full availability of legal counsel requires both that persons be able to obtain counsel and that lawyers who undertake representation complete the work involved. Trial counsel for a convicted defendant should continue to represent his client by advising whether to take an appeal and, if the appeal is prosecuted, by representing him through the appeal unless new counsel is substituted or withdrawal is permitted by the appropriate court.

But, Sir, that is not enough. An argument which does not convince yourself, may convince the Judge to whom you urge it: and if it does convince him, why, then, Sir, you are wrong, and he is right." 2 Boswell, The Life of Johnson 47-48 (Hill ed. 1887).

EC 2–32 A decision by a lawyer to withdraw should be made only on the basis of compelling circumstances and in a matter pending before a tribunal he must comply with the rules of the tribunal regarding withdrawal. A lawyer should not withdraw without considering carefully and endeavoring to minimize the possible adverse effect on the rights of his client and the possibility of prejudice to his client and the possibility of prejudice to his client as a result of his withdrawal. Even when he justifiably withdraws, a lawyer should protect the welfare of his client by giving due notice of his withdrawal, suggesting employment of other counsel, delivering to the client all papers and property to which the client is entitled, cooperating with counsel subsequently employed, and otherwise endeavoring to minimize the possibility of harm. Further, he should refund to the client any compensation not earned during the employment.

The published data may include only the following: name, including name of law firm and names of professional associates; addresses and telephone numbers; one or more fields of law in which the lawyer or law firm concentrates; a statement that practice is limited to one or more fields of law; a statement that the lawyer or law firm specializes in a particular field of law or law practice but only if authorized under DR 2-105(A)(4); date and place of admission; date and place of birth; and other informative data. A law list is not reputable if its management or contents are likely to be misleading or injurious to the public or to the profession. This is subject to the single exception that such announcement to laymen on Professional Ethics of local and state bar associations is permitted in the four traditional specialties, Admiralty, War Damage Claims, 'Anti-Trust', 'Domestic Relations'; 'Tax Law'; 'Negligence Law'. It would seem that the announcement.

"It is important that this sort of description is not, in New York at least, permitted on letterheads or shingles or elsewhere in communications to laymen. This is subject to the single exception that such announcement to laymen is permitted in the four traditional specialties, Admiralty, Patent, Copyright and Trade-mark."

103 "We are asked to define the word 'addresses' appearing in the second paragraph of Canon 27 . . . .

'It is our opinion that an address (other than a cable address) within the intent of the canon is that of the lawyer's office or of his residence. Neither address should be misleading. If, for example, an office address is given, it must be that of a bona fide office. The residence address, if given, should be identified as such if the city or other place of residence is not the same as that in which the lawyer's residence is located." ABA Opinion 249 (1942).

104 [T]oday in various parts of the country Committees on Professional Ethics of local and state bar associations are authorizing lawyers to describe themselves in announcements to the Bar and in notices in legal periodicals and approved law lists as specialists in a great variety of things. Thus in the approved law lists or professional announcements there appear, in connection with the names of individual practitioners or firms, such designations as 'International Law, Public and Private'; 'Trial Preparation in Personal Injury and Negligence Actions'; 'Philippine War Damage Claims'; 'Anti-Trust'; 'Domestic Relations'; 'Tax Law'; 'Negligence Law'. It would seem that the ABA has given at least its tacit approval to this sort of announcement.

(C) A lawyer shall not hold himself out as having a partnership with one or more other lawyers unless they are in fact partners.111

(D) A partnership shall not be formed or continued between or among lawyers licensed in different jurisdictions unless all enumerations of the members and associates of the firm on its letterhead and in other permissible listings make clear the jurisdictional limitations on those members and associates of the firm not licensed to practice in all listed jurisdictions; 112 however, the same firm name may be used in each jurisdiction.

(E) A lawyer who is engaged both in the practice of law and another profession or business shall not so indicate on his letterhead, office sign, or professional card, nor shall he identify himself as a lawyer in any publication in connection with his other profession or business.

(F) Nothing contained herein shall prohibit a lawyer from using or permitting the use, in connection with his name, of an earned degree or title derived therefrom indicating his training in the law.

DR 2-103 Recommendation of Professional Employment.113

(A) A lawyer shall not recommend employment, as a private practitioner,114 of himself, his partner, or associate to a non-lawyer who has not sought his advice regarding employment of a lawyer.115

(B) Except as permitted under DR 2-103(C), a lawyer shall not compensate or give anything of value to a person or organization to recommend or secure his employment 116 by a client, or as a reward for having made a recommendation resulting in his employment 117 by a client.

(C) A lawyer shall not request a person or organization to recommend employment, as a private practitioner, of himself, his partner, or associate,118 except that he may request referrals from a lawyer referral service operated, sponsored, or approved by a bar association representative of the general bar of the geographical area in which the association exists and may pay its fees incident there-to.119

(D) A lawyer shall not knowingly assist a person or organization that recommends, furnishes, or pays for legal services to promote the use of his services or those of his partners or associates. However, he may cooperate in a dignified manner with the legal service activities of any of the following, provided that his independent professional judgment is exercised in behalf of his client without interference or control by any organization or other person:

(1) A legal aid office or public defender office:
   (a) Operated or sponsored by a duly accredited law school.
   (b) Operated or sponsored by a bona fide non-profit community organization.
   (c) Operated or sponsored by a governmental agency.
   (d) Operated, sponsored, or approved by a bar association representative of the general bar of the geographical area in which the association exists.120

(2) A military legal assistance office.

(3) A lawyer referral service operated, sponsored, or approved by a bar association representative of the general bar of the geographical area in which the association exists.121

(4) A bar association representative of the general bar of the geographical area in which the association exists.122

(5) Any other non-profit organization that recommends, furnishes, or pays for legal services to its members or beneficiaries, but only in those instances and to the extent that controlling constitutional interpretation at the time of the rendition of the services requires the allowance of such legal service activities, and only if the following conditions, unless prohibited by such interpretation, are met:

(a) The primary purposes of such organization do not include the rendition of legal services.

(b) The recommending, furnishing, or paying for legal services to its members is incidental and reasonably related to the primary purposes of such organization.

(c) Such organization does not derive a financial benefit from the rendition of legal services by the lawyer.

(d) The member or beneficiary for whom the legal services are rendered, and not such organization, is recognized as the client of the lawyer in that matter.

(E) A lawyer shall not accept employment when he knows or it is obvious that the person who seeks his services does so as a result of conduct prohibited under this Disciplinary Rule.

DR 2-104 Suggestion of Need of Legal Services

(A) A lawyer who has given unsolicited advice to a layman that he should obtain counsel or take legal action shall not accept employment resulting from that advice, except that:

(1) A lawyer may accept employment by a close friend, relative, former client (if the advice is germane to the former employment), or one whom the lawyer reasonably believes to be a client.

(2) A lawyer may accept employment that results from his participation in activities designed to educate laymen to recognize legal problems, to make intelligent use of available legal services if such activities are conducted or sponsored by any of the offices or organizations enumerated in DR 2-103(D) (1) through (5), to the extent and under the conditions prescribed therein.

(3) A lawyer who is furnished or paid by any of the offices or organizations enumerated in DR 2-103(D) (1), (2), or (5) may represent a member or beneficiary thereof, to the extent and under the conditions prescribed therein.

(4) Without affecting his right to accept employment, a lawyer may speak publicly or write for publication on legal topics so long as he does not emphasize his own professional experience or reputation and does not undertake to give individual advice.

(5) If success in asserting rights or defenses of his client in litigation in the nature of a class action is dependent upon the joinder of others, a lawyer may accept, but shall not seek, employment from those contacted for the purpose of obtaining their joinder.

(A) A lawyer shall not hold himself out publicly as a specialist or as limiting his practice except as permitted under DR 2-102(A) (6) or as follows:

(1) A lawyer admitted to practice before the United States Patent Office may use the designation "Patents," "Patent Attorney," or "Patent Lawyer," or any combination of those terms, on his letterhead and office sign. A lawyer engaged in the trademark practice may use the designation "Trademarks," "Trademark Attorney," or "Trademark Lawyer," or any combination of those terms, on his letterhead and office sign, and a lawyer engaged in the admiralty practice may use the designation "Admiralty," "Proctor in Admiralty," or "Admiralty Lawyer," or any combination of those terms, on his letterhead and office sign.

advise his client of any change of fact or law which might defeat the client's testamentary purpose as expressed in the will.

CODE OF PROFESSIONAL RESPONSIBILITY

(2) A lawyer may permit his name to be listed in lawyer referral service offices according to the fields of law in which he will accept referrals.

(3) A lawyer available to act as a consultant to or as an associate of other lawyers in a particular branch of law or legal service may distribute to other lawyers and publish in legal journals a dignified announcement of such availability, but the announcement not contain a representation of special competence or experience. The announcement shall not be distributed to lawyers more frequently than once in a calendar year, but it may be published periodically in legal journals.

(4) A lawyer who is certified as a specialist in a particular field of law or law practice by the authority having jurisdiction under state law over the subject of specialization by lawyers may hold himself out as such specialist but only in accordance with the rules prescribed by that authority.

DR 2-106 Fees for Legal Services.136

(A) A lawyer shall not enter into an agreement for, charge, or collect an illegal or clearly excessive fee.137

(B) A fee is clearly excessive when, after a review of the facts, a lawyer of ordinary prudence would be left with a definite and firm conviction that the fee is in excess of a reasonable fee. Factors to be considered as guides in determining the reasonableness of a fee include the following:

(1) The time and labor required, the novelty and difficulty of the questions involved, and the skill requisite to perform the legal service properly.

(2) The likelihood, if apparent to the client, that the acceptance of the particular employment will preclude other employment by the lawyer.

(3) The fee customarily charged in the locality for similar legal services.

(4) The amount involved and the results obtained.

(5) The time limitations imposed by the client or by the circumstances.

(6) The nature and length of the professional relationship with the client.

(7) The experience, reputation, and ability of the lawyer or lawyers performing the services.

(8) Whether the fee is fixed or contingent.138

(C) A lawyer shall not enter into an arrangement for, charge, or collect a contingent fee for representing a defendant in a criminal case.139

DR 2-107 Division of Fees Among Lawyers.

(A) A lawyer shall not divide a fee for legal services with another lawyer who is not a partner in or associate of his law firm or law office, unless:

(1) The client consents to employment of the other lawyer after a full disclosure that a division of fees will be made.

(2) The division is made in proportion to the services performed and responsibility assumed by each.140

(3) The total fee of the lawyers does not clearly exceed reasonable compensation for all legal services they rendered the client.141

139 “Contingent fees, whether in civil or criminal cases, are a special concern of the law...”

“The third area of practice in which the use of the contingent fee is generally considered to be prohibited is the prosecution and defense of criminal cases. However, there are so few cases, and these are predominantly old, that it is doubtful that there can be said to be any current law on the subject. ... In the absence of cases on the validity of contingent fees for defense attorneys, it is necessary to rely on the consensus among commentators that such a fee is void as against public policy. The nature of criminal practice itself makes unlikely the use of contingent fee contracts.” MacKinnon, Contingent Fees for Legal Services 52 (1964) (A Report of the American Bar Foundation).

141 “Canon 12 contemplates that a lawyer’s fee should not exceed the value of the services rendered...” ABA Opinion 204 (1940).
(B) This Disciplinary Rule does not prohibit payment to a former partner or associate pursuant to a separation or retirement agreement.

DR 2-108 Agreements Restricting the Practice of a Lawyer.

(A) A lawyer shall not be a party to or participate in a partnership or employment agreement with another lawyer that restricts the right of a lawyer to practice law after the termination of a relationship created by the agreement, except as a condition to payment of retirement benefits.142

(B) In connection with the settlement of a controversy or suit, a lawyer shall not enter into an agreement that restricts his right to practice law.

DR 2-109 Acceptance of Employment.

(A) A lawyer shall not accept employment on behalf of a person if he knows or it is obvious that such person wishes to:

(1) Bring a legal action, conduct a defense, or assert a position in litigation, or otherwise have steps taken for him, merely for the purpose of harassing or maliciously injuring any person.143

(2) Present a claim or defense in litigation that is not warranted under existing law, unless it can be supported by good faith argument for an extension, modification, or reversal of existing law.

DR 2-110 Withdrawal from Employment.144

(A) In General.

(1) If permission for withdrawal from employment is required by the rules of a tribunal, a lawyer shall not withdraw from employment in a proceeding before that tribunal without its permission.

(2) In any event, a lawyer shall not withdraw from employment until he has taken reasonable steps to avoid foreseeable prejudice to the rights of his client, including giving due notice to his client, allowing time for employment of other counsel, delivering to the client all papers and property to which the client is entitled, and complying with applicable laws and rules.

(3) A lawyer who withdraws from employment shall refund promptly any part of a fee paid in advance that has not been earned.

(B) Mandatory withdrawal.

A lawyer representing a client before a tribunal, with its permission if required by its rules, shall withdraw from employment, and a lawyer representing a client in other matters shall withdraw from employment, if:

(1) He knows or it is obvious that his client is bringing the legal action, conducting the defense, or asserting a position in the litigation, or is otherwise having steps taken for him, merely for the purpose of harassing or maliciously injuring any person.

(2) He knows or it is obvious that his continued employment will result in violation of a Disciplinary Rule.145

(3) His mental or physical condition renders it unreasonably difficult for him to carry out the employment effectively.

(4) He is discharged by his client.

(C) Permissive withdrawal.146

If DR 2-110(B) is not applicable, a lawyer may not request permission to withdraw in matters pending before a tribunal, and may not withdraw in other matters, unless such request or such withdrawal is because:

(1) His client:

(a) Insists upon presenting a claim or defense that is not warranted under existing law and cannot be supported by good faith argument for an extension, modification, or reversal of existing law.147

(b) Personally seeks to pursue an illegal course of conduct.

(c) Consists of the lawyer pursue a course of conduct that is illegal or that is prohibited under the Disciplinary Rules.

(d) By other conduct renders it unreasonably difficult for the law-

142 “[A] general covenant restricting an employed lawyer, after leaving the employment, from practicing in the community for a stated period, appears to this Committee to be an unwarranted restriction on the right of a lawyer to choose where he will practice and inconsistent with our professional status. Accordingly, the Committee is of the opinion it would be improper for the employing lawyer to require the covenant and likewise for the employed lawyer to agree to it.” ABA Opinion 300 (1961).

143 See ABA Canon 30.

“Rule 13. . . . A member of the State Bar shall not accept employment to prosecute or defend a case solely out of spite, or solely for the purpose of harassing or delaying another . . . .” Cal.Business and Professions Code 6067 (West 1962).

144 Cf. ABA Canon 44.

145 See also Code of Professional Responsibility, DR 5-102 and DR 5-105.

146 Cf. ABA Canon 4.

A layman who seeks legal services often is not in a position to judge whether he will receive proper professional attention. The entrustment of a legal matter may well involve the confidences, the reputation, the property, the freedom, or even the life of the client. Proper protection of members of the public demands that no person be permitted to act in the confidential and demanding capacity of a lawyer unless he is subject to the regulations of the legal profession.

EC 3-4 A layman who seeks legal services often is not in a position to judge whether he will receive proper professional attention. The entrustment of a legal matter may well involve the confidences, the reputation, the property, the freedom, or even the life of the client. Proper protection of members of the public demands that no person be permitted to act in the confidential and demanding capacity of a lawyer unless he is subject to the regulations of the legal profession.

EC 3-5 It is neither necessary nor desirable to attempt the formulation of a single, specific definition of what constitutes the practice of law. Functionally, the practice of law relates to the rendition of services for others that call for the professional judgment of a lawyer. The essence of the professional judgment of the lawyer is his educated ability to relate the general body of philosophy of law to a specific legal problem of a client; and thus, the public interest will be better served if only lawyers are permitted to act in matters involving professional judgment. Where this professional judgment is not involved, non-lawyers, such as court clerks, police officers, abstracters, and many governmental employees, may engage in occupations that require a special knowledge of law in certain areas. But the services of a lawyer are essential in the public interest whenever the exercise of professional legal judgment is required.

EC 3-6 A lawyer often delegates tasks to clerks, secretaries, and other lay persons. Such delegation is proper if the lawyer maintains a direct relationship with his client, supervises the delegated work, and has complete professional responsibility for the work product. This delegation enables a lawyer to carry out his employment effectively.

(c) Insists, in a matter not pending before a tribunal, that the lawyer engage in conduct that is contrary to the judgment and advice of the lawyer but not prohibited under the Disciplinary Rules.

(f) Deliberately disregards an agreement or obligation to the lawyer as to expenses or fees.

His continued employment is likely to result in a violation of a Disciplinary Rule.

His inability to work with co-counsel indicates that the best interests of the client likely will be served by withdrawal.

His mental or physical condition renders it difficult for him to carry out the employment effectively.

His client knowingly and freely assents to termination of his employment.

He believes in good faith, in a proceeding pending before a tribunal, that the tribunal will find the existence of other good cause for withdrawal.

CANON 3
A Lawyer Should Assist in Preventing the Unauthorized Practice of Law

EC 3-1 The prohibition against the practice of law by a layman is grounded in the need of the public for integrity and competence of those who undertake to render legal services. Because of the fiduciary and personal character of the lawyer-client relationship and the inherently complex nature of our legal system, the public can better be assured of the requisite responsibility and competence if the practice of law is confined to those who are subject to the requirements and regulations imposed upon members of the legal profession.

EC 3-2 The sensitive variations in the considerations that bear on legal determinations often make it difficult even for a lawyer to exercise appropriate professional judgment, and it is therefore essential that the personal nature of the relationship of client and lawyer be preserved. Competent professional judgment is the product of a trained familiarity with law and legal processes, a disciplined, analytical approach to legal problems, and a firm ethical commitment.

EC 3-3 A non-lawyer who undertakes to handle legal matters is not governed as to integrity or legal competence by the same rules that govern the conduct of a lawyer. A lawyer is not only subject to that regulation but also is committed to high standards of ethical conduct. The public interest is best served in legal matters by a regulated profession committed to such standards. The Disciplinary Rules protect the public in that they prohibit a lawyer from seeking employment by improper overtures, from acting in cases of divided loyalties, and from submitting to the control of others in the exercise of his judgment. Moreover, a person who entrusts legal matters to a lawyer is protected by the attorney-client privilege and by the duty of the lawyer to hold inviolate the confidences and secrets of his client.

2 "What constitutes unauthorized practice of the law in a particular jurisdiction is a matter for determination by the courts of that jurisdiction." ABA Opinion 198 (1939).

3 "In the light of the historical development of the lawyer's functions, it is impossible to lay down an exhaustive definition of 'the practice of law' by attempting to enumerate every conceivable act performed by lawyers in the normal course of their work." State Bar of Arizona v. Arizona Land Title & Trust Co., 90 Ariz. 76, 87, 366 P.2d 1, 8-9 (1961), modified, 91 Ariz. 293, 371 P.2d 1020 (1962).

3 "A lawyer can employ lay secretaries, lay investigators, lay detectives, lay researchers, accountants, lay scriveners, yer to render legal service more economically and efficiently.

EC 3-7 The prohibition against a non-lawyer practicing law does not prevent a layman from representing himself, for then he is ordinarily exposing only himself to possible injury. The purpose of the legal profession is to make educated legal representation available to the public; but anyone who does not wish to avail himself of such representation is not required to do so. Even so, the legal profession should help members of the public to recognize legal problems and to understand why it may be unwise for them to act for themselves in matters having legal consequences.

EC 3-8 Since a lawyer should not aid or encourage a layman to practice law, he should not practice law in association with a layman or otherwise share legal fees with a layman. This does not mean, however, that the pecuniary value of the interest of a deceased lawyer in his firm or practice may not be paid to his estate or specified persons such as his widow or heirs. In like manner, nonlawyer draftsmen or nonlawyer researchers. In fact, he may employ nonlawyers to do any task for him except counsel clients about law matters, engage directly in the proceedings a part of the judicial process, so long as it is he who takes the work and vouches for it to the client and becomes responsible to the client. ABA Opinion 316 (1967).

ABA Opinion 316 (1967) also stated that if a lawyer practices law as part of a law firm which includes lawyers from several states, he may delegate tasks to firm members in other states so long as he is "the person who, on behalf of the firm, vouched for the work of all of the others and, with the client and in the courts, did the legal acts defined by that state as the practice of law."

"A lawyer cannot delegate his professional responsibility to a law student employed in his office. He may avail himself of the assistance of the student in many of the fields of the lawyer's work, such as examination of case law, finding and interviewing witnesses, making collections of claims, examining court records, delivering papers, conveying important messages, and other similar matters. But the student is not permitted, until he is admitted to the Bar, to perform the professional functions of a lawyer, such as taking depositions, appearing in court, appearing as an attorney, giving professional advice to clients or drawing legal documents for them. The student in all his work must act as agent for the lawyer employing him, who must supervise his work and be responsible for his good conduct." ABA Opinion 85 (1932).

"No division of fees for legal services is proper, except with another lawyer . . . ." ABA Canon 34. Otherwise, according to ABA Opinion 316 (1967), "the Canons of Ethics do not examine into the method by which such persons are remunerated by the lawyer. . . . They may be paid a salary, a per diem charge, a flat fee, a contract price, etc." See ABA Canons 33 and 47.

"Many partnership agreements provide that the active partners, on the death of any one of them, are to make payments to the estate or to the nominee of a deceased partner on a pre-determined formula. It is only where the effect of such an arrangement is to make the estate or nominee a member of the partnership along with the surviving partners that it is prohibited by Canon 34. Where the payments are made in accordance with a pre-existing agreement entered into by the deceased partner during his lifetime and providing for a fixed method for determining profit-sharing retirement plans of a lawyer or law firm which include non-lawyer office employees are not improper. These limited exceptions to the rule against sharing legal fees with laymen are permissible since they do not aid or encourage laymen to practice law.

EC 3-9 Regulation of the practice of law is accomplished principally by the respective states. Authority to engage in the practice of law conferred in any jurisdiction is not per se a grant of the right to practice elsewhere, and it is improper for a lawyer to engage in practice where he is not permitted by law or by court order to do so. However, the demands of business and the mobility of our society pose distinct problems in the regulation of the practice of law by the states. In furtherance of the public interest, the legal profession should discourage regulation that unreasonably imposes territorial limitations upon the right of a lawyer to handle the legal affairs of his client or upon the opportunity of a client to obtain the services of a lawyer of his choice in all matters including the presentation of a contested matter in a tribunal before which the lawyer is not permanently admitted to practice.

their amount based upon the value of services rendered during the partner's lifetime and providing for a fixed period over which the payments are to be made, this is not the case. Under these circumstances, whether the payments are considered to be delayed payment of compensation earned but withheld during the partner's lifetime, or whether they are considered to be an approximation of his interest in matters pending at the time of his death, is immaterial. In either event, as Henry S. Drinker says in his book, Legal Ethics, at page 189: 'It would seem, however, that a reasonable agreement to pay the estate a proportion of the receipts for a reasonable period is a proper practical settlement for the lawyer's services to his retirement or death.' ABA Opinion 308 (1963).

"That the States have broad power to regulate the practice of law is, of course, beyond question." United Mine Workers v. Ill. State Bar Ass'n, 389 U.S. 217, 222 (1967).

"It is a matter of law, not of ethics, as to where an individual may practice law. Each state has its own rules." ABA Opinion 316 (1967).

"Much of clients' business crosses state lines. People are mobile, moving from state to state. Many metropolitan areas cross state lines. It is common today to have a single economic and social community involving more than one state. The business of a single client may involve legal problems in several states." ABA Opinion 316 (1967).

"[W]e reaffirmed the general principle that legal services to New Jersey residents with respect to New Jersey matters may ordinarily be furnished only by New Jersey counsel; but we pointed out that there may be multistate transactions where strict adherence to this thesis would not be in the public interest and that, under the circumstances, it would have been not only more costly to the client but also 'grossly impractical and inefficient' to have had the settlement negotiations conducted by separate lawyers from different states." CODE OF PROFESSIONAL RESPONSIBILITY

DR 3-101 Aiding Unauthorized Practice of Law.10

(A) A lawyer shall not aid a non-lawyer in the unauthorized practice of law.11

(B) A lawyer shall not practice law in a jurisdiction where to do so would be in violation of regulations of the profession in that jurisdiction.12

DR 3-102 Dividing Legal Fees with a Non-Lawyer.

(A) A lawyer or law firm shall not share legal fees with a non-lawyer,13 except that:

(1) An agreement by a lawyer with his firm, partner, or associate may provide for the payment of money, over a reasonable period of time after his death, to his estate or to one or more specified persons.14

(2) A lawyer who undertakes to complete unfinished legal business of a deceased lawyer may pay to the estate of the deceased lawyer that proportion of the total compensation which fairly represents the services rendered by the deceased lawyer.

(3) A lawyer or law firm may include non-lawyer employees in a retirement plan, even though the plan is based in whole or in part on a profit-sharing arrangement.15

DR 3-103 Forming a Partnership with a Non-Lawyer.

(A) A lawyer shall not form a partnership with a non-lawyer if any of the activities of the partnership consist of the practice of law.16

10 Conduct permitted by the Disciplinary Rules of Canons 2 and 5 does not violate DR 3-101.

11 A lawyer should be fully informed of the purposes and necessities of the relation between lawyer and client and the proper function of the ethical obligations of a lawyer to hold inviolate the confidences and secrets of his client not only facilitates the full development of facts essential to proper representation of the client but also encourages laymen to seek early legal assistance.

EC 4-2 The obligation to protect confidences and secrets obviously does not preclude a lawyer from revealing information when his client consents

1 See ABA Canons 6 and 37 and ABA Opinion 287 (1953).

The reason underlying the rule with respect to confidences and secrets obviously does not preclude a lawyer from revealing information when his client consents

2 While it is true that complete revelation of relevant facts should be encouraged for trial purposes, nevertheless an attorney’s dealings with his client, if both are sincere, and if the dealings involve more than mere technical matters, should be immune to discovery proceedings.

3 While it is the great purpose of law to ascertain the truth, there is the countervailing necessity of insuring the right of every person to freely and fully confer and confide in one having knowledge of the law, and skilled in its practice, in order that the former may have adequate advice and a proper defense. This assistance can be made safely and readily available only when the client is free after full disclosure, \(^3\) when necessary to perform his professional employment, when permitted by a Disciplinary Rule, or when required by law. Unless the client otherwise directs, a lawyer may disclose the affairs of his client to partners or associates of his firm. It is a matter of common knowledge that the normal operation of a law office exposes confidential professional information to non-lawyer employees of the office, particularly secretaries and those having access to the files; and this obligates a lawyer to exercise care in selecting and training his employees so that the sanctity of all confidences and secrets of his clients may be preserved. If the obligation extends to two or more clients as to the same information, a lawyer should obtain the permission of all before revealing the information. A lawyer must always be sensitive to the rights and wishes of his client and act scrupulously in the making of decisions which may involve the disclosure of information obtained in his professional relationship. \(^4\) Thus, in the absence of consent of his client after full disclosure, a lawyer should not associate another lawyer in the handling of a matter; nor should he, in the absence of consent, seek counsel from another lawyer if there is a reasonable possibility that the identity of the client or his confidences or secrets would be revealed to such lawyer. Both social amenities and professional duty should cause a lawyer to shun indiscreet conversations concerning his clients.

EC 4-3 Unless the client otherwise directs, it is not improper for a lawyer to give limited information from his files to an outside agency necessary for statistical, bookkeeping, accounting, data processing, banking, printing, or other legitimate purposes, provided he exercises due care in the selection of the agency and warns the agency that the information must be kept confidential.

EC 4-4 The attorney-client privilege is more limited than the ethical obligation of a lawyer to guard the confidences and secrets of his client. This ethical precept, unlike the evidentiary privilege, exists without regard to the nature or source of information or the fact that others share the knowledge. A lawyer should endeavor to act in a manner which preserves the evidentiary privilege; for example, he should avoid professional discussions in the presence of persons to whom the privilege does not extend. A lawyer owes an obligation to advise the client of the attorney-client privilege and timely to assert the privilege unless it is waived by the client.

EC 4-5 A lawyer should not use information acquired in the course of the representation of a client to the disadvantage of the client and a lawyer should not use, except with the consent of his client after full disclosure, such information for his own purposes. \(^6\) Likewise, a lawyer should be diligent in his efforts to prevent the misuse of such information by his employees and associates. \(^6\) Care should be exercised by a lawyer to prevent the disclosure of the confidences and secrets of one client to another, and no employment should be accepted that might require such disclosure.

EC 4-6 The obligation of a lawyer to preserve the confidences and secrets of his client continues after the termination of his employment. \(^7\) Thus a lawyer should not associate another lawyer in the employment of a going business because, among other reasons, to do so would involve the disclosure of confidences and secrets. \(^8\) A lawyer should also provide for the protection of the confidences and secrets of his client following the termination of the practice of the lawyer, whether termination is due to death, disability, or retirement. For example, a lawyer might provide for the personal papers of the client to be returned to him and for the papers of the lawyer to be delivered to another lawyer or to be destroyed. In determining the method of disposition, the instructions and wishes of the client should be a dominant consideration.

DR 4-101 Preservation of Confidences and Secrets of a Client barrassing or would be likely to be detrimental to the client.

(B) Except when permitted under DR 4-101(C), a lawyer shall not knowingly:

(1) Reveal a confidence or secret of his client."

(2) Use a confidence or secret of his client to the disadvantage of the client.

(3) Use a confidence or secret of his client for the advantage of himself 12 or of a third person, 13 unless the client consents after full disclosure.

(C) A lawyer may reveal:

(1) Confidences or secrets with the consent of the client or clients affected, but only after a full disclosure to them.14

(2) Confidences or secrets when permitted under Disciplinary Rules or required by law or court order.15

11 "§ 6068 . . It is the duty of an attorney:

"(e) To maintain inviolate the confidence, and at every peril to himself to preserve the secrets, of his client." Cal. Business and Professions Code § 6068 (West 1962). Virtually the same provision is found in the Oregon statutes. Ore.Rev.Stats. ch. 9, § 9.460(5).

"Communications between lawyer and client are privileged (Wigmore on Evidence, 3d. Ed., Vol. 2, §§ 2290-2329). The modern theory underlying the privilege is subjective and is to give the client freedom of apprehension with the general rule announced in the adjudicated cases (ibid., § 2290, p. 548). The privilege applies to communications made in seeking legal advice for any purpose (ibid., § 2294, p. 563). The mere circumstance that the advice is given without charge therefore does not nullify the privilege (ibid., § 2303)." ABA Opinion 216 (1941).

"It is the duty of an attorney to maintain the confidence and preserve inviolate the secrets of his client . . . ." ABA Opinion 155 (1936).

12 See ABA Canon 11.

"The provision respecting employment is in accord with the general rule announced in the adjudicated cases that a lawyer may not make use of knowledge or information acquired by him through his professional relations with his client, or in the conduct of his client's business, to his own advantage or profit (7 C.J.S., § 125, p. 958; Healy v. Gray, 184 Iowa 111, 168 N.W. 222; Baumgardner v. Hudson, D.C.App., 277 F. 552; Goodrum v. Clement, D.C.App., 277 F. 586)." ABA Opinion 250 (1943).

13 See ABA Opinion 177 (1938).

14 "[A lawyer] may not divulge confidential communications, information, and secrets imparted to him by the client or acquired during their professional relations, unless he is authorized to do so by the client (People v. Gerold, 265 Ill. 448, 107 N.E. 165, 178; Murphy v. Riggs, 238 Mich. 151, 213 N.W. 110, 112; Opinion of this Committee, No. 91)." ABA Opinion 202 (1940).

Cf. ABA Opinion 91 (1933).

15 "A defendant in a criminal case when admitted to bail is not only regarded as in the custody of his bail, but he is also in the custody of the law, and admission to bail does not deprive the court of its inherent power to deal with the person of the prisoner. Being in lawful custody, the defendant is guilty of an escape when he gains his liberty before he is delivered in the process of law, and is guilty of a separate offense for which he may be punished. In failing to disclose his client's whereabouts as a fugitive under these circumstances the attorney would not only be aiding his client to escape trial on the charge for which he was indicted, but would likewise be aiding him in evading prosecution for the additional offense of escape.

"It is the opinion of the committee that under such circumstances the attorney's knowledge of his client's whereabouts is not privileged, and that he may be disciplined for failing to disclose that information to the proper authorities. . . ." ABA Opinion 155 (1936).

"We held in Opinion 155 that a communication by a client to his attorney in respect to the future commission of an unlawful act or to a continuing wrong is not privileged from disclosure. Public policy forbids that the relation of attorney and client should be used to conceal wrongdoing on the part of the client.

"When an attorney representing a defendant in a criminal case applies on his behalf for probation or suspension of sentence, he represents to the court, by implication at least, that his client will abide by the terms and conditions of the court's order. When that attorney is later advised of a violation of that order, it is his duty to advise his client of the consequences of his act, and endeavor to prevent a continuance of the wrongdoing. If his client thereafter persists in violating the terms and conditions of his probation, it is the duty of the attorney as an officer of the court to advise the proper authorities concerning his client's conduct. Such information, even though coming to the attorney from the client in the course of his professional relations with respect to other matters in which he represents the defendant, is not privileged from disclosure.

16 ABA Opinion 314 (1965) indicates that a lawyer must disclose even the confidences of his clients if "the facts in the attorney's possession indicate beyond reasonable doubt that a crime will be committed." See ABA Opinion 155 (1936).

"[T]he adjudicated cases recognize an exception to the rule [that a lawyer shall not reveal the confidences of his client], where disclosure is necessary to protect the attorney's interests arising out of the relation of attorney and client in which disclosure was made.

'The exception is stated in Mechem on Agency, 2d Ed., Vol. 2, § 2313, as follows: 'But the attorney may disclose information received from the client when it becomes necessary for his own protection, as if the client should bring an action against the attorney for negligence or misconduct, and it became necessary for the attorney to EC 5-1 The professional judgment of a lawyer should be exercised, within the bounds of the law, solely for the benefit of his client and free of compromising influences and loyalties. Neither his show what his instructions were, or what was the nature of the duty which the client expected him to perform. So if it became necessary for the attorney to bring an action against the client, the client’s privilege could not prevent the attorney from disclosing what was essential as a means of obtaining or defending his own rights. Mr. Jones, in his Commentaries on Evidence, 2d Ed., Vol. 5, § 2165, states the exception thus: “It has frequently been held that the rule as to privileged communications does not apply when litigation arises between attorney and client to the extent that their communications are relevant to the issue. In such cases, if the disclosure of privileged communications becomes necessary to protect the attorney’s rights, he is released from those obligations of secrecy which the law places upon him. He should not, however, disclose more than is necessary for his own protection. It would be a manifest injustice to allow the client to take advantage of the rule of exclusion as to professional confidence to the prejudice of his attorney, or that it should be carried to the extent of depriving the attorney of the means of obtaining or defending his own rights. In such cases the attorney is exempted from the obligations of secrecy.” ABA Opinion 250 (1943).

EC 5-2 A lawyer should not accept proffered employment if his personal interests or desires will, or there is a reasonable probability that they will, affect adversely the advice to be given or services to be rendered the prospective client. After accepting employment, a lawyer carefully should refrain from acquiring a property right or assuming a position that would tend to make his judgment less protective of the interests of his client.

EC 5-3 The self-interest of a lawyer resulting from his ownership of property in which his client also has an interest or which may affect property of his client may interfere with the exercise of free judgment on behalf of his client. If such interference would occur with respect to a prospective client, a lawyer should decline employment proffered by him. After accepting employment, a lawyer should not acquire property rights that would adversely affect his professional judgment in the representation of his client. Even if the property interests of a lawyer do not presently interfere with the exercise of his independent judgment, but the likelihood of interference can reasonably be foreseen by him, a lawyer should explain the situation to his client and should decline employment or withdraw unless the client consents to the continuance of the relationship after full disclosure. A lawyer should not seek to persuade his client to permit him to invest in an undertaking of his client nor make improper use of his professional relationship to influence his client to invest in an enterprise in which the lawyer is interested.

EC 5-4 If, in the course of his representation of a client, a lawyer is permitted to receive from his client a beneficial ownership in publication rights relating to the subject matter of the employment, he may be tempted to subordinate the interests of his client to his own anticipated pecuniary gain.

1 Cf. ABA Canon 35.

"[A lawyer’s] fiduciary duty is of the highest order and he must not represent interests adverse to those of the client. It is also true that because of his professional responsibility and the confidence and trust which his client may legitimately repose in him, he must adhere to a high standard of honesty, integrity and good faith in dealing with his client. He is not permitted to take advantage of his position or superior knowledge to impose upon the client; nor to conceal facts or law, nor in any way deceive him without his knowledge, and as a corollary thereof." Smoot v. Lund, 13 Utah 2d 168, 172, 369 P.2d 933, 936 (1962).

"When a client engages the services of a lawyer in a given piece of business he is entitled to feel that, until that business is finally disposed of in some manner, he has the undivided loyalty of the one upon whom he looks as his advocate and champion. If, as in this case, he is sued and his home attached by his own attorney, who is representing him in another matter, all feeling of loyalty is necessarily destroyed, and the profession is exposed to the charge that it is interested only in money." Grievance Comm. v. Rattner, 152 Conn. 59, 65, 203 A.2d 82, 84 (1964).

"One of the cardinal principles confronting every attorney in the representation of a client is the requirement of complete loyalty and service in good faith to the best of his ability. In a criminal case the client is entitled to a fair trial, but not a perfect one. These are fundamental requirements of due process under the Fourteenth Amendment. . . . The same principles are applicable in Sixth Amendment cases (not pertinent herein) and suggest that an attorney should have no interest and that he must devote his full and faithful efforts toward the defense of his client." Johns v. Smyth, 176 F.Supp. 949, 952 (E.D.Va. 1959), modified, United States ex rel. Wilkins v. Banmiller, 205 F.Supp. 123, 128 n. 5 (E.D.Pa. 1962), aff’d, 325 F.2d 514 (3d Cir. 1963), cert. denied, 379 U.S. 847, 13 L.Ed.2d 51, 85 S.Ct. 87 (1964)."
For example, a lawyer in a criminal case who obtains from his client television, radio, motion picture, newspaper, magazine, book, or other publication rights with respect to the case may be influenced, consciously or unconsciously, to a course of conduct that will enhance the value of his publication rights to the prejudice of his client. To prevent these potentially differing interests, such arrangements should be scrupulously avoided prior to the termination of all aspects of the matter giving rise to the employment, even though his employment has previously ended.

EC 5-5 A lawyer should not suggest to his client that a gift be made to himself or for his benefit. If a lawyer accepts a gift from his client, he is peculiarly susceptible to the charge that he unduly influenced or overreached the client. If a client voluntarily offers to make a gift to his lawyer, the lawyer may accept the gift, but before doing so, he should urge that his client secure disinterested advice from an independent, competent person who is cognizant of all the circumstances. Other than in exceptional circumstances, a lawyer should insist that an instrument in which his client desires to name him beneficially be prepared by another lawyer selected by the client.4

EC 5-6 A lawyer should not consciously influence a client to name him as executor, trustee, or lawyer in an instrument. In those cases where a client wishes to name his lawyer as such, care should be taken by the lawyer to avoid even the appearance of impropriety.5

EC 5-7 The possibility of an adverse effect upon the exercise of free judgment by a lawyer on behalf of his client during litigation generally makes it undesirable for the lawyer to acquire a proprietary interest in the cause of his client or otherwise

3 Courts of equity will scrutinize with jealous vigilance transactions between parties occupying fiduciary relations toward each other. . . . A deed will not be held invalid, however, if made by the grantor with full knowledge of its nature and effect, and because of the deliberate, voluntary and intelligent desire of the grantor. . . . Where a fiduciary relation exists, the burden of proof is on the grantor or beneficiary of an instrument executed during the existence of such relationship to show the fairness of the transaction, that it was equitable and just and that it did not proceed from undue influence. . . . The same rule has application where an attorney engages in a transaction with a client during the existence of the relation and is benefited thereby. . . . Conversely, an attorney is not prohibited from dealing with his client or buying his property, and such contracts, if open, fair and honest, when deliberately made, are as valid as contracts between other parties. . . . Important factors in determining whether a transaction is fair include a showing by the fiduciary (1) that he made a full and frank disclosure of all the relevant information that he had; (2) that the consideration was adequate; and (3) that the principal had independent advice before completing the transaction.” McFall v. Braden, 19 Ill.2d 108, 117-18, 166 N.E.2d 46, 52 (1960).

4 See State ex rel. Nebraska State Bar Ass'n v. Richards, 165 Neb. 80, 94-95, 84 N.W.2d 136, 146 (1957).

See ABA Canon 9.

EC 5-8 A financial interest in the outcome of litigation also results if monetary advances are made by the lawyer to his client.6 Although this assistance generally is not encouraged, there are instances when it is not improper to make loans to a client. For example, the advancing or guaranteeing of payment of the costs and expenses of litigation by a lawyer may be the only way a client can enforce his cause of action,9 but the ultimate liability for such costs and expenses must be that of the client.

EC 5-9 Occasionally a lawyer is called upon to decide in a particular case whether he will be a witness or an advocate. If a lawyer is both counsel and witness, he becomes more easily impeachable for interest and thus may be a less effective witness. Conversely, the opposing counsel may be handicapped in challenging the credibility of the lawyer when the lawyer also appears as an advocate in the case. An advocate who becomes a witness is in the unseemly and ineffective position of arguing his own credibility. The roles of an advocate and of a witness are inconsistent; the function of an advocate is to advance or argue the cause of another, while that of a witness is to state facts objectively.

EC 5-10 Problems incident to the lawyer-witness relationship arise at different stages; they relate to become financially interested in the outcome of the litigation.6 However, it is not improper for a lawyer to protect his right to collect a fee for his services by the assertion of legally permissible liens, even though by doing so he may acquire an interest in the outcome of litigation. Although a contingent fee arrangement7 gives a lawyer a financial interest in the outcome of litigation, a reasonable contingent fee is permissible in civil cases because it may be the only means by which a layman can obtain the services of a lawyer of his choice. But a lawyer, because he is in a better position to evaluate a cause of action, should enter into a contingent fee arrangement only in those instances where the arrangement will be beneficial to the client.

6 See ABA Canon 10.

9 “Rule 3a. . . . A member of the State Bar shall not directly or indirectly pay or agree to pay, or represent or sanction the representation that he will pay, medical, hospital or nursing bills or other personal expenses incurred by or for a client, prospective or existing; provided, this rule shall not prohibit a member (1) with the consent of the client, from paying or agreeing to pay to third persons such expenses from funds collected or to be collected for the client; or (2) after he has been employed, from lending money to his client upon the client’s promise in writing to repay such loan; or (3) from advancing the costs of prosecuting or defending a claim or action. Such costs within the meaning of this subparagraph (3) include all taxable costs or disbursements, costs or investigation and costs of obtaining and presenting evidence.” Cal. Business and Professions Code § 6076 (West Supp.1967).
either to whether a lawyer should accept employment or should withdraw from employment. Regardless of when the problem arises, his decision is so strongly influenced by the sides on which he will be. It is not objectionable for a lawyer who is a potential witness to be an advocate if it is unlikely that he will be called as a witness because his testimony would be merely cumulative or if his testimony will relate only to an uncontested issue. In the exceptional situation where it will be manifestly unfair to the client for the lawyer to refuse employment or to withdraw when he will likely be a witness on a contested issue, he may serve as advocate even though he may be a witness. In making such decision, he should determine the personal or financial sacrifice of the client that may result from his refusal of employment or withdrawal therefrom, the materiality of his testimony, and the effectiveness of his representation in view of his personal involvement. In weighing these factors, it should be clear that refusal or withdrawal will impose an unreasonable hardship upon the client before the lawyer accepts or continues the employment. Where the question arises, doubts should be resolved in favor of the lawyer testifying and against his becoming or continuing as an advocate.

3.0 When a lawyer knows, prior to trial, that he will be a necessary witness, except as to merely formal matters such as identification or custody of a document or the like, neither he nor his firm or associates should conduct the trial. If, during the trial, he discovers that the ends of justice require his testimony, he should, from that point on, if feasible and not prejudicial to his client’s case, leave further conduct of the trial to other counsel. If circumstances do not permit withdrawal from the conduct of the trial, the lawyer should not argue the credibility of his own testimony. A Code of Trial Conduct: Promulgated by the American College of Trial Lawyers, 43 A.B.A.J. 223, 224-25 (1957).

11 Cf. Canon 19: “When a lawyer is a witness for his client, except as to merely formal matters, such as the attestation or custody of an instrument and the like, he should leave the trial of the case to other counsel.”

12 “It is the general rule that a lawyer may not testify in litigation in which he is an advocate unless circumstances arise which could not be anticipated and it is necessary to prevent a miscarriage of justice. In those rare cases where the testimony of an attorney is needed to protect his client’s interests, it is not only proper but mandatory that it be forthcoming.” Schwartz v. Wenger, 267 Minn. 40, 43-44, 124 N.W.2d 489, 492 (1963).

13 “The great weight of authority in this country holds that the attorney who acts as counsel and witness, in behalf of his client, in the same cause on a material matter, not of a merely formal character, and not in an emergency, but having knowledge that he would be required to be a witness in ample time to have secured other counsel and given up his service in the case, violates a highly important provision of the Code of Ethics and a rule of professional conduct, but does not commit a legal error in so testifying, as a result of which a new trial will be granted.” Erwin M. Jennings Co. v. DiGenova, 107 Conn. 491, 499, 141 A. 866, 869 (1928).

14 “[C]lasses may arise, and in practice often do arise, in which there would be a failure of justice should the attorney withhold his testimony. in such a case it would be a vicious professional sentiment which would deprive the client of the benefit of his attorney’s testimony.” Connolly v. Straw, 53 Wis. 645, 649, 11 N.W. 17, 19 (1881). But see Canon 19: “Except when essential to the ends of justice, a lawyer should avoid testifying in court in behalf of his client.”

15 Cf. ABA Canon 7.

16 See ABA Canon 7.

Interests of Multiple Clients

EC 5-14 Maintaining the independence of professional judgment required of a lawyer precludes his acceptance or continuation of employment that will adversely affect his judgment on behalf of or dilute his loyalty to a client. This problem arises whenever a lawyer is asked to represent two or more clients who may have differing interests, whether such interests be conflicting, inconsistent, diverse, or otherwise discordant. If a lawyer is requested to undertake or to continue representation of multiple clients having potentially differing interests, he must weigh carefully the possibility that his judgment may be impaired or his loyalty divided if he accepts or the client of the benefit of his attorney’s testimony.”

17 See ABA Canon 6; cf. ABA Opinions 261 (1944), 242 (1942), 142 (1935), and 30 (1931).

18 The ABA Canons speak of “conflicting interests” rather than “differing interests” but make no attempt to define such other than the statement in Canon 6: “Within the meaning of this canon, a lawyer represents conflicting interests when, in behalf of one client, it is his duty to contend for that which duty to another client requires him to oppose.”

continues the employment. He should resolve all doubts against the propriety of the representation. A lawyer should never represent in litigation multiple clients with differing interests, and there are few situations in which he would be justified in representing in litigation multiple clients with potentially differing interests. If a lawyer accepted such employment and the interests did become actually differing, he would have to withdraw from employment with likelihood of resulting hardship on the clients; and for this reason it is preferable that he refuse the employment initially. On the other hand, there are many instances in which a lawyer may properly serve multiple clients having potentially differing interests in matters not involving litigation. If the interests vary only slightly, it is generally likely that the lawyer will not be subjected to an adverse influence and that he can retain his independent judgment on behalf of each client; and if the interests become differing, withdrawal is less likely to have a disruptive effect upon the causes of his clients.

EC 5-16 In those instances in which a lawyer is justified in representing two or more clients having differing interests, it is nevertheless essential that each client be given the opportunity to evaluate his need for representation free of any potential conflict and to obtain other counsel if he so desires. Thus before a lawyer may represent multiple clients, he should explain fully to each client the implications of the common representation and should accept or continue employment only if the clients consent. If there are present other circumstances that might cause any of the multiple clients to question the undivided loyalty of the lawyer, he should also advise all of the clients of those circumstances.22

EC 5-17 Typically recurring situations involving potentially differing interests are those in which a lawyer is asked to represent co-defendants in a criminal case, co-plaintiffs in a personal injury case, an insured and his insurer, and beneficiaries of the estate of a decedent. Whether a lawyer can fairly and adequately protect the interests of multiple clients in these and similar situations depends upon an analysis of each case. In certain circumstances, there may exist little chance of the judgment of the lawyer being adversely affected by the slight possibility that the interests will become actually differing; in other circumstances, the chance of adverse effect upon his judgment is not unlikely.

EC 5-18 A lawyer employed or retained by a corporation or similar entity owes his allegiance to the entity and not to a stockholder, director, officer, employee, representative, or other person connected with the entity. In advising the entity, a lawyer should keep paramount its interests and his professional judgment should not be influenced by a desire on the part of an accused to have a disruptive effect upon the causes of his clients.

20 “Glasser wished the benefit of the undivided assistance of counsel of his own choice. We think that such a desire on the part of an accused should be respected. Irrespective of any conflict of interest, the additional burden of representing another party may conceivably impair counsel’s effectiveness.” ABA Opinion 282 (1950).

“[Counsel, selected by State Farm to defend Dorothy Walker’s suit for $50,000 damages, was apprised by Walker that his earlier version of the accident was untrue and that actually the accident occurred because he lost control of his car in passing a Cadillac just ahead. At that point, Walker’s counsel should have refused to participate further in view of the conflict of interest between Walker and State Farm. . . . Instead he participated in the ensuing deposition of the Walkers, even took an ex parte sworn statement from Mr. Walker in order to advise State Farm what action it should take, and later used the statement against Walker in the District Court. This action appears to contravene an Indiana attorney’s duty ‘at every peril to himself, to preserve the secrets of his client’ . . . State Farm Mut. Auto Ins. Co. v. Walker, 382 F.2d 548, 552 (1967), cert. denied, 389 U.S. 1045, 19 L.Ed. 2d 837, 88 S.Ct. 789 (1968).”

by the personal desires of any person or organization. Occasionally a lawyer for an entity is requested by a stockholder, director, officer, employee, representative, or other person connected with the entity to represent him in an individual capacity; in such case the lawyer may serve the individual only if the lawyer is convinced that differing interests are not present.

EC 5-19 A lawyer may represent several clients whose interests are not actually or potentially differing. Nevertheless, he should explain any circumstances that might cause a client to question his undivided loyalty.24 Regardless of the belief of a lawyer that he may properly represent multiple clients, he must defer to a client who holds the contrary belief and withdraw from representation of that client.

EC 5-20 A lawyer is often asked to serve as an impartial arbitrator or mediator in matters which involve present or former clients. He may serve in either capacity if he first discloses such present or former relationships. After a lawyer has undertaken to act as an impartial arbitrator or mediator, he should not thereafter represent in the dispute any of the parties involved.

Desires of Third Persons

EC 5-21 The obligation of a lawyer to exercise professional judgment solely on behalf of his client requires that he disregard the desires of others that might impair his free judgment.25 The desires of a third person will seldom adversely affect a lawyer unless that person is in a position to exert strong economic, political, or social pressures upon the lawyer. These influences are often subtle, and a lawyer must be alert to their existence. A lawyer subjected to outside pressures should make full disclosure of them to his client; 26 and if he or his client believes that the effectiveness of his representation has been or will be impaired thereby, the lawyer should take proper steps to withdraw from representation of his client.

EC 5-22 Economic, political, or social pressures by third persons are less likely to impinge upon the independent judgment of a lawyer in a matter 26 “Objection to the intervention of a lay intermediary, who may control litigation or otherwise interfere with the rendering of legal services in a confidential relationship, . . . derives from the element of pecuniary gain. Fearful of dangers thought to arise from that element, the courts of several States have sustained regulations aimed at these activities. We intimate no view one way or the other as to the merits of those decisions with respect to the particular arrangements against which they are directed. It is enough that the superficial resemblance in form between those arrangements and that at bar cannot obscure the vital fact that here the entire arrangement employs constitutionally privileged means of expression to secure constitutionally guaranteed civil rights.” NAACP v. fices are administered by boards of directors composed of lawyers and laymen. A lawyer should not accept employment from such an organization unless the board sets only broad policies and there is no interference in the relationship of the lawyer and the individual client he serves. Where a lawyer is employed by an organization, a written agreement that defines the relationship between him and the organization and provides for his independence is desirable since it may serve to prevent misunderstanding as to their respective roles. Although other innovations in the means of supplying legal counsel may develop, the responsibility of the lawyer to maintain his professional independence remains constant, and the legal profession must insure that changing circumstances do not result in loss of the professional independence of the lawyer.

DISCIPLINARY RULES

DR 5-101 Refusing Employment When the Interests of the Lawyer May Impair His Independent Professional Judgment.

(A) Except with the consent of his client after full disclosure, a lawyer shall not accept employment if the exercise of his professional judgment on behalf of his client will be or reasonably may be affected by his own financial, business, property, or personal interests.29

(B) A lawyer shall not accept employment in contemplated or pending litigation if he knows or it is obvious that he or a lawyer in his firm ought to be called as a witness, except that he may undertake the employment and he or a lawyer in his firm may testify:

1. If the testimony will relate solely to an uncontested matter.

2. If the testimony will relate solely to a matter of formality and there is no reason to believe that substantial evidence will be offered in opposition to the testimony.

30 DR 5-102 Withdrawal as Counsel When the Lawyer Becomes a Witness.

(A) If, after undertaking employment in contemplated or pending litigation, a lawyer learns or it is obvious that he or a lawyer in his firm ought to be called as a witness on behalf of his client, he shall withdraw from the conduct of the trial and his firm, if any, shall not continue representation in the trial, except that he may continue the representation and he or a lawyer in his firm may testify in the circumstances enumerated in DR 5-101 (B) (1) through (4).

(B) If, after undertaking employment in contemplated or pending litigation, a lawyer learns or it is obvious that he or a lawyer in his firm may be called as a witness other than on behalf of his client, he may continue the representation until it is apparent that his testimony is or may be prejudicial to his client.

DR 5-103 Avoiding Acquisition of Interest in Litigation.

(A) A lawyer shall not acquire a proprietary interest in the cause of action or subject matter of litigation he is conducting for a client, except that he may:

1. Acquire a lien granted by law to secure his fee or expenses.

2. Contract with a client for a reasonable contingent fee in a civil case.

(B) While representing a client in connection with contemplated or pending litigation, a lawyer shall not advance or guarantee financial as-

"In Opinion 16 this Committee held that a member of a law firm could not represent a defendant in a criminal case which was being prosecuted by another member of the firm who was public prosecuting attorney. The Opinion stated that it was clearly unethical for one member of the firm to oppose the interest of the state while another member represented those interests . . . . Since the prosecutor himself could not represent both the public and the defendant, no member of his law firm could either." ABA Opinion 296 (1959).

Apparently, the object of this precept is to avoid putting a lawyer in the obviously embarrassing predicament of testifying and then having to argue the credibility and effect of his own testimony. It was not designed to permit a lawyer to call opposing counsel as a witness and thereby disqualify him as counsel. Galarowicz v. Ward, 119 Utah 611, 620, 230 P.2d 576, 580 (1951).

prevent prospective jurors from being impartial at the outset of the trial 54 and may also interfere with the obligation of jurors to base their verdict solely upon the evidence admitted in the trial.55

"Court proceedings are held for the solemn purpose of endeavoring to ascertain the truth which is the sine qua non of a fair trial. Over the centuries Anglo-American courts have devised careful safeguards by rule and otherwise to protect and facilitate the performance of this high function. As a result, at this time those safeguards do not permit the televising and photographing of a criminal trial, save in two States and there only under restrictions. The federal courts prohibit it by specific rule. This is weighty evidence that our concepts of a fair trial do not solely upon the evidence admitted in the trial.55

PRETRIAL CAN BE A MAJOR PROBLEM FOR THE DEFENDANT IN A CRIMINAL CASE. Indeed, it may be more harmful than publicity during the trial for it may well set the community opinion as to guilt or innocence. . . . The trial witnesses present at the hearing, as well as the original jury panel, were undoubtedly made aware of the peculiar public importance of the case by the press and television coverage being provided, and by the fact that they themselves were televised live and their pictures rebroadcast on the evening show." Id., 381 U.S. at 536-37, 14 L.Ed.2d at 546-47, 85 S.Ct. at 1629-30.

The trial judge has a large discretion in ruling on the issue of releasing evidence resulting from the reading by jurors of news articles concerning the trial. . . . Generalizations beyond that statement are not profitable, because each case must turn on its special facts. We have here the exposure of jurors to information of a character which the trial judge ruled was so prejudicial it could not be directly offered as evidence. The prejudice to the defendant is almost certain to be as great when that evidence reaches the jury through news accounts as when it is a part of the prosecution’s evidence. . . . It may indeed be greater for it is then not tempered by protective procedures." Marshall v. United States, 360 U.S. 310, 312-13, 3 L.Ed.2d 1250, 1252, 79 S.Ct. 1171, 1173 (1959).

The experienced trial lawyer knows that an adverse publicity can be a tremendous disadvantage to the defense of his client. Although grand jurors conduct their deliberations in secret, they are selected from the body of the public. They are likely to know what the general public knows and to reflect the public attitude. Trials are open to the public, and aroused public opinion respecting the merits of a legal controversy creates a court room atmosphere which, without any vocal expression in the presence of the petit jury, makes itself felt and has its effect upon the action of the petit jury. Our fundamental concepts of justice and our American sense of fair play require that the petit jury shall be composed of persons with fair and impartial minds and without preconceived views as to the merits of the controversy, and that it shall deliberate the issues presented to it solely upon the evidence adduced at the trial and according to the law given in the instructions of the trial judge.

The release by a lawyer of out-of-court statements regarding an anticipated or pending trial may improperly affect the impartiality of the tribunal.56 For these reasons, standards for permissible and prohibited conduct of a lawyer with respect to trial publicity have been established.

EC 7-34 The impartiality of a public servant in our legal system may be impaired by the receipt of gifts or loans. A lawyer,57 therefore, is never justified in making a gift or a loan to a judge, a hearing officer, or an official or employee of a tribunal.58

EC 7-35 All litigants and lawyers should have access to tribunals on an equal basis. Generally, in adversary proceedings a lawyer should not communicate with a judge relative to a matter pending before, or which is to be brought before, a tribunal over which he presides in circumstances which might have the effect or give the appearance of granting undue advantage to one party.59 For example, a lawyer should not communicate with a tribunal by a writing unless a copy thereof is promptly delivered to opposing counsel or to the adverse party if he is not represented by a lawyer. Ordinarily an oral communication by a lawyer with a judge or hearing officer should be made only upon adequate notice to opposing counsel, or, if there is none, to the opposing party. A lawyer should not condone or lend himself to private importunities by another with a judge or hearing officer on behalf of himself or his client.

"While we may doubt that the effect of public opinion would sway or bias the judgment of the trial judge in an equity proceeding, the defendant should not be called upon to run that risk and the trial court should not have his work made more difficult by any dissemination of statements to the public with respect to a proceeding or pending case." ABA Opinion 199 (1940).

See ABA Canon 20.

Canon 3 observes that a lawyer "deserves rebuke and denunciation for any device or attempt to gain from a Judge special personal consideration or favor." See ABA Canon 32.

Judicial Canon 32 provides:

"A judge should not accept any presents or favors from litigants, or from lawyers practicing before him or from others whose interests are likely to be submitted to him for judgment."

The language of this Canon is perhaps broad enough to prohibit campaign contributions by lawyers, practicing before the court upon which the candidate hopes to sit. However, we do not think it was intended to prohibit such contributions when the candidate is obligated, by force of circumstances over which he has no control, to conduct a campaign, the expense of which exceeds that which he should reasonably be expected to personally bear!" ABA Opinion 226 (1941).

See ABA Canons 3 and 32.
ly, he should not engage in any conduct that offends the dignity and decorum of proceedings.60

While maintaining his independence, a lawyer should be respectful, courteous, and above-board in his relations with a judge or hearing officer before whom he appears.61 He should avoid undue solicitude for the comfort or convenience of judge or jury and should avoid any other conduct calculated to gain special consideration.

EC 7-37 In adversary proceedings, clients are litigants and though ill feeling may exist between clients, such ill feeling should not influence a lawyer in his conduct, attitude, and demeanor towards opposing lawyers.62 A lawyer should not make unfair or derogatory personal reference to opposing counsel. Haranguing and offensive tactics by lawyers interfere with the orderly administration of justice and have no proper place in our legal system.

EC 7-38 A lawyer should be courteous to opposing counsel and should accede to reasonable requests regarding court proceedings, settings, continuances, waiver of procedural formalities, and similar matters which do not prejudice the rights of his client.63 He should follow local customs of courtesy or practice, unless he gives timely notice to opposing counsel of his intention not to do so.64 A lawyer should be punctual in fulfilling all professional commitments.65

EC 7-39 In the final analysis, proper functioning of the adversary system depends upon cooperation between lawyers and tribunals in utilizing procedures which will preserve the impartiality of tribunals and make their decisional processes prompt and just, without imposing upon the obligation of lawyers to represent their clients zealously within the framework of the law.

DISCIPLINARY RULES

DR 7-101 Representing a Client Zealously.

(A) A lawyer shall not intentionally: 66

(1) Fail to seek the lawful objectives of his client through reasonably available means permitted by law and the Disciplinary Rules, except as provided by DR 7-101(B). A lawyer does not violate this Disciplinary Rule, however, by acceding to reasonable requests of opposing counsel which do not prejudice the rights of his client, by being punctual in fulfilling all professional commitments, by avoiding offensive tactics, or by treating with courtesy and consideration all persons involved in the legal process.

(2) Fail to carry out a contract of employment entered into with a client for professional services, but he may withdraw as permitted under DR 2-110, DR 5-102, and DR 5-105.

(3) Prejudice or damage his client during the course of the professional relationship except as required under DR 7-102(B).

(B) In his representation of a client, a lawyer may:

(1) Where permissible, exercise his professional judgment to waive or fail to assert a right or position of his client.

(2) Refuse to aid or participate in conduct that he believes to be unlawful, even though there is some support for an argument that the conduct is legal.

DR 7-102 Representing a Client Within the Bounds of the Law.

(A) In his representation of a client, a lawyer shall not:

(1) File a suit, assert a position, conduct a defense, delay a trial, or take other action on behalf of his client when he knows or when it is obvious that such action would serve merely to harass or maliciously injure another.69

(2) Knowingly advance a claim or defense that is unwarranted under existing law, except that he may advance such claim or defense if it can be supported by good faith argument for an extension, modification, or reversal of existing law.

(3) Conceal or knowingly fail to disclose that which he is required by law to reveal.

(4) Knowingly use perjured testimony or false evidence.70

(5) Knowingly make a false statement of law or fact.

(6) Participate in the creation or preservation of evidence when he knows or it is obvious that the evidence is false.

(7) Counsel or assist his client in conduct that the lawyer knows to be illegal or fraudulent.

(8) Knowingly engage in other illegal conduct or conduct contrary to a Disciplinary Rule.

(B) A lawyer who receives information clearly establishing that:

(1) His client has, in the course of the representation, perpetrated a fraud upon a person or tribunal shall promptly call

DR 7-103 Performing the Duty of Public Prosecutor or Other Government Lawyer.

(A) A public prosecutor or other government lawyer shall not institute or cause to be instituted criminal charges when he knows or it is obvious that the charges are not supported by probable cause.

(B) A public prosecutor or other government lawyer in criminal litigation shall make timely disclosure to counsel for the defendant, or to the defendant if he has no counsel, of the existence of evidence, known to the prosecutor or other government lawyer, that tends to negate the guilt of the accused, mitigate the degree of the offense, or reduce the punishment.

DR 7-104 Communicating With One of Adverse Interest.

(A) During the course of his representation of a client a lawyer shall not:

(1) Communicate or cause another to communicate on the subject of the representation with a party he knows to be represented by a lawyer in that matter unless he has the prior consent of the lawyer representing such other party or is authorized by law to do so.

(2) Give advice to a person who is not represented by a lawyer, other than the attorney-client privilege as applied to the fact of retainer or identity of the persons who employed him.

DR 7-105 Threatening Criminal Prosecution.

(A) A lawyer shall not present, participate in presenting, or threaten to present criminal charges solely to obtain an advantage in a civil matter.

DR 7-106 Trial Conduct.

(A) A lawyer shall not disregard or advise his client to disregard a standing rule of a tribunal or a ruling of a tribunal made in the course of a proceeding, but he may take appropriate steps in good faith to test the validity of such rule or ruling.

(B) In presenting a matter to a tribunal, a lawyer shall disclose:

(1) Legal authority in the controlling jurisdiction known to him to be directly adverse to the position of his client and which is not disclosed by opposing counsel.

(2) Unless privileged or irrelevant, the identities of the clients he represents and of the persons who employed him.

77 Cf. ABA Opinion 9 and ABA Opinion 58 (1931).

79 "In the brief summary in the 1947 edition of the Committee's decisions (p. 17), Opinion 146 was thus summarized: 'Opinion 146—A lawyer should disclose to the court a decision directly adverse to his client's case that is unknown to his adversary.

"We would not confine the Opinion to 'controlling authorities'—i.e., those decisive of the pending case—but, in accordance with the tests hereafter suggested, would apply it to a decision directly adverse to any proposition of law on which the lawyer expressly relies, which would reasonably be considered important by the judge sitting on the case.

". . . The test in every case should be: Is the decision which opposing counsel has overlooked one which the court should clearly consider in deciding the case? Would a reasonable judge properly feel that a lawyer who advanced, as the law, a proposition adverse to the undisclosed decision, was lacking in candor and fairness to him? Might the judge consider himself misled by an implied representation that the lawyer knew of no adverse authority?" ABA Opinion 280 (1949).

50 "The authorities are substantially uniform against any privilege as applied to the fact of retainer or identity of the client. The privilege is limited to confidential communications, and a retainer is not a confidential communication, although it cannot come into existence without some communication between the attorney and the—at that stage prospective—client." CODE OF PROFESSIONAL RESPONSIBILITY

(C) In appearing in his professional capacity before a tribunal, a lawyer shall not:

(1) State or allude to any matter that he has no reasonable basis to believe is relevant to the case or that will not be supported by admissible evidence.81

(2) Ask any question that he has no reasonable basis to believe is relevant to the case and that is intended to degrade a witness or other person.82

(3) Assert his personal knowledge of the facts in issue, except when testifying as a witness.

(4) Assert his personal opinion as to the justness of a cause, as to the credibility of a witness, as to the culpability of a civil litigant, or as to the guilt or innocence of an accused;83 but he may argue, on his analysis of the evidence, for any position or conclusion with respect to the matters stated herein.

(5) Fail to comply with known local customs of courtesy or practice of the bar or a particular tribunal without giving to opposing counsel timely notice of his intent not to comply.84

“The rule allowing counsel when addressing the jury the widest latitude in discussing the evidence and presenting the client’s theories falls far short of authorizing the statement by counsel of matter not in evidence, or indulging in argument founded on no proof, or demanding verdicts for purposes other than the just settlement of the matters at issue between the litigants, or appealing to prejudice or passion. The rule confining counsel to legitimate argument is not based on etiquette, but on justice. Its violation is not merely an overstepping of the bounds of propriety, but a violation of a party’s rights. The jurors must determine the issues upon the evidence. Counsel’s address should help them do this, not tend to lead them astray.” Cherry Creek Nat. Bank v. Fidelity & Cas. Co., 207 App.Div. 787, 790-91, 202 N.Y.S. 611, 614 (1924).

“(f) To abstain from all offensive personality, and to advance no fact prejudicial to the honor or reputation of a party or witness, unless required by the justice of the cause with which he is charged.” Cal.Business and Professions Code § 6068 (West 1962).

83 “The record in the case at bar was silent concerning the qualities and character of the deceased. It is especially improper, in addressing the jury in a murder case, for the prosecuting attorney to make reference to his knowledge of the good qualities of the deceased where there is no evidence in the record bearing upon his character. . . . A prosecutor should never inject into his argument evidence not introduced at the trial.” People v. Dukes, 1211.2d 334, 341, 146 N.E.2d 14, 17-18 (1957).

84 “A lawyer should not ignore known customs or practice of the Bar or of a particular Court, even when the law permits, without giving timely notice to the opposing counsel.” ABA Canon 25.

(6) Engage in undignified or discourteous conduct which is degrading to a tribunal.

(7) Intentionally or habitually violate any established rule of procedure or of evidence.

DR 7-107 Trial Publicity.85

(A) A lawyer participating in or associated with the investigation of a criminal matter shall not make or participate in making an extra-judicial statement that a reasonable person would expect to be disseminated by means of public communication and that does more than state without elaboration:

(1) Information contained in a public record.

(2) That the investigation is in progress.

(3) The general scope of the investigation including a description of the offense and, if permitted by law, the identity of the victim.

(4) A request for assistance in apprehending a suspect or assistance in other matters and the information necessary thereto.

(5) A warning to the public of any dangers.

(B) A lawyer or law firm associated with the prosecution or defense of a criminal matter shall not, from the time of the filing of a complaint, information, or indictment, the issuance of an arrest warrant, or arrest until the commencement of the trial or disposition

85 The provisions of Sections (A), (B), (C), and (D) of this Disciplinary Rule incorporate the fair trial-free press standards which apply to lawyers as adopted by the ABA. House of Delegates, Feb. 19, 1968, upon the recommendation of the Fair Trial and Free Press Advisory Committee of the ABA Special Committee on Minimum Standards for the Administration of Criminal Justice.

Cf. ABA Canon 20; see generally ABA Advisory Committee on Fair Trial and Free Press, Standards Relating to Fair Trial and Free Press (1966).

“From the cases coming here we note that unfair and prejudicial news comment on pending trials has become increasingly prevalent. Due process requires that the accused receive a trial by an impartial jury free from outside influences. Given the pervasiveness of modern communications and the difficulty of effacing prejudicial publicity from the minds of the jurors, the trial courts must take strong measures to ensure that the balance is never weighed against the accused. And appellate tribunals have the duty to make an independent evaluation of the circumstances. Of course, there is nothing that prescribes the press from reporting events that transpire in the courtroom. But where there is a reasonable likelihood that prejudicial news prior to trial will prevent a fair trial, the judge should continue the case until the threat abates, or transfer it to another county not so permeated with publicity. . . . The courts must take such steps by rule and regulation that will protect their processes from prejudicial outside interferences. Neither prosecutors, counsel for defense, the accused, witnesses, court staff nor enforcement officers coming under the jurisdiction of the court should be permitted to frustrate its function. Collaboration between counsel and the press as to information affecting the fairness of a criminal trial is not only subject to regulation, but is highly censurable and worthy of disciplinary measures.” Sheppard v. Maxwell, 384 U.S. 333, 362-63, 16 L.Ed.2d 600, 620, 86 S.Ct. 1507, 1522 (1966).
without trial, make or participate in making an extrajudicial statement that a reasonable person would expect to be disseminated by means of public communication and that relates to:

(1) The character, reputation, or prior criminal record (including arrests, indictments, or other charges of crime) of the accused.
(2) The possibility of a plea of guilty to the offense charged or to a lesser offense.
(3) The existence or contents of any confession, admission, or statement given by the accused or his refusal or failure to make a statement.
(4) The performance or results of any examinations or tests or the refusal or failure of the accused to submit to examinations or tests.
(5) The identity, testimony, or credibility of a prospective witness.
(6) Any opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the accused, the evidence, or the merits of the case.

(C) DR 7-107(B) does not preclude a lawyer during such period from announcing:

(1) The name, age, residence, occupation, and family status of the accused.
(2) If the accused has not been apprehended, any information necessary to aid in his apprehension or to warn the public of any dangers he may present.
(3) A request for assistance in obtaining evidence.
(4) The fact, time, and place of arrest, resistance, pursuit, and use of weapons.
(5) The identity of investigating and arresting officers or agencies and the length of the investigation.
(6) At the time of seizure, a description of the physical evidence seized, other than a confession, admission, or statement.
(7) The nature, substance, or text of the charge.
(8) Quotations from or references to public records of the court in the case.
(9) The scheduling or result of any step in the judicial proceedings.
(10) That the accused denies the charges made against him.

(D) During the selection of a jury or the trial of a criminal matter, a lawyer or law firm associated with the prosecution or defense of a criminal matter shall not make or participate in making an extrajudicial statement that a reasonable person would expect to be disseminated by means of public communication and that relates to the trial, parties, or issues in the trial or other matters that are reasonably likely to interfere with a fair trial, except that he may quote from or refer without comment to public records of the court in the case.

(E) After the completion of a trial or disposition without trial of a criminal matter and prior to the imposition of sentence, a lawyer or law firm associated with the prosecution or defense shall not make or participate in making an extrajudicial statement that a reasonable person would expect to be disseminated by public communication and that is reasonably likely to affect the imposition of sentence.

(F) The foregoing provisions of DR 7-107 also apply to professional disciplinary proceedings and juvenile disciplinary proceedings when pertinent and consistent with other law applicable to such proceedings.

(G) A lawyer or law firm associated with a civil action shall not during its investigation or litigation make or participate in making an extrajudicial statement, other than a quotation from or reference to public records, that a reasonable person would expect to be disseminated by means of public communication and that relates to:

(1) Evidence regarding the occurrence or transaction involved.
(2) The character, credibility, or criminal record of a party, witness, or prospective witness.
(3) The performance or results of any examinations or tests or the refusal or failure of a party to submit to such.
(4) His opinion as to the merits of the claims or defenses of a party, except as required by law or administrative rule.
(5) Any other matter reasonably likely to interfere with a fair trial of the action.

(H) During the pendency of an administrative proceeding, a lawyer or law firm associated therewith shall not make or participate in making a statement, other than a quotation from or reference to public records, that a reasonable person would expect to be disseminated by means of public communication if it is made outside the official course of the proceeding and relates to:

(1) Evidence regarding the occurrence or transaction involved.
(2) The character, credibility, or criminal record of a party, witness, or prospective witness.
(3) Physical evidence or the performance or results of any examinations or tests or the refusal or failure of a party to submit to such.
(4) His opinion as to the merits of the claims, defenses, or positions of an interested person.
(5) Any other matter reasonably likely to interfere with a fair hearing.
The foregoing provisions of DR 7-107 do not preclude a lawyer from replying to charges of misconduct publicly made against him or from participating in the proceedings of legislative, administrative, or other investigative bodies.

A lawyer shall exercise reasonable care to prevent his employees and associates from making an extrajudicial statement that he would be prohibited from making under DR 7-107.

DR 7-108 Communication with or Investigation of Jurors.

(A) Before the trial of a case a lawyer connected therewith shall not communicate with or cause another to communicate with anyone he knows to be a member of the venire from which the jury will be selected for the trial of the case.

(B) During the trial of a case:

(1) A lawyer connected therewith shall not communicate with or cause another to communicate with any member of the jury.

(2) A lawyer who is not connected therewith shall not communicate with or cause another to communicate with a juror concerning the case.

(C) DR 7-108(A) and (B) do not prohibit a lawyer from communicating with veniremen or jurors in the course of official proceedings.

(D) After discharge of the jury from further consideration of a case with which the lawyer was connected, the lawyer shall not ask questions of or make comments to a member of that jury that are calculated merely to harass or embarrass the juror or to influence his actions in future jury service.

(E) A lawyer shall not conduct or cause, by financial support or otherwise, another to conduct a vexatious or harassing investigation of either a venireman or a juror.

(F) All restrictions imposed by DR 7-108 upon a lawyer also apply to communications with or investigations of members of a family of a venireman or a juror.

(G) A lawyer shall reveal promptly to the court improper conduct by a venireman or a juror, or by another toward a venireman or a juror or a member of his family, of which the lawyer has knowledge.

DR 7-109 Contact with Witnesses.

(A) A lawyer shall not suppress any evidence that he or his client has a legal obligation to reveal or produce.

(B) A lawyer shall not advise or cause a person to secrete himself or to leave the jurisdiction of a tribunal for the purpose of making him unavailable as a witness therein.

(C) A lawyer shall not pay, offer to pay, or acquiesce in the payment of compensation to a witness contingent upon the content of his testimony or the outcome of the case. But a lawyer may advance, guarantee, or acquiesce in the payment of:

(1) Expenses reasonably incurred by a witness in attending or testifying.

(2) Reasonable compensation to a witness for his loss of time in attending or testifying.

(3) A reasonable fee for the professional services of an expert witness.

DR 7-110 Contact with Officials.

(A) A lawyer shall not give or lend anything of value to a judge, official, or employee of a tribunal.

(B) In an adversary proceeding, a lawyer shall not communicate, or cause another to communicate, as to the merits of the cause with a judge or an official before whom the proceeding is pending, except:

(1) In the course of official proceedings in the cause.

(2) In writing if he promptly delivers a copy of the writing to opposing counsel or to the adverse party if he is not represented by a lawyer.

(3) Orally upon adequate notice to opposing counsel or to the adverse party if he is not represented by a lawyer.

(4) As otherwise authorized by law.

90 “Rule 15. . . . A member of the State Bar shall not advise a person, whose testimony could establish or tend to establish a material fact, to avoid service of process, or secrete himself, or otherwise to make his testimony unavailable.” Cal. Business and Professions Code § 6076 (West 1962).

91 Cf. ABA Canon 5.

92 “Rule 16. . . . A member of the State Bar shall not, in the absence of opposing counsel, communicate with or argue to a judge or judicial officer except in open court upon the merits of a contested matter pending before such judge or judicial officer; nor shall he, without furnishing opposing counsel with a copy thereof, address a written communication to a judge or judicial officer concerning the merits of a contested matter pending before such judge judicial officer. This rule shall not apply to ex parte matters.” Cal. Business and Professions Code § 6076 (West 1962).
CANON 8
A Lawyer Should Assist in Improving the Legal System

ETHICAL CONSIDERATIONS

EC 8-1 Changes in human affairs and imperfections in human institutions make necessary constant efforts to maintain and improve our legal system. This system should function in a manner that commands public respect and fosters the use of legal remedies to achieve redress of grievances. By reason of education and experience, lawyers are especially qualified to recognize deficiencies in the legal system and to initiate corrective measures therein. Thus they should participate in proposing and supporting legislation and programs to improve the system, without regard to the general interests or desires of clients or former clients.

EC 8-2 Rules of law are deficient if they are not just, understandable, and responsive to the needs of society. If a lawyer believes that the existence or absence of a rule of law, substantive or procedural, causes or contributes to an unjust result, he should endeavor by lawful means to obtain appropriate changes in the law. He should encourage the simplification of laws and the repeal or amendment of laws that are outmoded. Like other persons unable to pay for legal services, those persons unable to pay for legal services.

[Another] task of the great lawyer is to do his part individually and as a member of the organized bar to improve his profession, the courts, and the law. As President Theodore Roosevelt aptly put it, 'Every man owes some of his time to the upbuilding of the profession to which he belongs.' Indeed, this obligation is one of the great things which distinguishes a profession from a business. The soundness and the necessity of President Roosevelt's admonition insofar as it relates to the legal profession cannot be doubted. The advances in natural science and technology are so startling and the velocity of change in business and in social life is so great that the law along with the other social sciences, and even human life itself, is in grave danger of being extinguished by new gods of its own invention if it does not awake from its lethargy. Vanderbilt, The Five Functions of the Lawyer: Service to Clients and the Public, 40 A.B.A.J. 31, 31-32 (1954).

1 See ABA Canon 29; Cf. Cheatham, The Lawyer's Role and Surroundings, 25 Rocky Mt.L.Rev. 405, 406-07 (1953).

2 The lawyer tempted by repose should recall the heavy costs paid by his profession when needed legal reform has to be accomplished through the initiative of public-minded laymen. Where change must be thrust from without upon an unwilling Bar, the public's least flattering picture of the lawyer seems confirmed. The lawyer concerned for the standing of his profession will, therefore, interest himself actively in the improvement of the law. In doing so he will not only help to maintain confidence in the Bar, but will have the satisfaction of meeting a responsibility inhering in the nature of his calling. Professional Responsibility: Report of the Joint Conference, 44 A.B.A.J. 1159, 1217 (1958).

4 There are few great figures in the history of the Bar who have not concerned themselves with the reform and wise, legal procedures should be improved whenever experience indicates a change is needed.

EC 8-3 The fair administration of justice requires the availability of competent lawyers. Members of the public should be educated to recognize the existence of legal problems and the resultant need for legal services, and should be provided methods for intelligent selection of counsel. Those persons unable to pay for legal services should be provided needed services. Clients and lawyers should not be penalized by undue geographical restraints upon representation in legal matters, and the bar should address itself to improvements in licensing, reciprocity, and admission procedures consistent with the needs of modern commerce.

EC 8-4 Whenever a lawyer seeks legislative or administrative changes, he should identify the capacity in which he appears, whether on behalf of himself, a client, or the public. A lawyer may advocate such changes on behalf of a client even though he does not agree with them. But when a lawyer purports to act on behalf of the public, he should espouse only those changes which he conscientiously believes to be in the public interest.

EC 8-5 Fraudulent, deceptive, or otherwise illegal conduct by a participant in a proceeding before a tribunal or legislative body is inconsistent with fair administration of justice, and it should never be participated in or condoned by lawyers. Unless constrained by his obligation to preserve the confidences and secrets of his client, a lawyer should reveal to appropriate authorities any knowledge he may have of such improper conduct.

EC 8-6 Judges and administrative officials having adjudicatory powers ought to be persons of integrity, competence, and suitable temperament. Generally, lawyers are qualified, by personal observation or investigation, to evaluate the qualifications of persons seeking or being considered for such public offices, and for this reason they have a special responsibility to aid in the selection of only those who are qualified. It is the duty of improvement of the law. The special obligation of the profession with respect to legal reform rests on considerations too obvious to require enumeration. Certainly it is the lawyer who has both the best chance to know when the law is working badly and the special competence to put it in order. Professional Responsibility: Report of the Joint Conference, 44 A.B.A.J. 1159, 1217 (1958).

5 Rule 14. . . . A member of the State Bar shall not communicate with, or appear before, a public officer, board, committee or body, in his professional capacity, without first disclosing that he is an attorney representing interests that may be affected by action of such officer, board, committee or body. Cal. Business and Professions Code § 6076 (West 1962).

Lawyers are better able than laymen to appraise accurately the qualifications of candidates for judicial office. It is proper that they should make that appraisal known to the voters in a proper and dignified manner. A lawyer may with propriety endorse a candidate for judicial office and seek like endorsement from other lawyers. But lawyers to endeavor to prevent political considerations from outweighing judicial fitness in the selection of judges. Lawyers should protest earnestly against the appointment or election of those who are unsuited for the bench and should strive to have elected or appointed thereto only those who are willing to forego pursuits, whether of a business, political, or other nature, that may interfere with the free and fair consideration of questions presented for adjudication. Adjudicatory officials, not being wholly free to defend themselves, are entitled to receive the support of the bar against unjust criticism. While a lawyer as a citizen has a right to criticize such officials publicly, he should be certain of the merit of his complaint, use appropriate language, and avoid petty criticisms, for unrestrained and intemperate statements tend to lessen public confidence in our legal system. Criticisms motivated by reasons other than a desire to improve the legal system are not justified.

EC 8-7 Since lawyers are a vital part of the legal system, they should be persons of integrity, of professional skill, and of dedication to the improvement of the system. Thus a lawyer should aid in establishing, as well as enforcing, standards of conduct adequate to protect the public by insuring that those who practice law are qualified to do so.

EC 8-8 Lawyers often serve as legislators or as holders of other public offices. This is highly desirable, as lawyers are uniquely qualified to make significant contributions to the improvement of the legal system. A lawyer who is a public officer, whether full or part-time, should not engage in activities in which his personal or professional interests are or foreseeably may be in conflict with his official duties."

EC 8-9 The advancement of our legal system is of vital importance in maintaining the rule of law and in facilitating orderly changes; therefore, lawyers should encourage, and should aid in making, needed changes and improvements.

DISCIPLINARY RULES

DR 8-101 Action as a Public Official.

(A) A lawyer who holds public office shall not:

1. Use his public position to obtain, or attempt to obtain, a special advantage in legislative matters for himself or for a client under circumstances where he knows or it is obvious that such action is not in the public interest.

2. Use his public position to influence, or attempt to influence, a tribunal to act in favor of himself or of a client.

Cf. ABA Opinions 186 (1938), 136 (1935), 118 (1934), and 77 (1932).

LXIV
(3) Accept any thing of value from any person when the lawyer knows or it is obvious that the offer is for the purpose of influencing his action as a public official.

DR 8-102 Statements Concerning Judges and Other Adjudicatory Officers

(A) A lawyer shall not knowingly make false statements of fact concerning the qualifications of a candidate for election or appointment to a judicial office.

(B) A lawyer shall not knowingly make false accusations against a judge or other adjudicatory officer.

EC 9-1 Continuation of the American concept that we are to be governed by rules of law requires that the people have faith that justice can be obtained through our legal system. A lawyer should promote public confidence in our system and in the legal profession.2

EC 9-2 Public confidence in law and lawyers may be eroded by irresponsible or improper conduct of a lawyer. On occasion, ethical conduct of a lawyer may appear to laymen to be unethical. In order to avoid misunderstandings and hence to maintain confidence, a lawyer should fully and promptly inform his client of material developments in the matters being handled for the client. While a lawyer should guard against otherwise proper conduct that has a tendency to diminish public confidence in the legal system or in the legal profession, his duty to clients or to the public should never be subordinate merely because the full discharge of his obligation may be misunderstood or may tend to subject him or the legal profession to criticism. When explicit ethical guidance does not exist, a lawyer should determine his conduct by acting in a manner that promotes public confidence in the integrity and efficiency of the legal system and the legal profession.3

EC 9-3 After a lawyer leaves judicial office or other public employment, he should not accept employment in connection with any matter in which he had substantial responsibility prior to his leaving, since to accept employment would give the appearance of impropriety even if none exists.

EC 9-4 Because the very essence of the legal system is to provide procedures by which matters can be presented in an impartial manner so that they may be decided solely upon the merits, any statement or suggestion by a lawyer that he can or would attempt to circumvent those procedures is detrimental to the legal system and tends to undermine public confidence in it.

EC 9-5 Separation of the funds of a client from those of his lawyer not only serves to protect the client but also avoids even the appearance of impropriety, and therefore commingling of such funds should be avoided.

EC 9-6 Every lawyer owes a solemn duty to uphold the integrity and honor of his profession; to encourage respect of the law and for the courts and the judges thereof; to observe the Code of Professional Responsibility; to act as a member of a learned profession, one dedicated to public service; to cooperate with his brother lawyers in supporting the organized bar through the devoting of his time, efforts, and financial support as his professional standing and ability reasonably permit; to conduct himself so as to reflect credit on the legal profession and to inspire the confidence, respect, and trust of his clients and of the public; and to strive to avoid not only professional impropriety but also the appearance of impropriety.5

3 See ABA Canon 29.

4 See ABA Canon 36.

5 “As said in Opinion 49 of the Committee on Professional Ethics and Grievances of the American Bar Association, page 134: ‘An attorney should not only avoid impropriety but should avoid the appearance of impropriety.’ State ex rel, Nebraska State Bar Ass’n v. Richards, 165 Neb. 80. 93, 84 N.W.2d 136, 145 (1957).

“It would also be preferable that such contribution [to the campaign of a candidate for judicial office] be made to a campaign committee rather than to the candidate personally. In so doing, possible appearances of impropriety would be reduced to a minimum.” ABA Opinion 226 (1941).

“The lawyer assumes high duties, and has imposed upon him grave responsibilities. He may be the means of much good or much mischief. Interests of vast magnitude are entrusted to him; confidence is reposed in him; life, liberty, character and property should be protected by him. He should guard, with jealous watchfulness, his own reputation, as well as that of his profession.” People ex rel. Cutler v. Ford, 54 Ill. 520, 522 (1870), and also quoted in State Board of Law Examiners v. Sheldon, 43 Wyo. 522, 526, 7 P.2d 226, 227 (1932).

DR 9-101 Avoiding Even the Appearance of Impropriety.6

(A) A lawyer shall not accept private employment in a matter upon the merits of which he has acted in a judicial capacity.

(B) A lawyer shall not accept private employment in a matter in which he had substantial responsibility while he was a public employee.8

(C) A lawyer shall not state or imply that he is able to influence improperly or upon irrelevant grounds any tribunal, legislative body, or public official.

7 See ABA Canon 36.

"It is the duty of the judge to rule on questions of law and evidence in misdemeanor cases and examinations in felony cases. That duty calls for impartial and uninfluenced judgment, regardless of the effect on those immediately involved or others who may, directly or indirectly, be affected. Discharge of that duty might be greatly interfered with if the judge, in another capacity, were permitted to hold himself out to employment by those who are to be, or who may be, brought to trial in felony cases, even though he did not conduct the examination. His private interests as a lawyer in building up his clientele, his duty as such zealously to espouse the cause of his private clients and to defend against charges of crime brought by law-enforcement agencies of which he is a part, might prevent, or even destroy, that unbiased judicial judgment which is so essential in the administration of justice.

"In our opinion, acceptance of a judgeship with the duties of conducting misdemeanor trials, and examinations in felony cases to determine whether those accused should be bound over for trial in a higher court, ethnically bars the judge from acting as attorney for the defendants upon such trial, whether they were examined by him or by some other judge. Such a practice would not only diminish public confidence in the administration of justice in both courts, but would produce serious conflict between the private interests of the judge as a lawyer, and of his clients, and his duties as a judge in adjudicating important phases of criminal processes in other cases. The public and private duties would be incompatible. The prestige of the judicial office would be diverted to private benefit, and the judicial office would be demeaned thereby." ABA Opinion 242 (1942).

"A lawyer, who has previously occupied a judicial position or acted in a judicial capacity, should refrain from accepting employment in any matter involving the same facts as were involved in any specific question which he acted upon in a judicial capacity and, for the same reasons, should also refrain from accepting any employment which might reasonably appear to involve the same facts." ABA Opinion 49 (1931). See ABA Opinion 110 (1934).

8 See ABA Opinions 135 (1935) and 134 (1935); cf. ABA Canon 36 and ABA Opinions 39 (1931) and 26 (1930). But see ABA Opinion 37 (1931).

9 "[A statement by a governmental department or agency with regard to a lawyer resigning from its staff that includes a laudation of his legal ability] carries implications, probably not founded in fact, that the lawyer's acquaintance and previous relations with the personnel of the administrative agencies of the government place him in an advantageous position in practicing before such agencies. So to imply would not only represent what probably is untrue, but would be highly reprehensible." ABA Opinion 184 (1938).

10 See ABA Canon 11.

"Rule 9. . . . A member of the State Bar shall not commingle the money or other property of a client with his own; and he shall promptly report to the client the receipt by him of all money and other property belonging to such client. Unless the client otherwise directs in writing, he shall promptly deposit his client's funds in a bank or trust company. . . . in a bank account separate from his own account and clearly designated as 'Clients' Funds Account' or 'Trust Funds Account' or words of similar import. Unless the client otherwise directs in writing, securities of a client in bearer form shall be kept by the attorney in a safe deposit box at a bank or trust company. . . . which safe deposit box shall be clearly designated as 'Clients' Account' or 'Trust Account' or words of similar import, and be separate from the attorney's own safe deposit box." Cal.Business and Professions Code § 6076 (West 1962).

"[C]ommingling is committed when a client's money is intermingled with that of his attorney and its separate identity lost so that it may be used for the attorney's personal expenses or subjected to claims of his creditors. . . . The rule against commingling was adopted to provide against the probability in some cases, the possibility in many cases, and the danger in all cases that such commingling will result in the loss of clients' money." Black v. State Bar, 57 Cal.2d 219, 225-26, 368 P.2d 118, 122, 18 Cal.Rptr. 518, 522 (1962).
sistance to his client, except that a lawyer may advance or guarantee the expenses of litigation, including court costs, expenses of investigation, expenses of medical examination, and costs of obtaining and presenting evidence, provided the client remains ultimately liable for such expenses.

(A) A lawyer shall not enter into a business transaction with a client if they have differing interests therein and if the client expects the lawyer to exercise his professional judgment therein for the protection of the client, unless the client has consented after full disclosure.

(B) Prior to conclusion of all aspects of the matter giving rise to his employment, a lawyer shall not enter into any arrangement or understanding with a client or a prospective client by which he acquires an interest in publication rights with respect to the subject matter of his employment or proposed employment.

DR 5-105 Refusing to Accept or Continue Employment if the Interests of Another Client May Impair the Independent Professional Judgment of the Lawyer.

(A) A lawyer shall decline proffered employment if the exercise of his independent professional judgment in behalf of a client will be or is likely to be adversely affected by the acceptance of the proffered employment, except to the extent permitted under DR 5-105(C).

(B) A lawyer shall not continue multiple employment if the exercise of his independent professional judgment in behalf of a client will be or is likely to be adversely affected by his representation of another client, except to the extent permitted under DR 5-105(C).

(C) In the situations covered by DR 5-105(A) and (B), a lawyer may represent multiple clients if it is obvious that he can adequately represent the interest of each and if each consents to the representation after full disclosure of the possible effect of such representation on the exercise of his independent professional judgment on behalf of each.

35 See ABA Canon 6; cf. ABA Opinions 167 (1937), 60 (1931), and 40 (1931).
36 ABA Opinion 247 (1942) held that an attorney could not investigate a night club shooting on behalf of one of the owner’s liability insurers, obtaining the cooperation of the owner, and later represent the injured patron in an action against the owner and a different insurance company unless the attorney obtain the “express consent of all concerned given after a full disclosure of the facts,” since to do so would be to represent conflicting interests.

See ABA Opinions 247 (1942), 224 (1941), 222 (1941), 218 (1941), 112 (1934), 83 (1932), and 86 (1932).
37 Cf. ABA Opinions 231 (1941) and 160 (1936).

(D) If a lawyer is required to decline employment or to withdraw from employment under DR 5-105, no partner or associate of his or his firm may accept or continue such employment.

DR 5-106 Settling Similar Claims of Clients.

(A) A lawyer who represents two or more clients shall not make or participate in the making of an aggregate settlement of the claims of or against his clients, unless each client has consented to the settlement after being advised of the existence and nature of all the claims involved in the proposed settlement, of the total amount of the settlement, and of the participation of each person in the settlement.

DR 5-107 Avoiding Influence by Others Than the Client.

(A) Except with the consent of his client after full disclosure, a lawyer shall not:

(1) Accept compensation for his legal services from one other than his client.

(2) Accept from one other than his client anything of value related to his representation of or his employment by his client.

(B) A lawyer shall not permit a person who recommends, employs, or pays him to render legal services for another to direct or regulate his professional judgment in rendering such legal services.

(C) A lawyer shall not practice with or in the form of a professional corporation or association authorized to practice law for a profit, if:

(1) A non-lawyer owns any interest therein, except that a fiduciary representative of the estate of a lawyer may hold the stock or interest of the lawyer for a reasonable time during administration;

(2) A non-lawyer is a corporate director or officer thereof; or 38 Cf. ABA Opinions 243 (1942) and 235 (1941).

39 See ABA Canon 38.
40 A lawyer who receives a commission (whether delayed or not) from a title insurance company or guaranty fund for recommending or selling the insurance to his client, or for work done for the client or the company, without either fully disclosing to the client his financial interest in the transaction, or crediting the client’s bill with the amount thus received, is guilty of unethical conduct.” ABA Opinion 304 (1962).
37 Cf. ABA Opinions 231 (1941) and 160 (1936).
(3) A non-lawyer has the right to direct or control the professional judgment of a lawyer.43

CANON 6

A Lawyer Should Represent a Client Competently

ETHICAL CONSIDERATIONS

EC 6-1 Because of his vital role in the legal process, a lawyer should act with competence and proper care in representing clients. He should strive to become and remain proficient in his practice 1 and should accept employment only in matters which he is or intends to become competent to handle.

EC 6-2 A lawyer is aided in attaining and maintaining his competence by keeping abreast of current legal literature and developments, participation in lawyers practice law. Its requirement that no person shall be admitted or held out as a practitioner or member who is not a member of the legal profession duly authorized to practice, and amenable to professional discipline, makes it clear that any centralized management must be in lawyers to avoid a violation of this Canon. “ABA Opinion 303 (1961).

43 “There is no intervention of any lay agency between lawyer and client when centralized management provided only by lawyers may give guidance or direction to the services being rendered by a lawyer-member of the organization to a client. The language in Canon 35 that a lawyer should avoid all relations which direct the performance of his duties by or in the interest of an intermediary refers to lay intermediaries and not lawyer intermediaries with whom he is associated in the practice of law.” ABA Opinion 303 (1961).

1 “When a citizen is faced with the need for a lawyer, he wants, and is entitled to, the best informed counsel he can obtain. Changing times produce changes in our laws and legal procedures. The natural complexities of law require continuing intensive study by a lawyer if he is to render his clients a maximum of efficient service. And, in so doing, he maintains the high standards of the legal profession; and he also increases respect and confidence by the general public.” Rochelle & Payne, The Struggle for Public Understanding, 25 Texas B.J. 109, 160 (1962).

“We have undergone enormous changes in the last fifty years within the lives of most of the adults living today who may be seeking advice. Most of these changes have been accompanied by changes and developments in the law. . . . Every practicing lawyer encounters these problems and is often perplexed with his own inability to keep up, not only with changes in the law, but also with changes in the lives of his clients and their legal problems.

“To be sure, no client has a right to expect that his lawyer will have all of the answers at the end of his tongue or even in the back of his head at all times, But the client does have the right to expect that the lawyer will have devoted his time and energies to maintaining and improving his competence to know where to look for the answers, to know how to deal with the problems, and to know how to advise to the best of his legal talents and abilities.” Levy & Sprague, Accounting and Law: Is Dual Practice in the Public Interest?, 52 A.B.A.J. 1110, 1112 (1966).

“The whole purpose of continuing legal education, so enthusiastically supported by the ABA, is to make it possible for lawyers to make themselves better lawyers. But there are no nostrums for proficiency in the law; it must come through the hard work of the lawyer himself. To the extent that that work, whether it be in attending institutes or lecture courses, in studying after hours or in the actual day in and day out practice of his profession, can be concentrated within a limited field, the greater the proficiency and expertise that can be developed.” Report of the Special Committee on Specialization and Specialized Legal Education, 79 A.B.A.Rep. 582, 588 (1954).

EC 6-6 A lawyer should not seek, by contract or other means, to limit his individual liability to his client for his malpractice. A lawyer who handles the affairs of his client properly has no need to attempt to limit his liability for his professional activities and one who does not handle the affairs of his client properly should not be permitted to do so. A lawyer who is a stockholder in or is associated with a professional legal corporation may, however, limit his liability for malpractice of his associates in the corporation, but only to the extent permitted by law.5

DR 6-101 Failing to Act Competently.

(A) A lawyer shall not:

1. Handle a legal matter which he knows or should know that he is not competent to handle, without associating with him a lawyer who is competent to handle it.

2. Handle a legal matter without preparation adequate in the circumstances.

3. Neglect a legal matter entrusted to him.6

DR 6-102 Limiting Liability to Client.

(A) A lawyer shall not attempt to exonerate himself from or limit his liability to his client for his personal malpractice.

CANON 7

A Lawyer Should Represent a Client Zealously Within the Bounds of the Law

ETHICAL CONSIDERATIONS

EC 7-1 The duty of a lawyer, both to his client and to the legal system, is to represent his client zealously within the bounds of the law, which includes Disciplinary Rules and enforceable professional responsibility in the process of promoting a better tax system. The tax lawyer need not accept his client’s economic and social opinions, but the client is paying for technical attention and undivided concentration upon his affairs. He is equally entitled to performance unfettered by his attorney’s economic and social predilections.” Paul, The Lawyer as a Tax Adviser, 25 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 412, 418 (1953).

3 See ABA Canons 15 and 32.

ABA Canon 5, although only speaking of one accused of crime, imposes a similar obligation on the lawyer: “[T]he lawyer is bound, by all fair and honorable means, to present every defense that the law of the land permits.” The same end that the person may not be deprived of life or liberty, but by due process of law.”

Any persuasion or pressure on the advocate which detracts him from planning and carrying out the litigation on the basis of what, within the framework of the law, is best for my client’s interest interferes with the obligation to represent the client fully within the law.

This obligation, in its fullest sense, is the heart of the adversary process. Each attorney, as an advocate, acts for and seeks that which in his judgment is best for his client, within the bounds authoritatively established. The advocate does not decide what is just in this case—he would be usurping the function of the judge and jury—he acts for and seeks for his client that which he is entitled to under the law. He can do no less and properly represent the client. Thode, The Ethical Standard for the Advocate, 39 Texas L.Rev. 575, 584 (1961).

The [Texas public opinion] survey indicates that distrust of the lawyer can be traced directly to certain factors. Foremost of these is a basic misunderstanding of the function of the lawyer as an advocate in an adversary system.

“Lawyers are accused of taking advantage of ‘loopholes’ and ‘technicalities’ to win. Persons who make this charge are unaware, or do not understand, that the lawyer is hired to win, and if he does not exercise every legitimate effort in his client’s behalf, then he is betraying a sacred trust.” Rochelle & Payne, The Struggle for Public Understanding, 25 Texas B.J. 109, 159 (1962).

The importance of the attorney’s undivided allegiance and faithful service to one accused of crime, irrespective of the attorney’s personal opinion as to the guilt of his client, lies in Canon 5 of the American Bar Association Canon of Ethics.

“The difficulty lies, of course, in ascertaining whether the attorney has been guilty of an error of judgment, such as an election with respect to trial tactics, or has otherwise been actuated by his conscience or belief that his client should be convicted in any event. All too frequently courts are called upon to review actions of defense counsel which are, at the most, errors of judgment, not properly reviewable on habeas corpus unless the trial is a farce and a mockery of justice which requires the court to intervene. . . . But when defense counsel, in a truly adverse proceeding, admits that his conscience would not permit him to adopt certain customary trial procedures, this extends beyond the realm of judgment and strongly suggests an invasion of constitutional rights.” Johns v. Smyth, 176 F.Supp. 949, 952 (E.D.Va.1959), modified, United States ex rel. Wilkins v. Banmiller, 205 F.Supp. 123, 128, n. 5 (E.D.Pa.1962), aff’d, 325 F.2d 514 (3d Cir. 1963), cert. denied, 379 U.S. 847, 13 L.Ed.2d 51, 85 S.Ct. 87 (1964).

The adversary system in law administration bears a striking resemblance to the competitive economic system. In each we assume that the individual through partisanship or through self-interest will strive mightily for his side, and that kind of striving we must have. But neither system would be tolerable without restraints and modiprofessional regulations. The professional responsibility of a lawyer derives from his membership in a profession which has the duty of assisting members of the public to secure and protect available legal rights and benefits. In our government of laws and not of men, each member of our society is entitled to have his conduct judged and regulated in accordance with the law; to seek any lawful objective through legally permissible means; and to present for adjudication any lawful claim, issue, or defense.

EC 7-2 The bounds of the law in a given case are often difficult to ascertain. The language of directions, and at times without outright departures from the system itself. Since the legal profession is entrusted with the system of law administration, a part of its task is to develop in its members appropriate restraints without impairing the values of partisan striving. An accompanying task is to aid in the modification of the adversary system of departure from it in areas to which the system is unsuited. Cheatham, The Lawyer’s Role and Surroundings, 25 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 405, 410 (1953).

4 “Rule 4.15 prohibits, in the pursuit of a client’s cause, ‘any manner of fraud or chicane’; Rule 4.22 requires ‘candor and fairness’ in the conduct of the lawyer, and forbids the making of knowing misquotations; Rule 4.47 provides that a lawyer ‘should always maintain his integrity,’ and generally forbids all misconduct injurious to the interests of the public, the courts, or his clients, and acts contrary to ‘justice, honesty, modesty or good morals.’ Our Commissioner has accurately paraphrased these rules as follows: ‘An attorney does not have the duty to do all and whatever he can that may enable him to win his client’s cause or to further his client’s interest. His duty and efforts in these respects, although they should be prompted by his “entire devotion” to the interest of his client, must be within and not without the bounds of the law.” In re Wines, 370 S.W.2d 328, 333 (Mo.1963). See Note, 38 Texas L.Rev. 107, 110 (1959).

5 “Under our system of government the process of adjudication is surrounded by safeguards evolved from centuries of experience. These safeguards are not designed merely to lend formality and decorum to the trial of causes. They are predicated on the assumption that to secure for any controversy a truly informed and dispassionate decision is a difficult thing, requiring for its achievement a special summoning and organization of human effort and the adoption of measures to exclude the biases and prejudices that have free play outside the courtroom. All of this goes for naught if the man with an unpopular cause is unable to find a competent lawyer courageous enough to represent him. His chance to have his day in court loses much of its meaning if his case is handicapped from the outset by the very kind of prejudgment our system of law is that you intentionally may go as close to it as you can if you do not pass it . . . . It is a matter of proximity and degree as to which minds will differ. Justice Holmes, in Superior Oil Co. v. Mississippian, 280 U.S. 390, 395-96, 74 L. Ed. 504, 508, 50 S.Ct. 169, 170 (1930).

6 “[I]t is . . . [the tax lawyer’s] positive duty to show the client how to avail himself to the full of what the law permits. He is not the keeper of the Congressional conscience.” Paul, The Lawyer as a Tax Adviser, 25 Rocky Mt. L.Rev. 412, 418 (1953).

7 See ABA Canons 15 and 30. The fact that it desired to evade the law, as it is called, is immaterial, because the very meaning of a line in the law is that you intentionally may go as close to it as you can if you do not pass it . . . . It is a matter of proximity and degree as to which minds will differ. Justice Holmes, in Superior Oil Co. v. Mississippian, 280 U.S. 390, 395-96, 74 L. Ed. 504, 508, 50 S.Ct. 169, 170 (1930).

9 “Today’s lawyers perform two distinct types of functions, and our ethical standards should, but in the main do not, recognize these two functions. Judge Philbrick McCoy recently reported to the American Bar Association the need for a reappraisal of the Canons in light of the new and distinct function of counselor, as distinguished from advocate, which today predominates in the legal profession.” Thode, The Ethical Standard for the Advocate, 39 Texas L.Rev. 575, 578-79 (1961).

10 “A lawyer who is asked to advise his client . . . may freely urge the statement of positions most favorable to the client just as long as there is reasonable basis for those positions.” ABA Opinion 314 (1965).
circumstances should give his professional opinion as to what the ultimate decisions of the courts would likely be as to the applicable law.

Duty of the Lawyer to a Client

EC 7-4 The advocate may urge any permissible construction of the law favorable to his client, without regard to his professional opinion as to the likelihood that the construction will ultimately prevail. His conduct is within the bounds of the law, and therefore permissible, if the position taken is supported by the law or is supportable by a good faith argument for an extension, modification, or reversal of the law. However, a lawyer is not justified in asserting a position in litigation that is frivolous.

"The lawyer . . . is not an umpire, but an advocate. He is under no duty to refrain from making every proper argument in support of any legal point because he is not convinced of its inherent soundness. His personal belief in the soundness of his cause or of the authorities supporting it, is irrelevant." ABA Opinion 280 (1949).

"Counsel apparently misconceived his role. It was his duty to honorably present his client's contentions in the light most favorable to his client. Instead he presumed to advise the court as to the validity and sufficiency of prisoner's motion, by letter. We therefore conclude that the prisoner had no effective assistance of counsel and remand this case to the District Court with instructions to set aside the Judgment, appoint new counsel to represent the prisoner if he makes objection thereto, and proceed anew." McCartney v. United States, 343 F.2d 471, 472 (9th Cir. 1965).

The no-merit letter and the procedure it triggers do not reach that dignity. Counsel should, and can with honor and without conflict, be of more assistance to his client and to the court. His role as advocate requires that he support his client's appeal to the best of his ability. Of course, if counsel finds his case to be wholly frivolous, after a conscientious examination of all the relevant factors, he should advise the court and request permission to withdraw. That request must, however, be accompanied by a brief referring to anything in the record that might arguably support the appeal. A copy of counsel's brief should be furnished the indigent and time allowed him to raise any points that he chooses; the court—not counsel—then proceeds, after a full examination of all the relevant facts, to decide whether the case is frivolous. If it so finds it may grant counsel's request to withdraw and dismiss the appeal insofar as federal requirements are concerned, or proceed to a decision on the merits, if state law so requires. On the other hand, if it finds any of the legal points arguable on their merits (and therefore not frivolous) it must, prior to decision, afford the indigent the assistance of counsel to argue the appeal." Anders v. California, 386 U.S. 738, 744, 18 L.Ed.

EC 7-5 A lawyer as adviser furthers the interest of his client by giving his professional opinion as to what he believes would likely be the ultimate decision of the courts on the matter at hand and by informing his client of the practical effect of such decision. He may continue in the representation of his client even though his client has elected to pursue a course of conduct contrary to the advice of the lawyer so long as he does not thereby knowingly assist the client to engage in illegal conduct or to take a frivolous legal position. A lawyer should never encourage or aid his client to commit criminal acts or counsel his client on how to violate the law and avoid punishment therefore.

EC 7-6 Whether the proposed action of a lawyer is within the bounds of the law may be a perplexing question when his client is contemplating a course of conduct having legal consequence that vary according to the client's intent, motive, or desires at the time of the action. Often a lawyer is asked to assist his client in developing evidence relevant to the state of mind of the client at a particular time. He may properly assist his client in the development and preservation of evidence of existing motive, intent, or desire; obviously, he may not do anything furthering the creation or preservation of false evidence. In many cases a lawyer may not be certain as to the state of mind of his client, and in those situations he should resolve reasonable doubts in favor of his client.

EC 7-7 In certain areas of legal representation not affecting the merits of the cause or substantially prejudicing the rights of a client, a lawyer is entitled to make decisions on his own. But otherwise the authority to make decisions is exclusively that of the client and, if made within the framework of the law, such decisions are binding on his lawyer. As typical examples in civil cases, it is for the client to decide whether he will accept a settlement offer or whether he will waive his right to plead an affirmative defense. A defense lawyer in a criminal case has the duty to advise his client fully on whether a particular plea to a charge appears to be desirable and as to the prospects of success on appeal, but it is for the client to decide what plea should be entered and whether an appeal should be taken.15

EC 7-8 A lawyer should exert his best efforts to insure that decisions of his client are made only after the client has been informed of relevant considerations. A lawyer ought to initiate this decision-making process if the client does not do so. Advice of a lawyer to his client need not be confined to purely legal considerations.16 A lawyer should advise his client of the possible effect of each legal alternative.17 A lawyer should bring to bear upon this decision-making process the fullness of his experience as well as his objective viewpoint.

In assisting his client to reach a proper decision, it is often desirable for a lawyer to point out those factors which may lead to a decision that is morally just as well as legally permissible.18 He may emphasize the possibility of harsh consequences that might result from assertion of legally permissible positions. In the final analysis, however, the lawyer should always remember that the decision whether to forego legally available objectives or methods because of non-legal factors is ultimately for the client and not for himself. In the event that the client in a non-adjudicatory matter insists upon a course of conduct that is contrary to the judgment and advice of the lawyer but not prohibited by Disciplinary Rules, the lawyer may withdraw from the employment.20

EC 7-9 In the exercise of his professional judgment on those decisions which are for his determination in the handling of a legal matter,21 a lawyer should always act in a manner consistent with the best interests of his client.22 However, when an action in the best interest of his client seems to him to be unjust, he may ask his client for permission to forego such action.23

EC 7-10 The duty of a lawyer to represent his client with zeal does not militate against his concurrent obligation to treat with consideration all persons involved in the legal process and to avoid the infliction of needless harm.

EC 7-11 The responsibilities of a lawyer may vary according to the intelligence, experience, mental condition or age of a client, the obligation of a public officer, or the nature of a particular proceeding. Examples include the representation of an illiterate or an incompetent, service as a public prosecutor or other government lawyer, and appearances before administrative and legislative bodies.

EC 7-12 Any mental or physical condition of a client that renders him incapable of making a considered judgment on his own behalf casts additional responsibilities upon his lawyer. Where an incompetent is acting through a guardian or other legal representative, a lawyer must look to such representative for those decisions which are normally the prerogative of the client to make. If a client under disability has no legal representative, his lawyer may be compelled in court proceedings to make decisions on behalf of the client. If the client is capable of understanding the matter in question or of contributing to the advancement of his interests, regardless of whether he is legally disqualified from performing certain acts, the lawyer should obtain from him all possible aid. If the disability of a client and the lack of a legal representative compel the lawyer to make decisions for his client, the lawyer should consider all 16 "First of all, a truly great lawyer is a wise counselor to all manner of men in the varied crises of their lives when they most need disinterested advice. Effective counseling necessarily involves a thoroughgoing knowledge of the principles of the law not merely as they appear in the books but as they actually operate in action." 18 "[I]n devising charters of collaborative effort the lawyer often acts where all of the affected parties are present as participants. But the lawyer also performs a similar function in situations where this is not so, as, for example, in planning estates and drafting wills. Here the instrument defining the terms of collaboration may affect persons not present and often not born. Yet here, too, the good lawyer does not serve merely as a legal conduit for his client's desires, but as a wise counselor, experienced in the art of devising arrangements that will put in workable order the entangled affairs and interests of human beings." Professional Responsibility: Report of the Joint Conference, 44 A.B.A.J. 1159, 1162 (1958).

20 "My summation of Judge Sharswood's view of the advocate's duty to the client is that he owes to the client the duty to use all legal means in support of the client's case. However, at the same time Judge Sharswood recognized that many advocates would find this obligation unbearable if applicable without exception. Therefore, the individual lawyer is given the choice of representing his client fully within the bounds set by the law or of telling his client that he cannot do so, so that the client may obtain another attorney if he wishes." circumstances then prevailing and act with care to safeguard and advance the interests of his client. But obviously a lawyer cannot perform any act or make any decision which the law requires his client to perform or make, either acting for himself if competent, or by a duly constituted representative if legally incompetent.

EC 7-13 The responsibility of a public prosecutor differs from that of the usual advocate; his duty is to seek justice, not merely to convict. This special duty exists because: (1) the prosecutor represents the sovereign and therefore should use restraint in the discretionary exercise of governmental powers, such as in the selection of cases to prosecute; (2) during trial the prosecutor is not only an advocate but he also may make decisions normally made by an individual client, and those affecting the public interest should be fair to all; and (3) in our system of criminal justice the accused is to be given the benefit of all reasonable doubts. With respect to evidence and witnesses, the prosecutor has responsibilities different from those of a lawyer in private practice: the prosecutor should make timely disclosure to the defense of available evidence, known to him, that tends to negate the guilt of the accused, mitigate the degree of the offense, or reduce the punishment. Further, a prosecutor should not intentionally avoid pursuit of evidence merely because he believes it will damage the prosecution's case or aid the accused.

EC 7-14 A government lawyer who has discretionary power relative to litigation should refrain from instituting or continuing litigation that is obviously unfair. A government lawyer not having such discretionary power who believes there is lack of merit in a controversy submitted to him should so advise his superiors and recommend the avoidance of unfair litigation. A government lawyer in a civil action or administrative proceeding has the responsibility to seek justice and to develop a full and fair record, and he should not use his position or the economic power of the government to harass parties or to bring about unjust settlements or results.

"The public prosecutor cannot take as a guide for the conduct of his office the standards of an attorney appearing on behalf of an individual client. The freedom elsewhere wisely granted to a partisan advocate must be severely curtailed if the prosecutor's duties are to be properly discharged. The public prosecutor must recall that he occupies a dual role, being obligated, on the one hand, to safeguard and advance the interests of his client, if identity of his client is not privileged, and to serve the public, if identity of his client is not privileged, or a combination of both. They may be ex parte in character, in which case they must originate either at the instance of the agency, or upon motion of an interested party. The scope of an inquiry may be purely investigative or it may be truly adversary looking toward the adjudication of specific rights of a party or of classes of parties. The foregoing are but examples of some of the types of proceedings conducted by administrative agencies. A lawyer appearing before an administrative agency, regardless of the nature of the proceeding it is conducting, has the continuing duty to advance the cause of his client within the bounds of the law. Where the applicable rules of the agency impose specific obligations upon a lawyer, it is his duty to comply therewith, unless the lawyer has a legitimate basis for challenging the validity thereof. In all appearances before administrative agencies, a lawyer should identify himself, his client if identity of his client is not privileged, and the representative nature of his appearance. It is not improper, however, for a lawyer to seek from an agency information available to the public without identifying his client.

EC 7-16 The primary business of a legislative body is to enact laws rather than to adjudicate controversies, although on occasion the activities of a legislative body may take on the characteristics of an adversary proceeding, particularly in investigative and impeachment matters. The role of a lawyer supporting or opposing proposed legislation normally is quite different from his role in representing a person under investigation or on trial by a legislative body. When a lawyer appears in connection with proposed legislation, he seeks to affect the lawmaking process, but when he appears on behalf of a client in investigatory or impeachment proceedings, he is concerned with the protection of the rights of his client. In either event, he should identify himself and his client, if identity of his client is not privileged, and should comply with applicable laws and legislative rules.

25 As to appearances before a department of government, Canon 26 provides: "A lawyer openly . . . may render professional services . . . in advocacy of claims before departments of government, upon the same principles of ethics which justify his appearance before the Courts without identifying his client."

26 "But as an advocate before a service which itself represents the adversary point of view, where his client's case is fairly arguable, a lawyer is under no duty to disclose its weaknesses, any more than he would be to disclose a disclosure to a brother lawyer. The limitations within which he must operate are best expressed in Canon 22 . . . . " ABA Opinion 314 (1965).

terests or desires of his client. While a lawyer must act always with circumspection in order that his conduct will not adversely affect the rights of a client in a matter he is handling, he may take positions on public issues and espouse legal reforms he favors without regard to the individual views of any client.

EC 7-18 The legal system in its broadest sense functions best when persons in need of legal advice or assistance are represented by their own counsel. For this reason a lawyer should not communicate on the subject matter of the representation of his client with a person he knows to be represented in the matter by a lawyer, unless pursuant to law or rule of court or unless he has the consent of the lawyer for that person. If one is not represented by counsel, a lawyer representing another may have to deal directly with the unrepresented person; in such an instance, a lawyer should not undertake to give advice to the person who is attempting to represent himself, except that he may advise him to obtain a lawyer.

Duty of the Lawyer to the Adversary System of Justice

EC 7-19 Our legal system provides for the adjudication of disputes governed by the rules of substantive, evidentiary, and procedural law. An adversary presentation counters the natural human tendency to judge too swiftly in terms of the familiar that which is not yet fully known; the advocate, by his zealous preparation and presentation of facts and law, enables the tribunal to come to the hearing with an open and neutral mind and to render impartial judgments. The duty of a lawyer to his client and his duty to the legal system are the same: to represent his client zealously within the bounds of the law.

EC 7-20 In order to function properly, our adjudicative process requires an informed, impartial tribunal capable of administering justice promptly and efficiently according to procedures that command public confidence and respect. Not only must there be competent, adverse presentation of evidence and issues, but a tribunal must be aided by rules appropriate to an effective and dignified process. The procedures under which tribunals operate in our adversary system have been prescribed largely by legislative enactments, court rules and decisions, and administrative rules. Through the years certain concepts of proper professional conduct have become rules of law applicable to the adversary adjudicative process. Many of these concepts are the bases for standards of professional conduct set forth in the Disciplinary Rules.

EC 7-21 The civil adjudicative process is primarily designed for the settlement of disputes between parties, while the criminal process is designed for the protection of society as a whole. Threatening to use, or using, the criminal process to coerce adjustment of private civil claims or controversies is a subversion of that process; further, the person against whom the criminal process is so misused may be deterred from asserting his legal rights and thus the usefulness of the civil process in settling private disputes is impaired. As in all cases of abuse of judicial process, the improper use of criminal process tends to diminish public confidence in our legal system.

EC 7-22 Respect for judicial rulings is essential to the proper administration of justice; however, a litigant or his lawyer may, in good faith and theory: a public trial of the facts and issues. Each advocate comes to the hearing prepared to present his proofs and arguments, knowing at the same time that his arguments may fail to persuade and that his proof may be rejected as inadequate. . . . The deciding tribunal, on the other hand, comes to the hearing uncommitted. It has not represented to the public that any fact can be proved, that any argument is sound, or that any particular way of stating a litigant’s case is the most effective expression of its merits.” Professional Responsibility: Report of the Joint Conference, 44 A.B.A.J. 1159, 1160 (1958).

31 Id.
33 Without the participation of someone who can act responsibly for each of the parties, this essential narrowing of the issues [by exchange of written pleadings or stipulations of counsel] becomes impossible. But here again the true significance of partisan advocacy lies deeper, touching once more the integrity of the adjudicative process itself. It is only through the advocate’s participation that the hearing may remain in fact what it purports to be in within the framework of the law, take steps to test the correctness of a ruling of a tribunal.38

EC 7-23 The complexity of law often makes it difficult for a tribunal to be fully informed unless the pertinent law is presented by the lawyers in the cause. A tribunal that is fully informed on the applicable law is better able to make a fair and accurate determination of the matter before it. The adversary system contemplates that each lawyer will present and argue the existing law in the light most favorable to his client.39 Where a lawyer knows of legal authority in the controlling jurisdiction directly adverse to the position of his client, he should inform the tribunal of its existence unless his adversary has done so; but, having made such disclosure, he may challenge its soundness in whole or in part.40

EC 7-24 In order to bring about just and informed decisions, evidentiary and procedural rules have been established by tribunals to permit the inclusion of relevant evidence and argument and the exclusion of all other considerations. The expression by a lawyer of his personal opinion as to the justness of a cause, as to the credibility of a witness, as to the culpability of a civil litigant, or as to the guilt or innocence of an accused is not a proper subject for argument to the trier of fact.41 It is improper as to factual matters because admissible evidence possessed by a lawyer should be presented only as sworn testimony. It is improper as to all other matters because, were the rules otherwise, the silence of a lawyer on a given occasion could be construed unfavorably to his client. However, a lawyer may argue, on his analysis of the evidence, for any position or conclusion with respect to any of the foregoing matters.

EC 7-25 Rules of evidence and procedure are designed to lead to just decisions and are part of the framework of the law. Thus while a lawyer may take steps in good faith and within the framework of the law to test the validity of rules, he is not justified in consciously violating such rules and he should be diligent in his efforts to guard against his unintentional violation of them.5 As examples, a lawyer should subscribe to or verify only those pleadings that he believes are in compliance with applicable law and rules; a lawyer should not make any prefatory statement before a tribunal in regard to the purported facts of the case on trial unless he believes that his statement will be supported by admissible evidence; a lawyer should not ask a witness a question solely for the purpose of harassing or embarrassing him, and a lawyer should not by subterfuge put before a jury matters which it cannot properly consider.

EC 7-26 The law and Disciplinary Rules prohibit the use of fraudulent, false, or perjured testimony or evidence.42 A lawyer who knowingly participates in introduction of such testimony or evidence is subject to discipline. A lawyer should, however, present any admissible evidence his client desires to have presented unless he knows, or from facts within his knowledge should know, that such testimony or evidence is false, fraudulent, or perjured.43

EC 7-27 Because it interferes with the proper administration of justice, a lawyer should not suppress evidence that he or his client has a legal obligation to reveal or produce. In like manner, a lawyer should not advise or cause a person to secrete himself or to leave the jurisdiction of a tribunal for the purpose of making him unavailable as a witness therein.44

EC 7-28 Witnesses should always testify truthfully and should be free from any financial inducements that might tempt them to do otherwise. A lawyer should not pay or agree to pay a non-expert witness an amount in excess of reimbursemendment, and financial loss incident to his being a witness; however, a lawyer may pay or agree to pay an expert witness a reasonable fee for his services as an expert. But in no event should a lawyer pay or agree to pay a contingent fee to any witness. A lawyer should exercise reasonable diligence to see that his client and lay associates conform to these standards.49

EC 7-29 To safeguard the impartiality that is essential to the judicial process, veniremen and jurors should be protected against extraneous influences.50 When impartiality is present, public confidence in the judicial system is enhanced. There should be no extrajudicial communication with veniremen prior to trial or with jurors during trial by or on behalf of a lawyer connected with the case. Furthermore, a lawyer who is not connected with the case should not communicate with or cause another to communicate with a venireman or a juror about the case. After the trial, communication by a lawyer with jurors is permitted so long as he refrains from asking questions or making comments that tend to harass or embarrass the juror or to influence actions of the juror in future cases. Were a lawyer to be prohibited from communicating after trial with a juror, he could not ascertain if the verdict might be subject to legal challenge, in which event the invalidity of a verdict might go undetected.52 When an extrajudicial communication by a lawyer with a juror is permitted by law, it should be made considerately and with deference to the personal feelings of the juror.

EC 7-30 Vexatious or harassing investigations of veniremen or jurors seriously impair the effectiveness of our jury system. For this reason, a lawyer or anyone on his behalf who conducts an investigation of veniremen or jurors should act with circumspection and restraint.

EC 7-31 Communications with or investigations of members of families of veniremen or jurors by a lawyer or by anyone on his behalf are subject to the restrictions imposed upon the lawyer with respect to his communications with or investigations of veniremen and jurors.

EC 7-32 Because of his duty to aid in preserving the integrity of the jury system, a lawyer who learns of improper conduct by or towards a venireman, a juror, or a member of the family of either should make a prompt report to the court regarding such conduct.

EC 7-33 A goal of our legal system is that each party shall have his case, criminal or civil, adjudicated by an impartial tribunal. The attainment of this goal may be defeated by dissemination of news or comments which tend to influence judge or jury. 53 Such news or comments may 48 The prevalence of perjury is a serious menace to the administration of justice, to prevent which no means have as yet been satisfactorily devised. But there certainly can be no greater incentive to perjury than to allow a party to make payments to its opponents witnesses under any guise or on any excuse, and at least attorneys who are officers of the court to aid it in the administration of justice, must keep themselves clear of any connection which in the slightest degree tends to induce witnesses to testify in favor of their clients. In re Robinson, 151 App.Div. 589, 600, 136 N.Y.S. 548, 556-57 (1912), aff'd, 209 N.Y. 354, 103 N.E. 160 (1913).

49 "It will not do for an attorney who seeks to justify himself against charges of this kind to show that he has escaped criminal responsibility under the Penal Law, nor can he blindly shut his eyes to a system which tends to suborn witnesses, to produce perjured testimony, and to suppress the truth. He has an active affirmative duty to protect the administration of justice from perjury and fraud, and that duty is not performed by allowing his subordinates and assistants to attempt to subvert justice and procure results for his clients based upon false testimony and perjured witnesses." Id., 151 App.Div. at 592, 136 N.Y.S. at 551.

50 See ABA Canon 23.

51 "It is unfair to jurors to permit a disappointed litigant to pick over their private associations in search of something to discredit them and their verdict. And it would be unfair to the public too if jurors should understand that they cannot convict a man of means without risking an inquiry of that kind by paid investigators, with, to boot, the distortions an inquiry of that kind can produce." State v. LaFera, 42 N.J. 97, 107, 199 A.2d 630, 636 (1964).

52 ABA Opinion 319 (1968) points out that "[m]any courts today, and the trend is in this direction, allow the testi-mony of jurors as to all irregularities in and out of the courtroom except those irregularities whose existence can be determined only by exploring the consciousness of a single particular juror, New Jersey v. Kociolek, 20 N.J. 92, 118 A.2d 812 (1955). Model Code of Evidence Rule 301. Certainly as to states in which the testimony and affidavits of jurors may be received in support of or against a motion for new trial, a lawyer, in his obligation to protect his client, must have the tools for ascertaining whether or not grounds for a new trial exist and it is not unethical for him to talk to and question jurors."

"[T]he trial court might well have proscribed extra-judicial statements by any lawyer, party, witness, or court official which divulged prejudicial matters... See State v. Van Dwyne, 43 N.J. 369, 389, 204 A.2d 841, 852 (1964), in which the court interpreted Canon 20 of the American Bar Association's Canons of Professional Ethics to prohibit such statements. Being advised of the great public interest in the case, the mass coverage of the press, and the potential prejudicial impact of publicity, the court could also have requested the appropriate city and county officials to promulgate a regulation with respect to dissemination of information about the case by their employees. In addition, reporters who wrote or broadcast prejudicial stories, could have been warned as to the impropriety of publishing material not introduced in the proceedings... In this manner, Sheppard's right to a trial free from outside interference would have been given added protection without corresponding curtailment of the news media. Had the judge, the other officers of the court, and the police placed the interest of justice first, the news media would have soon learned to be content with the task of reporting the case as it unfolded in the courtroom—not pieced together from extrajudicial statements." Sheppard v. Maxwell, 384 U.S. 333, 361-62, 16 L. E.2d 600, 619-20, 86 S.Ct. 1507, 1521-22 (1966).
lawyer and render appropriate accounts to his client regarding them.

(4) Promptly pay or deliver to the client as requested by a client the funds, securities, or other properties in the possession of the lawyer which the client is entitled to receive.

DEFINITIONS*

As used in the Disciplinary Rules of the Code of Professional Responsibility:

(1) "Differing interests" include every interest that will adversely affect either the judgment or the loyalty of a lawyer to a client, whether it be a conflicting, inconsistent, diverse, or other interest.

(2) "Law firm" includes a professional legal corporation.

"Person" includes a corporation, an association, a trust, a partnership, and any other organization or legal entity.

"Professional legal corporation" means a corporation, or an association treated as a corporation, authorized by law to practice law for profit.

"State" includes the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and other federal territories and possessions.

"Tribunal" includes all courts and all other adjudicatory bodies.

"A bar association representative of the general bar" includes a bar association of specialists as referred to in DR 2-105(A) (1) or (4).

* "Confidence" and "secret" are defined in DR 4-101(A).

Preamble.

In addition to the Canons for Professional Conduct of Lawyers which it has formulated and adopted, the American Bar Association, mindful that the character and conduct of a judge should never be objects of indifference, and that declared ethical standards tend to become habits of life, deems it desirable to set forth its views respecting those principles which should govern the personal practice of members of the judiciary in the administration of their office. The Association accordingly adopts the following Canons, the spirit of which it suggests as a proper guide and reminder for judges, and as indicating what the people have a right to expect from them.

1. Relations of the Judiciary.

The assumption of the office of judge casts upon the incumbent duties in respect to his personal conduct which concern his relation to the state and its inhabitants, the litigants before him, the principles of law, the practitioners of law in his court, and the witnesses, jurors and attendants who aid him in the administration of its functions.

2. The Public Interest.

Courts exist to promote justice, and thus to serve the public interest. Their administration should be speedy and careful. Every judge should at all times be alert in his rulings and in the conduct of the business of the court, so far as he can, to make it useful to litigants and to the community. He should avoid unconsciously falling into the attitude of mind that the litigants are made for the courts instead of the courts for the litigants.

3. Constitutional Obligations.

It is the duty of all judges in the United States to support the federal Constitution and that of the state whose laws they administer; in so doing, they should fearlessly observe and apply fundamental limitations and guarantees.

4. Avoidance of Impropriety.

A judge's official conduct should be free from impropriety and the appearance of impropriety; he should avoid infractions of law; and his personal behavior, not only upon the Bench and in the performance of judicial duties, but also in his everyday life, should be beyond reproach.

5. Essential Conduct.

A judge should be temperate, attentive, patient, impartial, and, since he is to administer the law and apply it to the facts, he should be studious of the principles of the law and diligent in endeavoring to ascertain the facts.

A judge should exhibit an industry and application commensurate with the duties imposed upon him.
7. Promptness.
A judge should be prompt in the performance of his judicial duties, recognizing that the time of litigants, jurors and attorneys is of value and that habitual lack of punctuality on his part justifies dissatisfaction with the administration of the business of the court.

8. Court Organization.
A judge should organize the court with a view to the prompt and convenient dispatch of its business and he should not tolerate abuses and neglect by clerks, and other assistants who are sometimes prone to presume too much upon his good natured acquiescence by reason of friendly association with him.

It is desirable too, where the judicial system permits, that he should cooperate with other judges of the same court, and in other courts, as members of a single judicial system, to promote the more satisfactory administration of justice.

9. Consideration for Jurors and Others.
A judge should be considerate of jurors, witnesses and others in attendance upon the court.

10. Courtesy and Civility.
A judge should be courteous to counsel, especially to those who are young and inexperienced, and also to all others appearing or concerned in the administration of justice in the court.

He should also require, and so far as his power extends, enforce on the part of clerks, court officers and counsel civility and courtesy to the court and to jurors, witnesses, litigants and others having business in the court.

11. Unprofessional Conduct of Attorneys and Counsel.
A judge should utilize his opportunities to criticize and correct unprofessional conduct of attorneys and counsellors, brought to his attention; and, if adverse comment is not a sufficient corrective, should send the matter at once to the proper investigating and disciplinary authorities.

Trustees, receivers, masters, referees, guardians and other persons appointed by a judge to aid in the administration of justice should have the strictest probity and impartiality and should be selected with a view solely to their character and fitness. The power of making such appointments should not be exercised by him for personal or partisan advantage. He should not permit his appointments to be controlled by others than himself. He should also avoid nepotism and undue favoritism in his appointments.

While not hesitating to fix or approve just amounts, he should be most scrupulous in granting or approving compensation for the services or charges of such appointees to avoid excessive allowances, whether or not excepted to or complained of. He cannot rid himself of this responsibility by the consent of counsel.

13. Kinship or Influence.
A judge should not act in a controversy where a near relative is a party; he should not suffer his conduct to justify the impression that any person can improperly influence him or unduly enjoy his favor, or that he is affected by the kinship, rank, position or influence of any party or other person.

A judge should not be swayed by partisan demands, public clamor or considerations of personal popularity or notoriety, nor be apprehensive of unjust criticism.

15. Interference in Conduct of Trial.
A judge may properly intervene in a trial of a case to promote expedition, and prevent unnecessary waste of time, or to clear up some obscurity, but he should bear in mind that his undue interference, impatience, or participation in the examination of witnesses, or a severe attitude on his part toward witnesses, especially those who are excited or terrified by the unusual circumstances of a trial, may tend to prevent the proper presentation of the cause, or the ascertainment of the truth in respect thereto.

Conversation between the judge and counsel in court is often necessary, but the judge should be studious to avoid controversies which are apt to obscure the merits of the dispute between litigants and lead to its unjust disposition. In addressing counsel, litigants, or witnesses, he should avoid a controversial manner or tone.

He should avoid interruptions of counsel in their arguments except to clarify his mind as to their positions, and he should not be tempted to the unnecessary display of learning or a premature judgment.

16. Ex parte Applications.
A judge should discourage ex parte hearings of applications for injunctions and receiverships where the order may work detriment to absent parties; he should act upon such ex parte applications only where the necessity for quick action is clearly shown; if this be demonstrated, then he should endeavor to counteract the effect of the absence of opposing counsel by a scrupulous cross-examination and investigation as to the facts and the principles of law on which the application is based, granting relief only when fully satisfied that the law permits it and the emergency demands it. He should remember that an injunction is a limitation upon the freedom of action of defendants and should not be granted lightly or advisedly. One applying for such relief must sustain the burden of showing clearly its necessity and this burden is increased in the absence of the party whose freedom of action is sought to be restrained even though only temporarily.

17. Ex parte Communications.
A judge should not permit private interviews, arguments or communications designed to influence his judicial action, where interests to be affected thereby are not represented before him, except in cases where provision is made by law for ex parte application.

While the conditions under which briefs of argument are to be received are largely matters of local rule or practice, he should not permit the contents of such brief presented to him to be concealed from opposing counsel. Ordinarily all communications of counsel to the judge intended or calculated to influence action should be made known to opposing counsel.

18. Continuances.

Delay in the administration of justice is a common cause of complaint; counsel are frequently responsible for this delay. A judge, without being arbitrary or forcing cases unreasonably or unjustly to trial when unprepared, to the detriment of parties, may well endeavor to hold counsel to a proper appreciation of their duties to the public interest, to their own clients, and to the adverse party and his counsel, so as to enforce due diligence in the dispatch of business before the court.

In disposing of controverted cases, a judge should indicate the reasons for his action in an opinion showing that he has not disregarded or overlooked serious arguments of counsel. He thus shows his full understanding of the case, avoids the suspicion of arbitrary conclusion, promotes confidence in his intellectual integrity and may contribute useful precedent to the growth of the law.

It is desirable that Courts of Appeals in reversing cases and granting new trials should so indicate their views on questions of law argued before them and necessarily arising in the controversy that upon the new trial counsel may be aided to avoid the repetition of erroneous positions of law and shall not be left in doubt by the failure of the court to decide such questions.

But the volume of reported decisions is such and is so rapidly increasing that in writing opinions which are to be published judges may well take this fact into consideration, and curtail them accordingly, without substantially departing from the principles stated above.

It is of high importance that judges constituting a court of last resort should use effort and self-restraint to promote solidarity of conclusion and the consequent influence of judicial decision. A judge should not yield to pride of opinion or value more highly his individual reputation than that of the court to which he should be loyal. Except in case of conscientious difference of opinion on fundamental principle, dissenting opinions should be discouraged in courts of last resort.

A judge should be mindful that his duty is the application of general law to particular instances, that ours is a government of law and not of men, and that he violates his duty as a minister of justice under such a system if he seeks to do what he may personally consider substantial justice in a particular case and disregards the general law as he knows it to be binding on him. Such action may become a precedent unsettling accepted principles and may have detrimental consequences beyond the immediate controversy. He should administer his office with a due regard to the integrity of the system of the law itself, remembering that he is not a depository of arbitrary power, but a judge under the sanction of law.

21. Idiosyncrasies and Inconsistencies.

Justice should not be moulded by the individual idiosyncrasies of those who administer it. A judge should adopt the usual and expected method of doing justice, and not seek to be extreme or peculiar in his judgments, or spectacular or sensational in the conduct of the court. Though vested with discretion in the imposition of mild or severe sentences he should not compel persons brought before him to submit to some humiliating act or discipline of his own devising, without authority of law, because he thinks it will have a beneficial corrective influence.

In imposing sentence he should endeavor to conform to a reasonable standard of punishment and should not seek popularity or publicity either by exceptional severity or undue leniency.

In order that a litigant may secure the full benefit of the right of review accorded to him by law, a trial judge should scrupulously grant to the defeated party opportunity to present the questions arising upon the trial exactly as they arose, were presented, and decided, by full and fair bill of exceptions or otherwise; any failure in this regard on the part of the judge is peculiarly worthy of condemnation because the wrong done may be irremediable.

A judge has exceptional opportunity to observe the operation of statutes, especially those relating to practice, and to ascertain whether they tend to improve the just dispatch of controversies; and he may well contribute to the public interest by advising those having authority to remedy defects of procedure, of the result of his observation and experience.

24. Inconsistent Obligations.

A judge should not accept inconsistent duties; nor incur obligations, pecuniary or otherwise, which will in any way interfere or appear to interfere with his devotion to the expeditious and proper administration of his official functions.

A judge should avoid giving ground for any reasonable suspicion that he is utilizing the power or prestige of his office to persuade or coerce others to patronize or contribute, either to the success of private business ventures, or to charitable enterprises. He should, therefore, not enter into such private business, or pursue such a course of conduct, as would justify such suspicion, nor use the power of his office or the influence of his name to promote the business interests of others; he should not solicit for charities, nor should he enter into any business relation which, in the normal course of events reasonably to be expected, might bring his personal interest into conflict with the impartial performance of his official duties.

26. Personal Investments and Relations.

A judge should abstain from making personal investments in enterprises which are apt to be involved in litigation in the court; and, after his accession to the Bench, he should not retain such investments previously made, longer than a period sufficient to enable him to dispose of them without serious loss. It is desirable that he should, so far as reasonably possible, refrain from all relations which would normally tend to arouse the suspicion that such relations warp or bias his judgment, or prevent his impartial attitude of mind in the administration of his judicial duties.

He should not utilize information coming to him in a judicial capacity for purposes of speculation; and it detracts from the public confidence in his integrity and the soundness of his judicial judgment for him at any time to become a speculative investor upon the hazard of a margin.

27. Executorships and Trusteeships.

While a judge is not disqualified from holding executorships or trusteeships, he should not accept or continue to hold any fiduciary or other position if the holding of it would interfere or seem to interfere with the proper performance of his judicial duties, or if the business interests of those represented require investments in enterprises that are apt to come before him judicially, or to be involved in questions of law to be determined by him.

28. Partisan Politics.*

While entitled to entertain his personal views of political questions, and while not required to surrender his rights or opinions as a citizen, it is inevitable that suspicion of being warped by political bias will attach to a judge who becomes the active promoter of the interests of one political party as against another. He should avoid making political speeches, making or soliciting payment of assessments or contributions to party funds, the public endorsement of candidates for political office, or engage generally in partisan activities.

Where, however, it is necessary for judges to be nominated and elected as candidates of a political party, nothing herein contained shall prevent the judge from attending or speaking at political gatherings, or from making contributions to the campaign funds of the party that has nominated him and seeks his election or re-election.

29. Self-Interest.

A judge should abstain from performing or taking part in any judicial act in which his personal interests are involved. If he has personal litigation before the court, he shall not resign his judgeship on that account, but he should, of course, refrain from any judicial act in such a controversy.

30. Candidacy for Office.

A candidate for judicial position should not make or suffer others to make for him, promises of conduct in office which appeal to the cupidity or prejudices of the appointing or electing power; he should not announce in advance his conclusions of law on disputed issues to secure class support, and he should do nothing while a candidate to create the impression that if chosen, he will administer his office with bias, partiality or improper discrimination.

While holding a judicial position he should not become an active candidate either at a party primary or at a general election for any office other than a judicial office. If a judge should decide to become a candidate for any office not judicial, he should resign in order that it cannot be said that he is using the power or prestige of his judicial position to promote his own candidacy or the success of his party.

If a judge becomes a candidate for any judicial office, he should refrain from all conduct which might tend to arouse reasonable suspicion that he is using the power or prestige of his judicial position to promote his candidacy or the success of his party.

A judge should not permit others to do anything in behalf of his candidacy which would reasonably lead to such suspicion.

31. Private Law Practice.

In many states the practice of law by one holding judicial position is forbidden. In superior courts of general jurisdiction, it should never be permitted. In inferior courts in some states, it is permitted because the county or municipality is not able to pay adequate living compensation for a competent judge. In such cases one who practises law is in a position of great delicacy and must be scrupulously careful to avoid conduct in his practice whereby he utilizes or seems to utilize his judicial position to further his professional success.

He should not practise in the court in which he is a judge, even when presided over by another judge, or appear therein for himself in any controversy.

If forbidden to practise law, he should refrain from accepting any professional employment while in office.

He may properly act as arbitrator or lecture upon or instruct in law, or write upon the subject, and accept compensation therefor, if such course does not interfere with the due performance of his judicial duties, and is not forbidden by some positive provision of law.

32. Gifts and Favors.

A judge should not accept any presents or favors from litigants, or from lawyers practising before him or from others whose interests are likely to be submitted to him for judgment.

33. Social Relations.

It is not necessary to the proper performance of judicial duty that a judge should live in retirement or seclusion; it is desirable that, so far as reasonable attention to the completion of his work will permit, he continue to mingle in social intercourse and that he should not discontinue his interest in or appearance at meetings of members of the Bar. He should, however, in pending or prospective litigation before him be particularly careful to avoid such action as may reasonably tend to awaken the suspicion that his social or business relations or friendships constitute an element in influencing his judicial conduct.

34. A Summary of Judicial Obligation.

In every particular his conduct should be above reproach. He should be conscientious, studious, thorough, courteous, patient, punctual, just, impartial, fearless of public clamor, regardless of public praise, and indifferent to private political or partisan influences; he should administer justice according to law, and deal with his appointments as a public trust; he should not allow other affairs or his private interests to interfere with the prompt and proper performance of his judicial duties, nor should he administer the office for the purpose of advancing his personal ambitions or increasing his popularity.

35. Improper Publicizing of Court Proceedings.*

Proceedings in court should be conducted with fitting dignity and decorum. The taking of photographs in the court room, during sessions of the court or recesses between sessions, and the broadcasting or televising of court proceedings detract from the essential dignity of the proceedings, distract participants and witnesses in giving testimony, and create misconceptions with respect thereto in the mind of the public and should not be permitted.

Provided that this restriction shall not apply to the broadcasting or televising, under the supervision of the court, of such portions of naturalization proceedings (other than the interrogation of applicants) as are designed and carried out exclusively as a ceremony for the purpose of publicly demonstrating in an impressive manner the essential dignity and the serious nature of naturalization.

36. Conduct of Court Proceedings.*

Proceedings in court should be so conducted as to reflect the importance and seriousness of the inquiry to ascertain the truth.

The oath should be administered to witnesses in a manner calculated to impress them with the importance and solemnity of their promise to adhere to the truth. Each witness should be sworn separately and impressively at the bar or the court, and the clerk should be required to make a formal record of the administration of the oath, including the name of the witness.

A. The first letter in the English and most other alphabets derived from the Roman or Latin alphabet, which was one of several ancient Italian alphabets derived from the Greek, which was an adaptation of the Phoenician. The first letter in the Phoenician alphabet was called aleph, meaning "ox", which is also the meaning of the first letter in the Greek alphabet, alpha.

Alpha and the second letter of the Greek alphabet, beta, were combined to form "alphabet," which is largely the same in different languages. In Danish, Dutch, Polish and Swedish alfabet; in English, German and French, alphabet; in Italian, Portuguese and Spanish, alfabeto; in Russian, alfabetli, etc. This striking similarity shows borrowing, either meditately or immediately, from the same source.

A has several different forms, the most curious of which is little a and big A. All of our letters were first capitals, and remained so for a long time. Then small letters alone were used for centuries. Later capitals were used with small letters, largely for ornamental purposes. The ancient Egyptians had twenty a's to choose from, and it is said that a is the initial letter of about one-seventh of all Armenian words.

Nundinal Letters

A is also the first of the nundinal letters consisting of the first eight letters of the alphabet. These letters were repeated successively from the first to the last day of the year by the Romans and every ninth day was market day, when the country people came into the city to buy and sell and to attend to their private or religious affairs. However, no market day could coincide with the first day of January or the ninth day of the other months. The first market day of the year fell eight days from the preceding market day, which made the nundinal letter change every year, but if the nundinal letter for a given year was, for example, A, the market day always coincided with A, which was the ninth day from the preceding market day, both inclusive. No judgment could be pronounced, nor assemblies of the people held, on these days, but this was changed by the lex Hortensia in 246 B.C. Proposed laws were posted, and a vote could not be taken until three Roman weeks (trinum nundinum), or 24 days, had elapsed. A judgment debtor had 30 days to satisfy judgment against him. If he failed to do so, he was seized and taken before the magistrate and if he could find no surety he was put in chains and held by the judgment creditor for 60 days, during which time the amount of his debt was proclaimed on three successive market days, and then if he failed, the XII Tables provided: "* Tertiis nundinus partis secanto; si plus minusive secuerint, se fraude esto." (On the third market day let him be cut into pieces; if any one [any creditor] cut more or less than his share, it shall not be a crime). Shylock, it will be remembered, had to cut just a pound of flesh and no more.

Dominical or Sunday Letters

A is also the first of the Dominical or Sunday letters, consisting of the first seven letters of the alphabet, which were introduced to replace the nundinal letters of the Romans. These letters, repeated successively from the first to the last day of the year, show the order of Sundays according to the Christian calendar. If the first day of January is on Sunday, all the rest of the days designated by A will also be Sundays. Since each common year ends on the same day of the week that it begins, the dominical letters change each year in retrogression. If the year is a leap year an adjustment is made either on the 25th or 29th of February. The dominical letters are used to determine the date of Easter but may also be used to determine the day of the week on which a given date falls in any year.

Both as a symbol and as an abbreviation, A is used in every phase of human activity and learning. In law, commerce, manufacturing, engineering, printing, music, medicine, geometry, mathematics, physics, chemistry, logic, philosophy, aeronautics, artillery, etc., these devices, which are meaningful to the initiated, simply could not be dispensed with. The Puritans first burned A on the forehead of the adulterer,—or at least on that of the adulteress!—and later fastened it on the sinner's clothing. The Roman judges used three wax-covered wooden tables. On one was inscribed A for Absolvo (I acquit); on the second C for Condemnō (I condemn), and on the third N. L. for Non liquet (It is not clear). When a proposed law was to be voted on, Roman voters received two tablets, on one of which was inscribed A for antiquo (for the old law), and on the other U. R. for Uti rogas (as you ask). A is also the first of the letters employed by the Semites and the ancient Greeks as numeral signs. If the Greek α was accented above, it stood for 1; if below, it stood for 1000. The Romans also used A as a numeral sign before they adopted the letter D. If A was not accented, it stood for 500, but if accented thus, A, it stood for 5000.

The symbol is a graphic modification of the Latin ad, meaning "at" or "to." Some European railroads use A to designate first-class railroad coaches. In European tourist guides A is used to designate places where there are hotels able to satisfy the wants of motorists. Mercantile agencies use A to indicate the highest commercial credit. A is also the highest mark given by teachers to pupils. Ship registries in United States, England, Germany and Norway use A to indicate the highest class of vessel.

In the record of American Shipping Al stands for a first-class vessel of the highest seaworthiness, the lower degrees being expressed by Al 1/2, etc., A3 being the lowest. In Lloyd's Register Al means a first-class vessel. A printed in red means an over-aged vessel. ZE a third-class vessel. The description of a ship as "Al" amounts to a warranty. 011ive v. Booker, 1 Exch. 423.

In ceramics A has various meanings. On fine old Sevres A alone shows that the piece was made in 1753, whereas AA shows that it was made in 1777. A is also used as a brand by certain breeders of bulls for the bull ring, as well as by manufacturers of fine Toledo swords. A denotes the first of a series, and is used to distinguish the first page of a folio from the second, which is marked b (Coke, Litt. 114a, 114b), as well as the first foot-note and the first section or subsection in statutes. It is also the name of the sixth note of the natural diatonic scale of C, or the first note of the relative minor scale. To this note all orchestral instruments are tuned. A also indicates the key in which many great pieces of music are composed. The money coined at the Paris mint is marked with an A, and it was long supposed that such coinage was superior to that of the provincial mints. This gave rise to the phrase Etre marque à l'A (to be marked with an A) and was used to indicate a man of eminent rank or merit, just as we use A-1 or A to indicate excellence of either persons or commodities.

A is also used in numerous other phrases and proverbs. For example, A word to the wise is sufficient. This ordinarily admonitory proverb was held to be libellous in view of the context in which it was used. One who had sold out to his partner warned customers that the buyer was not responsible for his debts, since he was a minor, and that "a word to the wise is sufficient." The court said: "But when what was previously said is followed by the significant and proverbially pre.cautionary words—'A word to the wise is sufficient,' the idea is at once conveyed that plaintiff, is wanting in honor and integrity as a business man, and that those who should deal with him would suffer loss." Hays v. Mather, 15 Ill.App. 30, 34. For the phrase, from alpha to omega, there is our from A to Z and A to izzard, and the German von A bis Z, which mean from beginning to end; completely; thoroughly; or in more modern slang, from soup to nuts. The German proverb Wer A sagt, muss auch B sagen is based on a profound knowledge of human nature, and translates, you can't say A without saying B; in for a penny, in for a pound. In other words, don't take the first step if you don't want to go the limit. Of a very ignorant or stupid person it has long been said that He does not know great A from a bull's foot or that he knows ni A ni B (neither A nor B). In Birds of a feather flock together, a means the same, or a feather means the same kind.

A as Abbreviation

As an abbreviation a, either alone or in combination with other letters, is used in all the arts and sciences as well in hundreds of non-technical ways. Its meaning as an abbreviation largely depends on context. In common usage, it may mean about, accepted, acne, aged, answer, ante, area, amateur, etc. It is also used for almost any name of a person beginning with A, as Alfred, Anna, etc. In chemistry it stands for argon. A note provided for "Int. @ p. a." The court said: "The letter when used in a note, as it is here, is known and recognized among commercial people and businessmen as standing for 'at.'" Belford v. Beatty, 34 N.E. 254, 255, 145 Ill. 414, 418.

A is an abbreviation of adversus (against). Versus and its abbreviation v. are much oftener used in this sense, though the original Latin meaning of versus is toward; in the direction of.

A, angstrom unit; the unit for measuring the length of light waves. The ultra violet rays of sunlight between 3130A and 2900A activate provitamins in the skin and certain foods, so as to produce the antirachitic substance known as vitamin D, which is also extracted from fish liver oils.

The Spelling of A

A was formerly spelt a-per-se, ("a" by itself makes the word "a") of which A-per-se-A, A persy, and apersie were corruptions and synonymous with superior, chief, first, etc.

A in Latin and Law Latin

Anglo-American law abounds in Latin and French words and phrases, and the use of A in these languages is important to the English-speaking lawyer. In Latin "A" was used both as an abbreviation and as a symbol. For example "A" was an abbreviation for "Aulus,", a praenomen, or the first of the usual three names of a person by which he was distinguished from others of the same family; also for "ante" in "a. d.," ante diem (before the day), and for "anno" (year) in a. u. c., anno urbis conditae (the year of the building of the city) and in anno ab urbe condita (from the year of the building of the city). As a preposition, the form was either A, AB or ABS. A was used before consonants; ab was usually used before vowels, but sometimes before consonants, whereas abs was used before c or t. The meaning was "from," "away from," "on the side of," "at," "after," "since," "by," "by means of," "out of," "with reference to," "in regard of," "near by," and "along." For example, A frante in front; ab tergo, from behind; a puertitia, from youth; ab sole orbe, from or at sunrise; ab intestato, without a will, intestate. In law Latin, "a" means "by," "with," "from," "in," "of," and "on," and AB means "by," "from," and "in". 1 C.J.S. p. 2.

A in French and Law French

In French A is a preposition, the meaning of which largely depends on context. It is usually translated as "into," "at," "to," "in," "by," "of," "with," "on," "from," "for," "under," "till," "within," "between," etc. It also changes into au and aux when combined with the "a". A is also the third person, singular number, present tense, indicative mood of the verb avoir, (to have): Il a (he has).

In law French "a" is used as a preposition meaning "at," "for," "in," "of," "on," "to," and "with." 1 C.J.S. p. 2.

A in Roman Criminal Law

Among the Romans this letter was used in criminal trials. The judges were furnished with small tables covered with wax, and each one inscribed on it the initial letter of his vote: A (absolvo) when he voted to acquit the accused; C (condemno) when he was for condemnation; and N L (non liquet), when the matter did not appear clearly, and he desired a new argument.

The letter A (i.e. antiquo, "for the old law") was inscribed upon Roman ballots under the Lex Tabellaria, to indicate a negative vote; Tayl.Civ. Law, 191, 192.

A as Indefinite Article

A is the form of the indefinite article that is used before consonants and initial consonant sounds, on being used before initial vowel sounds, as, for example, a house, a year, a utility; but an oak, an ape and an hour, because the h is silent. Formerly where the initial h of certain words was not accented, as historical, hypothetical, hotel, humble, etc., an was used, but now the h is no longer silent, and the best usage in both the United States and England is to use a before such words. A hypothetical question, a historical monument, a hotel, etc., are the correct forms.

The word "a" has varying meanings and uses. "A" means "one" or "any," but less emphatically than either. It may mean one where only one is intended, or it may mean any one of a great number. It is placed before nouns of the singular number, denoting an individual object or quality individualized. First Trust Joint Stock Land Bank of Chicago v. Armstrong, 222 Iowa 425, 269 N.W. 502, 506, 107 L.R.A. 873.

The article "a" is not necessarily a singular thing; it is often used in the sense of "any" and is then applied to more than one individual object. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Green & Flinn, 2 W.W. Harr. (Del.) 78, 119 A. 840, 846; In re Sanders, 54 Law J.Q.B. The article "a" is not generally used in a singular sense unless such an intention is clear from the language of the statute. 1 C.J.S., A, p. 1, but statute providing that parties to "a" reorganization shall be deemed a single employing unit referred to quality or nature of changes, rather than quantity, and meant not one or only one, but any, and fact that there had been more than one reorganization did not prevent statute from applying. Lindley v. Murphy, 387 Ill. 506, 56 N.E.2d 832, 838. So under a statute providing that the issuance of "a" certificate to one carrier should not bar a certificate to another over the same route, a certificate could be granted to more than two carriers over the same route. State ex rel. Crown Coach Co. v. Public Service Commission, 238 Mo.App. 287, 179 S.W.2d 123, 127. But the meaning depends on context. For example, in Workmen's Compensation Act, on, in or about "a" railway, factory, etc., was held not to mean any railway, factory, etc., but the railway, factory, etc., of the employer. Francis v. Turier, [1900] 1 Q.B. 478; 69 L.J.Q.B. 182; 81 L.T. 770; 48 W.R. 228; 64 J.P. 53.

Insurance against loss occasioned by "a sea" did not limit insured to loss occasioned by a single wave, but covered losses occasioned by heavy waves during voyage. Snowden v. Guion, 101 N.Y. 458, 5 N.E. 322.

In State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Martin, 60 Ark. 343, 30 S.W. 421, 28 L.R.A. 153, the state Constitution provided for "a judge" in each circuit. Owing to increase in judicial business, the Legislature provided for an additional judge for the sixth circuit. It was contended that the statute was unconstitutional. The court said:

"Now, the adjective 'a', commonly called the 'indefinite article,' and so called, too, because it does not define any particular person or thing, is entirely too indefinite, in the connection used, to define or limit the number of judges which the legislative wisdom may provide for the judicial circuits of the state. And it is perfectly obvious that the office and meaning was well understood by the framers of our constitution, for nowhere in that instrument do we find it used as a numerical limitation. It is in no sense a term of limitation. If there were a dozen judges in any one circuit each would still be "a judge" for the circuit. Mr. Webster also says, "It is placed before the word 'judge' in the section under consideration because, according to our English idiom, the determiner could not have been euphoniously expressed without it. In some languages—the Latin and Russian, for instance—it would not have been used at all. It could have been omitted without in the least impairing the sense, and its use gave no additional force or meaning to the sentence. To use the illustration of the learned counsel for the state: If one orders 'a sack of flour, a ham, horse, a ton of coal,' etc., it is understood he means but one. So it would be understood if he left off the 'a,' and said 'sack of flour, ham, horse, ton of coal,' etc., it is understood he means but one. So it would not have been euphoniously expressed without it. In that respect the word 'a' in these sections mean one, and only one, judge or justice? If so, which one? In the same section in which 'a judge' occurs we find. 'He shall be "a" conservator of the peace within the circuit.' Does 'a conservator' mean that he is to be the only conservator of the peace for the circuit? If so, this provision is plainly in conflict with others. See sections 4, 40. It is apparent that 'a' was used before the word 'judge' in the section under consideration because, according to our English idiom, the determiner could not have been euphoniously expressed without it. In some languages—the Latin and Russian, for instance—it would not have been used at all. It could have been omitted without in the least impairing the sense, and its use gave no additional force or meaning to the sentence. To use the illustration of the learned counsel for the state: If one orders 'a sack of flour, a ham, horse, a ton of coal,' etc., it is understood he means but one. So it would be understood if he left off the 'a,' and said 'sack of flour, ham, horse, ton of coal,' the 'a' being used before the words beginning with the consonant sound simply to preserve the euphony. If the limitation is not in the word 'judge' without the 'a,' there is certainly no restriction on its office and meaning was well understood by the framers of our constitution, for nowhere in that instrument do we find it used as a numerical limitation. It is in no sense a term of limitation. If there were a dozen judges in any one circuit each would still be 'a judge' for that circuit. Mr. Webster also says, 'It is placed before nouns of the singular number, denoting an individual object, or quality individualized. 'Quality' is defined as (1) 'the condition of being of such a sort as distinguished from others; (2) special or temporary character; profession, occupation.' 'A' is sometimes read as "the." Bookham v. Potter, 37 L.J.C.P. 276; L.R. 3 C.P. 490; 16 W.R. 806; 18 L.T. 479, though the two terms are ordinarily distinguishable. Howell v. State, 138 S.E. 206, 164 Ga. 204. The grant of "a" right of sporting on land, gives only a concurrent right, but the grant of "the" right gives it exclusively. Sutherland v. Heathcote, [1892] 1 Ch. 475; 61 L.J. 248; 66 L.T. 210. And a license to fish with "a" rod and line does not justify the use of more than one rod and one line. Cambridge v. Harrison, 72 L.T. 592; 64 L.J.M.C. 175; 59 J.P. 198.

Hinson v. Hinson, 176 N.C. 613, 97 S.E. 465, involved a will providing that son taking care of widow should receive $100 "a year." It was held that the quoted words were not synonymous with annually, but merely fixed the rate of compensation, and that there was no right to compensation until widow's death.

AAA. Agricultural Adjustment Act.

A. A. C. Anno ante Christum, the year before Christ.

A. A. C. N. Anno ante Christum natum, the year before the birth of Christ.

A VER ET TENER. L. Fr. (L. Lat. habendum et tenendum.) To have and to hold. Co.Litt. §§ 523, 524. A aver et tener a luy et a ses heires, a touts fours,—to have and to hold to him and his heirs forever. Id. § 625. See Aver et Tener.

A. B. Able-bodied seaman. In English law a seaman is entitled to be rated A. B. when he has served at sea three years before the mast. In the United States the term "Able Seaman" is used. For the requirements of able seaman, see 46 U.S.C. A § 672. Also artium baccalaureus, bachelor of arts. In England, generally written B. A.

A. B. A. American Bar Association.

A BON DROIT. With good reason; justly; rightfully.

A. C., Anno Christi, the year of Christ.

A/C means account and is much used by bookkeepers. As used in a check, it has been held not a direction to the bank to credit the amount of the check to the person named, but rather a memorandum to identify the transaction in which the check was issued. Marsh v. First State Bank & Trust Co. of Canton, 185 29, 32.

A CANCELLANDO. From cancelling. 3 Bl. Comm. 46.

A CANCELLIS, The Chancellor.

A CANCELLIS CURIAE EXPLODI. To be expelled from the bar of the court.

A CAPELLA OR A LA CAPELLA. In music, in the church style; also that the instruments are to play in unison with the vocal part, or that one part is to be played by a number of instruments.

A CAUSA DE CY. For this reason.
A. C. C. Agricultural Credit Corporation.

A CE. For this purpose.

A CEL JOUR. At this day.

A CELO USQUE AD CENTRUM. From the heavens to the center of the earth. Or more fully, Cujus est solum ejus est usque ad coelum et ad inferos. The owner of the soil owns to the heavens and also to the lowest depths. Or, Cujus est solum est usque ad cœelum,—the owner of the soil owns to the heavens. This doctrine has been questioned. Butler v. Frontier Telephone Co., 186 N.Y. 486, 79 N.E. 716, 11 L.R.A., N.S., 920—and the flight of airplanes and recent oil and gas regulations undoubtedly have qualified the owner’s dominion not only in the heavens but in the lowest depths. See American Digest System, Mines and Minerals, C=92, and Trespass, 010.

A COMMUNI OBSERVANTIA NON EST RECE-DENDUM. From common observance there should be no departure; there must be no departure from common usage. 2 Coke, 74; Co. Litt. 186a, 229b, 365a; Wing.Max. 752, max. 203. A maxim applied to the practice of the courts, to the ancient and established forms of pleading and conveyancing, and to professional usage generally. Id. 752-755. Lord Coke applies it to common professional opinion. Co.Litt. 186a, 364b.

A CONFECTIONE. From the making. Clayton’s Case, 5 Coke, pt. II, la; Anonymous, 1 Ld. Raym. 480.

A CONFECTIONE PRÆSENTIUM. From the making of the indentures. Clayton’s Case, 5 Coke, pt. II, la.

A CONSILIIS. (Lat. consilium, advice.) Of counsel; a counsellor. The term is used in the civil law by some writers instead of a responsis. Spelman, “Apocrisarius.”

A CONTRARIO SENSU. In the opposite sense.

A CUEILLETTE. In French law. In relation to the contract of affreightment, signifies when the cargo is taken on condition that the master succeeds in completing his cargo from other sources. Arg.Fr.Merc.Law, 543.

A. D. Anno Domini, in the year of our Lord.

An information charging that act was committed on 4th day of August, “A. D. 190,” alleged an impossible year “and it is quite evident that the last figure of the year was inadvertently omitted but what that figure was intended to be * * * cannot be inferred with any certainty.” People v. Weiss, 168 Ill.App. 502, 504.

“The information alleges that the offense therein sought to be charged was committed ‘on the 30th day of April, A. D. 19, ’ there is no other allegation of time in the information, and it is in effect and for all practical purposes wholly wanting in any allegation as to time. The time alleged is impossible and in that respect the information is absurd. The objection is not merely technical, as that term is commonly used, but is substantial and fatal.” People v. Wagner, 172 Ill.App. 84.

A DATO. From the date. Cro.jac. 135. See A Datum.

A DATU. Law Latin. From the date. Anonymous, 1 Ld.Raym. 480; Haths v. Ash, 2 Salk. 413. See A Datum.

A DIE CONFECTIONIS. From the day of the making. Barwick’s Case, 5 Coke 93b.

A DIE DATUS. From the day of the date. Hat-ter v. Ash, 1 Ld.Raym. 84; Anonymous, 1 Ld. Raym. 480; Seignoret v. Noguere, 2 Ld.Raym. 1241. Used in leases to determine the time or running of the estate, and when so used includes the day of the date. Doe v. Watkins, 1 Cowp. 189, 191. But contra, see Haths v. Ash, 2 Salk. 413.

A DIGNIORI FIERI DEBET DENOMINATIO. Denomination ought to be from the more worthy. The description (of a place) should be taken from the more worthy subject (as from a will). Fleta, lib. 4, c. 10, § 12.

A DIGNIORI FIERI DEBET DENOMINATIO ET RESOLUTIO. The title and exposition of a thing ought to be derived from, or given, or made with reference to, the more worthy degree, quality, or species of it. Wing.Max. 265, max. 75.

A FINE FORCE. Of pure necessity.

A FORCE. Of necessity.

A FORCE ET ARMIS. With force and arms.

A FORFAIT ET SANS GARANTIE. In French law. A formula used in indorsing commercial paper, and equivalent to “without recourse.”

A FORTIORI. With stronger reason; much more. A term used in logic to denote an argument to the effect that because one ascertained fact exists, therefore another, which is included in it, or analogous to it, and which is less improbable, unusual, or surprising, must also exist.

A GRATIA. By grace; not of right.

A. H., Anno Hegirae (in the year of the hegira).

A ISSUE. At issue.

A JURE SUO CADUNT. They (for example, persons abandoning chattels) lose their right.

A MANU SERVUS. Lat. A handservant; a scribe; a secretary.

A ME. (Lat. ego, I.) A term in feudal grants denoting direct tenure of the superior lord. 2 Bell, H.L.Sc. 133.

Unjustly detaining from me. He is said to withhold a me (from me) who has obtained possession of my property unjustly. Calvinus, Lex. To pay a me, is to pay from my money.

A MENSÄ ET THORO. Lat. From table and bed, but more commonly translated, from bed and board. A kind of divorce, which is rather a separation of the parties by law, than a dissolution of the marriage. 27 C.J.S., Divorce, § 160.

A MULTO FORTIORI. By far the stronger reason.

A NATIVITATE. From birth, or from infancy. Denotes that a disability, status, etc., is congenital 3 Bla.Comm. 332; Reg.Orig. 266b.

A NON POSSE AD NON ESSE SEQUITUR ARGUMENTUM NECESSARIE NEGATIVE, LICET NON AFFIRMATIVE. A literal translation—From impossibility to non-existence the inference follows necessarily in the negative, though not in the affirmative—is as ambiguous as the original. It could be translated thus: The negative inference of non-existence necessarily follows from impossibility of existence, but the affirmative inference of existence cannot be drawn from mere possibility.

A. O. C. Anno orbis conditi, the year of the creation of the world.

A OUTRANCE. To the bitter end; to excess; to the utmost extent. Frequently incorrectly written by persons with only a smattering of French a l'outrance.

A PAIS. To the country; at issue.

A PALATIO. L. Lat. From Palatium, (a palace.) Counties palatine are hence so called. 1 Bl.Comm. 117. See Palatium.

A PIRATIS AUT LATRONIBUS CAPTI LIBERI PERMANENT. Persons taken by pirates or robbers remain free. Dig. 49, 15, 19, 2; Gro. de J.B. lib. 3, c. 3, § 1.

A PIRATIS ET LATRONIBUS CAPTA DOMINUM NON MUTANT. Capture by pirates and robbers does not change title. Bynk. bk. 1, c. 17; 1 Kent, Comm. 108, 184. No right to booty vests in piratical captors; no right can be derived from them by recaptors to the prejudice of the original owners. 2 Wood.Lect. 428.

A POSTERIORI. Lat. From the effect to the cause; from what comes after. A term used in logic to denote an argument founded on experiment or observation, or one which, taking ascertained facts as an effect, proceeds by synthesis and induction to demonstrate their cause.

A. P. R. C. Anno post Roman conditam, year after the foundation of Rome.

A PRENDRE. L. Fr. To take; to seize. Bret a prendre la terre, a writ to take the land. Fet Ass. § 51. A right to take something out of the soil of another is a profit a prendre, or a right coupled with a profit. 1 Crabb, Real Prop. p. 125, § 115. Distinguished from an easement. 5 Adol. & E. 758. Sometimes written as one word, apprendre, apprender. See Profit a prendre.

Rightfully taken from the soil. 1 N. & P. 172; Waters v. Lilley, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 145, 16 Am.Dec. 333.

A PRIORI. Lat. From the cause to the effect; from what goes before. A term used in logic to denote an argument founded on analogy, or abstract considerations, or one which, positing a general principle or admitted truth as a cause, proceeds to deduce from it the effects which must necessarily follow.

A PROVISIONE VIRI. By the provision of man. 4 Kent, Comm. 55.

A QUO. Lat. From which. A court a quo (also written “a qua”) is a court from which a cause has been removed. The judge a quo is the judge in such court. Clegg v. Alexander, 6 La. 339.

A term used, with the correlative ad quem (to which), in expressing the computation of time, and also of distance in space. Thus, dies a quo, the day from which and dies ad quem, the day to which, a period of time is computed. So, terminus a quo, the point or limit from which, and terminus ad quem, the point or limit to which, a distance or passage in space is reckoned.

A QUO INVITO ALIQUID EXIGI POTEST. From whom something may be exacted against his will.

A. R. Anno Regni. In the year of the reign; as A. R. V. R. 22, (Anno Regni Victoriae Regiae vicesimo secundo) in the twenty-second year of the reign of Queen Victoria.

A REMENAUNT. Forever.

A RENDRE. (Fr. to render, to yield.) That which is to be rendered, yielded, or paid. Profits a rendre comprehend rents and services. Ham. N.P. 192.

A RESCRIPTIS VALET ARGUMENTUM. An argument from rescripts [i.e. original writs in the register] is valid. Co.Litt. 11 a.

A RESPONSIS. L. Lat. In ecclesiastical law. One whose office it was to give or convey answers; otherwise termed responsalis, and apocrisarius. One who, being consulted on ecclesiastical matters, gave answers, counsel, or advice; otherwise termed a consilliis. Spelman, “Apocrisarius.”

A RETRO. L. Lat. Behind; in arrear. Et redditus proveniens rode a retro fuerit, and the rent issuing therefrom be in arrear. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 55, § 2; c. 62, § 14.

A RUBRO AD NIGRUM. Lat. From the red to the black; from the rubric or title of a statute (which, anciently, was in red letters), to its body, which was in the ordinary black. Tray.Lat.Max.; Bell, “Rubric;” Erskine, Inst. 1, 1, 49.

A SAVOIR. To wit.

A SUMMO REMEDIO AD INFERIOREM ACTIONEM NON HABETUR REGRESSUS, NEQUE AUXILIIUM. From (after using) the highest remedy, there can be no recourse (going back) to an inferior action, nor assistance, (derived from it.) Fleta, lib. 6, c. 1, § 2. A maxim in the old law of real actions, when there were grades in the remedies given; the rule being that a party who brought a writ of right, which was the highest writ in the law, could not afterwards resort or descend to an inferior remedy. Bract. 112b; 3 Bl.Comm. 193, 194.

A TEMPORE CUJUS CONTRARIUM MEMORIA NON EXISTET. From a time of which there is no memory to the contrary.

A TENERIS ANNIS. By reason of youth.

A TORT ET A TRAVERS. Without consideration or discernment.

A TORT OU A DROIT. Right or wrong.

A VERBIS LEGIS NON EST RECENDENDUM. The words of a statute must not be departed from. 5 Coke 119; Wing.Max. 25. A court is not at liberty to disregard the letter of a statute, in favor of a supposed intention. 1 Steph.Comm. 71; Broom, Max. 268.

A VINCULO MATRIMONII. Lat. From the bond of matrimony. A term descriptive of a kind of divorce, which effects a complete dissolution of the marriage contract. See Divorce.

A B (fr. Abba, Syr., Father). The eleventh month of the Jewish civil year, and the fifth of the sacred year. It answers to the moon that begins in July, and consists of thirty days. On the 24th is observed a feast in memory of the abolishment of the Sadducean law, which required sons and daughters to be equal heirs and heiresses of their parents’ estates. Brown’s Diet. of Bible, John’s Bib.Antiq. AB, at the beginning of English-Saxon names of places, is generally a contraction of abbot or abbey; whence it is inferred that those places once had an abbey there, or belonged to one elsewhere, as Abingdon in Berkshire. Blount’s Law Gloss. Wharton’s Law Lexicon.

AB. ABR. Abridgment.

AB ABUSU AD USUM NON VALET CONSEQUENTIA. A conclusion s to the use of a thing from its abuse is invalid. Broom, Max. 17.

AB ACTIS. Lat. An officer having charge of acta, public records, registers, journals, or minutes; an officer who entered on record the acta or proceedings of a court; a clerk of court; a notary or actuary. Calvin.Lex.Jurid. See "Acta." This, and the similarly formed epithets a cancellus, a secretis, a libellis, were also anciently the titles of a chancellor, (cancellarius,) in the early history of that office. Spelman, "Cancellarius."

AB AGENDO. Disabled from acting; unable to act; incapacitated for business or transactions of any kind.

AB ANTE. Lat. Before; in advance. Thus, a legislature cannot agree ab ante to any modification or amendment to a law which a third person may make. Allen v. McKeen, 1 Sumn. 308, Fed. Cas.No.229 (college charter).

AB ANTECEDENTE. Lat. Beforehand; in advance. 5 M. & S. 110.

AB ANTIQUO. From old times; from ancient time; of old; of an ancient date. 3 Bl.Comm. 95.

AB ASSUETUS NON FIT INJURIA. From things to which one is accustomed (or in which there has been long acquiescence) no legal injury or wrong arises. If a person neglect to insist on his right, he is deemed to have abandoned it. Amb. 645; 3 Brown, Ch. 639; Jenk.Cent.Introd. vi.

AB EPISTOLIS. Lat. An officer having charge of the correspondence (epistolæ) of his superior or sovereign; a secretary. Calvin.; Spiegelius.

AB EXTRA. (Lat. extra, beyond, without.) From without. Lunt v. Holland, 14 Mass. 151.

AB INCONVENIENT!. From hardship, or inconvenience. An argument founded upon the hardship of the case, and the inconvenience or disastrous consequences to which a different course of reasoning would lead. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. v. Hayward, 248 Mo. 280, 154 S.W. 140.

AB INITIO. Lat. From the beginning; from the first act; entirely; as to all the acts done; in the inception. A party may be said to be a trespasser, an estate to be good, an agreement or deed to be void, or a marriage or act to be unlawful, ab initio. Plow. 6a, 16a; 1 Bl.Comm. 440; Hopkins v. Hopkins, 10 Johns. [N.Y.] 369.

AB INITIO MUNDI. Lat. From the beginning of the world. Ab initio mundi usque ad hodie num diem, from the beginning of the world to this day. Y.B.M. 1 Edw. III, 24.

AB INTESTAT. Intestate. 2 Low.Can. 219, Merlin, Repert.

AB INTESTATO. - Lat. In the civil law. From an intestate; from the intestate; in case of intestacy. Hæreditas ab intestato, an inheritance derived from an intestate. Inst. 2, 9, 6. Successio ab intestato, succession to an intestate, or in case of intestacy. Id. 3, 2, 3; Dig. 38, 6, 1. This answers to the descent or inheritance of real estate at common law. 2 Bl.Comm. 490, 516; Story, Confl.Laws, § 480. "Heir ab intestato." 1 Burr. 420. The phrase "ab intestato" is generally used as the opposite or alternative of ex testamento, (from, by, or under a will.) Vel ex testamento, vel ab intestato [hcereditates] pertinent,—inheri tances are derived either from a will or from an intestate, (one who dies without a will.) Inst. 2, 9, 6; Dig. 29, 4; Cod. 6, 14, 2.

AB INVITO. Unwillingly. Against one’s will. By or from an unwilling party. A transfer ab invito is a compulsory transfer. See in invitum and invitio.

AB JUDICATIO. A removal from court.

AB IRATO. Lat. By one who is angry. A device or gift made by a man adversely to the interest of his heirs, on account of anger or hatred against them, is said to be made ab irato. A suit to set aside such a will is called an action ab irato. Merlin, Repert. Ab irato. Snell v. Weldon, 239 Ill. 279, 87 N.E. 1022.

AB OLIM. Of old.

AB OVO. The egg, hence from the beginning in allusion to old Roman custom of beginning a meal with eggs and ending with fruit, ab ovo usque ad mala. To begin with eggs and end with fruit. Also, at times in allusion to poets who began history of Trojan war with the egg from which Helen was said to have been hatched in contrast with Homer who plunged into the midst of things, or in media res.

AB 1URBE CONDITA. See A.U.C.

ABACIST or ABACISTA. A caster of accounts, an arithmetician.

ABACTION. A carrying away by violence.

ABACTOR. A stealer and driver away of cattle or beasts by herds or in great numbers at once, as distinguished from a person who steals a single animal or beast. Also called abiguus, q. v.

ABADENDO. In Spanish law. Land owned by an ecclesiastical corporation, and therefore exempt from taxation. In particular, lands or towns under the dominion and jurisdiction of an abbot. Escriche, Dicc. Raz.

ABALIENATE. To transfer interest or title.

ABALIENATIO. In Roman law. The perfect conveyance or transfer of property from one Roman citizen to another. This term gave place to the simple alienatio, which is used in the Digest and Institutes, as well as in the feudal law, and from which the English "alienation" has been formed. Inst. 2, 8, pr.; Id. 2, 1, 40; Dig. 50, 16, 28; Calvinus, Lex., Abalienatio.

ABALIENATION. In the Civil Law, a making over of reality, or chattels to another by due course of law.

ABAMITA. Lat. In the civil law. A great-great-grandfather's sister, (abavi soror.) Inst. 3, 6, 6; Dig. 38, 10, 3; Calvinus, Lex. Called amita maxima. Id. 38, 10, 17. Called, in Bracton, abamita magna. Bract. fol. 68b.

ABANDON. To desert, surrender, forsake, or cede. To relinquish or give up with intent of never again resuming one's right or interest. Burroughs v. Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co., 220 P. 152, 155, 109 Or. 404. To give up or to cease to use. Southern Ry. Co. v. Commonwealth, 105 S.E. 65, 67, 128 Va. 176. To give up absolutely; to forsake entirely; to renounce utterly; to relinquish all connection with or concern in; to desert. Commonwealth v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 258 S.W. 101, 102, 201 Ky. 670. It includes the intention, and also the external act by which it is carried into effect.

ABANDONEE. A party to whom a right or property is abandoned or relinquished by another. Applied to the insurers of vessels and cargoes. Lord Ellenborough, C.J., 5 Maule & S. 82; Abbott, J., Id. 87; Holroyd, J., Id. 89.

The giving up of a thing absolutely, without reference to any particular person or purpose, as throwing a jewel into the highway; leaving a thing to itself, as a vessel at sea; vacating property with the intention of not returning, so that it may be appropriated by the next comer. 2 Bl. Comm. 9, 10; Judson v. Malloy, 40 Cal. 299, 310. Intention to forsake or relinquish the thing is an essential element, to be proved by visible acts. Sikes v. State, Tex.Cr.App., 28 S.W. 688; Jordan v. State, 107 Tex.Cr.R. 414, 296 S.W. 585, 586 (auto parts); Kunst v. Mabie, 72 W.Va. 202, 77 S.E. 987, 990 (uncut timber); Dow v. Worley, 126 Okl. 175, 256 P. 56, 60 (oil and gas lease); Duryea v. Elkhorn Coal & Coke Corporation, 123 Me. 482, 124 A. 206, 208.

Abandonment in law depends upon concurrence of intention to abandon and some overt act or failure to act which carries implication that owner neither claims nor retains any interest. Stinnett v. Kinslow, 238 Ky. 812, 38 S.W.2d 920, 922.

"Abandonment" includes both the intention to abandon and the external act by which the intention is carried into effect. In determining whether one has abandoned his property or rights, the intention is the first and paramount object of inquiry, for there can be no abandonment without the intention to abandon. Boatman v. Andred, 44 Wyo. 352, 12 P.2d 370, 373. Generally, "abandonment" can arise from a single act or from a series of acts. Holly Hill Lumber Co. v. Grooms, 16 S.E.2d 816, 821, 198 S.C. 118.

Time is not an essential element of "abandonment," although the lapse of time may be evidence of an intention to abandon, and where it is accompanied by acts manifesting such an intention, it may be considered in determining whether there has been an abandonment. Ullman ex rel. Eramo v. Payne, 127 Conn. 239, 16 A.2d 286, 287.

"Abandonment" differs from surrender in that surrender requires an agreement, Noble v. Sturm, 210 Mich. 462, 178 N.W. 99, 103; and from forfeiture, in that forfeiture may be against the intention of the party alleged to have forfeited, Gila Water Co. v. Green, 29 Ariz. 304, 241 P. 307, 308.

In the Civil and French Law it is the act by which a debtor surrenders his property for the benefit of his creditors; Merlin, Repert. See Abandonment for Torts.

Actions, In General

Failure for indefinite period to prosecute action or suit, Morris v. Philfer State Bank, 90 Fla. 55, 105 So. 150, unless caused by an injunction, Barton v. Burbank, 138 La. 997, 71 So. 134. By statute in some states a definite time has been stated which will render a suit abandoned and subject to dismissal. Public Utilities Commission v. Smith, 298 Ill. 151, 131 N.E. 371, 375.

Failure to submit issue by instruction, Unterlachner v. Wells, 317 Mo. 181, 296 S.W. 755, 756; failure to perform conditions necessary to valid appeal or writ of error, Lewis v. Martin, 210 Ala. 401, 98 So. 635; Board of Public Instruction for Marion County v. Goodwin, 89 Fla. 379, 104 So. 779; failure to take issue upon garnishee's answer, Phelps v. Schmuck, 151 Kan. 521, 100 P.2d 67, 71.

Assignments of Error

Not supported by point, argument or authority. Cone v. Ariss, 13 Wash.2d 650, 126 P.2d 591, 593.

ABANDONMENT

Cemeteries
No new burials and neglect of graves, Andrus v. Remmert, 136 Tex. 179, 146 S.W.2d 728, 730; casual use for farming purposes, In re Gundry, 294 Mich. 221, 292 N.W. 709, 711; disuse as to new interments, failure to cut grass for headstones, In re Board of Transportation of the City of New York, 251 N.Y.S. 409, 413, 14 Misc. 557.

Children
Foregoing parental duties. Wright v. Fitzgibbons, Miss., 71 So.2d 709, 710.
Withdrawal or neglect of parental duties. In re Potter, 85 Wash. 617, 149 P. 23.
Separation agreement committing custody of child to father. Gardner v. Hall, 132 N.J. Eq. 64, 26 A.2d 799, 809.
Separation from the child and failure to supply its needs. State v. Clark, 148 Minn. 389, 182 N.W. 452, 453.
Criminal offense, separation from child, and failure to supply its needs. Curtis v. State, 48 S.E. 252.

Compensation Claims

Condemnation Proceedings
Dismissal of a petition. Will County v. Cleveland, 372 Ill. 111, 22 N.E.2d 929, 930.

Construction Work
Cessation of operation and intent of owner and contractor to cease operations permanently, or at least for definite period, or some fair notice or knowledge of abandonment by lien claimant, actual or implied. Block v. Love, 136 Or. 685, 1 P.2d 588, 589.

Contracts
To constitute “abandonment” by conduct, action relied on must be positive, unequivocal, and inconsistent with the existence of the contract, Mood v. Methodist Episcopal Church South, Tex. Civ.App., 289 S.W. 461, 464. Abandonment is a matter of intent, Lohn v. Fletcher Oil Co., 38 Cal. App.2d 26, 100 P.2d 505, 507, and implies not only nonperformance, but an intent not to perform which may be inferred from acts which necessarily point to actual abandonment, Losei Realty Corporation v. City of New York, 254 N.Y. 41, 171 N.E. 899.

Copyrights
Common-law rights, Tamas v. 20th Century Fox Film Corporation, Sup., 25 N.Y.S.2d 899, 901; sale and delivery of uncopyrighted painting to state-owned public institution, Pushman v. New York Graphic Society, Sup., 25 N.Y.S.2d 32, 34; copyrighted lectures not delivered to general public, but only to paying audiences and classes, National Institute for the Improvement of Memory v. Nutt, D.C.Conn., 28 F.2d 132, 134.

Crops
Sharecropping tenant’s willful failure to cultivate crops, Heaton v. Slaten, 25 Ala.App. 81, 141 So. 267, 268.

Ditches

Domicile

Easements
To establish “abandonment” of an easement created by deed, there must be some conduct on part of owner of servient estate adverse to and inconsistent with existence of easement and continuing for statutory period, or nonuser must be accompanied by unequivocal and decisive acts clearly indicating an intent on part of owner of easement to abandon use of it. Richardson v. Tumbridge, 111 Conn. 90, 149 A. 241, 242.

Employment

Exceptions on Appeal

Family

Where father during three or four months following his departure contributed only $32 to support of wife and three minor children, Howton v. Howton, 51 Cal.App.2d 323, 124 P.2d 837, 839. Contra where father helped to support family, In re Hess’ Estate, 257 N.Y.S. 278, 282, 143 Misc. 335.

Franchises

“Inferior service and lack of any service for few short intervals held insufficient to show “abandonment” of ferry franchise. McConnell v. Crittenden County, 250 Ky. 359, 63 S.W.2d 329.

Highways

Where public ceases to use street or highway under circumstances indicating intent to abandon, Grand Trunk Western R. Co. v. City of Flint, D. C.Mich., 55 F.2d 384, 386. But short sections of highway, discontinued by state highway commission upon relocating highway, were not aban-

Homesteads

Husband

The act of a husband or wife who leaves his or her consort willfully, and with an intention of causing perpetual separation. People v. Cullen, 153 N.Y. 629, 47 N.E. 894, 44 L.R.A. 420.

Wife’s leaving husband for a trip to Europe of less than two months against husband’s wishes, did not constitute. In re Boesenberg’s Estate, 37 N.Y.S.2d 194, 196, 179 Misc. 3.

Word “abandoned,” within statute providing that no wife who has abandoned husband shall have right of election to take against provisions of husband’s will, has meaning ascribed thereto in matrimonial litigations, and carries no connotation of infidelity. Adultery of abandoned wife does not constitute “abandonment”. In re Green’s Estate, 280 N.Y.S. 692, 702, 155 Misc. 641.

A wife who told husband to get out of wife’s home, and made no effort to effect a reconciliation, was not entitled to appointment as administratoratrix of his estate. In re Banaszak’s Estate, 1 N.Y.S.2d 15, 164 Misc. 829.

Where husband paid wife living apart in caring for their child, she had not abandoned husband so as to preclude the recovery of an industrial pension for his death. Johnson v. Department of Labor and Industries of Washington, 3 Wash.2d 257, 100 P.2d 382, 385. But wife who had, prior to husband’s death, left husband, resisted efforts toward a reconciliation, and instituted annulment proceedings, was not entitled to compensation for husband’s death. La Fountain v. Industrial Accident Commission, 13 Cal.App.2d 130, 56 P.2d 257, 258.

Insured Property

A relinquishment or cession of property by the owner to the insurer of it, in order to claim as for

The term is used only in reference to risks in navigation; but the principle is applicable in fire insurance, where there are remnants, and sometimes, also, under stipulations in life policies in favor of creditors. Cincinnati Ins. Co. v. Duffield, 6 Ohio St. 200, 67 Am. Dec. 339.

Inventions

The giving up of rights by inventor, as where he surrenders his idea or discovery or relinquishes the intention of perfecting his invention, and so throws it open to the public, or where he negligently postpones the assertion of his claims or fails to apply for a patent, and allows the public to use his invention. Electric Storage Battery Co. v. Shimadzu, Pa., 59 S.Ct. 675, 681, 307 U.S. 5, 613, 616, 83 L.Ed. 1071.

Leases in General

To constitute an “abandonment” of leased premises, there must be an absolute relinquishment of premises by tenant consisting of act and intention. Schnitzer v. Lanzara, 115 N.J.L. 332, 180 A. 234.

Closing up butcher shop with intention of giving up business and in removing all perishable merchandise, although tenant retained key and did not notify landlord of intention to vacate premises, held an “abandonment” and not a “surrender” of premises. Schnitzer v. Lanzara, 115 N.J.L. 332, 18 A. 234. Refusal by lessee of lessor’s offer to reconstruct burned building, Girard Trust Co. v. Tremblay Motor Co., 291 Pa. 507, 140 A. 506, 512. But tenants surrendering premises pursuant to notice of forfeiture did not “abandon” premises. Becker v. Rute, 228 Iowa 533, 293 N.W. 18, 21.

Withdrawal or denial of marital obligations without just cause, Reppert v. Reppert, Del.Super., 13 A.2d 705, 1 Terry 492.

Mineral Leases

“Abandonment” consists of an actual act of relinquishment, accompanied with the intent and purpose permanently to give up a claim and right to property. A distinction exists between “abandonment” and “surrender” which is the relinquishment of a thing or a property right thereto to another, which is not an essential element of abandonment. Distinction also exists between elements of “abandonment” and those of estoppel.

Failing to start work under the lease for more than 40 years, Chapman v. Continental Oil Co., 149 Kan. 822, 89 P.2d 833, 834; breach of implied obligation to proceed with search and development of land with reasonable diligence, Wood v. Arkansas Fuel Oil Co., D.C.Ark., 40 F. Supp. 42, 45; no drilling on leased land for more than two years, and failure to pay rentals, Rehart v. Klossner, 48 Cal.App.2d 40, 119 P.2d 145, 147; drawing of casing from well with no intention of replacing it, Seaboard Oil Co. v. Commonwealth, 193 Ky. 629, 237 S.W. 48, 50. But there must be an intention by lessee to relinquish leased premises, Carter Oil Co. v. Mitchell, C.C.A.Okl., 100 F.2d 945, 950, 951; or an intention not to drill, Carter Oil Co. v. Mitchell, C.C.A.Okl., 100 F.2d 945, 950, 951. And ceasing operations is not alone sufficient. Fisher v. Dixon, 188 Okl. 7, 105 P.2d 776, 777. Doing no substantial work for about one year immediately preceding suit to cancel lease, but remaining in possession and doing some work, Deace v. Stirling, Tex.Civ.App., 142 S.W.2d 167; acquiescing in relocation of well for a brief interval while well was being drilled to a greater depth, Cole v. Philadelphia Co., 345 Pa. 315, 26 A.2d 920, 923; abandoning work on unproductive well was not an abandonment of leased premises. Smith v. Tullus, 195 La. 400, 196 So. 912, 914.

Mining Claims

Relinquishment of a claim held by location without patent, where the holder voluntarily leaves his claim to be appropriated by the next comer, without any intention to retake or resume it, and regardless of what may become of it in the future. O’Hanlon v. Ruby Gulch Mining Co., 48 Mont. 65, 135 P. 913, 918. The term includes both the intention to abandon and the act by which the abandonment is carried into effect. Peachy v. Frisco Gold Mines Co., D.C.Ariz., 204 F. 659, 668.

Motions

Office

Abandonment of a public office is a species of resignation, but differs from resignation in that resignation is a formal relinquishment, while abandonment is a voluntary relinquishment through nonuser. State v. Harmon, 115 Me. 268, 98 A. 804, 805.

It is not wholly a matter of intention, but may result from the complete abandonment of duties of such a continuance that the law will infer a relinquishment. Wilkinson v. City of Birmingham, 193 Ala. 139, 68 So. 999, 1002. It must be total, and under such circumstances as clearly to indicate an absolute relinquishment; and whether an officer has abandoned an office depends on his overt acts rather than his declared intention. Parks v. Ash, 168 Ga. 868, 149 S.E. 207, 209. It implies nonuser, but nonuser does not, of itself constitute abandonment. The failure to perform the duties pertaining to the office must be with actual or imputed intention on the part of the officer to abandon and relinquish the office. The intention may be inferred from the acts and conduct of the party, and is a question of fact. Abandonment may result from an acquiescence by the officer in his wrongful removal or discharge, but, as in other cases of abandonment, the question of intention is involved. McCall v. Cull, 51 Ariz. 237, 75 P.2d 696, 698.

Temporary absence is not ordinarily sufficient to constitute an "abandonment of office". State v. Green, 206 Ark. 361, 175 S.W.2d 575, 577. Responding to mandatory call for military service in emergency conditions, Caudel v. Prewitt, 296 Ky. 848, 178 S.W.2d 22, 25. And failure of former officers to assert right while decision of eligibility of elected successors was pending, was not an "abandonment" creating vacancy. State v. Levy Court of New Castle County, Del., 3 W.W.Harr. 554, 140 A. 642, 645.

Oil Wells

Where owner ceased working on well to work elsewhere to procure money to do further work on well, well was not abandoned. Jones v. Jos. Greenspon's Son Pipe Corporation, 313 Ill.App. 651, 40 N.E.2d 561.

Patents

There may be an abandonment of a patent, where the inventor dedicates it to the public use; and this may be shown by his failure to sue infringers, sell licenses, or otherwise make efforts to realize a personal advantage from his patent. Ransom v. New York, 4 Blatchf. 157, 20 Fed.Cas. 286.

Pleadings

The filing of a second amended complaint which was complete in itself and which did not reserve to itself any part of the original complaint or first amended complaint constituted an "abandonment" of the two former complaints. Seely v. Gilbert, 16 Wash.2d 611, 134 P.2d 710, 712. Cross-complainant by failing to take proper steps in trial court to have judgment that was silent on issues tendered by cross-complaint and answer thereto corrected did not thereby "abandon" cross-complaint. Brown v. National Life Ins. Co. of Washington County, Vt., 112 Ind.App. 684, 46 N.E.2d 246, 249.

Prescriptive Rights

Non-use alone is insufficient. Burkman v. City of New Lisbon, 246 Wis. 547, 19 N.W.2d 311, 313; Smelcer v. Rippetoe, 24 Tenn.App. 516, 147 S.W.2d 109, 113, 114.

Privileges

Witness before grand jury who answered questions and immediately asked to retract answers, and thereupon asserted his privilege, did not "abandon" right to claim the privilege. United States v. Weisman, C.C.A.N.Y., 111 F.2d 260, 261.

Property

"Abandoned property" in a legal sense is that to which owner has relinquished all right, title, claim, and possession, with intention of not reclaiming it or resuming its ownership, possession or enjoyment. Jackson v. Steinberg, Or., 200 P.2d 376, 377, 378.

Property for Special Purposes

Moving of church to erect drilling rig held not "abandonment of use for church purposes." Abandonment meant to wholly discontinue church use, and additional use was not sufficient. Skipper v. Davis, Tex.Civ.App., 59 S.W.2d 454, 457.

Merger of churches was not. Bridgeport-City Trust Co. v. Bridgeport Hospital, 120 Conn. 27, 179 A. 92, 94. Nor where intention was that nonconforming use as a fraternity house would be resumed. State ex rel. Morehouse v. New Orleans Fraternity House, 135 La. 353, 358, 71 So. 752. Nor 291 N.W. 745, 751, 752. Nor was a discontinuance of a nonconforming use in zoned area for a reasonable period. Beyer v. Mayor and Council of Baltimore City, Md., 34 A.2d 765, 768, 769. Nor a discontinuance of a garage during war while owner served in army and on return postponed repossession for garage purposes due to city's using building. State v. Murray, 195 Wis. 657, 219 N.W. 271, 272. But removal of manufacturing equipment from manufacturing plant, was. Francisco v. City of Columbus, Ohio App., 31 N.E.2d 256, 243. Nor where intention was that nonconforming use as a fraternity house would be resumed. State ex rel. Morehouse v. New Orleans Fraternity House, 135 La. 353, 358, 71 So. 752. Nor a discontinuance of a nonconforming use in zoned area for a reasonable period. Beyer v. Mayor and Council of Baltimore City, Md., 34 A.2d 765, 768, 769.

Railroad Property

"Abandon" means to relinquish or give up with intent of never again resuming or claiming one's rights or interests in, to give up absolutely, to forsake entirely, to renounce utterly, to relinquish all connection with or concern in. Capital Transit Co. v. Hazen, 93 F.2d 250, 251, 68 App.D.C. 91. Abandonment did not mean a partial disuse with an intention to complete station on a contingency, but meant a final relinquishment, or giving up with-
ABANDONMENT

Rights in General

It is properly confined to incorporeal hereditaments, since legal rights once vested must be divested according to law. But equitable rights may be abandoned. Great Falls Co. v. Worster, 15 N.E. 714; Cox v. Colossal Cavern Co., 210 Ky. 612, 276 S.W. 540; Inhabitants of School Dist. No. 4 v. Benson, 31 Me. 381, 52 Am. Dec. 618.

Ship and Freight

In France and other countries it is the surrender to a person having a claim arising out of a contract made with the master. American Transp. Co. v. Moore, 5 Mich. 368.

Taxing Power

Delegation of taxing power by legislature to city was not "abandonment of taxing power". Mouledoux V. Maestri, 197 La. 525, 2 So.2d 11, 16.

Trade-marks and Trade Names

Trusts

State aid for hospital, with stipulation for beds for emergency cases, did not establish an "abandonment of trust". Noble v. First Nat. Bank of Anniston, 241 Ala. 85, 1 So.2d 289, 291.

Water Rights

Wife

Abandonment justifying divorce is a voluntary, unjustified, and final separation of one of married parties from the other, accompanied by an inten-tion to terminate the marital relation, or an unjustified refusal to resume suspended cohabita-tion, as where husband left his wife because his children by former marriage could not live peace-ably with second wife. Schwartz v. Schwartz, 158 Md. 80, 148 A. 259, 263.

Refusal by husband of request by sick wife without means of support, to return to home held "abandonment" as respects disorderly conduct. People v. Schenkel, 252 N.Y.S. 415, 418, 140 Misc. 843. Contra where separation agreement existed. People v. Gross, 291 N.Y.S. 597, 601, 161 Misc. 514. Where parties separated by agreement, and husband, in lieu of periodic payments for wife’s support, paid one of two devisees conveying valuable consideration, held not "abandonment" as respects husband’s statutory right against wife’s will. In re McCann’s Estate, 281 N.Y.S. 445, 155 Misc. 763; or even if wife was justified in leaving hus-band on account of his cruel treatment, there must be a desertion without consent. In re Stolz’ Estate, 260 N.Y.S. 106, 145 Misc. 799. But while there can be no "desertion" for divorce where parties are apart by consent, yet there is no "abandonment" as respects separate mainte-nance, although the separation originated and continued by consent of parties. Pierson v. Pierson, 189 A. 391, 395, ABANDONMENT FOR TORTS. In the civil law. The relinquishment of a slave or animal who had committed a trespass to the person injured, in discharge of the owner's liability for such trespass or injury. Just. Inst. 4, 8, 9. A similar right exists in Louisiana. Fitzgerald v. Ferguson, 11 La. Ann. 396.

ABANDUN, ABANDUM, or ABANDONUM. Anything sequestered, proscribed, or abandoned. Abandon, i. e., in bannum res missa, a thing banned or denounced as forfeited or lost, whence to abandon, desert, or forsake, as lost and gone. Cunningham; Cowell.

ABARNARE. Lat. To discover and disclose to a magistrate any secret crime. Leges Canuti, cap. 10.

ABATABLE NUISANCE. A nuisance which is practically susceptible of being suppressed, or extinguished, or rendered harmless, and whose continued existence is not authorized under the law. Fort Worth & Denver City Ry. Co. v. Muncy, Tex. Civ. App., 31 S.W.2d 491, 494.

ABATAMENTUM. L. Lat. In old English law. An abatement of freehold; an entry upon lands by way of interposition between the death of the ancestor and the entry of the heir. Co. Litt. 277a; Yel. 151.

ABATE. To abate. Yel. 151.

ABATE. To throw down, to beat down, destroy, quash. 3 Shars. Bla. Com. 168; Klamath Lumber Co. v. Bamber, 142 P. 359, 74 Or. 287. To do away with or nullify or lessen or diminish, in re Stevens' Estate, Cal.App., 150 P.2d 530, 534; to bring entirely down or demolish, to put an end to, to do away with, to nullify, to make void, Sparks Milling Co. v. Powell, 283 Ky. 669, 143 S.W.2d 75, 77.

See, also, Abatement; Abatement and Revival.

ABATEMENT. A reduction, a decrease, or a diminution. The Vestris, D.C.N.Y., 53 F.2d 847, 852.

Contracts

A reduction made by the creditor for the prompt payment of a debt due by the payor or debtor. Wesk. Ins. 7.

Debts

In equity, when equitable assets are insufficient to satisfy fully all the creditors, their debts must abate in proportion, and they must be content with a dividend, for cequitas est quasi cequalitas.

Freehold

The unlawful entry upon and keeping possession of an estate by a stranger, after the death of the ancestor and before the heir or devisee takes possession. Such an entry is technically called an "abatement," and the stranger an "abator." It is, in fact, a figurative expression, denoting that the rightful possession or freehold of the heir or devisee is overthrown by the unlawful intervention of a stranger. Abatement differs from intrusion, in that it is always to the prejudice of the heir or immediate devisee, whereas the latter is to the prejudice of the reversioner or remainder-man; and disseisin differs from them both, for to disseise is to put forcibly or fraudulently a person seised of the freehold out of possession. Brown v. Burdick, 25 Ohio St. 268. By the ancient laws of Normandy, this term was used to signify the act of one who, having an apparent right of possession to an estate, took possession of it immediately after the death of the actual possessor, before the heir entered. (Howard, Anciennes Lois des Francais, tome 1, p. 539.)

Legacies

A proportional diminution or reduction of the pecuniary legacies, when the funds or assets out of which such legacies are payable are not sufficient to pay them in full. Ward, Leg. p. 369, c. 6, § 7; 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 555; 2 Bl. Comm. 512, 513; In re 'Hawgood's Estate, 37 S.D. 565, 159 N.W. 117, 123. Legacy accepted in lieu of dower. In re Hartman's Estate, 233 Iowa 405, 9 N.W.2d 359, 362.

Nuisance

The removal of a nuisance. 3 Bla. Comm. 5. See Nuisance.

Taxes and Duties

A drawback or rebate allowed in certain cases on the duties due on imported goods, in consideration of their deterioration or damage suffered during importation, or while in store. A diminution or decrease in the amount of tax imposed upon any person. Revers v. Gookin, 198 Mass. 434, 85 N.E. 405 (real estate taxes); Central National Bank v. City of Lynn, 156 N.E. 42 (Shares in national banks) 259 Mass. 1.

As applied to taxation, it presupposes error or mistake in assessment. Gulf States Steel Co. v. U. S., C.C.A.Ala., 56 F.2d 43, 46.

Abatement of taxes relieves property of its share of the burdens of taxation after the assessment has been made and the tax levied. Sheppard v. Hidalgo County, 126 Tex. 550, 83 S.W.2d 649, 657.

ABATEMENT AND REVIVAL

Actions at Law

As used in reference to actions at law, word abate means that action is utterly dead and cannot be revived except by commencing a new action. First Nat. Bank v. Board of Sup’rs of Harrison County, 221 Iowa 348, 264 N.W. 281, 106 A.L.R. 566.

The overthrow of an action caused by the defendant’s pleading some matter of fact tending to impeach the correctness of the writ or declaration, which defeats the action for the present, but does not debar the plaintiff from recommencing it in a better way. 3 Bla. Comm. 301; 1 Chit. Pl. (6th Lond. Ed.) 446; Guild v. Richardson, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 370; Wirtele v. Grand Lodge A. O. U. W., 111 Neb. 302, 196 N.W. 510. See Plea in Abatement.

On plaintiff’s death, Piukkula v. Pillsbury Astoria Flouring Mills Co., 150 Or. 304, 44 P.2d 162, 99 A.L.R. 259. Mere lapse of time between the death of a party and the taking of necessary steps to continue the action by or against the heir or personal representative does not work an abatement, Whaley v. Slater, 202 S.C. 182, 26 S.E.2d 266, 267.

Cause of Action

Chancery Practice

It differs from an abatement at law in this: that in the latter the action is entirely dead and cannot be revived; but in the former the right to proceed is merely suspended, and may be revived; F. A. Mig. Co. v. Hayden & Clemons, C.C.A.Mass., 273 F. 374; Mutual Ben. Health & Accident Ass’n v. Teal, D.C.S.C., 106 A.L.R. 259.

In England, declinatory pleas to the jurisdiction and dilatory to the persons were (prior to the judicature act) sometimes, by analogy to common law, termed “pleas In abatement.” Declinatory and dilatory pleas, see Story, Eq. Pl. § 708.

ABATOR. In real property law, a stranger who, having no right of entry, contrives to get possession of an estate of freehold, to the prejudice of the heir or devisee, before the latter can enter, after the ancestor’s death. Litt. § 397. In the law of torts, one who abates, prostrates, or destroys a nuisance.

ABATUDA. Anything diminished. Moneta abatuda is money clipped or diminished in value. Cowell; Dufreresne.

ABAVIA. Lat. In the civil law. A great-great-grandmother. Inst. 3, 6, 4; Dig. 38, 10, 1, 6; Bract. fol. 68b.

ABAVITAS. A great-great-grandfather’s sister. Bract. fol. 68b. This is a misprint for abamita (q. v.). Burrill.

ABAVUNCULUS. Lat. In the civil law. A great-great-grandmother’s brother (avavice frater). Inst. 3, 6, 6; Dig. 38, 10, 3; Calvinus, Lex. Called avunculus maximus. Id. 38, 10, 17. Called by Bracton and Fleta abavunculus maximus. Bract. fol. 68b; Fleta, lib. 6, c. 2, § 19.

ABAVUS. Lat. In the civil law. A great-great-grandfather. Inst. 3, 6, 4; Dig. 38, 10, 1, 6; Bract. fol. 67a.

ABBACINARE. To blind by placing a burning basin or red-hot irons before the eye’s. A form of punishment in the Middle Ages. Also spelt abacinare. The modern Italian is spelt with two b’s, and means to blind. Abbacination. Blinding by placing burning basin or red-hot irons before the eyes. See Abbacinare.

ABBACY. The government of a religious house, and the revenues thereof, subject to an abbot, as a bishopric is to a bishop. Cowell. The rights and privileges of an abbot.

ABBEY. A monastery or nunnery for the use of an association of religious persons, having an abbot or abbess to preside over them.

ABBOT. A prelate in the 13th century who had had an immemorial right to sit in the national assembly. Taylor, Science of Jurispr. 287.

ABBOT, ABBAT. The spiritual superior or governor of an abbey. Feminine, Abbess.

ABBREVIAE OF ADJUDICATION. In Scotch law. An abstract of the decree of adjudication, and of the lands adjudged, with the amount of the debt. Adjudication is that diligence (execution) of the law by which the real estate of a debtor is adjudged to belong to his creditor in payment of a debt; and the abbreviate must be recorded in the register of adjudications.

ABBVIA. Lat. In the civil law. A great-great-grandmother. Inst. 3, 6, 4; Dig. 38, 10, 1, 6; Bract. fol. 68b.
ABBREVIATORS. In ecclesiastical law. Officers whose duty it is to assist in drawing up the Pope’s briefs, and reducing petitions into proper form to be converted into papal bulls.

ABROCHMENT, or ABBROACHMENT. The act of forestalling a market, by buying up at wholesale the merchandise intended to be sold there, for the purpose of selling it at retail. See Forestalling the Market.

ABBUTTALS. See Abuttals.

ABDICATION. The act of a sovereign in renouncing and relinquishing his government or throne, so that either the throne is left entirely vacant, or is filled by a successor appointed or elected beforehand.

Also, where a magistrate or person in office voluntarily renounces or gives it up before the time of service has expired.

Abdication of rights to property may constitute an assignment. In re Johnston’s Estate, 186 Wis. 599, 203 N.W. 376, 377.

It differs from resignation, in that resignation is made by one who has received his office from another and restores it into his hands, as an inferior into the hands of a superior; abdication is the relinquishment of an office which has devolved by act of law. It is said to be a renunciation, quitting, and relinquishing, so as to have nothing further to do with, a thing, or the doing of such actions as are inconsistent with the holding of it. Chambers.

ABDITORIUM. An abditory or hiding place, to hide and preserve goods, plate or money. Jacob.

ABDUCTION. In criminal law. The offense of taking away a wife, child, or ward, by fraud and persuasion, or open violence. 3 Bl.Comm. 139-141; State v. Chisenhall, 106 N.C. 676, 11 S.E. 518 (female under 14); State v. Hopper, 186 N.C. 405, 119 S.E. 769, 772 (wife).

The unlawful taking or detention of any female for purposes of marriage, concubinage, or prostitution. 4 Steph.Com. 84; People v. Crotty, 55 Hun, 611, 9 N.Y.S. 937. In many states this offense is created by statute and in most cases applies to females under a given age.

By statute in some states, abduction includes the withdrawal of a husband from his wife, as where another woman alienates his affection and entices him away and causes him to abandon his wife. Humphrey v. Pope, 122 Cal. 253, 54 P. 847.

ABEARANCE. Behavior; as a recognizance to be of good abearance signifies to be of good behavior. 4 Bl.Comm. 251, 256.

ABEREMURDER. (From Sax. aber, apparent, notorious; and mord, murder.) Plain or down-right murder, as distinguished from the less heinous crime of manslaughter, or chance medley. Spelman; Cowell; Blount.

ABESSE. Lat. In the civil law. To be absent; to be away from a place. Said of a person who was extra continentia urbis, (beyond the suburbs of the city.)

ABET. A French word composed of two words “a” and “beter”—to bait or excite an animal. It includes knowledge of the wrongful purpose of the perpetrator and counsel and encouragement in the crime. People v. Terman, 4 Cal.App.2d 345, 40 P.2d 915, 916.

To encourage, incite, or set another on to commit a crime. This word is always applied to aiding the commission of a crime. To abet another to commit a murder is to command, procure, or counsel him to commit it, Old Nat. Brev. 21; Co. Litt. 475; to command, procure, counsel, encourage, induce, or assist, Short v. Commonwealth, 240 Ky. 477, 42 S.W.2d 696, 697; to encourage, counsel, induce, or assist, State v. Watts, Nev., 296 P. 26.

See Abettor; Aid and Abet.

"Aid" and "abet" are nearly synonymous terms as generally used; but, strictly speaking, the former term does not imply guilty knowledge or felonious intent, whereas the word "abet" includes knowledge of the wrongful purpose and counsel and encouragement in the commission of the crime. Forgery, People v. Dole, 122 Cal. 486, 55 P. 581, 68 Am.Stat.Rep. 50; Raiford v. State, 59 Ala. 106; Violation of law against free passes, State v. Ankom, 86 W.Va. 570, 103 S.E. 925, 927; Crime against nature, State v. Start, 65 Or. 178, 132 P. 512, 513; Robbery, People v. Powers, 293 Ill. 600, 127 N.E. 681, 682.

In the same sense (malicious prosecution) Hughes v. Van Bruggen, 44 N.M. 354, 105 P.2d 494, 499.

"Abet" smacks more of technical terminology than does the word "aid", but it is almost synonymous with the word "aid". Assault and battery, Gentry v. State, 65 Ga. App. 100, 15 S.E.2d 464, 465.

ABETTOR. In criminal law. An instigator, or settler on; one who promotes or procures a crime to be committed. Old Nat.Brev. 21. One who commands, advises, instigates, or encourages another to commit a crime; a person who, being present or in the neighborhood, incites another to commit a crime, and thus becomes a principal. See State v. Baldwin, 193 N.C. 566, 137 S.E. 590, 591.

Must have rendered assistance or encouragement to the perpetrator of the crime with knowledge of his felonious intent; offense of "aiding and abetting" being committed by person present who does some act or speaks some word aiding the actual perpetrator of the crime. Combs v. Commonwealth, 224 Ky. 653, 6 S.W.2d 1082, 1083. Must aid or commit some overt act or act of encouragement. Long v. Commonwealth, 288 Ky. 83, 155 S.W.2d 246, 247. Or so far in Participating in the commision of the offense as to be present for the purpose of assisting if necessary. State v. Epps, 213 N.C. 709, 197 S.E. 580, 583.

The distinction between abettors and accessories is the presence or absence at the commission of the crime. Cowell; Fleta, lib. 1, c. 34. Presence and participation are necessary to constitute a person an abettor. 4 Shaw's Bla. Comm. 33; Bradley v. Commonwealth, 201 Ky. 413, 257 S. W. 11, 13. Common design to take life not necessary. State v. Lord, 42 N.M. 638, 84 P.2d 80, 86. Not essential that there should be a prearrangement or mutual understanding or concert of action. McKinney v. * Commonwealth, 284 Ky. 16, 143 S.W.2d 745, 747, 748.

ABEYANCE. In the law of estates. In expectation, remembrance, and contemplation of law; the condition of a freehold when there is no person in being in whom it is vested.

In such cases the freehold has been said to be in nubibus (in the clouds), McKown v. McKown, 93 W.Va. 689, 117 S.E. 557, 559, in pendente (in suspension); and in gremio legis (in the bosom of the law). Where there is a tenant of the freehold, the remainder or reversion in fee may exist for a time without any particular owner, in which case it is said to be in abeyance; Lyle v. Richards, 9 S. & R. Pa. 367; 3 Plowd. 29 a; 1 Washb. R.P. 47.

Franchise of a corporation; Trustees of Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. (U.S.) 691, 4 L.Ed. 629. Personal property as in case of a vessel captured at sea first in the captors until it becomes invested with the character of a prize; 1 Kent, 102; 1 C.Rob.Adm. 139; 3 id. 97, n.; or the rights of property of a bankrupt, pending adjudication; Bank v. Sherman, 101 U.S. 403, 25 L.Ed. 97, n.

A condition of being undetermined. Fenn v. American Rattan & Reed Mfg. Co., 75 Ind. App. 146, 130 N.E. 129, 130. (Sellers stating its inability to promise to deliver.)

Sales to third parties, of property acquired by county at tax sale, being held in "abeyance", means that certain rights or conditions are in expectancy. Willard v. Ward County, 72 N.D. 291, 6 N.W.2d 566, 568.

ABIATUR, or AVIATICUS. L. Lat. In feudal law. A son's son; a grandson in the male line. Du Cange, Avitus; Spelman; Lib.Feud., Baraterii, tit. 8, cited Id.

ABIDE. To accept the consequences of; to rest satisfied with; to wait for.

With reference to an order, judgment, or decree of a court, to perform, to execute. Jackson v. State, 30 Kan. 88, 1 P. 317. Where a statute provides for a recognizance "to abide the judgment of the court," one conditioned "to await the action of the court" is not sufficient; Wilson v. State, 7 Tex.App. 38. Defendant does not "abide the judgment" until costs of appeal are paid. Ex parte Tillery, 22 Ala.App. 193, 114 So. 15. And see State v. Gregory, 205 Iowa, 707, 216 N.W. 17, 19.

Defendant's presence in courtroom not a compliance with supersedeas bond conditioned to "abide final judgment," where there was no formal offer to surrender defendant into court's custody. American Surety Co. of New York v. State, 50 Ga.App. 777, 179 S.E. 407.

To abide and satisfy is used to express the execution or performance of a judgment or order by carrying it into complete effect, Erickson v. Elder, 34 Minn. 371, 25 N.W. 804, Cf. Woolfolk v. Jones, D.C.Va., 216 F. 807, 809.

Where costs are to abide final result, "abide" is synonymous with conform to with Getz v. Johnston, 145 Md. 426, 125 A. 689, 691.

To abide order respecting seized property, means to perform, obey, conform to. Cantor v. Sachs, 18 Del.Ch. 359, 162 A. 73, 84.

ABIDING BY. In Scotch law. A judicial declaration that the party abides by the deed on which he founds, in an action where the deed or writing is attacked as forged. Pat.Comp.. It has the effect of pledging the party to stand the consequences of founding on a forged deed. Bell.

"Abide by" means to adhere to, to submit to, to obey, to accept the consequences of. Detroit Fidelity & Surety Co. v. U. S., C.C.A.Ohio, 36 F.2d 682, 683. (Recognition)

To abide by an award means to await the award without revoking the submission. It does not mean to "acquire in" or "not dispute," in the sense of not being at liberty to contest the validity of the award when made. Hunt v. Wilson, 6 N.H. 36; Quimby v. Melvin, 35 N.H. 198; Weeks v. Trask, 81 Me. 127, 16 A. 413, 2 L.R.A. 532.

ABIDING FAITH. Belief or confidence in the guilt of one accused of crime which remains or continues in the minds of the jury. Gray v. State. 56 Okl.Cr. 208, 38 P.2d 967, 970.

ABIGEI. See Abigeus.

ABIGEATUS. See Abigeus.

ABIGEATUS. Lat. In the civil law. The offense of stealing or driving away cattle. See Abigeus.

ABIGEI. See Abigeus.

ABIGERE. Lat. In the civil law. To drive away. Applied to those who drove away animals with the intention of stealing them. Applied, also, to the similar offense of cattle stealing on the borders between England and Scotland. See Abigeus.

To drive out; to expel by force; to produce abortion. Dig. 47, 11, 4.

ABIGEUS. Lat. (P1., abigei, or more rarely abigeatores.) In the civil law. A stealer of cattle; one who drove or drew away (subtraxit) cattle from their pastures, as horses or oxen from the herds, and made booty of them, and who followed this as a business or trade.

The term was applied also to those who drove away the smaller animals, as swine, sheep, and goats. In the latter case, it depended on the number taken, whether the offender was fur [a common thief] or abigeus. But the taking of a single horse or ox seems to have constituted the crime of abigeatus. And those who frequently did this were clearly abigei, though they took but an animal or two at a time. Dig. 47, 14, 3, 2. See Cod. 9, 37; Nov. 22, c. 15, § 1; 4 Bl.Comm. 239.

ABILITY. When the word is used instatutes, it is usually construed as referring to pecuniary ability, as in the construction of Tenterden's Act (q.v.) ; 1 M. & W. 101.

Contemplates earning capacity as well as property actually owned, to support abandoned wife; State v. Witham, 70 Wis. 473, 35 N.W. 934, Contra, Washburn v. Washburn, 9 Cal. 475.

The ability to buy, required in a purchaser as a condition to the broker's right to a commission, is the financial ability to meet the required terms of the sale, and does not mean solvency or ability to respond in damages for a breach of the contract. Stewart v. Sisk, 29 Ga.App. 17, 114 S.E. 71. See Able to Purchase.

A voter's "ability to read" within meaning of election statutes is satisfied if he can read in a reasonably intelligent manner sentences composed of words in common use and of average difficulty, although each word may not be always accurately pronounced, and "ability to write" is satisfied if he can by use of alphabetical signs express in a fairly legible way words of common use and average difficulty, though each word may not be accurately spelled. Williams v. Hays, 175 Ky. 170, 193 S.W. 1046, 1047. But the mere ability to write one's name and post office address, and nothing more, is insufficient. Murrel v. Allen, 180 Ky. 604, 203 S.W. 313, 314.

ABJURE. To renounce, or abandon, by or upon oath. The oath by which any person holding office in England was formerly obliged to bind himself not to acknowledge any right in the Pretender to the throne of England; 1 Bla. Com. 368; 13 and 14 W. III, c. 6, repealed by 30 and 31 Vic. c. 59.

It also denotes an oath abjuring certain doctrines of the church of Rome.

ABJURATION. A renunciation or abandonment by or upon oath.

The oath by which any person holding office in England was formerly obliged to bind himself not to acknowledge any right in the Pretender to the throne of England; 1 Bla. Com. 368; 13 and 14 W. III, c. 6, repealed by 30 and 31 Vic. c. 59.

It also denotes an oath abjuring certain doctrines of the church of Rome.

ABJURATION OF ALLEGIANCE. A naturalized citizen of the United States, must declare that he doth renounce and abjure all allegiance and fidelity which he owes to any foreign prince, state, etc. 8 U.S.C.A. § 735.

ABJURE. To renounce, or abandon, by or upon oath. See Abjuration.

A departure from the state without the intention of returning, and not a renunciation of one's country, upon an oath of perpetual banishment, as the term originally implied. Mead v. Hughes, 15 Ala. 148, 1 Am.Rep. 123.

ABLE-BODIED. As used in a statute relating to service in the militia, this term does not imply an absolute freedom from all physical ailment. It imports an absence of those palpable and visible defects which evidently incapacitate the person from performing the ordinary duties of a soldier. Darling v. Bowen, 10 Vt. 152. Ability to perform ordinary labor is not the test. Town of Marlborough v. Sisson, 26 Conn. 57.

ABLE TO EARN. The phrase in the Workmen's Compensation Act in reference to wages does not mean the maximum sum earned in any one week, but a fair average of the weekly wages which an employee is able to earn covering a sufficient period of time to determine his earning capacity. Reeves v. Dietz, 1 La.App. 501, 505. See also, Mt. Olive & Staunton Coal Co. v. Industrial Commission, 301 Ill. 521, 134 N.E. 16. Amount one is capable of earning if employed. Ferrara v. Clifford Wright Hat Co., 125 Conn. 140, 3 A.2d 842, 843.

Ability to obtain and hold employment means that the person referred to is either able or unable to perform the usual duties of whatever employment may be under consideration, in the manner that such duties are customarily performed by the average person engaged in such employment. Kinyon v. Kinyon, 230 Mo.App. 623, 71 S.W.2d 78, 82.

Purchaser is able to purchase, as respects broker's right to commission, if he is financially able to command the necessary funds to close the deal within the time required. Hersh v. Garau, 218 Cal. 460, 23 P.2d 1022. Even though part of the money must be obtained on the purchased property itself. Pellaton v. Brunsiki, 69 Cal. App. 301, 231 P. 583, 584. But see Bateman v. Richard, 105 Okl. 272, 232 P. 443, 445; and Reynor v. Mackrill, 181 Iowa 210, 164 N.W. 335, 1 A.L.R. 523, holding that a person, to be able to purchase, must have the money for the cash payment, and not merely property on which he could raise it. See also, Peters v. Mullins, 211 Ky. 123, 277 S.W. 316, 317. See Financially Able.

ABLEGATI. Papal ambassadors of the second rank, who are sent to a country where there is not a nuncio, with a less extensive commission than that of a nuncio. This title is equivalent to envoy.

ABLOCATIO. A letting out to hire, or leasing for money. Calvin. Sometimes used in the English form "ablocation."

ABMATERTERA. Lat. in the civil law. A great-great-grandmother's sister, (abavice soror). Inst. 3, 6, 6; Dig. 38, 10, 3. Called matertera maxima. Id. 38, 10, 17. Called, by Bracton, abmatertera magna. Bract. fol. 68b.

ABNEPOS. Lat. A great-great-grandson. The grandson of a grandson or granddaughter. Calvius, Lex.
ABNEPTIS. Lat. A great-great-granddaughter. The granddaughter of a grandson or granddaughter. Calvisus, Lex.

ABOGADO. Sp. An advocate. See Bozero.

Imports absolute destruction, having its root in the Latin word "abolere," meaning to destroy utterly. Applies particularly to things of a permanent nature, such as institutions, usages, customs, as the abolition of slavery. Pondelick v. Passaic County, 111 N.J.Law 187, 168 A. 146, 147.

ABOLITION. The destruction, annihilation, abrogation, or extinguishment of anything. Peterson v. Pratt, 183 Iowa 462, 167 N.W. 101. Also the leave given by the sovereign or judges to a criminal accuser to desist from further prosecution. 25 Hen. VIII, c. 21.

In the Civil, French and German law, abolition is used nearly synonymously with pardon, remission, grace. Dig. 39, 4, 3, 3. There is, however, this difference: grace is the pardon, according to those laws, is the clemency which the prince extends to a man who has participated in a crime, without being a principal or accomplice; remission is made in cases of involuntary homicides, and self-defence. Abolition is used when the crime cannot be remitted. The prince then may, by letters of abolition, or extinguishment of anything. Peterson v. Pratt, 183 Iowa 462, 167 N.W. 101. Also the ABORTIFACIENT. In medical jurisprudence. A drug or medicine capable of, or used for, producing abortion.

ABORTION. The expulsion of the fcetus at a period of utero-gestation so early that it has not acquired the power of sustaining an independent life. The unlawful destruction, or the bringing forth prematurely, of the human foetus before the natural time of birth; State of Magnell, 51 A. 606, 3 Pennewill (Del.) 307. The act of bringing forth what is yet imperfect. Also the thing prematurely brought forth, or product of an untimely process. Sometimes loosely used for the offense of procuring a premature delivery; but strictly, the early delivering is the abortion; causing or procuring abortion is the full name of the offense. Wells v. New England Mut. L. Ins. Co., 191 Pa. 207, 43 A. 126, 53 L.R.A. 327.

ABORTIONIST. One who criminally produces abortions, or one who follows business or practices of crime of producing abortions. State v. Guaraneri, 59 R.I. 173, 194 A. 589, 592, 593.

ABORTIVE TRIAL. A term descriptive of the result when a case has gone off, and no verdict has been pronounced, without the fault, contrivance, or management of the parties. Jebb & B. 51.

ABORTUS. Lat. The fruit of an abortion; the child born before its time, incapable of life.

When used with reference to time, the term is of flexible significance, varying with the circumstances and the connection in which it is employed. Burlington Grocery Co. v. Heaphy’s Estate, 98 Vt. 122, 126 A. 525, 528. But its use does not necessarily render time immaterial, nor make a contract one terminable at will. Costello v. Siems-Carey Co., 140 Minn. 208, 167 N.W. 551, 552. In a charity party, “about to sail” means just ready to sail. [1893] 2 Q.B. 274. And when it is said that one is “about” to board a street car, it means “in the act of.” Fox v. Denver City Tramway Co., 57 Colo. 511, 143 P.278, 280. With relation to quantity, the term suggests only an estimate of probable amount. Barkemeyer Grain & Seed Co. v. Hannant, 66 Mont. 120, 213 P. 208, 210. Its import is that the actual quantity is a near approximation to that mentioned, and it has the effect of providing against accidental variations. Norrington v. Wright, 6 S.Ct. 12, 115 U.S. 288, 29 L. Ed. 366. It may be given practically the same effect as the phrase more or less. Pierce v. Miller, 107 Neb. 851, 187 N.W. 105, 107; Cargo under vessel charter, Steamship Co. of 1912 v. C. H. Pearson & Son Hardwood Co., C.C.A. N.Y., 30 F.2d 826, 829. Testimony as to speed, Casto v. Hansen, 123 Or. 20, 261 P. 428, 429. Near, period of gestation of still born child, Life & Casualty Ins. Co. v. Walters, 190 Miss. 761, 198 So. 746, 748; Todd v. City of New York, City Ct., N.Y. 23 N.Y.S.2d 884, 888. Carrying burglar’s tools in suitcase, Trousdale v. State, 168 Tenn. 210, 76 S.W. 2d 646, 647. Near the time. State ex rel. Nagle v. Leader Co., 97 Mont. 586, 37 P.2d 561, 564.

When used with reference to time, the term is of flexible significance, varying with the circumstances and the connection in which it is employed. Burlington Grocery Co. v. Heaphy’s Estate, 98 Vt. 122, 126 A. 525, 528. But its use does not necessarily render time immaterial, nor make a contract one terminable at will. Costello v. S.W.2d 748, 750. As to number, it merely implies an immediately behind defendant, who was seated in coupe of an automobile, Armstrong v. State, 98 Tex.Cr.R. 335, the hand or connected with the person, State v. Blazo

ABOUTISSEMENT. Fr. An abuttal or abutment. See Guyot, Repert. Univ. "Aboutissans."

ABOVE. Higher; superior. As, court above, plaintiff or defendant above. Above all incumbrances means in excess thereof; Williams v. McDonald, 42 N.J.Eq. 395, 7 A. 886. Principal; as distinguished from what is auxiliary or instrumental. 3 Bl.Comm. 291.

ABOVE CITED, or MENTIONED. Quoted before. A figurative expression taken from the ancient manner of writing books on scrolls, where whatever is mentioned or cited before in the same roll must be above. Encyc. Lond.

ABPATRUUS. Lat. A great-great-uncle; or, a great-great-grandfather’s brother (a bavi frater). Inst. 3, 6, 6; Dig. 38, 10, 3; Du Cange, Patruus. Called by Bracton and Fleta, abpatruus magirus. Bract. fol. 68b; Fleta, lib. 6, c. 2, § 17. It sometimes means uncle, and sometimes great-uncle.

ABRIDGE. To reduce or contract; usually spoken of written language.

Copyright Law

To epitomize; to reduce; to contract. It implies preserving the substance, the essence, of a work, in language suited to such a purpose. In making extracts there is no condensation of the author’s language, and hence no abridgment. To abridge requires the exercise of the mind; it is not copying. Between a compilation and an abridgment there is a clear distinction. A compilation consists of selected extracts from different authors; an abridgment is a condensation of the views of one author. Story v. Holcombe, 4 McLean, 306, 310, Fed.Cas.No.13,497.

Practice

To shorten a declaration or count by taking away or severing some of the substance of it. Brooke, Abr., Com., Dig. Abridgment; 1 Viner, Abr. 109. See Abridgment.

ABRIDGMENT. Condensation; contraction. An epitome or compendium of another and larger work, wherein the principal ideas of the larger work are summarily contained.

Abridgments of the law are brief digests of the law, arranged alphabetically. (1 Steph.Comm. 51.) The term "digest" has now supplanted that of "abridgment." Sweet.

ABRIDGMENT OF DAMAGES. The right of the court to reduce the damages in certain cases. Vide Brooke, tit. "Abridgment."

ABROAD. In English chancery law, beyond the seas.

ABROGATE. To annul, repeal, or destroy; to annul or repeal an order or rule issued by a subordinate authority; to repeal a former law by legislative act, or by usage.

ABROGATION. The destruction or annulling of a former law, by an act of the legislative power, by constitutional authority, or by usage.

It stands opposed to rogation; and is distinguished from derogation, which implies the taking away only some part of a law; from subrogation, which denotes the adding a clause to it; from dispensation, which only sets it aside in a particular instance; and from antiquation, which is the refusing to pass a law. Encyc. Lond. Implied abrogation takes place when the new law contains provisions which are positively contrary to former laws, without expressly abrogating such laws. Bernard v. Vignaud, 10 Mart.O.S. 563; and also where the order of things for which the law has been made no longer exists. See Ex parte Lum Poy, D.C., 23 F.2d 690.

For "Express Abrogation," see that title.

ABSCONDING. To go in a clandestine manner out of the jurisdiction of the courts, or to lie concealed, in order to avoid their process. Malvin v. Christoph, 54 Iowa, 562, 7 N.W. 6. To hide, conceal, or absent oneself clandestinely, with the intent to avoid legal process. Smith v. Johnson, 43 Neb. 754, 62 N.W. 217. Postponing limitations. Keck v. Pickens, 207 Ark. 757, 182 S.W.2d 873, 875. Fleeing from arresting or prosecuting officers of this state. Code Cr.Proc. art. 8. State v. Berryhill, 188 La. 549, 177 So. 663.

ABSCONDING DEBTOR. One who absconds from his creditors.

An absconding debtor is one who lives without the state, or who has intentionally concealed himself from his creditors, or withdrawn himself from the reach of their suits, with intent to frustrate their just demands. Thus, if a person departs from his usual residence, or remains absent therefrom, or conceals himself in his house, so that he cannot be served with process, with intent unlawfully to delay or defraud his creditors, he is an absconding debtor; but if he departs from the state or from his usual abode, with the intention of again returning, and without any fraudulent design, he has not absconded, nor absconded himself, within the intendment of the law. Doughnut Corporation of America v. Tsakirides, 121 N.J.L. 136, 1 A.2d 467, 469. A party may abscond, and subject himself to the operation of the attachment law against himself, without leaving the limits of the state. Field v. Adreon, 7 Md. 209. A debtor who is shut up from his creditors in his own house is an absconding debtor. Ives v. Curtiss, 2 Root (Conn.) 133. Salzman v. Robinson, 10 N.J.Misc.R. 51, 157 A. 547, 548.

ABSENCE

Absence is of a fivefold kind: (1) A necessary absence, as in banished or transported persons; this is entirely necessary. (2) Necessary and voluntary, as upon the account of the commonwealth, or in the service of the church. (3) A probable absence, according to the civilians, as that of students on the score of study. (4) Entirely voluntary, on account of trade, merchandise, and the like. (5) Absence cum dolo et culpæ, as not appearing to a writ, subpoena, citation, etc., or to delay or defeat creditors, or avoiding arrest, either on civil or criminal process. Ayliffe. Non-appearance, non-appearance, not merely that the party was not present in court vacating judgment. Strine v. Kaufman, 12 Neb. 423, 11 N.W. 867. In usual and natural signification, means physical absence. Inhabitants of Lanesborough v. Inhabitants of Ludlow, 250 Mass. 99, 145 N.E. 57, 58. Nonpresence, for official for service. Kurre v. American Indemnity Co. of Galveston, Tex., 223 Mo.App. 123, 299 F. 651, 658.

Presumption of Death Created

In Scotch Law, want or default of appearance. A decree is said to be in absence where the defender (defendant) does not appear. Ersk. Inst. bk. 4, tit. 3, § 6.

ABSENT

Being away from; at a distance from; not in company with.

Paine v. Drew, 44 N.H. 306, where it was held that the word when used as an adjective referring only to the condition or situation of the person or thing spoken of at the time of speaking without reference to any prior condition or situation of the same person or thing, but when used as a verb implies prior presence. It has also been held to mean "not being in a particular place at the time referred to," and not to import prior presence. The term absent defendants does not embrace non-resident defendants but has reference to parties resident in the state, but temporarily absent therefrom. Wheeler v. Wheeler, 35 Ill. App. 123. See, however, Selmer v. James Dickinson Farm Mortg. Co., D.C.111., 299 F. 651, 658, holding that a foreign corporation is "absent" from the state, and limitation does not run in its favor. Commonwealth's attorney is "absent" when disqualified or disabled from performing functions of office. Northcutt v. Howard, 279 Ky. 219, 130 S.W.2d 707, 72. A judge who resides in a country other than that from which he draws his rents. McCul. Pol. Econ.; 33 Brit. Quar. Rev. 455. One who is absent from his usual place of residence or domicile.

ABSENT-MINDEDNESS. A state of mind in which the person affected fails to respond to the ordinary demands on his attention. Webster. See Racine Tire Co. v. Grady, 205 Ala. 423, 88 So. 337.

ABSENTE. Lat. Being absent; often used in the old reports of one of the judges not present at the hearing of a cause. 2 Mod. 14. Absente Reo, The defendant being absent.

ABSENTEE. One who dwells abroad; a landlord who resides in a country other than that from which he draws his rents. McCul. Pol. Econ.; 33 Brit. Quar. Rev. 455. One who is absent from his usual place of residence or domicile.

ABSENTEES, or DES ABSENTEES. A parliament so called was held at Dublin, 10th May, 8 Hen. VIII. It is mentioned in letters patent 29 Hen. VIII.

ABSENTEM ACCIPERE DEBEMUS EUM QUI NON EST EO LOCI IN QUO PETITUR. We ought to consider him absent who is not in the place where he is demanded (or sought). Dig. 50, 16, 199.

ABSENTIA EJUS QUI REIPUBLICE CAUSA ABEST, NEQUE EI NEQUE ALII DAMNOSA ESSE DEBET. The absence of him who is away from his usual place of residence or domicile.

ABSOILE, ASSOIL, ASSOILE. To pardon; to deliver from excommunication. Staunford, Pl.Cr. 72; Kelham; Cowell.

ABSOLUTA SENTENTIA EXPOSITORE NON INDIGET. An absolute sentence or proposition (one that is plain without any scruple, or absolute without any saving) needs not an expositor. 2 Inst. 533.

ABSOLUTE. Complete; perfect; final; without any condition or incumbance; as an absolute bond (simpex obligatio) in distinction from a conditional bond. Unconditional; complete and perfect in itself; without relation to or dependence on other things or persons. Instruction as to an "absolute" gift, Ketch v. Smith, 131 Okt. 263, 268 P. 715, 717. Irrevocable, final. Gift inter vivos by husband, President and Directors of Manhattan Co. v. Janowitz, 14 N.Y.S.2d 375, 382, 172 Misc. 290. Within limitation or restriction, Comford v. Cantrell, 177 Tenn. 553, 151 S.W.2d 1076, 1077.
ABSOLUTISM. In politics. A system of government in which public power is vested in some person or persons, unchecked and uncontrolled by any law, institution, constitutional device, or coordinate body.

ABSOLVE. To set free, or release, as from obligation, debt, or responsibility. State ex rel. St. Louis Car Co. v. Hughes, 348 Mo. 125, 152 S.W.2d 193, 194.

ABSOLVITOR. In Scotch law. An acquittal; a decree in favor of the defender in any action.

ABSQUE. Without. Occurs in phrases taken from the Latin; such as those immediately following.

ABSQUE ALIQUO INDE REDEENDO. Lat. Without reserving any rent therefrom; without rendering anything therefrom. A term used of a free grant by the crown. 2 Rolle, Abr. 502.

ABSQUE CONSIDERATIONE CURVE. In old practice. Without the consideration of the court; without judgment. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 47, § 13.

ABSQUE HOC. Without this. These are technical words of denial, used in pleading at common law by way of special traverse, to introduce the negative part of the plea, following the affirmative part or inducement. Martin v. Hammon, 8 Pa. 270. See, also, Traverse.

ABSQUE I1%IPETITIONE VASTI. Without impeachment of waste; without accountability for waste; without liability to suit for waste. A clause anciently often inserted in leases (as the equivalent English phrase sometimes is) signifying that the tenant or lessee shall not be liable to suit (impetitio) or challenged, or called to account, for committing waste. Co. Litt. 220a; Litt. § 352. See Waste.

ABSTRACT OF A FINE. In old conveyancing. 2 Bl. Comm. 351. More commonly called the parties, the parcels of land, and the agreement, which in any manner affect said land, or any the writ of covenant, and the concord, naming the one of the parts of a fine, being an abstract of to abstract the funds of a bank. Sprague v. ABSTRACT, v. To take or withdraw from; as, estate or interest therein, together with _a state-de ABSQUE TALI CAUSA. Lat. Without such cause. A form of replication, now obsolete, in an action _ex delicto_ which works a general denial of the whole matter of the defendant's plea of of de injuria. Gould, Pl. c. 7, § 10; Steph. Pl. 191.

ABSTENTION. In French law. Keeping an heir from possession; also tacit renunciation of a succession by an heir. Merl. Repert.

ABSTRACT, v. To take or withdraw from; as, to abstract the funds of a bank. Sprague v. State, 188 Wis. 432, 206 N.W. 69, 70.

ABSTRACT OF A FINE. In old conveyancing. One of the parts of a fine, being an abstract of the writ of covenant, and the concord, naming the parties, the parcels of land, and the agreement. 2 Bl. Comm. 351. More commonly called the "note" of the fine. See Fine; Concord.

ABSTRACT OF RECORD. A complete history in short, abbreviated form of the case as found in the record, complete enough to show that the questions presented for review have been properly reserved. State ex rel. Wallace State Bank v. Trimble, 308 Mo. 278, 272 S.W. 72, 73. Synopsis or summary of facts, rather than table of content of transcript. Wing v. Brasher, 59 Mont. 10, 194 P. 1106, 1108. Abbreviated accurate and authentic history of proceedings. Brown v. Reichmann, 237 Mo.App. 136, 164 S.W.2d 201, 207.

ABSTRACT OF TITLE. A condensed history of the title to land, consisting of a synopsis or summary of the material or operative portion of all the conveyances, of whatever kind or nature, which in any manner affect said land, or any estate or interest therein, together with_a statement of all liens, charges, or liabilities to which the same may be subject, and of which it is in any way material for purchasers to be apprised. War. Abst. § 2. Stevenson v. Polk, 71 Iowa, 278, 32 N.W. 340.

ABSTRACT QUESTION. One which does not rest upon existing facts or rights. Morris Plan Bank of Fort Worth v. Ogden, Tex.Civ.App., 144 S.W.2d 998, 1004.

ABSTRACTION. Taking from with intent to injure or defraud, "wrongful abstraction" is "unauthorized and illegal taking or withdrawing of funds, etc., and appropriation thereof to taker's benefit." Pacific Coast Adjustment Bureau v. Indemnity Ins. Co. of North America, 115 Cal. App. 583, 2 P.2d 218, 219.

ABSORBENCY. That which is both physically and morally impossible; and that is to be regarded as morally impossible which is contrary to reason, so that it could not be imputed to a man in his right senses. State v. Hayes, 81 Mo. 574, 585. Anything which is so irrational, unnatural, or inconvenient that it cannot be supposed to have been within the intention of men of ordinary intelligence and discretion. Black, Interp. Laws, 104; Graves v. Scales, 172 N.C. 915, 90 S.E. 439; obviously and flatly opposed to the manifest truth; inconsistent with the plain dictates of common sense; logically contradictory; nonsensical; ridiculous. Wade v. Empire Dist. Electric Co., 98 Kan. 366, 158 P. 28, 30.

dant or extreme caution does no harm. 11 Co. 6; Co., 98 Kan. 366, 158 P. 28, 30.

ABUSE, n. Everything which is contrary to good order established by usage. Merl. Repert. Departure from use; improper or improper use. Action that would be necessary in ordinary affairs to, make one guilty of an "abuse" connotes conduct of a different grade than what is meant when a court is said to have "abused its discretion." Beck v. Wings Field, Inc., 122 F.2d 114, 116.

Civil Law

The destruction of the substance of a thing in using it. See Abuse, v.
Corporate Franchise or Entity

The abuse or misuse of its franchises by a corporation signifies any positive act in violation of the charter and in derogation of public right, willfully done or caused to be done; the use of rights or franchises as a pretext for wrongs and injuries to the public. People v. Atlantic Ave. R. Co., 125 N.Y. 513, 26 N.E. 622.

Discretion

"Abuse of discretion" is synonymous with a failure to exercise a sound, reasonable, and legal discretion. Disbarment, Adair v. Pennewill, 153 A. 859, 860, 4 W.W.Harr.(Del.) 390. It is a strict legal term indicating that appellate court is simply of opinion that there was commission of an error of law in the circumstances. Refusing motion to amend pleadings, Tunstall v. Lerner Shops, 160 S.C. 557, 159 S.E. 386. Motions to consolidate actions, Bishop v. Bishop, 164 S.C. 493, 162 S.E. 756, 757. Vacating judgment, Detroit Fidelity & Surety Co. v. Foster, 171 S.C. 121, 169 S.E. 871, 881. And it does not imply intentional wrong or bad faith, or misconduct, nor any reflection on the judge but means the clearly erroneous conclusion and judgment—one is that clearly against logic and effect of such facts as are presented in support of the application or against the reasonable and probable deductions to be drawn from the facts disclosed upon the hearing; an improvident exercise of discretion; an error of law. New trial, State v. Draper, 83 Utah, 115, 27 P.2d 39. Setting aside of decree pro confesso. Ex parte Jones, 246 Ala. 433, 20 So.2d 859, 862.

A discretion exercised to an end or purpose not justified by and clearly against reason and evidence. Trimmer v. State, 142 Okl. 278, 286 P. 783, 786; Seaba v. State, 290 P. 1098, 1101, 144 Okl. 295. Unreasonable departure from considered precedents and settled judicial custom, constituting error of law. Beck v. Wings Field, Inc., C.C.A. Pa., 122 F.2d 114, 116, 117. The term is commonly employed to justify an interference by a higher court with the exercise of discretionary power by a lower court and is said by some authorities to imply not merely error of judgment, but perversity of will, passion, prejudice, partiality, or moral delinquency. Thus the exercise of a sound judgment, however erroneous it may appear to be, is not an abuse of discretion. Stroup v. Raymond, 183 Pa. 279, 38 A. 626. Where a court does not exercise a discretion in the sense of being discreet, circumspect, prudent, and exercising cautious judgment, it is an abuse of discretion. State Board of Medical Examiners v. Spears, 79 Colo. 588, 247 P. 563, 565. Difference in judicial opinion is not synonymous with "abuse of judicial discretion" as respects setting aside verdict as against evidence. Belock v. State Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 106 Vt. 435, 175 A. ,19, 22.

Distress

The using an animal or chattel distrained, which makes the distrainer liable as for a conversion.

Female Child

Process

There is said to be an abuse of process when an adversary, through the malicious and unfounded use of some regular legal proceeding, obtains some advantage over his opponent. Wharton. Employment of process for doing an act clearly outside authority conveyed by express terms of writ. Shane v. Gulf Refining Co., 114 Pa.Super. 87, 173 A. 738, 740.

The gist of an action for "abuse of process" is improper use or perversion of process after it has been issued. Publix Drug Co. v. Breyer Ice Cream Co., 347 Pa. 346, 32 A.2d 413, 415. Holding of accused incommunicado before complying with warrant requiring accused to be taken before magistrate. People v. Crabb, 372 Ill. 347, 24 N.E.2d 46, 49. Warrant of arrest to coerce debtor. In re Williams, 233 Mo.App. 1174, 128 S.W.2d 1098, 1105. A malicious abuse of legal process occurs where the party employs it for some unlawful object, not the purpose which it is intended by the law to effect; in other words, a perversion of it. Lauzon v. Charroux, 18 R.I. 467, 28 A. 975. Vybiral v. Schildhauer, 265 N.W. 241, 244, 130 Neb. 433; Silverman v. Ufa Eastern Division Distribution, 236 N.Y.S. 18, 20, 135 Misc. 814. Thus, where the purpose of a proceeding for issuance of a check was to collect a debt, the prosecution constituted an abuse of criminal process. Hotel Supply Co. v. Reid, 16 Ala.App. 563, 80 So. 137, 139. Regular and legitimate use of process, allaying any with a bad intent, is not "abuse of process." Priest v. Union Agency, 174 Tenn. 304, 125 S.W.2d 142, 143. Action for "abuse of process" is distinguished from action for "malicious prosecution," in that action for abuse of process rests upon improper use of regularly issued process, while "malicious prosecution" has reference to wrong in issuance of process. Clikos v. Long, 231 Ala. 424, 165 So. 394, 396; Melinis v. Atlantic Inv. Corporation, 137 Or. 648, 4 P.2d 314, 315; Lobel v. Trade Bank of New York, 229 N.Y.S. 778, 781, 132 Misc. 643.

ABUSE, v. To make excessive or improper use of a thing, or to employ it in a manner contrary to the natural or legal rules for its use; to make an extravagant or excessive use, as to abuse one's authority.

In the civil law, the borrower of a chattel which, in its nature, cannot be used without consuming it, such as wine or grain, is said to abuse the thing borrowed if he uses it. It has been held to constitute misuse: Erie & North-Eastern R. Co. v. Casey, 26 Pa. 287; to signify to injure, diminish in value, or wear away by improper use; "id.;" to be synonymous with injury; Dawkins v. State, 58 Ala. 376, 29 Am. Rep. 754.

ABUT. To reach, to touch. In old law, the ends were said to abut, the sides to adjoin. Cro. Jac. 184. And see Lawrence v. Killam, 11 Kan. 499, 511; Springfield v. Green, 120 Ill. 269, 11 N.E. 261. To take a new direction; as where a bonding line changes its course. Spelman, Gloss. Abutare. To touch at the end; be contiguous; join at a border or boundary; terminate; to end at; to border on; to reach or touch with an end. Assessment of property, Hensler v. City of Ana- cortes, 140 Wash. 184, 248 P. 406, 407. The term "abutting" implies a closer proximity than the term "adjacent." Reversion of vacated park land,

No intervening land. Johnson v. Town of Watertown, 131 Conn. 84, 38 A.2d 1, 4. Property at end of street sought to be vacated. Messinger v. City of Cincinnati, 36 Ohio App. 337, 173 N.E. 260, 262. Widen street, leaving free access to paved street, property within assessment statutes. Goodman v. City of Birmingham, 223 Ala. 199, 135 So. 336, 337. Though the usual meaning of the word is that the things spoken of do actually adjoin, "bounding and abutting" have no, such inflexible meaning as to require lots assessed actually to touch the improvement; Cohen v. Cleveland, 43 Ohio St. 190, 1 N.E. 589.

ABUTTALS. Fr. The butttings or boundings of lands, showing to what other lands, highways, or places they belong or are abutting. Termes de la Ley; Cowell; Toml. It has been used to express the end boundary lines as distinguished from those on the sides, as "buttais and sidings"; Cro.Jac. 183.

ABUTTER. One whose property abuts, is contiguous, or joins at a border or boundary, as where no other land, road, or street intervenes.

ABUTTING OWNER. An owner of land which abuts or adjoins. The term usually implies that the relative parts actually adjoin, but is sometimes loosely used without implying more than close proximity. See Abut.

Where five-foot strip between property assessed for paving and street was conveyed to city but not used for street purposes, property assessed held not "abutting property." Davidson v. Salt Lake City, 81 Utah 203, 17 P.2d 234, 237. Property owners held "abutting property owners," subject to sewer assessment, notwithstanding street was widened from 40 to 50 feet when incorporated in state highway, and city bought the extra 5 feet on either side. Carey-Reed Co. v. Sisco, 251 Ky. 22, 64 S.W.2d 430, 433. Railroad in street was not "abutting owner"; Town of Lenoir v. Carolina & N. W. Ry. Co., 194 N.C. 710, 140 S.E. 618, 619.

AC ETIAM. (Lat. And also.) The introduction of the statement of the real cause of action, used in those cases where it was necessary to allege a fictitious cause of action to give the court jurisdiction, and also the real cause in compliance with the statutes. It is sometimes written acetiam. 2 Stra. 922. See Bill of Middlesex under Bill, definition 2.

AC ETIAM BILLIE. And also to a bill. See Ac Etiam.

AC SI. (Lat. As if.) Townsh. P1. 23, 27. These words frequently occur in old English statutes.

Lord Bacon expounds their meaning in the statute of uses: "The statute gives entry, not simpliciter, but with an ac si." Bac. Read. Uses, Works, iv. 195.

ACADEME. Place of academic study. Sisters of Mercy v. Town of Hooksett, 93 N.H. 301, 42 A.2d 222, 225.

ACADEMY. An institution of learning. An association of experts in some particular branch of art, literature, or science.

In its original meaning, an association formed for mutual improvement, or for the advancement of science or art; in later use, a species of educational institution, of a grade between the common school and the college. Academy of Fine Arts v. Philadelphia County, 22 Pa. 496; School holding rank between college and common school, U. S. ex rel. Jacobides v. Day, C.C.A.N.Y., 32 F.2d 542, 544; Sisters of Mercy v. Town of Hooksett, 93 N.H. 301, 42 A.2d 222, 225. See School.

ACAPTE, In French feudal law. A species of relief; a seignorial right due on every change of a tenant. A feudal right which formerly prevailed in Languedoc and Guyenne, being attached to that species of heritable estates which were granted on the contract of emphyteusis. Guyot, Inst. Feod. c. 5, § 12.

ACEDAS AD CURIAM. (Lat. That you go to court.) An original writ out of chancery directed to the sheriff, for the purpose of removing a replevin suit from a Court Baron or a hundred court to one of the superior courts of law. It directs the sheriff to go to the lower court, and enroll the proceedings and send up the record. See Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 18; Dy. 169; 3 Bl. Comm. 34.

ACEDAS AD VICE COMITEM. L. Lat. (You go to the sheriff.) A writ formerly directed to the coroners of a county in England, commanding them to go to the sheriff, where the latter had suppressed and neglected to return a writ of pone, and to deliver a writ to him requiring him to return it. Reg. Orig. 83. See Pone.

ACCELERATION. The shortening of the time for the vesting in possession of an expectant interest. Wharton. Hastening of the enjoyment of an estate which was otherwise postponed to a later period. Blackwell v. Virginia Trust Co., 177 Va. 299, 14 S.E.2d 301, 304.

If the life estate fails for any reason, the remainder is "accelerated". Elliott v. Brittlinger, 376 Ill. 147, 33 N.E. 2d 199, 201, 133 A.L.R. 1364. The word is also used in reference to contracts for payment of money in which is usually called an "acceleration clause" by which the time for payment of the debt is hastened or advanced because of breach of some condition such as failure to pay interest when due, McCormick v. Daggett, 162 Ark. 16, 257 S.W. 358; insolvency of the maker, Wright v. Seaboard Steel & Manganese Corporation, C.C.A.N.Y., 272 F. 807; or failure to keep mortgaged premises insured, Porter v. Schroll, 93 Kan. 297, 144 P. 216.

ACCEPT. To receive with approval or satisfaction; to receive with intent to retain. See Morris v. State, 102 Ark. 513, 145 S.W. 213, 214. Also, in the capacity of drawee of a bill, to recognize the draft, and engage to pay it when due. It is not equivalent to "acquiesce." Applett v. Empire Inv. Co., 99 Or. 533, 194 P. 461, 462. Admit and agree to; accede to or consent to; receive with approval; Blair, 243 Ky. 84, 47 S.W.2d 741, 742. Means something more than to receive, meaning to adopt, to agree to carry out provisions. Assignee of lease, Pickier v. Mershon, 212 Iowa, 447, 236 N.W. 382, 385; Central State Bank v. Herrick, 214 Iowa 379, 240 N.W. 242, 246. Renewal health and accident policy premiums, Prescott v. Mutual Ben. Health and Accident Ass'n, Fla., 183 So. 311, 314, 119 A.L.R. 525.

ACCEPTANCE. The taking and receiving of anything in good part, and as it were a tacit agreement to a preceding act, which might have been defeated or avoided if such acceptance had not been made. Brooke, Abr. The act of a person to whom a thing is offered or tendered by another, whereby he receives the thing with the intention of retaining it, such intention being evidenced by a sufficient act. JEtna Inv. Corporation v. Chandler Landscape & Floral Co., 227 Mo.App. 17, 50 S.W.2d 195, 197.

Bill of Exchange

An engagement to pay the bill in money when due. 4 East 72; Hunt v. Security State Bank, 91 Or. 362, 179 P. 248, 251.

The act by which the person on whom a bill of exchange is drawn (called the 'drawee') assents to the request of the drawer to pay it, or, in other words, engages, or makes himself liable, to pay it when due. Bell-Wayland Co. v. Bank of Sugden, 95 Okl. 67, 218 P. 705. It may be by parol or in writing, and either general or special, absolute or conditional; and it may be implied, as well as expressly given. 3 Kent, Comm. 83, 85; Story, Bills, §§ 238, 251. Telegram directing drawer to draw draft. Hoffer v. Eastland Nat. Bank, Tex.Civ.App., 169 S.W.2d 275, 278. Certification at request of the payee or holder. Welch v. Bank of Manhattan Co., 35 N.Y.S.2d 894, 895, 264 App.Div. 906. But the usual and regular mode of acceptance is by the drawee's writing across the face of the bill the word "accepted," and subscribing his name; after which he is termed the acceptor. Story, Bills, § 243.

Contracts

Compliance by offeree with terms and conditions of offer would constitute an "acceptance". Davis & Clanton v. C. I. T. Corporation, 190 S.C. 151, 2 S.E.2d 382, 383.

Deed

Act by which vendee vests himself with title to the property. Hardin v. Kazee, 238 Ky. 526, 38 S.W.2d 438.

Insurance

In a contract of insurance, the "acceptance" occurs when insurer agrees to accept application and to issue policy. Acacia Mut. Life Ass'n v. Berry, 54 Ariz. 208, 94 P.2d 770, 772. Delay or inaction on the part of an insurer cannot constitute an "acceptance". French American Reinsurance Corporation v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., D.C.N.Y., 43 F.Supp. 494, 498. More than mere mental resolution or determination on part of insurer to accept application. Must be communicated to applicant. Limbaugh v. Monarch Life Ins. Co., Springfield, Mass., Mo.App., 84 S.W.2d 208, 212.

Marine Insurance

The acceptance of an abandonment by the underwriter is his assent, either express or to be implied from the surrounding circumstances, to the sufficiency and regularity of the abandonment. Rap. & Law.

Sales

An acceptance implies, not only the physical fact of receiving the goods, but also the intention of retaining them. Illinois Fuel Co. v. Mobile & O. R. Co., 319 Mo. 899, 8 S.W.2d 834, 841.

Retaining and using goods. Ohio Electric Co. v. Wisconsin-Minnesota Light & Power Co., 161 Wis. 632, 155 N.W. 112, 113. Pressure tanks, Dunck Tank Works v. Sutherland, 236 Wis. 83, 294 N.W. 510, 513. Coal stokers used for 15 months before request for removal, United States v. Lux Laundry Co., C.C.A.Ind., 118 F.2d 848, 849. Where goods are expressly rejected, receipt does not mean acceptance. State Board of Administration v. Roquemore, 218 Ala. 120, 117 So. 757, 760. The acceptance of goods sold under a contract which would be void by the statute of frauds without delivery and acceptance involves something more than the act of the vendor in the delivery. It requires that the vendee should also act, and that his act should be of such a nature as to indicate that he receives and accepts the goods delivered as his property. He must receive and retain the articles delivered, intending there-by to assume the title to them, to constitute the acceptance mentioned in the statute. Rodgers v. Phillips, 40 N.Y. 524. See, also, Snow v. Warner, 10 Met. (Mass.) 132, 43 Am. Dec. 417. There must be some unequivocal act, with intent to take possession as owner. Vacuum Ash & Soot Conveyer Co. v. Huyler's, 101 N.J.Law, 147, 127 A. 203, 204. Title and possession must be in unrestricted control of buyer so as not to permit of recall or rescission. Mellen Produce Co. v. Fink, 225 Wis. 90, 273 N.W. 538. Mere words are insufficient to establish "delivery and receipt." Mellen Produce Co. v. Fink, 225 Wis. 90, 273 N.W. 538, 542.

The following are the principal varieties of acceptances:

Absolute. An express and positive agreement to pay the bill according to its tenor.

Express. An undertaking in direct and express terms to pay the bill; an absolute acceptance.

Implied. An undertaking to pay the bill inferred from acts of the drawee of a character which fairly warrant such an inference. In case of a bilateral contract, "acceptance" of an offer need not be expressed, but may be shown by any words or acts indicating the offeree's assent to the Qualified. One either conditional or partial, and which introduces a variation in the sum, time, mode, or place of payment.

Supra protest. An acceptance by a third person, after protest of the bill for non-acceptance by the drawee, to save the honor of the drawer or some particular indorser. A. general acceptance is an absolute acceptance precisely in conformity with the tenor of the bill itself, and not qualified by any statement, condition, or change. Todd v. Bank of Kentucky, 3 Bush (Ky.) 628. A special acceptance is the qualified acceptance of a bill of exchange, as where it is accepted as payable at a particular place "and not

ACCEPTANCE

ACCEPTANCE AU BESOIN. Fr, In French law. Acceptance in case of need; an acceptance by one on whom a bill is drawn au besoin, that is, in case of refusal or failure of the drawee to accept. Story, Bills, §§ 65, 254, 255.

ACCEPTARE, Civil Law

Lat. To accept; to assent; to assent to a promise made by another. Gro. de J. B. lib. 2, c. 11, § 14.

Pleading To accept. Acceptavit, he accepted. 2 Strange, 817. Non acceptavit, he did not accept. 4 Man. & G. 7.

ACCEPTEUR PAR INTERVENTION. In French law. Acceptor of a bill for honor.

ACCEPTATION. In the civil and Scotch law. A release made by a creditor to his debtor of his debt without receiving any consideration. Ayl. Pand. tit. 26, p. 570. It is a species of donation, but not subject to the forms of the latter, and is valid unless in fraud of creditors. Merl. Repert.

The verbal extinction of a verbal contract, with a declaration that the debt has been paid when it has not; or the acceptance of something merely imaginary in satisfaction of a verbal contract. Sanders' Just. Inst. (5th Ed.) 386.

ACCEPTOR. The person who accepts a bill of exchange, (generally the drawee,) or who engages to be primarily responsible for its payment. Nissenbaum v. State, 38 Ga.App. 253, 143 S.E. 776, 777.

ACCEPTOR SUPRA PROTEST. One who accepts a bill which has been protested, for the honor of the drawer or any one of the indorsers.

ACCESS. Approach; or the means, power, or opportunity of approaching. Sometimes importing the occurrence of sexual intercourse, Jackson v. Jackson, 182 Okt. 74, 76 P.2d 1062, 1066; otherwise as importing opportunity of communication for that purpose as between husband and wife.

In real property law, the term "access" denotes the right vested in the owner of land which adjoins a road or other highway to go and return from his own land to the highway without obstruction. Cobb v. Commissioners of Lincoln Park, 202 Ill. 427, 67 N.E. 5, 8. "Access" to property does not necessarily carry with it possession. People v. Brennauer, 166 N.Y.S. 801, 806, 101 Misc. 156. A deed, however, which conveys land and "also the right of access to the adjoining park and use of spring on same," may be deemed to convey not merely the right to pass through the park in order to reach the spring, but to convey a right of entry into the park as a park and by implication, the right to the use and enjoyment of the park. Goetz v. Knoxville Power & Light Co., 154 Tenn. 545, 290 S.W. 409, 414.

The right of "access" as applied to a private wharf on public lands merely means that there may not be built an obstruction separating the lands from the navigable highway. City of Oakland v. Hogan, 41 Cal.App.2d 333, 106 P.2d 987, 995.

The right of "access to public records" includes not only a legal right of access but a reasonable opportunity to avail oneself of the same. American Surety Co. of New York v. Sandberg, D.C.Wash., 225 F. 150, 155.

Canon Law

The right to some benefice at some future time.

ACCESSORY. See Accessory.

ACCESSIO. In Roman law. An increase or addition; that which lies next to a thing, and is supplementary and necessary to the principal thing; which arises or is produced from the principal thing; an "accessory obligation" (q. v.). Calvinus, Lex. Jurid.

One of the modes of acquiring property, being the extension of ownership over that which grows from, or is united to, an article which one already possesses. Mather v. Chapman, 40 Conn. 382, 397, 16 Am.Rep. 46.

Accessio includes both accession and accretion as used in the common law. See Adjunctio.
ACCESSORY. Coming into possession of a right or office; increase; augmentation; addition.

The right to all which one's own property produces, whether that property be movable or immovable; and the right to that which is united to it by accession, either naturally or artificially. 2 Kent, 360; 2 Bl.Comm. 404; Franklin Service Stations v. Sterling Motor Truck Co. of N.E., 50 R.I. 336, 147 A. 754, 755.

Riparian owners' right to abandoned river beds and rights of alluvion by accretion and reliction, Manry v. Robison, 122 Tex. 213, 56 S.W.2d 438, 443, 444.

A principle derived from the civil law, by which the owner of property becomes entitled to all which it produces, and to all that is added or united to it, either naturally or artificially, (that is, by the labor or skill of another.) even where such addition extends to a change of form or materials; and by which, on the other hand, the possessor of property becomes entitled to it, as against the original owner, where the addition made to it by his skill and labor is of greater value than the property itself, or where the change effected in its form is so great as to render it impossible to restore it to its original shape. Twin City Motor Co. v. Rouzer Motor Co., 197 N.C. 371, 148 S.E. 461, 463. In Blackwood Tire & Vulcanizing Co. v. Auto Storage Co., 133 Tenn. 515, 182 S.W. 576, L.R.A.1916E, 254, Ann.Cas.1917C, 1168, this principle was applied in favor of the conditional seller who, on nonpayment, retook the automobile sold, together with tire casings which the buyer had fitted thereto. Valley Chevrolet Co. v. O. S. Stapley Co., 50 Anz. 417, 72 P.2d 945.

International Law

The absolute or conditional acceptance by one or several states of a treaty already concluded between other sovereignties. Merl. Repert. It may be of two kinds: First, the formal entrance of a third state into a treaty so that such state becomes a party to it; and this can only be with the consent of the original parties. Second, a state may accede to a treaty between other states solely for the purpose of guarantee, in which case, though a party, it is affected by the treaty only as a guarantor. 1 Oppenheim, Int.L. sec. 532. See Adhesion.

Also, the commencement or inauguration of a sovereign's reign.

ACCESSION, DEED OF. In Scotch law. A deed executed by the creditors of a bankrupt or insolvent debtor, by which they approve of a trust given by their debtor for the general behoof, and bind themselves to concur in the plans proposed for extricating his affairs. Bell, Diet.

ACCESSORIUM NON DUCIT, SED SEQUITUR SUUM PRINCIPALE, Co. Litt. 152a, 389a. That which is the accessory or incident does not lead, but follows, its principal.

ACCESSORIUS SEQUITUR NATURAM SUI PRINCIPALIS. An accessory follows the nature of his principal. 3 Inst. 139. One who is accessory to a crime cannot be guilty of a higher degree of crime than his principal.

ACCESSORY. Anything which is joined to another thing as an ornament, or to render it more perfect, or which accompanies it, or is connected with it, as an incident, or as subordinate to it, or which belongs to or with it; for example, the halter of a horse, the frame of a picture, the keys of a house.

Adjunct or accompaniment. Louis Werner Saw Mill Co. v. White, 205 La. 242, 17 So.2d 264, 270. A sale of land carried with it the standing timber as an "accessory." Woollums v. Hewitt, 142 La. 597, 77 So. 295, 296.

Automobile Accessories

Criminal Law

Contributing to or aiding in the commission of a crime. One who, without being present at the commission of a felonious offense, becomes guilty of such offense, not as a chief actor, but as a participant, as by command, advice, instigation, or concealment; either before or after the fact or commission; a particeps criminis. 4 Bl.Comm. 35; Cowell.

An "accessory" to a crime is always an "accomplice." People v. Ah Gee, 37 Cal.App. 1, 174 P. 371, 373. In certain crimes, there can be no accessories; all who are concerned are principals. These are (according to many authorities) treason, and all offenses below the degree of felony: 4 Bla. Comm. 35; Com. v. McAtee, 8 Dana (Ky.) 28; Williams v. State, 12 Smedes & M. (Miss.) 58.

Accessory Before the Fact

One who, being absent at the time a crime is committed, yet assists, procures, counsels, incites, induces, encourages, engages, or commands another to commit it. 4 Steph., Comm. 90, note n. People v. Owen, 241 Mich. 111, 216 N.W. 434. United States v. Pritchard, D.C.S.C., 55 F.Supp. 201, 203; rape, Clayton v. State, 244 Ala. 10, 13 So.2d 420, 422.

Accessory During the Fact

One who stands by without interfering or giving such help as may be in his power to prevent the commission of a criminal offense. Farrell v. People, 8 Colo.App. 524, 46 P. 841.

Accessory After the Fact

One who, having full knowledge that a crime has been committed, conceals it from the magistrate, and harbors, assists, or protects the person charged with, or convicted of, the crime. Vernon's Ann.C.C.P. art. 53.

All persons who, after the commission of any felony, conceal or aid the offender, with knowledge that he has committed a felony, and with intent that he may avoid or escape from arrest, trial, conviction, or punishment, are accessories.
An accessory after the fact is a person who, knowing a felony to have been committed by another, receives, relieves, comforts or assists the felon, in order to enable him to escape from punishment, or the like. Buck v. Commonwealth, 116 Va. 1031, 83 S.E. 390, 393. Knowledge, or denial of knowledge, of perpetration of crime, or silence does not make one an "accessory after the fact." Commonwealth v. Giacobbe, 341 Pa. 187, 19 A.2d 71, 75. Cantu v. State, 135 S.W.2d 705, 710, 141 Tex.Cr.R. 99. But affirmative action by false testimony or otherwise usable by accused to escape punishment constitutes one "accessory" as to his testimony. Fisher v. State, 34 S.W.2d 293, 294, 117 Tex.Cr.R. 552; false statements to sheriff relative to defendant's connection with homicide in order to evade arrest, Littles v. State, 111 Tex.Cr.R. 500, 14 S.W.2d 853, 854.

Aiders and Abettors Distinguished

The concept of an "accessory before the fact" presupposes a prearrangement to do the criminal act, and to constitute one an "alder and abettor" he must be on the ground and by his presence aid, encourage or incite the principal. Morel v. United States, C.C.A.Ohio, 127 F.2d 827, 830, 831.

Principal Distinguished

"Principal in the second degree," as distinguished from "accessory before the fact," is one who aids in commission of felony by being either actually or constructively present, aiding, and abetting commission of felony, when perpetrated. Neumann v. State, 116 Fla. 98; 156 So. 237, 239.

ACCESSORY ACTION. In Scotch practice. An action which is subservient or auxiliary to another. Of this kind are actions of "proving the tenant," by which lost deeds are restored; and actions of "transumpts," by which copies of principal deeds are certified. Bell, Dict.

ACCESSORY CONTRACT. In the civil law. A contract which is incident or auxiliary to another principal contract; such as the engagement of a surety. Poth. Obl. pt. 1, c. 1, § 1, art. 2.

A principal contract is one entered into by both parties on their own accounts, or in the several qualities they assume. An accessory contract is made for assuring the performance of a prior contract, either by the same parties or by others; such as suretyship, mortgage, and pledge. Blaisdell v. Coe, 83 N.H. 167, 139 A. 758, 65 A.L.R. 626.

ACCESSORY OBLIGATION.

Civil Law

An obligation which is incident to another or principal obligation; the obligation of a surety. Poth. Obl. pt. 2, c. 1, § 6.

Scotch Law

Obligations to antecedent or primary obligations, such as obligations to pay interest, etc. Ersk. Inst. lib. 3, tit. 3, § 60.

See, further, Obligation.

ACCESSORY TO ADULTERY. Implies more than connivance, which is merely knowledge with consent. A conniver abstains from interference; an accessory directly commands, advises, or procures the adultery. 20 & 21 Vict. c. 85, §§ 29, 31.

ACCIDENT. The word "accident" is derived from the Latin verb "accidere" signifying "fall upon, befall, happen, chance." In an etymological sense anything that happens may be said to be an accident and in this sense, the word has been defined as befalling; a change; a happening: an incident; an occurrence or event. In its most commonly accepted meaning, or in its ordinary or popular sense, the word may be defined as meaning a fortuitous circumstance, event, or happening. An event happening without any human agency, or if happening wholly or partly through human agency, an event which under the circumstances is unusual and unexpected by the person to whom it happens; an unusual, fortuitous, unexpected, unforeseen or unlooked for event, happening or occurrence; an unusual or unexpected result attending the operation or performance of a usual or necessary act or event; chance or contingency; fortune; mishap; some sudden and unexpected event taking place without expectation, upon the instant, rather than something which continues, progresses or develops; something happening by chance; something unforeseen, unexpected, unusual, extraordinary or phenomenal, taking place not according to the usual course of things or events, out of the range of ordinary calculations; that which exists or occurs abnormally, or an uncommon occurrence; the word may be employed as denoting a calamity, casualty, catastrophe, disaster, an undesirable or unfortunate happening; any unexpected personal injury resulting from any unforeseen for mishap or occurrence; any unpleasant or unfortunate occurrence, that causes injury, loss, suffering or death; some untoward occurrence aside from the usual course of events. Adams v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 136 Pa.Super. 454, 7 A.2d 544, 547; without known or assignable cause, Ramsay v. Sullivan Mining Co., 51 Idaho 366, 6 P.2d 856, 858.

In its proper use the term excludes negligence; Dallas Ry. & Terminal Co. v. Allen, Tex.Civ.App., 43 S.W.2d 165, 170; that is, an accident is an event which occurs without the fault, carelessness, or want of proper circumspection of the person affected, or which could not have been avoided by the use of that kind and degree of care necessary to the exigency and in the circumstances in which he was placed. Brown v. Kendall, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 292; essential requirement being that happening be one to which human fault does not contribute, Hogan v. Kansas City Public Service Co., 322 Mo. 1103, 19 S.W.2d 707, 713, 65 A.L.R. 129; happening of an event without any human agency, Terry v. Woodmen Accident Co., 225 Mo.App. 1223, 34 S.W.2d 163, 164. It has been said, moreover, that the word "accident" does not have a settled legal signification; Klopfenstein v. Union Traction Co., 112 Kan. 370, 212 P. 1097, 1098; and that in its ordinary meaning it does not negative the idea of negligence on the part of the person whose physical act caused the occurrence. Campbell v. Jones, 73 Wash. 688, 132 P. 635, 636. Not merely inevitable casualty or the act of providence, or what is technically called vis major. or irresistible force. Gardner v. State, 1 N.Y. S.2d 994, 997, 166 Misc. 113.

See Act of God.

Automobiles

The word "accident" as used in automobile liability policy requiring notice of any "accident" to be given to the insurer as a condition precedent to liability means an untoward and unforeseen occurrence in the operation of the automobile which results in injury to the person or property of another. Ohio Casualty Ins. Co. v. Marr, C.C.A. 1984, 98 F.2d 973, 975.

Connotes event which occurs without one’s foresight or expectation, and does not exclude negligence. American Indemnity Co. v. Jamison, Tex. Civ. App., 62 S.W.2d 197; without intention or design, Rothman v. Metropolitan Casualty Ins. Co., 134 Ohio St. 241, 16 N.E.2d 417, 421, 117 A. L. R. 1169.

The word "accident," requiring operator of vehicle to stop immediately in case of accident, contemplates any situation occurring on the highway wherein he so operates his automobile as to cause injury to the property or person of another using the same highway. State v. Masters, 10 G.W.Va. 46, 144 S.E. 718, 719.

Equity

Such an unforeseen event, misfortune, loss, act, or omission as is not the result of any negligence or misconduct in the party. Engler v. Knoblaugh, 131 Mo.App. 481, 110 S.W. 16.

Occurrence, not the result of negligence or misconduct of the party seeking relief in relation to a contract, as was not anticipated by the parties when the same was entered into, and which gives an undue advantage to one of them over another in a court of law. White & Hamilton Lumber Co. v. Foster, 157 Ga. 493, 122 S.E. 29, 30.

Insurance Contracts

An accident within accident insurance policies is an event happening without any human agency, or, if happening through such agency, an event which, under circumstances, is unusual and not expected by the person to whom it happens. Sizemore v. National Casualty Co., 108 W.Va. 550, 151 S.E. 841.

May be inflicted intentionally and maliciously by one not the agent of the insured, if unintentional on the part of the insured. Goodwin v. Continental Casualty Co., 175 Okl. 469, 53 P.2d 241, 243.

A more comprehensive term than "negligence," and in its common signification the word means an unexpected happening without intention or design. Sontag v. Galer, 279 Mass. 309, 181 N.E. 182, 183.

Accidental injury or death is an unintended and undesigned result arising from acts done, while injury or death by "accidental means" is a result arising from acts unintentionally done. Adams v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 136 Pa. Super. 454, 7 A.2d 544, 547.

Maritime Law and Marine Insurance

"Accidents of navigation" or "accidents of the sea" are such as are peculiar to the sea or to usual navigation or the action of the elements, which do not happen by the intervention of man, and are not to be avoided by the exercise of proper prudence, foresight, and skill. The G. R. Booth, 19 S.Ct. 9, 171 U.S. 450, 43 L.Ed. 234. See also Perils of the Sea.

Practice

Workmen’s Compensation

Term "accident," within Workmen’s Compensation Act, has been defined as a befalling; an event that takes place without one’s foresight or expectation; an undesigned, sudden, and unexpected event; chance; contingency; often, an undesigned and unforeseen occurrence of an afflictive or unfortunate character; casualty; mishap; as, to die by an accident. Its synonyms are chance, contingency, mishap, mischance, misfortune, disaster, calamity, catastrophe. Term “accidental” has been defined as happening by chance, or unexpectedly; taking place not according to the usual course of things; casual; fortuitous; as, an accidental visit. Its synonyms are undesigned, unintended, chance, unforeseen, unexpected, unpremeditated; accessory, collateral, secondary, subordinate; extrinsic, extraneous, additional, adscititious, dependent, conditional. Indian Territory Illuminating Oil Co. v. Williams, 157 Okl. 80, 10 P.2d 1093, 1094.

With or without negligence. Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. v. Sexton, 242 Ky. 266, 46 S.W.2d 87, 88.

ACCIDENTAL KILLING. One resulting from an act which is lawful and lawfully done under a reasonable belief that no harm is possible;—distinguished from "involuntary manslaughter," which is the result of an unlawful act, or of a lawful act done in an unlawful way. Rowe v. Commonwealth, 206 Ky. 803, 268 S.W. 571, 573.

ACCIDENTAL VEIN. See Vein.

ACCIDERE. Lat. To fall; fall in; come to hand; happen. Judgment is sometimes given against an executor or administrator to be satisfied out of assets quando acciderint; e., when they shall come to hand. See Quando Accidertint.

ACCION. In Spanish law. A right of action; also the method of judicial procedure for the recovery of property or a debt. Escriche, Die. Leg. 49. Wilder v. Lambert, 91 Tex. 510, 44 S.W. 281, 284.

ACcipere Quid ut justitiiam facias, non est tam accipere quam extorquere. To accept anything as a reward for doing justice is rather extorting than accepting. Lofft, 72.

Accipitare. To pay relief to lords of manors. Capitali domino accipitare, e., to pay a relief, homage, or obedience to the chief lord on becoming his vassal. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 50.

ACCOLA.

Civil Law

One who inhabits or occupies land near a place, as one who dwells by a river, or on the bank of a river. Dig. 43, 13, 3, 6.

Feudal Law

A husbandman; an agricultural tenant; a tenant at a manor. Speciman. A name given to a class of villeins in Italy. Barr, St. 302.

ACCOMENDA. In maritime law. A contract between the owner of goods and the master of a ship, by which the former intrusts the property to the latter to be sold by him on their joint account.

In such case, two contracts take place: First, the contract called mandatum, by which the owner of the property gives the master power to dispose of it; and the contract of partnership, in virtue of which the profits are to be divided between them. One party runs the risk of losing his capital; the other, his labor. If the sale produces no profit, the act is not for accommodation. "Bazer v. Grimmett, 39 Cal.App. 101, 178 P. 312, 313. Must not receive any benefit or consideration directly or indirectly, and transaction must be one primarily for the benefit of the payee. First Trust Co. of Lincoln v. Anderson, 135 Neb. 397, 281 N.W. 796, 798; void of present or anticipated personal profit, gain, or advantage. Robertson v. City Nat. Bank of Bowie, 120 Tex. 226, 36 S.W.2d 481, 483. Incidental benefit to party insufficient. Morrison v. Painter, Mo.App., 170 S.W.2d 965, 970.

ACCOMMODATION MAKEr. One who puts his name to a note without any consideration with the intention of lending his credit to the accommodated party. In re Chamberlain’s Estate, Cal. App., 109 P.2d 449, 454.

In this connection “without consideration” means “without consideration to the accommodating party directly.” Warren Nat. Bank, Warren, Pa., v. Suerken, 45 Cal.App. 736, 188 P. 613, 614. One who receives no part of the proceeds, which are used exclusively for another maker’s benefit, as in discharging his own personal obligation. Backer v. Grummert, 39 Cal.App. 101, 178 P. 312, 313. Must not receive any benefit or consideration directly or indirectly, and transaction must be one primarily for the benefit of the payee. First Trust Co. of Lincoln v. Anderson, 135 Neb. 397, 281 N.W. 796, 798; void of present or anticipated personal profit, gain, or advantage. Robertson v. City Nat. Bank of Bowie, 120 Tex. 226, 36 S.W.2d 481, 483.

ACCOMMODATION NONNOTE. One to which accommodating party has put his name, without consideration, to accommodate some other party, who is to issue it and is expected to pay it. Brown Carriage Co. v. Dowd, 155 N.C. 307, 71 S.E. “721, 724; Farmers Loan & Trust Co. v. Brown, 182 Iowa, 1044, 165 N.W. 70, 73.

ACCOMMODATION PAPER. An accommodation bill or note is one to which the accommodating party, be he acceptor, drawer, or indorser, has put his name, without consideration, for the purpose of benefiting or accommodating some other party who desires to raise money on it, and is to provide for the bill when due. Miller v. Lar- ned, 103 Iii. 562; Crothers v. National Bank of Chesapeake City, 158 Md. 587, 149 A. 270, 272; Hickox v. Hickox, Tex.Civ.App., 151 S.W.2d 913, 917.

Must be executed for the purpose of loaning credit, and incidental benefit to party is insufficient. Morrison v. Painter, Mo.App., 170 S.W.2d 965, 970.

ACCOMMODATION PARTY. One who has signed an instrument as maker, drawer, acceptor, or indorser without receiving value therefor, and for purpose of lending his name to some other person as means of securing credit. Bachman v. Junkin, 129 Neb. 165, 260 N.W. 813.

The term does not include one who, for the accommodation of the maker, guaranteed the payment of a note. Noble v. Beeman-Spaulding-Woodward Co., 65 Or. 93, 131 P. 1066, 1010.

ACCOMMODATION ROAD. A road opened for the benefit of certain individuals to go from and to their homes, for service of their lands, and for use of some estates exclusively. Civ. Code La. art. 706.

ACCOMMODATION TRAIN. One designed to benefit of certain individuals to go from and to ACCOMPANY. To go along with. Webster’s Diet.

ACCOMMODATION WORKS. Works which a railway company is required to make and maintain for the accommodation of the owners or occupiers of land adjoining the railway; e. g., gates, bridges, culverts, fences, etc. 8 Vict. c. 20, § 68.

ACCOMODATUM. The same as commodatum, q.

ACCOMPANY. To go along with. Webster’s Diet. To go with or attend as a companion or associate, to occur in association with. United States v. Lee, C.C.A.Wis., 131 F.2d 464, 466.

The word has been defined judicially in cases involving varied facts; thus, a boy driver was held not accompanying the team when he was running to stop it. Willis v. Semmes, 111 Miss. 589, 71 So. 865, 866. A motion based on answer already deposited with the clerk of court is accompanied with copy of answer. Los Angeles Co. v. Associated Oil Co., 6 Cal.App.2d 94, 44 P.2d 426, 429.

An "accomplice" is one who is guilty of complicity in crime charged, either by being present and aiding or abetting in it, or having advised and encouraged it, though absent from place when it was committed, though mere presence, acquiescence, or silence, in the absence of a duty to act, is not enough, no matter how reprehensible it may be, to constitute one an accomplice. State v. Arnold, 84 Mont. 348, 275 P. 757, 760; presence unnecessary. King v. State, 135 Tex.Cr.R. 117, 378, 120 S.W.2d 590, 592. Knowledge and consentment not sufficient. Wallis v. State, Okl. Cr.App., 292 P.2d 1056, 1057.

Falsely denying having knowledge of crime not of itself sufficient. Tipton v. State, 126 Tex.Cr.R. 439, 72 S.W.2d 290, 293.

As specifically applied to witnesses for the state and the necessity for corroborating them, "accomplice" includes all persons connected with the offense by an unlawful act or omission either before, at the time of, or after the commission of the offense, whether such witness was present or participated in the crime or not. Chandler v. State, 89 Tex.Cr.R. 309, 230 S.W. 1002, 1003.

The term includes all the particeps crimini, Darden v. State, 12 Ala.App. 165, 68 So. 550, 551, whether they are considered, in strict legal propriety, as principals in the first or second degree, or merely as accessories before or after the fact. In re Rowe, 23 C.C.A. 103, 77 F. 161; Luck v. State, 125 Tex.Cr.R. 152, 67 S.W.2d 302. But in Kentucky it has been held that "accomplice" does not include an accessory after the fact. See, however, Commonwealth v. Harton, 153 Ky. 465, 156 S.W. 113, 114. And the same rule has been announced elsewhere. State v. Lyons, 144 Minn. 348, 175 N.W. 689, 691. A feigned accomplice has been defined as one who co-operates with view of aiding justice to detect a crime. State v. Verganadis, 50 Nev. 1, 290 P. 678, 682, State v. Coroles, 74 Utah, 94, 277 P. 449, 451, People v. Frahm, 107 Cal.App. 253, 256 P. 900, 903; Decoy not "accomplice". U. S. v. Becker, C.C.A.N.Y., 62 F.2d 1007, 1009.

ACCORD, n. A satisfaction agreed upon between the party injuring and the party injured which, when performed, is a bar to all actions upon this account. Kromer v. Heim, 75 N.Y. 576, 31 Am. Rep. 491; Buob v. Feenoughty Machinery Co., 191 Wash. 477, 71 P.2d 559, 564. An agreement to accept, in extinction of an obligation, something different from or less than that to which the person agreeing to accept is entitled. Whaley Oil Co. v. Associated Oil Co., 6 Cal.App.2d 94, 44 P.2d 670, 677.

It may arise either where the demand itself is unliquidated or in dispute, and where the amount and nature of the demand is undisputed, and it is agreed to give and take less than the demand. J. P. Morgan Paving Co. v. Carroll, 211 Ala. 121, 99 So. 640, 641.

See Accord and Satisfaction; Compromise and Settlement.

ACCORD, v. In practice. To agree or concur, as one judge with another. "I accord." Eyre, C. J., 12 Mod. 7. "The rest accorded." 7 Mod. 361.

ACCORD AND SATISFACTION. An agreement between two persons, one of whom has a right of action against the other, that the latter should do or give, and the former accept, something in satisfaction of the right of action different from, and usually less than, what might be legally enforced.
When the agreement is executed, and satisfaction has been made, it is called "accord and satisfaction." Rogers v. Spokane, 9 Wash. 168, 37 P. 300.

It is discharge of contract, or of disputed claim arising either from contract or from tort, by substitution of agreement between parties in satisfaction of such contract or disputed claim and execution of the agreement. Nelson v. Chicago Mill & Lumber Corporation, C.C.A.Ark., 76 F.2d 17, 100 A.L.R. 87.

"Accord and satisfaction" results where there is assent to the substitution of payment in compromise of dispute, or in extinguishment of liability uncertain in amount, or where payment, coupled with condition whereby use of money will be wrongful if condition is ignored, is accepted. Hudson v. Yorkers Fruit Co., 258 N.Y. 168, 179 N.E. 37.

Regardless of whether claim is liquidated or unliquidated. May Bros. v. Doggett, 155 Miss. 849, 124 So. 476, 478.

Accepted amount tendered by insurer as cash surrender value of policies. Greenberg v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 379 Ill. 421, 41 N.E.2d 495, 497, 140 A.L.R. 775.

See, also, Sierra & San Francisco Power Co. v. Universal Electric & Gas Co., 197 Cal. 376, 241 P. 76, 80.

More recently, a broader application of the doctrine has been made, where one promise or agreement is set up in satisfaction of a former. Continental Nat. Bank v. McGeoch, 92 Wis. 286, 66 N.W. 606.

An "accord and satisfaction arises" where parties, by a subsequent agreement, have satisfied the former one, and the latter agreement has been executed. The execution of a new agreement may itself amount to a satisfaction, where it is so expressly agreed by the parties; and without such agreement, if the new promise is founded on a new consideration, in which case the taking of the new consideration amounts to the satisfaction of the former contract.

A dispute or controversy is not an essential element of some forms of accord and satisfaction, as an accord and satisfaction of a liquidated claim by the giving and acceptance of a smaller sum and some additional consideration, such as new security, payment of the debt before due, payment by a third person, or where property or personal services are accepted from an insolvent debtor in satisfaction. Burgamy v. Holton, 165 Ga. 384, 141 S.E. 42.

"Composition settlement" contemplates agreement not only between debtor and creditors, but also among creditors, whereas "accord and satisfaction" is agreement between debtor and single creditor. Russell v. Douget, La.App., 171 So. 501, 502.

"Novation" is a species of "accord and satisfaction". Munn v. Town of Drakeville, 226 Iowa 1040, 285 N.W. 644, 648.

See Acceptance; Composition; Compromise; Novation.

ACCORDANCE. Agreement; harmony; concord; conformity. Webster, Dict.; City and County of San Francisco v. Boyd, 22 Cal.2d 685, 140 P.2d 666, 668.

An act done in accordance with a purpose once formed is not necessarily an act done in pursuance of such purpose, for the purpose may have been abandoned before the act was done. State v. Robinson, 20 W.Va. 713, 742.

A charter providing that a city's power of taxation shall be exercised "in accordance with" the state Constitution and laws in a manner not repugnant to or in conflict or inconsistent therewith. City of Norfolk v. Norfolk Landmark Pub. Co., 95 Va. 564, 28 S.E. 959, 960. The work in "in accordance with this act" as used in N. M. Laws 1899, c. 22, § 25, dealing with validity of tax titles, was not improperly interpreted as meaning "under this act." Straus v. Foxworth, 231 U.S. 162, 34 S.Ct. 42, 44, 58 L.Ed. 168.

A statement in writing, of debts and credits, or of receipts and payments; a list of items of debts and credits, with their respective dates. Rensselaer Glass Factory v. Reid, 5 Cow., N.Y., 593.

An "account" is defined as a statement of pecuniary transactions; a record or course of business dealings between parties; a list or statement of monetary transactions, such as payments, losses, sales, debits, credits, etc., in most cases showing a balance or result of comparison between items of an opposite nature; and is not held to include a liability for unliquidated damages resulting from the breach of an entire contract, expressing only an entire consideration. Harnischfeger Sales Corporation v. Pickering Lumber Co., C.C.A.Mo., 97 F.2d 692, 695.

The word is sometimes used to denote the balance, or the right of action for the balance, appearing due upon a statement of dealings; as where one speaks of an assignment of accounts; but there is a broad distinction between an account and the mere balance of an account, resembling the distinction in logic between the premises of an argument and the conclusions drawn therefrom. A balance is but the conclusion or result of the debit and credit sides of an account. It implies mutual dealings, and the existence of debt and credit, without which there could be no balance. McWilliams v. Allan, 45 Mo. 574.

A generic term, difficult to define, having various meanings, depending somewhat upon the surrounding circumstances and the connection in which it is used. Wolcott & Lincoln v. Butler, 155 Kan. 105, 122 P.2d 720, 722, 141 A. L. R. 356.

Flexible in meaning, meaning valuation; worth; value. Ex parte Means, 200 Ala. 738, 76 So. 294; may refer either to past or future indebtedness, Semel v. Braun, 157 N.Y. S. 907, 908, 94 Misc. 238; an itemized account, Brooks v. International Shoe Co., 132 Ark. 386, 200 S.W. 1027.

Closed
An account to which no further additions can be made on either side, but which remains still open for adjustment and set-off, which distinguishes it from an account stated. Mandeville v. Wilson, 5 Cranch 15, 3 L.Ed. 23.

Current

An "account current" is an active checking account, through which credit and debit items are constantly passing. In re Fricke's Will, 202 N.Y.S. 906, 912, 122 Misc. 427.

All items must constitute one demand. Meyers v., Barrett & Zimmerman, 196 Minn. 276, 264 N.W. 769, 773.
Duties payable by the English customs and inland revenue act, 1881, (44 Vict. c. 12, § 38,) on a donatio mortis causa, or on any gift, the donor of which dies within three months after making it, or on joint property voluntarily so created, and taken by survivorship, or on property taken under a voluntary settlement in which the settlor had a life-interest.

Mutual Accounts comprising mutual credits between the parties; or an existing credit on one side which constitutes a ground for credit on the other, or where there is an understanding that mutual debts shall be a satisfaction or set-off pro tanto between the parties. McConnell v. Arkansas Cofin Co., 172 Ark. 87, 287 S.W. 1007.

Open An account which has not been finally settled or closed, but is still running or open to future adjustment or liquidation. Open account, in legal as well as in ordinary language, means an indebtedness subject to future adjustment, and which may be reduced or modified by proof. James v. Lederer-Strauss & Co., 32 Wyo. 377, 233 P. 137, 139.

An open account can become an account stated only by the debtor’s admission of liability, or failure to deny liability for a reasonable time after receipt of account. Brooks v. White, 187 N. C. 656, 122 S.E. 561.

Payable Accounts payable” are contract obligations owing by a person on open account. West Virginia Pulp & Paper Co. v. Karnes, 120 S.E. 321, 322, 137 Va. 714; State Tax Commission v. Shattuck, 38 P.2d 631, Sn, 44 Ariz. 379.

Public The accounts kept by officers of the nation, state, or kingdom, of the receipt and expenditure of the revenues of the government.

Rendered An account made out by the creditor, and presented to the debtor for his examination and acceptance. When accepted, it becomes an account stated. Freeland v. Cocke, 17 Va. (3 Munf.) 352.

Settled One in which the balance has been in fact paid, thereby differing from an account stated. See Dempsey v. McGinnis, 219 S.W. 148, 150, 203 Mo. App. 494.

Stated The settlement of an account between the parties, with a balance struck in favor of one of them; an account rendered by the creditor, and by the debtor assented to as correct, either expressly, or by implication of law from the failire to object. Preston v. La Belle View Corporation, 212 N.W. 286, 288, 192 Wis. 168.

ACCOUNTS rendering of a one party to pay a stated sum. Hammond Lumber Co. v. Richardson Building & Lumber Co., 209 Cal. 82, 285 P. 851, 853.

An agreement between parties who have had previous transactions of a monetary character that all the items of the account representing such transactions, and the balance struck, are correct, together with a promise, express or implied, for the payment of such balance. Pelavin v. Fenton, Davis & Boyle, 255 Mich. 680, 239 N.W. 268, 269.

No particular form is necessary; it may be oral, written, partly oral and partly written. Murphy v. Smith, 26 Ariz. 394, 226 P. 206, 208. An account stated is not ordinarily recognized in Virginia and West Virginia, except as between merchant and merchant, and principal and agent, with mutual accounts. Price Hill Colliery Co. v. Finkney, 96 W Va. 74, 122 S.E. 434, 436. This was also a common count in a declaration upon a contract under which the plaintiff might prove an absolute acknowledgment by the defendant of a liquidated demand of a fixed amount, which implies a promise to pay on request. It might be joined with any other count for a money demand. The acknowledgment or admission must have been made to the plaintiff or his agent. Wharton.

ACCOUNT, or ACCOUNT RENDER. In practice. “Account,” sometimes called “account render,” was a form of action at common law against a person who by reason of some fiduciary relation (as guardian, bailiff, receiver, etc.) was bound to render an account to another, but refused to do so. Portsmouth v. Donaldson, 32 Pa. 202, 72 Am.Dec. 782; Peoples Finance & Thrift Co. of Visalia v. Bowman, 137 P.2d 729, 731, 158 Cal.App.2d 729.

“Action of account” is a common-law action to compel person to render account for property or money of another. Dahlberg v. Fisse, 328 Mo. 213, 40 S.W.2d 606, 609. Equitable in nature. Gaines Bros. Co. v. Gaines, 185 Okl. 300, 108 P.2d 177, 179.

In England, this action early fell into disuse; and as it is one of the most dilatory and expensive actions known to the law, and the parties are held to the ancient rules of pleading, and no discovery can be obtained, it never was adopted to any great extent in the United States. But in some states this action was employed, chiefly because there were no chancery courts in which a bill for an accounting would lie. The action is peculiar in the fact that two judgments are rendered, a preliminary judgment that the defendant do account with the plaintiff (quod computet) and a final judgment (quod recuperet) after the accounting for the balance found due. Field v. Brown, 146 Ind. 293, 45 N.E. 464, 16 Blatchf. 178.

ACCOUNT-BOOK. A book kept by a merchant, trader, mechanic, or other person, in which are entered from time to time the transactions of his trade or business. Greenl. Ev. §§ 115-118.

Volumes bound or sewed together in which accounts are regularly kept, and excluding collections of loose and indeterminate memoranda. W. T. Raleigh Co. v. Rotenberry, 174 Miss. 319, 164 So. 5, 6. May now include modern book of detachable leaves, but leaves must be of such appropriate uniformity of material as reasonably to constitute leaves of account book in which they are contained. W. T. Raleigh Co. v. Rotenberry, 174 Miss. 319, 164 So. 5, 6.

ACCOUNT COMPUTATIO. The primary idea of “account computatio”, whether in proceedings of courts of law or equity, is some matter of debt and credit, or demand in nature thereof. Coleman v. Kansas City, 351 Mo. 254, 173 S.W.2d 572, 576.

ACCOUNT FOR. To pay over the money to the person entitled thereto. U. S. v. Rehwald, D.C. Cal., 44 F.2d 663.
ACCOUNT IN BANK

ACCOUNTABLE. Subject to pay; responsible; liable. Where one indorsed a note "A. C. accountable," it was held that, under this form of indorsement, he had waived demand and notice. Furber v. Caverly, 42 N.H. 74.

ACCOUNTABLE RECEIPT. An instrument acknowledging the receipt of money or personal property, coupled with an obligation to account for or pay or deliver the whole or some part of it to some person. State v. Riebe, 7 N.W. 262, 27 Minn. 315.

ACCOUNTANT. One who keeps accounts; a person skilled in keeping books or accounts; an expert in accounts or bookkeeping. See U. S. ex rel. Liebmann v. Flynn, D.C.N.Y., 16 F.2d 1006, 1007; Frazer v. Shelton, 150 N.E. 696, 701, 320 Ill. 253.

One competent to design and control systems of accounts. Roberts v. Hosking, 95 Mont. 562, 28 P.2d 199, 201.

A person who renders an account: an executor, guardian, etc.

ACCOUNTANT GENERAL, or ACCOMPTANT GENERAL. An officer of the court of chancery, appointed by act of parliament to receive all money lodged in court, and to place the same in the Bank of England for security. 12 Geo. I. c. 32; 1 Geo. IV, c. 35; 15 & 16 Vict. c. 87, §§ 18-22, See Daniell, Ch.Pr. (4th Ed.) 1607 et seq. The office, however, has been abolished by 35 & 36 Vict. c. 44, and the duties transferred to her majesty's paymaster general.

ACCOUNTANTS, CHARTERED. Persons skilled in the keeping and examination of accounts, who are employed for the purpose of examining and certifying to the correctness of accounts of corporations and others. British Commonwealth equivalent of Certified Public Accountant.

ACCOUNTING. An act or system of making up or settling accounts; a statement of account, or a debit and credit in financial transactions. Kansas City v. Burns, 137 Kan. 905, 22 P.2d 444.

ACCOUPLE. To unite; to marry. Ne unques accouple, never married.

ACCREDIT. In international law. (1) To acknowledge; to receive as an envoy in his public character, and give him credit and rank accordingly. Burke. (2) To send with credentials as an envoy. Webst.Dict. This latter use is now the accepted one.

ACCREDITED LAW SCHOOL. "An accredited law school" and a "law school approved by this court," are synonymous. Ex parte State Board of Law Examiners of Florida, 141 Fla. 706, 193 So. 753.

ACCREDITED REPRESENTATIVE. As respects service of process, representative having general authority to act. Rorick v. Stilwell, 101 Fla. 4, 133 So. 609, 615.

ACCREDULITARE. L. Lat. In old records. To purge an offense by oath. Blount; Whishaw.

ACCRESCERE. In the civil and old English law. To grow to; to increase; to pass to, and become united with, as soil to land per alluvionem. Dig. 41, 1, 30, pr. The term is used in speaking of islands which are formed in rivers by deposit; Calvinside, Lex.; 3 Kent 428. It is used in a related sense in the common-law phrase jus accrescendi, the right of survivorship; 1 Washb.R.P. 426.

Pleading

To commence; to arise; to accrue. Quod actio non accrescit infra sex anos, that the action did not accrue within six years; 3 Chit.P1. 914.

ACCREPTION. The act of growing to a thing; usually applied to the gradual and imperceptible accumulation of land by natural causes, as out of the sea or a river.

Civil Law

The right of heirs or legatees to unite or aggregate with their shares or portions of the estate the portion of any co-heir or legatee who refuses to accept it, fails to comply with a condition, becomes incapacitated to inherit, or dies before the testator. Anderson v. Lucas, 204 S.W. 989, 993, 140 Tenn. 336. Under a deed of trust: Miller v. Douglass, 192 Wis. 486, 213 N.W. 320, 322.

Mortgages

As used in a mortgage on cattle, with all increase thereof and accretions thereto, the word "accretions" is not confined to the results of natural growth, but includes the additions of parts from without, i. e., of cattle subsequently added to the herd. Stockyards Loan Co. v. Nichols, C.C.A.Okl., 243 F. 511, 513, 1 A.L.R. 547.

Realty

App., 137 S.W.2d 45, 51, 52. Tideland artificially water-mark. The term "alluvion" is applied to deposit filled was not an "accretion". City of Newport itself, while "accretion" denotes the act. However, the terms are frequently used synonymously. Katz v. Patter-son, 135 Or. 449, 296 P. 54, 55. In determining whether change in course of river is by "accretion" or "avulsion," test is not whether witnesses might see from time to time that progress has been made, but whether witnesses could perceive change while it was going on. Goins v. Merry-man, 183 Okl. 155, 80 P.2d 268, 270. Land uncovered by gradual subsidence of water is not an "accretion" but a "reliction." Independent Stock Farm v. Stevens, 128 Neb. 619, 259 N.W. 647, 648.

Trust Property
Receipts other than those ordinarily considered as income; and ordinary cash dividends, the sole income, were not accretions. Doty v. C. I. R., C.C. A.1, 148 F.2d 503, 505.

See Accrue; Avulsion; Alluvion; Reliction.

ACCRUED. Derived from the Latin, "ad" and "cresco," to grow to. In past tense, in sense of due and payable; vested. It means to increase; to augment; to come to by way of increase; to be added as an increase, profit, or damage. Harts-field Co. v. Shaoft, 184 Ga. 378, 191 S.E. 693, 695. Acquired; fell due; made or executed; matured; occurred; received; vested; was created; was incurred. H. Liebes & Co. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.9, 90 F.2d 932, 936. To attach itself to, as a subordinate or accessory claim or demand arises out of, and is joined to, its principal. Lidfson v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.8, 98 F.2d 508.

The term is also used of independent or original demands, and then means to arise, to happen, to come into force or existence; to vest; as in the phrase, "The right of action did not accrue within six years." Amy v. Dubuque, 98 U.S. 470, 476, 25 L. Ed. 228. To "become a present right or demand; to come to pass." H. Liebes & Co. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.9, 90 F.2d 932, 936.

It is distinguished from sustain; Adams v. Brown, 4 Litt. (Ky.) 7; and from owing; Gross v. Partenheimer, 159 Pa. 556, 28 A. 370; Fay v. Holloran, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 295; it is also distinguished from arise; State v. Circuit Court of Waushara County, 165 Wis. 387, 162 N.W. 436, 437.

Causa of Action
A cause of action "accrues" when a suit may be maintained thereon. Dillon v. Board of Pension Com'rs of City of Los Angeles, 18 Cal.1d 427, 116 P.2d 37, 39, 136 A.L.R. 800. Whenever one person may sue another. Hensley v. Conway, Tex.Civ.App., 29 S.W.2d 416, 418.

Contracts
The word accrued, as Used in reference to contracts in which process may be sent out of the country to be served, has reference to the place where the contract was made and executed. Phelps v. McGee, 18 Ill., 155, 158.

Taxation
Income "accrues" to taxpayer when there arises to him a fixed or unconditional right to receive it. Franklin County Distilling Co. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.6, 125 F.2d 800, 804, 805. But not unless there is a reasonable expectancy that the right will be converted into money or its equivalent. Swastika Oil & Gas Co. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.6, 123 F.2d 382, 384.

Where taxpayer makes returns on accrual basis, item "accrues" when all events occur which fix amount payable and determine liability of taxpayer. Hudson Motor Car Co. v. U. S., Ct.C1., 3 F. Supp. 834, 847.

Tax "accrues" for deduction when all events have occurred which fix amount of tax and determine liability of taxpayer for it, although there has not yet been assessment or maturity. Elm-hirst v. Duggan, D.C.N.Y., 14 F.Supp. 782, 784.

ACCRUED DEPRECIATION. The lessened service value of the utility plant due to its consumption in furnishing service. Wisconsin Telephone Co. v. Public Service Commission, 232 Wis. 274, 287 N.W. 122, 152. Portion of useful service life which has expired. State ex rel. City of St. Louis v. Public Service Commission, 341 Mo. 920, 110 S.W.2d 749, 768.

ACCRUED RIGHT. As used in Constitution, a matured cause of action, or legal authority to demand redress. Morley v. Hurst, 174 Okl. 2, 49 P.2d 546, 548.

ACCRUER (or ACCRUAL), CLAUSE OF. An express clause, frequently occurring in the case of gifts by deed or will to persons as tenants in common, providing that upon the death of one or more of the beneficiaries his or their shares shall go to the survivor or survivors. Brown. The share of the decedent is then said to accrue to the others.

ACCRUING. Inchoate; in process of maturing. That which will or may, at a future time, ripen into a vested right, an available demand, or an existing cause of action. Hartsfield Co. v. Shoal, 184 Ga. 378, 191 S.E. 693, 695. Arising by way of increase, growth or profit. It connotes continuing growth, increase or augmentation. Globe Indemnity Co. v. Bruce, C.C.A.Okl., 81 F.2d 143, 153.

ACCRUING COSTS. Costs and expenses incurred after judgment.

ACCRUING INTEREST. Running or accumulat- ing interest, as distinguished from accrued or matured interest; interest daily accumulating on the principal debt but not yet due and payable. Gross v. Partenheimer, 159 Pa. 556, 28 A. 370.

ACCRUING RIGHT. One that is increasing, enlarging, or augmenting. Richards v. Land Co., 54 F. 209, 4 C.C.A. 290.

ACCT. An abbreviation for "account," of such universal and immemorial use that the courts will take judicial notice of its meaning. Heaton v. Ainley, 108 Iowa, 112, 78 N.W. 798.

ACCRUMATED PROFITS. Earned surplus or undivided profits. Flint v. Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation, 43 N.E.2d 789, 791, 792, 312 Mass. 204.

And they take into account losses, as well as gains. Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation v. Church, Mass., 61 N.E.2d 143, 145.

ACCRUMATED SURPLUS. In statutes relative to the taxation of corporations, this term refers to the fund which the company has in excess of its capital and liabilities. Trenton Iron Co. v. Yard, 42 N.J.Law, 357; People's F. Ins. Co. v. Parker, 34 N.J.Law, 479, 35 N.J.Law, 575. See Earnings.

ACCRUMULATIVE. Increase by continuous or repeated additions, or, if taken literally, means either profit accruing on sale of principal assets, or increase derived from their investment, or both. In re Wells' Will, 300 N.Y.S. 1075, 1078, 165 Misc. 385.

Adding of interest or income of a fund to principal pursuant to provisions of a will or deed, preventing its being expended. In re Watson's Will, 258 N.Y.S. 755, 144 Misc. 213.

When an executor or other trustee masses the rents, dividends, and other income which he receives, treats it as a capital, invests it, makes a new capital of the income derived therefrom, invests that, and so on, he is said to accumulate the fund, and the capital and accrued income thus procured constitute accumulations. Hussey v. Sargent, 116 Ky. 53, 75 S.W. 211. In re Rogers' Estate, 179 Pa. 609, 36 A. 340. See Perpetuity.

ACCRUMULATIVE. That which accumulates, or is heaped up; additional. Said of several things heaped together, or of one thing added to another.

ACCRUMULATIVE JUDGMENT. Where a person has already been convicted and sentenced, and a second or additional judgment is passed against him, the execution of which is postponed until the completion of the first sentence, such second judgment is said to be accumulative. As to accumulative "Legacy," see that title.

ACCRUMULATIVE LEGACY. A second, double or additional legacy; a legacy given in addition to another given by the same instrument, or by another instrument.

ACCRUMULATIVE SENTENCE. A sentence, additional to others, imposed on a defendant who has been convicted upon an indictment containing several counts, each of such counts charging a distinct offense, or who is under conviction at the same time for several distinct offenses; one of such sentences to begin at the expiration of another. Carter v. McLaughly, 183 U.S. 365, 22 S. Ct. 181, 46 L.Ed. 236; State v. Hamby, 126 N.C. 1066, 35 S.E. 614; Braudon v. Mackey, 122 Kan. 207, 251 P. 176, 177.

ACCUSARE NEMO SE DEBET, NISI CORAM DEO. No one is bound to accuse himself, except before God. See Hardres, 139.

ACCUSSARE NEMO SE DEBET, NISI SE BENE DE AUDIENDUS, NISI SE BENE DE OMISIONE EXCUSAVERIT. Moore, 817. An omission excused by a person who is under a legal obligation to do an act, unless he has been heard to the contrary. See Secrecy.

"Accusation" is equivalent of "information" at common law which is mere allegation of prosecuting officer by whom it is preferred. Sutton v. State, 54 Ga.App. 349, 188 S.E. 60, 62.

ACCUSATOR POST RATIONABILE TEMPS NON EST AUDIENDUS. NISI SE BENE DE OMISSIOE EXCUSAVERIT. Moore, 817. An accuser ought not to be heard after the expiration. of a reasonable time, unless he can account satisfactorily for the delay.

ACCUSATORY PART. The "accusatory part" of an indictment is that part where the offense is named. Deaton v. Commonwealth, 220 Ky. 343, 295 S.W. 167, 168.

ACCUSE. To bring a formal charge against a named. Deaton v. Commonwealth, 220 Ky. 343, 295 S.W. 167, 168.

ACUSATORY PART. The "accusatory part" of an indictment is that part where the offense is charged having jurisdiction to inquire into the alleged crime. People v. Frey, 112 Mich. 251, 70 N.W. 548.

In its popular sense "accusation" applies to all derogatory charges or imputations, whether or not they relate to a punishable legal offense, and however made, whether orally, by newspaper, or otherwise. People v. Braman, 30 Mich. 460. But in legal phraseology, it is limited to such accusations as have taken shape in a prosecution. United States v. Patterson, 150 U.S. 65, 14 S.Ct. 20, 37 L.Ed. 256, 86 Hun, 232.

ACCUSED. "Accused" is the generic name for the defendant in a criminal case, and is more appropriate than either "prisoner" or "defendant." 1 Car. & K. 131.

The person against whom an accusation is made; one who is charged with a crime or misdemeanor. See People v. Braman, 30 Mich. 468. The term cannot be said to apply to a defendant in a civil action; Castle v. Houston, 19 Kan. 417, 37 Am.Rep. 127; and see Mosby v. Ins. Co., 31 Gratt. (Va.) 629.

ACCUSER. The person by whom an accusation is made.

of lighting the candles, carrying the bread and wine, and paying other servile attendance. Spelman; Cowell,

ACQUAINTED. Having personal knowledge of. Kelly v. Calhoun, 95 U.S. 710, 24 L.Ed. 544. Ac tainty expresses less than intimacy; in re Carpenter’s Estate, 94 Cal. 406, 29 P.2d 1101. It is “familiar knowledge”; Wyllis v. Haun, 47 Iowa, 614; Chauvin v. Wagner, 18 Mo. 531.

“Acquaintance” expresses less than familiarity; familiarity less than intimacy. Acquaintance springs from oc tional intercourse, familiarity from daily intercourse, intimacy from unreserved intercourse; acquaintance, hav ing no knowledge, familiarity, from long habit, intim cy, by close connection. Atkins Corporation v. Tourny, 6 Cal.2d 206, 57 P.2d 480, 483. To be “personally acquainted with,” and to “know personally,” are equiva tent terms; Kelly v. Calhoun, 95 U.S. 710, 24 L.Ed. 544. When used with reference to a paper to which a certificate or affidavit is attached, it indicates a substantial knowl dge of the subject-matter thereof. Bohan v. Casey, 5 Mo.

transaction, to the accrual of a right, or to any act, by one’s mere silence, or without express assent or acknowledgment., Scott v. Jackson, 89 Cal.
258, 26 P. 988.

ACQUISCE. Conduct recognizing the exis tence of a transaction, and intended, in some extent at least, to carry the transaction, or permit it to be carried, into effect; it is some act, not deliberately intended to ratify a former transac tion known to be voidable, but recognizing the transaction as existing, and intended, in some ex	ent at least, to carry it into effect, and to obtain or claim the benefits resulting from it, and thus differs from “confirmation,” which implies a de	liberate act, intended to renew and ratify a transac tion known to be voidable. DeBoe v. Prentice Packaging & Storage Co., 172 Wash. 514, 20 P.2d 1107, 1110.

Passive compliance or satisfaction; distinguished from avowed consent on the one hand, and, on the other, from opposition or open discontent. Paul v. Western Distribut Co., 142 Kan. 816, 52 P.2d 379, 387. Acquiescence from

Indiana Harbor Belt R. Co. v. Jones, 220 Ind. 139, 41
N.E.2d 361, 363.

It is to be distinguished from avowed consent, on the one hand, and from open discontent or opposition, on the other.

It arises where a person who knows that he is entitled to impeach a transaction or enforce a right neglects to do so for such a length of time that, under the circumstances of the case, the other party may fairly infer that he has waived or abandoned his right. Norfolk & W. R. Co. v.

Acquiescence and laches are cognate but not equivalent terms. The former is a submission to, or, resting satisfied with, an existing state of things, while laches implies a neglect or failure to do what the party ought to do for his own benefit or protection. Hence laches may be evidence of acquiescence. Laches Imports a merely passive assent, while acquiescence implies active assent. In re Wilbur’s Estate, 134 Pa. 45, 331. “Acqui escence” relates to inaction during performance of an act while “inches” relates to delay after act is done. Bay Newfoundland Co.
escence” is synonymous with “abandonment”; Schlor v.
City of St. Paul, 132 Minn. 238, 156 N.W. 283, 284, and is distinguished from “admission”; Saunders v. Busch-Everett Co., 138 La. 1049, 71 So. 153, 154; and from “ratifi cation” and “estoppel in pais”; Marion S. Bank v. Ledy, 200 Iowa 220, 204 N.W. 456, 458; but see Murray v.
Smith, 152 N.Y.S. 102, 108, 166 App.Div. 528; differs from “confirmation”, in that confirmation implies a deliberate act, intended to renew and ratify a transaction known to be voidable, Bauer v. Dotterer, 202 Ark. 1055, 155 S.W.2d 54, 57. A form of “equitable estoppel”, Schmitt v. Wright, 317 Ill.App. 384, 46 N.E.2d 184, 192.

See Admission; Confession; Ratification,

ACQUIESCENCE, ESTOPPEL BY. Acquiescence is a species of estoppel. Bankers’ Trust Co. v.
Rood, 211 Iowa, 289, 233 N.W. 794, 802, 73 A.L.R.

An estoppel arises where party aware of his rights sees other party acting upon mistaken notion of his rights. Midwest Steel Co. v. Keith Power Co., Iowa, 239 N.W. 584, 587.

Injury accruing from one’s acquiescence in another’s action to his prejudice creates “estoppel”. Lebold v. Inland Steel Co., C.C.A.11., 125 F.2d 369, 375; Passive conduct on the part of one who has knowledge of the facts may be

It must appear that party to be estopped was bound in equity and good conscience to speak and that party claim ning estoppel relied upon acquiescence and was misled thereby to change his position to his prejudice. Sherlock v. Greaves, 106 Mont. 206, 76 P.2d 87, 91.

Acquiescence in a judgment in order to constitute an estoppel must be unqualified. Messer v. Henlein, 72 N.D.
633, 218 N.W.2d 587, 589; One who stands by while his property is sold is “estopped” from setting up title against purchaser. Meadows v. Hampton Live Stock Commission

The doctrine is applicable only where there is some ele ment of turpitude or neglect. City of Lafayette v. Keen, 113 Ind. App. 552, 48 N.E.2d 63, 70.

ACQUIETANDIS PLEGIIIS. A writ of justices, formerly lying for the surety against a creditor who refuses to acquit him after the debt has been satisfied. Reg. of Writs 158; Cowell; Blount.
ACQUIRE. To gain by any means, usually by one’s own exertions; to get as one’s own; to obtain by search, endeavor, practice, or purchase; to receive or gain in whatever manner; come to have. Clarno v. Gamble-Robinson Co., 190 Minn. 256, 251 N.W. 268, 269.

In law of contracts and of descents, to become owner of property one’s own. Crutchfield Johnson & Latimer, 243 Ala. 73, 8 So.2d 412. To gain ownership of. Commissioner of Insurance v. Broad Street Mut. Casualty Ins. Co., 312 Mass. 261, 44 N.E.2d 683, 684. Broad meaning including both purchase and construction; acquisition being the act of getting or obtaining something which may be already in existence, or may be brought into existence through means employed to acquire it. Romnov v. City of Las Vegas, 57 Nev. 332, 65 P.2d 133, 140. Sometimes used in the sense of “procure,” Jolly v. McCoy, 36 Cal.App. 479, 172 P.2d 618, 619. It does not necessarily mean that title has passed, Godwin v. Tuttle, 70 Or. 424, 141 P. 1120, 1122. Includes taking by devise, U. S. v. Merriam, 263 U.S. 179. 44 S.Ct. 69, 60 68 L.Ed. 240, 29 A. L. R. 1547.

ACQUIRED. To get, procure, secure, acquire. Jones v. State, 126 Tex.Cr.R. 469, 72 S.W.2d 260, 263.

Coming to an intestate in any other way than by gift, devise, or descent from a parent or the ancestor of a parent. In re Miller’s Will, 2 Lea (Tenn.) 54.

ACQUIRED RIGHTS. Those which a man does not naturally enjoy, but which are owing to his own procurement, as sovereignty, or the right of commanding, or the right of property. Borden v. State, 11 Ark. 519, 527, 44 Am.Dec. 217.

ACQUIRED TAX. German estate inheritance legacy tax, not true inheritance or legacy tax, imposed upon recipient, and not affecting executors. In re Gotthelf’s Will, 273 N.Y.S. 247, 152 Misc. 309.

Original acquisition is that by which a man secures a property in a thing which is not at the time he acquires it, and in its then existing condition, the property of any other individual. It may result from occupancy; 2 Kent, 289; accession; 2 Kent, 293; intellectual labor—namely, for inventions, which are secured by patent rights; and for the authorship of books, maps, and charts, which is protected by copyrights; 1 Bouv.Inst. 508, n.

Derivative acquisitions are those which are procured from others. Goods and chattels may change owners by operation of law; as where a man has been charged merely as an assessor, and the principal has been acquitted. 2 Co.Inst. 364. Ccmerc State v. Walton, 186 N.C. 415, 119 S.E. 886, 888.

See Accession.

ACQUIT. To set free, release or discharge as from an obligation, burden or accusation. Commonwealth v. Benson, 94 Pa.Super. 10, 15. To solve, one from an obligation or a liability; or to legally certify the innocence of one charged with crime. Dolloway v. Turrill, 26 Wend.N.Y. 383, 400.

ACQUIT A CAUTION. The certificate proving receipt of security that goods shipped from one French port to another shall not be sent to a foreign country. Argles, Fr.Merc.Law, 543.

ACQUIT BACK. In mineral deed, vested in the grantee the title to such mineral rights as grantor had at time of execution of deed, where grantor had received his title from grantee and the expression was intended to convey such title. Allen v. Boykin, 199 Miss. 417, 24 So.2d 748, 750.

ACQUITMENT. See Absolution.

ACQUITTAL. Contracts

A release, absolution, or discharge from an obligation, liability, or engagement.

According to Lord Coke, there are three kinds of acquittal, namely: by deed, when the party releases the obligation; by prescription; by tenure; Co. Litt. 100 a.

Crimes

The legal and formal certification of the innocence of a person who has been charged with crime; a deliverance or setting free a person from a charge of guilt.

In a narrow sense, it is the absolution of a party accused on a trial before a traverse jury. Thomas v. De Grafenreid, 2 Nott & McC. (S. C.) 143. Properly speaking, however, one is not acquitted by the jury but by the judgment of the court. People v. Rogers, 170 N.Y.S. 86, 87, 102 Misc. 437. And he may be legally acquitted by a judgment rendered otherwise than in pursuance of a verdict, as where he is discharged by a magistrate because of the insufficiency of the evidence, or the indictment is dismissed by the court or a nol. pros. entered. State v. Hart, 90 N.J. Law 261, 101 A. 278. But compare State v. Smith, 170 N.C. 742; 87 S.E. 98, 99.

"Nol. pros." not equivalent of "acquittal." Bolton v. State, 166 Miss. 290, 146 So. 453, 454. The unnecessary discharge of the jury without the consent of the accused after it has been sworn may constitute an acquittal. Riley v. Commonwealth, 190 Ky. 204, 227 S. W. 146, 147. Acquittal discharges from guilt, pardon only from punishment. Younger v. State, 2 W.Va. 579, 98 Am.Dec. 791.

It may occur even though the question of guilt or innocence has never been submitted to a jury, as where a defendant, having been held under an indictment or information, is discharged because not brought to trial within the time provided by the Criminal Code. State v. Taylor, 130 Kan. 813, 288 P. 731, 732.

Acquittals in fact are those which take place when the jury, upon trial, finds a verdict of not guilty.

Acquittals in law are those which take place by mere operation of law; as where a man has been charged merely as an assessor, and the principal has been acquitted. 2 Co.Inst. 364. Ccmerc State v. Walton, 186 N.C. 415, 119 S.E. 886, 888.

See Jeopardy; Autrefois Acquit; Convict.

Feudal Law

The obligation on the part of a mesne lord to protect his tenant from any claims, entries or molestations by lords paramount arising out of the services due to them by the mesne lord. See Co.Litt. 100a.
ACQUITTANCE. A written discharge, whereby one is freed from an obligation to pay money or perform a duty. It differs from a release in not requiring to be under seal. Pothier, Oblig. 781. See Milliken v. Brown, 1 Rawle (Pa.) 391.

This word, though perhaps not strictly speaking synonymous with "receipt," includes it. A receipt is one form of an acquittance; a discharge is another. A receipt in full is an acquittance, and a receipt for a part of a demand or obligation is an acquittance pro tarto. State v. Shelters, 51 Vt. 104, 31 Am.Rep. 679.

ACQUITTED. Released; absolved; purged of an accusation; judicially discharged from accusation; released from debt, etc. Includes both civil and criminal prosecutions. Dolloway v. Turrill, 26 Wend. (N.Y.) 383, 399. See Acquittal.

ACRE. A quantity of land containing 160 square rods of land, in whatever shape. Serg. Land Laws Pa. 185; Cro.Eliz. 476, 665; 6 Coke 67; Poph. 55; Co.Litt. 5b.

Originally the word "acre" (acer, aker, or Sax, cece) was not used as a measure of land, or to signify any determinate quantity of land, but to denote any open ground, (latum quantumus agrum,) wide champaign, or field; which is still the meaning of the German acker, derived probably from the same source, and is preserved in the names of some places in England, as Castle Acre, South Acre, etc. Burrill. Originally a strip in the fields that was ploughed in the forenoon. Maitland, Domesday and Beyond, 387.

ACRE FOOT. 325,850 gallons, or the amount of water which will cover one acre one foot in depth. Rowles v. Hadden, Tex.Civ.App., 210 S.W. 251, 258.

ACRE RIGHT. "The share of a citizen of a New England town in the common lands. The value of the acre right was a fixed quantity in each town, but varied in different towns. A 10-acre lot or right in a certain town was equivalent to 113 acres of upland and 12 acres of meadow, and a certain exact proportion was maintained between the acre right and salable lands." Messages, etc., of the Presidents, Richardson, X, 230.

ACREFIGHT, or ACRE. A camp or field fight; a sort of duel, or judicial combat, anciently fought by single combatants, English and Scotch, between the frontiers of the two kingdoms with sword and lance. Called "campfight," and the combatants "champions," from the open "acre" or field that was the stage of trial. Cowell.

ACROMIAL PROCESS. A point in the region of the shoulder about where the arm joins or fits into the shoulder blade. Muskogee Electric Traction Co. v. Mueller, 39 Okl. 63, 134 P. 51, 52.

ACT, v. In Scotch practice. To do or perform judicially; to enter of record. Surety "acted in the Books of Adjournal." 1 Broun, 4.

ACT, n. Denotes affirmative; expression of will, purpose; carries idea of performance; primarily that which is done or doing; exercise of power, or effect of which power exerted is cause; a performance; a deed. Brown v. Standard Casket Mfg. Co., 234 Ala. 512, 175 So. 358, 364.

In its most general sense, this noun signifies something done voluntarily by a person; the exercise of an individual's power; an effect produced in the external world by an exercise of the power of a person objectively, prompted by intention, and proximately caused by a motion of the will. Herman v. Pan American Life Ins. Co., 183 La. 1045, 165 So. 195, 200. In a more technical sense, it means something done voluntarily by a person, arius of such a nature that certain legal consequences attach to it. Jefferson Standard Life Ins. Co. v. Myers, Tex.Com.App., 284 S.W. 216, 218. Thus a grantor acknowledges the conveyance to be his "act and deed," the terms being synonymous. It may denote something done by an individual, as a private citizen, or as an officer; or by a body of men, as a legislature, a council, or a court of justice; including not merely physical acts, but also decrees, edicts, laws, judgments, resolves, awards, and determinations. Some general laws made by the Congress of the United States are styled joint resolutions, and these have the same force and effect as those styled acts. But see Decher v. Vaughan, 209 Mich. 565, 177 N.W. 388, 392. Carries idea of performance. Edmonds v. Shirley, 22 Ala.App. 398, 116 So. 303.

An instrument in writing to verify facts. Webster, Dict.

It is used in this sense of the published acts of assembly, congress, etc. In a sense approaching this, it has been held in trials for treason that letters and other written documents were acts; 1 Fost.Cr.Cas. 198; 2 Stark. 116.

Act indicates the intention. 8 Co. 146b; Broom, Max. 301.

Civil Law

An act is a writing which states in a legal form that a thing has been said, done, or agreed. Merl. Repert.

Acts under private signature are those which have been made by private individuals under their hands.

Private acts are those made by private persons as registrers in relation to their receipts and expenditures, schedules, acquittances, and the like.

Public acts are those which have a public authority, and which have been made before public officers, are authorized by a public seal, have been made public by the authority of a magistrate, or which have been extracted and been properly authenticated from public records.

Legislation

The words bill and law are frequently used synonymously with act, People v. City of Buffalo, 161 N.Y.S. 706, 712, 175 App.Div. 218, but incorrectly; Sedgwick County Com's v. Bailey, Kan. 600; a bill being only the draft or form of the act presented to the legislature but not enacted; Southwark Bank v. Corn., 26 Pa. 446. "Act" does not include ordinances or regulations made by local authorities, or even statutes having only a local application; People v. City of Buffalo, 157 N.Y.S. 938, 940, 93 Misc. 275; although sometimes used interchangeably with "measure" and "law"; Whittomere v. Terral, 140 Ark. 493, 215 S.W. 686, 687. Generally, the word refers to statute enacted, rather than to a section. Board of Trustees of Firemen's Relief and Pension Fund of City of Muskogee v. Templeton, 184 Okl. 281, 96 P.2d 1000, 1002.

Acts are either public or private. Public acts (also called general acts, or general statutes, or statutes at large) are those which concern the whole community generally, or establish a universal rule for the governance of the whole body politic. Private acts (formerly called special, Co. Litt. 126a) are those which relate either to particular persons (personal acts) or to particular places (local acts), or which operate only upon specified individuals or their private concerns. Unity v. Burrage, 103 U.S. 454, 26 L.Ed. 465. Public acts are those which concern the whole community and of which courts of law are bound to take judicial notice. Sasser v. Martin, 101 Ga. 447, 29 S.E. 278.

A "special" or "private" act is one operating only on particular persons and private concerns; a "local" act is one applicable only to a particular part of the legislative jurisdiction. Trumper v. School Dist. No. 55 of Musseleshell County, 55 Mont. 90, 173 P. 946, 947.

To denote an avowal of criminal acts, or the concession of the truth of a criminal charge, the word "confession" seems more appropriate.

Practice

Anything done by a court and reduced to writing; a decree, judgment, resolve, rule, order, or other judicial proceeding. In Scotch law, the orders and decrees of a court, and in French and German law, all the records and documents in an action, are called "acts."

Scotch Practice

An abbreviation of actor, (proctor or advocate, especially for a plaintiff or pursuer,) used in records. "Act. A. Alt. B." an abbreviation of Actor, A. Alter, B.; that is, for the pursuer or plaintiff, A., for the defender, B. 1 Broun, 336, note.

ACT BOOK. In Scotch practice. The minute book of a court. 1 Swin. 81.

ACT IN PAIS. An act done out of court, and not a matter of record. A deed or an assurance transacted between two or more private persons in the country, that is, according to the old common law, upon the very spot to be transferred, is matter in pais. 2 Bl.Comm. 294.

ACT OF ATTAINDER. A legislative act, attainting a person. See Attainder.

ACT OF BANKRUPTCY. Any act which renders a person liable to be proceeded against as a bankrupt, or for which he may be adjudged bankrupt.

ACT OF CURATORY. In Scotch law. The act extracted by the clerk, upon any one's acceptance of being curator. Forb.Inst. pt. 1, b. 1, c. 2, tit. 2. 2 Kames, Eq. 291. Corresponding with the order for the appointment of a guardian, in English and American practice.

ACT OF ELIZABETH. See Act of Supremacy.

ACT OF GOD. An act occasioned exclusively by violence of nature without the interference of any human agency. It means a natural necessity proceeding from physical causes alone without the intervention of man. It is an act, event, happening, or occurrence, a disaster and effect due to natural causes and inevitable accident, or disaster; a natural and inevitable necessity which implies entire exclusion of all human agency which operates without interference or aid from man and which results from natural causes and is in no sense attributable to human agency. It is an accident which could not have been occasioned by human agency but proceeded from physical causes alone. Short v. Kerr, 104 Ind.App. 118, 9 N.E.2d 114, 118.

In the civil law, vis major. Any misadventure or casualty is said to be caused by the "act of G.O.D." when it happens by the direct, immediate, and exclusive operation of the forces of nature, uncontrolled or uninfluenced by the power of man and without human intervention, and is of such a character that it could not have been prevented or escaped from by any amount of foresight or prudence, or by any reasonable degree of care or dilligence, or by the aid of any appliances which the situation of the party might reasonably require him to use. Inevitable accident, or casualty; any accident produced by any physical cause which is irresistible, such as lightning, tempests, perils of the seas, an inundation, or earthquake; occasioned by the sudden impact of a disaster and effect due to human agency. It means a natural necessity procured without interference or aid from man and which results from natural causes and is in no sense attributable to human agency. It is an accident which could not have been occasioned by human agency but proceeded from physical causes alone. Short v. Kerr, 104 Ind.App. 118, 9 N.E.2d 114, 118.
ACT OF GOVERNMENT. The usual name of Cromwell’s Constitution vesting the supreme power in a Protector and two houses of Parliament, passed March 25, 1657.

ACT OF GRACE. In Scotch law. A term applied to the act of 1696, c. 32, by which it was provided that where a person imprisoned for a civil debt is so poor that he cannot aliment [maintain] himself, and will make oath to that effect, it shall be in the power of the magistrates to cause the creditor by whom he is incarcerated to provide an aliment for him, or consent to his liberation; which, if the creditor delay to do for 10 days, the magistrate is authorized to set the debtor at liberty. Bell. The term is often used to designate a general act of parliament, originating with the crown, such as has often been passed at the commencement of a new reign, or the coming of age or marriage of a sovereign, or at the close of a period of civil troubles, declaring pardon or amnesty to numerous offenders. Abbott.

ACT OF HONOR. When a bill has been protested, and a third person wishes to take it up, or accept it, for honor of one or more of the parties, the notary draws up an instrument, evidencing the transaction, called by this name.

ACT OF INDEMNITY. A statute by which those who have committed illegal acts which subject them to penalties are protected from the consequences of such acts.

ACT OF INSOLVENCY. Within the meaning of the national currency act, an act which shows a bank to be insolvent, such as nonpayment of its circulating notes, bills of exchange, or certificates of deposit; failure to make good the impairment of capital, or to keep good its surplus or reserve; in fact, any act which shows that the bank is unable to meet its liabilities as they mature, or to perform those duties which the law imposes for the purpose of sustaining its credit. Hayden v. Chemical Nat. Bank, C.C.A.N.Y., 84 Fed. 874, 28 C.C.A. 548; Kullman & Co. v. Woolley, C.C.A. Miss., 83 F.2d 129, 132; Garvin v. Chadwick Realty Corporation, 212 Ind. 499, 9 N.E.2d 268, 271.

ACT OF LAW. The operation of fixed legal rules upon given facts or occurrences, producing consequences independent of the design or will of the parties concerned; as distinguished from "act of parties." Also an act performed by judicial authority which prevents or precludes a party from fulfilling a contract or other engagement. Metcalf v. State, 57 Okl. 64, 156 P. 305, 306, L.R.A. 1916E, 595.

ACT OF PARLIAMENT. A statute, law, or edict, made by the British sovereign, with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and the commons, in parliament assembled. Acts of parliament form the leges scriptae, the written laws of the kingdom.

ACT OF SALE. In Louisiana law. An official record of a sale of property, made by a notary who writes down the agreement of the parties as stated by them, and which is then signed by the parties and attested by witnesses. Hodge v. Palms, Mich., 117 Fed. 396, 54 C.C.A. 570.

ACT OF SETTLEMENT. The statute (12 & 13 Wm. III, c. 2) limiting the crown to the Princess Sophia of Hanover, and to the heirs of her body being Protestants. 1 Bla.Com. 128; 2 Steph.Com. 290. One clause of it made the tenure of judges' office for life or good behavior independent of the crown.

ACT OF STATE. An act done by the sovereign power of a country, or by its delegate, within the limits of the power vested in him. An act of state cannot be questioned or made the subject of legal proceedings in a court of law.

ACT OF SUPREMACY. An act of 26 Hen. VIII. c. 1, and also 1 Eliz. c. 1, which recognized the king as the only supreme head on earth of the Church of England having full power to correct all errors, heresies, abuses, offenses, contempts and enormities. The oath, taken under the act, denies to the Pope any other authority than that of the Bishop of Rome.

ACT OF UNIFORMITY. In English law. The statute of 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 4, enacting that the book of common prayer, as then recently revised, should be used in every parish church and other place of public worship, and otherwise ordaining a uniformity in religious services, etc. 3 Steph. Comm. 104.

ACT OF UNION. The statutes uniting England and Wales, 27 Hen. VIII, c. 26, confirmed by 34 & 35 Hen. VIII, c. 26; England and Scotland, 5 Anne. c. 8; Great Britain and Ireland, 39 & 40 Geo. III, c. 67. 1 Bl.Com. 97.

The act uniting the three lower counties (now Delaware) to the province of Pennsylvania, passed at Upland, Dec. 7, 1682, is so called.

ACT ON PETITION. A form of summary proceeding formerly in use in the high court of admiralty, in England, in which the parties stated their respective cases briefly, and supported their statements by affidavit. 2 Dod.Adm. 174, 184; 1 Hagg.Adm. 1, note.

ACTA DIURNNA. Lat. In the Roman law. Daily acts or chronicles; the public registers or journals of the daily proceedings of the senate, assemblies of the people, courts of justice, etc. Supposed to have resembled a modern newspaper. Brande. Thus: I do not find the thing published in the acta diurna (daily records of affairs); Tacitus, Ann. 3, 3; Ainsworth, Lex.; Smith, Lex.

ACTA EXTERIORA INDICANT INTERIORA SECRETA. 8 Coke, 146b. External acts indicate undisclosed thoughts.
ACTA IN UNO JUDICIO NON PROBANT IN ALIO NISI INTER EASDEM PERSONAS. Things done in one action cannot be taken as evidence in another, unless it be between the same parties. Tray.Lat.Max. U.

ACTA PUBLICA. Lat. Things of general knowledge and concern; matters transacted before certain public officers. Calvinus, Lex.

ACTE. In French law, denotes a document, or formal, solemn writing, embodying a legal attestation that something has been done, corresponding to one sense or use of the English word "act."

Actes de naissance are the certificates of birth, and must contain the day, hour, and place of birth, together with the sex and intended christian name of the child, and the names of the parents and of the witnesses. Actes de mariage are the marriage certificates, and contain names, professions, ages, and places of birth and domicile of the two persons marrying, and of their parents; also the consent of these latter, and the mutual agreements of the intended husband and wife to take each other for better and worse, together with the usual attestations. Actes de décès are the certificates of death, which are required to be drawn up before any one may be buried. Les actes de l'état civil are public documents. Brown.

ACTE AUTHENTIQUE. A deed executed with certain prescribed formalities, in the presence of a notary, mayor, greffier, huissier, or other functionary qualified to act in the place in which it is drawn up. Argles, Fr.Merc.Law, 50.

ACTE DE FRANCISCATION. The certificate of registration of a ship, by virtue of which its French nationality is established.

ACTE D'HERITIER. Act of inheritance. Any action or fact on the part of an heir which manifests his intention to accept the succession; the acceptance may be express or tacit. Duverger.

ACTE EXTRAJUDICIAIRE. A document served at the demand of one party upon another party, without legal proceedings.

ACTING. The word "acting" means doing duty for another; officiating; holding a temporary rank or position or performing services temporarily; as, an acting captain, manager, president. Pellecchia v. Mattia, 121 N.J.L. 21, 1 A.2d 28. Performing; operating. See Meyer v. Johnston, 64 Ala. 603, 665.

An acting trustee is one who takes upon himself to perform some or all of the trusts mentioned in a will. Sharp v. Sharp, 2 Barn. & Ald. 415.

ACTING OFFICER. The phrase "acting officer" is used to designate, not an appointed incumbent, but merely a locum tenens, who is performing the duties of an office to which he himself does not claim title. State ex rel. Gossett v. O'Grady, 137 Neb. 824, 291 N.W. 497, 501; State Bank of Williams v. Gish, 167 Iowa, 526, 149 N.W. 600, 601.

"Acting Supervising Architect." Fraser v. United States, 16 Ct.Cl. 514. An acting executor is one who assumes to act as executor for a decedent, not being the executor legally appointed or the executor in fact. Morse v. Allen, 99 Mich. 303, 58 N.W. 327.

ACTIO. Lat. In the civil law. An action or suit; a right or cause of action. It should be noted that this term means both the proceeding to enforce a right in a court and the right itself which is sought to be enforced.

The first sense here given is the older one. Justinian, following Celsus, gives the well-known definition: Actio nihil aliud est quam jus perseverendi in judicio quod sibi debetur, which may be thus rendered: An action is simply the right to enforce one's demands in a court of law. See Pollock, Expansion of C. L. 92.

ACTIO AD EXHIBENDUM. An action for the purpose of compelling a defendant to exhibit a thing or title in his power. It was preparatory to another action, which was always a real action in the sense of the Roman law; that is, for the recovery of a thing, whether it was movable or immovable. Merl.Quest.tome i, 84.

ACTIO JESTIMATORIA; ACTIO QUANTI MINOR'S. Two names of an action which lay in behalf of a buyer to reduce the contract price proportionately to the defects of the object, not to cancel the sale; the judex had power, however, to cancel the sale. Hunter, Rom.Law, 332, 505.

ACTIO ARBITRARIA. Action depending on the discretion of the judge. In this, unless defendant would make amends to plaintiff as dictated by the judge in his discretion, he was liable to be condemned. Hunter, Rom.Law, 825, 987.

ACTIO BONE FIDEI. (Lat.: An action of good faith.) A class of actions in which the judge might at the trial ex officio, take into account any equitable circumstances that were presented to him affecting either of the parties to the action. 1 Spence, Eq.Jur. 210, 218.

ACTIO CIVILIS. In the common law. A civil action, as distinguished from a criminal action.

Bracton divides personal actions into criminalia et civilia, according as they grow out of crimes or contracts. Bract. fol. 101b. Actiones civilies are those forms of remedies which were established under the rigid system of the civil law, the jus civilis. See Actio Honoraria.

ACTIO COMMODATI. Included several actions appropriate to enforce the obligations of a borrower or a lender. Hunter, Rom.Law, 305.

ACTIO COMMODATI CONTRARIA. An action by the borrower against the lender, to compel the execution of the contract. Poth. Prêt a Usage, n. 75.

ACTIO COMMODATI DIRECTA. An action by a lender against a borrower, the principal object of which is to obtain a restitution of the thing lent. Poth. Prêt a Usage, nn. 65, 68.

ACTIO COMMUNI DIVIDUNDO. An action to procure a judicial division of joint property. Hunter, Rom.Law, 194. It was analogous in its object to proceedings for partition in modern law.
ACTIO CONDICIO

ACTIO CONDICIO INDEBITATI. An action by which the plaintiff recovers the amount of a sum of money or other thing he paid by mistake. Poth. Promutuum, n. 140; Merl. Repert.

ACTIO CONFESSORIA. An affirmative petitory action for the recognition and enforcement of a servitude. So called because based on plaintiff's affirmative allegation of a right in defendant's land. Distinguished from an actio negatoria, which was brought to repel a claim of defendant to a servitude in plaintiff's land. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 324.

ACTIO CONTRARIO. Counter action or cross action.

ACTIO DAMNI INJURIA. The name of a general class of actions for damages, including many species of suits for losses caused by wrongful or negligent acts. The term is about equivalent to our "action for damages."

ACTIO DE DOLO MALO. An action of fraud; an action which lay for a defrauded person against the defrauder and his heirs, who had been enriched by the fraud, to obtain the restitution of the thing of which he had been fraudulently deprived, with all its accessions (cum omni causa) or, where this was not practicable, for compensation in damages. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 227.

ACTIO DE PECULIO. An action concerning or against the peculium, or separate property of a party.

ACTIO DE PECUNIA CONSTITUTA. An action for money engaged to be paid; an action which lay against any person who had engaged to pay money for himself, or for another without any formal stipulation. Inst. 4, 6, 9; Dig. 13, 5; Cod. 4, 18.

ACTIO DE TIGNO JUNCTO. An action by the owner of material built by another into his building.

If so used in good faith double their value could be recovered; if in bad faith, the owner could recover suitable damage for the wrong, and recover the property when the building came down. So. Afr. Leg. Diet.

ACTIO DEPOSITI CONTRARIA. An action which the depositary has against the depositor, to compel him to fulfil his engagement towards him. Poth. Du Depot, n. 69.

ACTIO DEPOSITI DIRECTA. An action which is brought by the depositor against the depositary, in order to get back the thing deposited. Poth. Du Depot, n. 60.

ACTIO DIRECTA. A direct action; an action founded on strict law, and conducted according to fixed forms; an action founded on certain legal obligations which from their origin were accurately defined and recognized as actionable. See Actio Utiles.

ACTIO EMPTI. An action employed in behalf of a buyer to compel a seller to perform his obligations or pay compensation; also to enforce any special agreements by him, embodied in a contract of sale. Hunter, Rom. Law, 332, 505.

ACTIO EX CONDUCTO. An action which the bailor of a thing for hire may bring against the bailee, in order to compel him to redeliver the thing hired.

ACTIO EX CONTRACTU. In the civil and common law. An action of contract; an action arising out of, or founded on, contract. 3 Bl. Comm. 117.

ACTIO EX DELICTO. In the civil and common law. An action of tort; an action arising out of fault, misconduct, or malfeasance. Inst. 4, 6, 15; 3 Bl. Comm. 117. Ex male ficio is the more common expression of the civil law; which is adopted by Bracton. Inst. 4, 6, 1; Bract. fols. 102, 103.

ACTIO EX LOCATO. An action upon letting; an action which the person who let a thing for hire to another might have against the hirer. Dig. 19, 2; Cod. 4, 65.

ACTIO EX STIPULATU. An action brought to enforce a stipulation.

ACTIO EXERCITORIA. An action against the exercitor or employer of a vessel.

ACTIO FAMILIZE ERSICUNDIE. An action for the partition of an inheritance. Inst. 4, 6, 20; Id. 4, 17, 4. Called, by Bracton and Fleta, a mixed action, and classed among actions arising ex quasi contractu. Brac. fol. 10013; Bract. fols. 443 b, 444; Fleta, lib. 2, c. 60, § 1.

ACTIO FURTI. An action of theft; an action founded upon theft. Inst. 4, 1, 13-17; Bract. fol. 444. This could be brought only for the penalty attached to the offense, and not to recover the thing stolen, for which other actions were provided. Inst. 4, 1, 19. An appeal of larceny. The old process by which a thief can be pursued and the goods vindicated. 2 Holdsw. Hist. Eng. L. 202.

ACTIO HONORARIA. An honorary, or praetorian action. Dig. 44, 7, 25, 35. Actiones honorarice are those forms of remedies which were gradually introduced by the praetors and diles, by virtue of their equitable powers, in order to prevent the failure of justice which too often resulted from the employment of the actiones civiles. These were found so beneficial in practice that they eventually supplanted the old remedies, of which in the time of Justinian hardly a trace remained. Mackeldey, Civ. L. § 194; 5 Savigny, System.

ACTIO IN FACTUM. In action adapted to the particular case, having an analogy to some actio in jus, the latter being founded on some subsisting acknowledged law. 1 Spence, Eq. Jur. 212. The origin of these actions is similar to that of actions on the case at common law.
ACTIO IN PERSONAM.

Admiralty Law

An action directed against the particular person who is to be charged with the liability. It is distinguished from an actio in rem, which is a suit directed against a specific thing (as a vessel) irrespective of the ownership of it, to enforce a claim or lien upon it, or to obtain, out of the thing or out of the proceeds of its sale, satisfaction for an injury alleged by the claimant.

Civil Law

An action against the person, founded on a personal liability; an action seeking redress for the violation of a jus in personam or right available against a particular individual.

ACTIO IN REM. In the civil and common law. An action for a thing; an action for the recovery of a thing possessed by another. Inst. 4, 6, 1. An action for the enforcement of a right (or for redress for its invasion) which was originally available against all the world, and not in any special sense against the individual sued, until he violated it. See In Rem.

ACTIO JUDICATI. An action instituted, after four months had elapsed after the rendition of judgment, in which the judge issued his warrant to seize, first, the movables, which were sold within eight days afterwards; and then the immovables, which were delivered in pledge to the creditors, or put under the care of a curator, and if, at the end of two months, the debt was not paid, the land was sold. Dig. 42, 1; Cod. 8, 34.

According to some authorities, if the defendant then utterly denied the rendition of the former judgment, the plaintiff was driven to a new action, conducted like any other action, which was called actio judicati, and which had for its object the determination of the question whether such a judgment had been rendered. The exact meaning of the term is by no means clear. See Savigny, Syst. 305, 411; 3 Ortolan, Just. § 2033.

ACTIO LEGIS AQUILINE. An action under the Aquilian law; an action to recover damages for maliciously or injuriously killing or wounding the slave or beast of another, or injuring in any way a thing belonging to another. Otherwise called damni injurice actio.

ACTIO MANDATI. Included actions to enforce contracts of mandate or obligations arising out of them. Hunter, Rom.Law, 316.

ACTIO MIXTA. A mixed action; an action brought for the recovery of a thing, or compensation for damages, and also for the payment of a penalty; partaking of the nature both of an actio in rem and in personam. Inst. 4, 6, 16, 18, 19, 20; Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 209.

ACTIO NEGATORIA (or NEGATIVA). An action brought to repel a claim of the defendant to a servitude in the plaintiff's land. Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 324. See Actio Confessoria.

ACTIO NEGOTIORUM GESTORUM. Included actions between principal and agent and other parties to an engagement, whereby one person undertook the transaction of business for another.

ACTIO NON. In pleading. The Latin name of that part of a special plea which follows next after the statement of appearance and defense, and declares that the plaintiff "ought not to have or maintain his aforesaid action thereof against" the defendant (in Latin, actionem non habere debet). 1 Chit.Plead. 531; 2 id. 421; Stephens, Plead. 394.

ACTIO NON ACCREVIT INFRA SEX ANNOS. The name of the plea of the statute of limitations, when the defendant alleges that the plaintiff's action has not accrued within six years.

ACTIO NON DATUR NON DAMNIFICATO. An action is not given to one who is not injured. Jenk.Cent. 69.

ACTIO NON FACIT REUM, NISI MENS SIT REA. An act does not make one guilty, unless the intention be bad. Lofft, 37.

ACTIO NON ULTERIUS. In English pleading. A name given to the distinctive clause in the plea to the further maintenance of the action, introduced in place of the plea puis darrein continuance; the averment being that the plaintiff ought not further (ulterius) to have or maintain his action. Steph.Pl. 64, 65, 401.

ACTIO NOXALIS. A noxal action; an action which lay against a master for a crime committed or injury done by his slave; and in which the master had the alternative either to pay for the damage done or to deliver up the slave to the complaining party. Inst. 4, 8, pr.; Heinecc Elem. lib. 4, tit. 8. So called from noxa, the offense or injury committed. Inst. 4, 8, 1.

ACTIO PERPETUA. An action without limitation period.

ACTIO PERSONALIS. In the civil and common law. A personal action.

The ordinary term for this kind of action in the civil law is actio in personam, (q. v.,) the word personalis being of only occasional occurrence. Inst. 4, 6, 8, in tit.; id. 4, 11, pr. 1. Bracton, however, uses it freely, and hence the personal action of the common law. Bract. fols. 102a, 159b. See Action.

ACTIO PERSONALIS MORITUR CUM PERSONA. A personal right of action dies with the person. Noy, Max. 14.

The maxim was originally applied to almost every form of action, whether arising out of contract or tort, but the common law was modified by the Statute of 4 Edward the III. Monand v. Twentieth-Century Fox Film Corporation, D.C.Okl., 37 F.Supp. 649, 652.

ACTIO PIGNORATITIA. An action of pledge; an action founded on the contract of pledge (pignus). Dig. 13, 7; Cod. 4, 24.

ACTIO PCENALIS. Called also actio ex delicto. An action in which a penalty was recovered of the delinquent.

Actiones pcenales and actiones mixtce comprehended cases of injuries, for which the civil law permitted redress.
ACTIO PRIESCRIPTIS VERBIS. A form of action which derived its force from continued usage or the unwritten law. 1 Spence, Eq.Jur. 218. The distinction between this action and an action in factum is said to be, that the latter was found not on usage or the unwritten law, but by analogy to or on the equity of some subsisting law; 1 Spence, Eq.Jur. 212.

ACTIO PRIEJUDICIALIS. A preliminary or preparatory action. An action instituted for the determination of some preliminary matter on which other litigated matters depend, or for the determination of some point or question arising in another or principal action; and so called from its being determined before, (prius, or prae judicari.)

ACTIO PRIESTORIALIS. A prae torian action; one introduced by the prae tor, as distinguished from the more ancient actio civilis, (q. v.) Inst. 4, 6, 3; Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 207.

ACTIO PRO SOCIO. An action of partnership. An action brought by one partner against his associates to compel them to carry out the terms of the partnership agreement. Story, Partn., Benth. ed. § 352; Pothier, Contr. de Societe, n. 34.

ACTIO PUBLICIANA. An action which lay for one who had lost a thing of which he had bona fide obtained possession, before he had gained a property in it, in order to have it restored, under color that he had obtained a property in it by prescription. Inst. 4, 6, 4; Heinecc. Elem. lib. 4, tit. 6, § 1131; Halifax, Anal. b. 3, c. 1, n. 9. It was an honorary action, and derived its name from the prae tor Publicius, by whose edict it was first given. Inst. 4, 6, 4.

ACTIO QUIELIBET IT SUA VIA. Every action proceeds in its own way. Jenk.Cent. 77.

ACTIO QUOD JUSSU. An action given against a master, founded on some business done by his slave, acting under his order, (jussu.) Inst. 4, 7, 1; Dig. 15, 4; Cod. 4, 26.

ACTIO QUOD METUS CAUSA. An action granted to one who had been compelled by unlawful force, or fear (metus causa) that was not groundless, (metus probabilis) or Justus, (justus) to deliver, sell, or promise a thing to another. Bract. fol. 103b; Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 226.

ACTIO REALIS. A real action. The proper term in the civil law was rei vindicatio. Inst. 4, 6, 3.

ACTIO REDHIBITORIA. An action to cancel a sale in consequence of defects in the thing sold. It was prosecuted to compel complete restitution to the seller of the thing sold, with its produce and accessories, and to give the buyer back the price, with interest, as an equivalent for the restitution of the produce. Hunter, Rom.Law, 332. See Redhibitory Action.

ACTIO RERUM AMOTORUM. An action for things removed; an action which, in cases of divorce, lay for a husband against a wife, to recover things carried away by the latter, in contemplation of such divorce. Dig. 25, 2; Id. 25, 25, 30. It also lay for the wife against the husband in such cases. Dig. 25, 2, 7, 11; Cod. 5, 21.

ACTIO RESCISSORIA. An action for restoring plaintiff to a right or title which he has lost by prescription, in a case where the equities are such that he should be relieved from the operation of the prescription. Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 226. An action to rescind a prescriptive title by one who was entitled to exemption from the prescription law, as a minor, etc.

ACTIO SERVIANA. An action which lay for the lessor of a farm, or rural estate, to recover the goods of the lessee or farmer, which were pledged or bound for the rent. Inst. 4, 6, 7.

ACTIO STRICTI JURIS. An action of strict right. The class of civil law personal actions, which were adjudged only by the strict law, and in which the judge was limited to the precise language of the formula, and had no discretionary power to regard the bona fides of the transaction. See Inst. 4, 6, 28; Gaius, iii. 137; Mackeld. Rom.Law, § 210; 1 Spence, Eq.Jur. 218.

ACTIO TEMPORALIS. An action which must be brought within a limited time. See Limitation.

ACTIO TUTELIE. Action founded on the duties or obligations arising on the relation analogous to that of guardian and ward.

ACTIO UTILIS. A beneficial action or equitable action. An action founded on equity instead of strict law, and available for those who had equitable rights or the beneficial ownership of property.

Actions are divided into actiones directe or utilies. The former are founded on certain legal obligations which from their origin were accurately defined and recognized as actionable. The latter were formed analogically in imitation of the former. They were permitted in legal obligations for which the actiones directe were not originally intended, but which resembled the legal obligations which formed the basis of the direct action. Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 207.

ACTIO VENDITI. An action employed in behalf of a seller, to compel a buyer to pay the price, or perform any special obligations embodied in a contract of sale. Hunter, Rom.Law, 332.

ACTIO VI BONORUM RAPTORUM. An action for goods taken by force; a species of mixed action, which lay for a party whose goods or movables (bona) had been taken from him by force,
(vi) to recover the things so taken, together with a penalty of triple the value. Inst. 4, 2; Inst. 4, 6, 19. Bracton describes it as lying de rebus mobilius vi ablatis sive robbatis, (for movable things taken away by force, or robbed.) Brae. fol. 103b.

ACTIO VULGARIS. A legal action; a common action. Sometimes used for actio directa. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 207.

ACTION. Conduct; behavior; something done; the condition of acting; an act or series of acts.

French Commercial Law

Stock in a company, or shares in a corporation.

Practice

An ordinary proceeding in a court of justice by which one party prosecute another for the enforcement or protection of a right, the redress or prevention of a wrong, or the punishment of a wrong. 3 Bl.Comm. 118; Hall v. Decker, 46 S.D. 574, 48 Me. 257. Mixed actions are those which are brought for a wrong sustained. 3 Bl.Comm. 118; Hall v. Decker, 48 Me. 257. Mixed actions are those which are brought for the specific recovery of lands, like real actions, but comprise, joined with this claim, one for damages in respect of such property; such as the action of waste, where, in addition to the recovery of the place wasted, the defendant claims damages; the writ of entry, in which, by statute, a demand of mesne profits may be joined; and

Scotch Law

A suit or judicial proceeding.

Suit Distinguished

Strictly applied, action does not usually refer to chancery practice. City of Beckley v. Craighead, 125 W.Va. 484, 24 S.E.2d 908, 911. But terms "action" and "suit" are now nearly, if not entirely, synonymous. (3 Bl.Comm. 3, 116, et passim.) Elmo v. James, Tex.Civ.App., 282 S.W. 835, 839; Coleman v. Los Angeles County, 180 Cal. 714, 182 P. 440. Or, if there be a distinction, it is that the term "action" is generally confined to proceedings in a court of law, while "suit" is equally applied to prosecutions at law or in equity. McBride v. University Club, 112 Ohio St. 69, 146 N.E. 804, 805; Guarantee Trust & Banking Co. v. Dickson, 148 Ga. 311, 96 S.E. 561, 562; Niantic Mills Co. v. Riverport & O. Mills, 19 R.I. 34, 31 A. 432; Ulshafer v. Stewart, 71 Pa. 170. Formerly, however, an action was considered as terminating with the giving of judgment, the execution forming no part of it. (Litt. § 504; Co.Litt. 289a.) A suit included the execution. (Litt. § 291a.) So, an action is termed by Lord Coke, "the right of a suit." (2 Inst. 40.) Burritt.

Types of Actions

Actions are called, in common-law practice, ex contractu when they are founded on a contract; ex delicto when they arise out of a tort. Nelson v. Great Northern R. Co., 28 Mont. 297, 72 Pac. 642; Van Oss v. Synon, 85 Wis. 661, 56 N.W. 190.

If a cause of action arises from a breach of promise, the action is "ex contractu," and, if it arises from breach of duty growing out of contract, it is "ex delicto." Tort or trespass is none the less such because it incidentally involves breach of contract. Berning v. Colodny & Colodny, 103 Cal.App. 188, 284 P. 496, 498.

As to class or representative actions. See Class Or Representative Action.

As to the distinction between a revocatory action and an action in simulation, see Chapman v. Irwin, 157 La. 920, 103 So. 263, 265.

Civil actions are such as lie in behalf of persons to enforce their rights or obtain redress of wrongs in their relation to individuals.

Common law actions are such as will lie, on the particular facts, at common law, without the aid of a statute.

Criminal actions are such as are instituted by the sovereign power, for the purpose of punishing or preventing offenses against the public.

Local action. See Local Action.

Mixed actions partake of twofold nature of real and personal actions, having for their object the demand and restitution of real property and also personal damages for a wrong sustained. 3 Bl.Comm. 118; Hall v. Decker, 48 Me. 257. Mixed actions are those which are brought for the specific recovery of lands, like real actions, but comprise, joined with this claim, one for damages in respect of such property; such as the action of waste, where, in addition to the recovery of the place wasted, the defendant claims damages; the writ of entry, in which, by statute, a demand of mesne profits may be joined; and ower, in which a claim for detention may be included. 48 Me. 325. In the civil law, an action in which some specific thing was demanded, and also some personal obligation claimed to be performed; or, in other words, an action which proceeded both in rem and in personam. Inst. 4, 6, 20.

Penal actions are such as are brought, either by the state or by an individual under permission of a statute, to enforce a penalty imposed by law for the commission of a prohibited act.

Personal action. In civil law, an action in personam. It seeks to enforce an obligation imposed on the defendant by the contract or the delict; that is, it is the contention that he is bound to transfer some dominion or to perform some service or to repair some loss. Gaius, bk. 4, § 2. In common law. An action brought for the recovery of some debt or for some personal injury, in contradistinction to the old real actions, which related to real property only. See 3 Bl.Comm. 117. Boyd v. Cronan, 71 Me. 286; Doe v. Waterloo Min. Co., C.C.Cal., 43 F. 219; Osborn v. Fall River, 140 Mass. 508, 5 N.E. 483. An action which can be brought only by the person himself who is injured, and not by his representatives.

Popular actions, in English usage, are those actions which are given upon the breach of a penal statute, and which any man that will sue on account of the king and his officers and the statute alone, and the case of trespass. Because the action is not given to one especially, but generally to any that will prosecute, it is called “action popular;” and, from the words used in the process, “qui tam pro domino rege sequitur quam pro se ipso,” who sues as well for the king as for himself, it is called a qui tam action. Tomlins.

Real actions. At common law, one brought for the specific recovery of lands, tenements, or hereditaments. STEVENS, 3; Cockrell v. B.L. Black, 448; Hall v. Beck- er, 48 Me. 256; Doe v. Waterloo Min. Co., C.C.Cal., 43 F. 220; Mathews v. Sniggs, 75 Okl. 108, 182 P. 703, 708. They are droitural when they are based upon the right of property; possessory when based upon the right of possession. They are either writs of right; writs of entry upon possession; seisin, to obtain a sequestration of the rents of land or by an individual under permission of a statute, to enforce a penalty imposed by law for the commission of a prohibited act.

ACTION FOR ACCOUNTING. Action in equity based on inadequacy of legal remedy and particularly applicable to mutual and complicated accounts and where confidential or fiduciary relationship exists. Dahlberg v. Fisse, 328 Mo. 213, 40 S.W.2d 606, 609. To adjust mutual accounts and to strike a balance. Cline v. McKee, 186 Okl. 366, 98 P.2d 25, 27.

ACTION FOR MONEY HAD AND RECEIVED. One in assumpsit based upon promise to repay implied by law, and in respect of limitation is a stated or liquidated account. Mutual Building & Loan Ass’n v. Watson, 226 Ala. 526, 147 So. 817, 818.

Where one person has received money or its equivalent under such circumstances that in equity and good conscience he ought not to retain it and in justice it belongs to another. Interstate Life & Accident Co. v. Cook, 19 Tenn.App. 290, 86 S.W.2d 887, 891.

ACTION FOR POINDING. An action by a creditor to obtain a sequestration of the rents of land and the goods of his debtor for the satisfaction of the debt, or to enforce a distress.

ACTION IN PERSONAM, IN REM. See In Personam, In Rem.

ACTION OF ABSTRACTED MULTURES. An action for multures or tolls against those who are thirled to a mill, i.e., bound to grind their corn at a certain mill, and fail to do so. Bell.

ACTION OF ADHERENCE. See Adherence.

ACTION OF A WRIT. A phrase used when a defendant pleads some matter by which he shows that the plaintiff had no cause to have the writ sued upon, although it may be that he is entitled to another writ or action for the same matter. Cowell.

ACTION OF ASSIZE. A real action which provides the title of the demandant, merely by showing his ancestor’s possession. Sherman v. Dilley, 3 Nev. 21, 26, citing 5 Chit.Bl. 184.

ACTION OF ASSUMPSIT. See Assumpsit.

ACTION OF BOOK DEBT. A form of action for the recovery of claims, such as are usually evidenced by a book-account; this action is principally used in Vermont and Connecticut. Newton v. Higgins, 2 Vt. 366.

ACTION ON CONTRACT. An action brought to enforce rights whereof the contract is the evi-
ACTION ON THE CASE. A species of personal action of very extensive application, otherwise called "trespass on the case," or simply "case," from the circumstance of the plaintiff's whole case or cause of complaint being set forth at length in the original writ by which formerly it was always commenced. 3 Bl.Comm. 122. Wallace v. Wilmington & N. R. Co., 280 F. 700, 701.

ACTION QUASI IN REM. An action brought against persons which only seeks to subject certain property of those persons to discharge of claims asserted and judgment therein is only conclusive between parties and their privies. Tobin v. McClellan, 225 Ind. 335, 75 N.E.2d 149, 151.

ACTION REDHIBITORY, See Redhibitory Action.

ACTION TO QUIET TITLE. One in which plaintiff asserts his own estate and declares generally that defendant claims some estate in the land, without defining it, and averrs that the claim is without foundation, and calls on defendant to set forth the nature of his claim, so that it may be determined by decree.

It differs from a "suit to remove a cloud," in that plaintiff therein declares on his own title, and also avers the source and nature of defendant's claim, points out its defect, and prays that it may be declared void as a cloud on plaintiff's estate. Manning v. Gregoire, 97 Or. 394, 192 P. 406, 407. The apparent difference between an action to restore a lost instrument and one to quiet title is that, in the former, ordinarily both the titles of plaintiff and defendant are deraigned in the complaint, which must disclose that, notwithstanding an apparent interest of defendant the property belongs to plaintiff; and in the latter action the complaint need only allege the ultimate fact of plaintiff's interest and defendant's outstanding claim. Nicholson v. Nicholson, 60 Mont. 517, 216 P. 328, 329, 31 A.L.R. 548, Sec. 2, also, Slette v. Review Pub. Co., 71 Mont. 518, 230 P. 580, 581. It embraces every sort of a claim whereby the plaintiff might be deprived of his property or his title clouded or its value depreciated, or whereby the plaintiff might be incommoded or damaged by assertion of an outstanding title already held or to grow out of the adverse pretension. Bank of American Nat. Trust & Savings Ass'n v. Town of Atherton, 60 Cal.App.2d 268, 140 P.2d 675, 680.

ACTIONABLE. That for which an action will lie, furnishing legal ground for an action.

ACTIONABLE FRAUD. Deception practiced in order to induce another to part with property or surrender some legal right; a false representation made with an intention to deceive; may be committed by stating what is known to be false or by professing knowledge of the truth of a statement which is false, but in either case, the essential ingredient is a falsehood uttered with intent to deceive. Sawyer v. Prickett, 19 Wall. 146, 22 L. Ed. 105.

To constitute "actionable fraud," it must appear that defendant made a material representation; that it was false; that when he made it he knew it was false; or made it recklessly without any knowledge of its truth and as a positive assertion; that he made it with intention that it should be acted on by plaintiff; that plaintiff acted in reliance on it; and that plaintiff thereby suffered injury. Blair v. McCool, 136 Or. 139, 295 P. 950, 952. Essential elements are representation, falsity, scienter, deception, and injury. Cobb v. Cobb, 211 N.C. 146, 189 S.E. 479, 482.

ACTIONABLE MISREPRESENTATION. A false statement respecting a fact material to the contract and which is influential in procuring it. Wise v. Fuller, 29 N.J. Eq. 257.

ACTIONABLE NEGLIGENCE. The breach or nonperformance of a legal duty, through neglect or carelessness, resulting in damage or injury to another. Fidelity & Casualty Co. v. Cutts, 95 Me. 162, 49 Atl. 673.

It is failure of duty, omission of something which ought to have been done, or doing of something which ought not to have been done, or which reasonable man, guided by considerations which ordinarily regulate conduct of human affairs, would or would not do. Goff v. Emde, 32 Ohio App. 216, 167 N.E. 699, 700. Essential elements are failure to exercise due care, injury, or damage, and proximate cause. Rountree v. Fountain, 203 N.C. 381, 166 S.E. 329, 330.

ACTIONABLE NUISANCE. Anything wrongfully done or permitted which injures or annoys another in the enjoyment of his legal rights. Miller v. City of Dayton, 70 Ohio App. 173, 41 N.E.2d 728, 730.

Anything injurious to health, or indecent, or offensive to the senses, or an obstruction to the free use of property so as to interfere with the comfortable enjoyment of life or property. Cooper v. Overton, 102 Tenn. 211, 52 S.W. 183, 45 L.R.A. 591.

ACTIONABLE TORT. To constitute an "actionable tort," there must be a legal duty, imposed by statute or otherwise, owing by defendant to the one injured, and in the absence of such duty damage caused is "injury without wrong" or "damnum absque injuria." Coleman v. California Yearly Meeting of Friends Church, 27 Cal.App.2d 579, 81 P.2d 469, 470.

ACTIONABLE WORDS. In law of libel and slander, such words as naturally imply damage. Dahm v. O'Connell, 161 N.Y.S. 909, 911, 96 Misc. 582.
ACTIONABLE

Per Quod

Words actionable only on allegation and proof of special damage. Knapp v. Post Publishing & Co., 111 Colo. 492, 144 P.2d 981, 984.

Words not actionable per se upon their face, but only in consequence of extrinsic facts showing circumstances under which they were said or the damages resulting to slandered party therefrom. Smith v. Mustain, 210 Ky. 445, 276 S.W. 154, 155, 44 A.L.R. 386. Not injurious on their face in their usual and natural signification, but only in consequence of extrinsic facts and requiring innuendo. Pipplack v. Mueller, 97 Fla. 440, 121 So. 459.

Per Se

Words which law presumes must actually, proximately, and necessarily damage defendant for which general damages are recoverable and whose injurious character is a fact of common notoriety, established by the general consent of men, necessarily importing damage. Ellsworth v. Martindale-Hubbell Law Directory, 66 N.D. 578, 268 N.W. 400, 407. Words themselves opprobrious; susceptible only of opprobrious meaning. Fite v. Oklahoma Pub. Co., 146 Okl. 150, 293 P. 1073, 1075. Importing a charge of some punishable crime or some offensive disease, imputing moral turpitude, or tending to injure a party in his trade or business. Barnes v. Trundy, 31 Me. 321; Lemons v. Wells, 78 Ky. 117; Mayrant v. Richardson, 1 Nott & McC. 347, 9 Am.Dec. 707. Tending to injure one's reputation, thereby exposing him to public hatred, contempt or ridicule, tending to degrade or lower him. Hodges v. Cunningham, 160 Miss. 576, 135 So. 215, 217. Such words are actionable without allegation of special damages. Kluender v. Semann, 203 Iowa 68, 212 N.W. 326, 327. See also Libelous per se.

ACTIONABLE WRONG. Committed when a responsible person has neglected to use a reasonable degree of care for protection of another person from such injury as under existing circumstances should reasonably have been foreseen as a proximate consequence of that negligence. Chadwick v. Bush, 174 Miss. 75, 163 So. 823, 824.

ACTIONARE. L. Lat. (From actio, an action.) In old records. To bring an action; to prosecute, or sue. Thorn’s Chron.; Whishaw.

ACTIONARY. A foreign commercial term for the proprietor of an action or share of a public company’s stock; a stockholder.

ACTIONES LEGIS. In the Roman law, legal or assignable actions; actions of or at law,) Dig. 1, 2, 2, 6.

ACTIONES NOMINATIE. (Lat. named actions.) In the English chancery, writs for which there were precedents. The statute of Westminster, 2, c. 24, gave chancery authority to form new writs in consimili case; hence the action on the case.

ACCTIONS. (Fr.) Shares of corporate stock. Compare Actionary.

ACCTIONS ORDINARY. In Scotch law, all actions are not rescissory. Ersk. Inst. 4, 1, 18.

ACCTIONS RESCISSORY. In Scotch law, these are either (1) actions of proper improbation for declaring a writing false or forged; (2) actions of reduction-improbation for the production of a writing in order to have set aside or its effect ascertained under the certification that the writing if not produced shall be declared false or forged; and (3) actions of simple reduction, for declaring a writing called for null until produced. Ersk. Pric. 4, 1, 5.

ACTIONUM GENERA MAXIME SUNT SERVANDA. The kinds of actions are especially to be preserved. Lofft 460.

ACTIVE. That is in action; that demands action; actually subsisting; the opposite of passive. An active debt is one which draws interest. An active trust is a confidence connected with a duty. An active use is a present legal estate.

ACTIVE CONCEALMENT. This implies a purpose or design accomplished by words or acts, while passive concealment consists in mere silence where there is a duty to speak. Vendt v. Duenke, Mo.App., 210 S.W.2d 692, 699.

ACTIVE NEGLIGENCE. A term of extensive meaning obviously embracing many occurrences that would fall short of willful wrongdoing, or of crass negligence, for example, all inadvertent acts causing injury to others, resulting from failure to exercise ordinary care, likewise all acts the effects of which are misjudged or unforeseen, through want of proper attention, or reflection, and hence the term covers the acts of willful wrongdoing and also those which are not of that character. Cohen v. Noel, Tenn.App., 104 S.W.2d 1001, 1005.

ACTIVE SERVICE. "Active service" in army does not necessarily mean actual service, but means service performed at direction of superior officer or officers while receiving emoluments to which soldier is entitled. United States v. Woodworth, D.C. Mass., 36 F.Supp. 645, 646.

ACTIVE TRUST. See Trust.

ACTIVITY. A recreational "activity" is a physical or gymnastic exercise, an agile performance, such as dancing. McClure v. Board of Education of City of Visalia, 38 Cal.App. 500, 176 P. 711, 712.

ACTON BURNEL, STATUTE OF. In English law, a statute, otherwise called Statutum Mercatorum or De Mercatoribus the statute of the merchants, made at a parliament held at the castle or village of Acton Burnel in Shropshire, in the 11th year of the reign of Edward I. 2 Reeves, Eng. Law, 158-162. It was a statute for the collection of debts, the earliest of its class, being enacted in 1283. A further statute for the same object, and known as De Mercatoribus, was enacted 13 Edw. I. (c. 3.). See Statute Merchant.
ACTOR.

Old European Law
A patron, proctor, advocate, or pleader; one who acted for another in legal matters; one who represented a party and managed his cause. An attorney, bailiff, or steward; one who managed or acted for another. The Scotch "doer" is the literal translation.

Roman Law
One who acted for another; one who attended to another's business; a manager or agent. A slave who attended to, transacted, or superintended his master's business or affairs, received and paid out moneys, and kept accounts. Burrill.

The word has a variety of closely-related meanings, very nearly corresponding with manager. Thus, actus, manager of his master's farm; actio progirus, manager of church property; actores provinciarum, tax-gatherers, treasurers, and managers of the public debt.

Actor ecclesiae.—An advocate for a church; one who protects the temporal interests of a church. Actor viciss was the steward or head-bailiff of a town or village. Cowel.

Plaintiff or complainant. In a civil or private action the plaintiff was often called by the Romans "petitor," in a public action (causa publica) he was called "accusator." The defendant was called "reus," both in private and public causes; this term, however, according to Cicero, (De Orat. 43.) might signify either party, as indeed we might conclude from the word itself. In a private action, the defendant was often called "adversarius," but either party might be called so. Also, the term is used of a party who, for the time being, sustains the burden of proof, or has the initiative in the suit.

Actor qui contra regulam quid adduxit, non est audiendus. A plaintiff (or pleader) is not to be heard who has advanced anything against authority, (or against the rule.)

Actor sequitur forum rei. According as rei is intended as the genitive of res, a thing, or reus, a defendant, this phrase means: The plaintiff follows the forum of the property in suit, or the forum of the defendant's residence. Branch, Max. 4. Home, Law Tr. 232; Story, Confl.L. § 325 k; 2 Kent 462.

ACTORE NON PROBANTE REUS ABSOLVI TUR. When the plaintiff does not prove his case the defendant is acquitted (or absolved). Hob. 103.

ACTORI INCUMBIT ONUS PROBANDI. The burden of proof rests on the plaintiff, (or on the party who advances a proposition affirmatively.) Hob. 103.

ACTORNAY. In old Scotch law, an attorney. Skene.

ACTRIX. Lat. A female actor; a female plain tiff. Calvinus, Lex.

ACTS OF COURT. Legal memoranda made in the admiralty courts in England, in the nature of pleas.

ACTS OF POSSESSION. To constitute adverse possession, acts of possession must be such as, if seen by the party whose claim is sought to be divested, would apprise him that the party doing the acts claimed the ownership of the property. Crosby v. City of Greenville, 183 Mich. 452, 150 N.W. 246, 248.

ACTS OF SEDERUNT. In Scotch law, ordinances for regulating the forms of proceeding, before the court of session, in the administration of justice, made by the judges, who have the power by virtue of a Scotch act of parliament passed in 1540. Ersk. Prin. § 14.

It is used as a legal term in contradistinction to virtual or constructive as of possession or occupation; Cleveland v. Crawford, 7 Hun (N.Y.) 616; or an actual settler, which implies actual residence; McLintyre v. Sherwood, 82 Cal. 139, 22 Pac. 937. An actual seizure means nothing more than seizure, since there was no fiction of constructive seizure before the act; L.R. 6 Exch. 203.

Actually is opposed to seemingly, pretendedly, or feignedly, as actually engaged in farming means really, truly, in fact; In re Strawbridge & Mays, 39 Ala. 367; Ayer & Lord Tie Co. v. Commonwealth, 208 Ky. 600, 271 S.W. 693, 694.

ACTUAL AUTHORITY. In the law of agency, such authority as a principal intentionally confers on the agent, intentionally or by want of ordinary care allows the agent to believe himself to possess. National Cash Register Co. v. Wichita Frozen Food Lockers, Tex.Civ.App., 172 S.W.2d 781, 787. Includes both express and implied authority. Grismore v. Consolidated Products Co., 232 Iowa 328, 5 N.W.2d 646, 651.

ACTUAL BIAS. See Bias.

ACTUAL CASH VALUE. The fair or reasonable cash price for which the property could be sold in the market, in the ordinary course of business, and not at forced sale; the price it will bring in a fair market after reasonable efforts to find a purchaser who will give the highest price. Peavy-Wilson Lumber Co. v. Jackson, 161 La. 669, 109 So. 351, 352. What property is worth in money, allowing for depreciation. Glens Falls Ins. Co. of New York v. Garner, 229 Ala. 39, 155 So. 533, 536. Ordinarily, "actual cash value," "fair market price," and "market value" are synonymous terms. Butler v. JEthna Ins. Co. of Hartford, Conn., 64 N.D. 764, 256 N.W. 214, 218.
ACTUAL CHANGE OF POSSESSION. In statutes of frauds, an open, visible, and unequivocal change of possession, manifested by the usual outward signs, as distinguished from a merely formal or constructive change. Stevens v. Irwin, 15 Cal. 503, 76 Am.Dec. 500.

ACTUAL COST. The actual price paid for goods by a party, in the case of a real bona fide purchase, and not the market value of the goods. Ogunquit Village Corporation v. Inhabitants of Wells, 123 Me. 207, 122 A. 522, 524.

"Actual cost" has no common-law significance, and it is without any well-understood trade or technical meaning. It is a general or descriptive term which may have varying meanings according to the circumstances in which it is used. It may be applied to a price which is substantially paid rather than the average or proportional part of the cost. Its meaning may be restricted to overhead or extended to other items. State v. Northwest Poultry & Egg Co., 203 Minn. 438, 281 N.W. 753, 755.

ACTUAL DELIVERY. See Delivery.

ACTUAL EVICTION. An actual expulsion of the tenant out of all or some part of the demised premises; a physical ouster or dispossession from the very thing granted or some substantial part thereof. Cauley v. Northern Trust Co., 315 Ill. App. 307, 43 N.E.2d 147, 155, 315.

ACTUAL FRAUD. See Fraud.

ACTUAL LOSS. One resulting from the real and substantial destruction of the property insured.

ACTUAL MARKET VALUE. In custom laws, the price at which merchandise is freely offered for sale to all purchasers; the price which the manufacturer or owner would have received for merchandise, sold in the ordinary course of trade in the usual wholesale quantities. United States v. Sischo, D.C.Wash., 262 F. 1001, 1011.

ACTUAL NOTICE. See Notice.

ACTUAL POSSESSION. See Possession.

ACTUAL PRACTICE. Active, open and notorious engagement in business, vocation or profession as opposed to casual, occasional or clandestine practice. State ex rel. Laughlin v. Washington State Bar Ass'n, 26 Wash.2d 914, 176 P.2d 301, 309.

ACTUAL SALES. Lands are "actually sold" at a tax sale, so as to entitle the treasurer to the statutory fees, when the sale is completed; when he has collected from the purchaser the amount of the bid. Miles v. Miller, 5 Neb. 272.

ACTUAL VIOLENCE. An assault with actual violence is an assault with physical force put in action, exerted upon the person assailed. The term "violence" is synonymous with physical force, and the two are used interchangeably in relation to assaults. Tanner v. State, 24 Ga.App. 132, 100 S.E. 44.

ACTUARIUS. In Roman law, a notary or clerk. One who drew the acts or statutes, or who wrote in brief the public acts.

An officer who had charge of the public baths; an officer who received the money for the soldiers, and distributed it among them; a notary.

An actor, which see. Du Cange.

ACTUARY. In English ecclesiastical law, a clerk that registers the acts and constitutions of the lower house of convocation; or a registrar in a court christian.

Also an officer appointed to keep savings banks accounts; the computing officer of an insurance company; a person skilled in calculating the value of life interests, annuities, and insurances. Champagne v. Unity Industrial Life Ins. Co., La. App., 161 So. 52, 53.

ACTUM. Lat. A deed; something done.

ACTUS. In the civil law, an act or action. Non tantum verbis, sed etiam actu; not only by words, but also by act. Dig. 46, 8. 5.

A species of right of way, consisting in the right of driving cattle, or a carriage, over the land subject to the servitude. Inst., 2, 3, pr. It is sometimes translated a "road," and included the kind of way termed "iter," or path. Lord Coke, who adopts the term "actus" from Bracton, defines it a foot and horse way, vulgarly called "pack and prime way;" but distinguishes it from a cart-way. Co.Litt. 56a; Boyden v. Achenbach, 79 N.C. 539.

In old English law, an act of parliament; a statute. 8 Coke 40. A distinction, however, was sometimes made between actus and statutum. Actus parlamenti was an act made by the lords and commons; and it became statutum, when it received the king's consent. Barring.Obs.St. 46, note b.

Actus Del nemini est damnosus. The act of God is hurtful to no one. 2 Inst. 287. That is, a person cannot be prejudiced or held responsible for an accident occurring without his fault and attributable to the "act of God." See Act of God.

Actus Del nemini facit injuriam. The act of God does injury to no one. 2 Bl. Comm. 122. A thing which is inevitable by the act of God, which no industry can avoid, nor policy prevent, will not be construed to the prejudice of any person in whom there was no laches. Broom, Max. 230.

Actus inceptus, cujus perfectio pendet ex voluntate partium, revocari potest; si autem pendet ex voluntate testiae persona vel ex contingenti, revocari non potest. An act already begun, the completion of which depends on the will of the parties, may be revoked; but if it depend on the will of a third person, or on a contingency, it cannot be revoked. Bac. Max. reg. 20.

Ad. Lat. At; by; for; near; on account of; to; until; upon; with relation to or concerning.

Ad ABUNDANTIorem CAUTELAM. L. Lat. For more abundant caution. 2 How. State Tr. 1182. Otherwise expressed, ad cautelam ex super-abundanti. Id. 1163.

AD ADMITTENDUM CLERICUM. For the admitting of the clerk. A writ in the nature of an execution, commanding the bishop to admit his clerk, upon the success of the latter in a quare impedit.

AD ALIUD EXAMEN. To another tribunal; belonging to another court, cognizance, or jurisdiction.

AD DAMNUM. In pleading. "To the damage." The technical name of that clause of the writ or declaration which contains a statement of the plaintiff’s money loss, or the damages which he claims. Vincent v. Life Ass’n, 75 Conn. 650, 55 Atl. 177.

AD DEFENDENDUM. To defend. 1 Bl.Comm. 227.

AD DIEM. At a day; at the day. Townsh.Pl. 23. Ad alium diem. At another day. Y.B. 7 Hen. VI, 13. Ad certum diem, at a certain day. 2 Strange, 747. Solvit ad diem; he paid at or on the day. 1 Chit.Pl. 485.

AD EA QUZE FREQUENTIUS ACCIDUNT JURA ADAPTANTUR. Laws are adapted to those cases which most frequently occur. 2 Inst. 137; Broom, Max. 43.

Laws are adapted to cases which frequently occur. A statute, which, construed according to its plain words, is, in all cases of ordinary occurrence, in no degree inconsistent or unreasonable, should not be varied by construction in every case, merely because there is one possible but highly improbable case in which the law would operate with great severity and against our notions of justice. The utmost that can be contended is that the construction of the statute should be varied in that particular case, so as to obviate the injustice. 7 Exch. 549; 8 Exch. 778.

AD EFFECTUM. To the effect, or end. Co.Litt. 204a; 2 Crabb, Real Prop. p. 802, § 2143. Ad effectum sequentem, to the effect following. 2 Salk. 417.

ADDENDUM. A thing that is added or to be added; a list or section consisting of added material.

ADDICERE. Lat. In the civil law, to adjudge or condemn; to assign, allot, or deliver; to sell. In the Roman law, addico was one of the three words used to express the extent of the civil jurisdiction of the praetors.

ADDICT. As defined in Acts 1894, No. 157, one who has acquired the habit of using spirituous liquors or narcotics to such an extent as to deprive him of reasonable self-control. Interdiction of Gasquet, 147 La. 722, 85 So. 884, 888.

ADDICTIO. In the Roman law, the giving up to a creditor of his debtor's person by a magistrate; also the transfer of the (deceased) debtor's goods to one who assumes his liabilities.

Additio probat minoritatem. An addition [to a name] proves or shows minority or inferiority. 4 Inst. 80; Wing.Max. 211, max. 60. That is, if it be said that a man has a fee tail, it is less than if he has the fee. This maxim is applied by Lord Coke to courts, and, terms of law; minoritas being understood in the sense of difference, inferiority, or qualification. Thus, the style of the king's bench is coram rege, and the style of the court of chancery is coram domino rege in cancellaria; the addition showing the difference. 4 Inst. 80. By the word "fee" is intended fee-simple, fee-tail not being intended by it, unless there be added to it the addition of the word "tail." 2 Bl.Comm. 106; Litt. § 1.

ADDITION. Implies physical contact, something added to another. Structure physically attached to or connected with building itself. Mack v. Eyssell, 332 Mo. 671, 59 S.W.2d 1049; Washington Loan & Trust Co. v. Hammond, 51 App.D.C. 260, 278 F. 569, 571.

Insurance

The word "addition," as applied to buildings, usually means a part added or joined to a main building. Agnew v. Sun Ins. Office, 167 Wis. 456, 167 N.W. 829. It may also apply to buildings ap-

Lien

Within the meaning of the mechanic's lien law, an "addition" to a building must be a lateral addition. Lake & Risley Co. v. Still, 7 N.J.Misc. 47, 144 A. 110. It must occupy ground without the limits of the building to which it constitutes an addition, so that the lien shall be upon the building formed by the addition and the land upon which it stands. Updike v. Skillman, 27 N.J.L. 132. See also, Lamson v. Maryland Casualty Co., 196 Iowa 1185, 194 N.W. 70, 71.

An alteration in a former building, by adding to its height, or to its depth, or to the extent of its interior accommodations, is merely an "alteration," and not an "addition." Putting a new story on an old building is not an addition. Updike v. Skillman, 27 N.J.L. 132. See, also, Lamson v. Maryland Casualty Co., 196 Iowa 1185, 194 N.W. 70, 71.

Did not include new livestock acquired by mortgagee after execution of mortgage. American State Bank of Watertown v. Boyle, 212 Minn. 293, 4 N.W.2d 108, 109.

Name

Whatever is added to a man's name by way of title or description. Cowell.

In English law, there are four kinds of additions,—additions of estate, such as yeoman, gentleman, esquire; additions of degree, or names of dignity, as knight, earl, marquis, duke; additions of trade, mystery, or occupation, as scrivener, painter, mason, carpenter; and additions of place of residence, as London, Chester, etc. The only additions recognized in American law are those of mystery and residence.

At common law there was no need of addition in any case; 2 Ld.Raym. 988; it was required only by stat. 1 Hen. V. c. 5, in cases where process of outlawry lies. In all other cases it is only a description of the person, and common reputation is sufficient; 2 Ld.Raym. 849.

ADDITIONAL. This term embraces the idea of joining or uniting one thing to another, so as thereby to form one aggregate. Ex parte Boddie, 200 S.C. 379, 21 S.E.2d 4, 8.

"Additional security" imports a security, which, united with or joined to the former one, is deemed to make it, as an aggregate, sufficient as a security from the beginning. State v. Hull, 53 Miss. 626; Searcy v. Cullman County, 196 Ala. 287, 71 So. 664, 665.

ADDITIONAL BURDEN. See Eminent Domain.

ADDITIONAL INSURED. A person using another's automobile, which is covered by liability policy containing statutory omnibus clause, only when insured's permission is expressly or impliedly given for particular use. Stewart v. City of Rio Vista, 72 Cal.App.2d 279, 164 P.2d 274, 275.

Driver chosen by friend to whom automobile was entrusted by husband who had possession with direct permission of wife in whose name record title lay was not additional insured. Fox v. Crawford, Ohio App., 80 N.E.2d 180, 181.

Where driver of automobile at time it struck pedestrian was using automobile for his own purpose after having received permission from owner only to get automobile started and return automobile to owner’s home, driver was not additional insured. Howe v. Farmers Auto. Inter-Insurance Exchange; Wash., 202 P.2d 464, 472.

Legislation
A formal request addressed to the executive by one or both branches of the legislative body, requesting him to perform some act.

It is provided as a means for the removal of judges deemed unworthy, though the causes of removal would not warrant impeachment. It is not provided for in the Constitution of the United States; and even in those states where the right exists it is exercised but seldom.

Offense
Not synonym of hazard, but an antonym, and, as respects gaming and devices, means skillful management, dexterity, or adroitness. In re Wig-

ADDRESS TO THE CROWN. When the royal speech has been read in Parliament, an address in answer thereto is moved in both houses. Two members are selected in each house by the administration for moving and seconding the address. Since the commencement of the session 1890-1891, it has been a single resolution expressing their thanks to the sovereign for his gracious speech.

ADDUCE. To present, bring forward, offer, introduce. Used particularly with reference to evidence. Tuttle v. Story County, 56 Iowa 316, 9 N.W. 292.

Broader in its signification than the word "of-ADEEM. To take away, recall, or revoke. To satisfy a legacy by some gift or substituted disposition, made by the testator, in advance. Tolman v. Tolman, 85 Me. 317, 27 Atl. 184. Woodburn Lodge No. 102, I. O. O. F., v. Wilson, 148 Or. 150, 34 P.2d 611, 614. See Ademption.

If the identical thing bequeathed is not in existence, or has been disposed of, the legacy is "adeemed" and the legatee's rights are gone. Lange v. Lange, 127 N.J.Eq. 315, 12 A.2d 840, 843; Welch v. Welch, 147 Miss. 728, 113 So. 197, 198.

ADELANTADO. In Spanish law, the military and political governor of a frontier province. This office has long since been abolished. Also a president or president judge; a judge having jurisdiction over a kingdom, or over certain provinces only. So called from having authority over the judges of those places. Las Partidas, pt. 3, tit. 4, 1, 1.

ADELING, or ATHELING. Noble; excellent. A title of honor among the Anglo-Saxons, properly belonging to the king's children. Spelman.

ADEMPTION. Lat. In the civil law, a revocation of a legacy; an ademption. Inst. 2, 21, pr. Where it was expressly transferred from one person to another, it was called translatio. Inst. 2, 21, 1; Dig. 34, 4.

ADEMPTION. Extinction or withdrawal of legacy by testator's act equivalent to revocation or indicating intention to revoke. Tagnon's Adm'x v. Tagnon, 253 Ky. 374, 69 S.W.2d 714.

Removal. Lewis v. Hill, 387 Ill. 542, 56 N.E.2d 619, 621. Testator's giving to a legatee that which he has provided in his will, or his disposing of that part of his estate so bequeathed in such manner as to make it impossible to carry out the will. Hurley v. Schuler, 296 Ky. 118, 176 S.W.2d 275, 276. Revocation, recalling, or cancellation, of a legacy, according to the apparent intention of the testator, implied by the law from acts done by him in his life, though such acts do not amount to an express revocation of it. Burnham v. Comfort, 108 N.Y. 535, 15 N.E. 710.
The act by which the testator pays to his legatee, in his life-time, a general legacy which by his will he had proposed to give him at his death, 1 Rop.Leg. p. 365; and the act by which a specific legacy has become inoperative on account of the testator having parted with the subject. Dillender v. Wilson, 228 Ky. 758, 16 S.W.2d 173, 174.

See Advancement.

ADEO. Lat. So, as. Adeo plene et integre, as fully and entirely. 10 Coke, 65.

ADEQUATE. Sufficient; proportionate; equally efficient; equal to what is required; suitable to the case or occasion; satisfactory. Nagel v. City of Billings, 77 Mont. 205, 250 P.445, 446. Equal to some given occasion or work. Nissen v. Miller, 44 N.M. 487, 105 P.2d 324, 326. Commensurate; it does not mean average or graduation. Vander made v. Appert, 125 N.J.Eq. 366, 5 A.2d 868, 871.

ADEQUATE CARE. Such care as a man of ordinary prudence would himself take under similar circumstances to avoid accident; care proportionate to the risk to be incurred. Wallace v. Wilmington & N. R. Co., 8 Houst. (Del.) 529, 18 Atl. 818.

Such only as puts injured party in as good a condition as he would have been in if injury had not been inflicted. Town of Winchester v. Cox, 129 Conn. 106, 26 A.2d 592, 597.

ADEQUATE CONSIDERATION. One which is equal, or reasonably proportioned, to the value of that for which it is given. 1 Story, Eq.Jur. §§ 244-247. One which is not so disproportionate as to shock our sense of that morality and fair dealing which should always characterize transactions between man and man. U. S. Smelting, Refining & Milling Co. v. Utah Power & Light Co., 197 P. 902, 905, 58 Utah, 168. Fair and reasonable under circumstances. Boulenger v. Morison, 88 Cal.App. 664, 264 P. 256, 259. Reasonably just and equitable. Laguna Land & Water Co. v. Green wood, 92 Cal.App. 570, 268 P. 699, 700.

ADEQUATE OR REASONABLE FACILITIES. Such railroad facilities as might be fairly demanded, with regard to size of place, extent of demand for transportation, cost of furnishing additional accommodation asked for, and to all other facts which would have bearing upon question of convenience and cost. Kurn v. State, 175 Okl. 379, 52 P.2d 841, 843.

ADEQUATE PREPARATION. Embraces full consultation with accused, interviews with witnesses, study of facts and law, and determination of character of defense to be made and policy to be followed during trial. Nelson v. Commonwealth, 295 Ky. 641, 175 S.W.2d 132, 133.

ADEQUATE PROVOCATION. An adequate provocation to cause a sudden transport of passion that may suspend the exercise of judgment and exclude premeditation and a previously formed design is one that is calculated to excite such anger as might obscure the reason or dominate the volition of an ordinary reasonable man. Commonwealth v. Webb, 252 Pa. 187, 97 A. 189, 191.

ADEQUATE REMEDY. One vested in the complaining, to which he may at all times resort at his own option, fully and freely, without let or hindrance. Wheeler v. Bedford, 7 A. 22, 54 Conn. 244; State ex rel. Heimov v. Thomson, 131 Conn. 8, 37 A.2d 689, 692. Suitable, proportionate, or sufficient. Fischer v. Damm, 36 Ohio App. 515, 173 N.E. 449, 451.

A remedy which is plain and complete and as practical and efficient to the ends of justice and its prompt administration as the remedy in equity. Farmers & Traders Bank v. Kendrick, 341 Mo. 571, 108 S.W.2d 62, 64.

A remedy that affords complete relief with reference to the particular matter in controversy, and is appropriate to the circumstances of the case. State v. Huwe, 103 Ohio St. 546, 134 N.E. 456, 459. A remedy to be adequate, precluding resort to mandamus, must not only be one placing relator in statu quo, but must itself enforce in some way performance of the particular duty. State v. Erickson, 104 Conn. 542, 133 A. 683, 686. Must reach end intended, and, actually compel performance of duty in question. Buchanan v. Buchanan, 124 Va. 255, 6 S.E.2d 612, 620. Must be plain, accurate, certain, speedy, specific, and appropriate to the particular circumstances, and must also be equally as convenient, beneficial, and effective as the remedy by mandamus. Simpson v. Williams Rural High School Dist., Tex.Civ.App., 153 S.W.2d 852, 856.

ADESSE. In the civil law; to be present; the opposite of abesse. Calvin.

ADFERRUMINATIO. In the civil law, the welding together of iron; a species of adjunctio, (q. v.). Called also ferruminatio. Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 276; Dig. 6, 1, 23, 5.

ADHERENCE. In Scotch law, the name of a form of action by which the mutual obligation of marriage may be enforced by either party. Bell. It corresponds to the English action for the restitution of conjugal rights. Wharton.
ADHERING. Joining, leagued with, cleaving to; as, "adhering to the enemies of the United States."

Any intentional act furthering hostile designs of enemies of the United States, or an act which intentionally strengthens or tends to strengthen enemies of the United States, or which weakens or tends to weaken power of the United States to resist and attack such enemies, constitutes "adhering" to such enemies. United States v. Haupt, D.C. Ill., 47 F.Supp. 836, 839.

Rebels, being citizens: are not "enemies," within the meaning of the constitution; hence a conviction for treason, in promoting a rebellion, cannot be sustained under that branch of the constitutional definition which speaks of "adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort." United States v. Greathouse, 2 Abb.U.S. 364, Fed.Cas.No. 15,254.

ADHIBERE. In the civil law, to apply; to employ; to exercise; to use. Adhibere diligentiam, to use care. Adhibere vim, to employ force.

ADJACENT. Lying near or close to; sometimes, contiguous; neighboring. Ex parte Jeffcoat, 108 Fla. 207, 146 So. 827. Adiacent implies that the two objects are not widely separated, though they may not actually touch, Harrison v. Guilford County, 218 N.C. 718, 12 S.E.2d 269, while adjoining imports that they are so joined or united to each other that no third object intervenes. Wolfe v. Hurley, D.C.Ia., 46 F.2d 515, 521.

Suburbs of city not within limits of another municipality though a long strip of land 10 feet wide connected the property with city limits. Leibler v. City of Dallas, Tex. Civ.App., 177 S.W.2d 231, 235.

ADJECTIVE LAW. The aggregate of rules of procedure or practice. As opposed to that body of law which the courts are established to administer, (called "substantive law," ) it means the rules according to which the substantive law is administered. That part of the law which provides a method for enforcing or maintaining rights, or obtaining redress for their invasion. Maurizi v. Western Coal & Mining Co., 321 Mo. 378, 11 S.W.2d 268, 272. Holl.Jur. 61,238.

ADJOINING. The word in its etymological sense, means touching or contiguous, as distinguished from lying near to or adjacent. Bourne v. Texas & N. 0. R. Co., Tex.Civ.App., 295 S.W. 670, 674; Plainfield-Union Water Co. v. Inhabitants of City of Plainfield, 84 N.J.L. 634, 87 A. 448, 450. To be in contact with; to abut upon. State ex rel. Boynton v. Bunton, 141 Kan. 103, 40 P.2d 326, 328. And the same meaning has been given to it when used in statutes. City of New York v. Alheitt, 151 N.Y.S. 463, 464, 88 Misc. 524. See Adjacent.

ADJOURN. To put off; defer; postpone. To postpone action of a convened court or body until another time specified, or indefinitely, the latter being usually called to adjourn sine die. Bispham v. Tucker, 2 N.J.L. 253; Reynolds v. Cropsey, 241 N.Y. 389, 150 N.E. 303. To suspend or recess during a meeting which continues in session. Byrd v. Byrd, 193 Miss. 249, 8 So.2d 510, 512.

Suspending business for a time, delaying. Probably, without some limitation, it would, when used with reference to a sale on foreclosure, or any judicial proceeding, properly include the fixing of the time to which the postponement was made. Waldrop v. Kansas City Southern Ry. Co., 131 Ark. 453, 199 S.W. 369, 371, L.R.A.1918B, 1081.

ADJOURNMENT. A term applied in Scotch law and practice to the records of the criminal courts. The original records of criminal trials were called "buckles of adiornale," or "books of adjournal," few of which are now extant. An "act of adjournal" is an order of the court of justice entered on its minutes.

ADJOURNAMENTUM EST AD DIEM DICERE
A continuation of the same meeting, and at such adjourned meeting the governing body can do any act which might have been done if no adjournment had taken place, and limitations imposed on governing body as regards action at original meeting obtain at adjourned meeting. Vogel v. Parker, 118 N.J.L. 521, 193 A. 817, 818. One ordered by board at regular meeting, and which is to convene after termination of such regular meeting and prior to next regular meeting. Byrd v. Byrd, 193 Miss. 249, 8 So.2d 510, 513.

ADJOURNED SUMMONS. A summons taken out in the chambers of a judge, and afterwards taken into court to be argued by counsel.

ADJOURNED TERM. In practice, a continuance, by adjournment, of a regular term. Harris v. Gest, 4 Ohio St. 473; Kingsley v. Bagby, 2 Kan. App. 23, 41 P. 991. Distinguished from an "additional term," which is a distinct term. Harris v. Gest, 4 Ohio St. 473; Kingsley v. Bagby, 2 Kan. App. 23, 41 P. 991. A continuation of a previous or regular term; the same term prolonged, where-in power of court over business which has been done, and the entries made at the regular term, continues. Van Dyke v. State, 22 Ala. 57; Carter v. State, 14 Ga.App. 242, 80 S.E. 533, 534.

ADJOURNMENT. A putting off or postponing of business or of a session until another time or place; the act of a court, legislative body, public meeting, or officer, by which the session or assembly is dissolved, either temporarily or finally, and the business in hand dismissed from consideration, either definitely or for an interval. If the adjournment is final, it is said to be sine die. See Johnson City v. Tennessee Eastern Electric Co., 133 Tenn. 632, 182 S.W. 587, 589.

In the civil law a calling into court; a summonging at an appointed time. Due Cange.

ADJOURNMENT DAY. A further day appointed by the judges at the regular sittings at nisi prius to try issue of fact not then ready for trial.

ADJOURNMENT DAY IN ERROR. In English practice, a day appointed some days before the end of the term at which matters left undone on the affirmation day are finished. 2 Tidd, Pr. 1176.

ADJOURNMENT IN EYRE. The appointment of a day when the justices in eyre mean to sit again. Cowell; Spelman.

ADJOURNMENT SINE DIE. An adjournment without setting a time for another meeting or session. See Sine Die.

ADJUDGE. To pass on judicially, to decide, settle, or decree, or to sentence or condemn. People v. Rave, 364 Ill. 72, 3 N.E.2d 972, 975.

ADJUDICATAIRE. In Canadian law, a purchaser at a sheriff's sale. See 1 Low.Can. 241; 10 Low. Can. 325.

ADJUDICATEE. In French and civil law, the purchaser at a judicial sale. Brent v. New Orleans, 6 So. 793, 41 La.Ann. 1098.

ADJUDICATIO. In the civil law, an adjudication. The judgment of the court that the subject-matter is the property of one of the litigants; confirmation of title by judgment. Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 204.

ADJUDICATION. The giving or pronouncing a judgment or decree in a cause; also the judgment given. People ex rel. Argus Co. v. Hugo, 168 N.Y. S. 25, 27, 101 Misc. 481. Or the entry of a decree by a court in respect to the parties in a case. Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., v. United Artists Corporation, C.C.A.Del., 113 F.2d 703, 706.

It implies a hearing by a court, after notice, of legal evidence on the factual issue involved. Genzer v. Fillip, Tex.Civ.App., 134 S.W.2d 730, 732. The equivalent of a "determination." Campbell v. Wyoming Development Co., 55 Wyo. 347, 100 P.2d 124, 132. And contemplates that the claims of all the parties thereto have been considered and set at rest. Miller v. Scobie, 152 Fla. 328, 11 So.2d 892, 894. The term is principally used in bankruptcy proceedings, the adjudication being the order which declares the debtor to be a bankrupt. First Nat. Bank v. Pothuisje, 217 Ind. 1, 25 N.E.2d 436, 438, 130 A.L.R. 1238.

French Law

A sale made at public auction and upon competition. Adjudications are voluntary, judicial, or administrative. Duverger.

Scotch Law

A species of diligence, or process for transferring the estate of a debtor to a creditor, carried on as an ordinary action before the court of session. A species of judicial sale, redeemable by the debtor. A decreet of the lords of session, adjudging and appropriating a person's lands, hereditaments, or any heritable right to belong to his creditor, who is called the "adjudger," for payment or performance. Bell; Ersk.Inst. c. 2, tit. 12, §§ 39-55; Forb.Inst. pt. 3, b. 1, c. 2, tit. 6.

Adjudication contra hereditatem jacentem. When a debtor's heir apparent renounces the succession, any creditor may obtain a decree cognitio causa, the purpose of which is that the amount of the debt may be ascertained so that the real estate may be adjudged.

Adjudication in bankruptcy. See Bankruptcy.
ADJUDICATION

Adjudication in implement. An action by a grantee against his grantor to compel him to complete the title.

An additional judge sometimes appointed in the Court of Delegates, q. v.

ADJUNCTIO. In the civil law, adjunction; a species of accessio, whereby two things belonging to different proprietors are brought into firm connection with each other; such as interweaving, (intertextura); welding together, (adferminatio); soldering together, (applumbatura); painting, (pictura); writing, (scriptura); building, (inadificatio); sewing, (ratio); and planting, (plantatio). Inst. 2, 1, 26-34; Dig. 6, 1, 23; Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 276. See Accessio.

ADJUNCTION. In civil law, the attachment or union permanently of a thing belonging to one person to that belonging to another. This union may be caused by inclusion, as if one man’s diamond be set in another’s ring, or by soldering, sewing, construction, writing, or painting.

The common law implicitly adopts the civil law doctrines. See 2 Bla. Com. 404. See Accession.

One associated with another in a subordinate or an auxiliary manner; an associate.

ADJUNCTS. Additional judges sometimes appointed in the Court of Delegates, q. v. See Sheldon, Lun. 310; 1 Hagg. Eccl. Rep. 384; 2 Id. 84; 3 id. 471.

ADJUNCTUM ACCESSORIUM. An accessory or appurtenance.

ADJURATION. A swearing or binding upon oath.

ADJUST. To settle or arrange; to free from differences or discrepancies; to bring to satisfactory state so that parties are agreed, as to adjust amount of loss by fire. Western Loggers’ Machinery Co. v. National Union Fire Ins. Co., 136 Or. 549, 299 P. 311, 312. Controversy to property or estate, In re Sidman’s Estate, 278 N.Y.S. 43, 154 Misc. 675. To bring to proper relations; to settle; Jeff Davis County v. Davis, Tex. Civ. App., 192 S.W. 291, 295. To determine and apportion an amount due. Flaherty v. Insurance Co., 46 N.Y.S. 934, 20 App. Div. 275. Accounts are adjusted when they are settled and a balance struck. Townes v. Birchett, 12 Leigh Va. 173, 201. It is sometimes used in the sense of pay. See Lynch v. Nugent, 80 Iowa, 422, 46 N.W. 61. When used in reference to a liquidated claim, Combination Oil & Gas Co. v. Brady, Tex. Civ. App., 96 S.W.2d 415, 416.

ADJUSTED COST BASIS. For income tax purposes, original cost plus additions to capital less depreciation results in the “adjusted cost basis.” Herder v. Helvering, 106 F.2d 153, 162, 70 App. D. C. 287.

In the law of insurance, the adjustment of a loss is the ascertainment of its amount and the ratable distribution of it among those liable to pay it; the settling and ascertaining the amount of the indemnity which the assured, after all allowances and deductions made, is entitled to receive under the policy, and fixing the proportion which each underwriter is liable to pay. Marsh Ins. 4th Ed. 499; 2 Phil. Ins. §§ 1814, 1815; New York v. Insurance Co., 39 N.Y. 45, 100 Am. Dec. 400; Whipple v. Insurance Co., 11 R. 1. 139.

ADJUTANT GENERAL. The term “civil adjutant general” is used as one of convenience merely to designate state adjutant general who has not been officially recognized by War Department. People v. Newlon, 77 Colo. 516, 238 P. 44, 47.

ADJUVARI QUIPPE NOS, NON DECIPI, BENE-FICIO OPORTET. We ought to be favored, not injured by that which is intended for our benefit. (The species of bailment called “loan” must be to the advantage of the borrower, not to his detriment.) Story, Bailm. § 275. See 8 El. & Bl. 1051.

ADLAMWR. In Welsh law, a proprietor who, for some cause, entered the service of another proprietor, and left him after the expiration of a year and a day. He was liable to the payment of 30 pence to his patron. Wharton.

ADLEGiare. To purge one’s self of a crime by oath.

ADMANUENSIS. A person who swore by laying his hands on the book.

ADMEASUREMENT OF PASTURE. In English law, a writ which lay between those that have common of pasture appendant, or by vicinage, in cases where any one or more of them surcharges the common with more cattle than they ought. Bract. fol. 229a; 1 Crabb, Real Prop. p.318, § 358. The remedy is now abolished in England; 3 Sharsw.Bla.Com. 239, n.; and in the United States; 3 Kent 419.

ADMEASUREMENT, WRIT OF. It lay against persons who usurped more than their share, in the two following cases: admeasurement of dower, and admeasurement of pasture. Termes de la Ley.

ADMEZATORES. In old Italian law, persons chosen by the consent of contending parties, to decide questions between them. Literally, mediators. Spelman.

ADMINICILE. Used as an English word in the statute of 1 Edw. IV, c. 1, in the sense of aid, or support.

In civil law, imperfect proof. Merl. Répert. See Adminiculum.

In Scotch law, an aid or support to something else. A collateral deed or writing, referring to another which has been lost, and which it is in general necessary to produce -before the tenor of the lost deed can be proved by parol evidence. Ersk.Inst. b. 4, tit. 1, § 55.

ADMINICULAR. Auxiliary or subordinate to.

"The murder would be adminicular to the robbery," (i. e., committed to accomplish it.) The Marianna Flora, 3 Mason, 121, Fed.Cas.No.9080.

ADMINICULAR EVIDENCE. Auxiliary or supplementary evidence; such as is presented for the purpose of explaining and completing other evidence. (Chiefly used in ecclesiastical law)

ADMINICULATE. To give adminicular evidence.

ADMINICULATOR. An officer in the Romish church, who administered to the wants of widows, orphans, and afflicted persons. Spelman.

ADMINICULUM. Lat. An adminicle; a prop or support; an accessory thing. An aid or support to something else, whether a right or the evidence of one. It is principally used to designate evidence adduced in aid or support of other evidence, which without it is imperfect. Brown.

ADMINISTER. To manage or conduct. Glocksen v. Holmes, 299 Ky. 626, 186 S.W.2d 634, 637. To discharge the duties of an office; to take charge of business; to manage affairs; to serve in the conduct of affairs, in the application of things to their uses; to settle and distribute the estate of a decedent. Hunter v. City of Louisville, 208 Ky. 562, 271 S.W. 690, 691.

Also, to give, as an oath; to direct or cause to be taken. Gilchrist v. Comfort, 34 N.Y. 239; Brinson v. State, 89 Ala. 105, 8 So. 527; State v. Van Wormer, 103 Kan. 309, 173 P. 1076, 1081.

ADMINISTRATION. Managing or conduct of an office or employment; the performance of the executive duties of an institution, business, or the like. Webb v. Frohmiller, 52 Ariz. 128, 79 P.2d 510.

In public law, the administration of government means the practical management and direction of the executive department, or of the public machinery or functions, or of the operations of the various organs of the sovereign; direction or oversight of any office, service, or employment. Greene v. Wheeler, C.C.A.Wis., 29 F.2d 468, 469. The term "administration" is also conventionally applied to the whole class of public functionaries, or those in charge of the management of the executive department. House v. Creveling, 147 Tenn. 589, 250 S.W. 357, 358.

ADMINISTRATION EXPENSE. "Administrative expenses" imply disbursements incidental to the management of the estate for which credit would be allowed on a voucher. In re Hooker's Estate, 18 N.Y.S.2d 107, 112, 173 Misc. 515. Those deductible in computing estate tax are merely charges which are proper deductions and in ordinary course of administration will ultimately be allowed. Bourne v. U. S., Ct.C1., 2 F.Supp. 228, 231.

The management and settlement of the estate of an intestate, or of a testator who has no executor, performed under the supervision of a court, by a person duly qualified and legally appointed, and usually involving (1) the collection of the decedent's assets; (2) payment of debts and claims against the estate and expenses; (3) distributing the remainder of the estate among those entitled thereto.

The term is applied broadly to denote the management of an estate by an executor, and also the management of estates of minors, lunatics, etc., in those cases where trusts have been appointed by authority of law to take charge of such estates in place of the legal owners. Bouvier; Crow v. Hubard, 62 Md. 565.

Administration is principally of the following kinds, viz.

Ad colligendum bona defecti. To collect the goods of the deceased. Special letters of administration granted to one or more persons, authorizing them to collect and preserve the goods of the deceased, are so called. 1 Bl.Comm. 5QS; 2 Steph.Comm. 241. These are otherwise termed "letters ad colligendum," and the party to whom they are granted, a "collector."

An administrator ad colligendum is the mere agent or officer of the court to collect and preserve the goods of the deceased until some one is clothed with authority to administer them, and cannot complain that another is appointed administrator in chief. Flora v. Mennice, 12 Ala. 536.

Ancillary administration is auxiliary and subordinate to the administration at the place of the decedent's domicile; it may be taken out in any foreign state or country where assets are locally situated, and is merely for the purpose of collecting such assets and paying debts there.

Cum testamento annexo. Administration with the will annexed. The grant of authority to administer the personal estate of a deceased person as were not administered by the former executor or administrator. Tucker v. Horner, 10 Phila.Pa. 122.

De bonis non. Administration of the goods not administered. Administration granted for the purpose of administering such of the goods of a deceased person as were not administered by the former executor or administrator. Flora v. Mennice, 12 Ala. 536.

De bonis non cum testamento annexo. That which is granted when an executor dies leaving a part of the estate unadministered. Clemens v. Walker, 40 Ala. 189.

Durante absentea. That which is granted during the absence of the executor and until he has proved the will.

Durante minori cetate. Where an infant is made executor; in which case administration granted during the pendency of a suit touching the validity of a will. 18 N.J.Law, 15, 20.

Public administration is such as is conducted (in some jurisdictions) by an officer called the public administrator, who is appointed to administer in cases where the intestate has left no person entitled to apply for letters. General administration. The grant of authority to administer the entire estate of a decedent, without restriction or limitation, whether under the intestate laws or with the will annexed. Clemens v. Walker, 40 Ala. 198.

Special administration. Authority to administer upon some few particular effects of a decedent, as opposed to authority to administer his whole estate. In re Senate Bill, 12 Colo. 193, 21 P. 482.

Letters of Administration. The instrument by which an administrator or administratrix is authorized by the probate court, surrogate, or other proper officer, to have the charge and administration of the goods and chattels of an intestate. See Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. v. Tisdale, 91 U.S. 243, 23 L.Ed. 314.

ADMINISTRATION SUIT. In English practice, a suit brought in chancery, by any one interested, for administration of a decedent's estate, when there is doubt as to its solvency. Stimson.

ADMINISTRATIVE ACTS. Acts of an officer which are to be deemed as acts of administration, and are commonly called "administrative acts" and classed among those governmental powers properly assigned to the executive department, 'are those acts which are necessary to be done to carry out legislative policies and purposes already declared by the legislative body or such as are devolved upon it by the organic law of its existence. Ex parte McDonough, 27 Cal.App.2d 155, 80 P.2d 485, 487.

ADMINISTRATIVE BOARD. The term is very broad and includes bodies exercising varied functions, some of which involve orders made or other acts done ex parte or without full hearing as to the operative facts, while others are done only after such a notice and hearing, and the functions of the former kind are plainly "administrative" and those of the latter are "quasi-judicial". Beaverdale Memorial Park v. Danaher, 127 Conn. 175, 15 A.2d 17, 21.

"Administrative boards" differ from "courts" in that boards frequently represent public interests entrusted to boards, whereas courts are concerned with litigating rights of parties with adverse interests. Rommell v. Walsh, 15 A.2d 6, 9, 127 Conn. 16.

ADMINISTRATIVE DISCRETION. "Administrative discretion" means that the doing of acts or things required to be done may rest, in part at least, upon considerations not entirely susceptible of proof or disproof and at times which considering the circumstances and subject-matter cannot be supplied by the Legislature, and a statute confers such discretion when it refers a commission or officer to beliefs, expectations, or tendencies.

ADMINISTRATIVE LAW. That branch of public law which deals with the various organs of the sovereign power considered as in motion, and prescribes in detail the manner of their activity, being concerned with such topics as the collection of the revenue, the regulation of the military and naval forces, citizenship and naturalization, sanitary measures, poor laws, coinage, police, the public safety and morals, etc. See Holl.Jur. 305-307.

ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICER. Politically and as used in constitutional law, an officer of the executive department of government, and generally one of inferior rank; legally, a ministerial or executive officer, as distinguished from a judicial officer. People v. Salsbury, 134 Mich. 537, 96 N.W. 936.

ADMINISTRATIVE REMEDY. One not judicial, but provided by commission or board created by legislative power. Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Ogden Levee Dist., C.C.A.Ark., 15 F.2d 637, 642. Against wrongful assessment of benefits by a levee district. Board of Directors of St. Francis Levee Dist. v. St. Louis-San Francisco Ry. Co., C.C.A.Ark., 74 F.2d 183, 188.

ADMINISTRATOR, in the most usual sense of the word, is a person to whom letters of administration, that is, an authority to administer the estate of a deceased person, have been granted by the proper court. A representative of limited authority, whose duties are to collect assets of estate, pay its debts, and distribute residue to those entitled. Smith v. White's Estate, 108 Vt. 473, 188 A. 901, 904. A technical trustee. In re Watkins' Estate, Vt., 41 A.2d 180, 188.

He resembles an executor, but, being appointed by the court, and not by the deceased, he has to give security for the due administration of the estate, by entering into a bond with sureties, called the administration bond. Smith v. Gentry, 16 Ga. 31; Collamore v. Wilder, 19 Kan. 78; Gormley v. Watson, 177 Ga. 763, 171 S.E. 280, 281.

By the law of Scotland the father is what is called the “administrator-in-law” for his children. As such, he is ipso factore their tutor while they are pupils, and their curator during their minority. The father's power extends over whatever estate may descend to his children, unless where that estate has been placed by the donor or grantor under the charge of special trustees or managers. This power in the father ceases by the child's discontinuing to reside with him, unless he continues to live at the father's expense; and with regard to dnu-hite-s, it ceases on their marriage, the husband being the legal curator of his wife. Bell.

ADMIRAL. Title of high naval officers; they are of various grades,—rear admiral, vice-admiral, admiral, admiral of the fleet, the last named being the highest. But by Act of Jan. 24, 1873 (17 Stat. 418), certain grades ceased to exist when the offices became vacant.

In old English law, a high officer or magistrate that had the government of the king's navy, and the hearing of all causes belonging to the sea. Cowell.

In European law, an officer who presided over the admiralties, or collegium ammiralitatis. Loc. de Jur.Mar. lib. 2, c. 2, § 1.
ADMISSIBILITY. L. Lat. Admiralty; the admiralty, or court of admiralty.

In European law, an association of private armed vessels for mutual protection and defense against pirates and enemies

ADMARLITY. A court which has a very extensive jurisdiction of maritime causes, civil and criminal, controversies arising out of acts done upon or relating to the sea, and questions of prize.

It is properly the successor of the consular courts, which were emphatically the courts of merchants and sea-going persons, established in the principal maritime cities on the revival of commerce after the fall of the Western Empire, to supply the want of tribunals that might decide causes arising out of maritime commerce.

Also, the system of jurisprudence relating to and growing out of the jurisdiction and practice of the admiralty courts.

American Law

A tribunal exercising jurisdiction over all maritime contracts, torts, injuries, or offenses. Panama R. Co. v. Johnson, 44 S.Ct. 391, 264 U.S. 375, 68 L.Ed. 748.

"Admiralty" does not extend to all navigable waters, but is limited to the ocean, navigable rivers running into the ocean, and the Great Lakes and their connections. The Frank G. Fobert, D.C.N.Y., 32 F.Supp. 214, 216.

The jurisdiction of the admiral, and the administration of the admiralty law proper—the local maritime law—as it became a judicial function, has passed into the hands of the courts. Renew v. U. S., D.C.Ga., 1 F.Supp. 256, 259.

English Law

The court of the admiral, perhaps erected by Edward III, 3 Bla.Comm. 69, or as early, as the time of Henry I.

The building where the lords of the admiralty transact business.

ADMARLITY, FIRST LORD OF THE. The normal head of the executive department of state which presides over the naval forces of the kingdom is the lord high admiral, but in practice the functions of the great office are discharged by several Lords Commissioners, of whom one, being the chief, is called the "First Lord," and is a member of the Cabinet. He is assisted by other lords, called Sea Lords, and by various secretaries.

ADMISSIBLE. Pertinent and proper to be considered in reaching a decision. Used with reference to the issues to be decided in any judicial proceeding.

As applied to evidence, the term means that it is of such a character that the court or judge is bound to receive it; that is, allow it to be introduced.

ADMISSION. Bail

The order of a competent court or magistrate that a person accused of crime be discharged from actual custody upon the taking of bail. People v. Solomon, 15 Pac. 4, 5 Utah, 277.

Admitting to bail is a judicial act to be performed by a court or judicial officer. Trevathan v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. of New York, 166 Or. 515, 113 P.2d 621, 624; and by "allowing bail" or "admitting to bail" is not meant the formal justification, subscription, or acknowledgment by the sureties, the term first mentioned relating to the order determining that the offense is bailable and fixing the amount of undertaking, and "taking the bail": meaning the final acceptance or approval of it by the court. Clatsop County v. Wuopio, 95 Or. 30, 186 P. 547.

English Ecclesiastical Law

The act of the bishop, who, on approval of the clerk presented by the patron, after examination, declares him fit to serve the cure of the church to which he is presented, by the words "admittio to habilem," I admit thee able. 1 Crabb, Real Prop. p. 138, § 123.

Immigration Laws

Membership in Corporation

The act of a corporation or company by which an individual acquires the rights of a member of such corporation or company.

Practice as Attorney at Law

The act by which attorneys and counsellors become recognized as officers of the court and are allowed to practice.

Testimony or Evidence

Admission or concession by a party in pleading or as evidence. See Admissions.

ADMISSIONALIS. In European law. An usher.

ADMISSIONS. Confessions, concessions or voluntary acknowledgments made by a party of the existence of certain facts. Roosevelt v. Smith, 40 N.Y.S. 381, 17 Misc. 323. More accurately regarded, they are statements by a party, or some one identified with him in legal interest, of the existence of a fact which is relevant to the cause of his adversary. Brooks v. Sessoms, 171 S.E. 222, 223, 47 Ga.App. 554. They are against the interest of the party making them. Little Fay Oil Co. v. Stanley, 90 Okl. 265, 217 P. 377, 378.

It is not essential that an "admission" be contrary to interest of party at time it is made; it is enough if it be inconsistent with position which party takes either in pleadings or at trial. Harvey v. Provandie, 83 N.H. 236, 134 A. 136, 140. The term "admission" is usually applied to civil transactions and to those matters of fact in criminal cases which do not involve criminal intent, while the term "confession" is generally restricted to acknowledgments of guilt. People v. Sourisseau, 62 Cal.App.2d 917, 145 P.2d 916, 923. State v. Lindsey, 26 N.M. 526, 194 P. 877, 878.

An "admission" as applied in criminal cases is the avowal of a fact or of circumstances from which guilt may be inferred, but only tending to prove the offense charged, and not amounting to a confession of guilt. Theis v. State, Ga., 164 S.
E. 456, 457. A statement by defendant of fact or facts pertinent to issues tending, in connection with proof of other facts or circumstances, to prove guilt, but which is, of itself, insufficient to authorize conviction. Commonwealth v. Elliott, 292 Pa. 16, 140 A. 537, 538. Does not include statements which are part of the res gesta. State v. Clark, 102 Mont. 432, 58 P.2d 276, 278.

Direct, called also express, admissions are those which are made in direct terms.

Implied admissions are those which result from some act or failure to act of the party. Part payment of a debt is an admission of liability to pay debt. Hart v. Deshong, Del., 1 Terry 218, 8 A.2d 85, 87. Defendants' failure to specifically deny their signatures to notes, "admission" that they signed the acknowledgments. Haas v. Johnson, 203 La. 697, 14 So.2d 606, 608. Undenied accusations were implied "admission". State v. Postal, 215 Minn. 427, 10 N.W.2d 373, 378.

Incidental admissions are those made in some other connection, or involved in the admission of some other fact.

Judicial admissions are those made in court by a person's attorney for the purpose of being used as a substitute for the regular legal evidence of the facts at the trial. Martin v. State, 46 Okl. Cr. 411, 287 P. 424. Such as are made voluntarily by a party, which appear of record in the proceedings of the court. Formal acts done by a party or his attorney in court on the trial of a cause for the purpose of dispensing with proof by the opposing party of some fact claimed by the latter to be true. Wiley v. Rutland R. Co., 86 Vt. 504, 86 A. 808, 810. Concession by defendant that she had executed a bill of sale for the automobile to intervener to secure an indebtedness was an "admission in judicio" by defendant against her title to the automobile. McDay v. Long, 63 Ga.App. 421, 11 S.E.2d 395, 399. But opening statements of counsel are not, technically, "admissions." Wilkey v. State ex rel. Smith, 238 Ala. 595, 192 So. 588, 591. See Acquiescence; Quasi-Admissions; True Admission.

Pleading

The acknowledgment or recognition by one party of the truth of some matter alleged by the opposite party, made in a pleading, the effect of which is to narrow the area of facts or allegations required to be proved by evidence. Connecticut Hospital v. Brookfield, 69 Conn. 1, 36 A. 1017.

In confession and avoidance, admission of truth of opposite party's pleading is made.

Express admissions may be made of matters of fact only. See Confession and Avoidance.

In Equity. Partial admissions are those which are delivered in terms of uncertainty, mixed up with explanatory or qualifying circumstances.

Plenary admissions are those which admit the truth of the matter without qualification, whether it be asserted as from information and belief or as from actual knowledge. See Burrell v. Hackley, C.C.N.Y., 35 F. 833.

"Admissions against interest" are any statements made by or attributable to a party to an action, which constitute admissions against his interest and tend to establish or disprove any material fact in the case. Kellner v. Whaley, 148 Neb. 259, 27 N.W.2d 183, 189.

ADMIT. To allow, receive, or take; to suffer one to enter; to give possession; to license. Gregory v. United States, 17 Blatchf. 325, 10 Fed.Cas. 1195. Confess. Provident Life & Accident Ins. Co. v. Fodder, 99 Ind.App. 556, 193 N.E. 698, 700. Unequivocal acknowledgment of guilt. Ex parte Tozier, D.C.Me., 2 F.2d 268, 269. See Admission; Admissions.

ADMITTANCE. In English law, the act of giving possession of a copyhold estate. It is of three kinds: (1) Upon a voluntary grant by the lord, where the land has escheated or reverted to him. (2) Upon surrender by the former tenant. (3) Upon descent, where the heir is tenant on his ancestor's death. 2 Bla.Comm. 366.

ADMITTENDO CLERICO. An old English writ issuing to the bishop to establish the right of the Crown to make a presentation to a benefice. A writ of execution upon a right of presentation to a benefice being recovered in quare impedit, addressed to the bishop or his metropolitan, requiring him to admit and institute the clerk or presentee of the plaintiff. Reg.Orig. 33a.

ADMITTENDO IN SOCIUM. A writ for associating certain persons, as knights and other gentlemen of the county, to justices of assize on the circuit. Reg.Orig. 206.

ADMIIXTURE. A substance formed by mixing; state of being mixed; act of mixing.

ADMONITION. A reprimand from a judge to a person accused, on being discharged, warning him of the consequences of his conduct, and intimating to him that, should he be guilty of the same fault for which he has been admonished, he will be punished with greater severity. Merlin, Repert. The admonition was authorized as a species of punishment for slight misdemeanors. In ecclesiastical law, this is the lightest form of punishment.

Any authoritative oral communication or statement by way of advice or caution by the court to the jury respecting their duty or conduct as jurors; the admissibility or nonadmissibility of evidence, or the purpose for which any evidence admitted may be considered by them. Miller v. Noell, 193 Ky. 659, 237 S.W. 373, 374.

ADMONITIO TRINA. The threefold warning given to a prisoner who stood mute, before he was subjected to peine forte et dure (q. v.). 4 Bl.Comm. 325; 4 Stéph.Comm. 391.

ADMORTIZATION. The reduction of property of lands or tenements to mortmain, in the feudal customs.

ADM'R. This abbreviation will be judicially presumed to mean "administrator." Moseley v. Martin, 37 Ala. 216, 221.
ADNEPOS. The son of a great-great-grandson. Calvinus, Lex.

ADNEPTIS. The daughter of a great-granddaughter. Calvinus, Lex.

ADNICHIRED. Annullned, canceled, made void. 28 Hen. VIII.

ADNLHILARE. In old English law, to annul; to make void; to reduce to nothing; to treat as nothing; to hold as or for nought.

ADNOTATIO. In the civil law, the subscription of a name or signature to an instrument. Cod. 4, 19, 5, 7.

A rescript (q. v.) of the prince or emperor, signed with his own hand, or sign-manual. Cod. 1, 19, 1. "In the imperial law, casual homicide was excused by the indulgence of the emperor, signed with his own sign-manual, annotatio principis." 4 Bl.Comm. 187.

ADOBE. Earth. In arid or desert regions, an alluvial or playa clay from which bricks are made for construction of houses, called "adobe" houses. See Sweeney v. Jackson County, 93 Or. 96, 178 P. 365, 376.

ADOLESCENCE. That age which follows puberty and precedes the age of majority. It commences for males at fourteen, and for females at twelve years, and continues until twenty-one years complete.

ADOPT. To accept, appropriate, choose, or select; to make that one's own (property or act) which was not so originally.

To adopt a route for the transportation of the mail means to take the steps necessary to cause the mail to be transported over that route. Rhodes v. U. S., Dev.Ct.C1. 47. To adopt a contract is to accept it as binding, notwithstanding some defect which entitles the party to repudiate it. Thus, when a person affirms a voidable contract, or ratifies a contract made by his agent beyond his authority, he is sometimes said to adopt it. Sweet. Strictly, however, the word "adopt" should be used to apply to void transactions, while the word "ratify" should be limited to the final approval of a voidable transaction by one who theretofore had the optional right to relieve himself from its obligations. United German Silver Co. v. Bronson, 92 Conn. 266, 102 A. 647, 648. "Adoption" of a contract by one not a party thereto is of the nature of a novation. Edwards v. Heralds of Liberty, 263 Pa. 548, 107 A. 324, 326. See Affirm.

To take into one's family the child of another and give him or her the rights, privileges, and duties of a child and heir. State v. Thompson, 13 La.Ann. 515; Abney v. De Loach, 84 Ala. 393.

Adoption of children was a thing unknown to the common law, but was a familiar practice under the Roman law and in those countries where the civil law prevails, as France and Spain. Butterfield v. Sawyer, 187 Ill. 598, 58 N.E. 602, 52 L.R.A. 75, 79 Am.St.Rep. 246. Creature of the law, and statutory requirements must be strictly carried out. Owles v. Jackson, 199 La. 940, 7 So.2d 192, 194.

To adopt an alien as a citizen or member of a community or state and invest him with corresponding rights and privileges, either (in general and untechnical parlance) by naturalization, or by an act equivalent to naturalization, as where a white man is "adopted" by an Indian tribe. Hampton v. Mays, 4 Ind.T. 503, 69 S.W. 1115.

ADOPTION. The taking and receiving as one's own that to which he bore no prior relation, colorable or otherwise. Davies v. Lahann, C.C.A.N.M., 145 F.2d 656, 659. The act of one who takes another's child into his own family, treating him as his own, and giving him all the rights and duties of his own child. See In re Chambers' Estate, 183 N.Y.S. 526, 528, 112 Misc. 551, in manner provided by and with consequences specified in statute. Fisher v. Robison, 329 Pa. 305, 198 A. 81, 82. A juridical act creating between two persons certain relations, purely civil, of paternity and filiation. 6 Demol. § 1; Grimes v. Grimes, 207 N.C. 778, 178 S.E. 573. The relation thereby created is a statutory status, not a contractual relation. Caruso v. Caruso, 13 N.Y.S.2d 239, 241, 175 Misc. 290. Though legal adoption may confer on person adopted rights of actual relationship of child, simple "adoption" extends only to his treatment as member of the household. Shepherd v. Sovereign Camp, W.O.W., 166 Va. 488, 186 S.E. 113, 116. See, also, Adopt.

ADOPTION BY PUBLIC ACKNOWLEDGMENT. See Legitimate.

ADOPTIVE ACT. An act of legislation which comes into operation within a limited area upon being adopted, in manner prescribed therein, by the inhabitants of that area.

ADPROMISSOR. In the civil and Scotch law, a guarantor, surety, or cautioner; a peculiar species of fidejussor; one who adds his own promise to the promise given by the principal debtor, whence the name.

ADQUIETO. Payment. Blount.

ADRECTARE. To set right, satisfy, or make amends.

ADRHAMIRE. In old European law, to underwrite, declare, or promise solemnly; to pledge; to pledge one's self to make oath. Spelman.

ADRIFT. Sea-weed, between high and low water-mark, which has not been deposited on the shore, and which during flood-tide is moved by each rising and receding wave, is adrift, although the bottom of the mass may touch the beach. Anthony v. Gifford, 2 Allen (Mass.) 549.

ADROGATION. In the civil law, the adoption of one who was impubes; that is, if a male, under fourteen years of age; if a female, under twelve. Dig. 1, 7, 17, 1.

ADS. An abbreviation for ad sectam (q. v.), meaning "at the suit of." Bowen v. Sewing Mach. Co., 86 Ill. 11.

ADSCRIPTI. See Adscriptus.

ADSCRIPTI GLEBIE. Slaves who served the master of the soil, who were annexed to the land, and passed with it when it was conveyed. Calvinus, Lex.

In Scotland, as late as the reign of George III., laborers in collieries and salt works were bound to the coal-pit or salt work in which they were engaged, in a manner similar to that of the adscripiti of the Romans. Bell. These servi adscriptus (or adscriptiti) glebici held the same position as the villeins regardant of the Normans; 2 Bla.Com. 93. See 1 Poll. & Mait. 372. See 1 Poll. & Mait. 372.

ADSCRIPTITII. Lat. A species of serfs or slaves. See 1 Poll. & Mait. 372.

Those persons who were enrolled and liable to be drafted as legionary soldiers. Calvinus, Lex.

ADSCRIPTUS. In the civil law, added, annexed, or bound by or in writing; enrolled, registered; united, joined, annexed, bound to, generally. Servus colonce adscriptus, a slave annexed to an estate as a cultivator. Dig. 19, 2, 54, 2. Fundus adscriptus, an estate bound to, or burdened with a duty. Cod. 11, 2, 3.

ADSESSORES. Side judges. Assistants or advisers of the regular magistrates, or appointed as their substitutes in certain cases. Calvinus, Lex. See Assessor.

ADSTIPULATOR. In Roman law, an accessory party to a promise, who received the same promise as his principal did, and could equally receive and exact payment; or he only stipulated for a part of that for which the principal stipulated, and then his rights were coextensive with the amount of his own stipulation. One who supplied the place of a procurator at a time when the law refused to allow stipulations to be made by procuration. Sandars, Just.Inst. (5th Ed.) 348.

ADULT.

Civil Law

A male infant who has attained the age of fourteen; a female infant who has attained the age of twelve. Dom.Liv.Prel. tit. 2, § 2, n. 8.

Common Law

One who has attained the legal age of majority, generally 21 years, though in some states women are legally "adults" at 18. Schenault v. State, 10 Tex. App. 410; Lucas v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 174 A. 712, 713, 113 N.J.Law, 491.

ADULTER. Lat. One who corrupts; one who seduces another man's wife. Adulter solidorum. A corruptor of metals; a counterfeiter. Calvinus, Lex.

ADULTERA. In the civil law, an adulteress; a woman guilty of adultery. Dig. 48, 5, 4, pr.; Dig. 48, 5, 15, 8.

ADULTERATION. The act of corrupting or de-basing: the act of mixing something impure or spurious with something pure or genuine, or an inferior article with a superior one of the same kind. State v. Norton, 24 N.C. 40. The term is generally applied to the act of mixing up with food or drink intended to be sold other matters of an inferior quality, and usually of a more or less deleterious quality. Grosvenor v. Duffy, 121 Mich. 220, 80 N.W. 19, though the artificially colored poppy seeds were not deleterious and had the same food value as the naturally colored seeds. U. S. v. Two Bags, Each Containing 110 Pounds, Poppy Seeds, C.C.A.Ohio, 147 F.2d 123, 127.

ADULTERATOR, Lat. A corrupter. In the civil law. A forger; a counterfeiter. Adulteratores monetce, counterfeiters of money. Dig. 48, 19, 16, 9.

ADULTERINE. Begotten in an adulterous intercourse. Those are not deemed adulterine who are begotten, of a woman openly married through ignorance of a former wife being alive. In the Roman and canon law, adulterine bastards were distinguished from such as were the issue of two unmarried persons, and the former were treated with more severity, not being allowed the status of natural children, and being ineligible to holy orders.

ADULTERINE GUILDS. Traders acting as a corporation without a charter, and paying a fine annually for permission to exercise their usurped privileges. Smith, Wealth Nat. b. 1, c. 10.

ADULTERIUM. A fine anciently imposed for the commission of adultery.

ADULTEROUS BASTARDS. Those produced by an unlawful connection between two persons, who at the time when the child was conceived, were, either of them or both, connected by marriage with some other person. Civil Code La. art. 182.

ADULTERY. Voluntary sexual intercourse of a married person with a person other than the offender's husband or wife. Franzetti v. Franzetti, Tex.Civ.App., 120 S.W.2d 123, 127.

In some states, however, as was also true under the Roman and Jewish law, this crime is committed only when the woman is married to a third person; the unlawful commerce of a married man with an unmarried woman not being of the grade of adultery. Corn. v. Call, 21 Pick. Mass. 509, 32 Am.Dec. 284, and note; Com. v. Elwell, 2 Metc. 190, 39 Am.Dec. 398. In other jurisdictions, both parties are guilty of adultery, even though only one of Open and Notorious Adultery

To constitute living in open and notorious adultery, the parties must reside together publicly in the face of society, as if conjugal relations existed between them, and their so living and the fact that they are not husband and wife must be known in the community. McCullough v. State, 107 Tex.Cr.R. 258, 296 S.W. 530.

ADVANCE, v. To pay money or render other value before it is due; to furnish something before an equivalent is received; to loan; to furnish capital in aid of a projected enterprise, in expectation of return from it. Powell v. Allan, 70 Cal. App. 663, 234 P. 339, 344. To supply beforehand; to furnish on credit or before goods are delivered or done; to furnish as a part of a stock or fund; to pay money before it is due; to furnish money for a specific purpose understood between the parties, the money or sum equivalent to be returned; furnishing money or goods for others in expectation of reimbursement; money or commodities furnished on credit; a loan, or gift or money advanced to be repaid conditionally; may be equivalent to "pay." In re Altman's Will, Sur., 6 N.Y.S.2d 972, 975.

An agreement to "advance" money for personal property implies a loan with property as pledge, rather than a payment of purchase money in sale. Shelley v. Byers, 73 Cal. App. 44, 238 P. 177, 182.

ADVANCEMENT. Money or property given by a parent to his child or, sometimes, presumptive heir, or expended by the former for the latter's benefit, by way of anticipation of the share which the child will inherit in the parent's estate and intended to be deducted therefrom. It is the latter circumstance which differentiates an advance from a gift or a loan. Brewer's Adm'r v. Brewer, 181 Ky. 400, 205 S.W. 393, 396; In re Allen's Estate, 207 Pa. 325, 56 A. 928.

A perfect and irrevocable gift. In re Wiese's Estate, 70 Tex.Cr.R. 600, 158 S.W. 274, 275. In some jurisdictions, also, a distinction is made between double and single adultery, the former being committed where both parties are married to other persons, the latter where one only is so married. Hunter v. U. S., 1 Pin. Wis. 91, 39 Am. Dec. 277.

ADVANTAGIUM. In old pleading, an advantage. Co.Ent. 484; Townsh.P1. 50.

ADVENA. In Roman law, one of foreign birth, who has left his own country and settled elsewhere, and who has not acquired citizenship in his new locality; often called albanus. Du Cange.

ADVENT. A period of time recognized by the English common and ecclesiastical law, beginning on the Sunday that falls either upon St. Andrew's day, being the 30th of November, or the next to it, and continuing to Christmas day. Wharton.

ADVENTITIOUS. That which comes incidentally, fortuitously, or out of the regular course. "Adventitious value" of lands, see Central R. Co. v. State Board of Assessors, 49 N.J.Law, 1, 7 A. 306.

ADVENTITIUS. Lat. Fortuitous; incidental; coming from an unusur source. Adventitia bona are goods which fall to a man otherwise than by inheritance. Adventitia dos is a dowry or portion given by some friend other than the parent.

ADVENTURA. An adventure. 2 Mon.Angl. 615; Townsh.P1. 50. Flotson, jetson, and lagon are styled adventuræ maris, (adventures of the sea.) Hale, De Jure Mar. pt. 1, c. 7.

ADVENTURE. A hazardous and striking enterprise, a bold undertaking in which hazards are to be met and issue hangs upon unforeseen events. Bond v. O'Donnell, 205 Iowa, 902, 218 N.W. 898, 902, 63 A.L.R. 901.

Generally

Adventure, bill of. In mercantile law, a writing signed by a merchant, stating that the property in goods shipped in his name belongs to another, to the adventure or chance of which the person so named is to stand, with a covenant from the merchant to account to him for the produce.

Gross adventure. In maritime law, a loan on bottomry. So named because the lender, in case of a loss, or expense incurred for the common safety, must contribute to the gross or general average.

Joint adventure. A commercial or maritime enterprise undertaken by several persons jointly; a limited partnership,—not limited in the statutory sense as to the liability of the partners, but as to its scope and duration. Lobsitz v. E. Lissberger Co., 168 App.Div. 840, 154 N.Y.S. 556, 557. A special partnership. McDaniel v. State Fair of Texas, Tex.Civ.App., 286 S.W. 513, 517. An association of two or more persons to carry out a single business enterprise for profit, for which purpose they combine their property, money, effects, skill, and knowledge. Forman v. Lumm, 214 App.Div. 579, 212 N.Y.S. 487. A special combination of two or more persons, where, in some specific adventure, a profit is jointly sought, without any actual partnership or corporate designation. Griffin v. Reilly, Tex.Civ.App., 275 S.W. 242, 246.

It is ordinarily, but not necessarily, limited to a single transaction, Forbes v. Butler, 66 Utah 373, 242 P. 950, 956, which serves to distinguish it from a partnership, Barry v. Kern, 184 Wis. 266, 199 N.W. 77, 78. But the business of conducting it to a successful termination may continue for a number of years. Elliott v. Murphy Timber Co., 117 Or. 387, 244 P. 91, 93, 48 A.L.R. 1043. There is no real distinction between a "joint adventure" and what is termed a "partnership for a single transaction." Atlas Realty Co. v. Galt, 153 Md. 586, 139 A. 285, 286. A "joint adventure," while not identical with a partnership, is so similar in its nature and in the relations created thereby that the rights of the parties as between themselves are governed practically by the same rules that govern partnerships. Goss v. Lanin, 170 Iowa 57, 152 N.W. 43, 45.

Marine Insurance

A very usual word in policies of marine insurance, and everywhere used as synonymous, or nearly so, with "perils." It is often used by the writers to describe the enterprise or voyage as a "marine adventure" insured against. Moores v. Louisville Underwriters, C.C.Tenn., 14 Fed. 233.

Mercantile Law

Sending goods abroad under charge of a supercargo or other agent, at the risk of the sender, to be disposed of to the best advantage for the benefit of the owners.

The goods themselves so sent.

ADVENTURER. One who undertakes uncertain or hazardous actions or enterprises. It is also used to denote one who seeks to advance his own interests by unscrupulous designs on the credulity of others. It has been held that to impute that a person is an adventurer is a libel; 18 L.J.C.P. 241.

ADVERSARIA. (From Lat. adversa, things remarked or ready at hand.) Rough memoranda, common-place books.

ADVERSARY. A litigant-opponent, the opposite party in a writ or action.

ADVERSARY PROCEEDING. One having opposing parties; contested, as distinguished from an ex parte application; one of which the party seeking relief has given legal warning to the other party, and afforded the latter an opportunity to contest it. Excludes an adoption proceeding. Platt v. Magagnini, 187 P. 716, 718, 110 Wash. 39.

ADVERSE. Opposed; contrary; in resistance or opposition to a claim, application, or proceeding. Having opposing interests; having interests for the preservation of which opposition is essential. In re National Lock Co., D.C.Ill., 9 F.Supp. 432, 433.

ADVERSE INTEREST. The "adverse interest" of a witness, so as to permit cross-examination by the party calling him, must be so involved in the event of the suit that a legal right or liability will be acquired, lost, or materially affected by the judgment, and must be such as would be promoted by the success of the adversary of the party calling him. Dinger v. Friedman, 279 Pa. 8, 123 A. 541, 643. Opposition in an bankruptcy court for removal of trustee's attorney; attorney has an interest adverse to trustee. In re Mallow Hotel Corporation, D.C.Pa., 18 F.Supp. 15, 17.

ADVERSE PARTY. An "adverse party" entitled to notice of appeal is every party whose interest in relation to the judgment or decree appealed from is in conflict with the modification or reversal sought by the appeal.

ADVERSE POSSESSION. A method of acquisition of title by possession for a statutory period under certain conditions. Lowery v. Garfield County, Mont., 208 P.2d 478, 486. It has been described as the statutory method of acquiring title to land by limitation. Field v. Sosby, Tex.Civ.App., 226 S.W.2d 484, 486.

The possession must be actual, Ortiz v. Pacific States Properties, Cal.App., 215 P.2d 514, 516; ADVERSE

Adverse possession depends on intent of occupant to claim and hold real property in opposition to all the world, Sertic v. Roberts, 136 P.2d 248, 171 Ore. 121; and also embodies the idea that owner of or persons interested in property have knowledge of the assertion of ownership by the occupant, Field v. Sosby, Tex.Civ.App., 226 S.W.2d 484, 486.

Payment of taxes alone is not sufficient in itself to establish adverse possession, Blitch v. Sapp, 194 So. 328, 330, 142 Fla. 166. It is mandatory that the element of continuous possession exist for the full statutory period, Wells v. Tietge, 9 N.W.2d 180, 182, 143 Neb. 230.

ADVERSUS. In the civil law, against, (contra.) Adversus bonos mores, against good morals. Dig. 47, 10, 15.

Adversus extraneos vitiosa possesso prodesse solet. Prior possession is a good title of ownership against all who cannot show a better. D. 41. 2. 53; Salmond, Jurispr. 638.

It includes publication by hand bills, signs, bill boards, sound trucks and radio, Rust v. Missouri Dental Board, 348 Mo. 616, 155 S.W.2d 80, 83; or in a newspaper, or by means of placards, or other written public notices; Nichols v. Lambert, 192 Ala. 206, 68 So. 186, 187. It is merely identification and description, apprising of quality and place, Rust v. Van Deman & Lewis Co., 240 U.S. 342, 36 S.Ct. 370, 377, 60 L.Ed. 679. And "advertising purposes" are not limited to matters of vocation, or even avocation, but include advertisements essentially for unsellish purposes, Almind v. Sea Beach Ry. Co., 141 N.Y.S. 842, 843, 157 App.Div. 230.

ADVERTISEMENT. Notice given in a manner designed to attract public attention. Edwards v. Lubbock County, Tex., 33 S.W.2d 482, 484. Information communicated to the public, or to an individual concerned, as by handbills or the newspaper. First Nat. Corporation v. Perrine, 99 Mont. 454, 43 P.2d 1073, 1077.

A sign-board, erected at a person's place of business, giving notice that lottery tickets are for sale, Com. v. Hooper, 5 Pick.Mass. 42.

ADVERTISEMENTMENTS OF QUEEN ELIZABETH.

Certain articles or ordinances drawn up by Archbishop Parker and some of the bishops in 1564, at the request of Queen Elizabeth, the object of which was to ensure decency and uniformity in the ritual of the church. The queen subsequently refused to give her official sanction to these advertisements, and left them to be enforced by the bishops under their general powers. Phillim.Ecc. Law, 910; 2 Prob.Div. 276; 354.

ADVICE. View; opinion; the counsel given by lawyers to their clients; an opinion expressed as to wisdom of future conduct. Hughes v. Van Bruggen, 44 N.M. 534, 105 P.2d 494, 496.

The word has several different meanings, among others, as follows: Information or notice given; intelligence; whenever information communicated by letter;—Chiefly as to drafts or bills of exchange; ; as, a letter of advice. Advice implies real or pretended knowledge, often professional or technical, on the part of the one who gives it. Provident Trust Co. v. National Surety Co., D.C.Pa., 44 F.Supp. 514, 515.

The instruction usually given by one merchant or banker to another by letter, informing him of shipments made to him, or of bills or drafts drawn on him, with particulars of date, or sight, the sum, and the payee. Bills presented for acceptance or payment are frequently dishonored for want of advice.

Letter of advice is a communication from one person to another, advising or warning the latter of something which he ought to know, and commonly apprising him beforehand of some act done by the writer which will ultimately affect the recipient. Chit. Bills, 162.

ADVISARE, ADVISARI. Lat. To consult, deliberate, consider, advise; to be advised. Occurring in the phrase curia advisari hvult, which see (usually abbreviated cur. adv. vu/t, or C. A. V.,) the court wishes to be advised, or to consider of the matter.

ADVICE. To give an opinion or counsel, or recommend a plan or course of action; also to give notice. Long v. State, 23 Neb. 33, 36 N.W. 410. To encourage. Voris v. People, 75 Colo. 574, 227 P. 551, 553. "Inform" or "acquaint." Ericson v. Steiner, 119 Cal.App. 305, 6 P.2d 298, 300.

It is different in meaning from "instruct" or "persuade." Hughes v. Van Bruggen, 44 N.M. 534, 105 P.2d 494, 497. Where a statute authorizes the trial court to advise the jury to acquit, the court has no power to instruct the jury to acquit. The court can only counsel, and the jury are not bound by the advice. People v. Horn, 70 Cal. 17, 11 P. 470. "Advice" imports that it is discretionary or optional with the person addressed whether he will act on such advice or not. State v. Downing, 23 Idaho, 540, 130 P. 461, 462.

ADVISED. Prepared to give judgment, after examination and deliberation. "The court took time to be advised." 1 Leon. 187.

ADVISEDLY. With deliberation; intentionally. 15 Moore P.C. 147.

ADVERTISEMENT. Consideration; deliberation; consultation. Drainage Dist. No. 1 of Lincoln.
Civil and Ecclesiastical Law

An officer of the court, learned in the law, who is engaged by a suitor to maintain or defend his cause.

Generally

—Advocate general. The adviser of the crown in England on questions of naval and military law.

—Lord Advocate. The principal crown lawyer in Scotland, and one of the great officers of state of Scotland. It is his duty to act as public prosecutor; but private individuals injured may prosecute upon obtaining his concurrence. He is assisted by a solicitor general and four junior counsel, termed “advocates-depute.” He has the power of appearing as public prosecutor in any court in Scotland, where any person can be tried for an offense, or in any action where the crown is interested. Wharton.

—Queen’s advocate. A member of the College of Advocates, appointed by letters patent, whose office is to advise and act as counsel for the crown in questions of civil, canon, and international law. His rank is next after the solicitor general.

ADVOCATI. Lat. In Roman law, patrons; pleaders; speakers.

ADVOCATI ECCLESIZE. Advocates of the church.

A term used in the ecclesiastical law to denote the patrons of churches who presented to the living on an avoidance. This term was also applied to those who were retained to argue the cases of the church. These were of two sorts: those retained as pleaders to argue the cases of the church and attend to its law-matters; and advocates, or patrons of the advowson. Cowell; Spelman, Gloss.

ADVOCATI FISCI. In civil law, those chosen by the emperor to argue his cause whenever a question arose affecting his revenues. 3 Bla. Comm. 27. Advocates of the fisc, or revenue; fiscal advocates, (qui causam fisci egissent.) Cod. 2, 9, 1; Cod. 2, 7, 13. Answering, in some measure, to the king’s counsel in English law.

ADVOCATIA. In the civil law, the quality, function, privilege, or territorial jurisdiction of an advocate.

The functions, duty, or privilege of an advocate. Du Cange, Advocatia.

ADVOCATION. In Scotch law, a process by which an action may be carried from an inferior to a superior court before final judgment in the former.

ADVOCATIONE DECIMARUM. A writ which lay for tithes, demanding the fourth part or upwards, that belonged to any church.

ADVOCATOR. In old practice, one who called on or vouched another to warrant a title; a voucher. Advocatus; the person called on, or vouched; a vouchee. Spelman; Townsh. P1. 45.

In Scotch practice, an appellant. 1 Broun, R. 67.
ADVOCATUS

ADVOCATUS. A pleader; a narrator. Bracton, 412 a, 372 b.

In the civil law, an advocate; one who managed or assisted in managing another’s cause before a judicial tribunal. Called also "patronus." Cod. 2, 7, 14. But distinguished from causidicus. Id. 2, 6, 6.

ADVOCATUS DIABOLI. In ecclesiastical law, the devil’s advocate; the advocate who argues against the canonization of a saint.

Advocatus est, ad quern pertinet jus advocations, ut ad ecclesiam, nomine proprio, non alieno, possit proserentare. A patron is he to whom appertains the right of presentation to a church, in such a manner that he may present to such a church in his own name, and not in the name of another. Co.Litt. 119.

ADVOUTRER. In old English law, an adulterer. Beaty v. Richardson, 56 S.C. 173, 34 S.E. 73, 46 L.R.A. 517.

ADVOUTRY. In old English law, adultery between parties both of whom were married. Hunter v. U. S., 1 Pin. (Wis.) 91, 39 Am.Dec. 277. Or the offense by an adulteress of continuing to live with the man with whom she committed the adultery. Cowell; Termes de la Ley. Sometimes spelled "advowtry." See Advoutrer.

ADVOWEE, or AVOWEE. The person or patron who has a right to present to a benefice. Fleta, lib. 5, c. 14.

ADVOWEE PARAMOUNT. The sovereign, or highest patron.

ADVOWSON. In English ecclesiastical law, the right of presentation to a church or ecclesiastical benefice; the right of presenting a fit person to the bishop, to be by him admitted and instituted to a certain benefice within the diocese, which has become vacant. 2 Bl.Comm. 21; Co.Litt. 119b, 120a. The person enjoying this right is called the "patron" (patronus) of the church, and was formerly termed "advocatus," the advocate or defender, or in English, "advowee." Id.; 1 Crabb, Real Prop. p. 129, § 117.

When there is no patron, or he neglects to exercise his right within six months, it is called a lapse, and a title is given to the ordinary to collate to a church: when a presentation is made by one who has no right, it is called a usurpation.

Advowsons are of different kinds.

Advowson appendant is an advowson annexed to a manor, and passing with it, as incident or appendant to it, by a grant of the manor only, without adding any other words. 2 Bl.Comm. 22; Co.Litt. 120, 121; 1 Crabb, Real Prop. p. 130, § 118.

Advowson collative. Where the bishop happens himself to be the patron, in which case (presentation being impossible, or unnecessary) he does by one act, which is termed "collation," or conferring the benefice, all that is usually done by the separate acts of presentation and institution. 2 Bl.Comm. 22, 23; 1 Crabb, Real Prop. p. 131, § 119.

Advowson donative exists where the patron has the right to put his clerk in possession by his mere gift, or deed of donation, without any presentation to the bishop, or institution by him. 2 Bl.Comm. 23; 1 Crabb, Real Prop. p. 131, § 119.

Advowson in gross is an advowson separated from the manor, and annexed to the person. 2 Bl.Comm. 22; Co.Litt. 120; 1 Crabb, Real Prop. p. 130, § 118; 3 Steph. Comm. 116.

Advowson presentative is the usual kind of advowson, where the patron has the right of presentation to the bishop, or ordinary, and moreover to demand of him to institute his clerk, if he finds him canonically qualified. 2 Bl.Comm. 22; 1 Crabb, Real Prop. p. 131, § 119.

ADVOWTRY. See Advoutry.

2EDES. Lat. In the civil law, a house, dwelling, temple, place of habitation, whether in the city or country. Dig. 30, 41, 5. In the country everything upon the surface of the soil passed under the term "cedes." Du Cange; Calvin.

IĘDICARE. Lat. In civil and old English law, to make or build a house; to erect a building. Dig. 45, 1, 75, 7.

IĘdicare in tuo proprio solo non licet quod alteri nocet. 3 Inst. 201. To build upon your own land what may injure another is not lawful.

A proprietor of land has no right to erect an edifice on his own ground, interfering with the due enjoyment of adjoining premises, as by occupying them, or by throwing water from the roof and eaves upon them, or by obstructing ancient lights and windows. Broom, Max. 369.

IĘdicatum solo solo cedit. What is built upon land belongs to or goes with land. Broom, Max. 172; Co.Litt. 4a.

IĘDILE, In Roman law, an officer who attended to the repairs of the temples and other public buildings; the repairs and cleanliness of the streets; the care of the weights and measures; the providing for funerals and games; and to regulating the prices of provisions. Ainsworth, Lex.; Smith, Lex.; Du Cange.

IĘDILITUM EDICTUM. In the Roman law, the IĘdilian Edict.

An edict providing remedies for frauds in sales, the execution of which belonged to the curule open curule & 21, 1. See Cod. 4, 58. That provision by which the buyer of a diseased or imperfect slave, horse, or other animal was relieved at the expense of the vendor who had sold him as sound knowing him to be imperfect. Calvinus, Lex.

IĘFESN. In old English law, the remuneration to the proprietor of a domain for the privilege of feeding swine under the oaks and beeches of his woods.

ZEGROTO. Lat. Being sick or indisposed. A term used in some of the older reports. “Holt cegroto.” 11 Mod. 179.

AEGYLDE. Uncompensated, unpaid for, unavenged. From the participle of exclusion, a, ce, or ex, (Goth,) and gild, payment, requital. Anc. Inst.Eng.

AEL. A Norman French term signifying "grandfather." It is also spelled "aieul" and "ayle." Kelham.
ZEQUUM ET BONUM. "The Roman conception involved in 'cequum et bonum' or 'cequitas' is identical with what we mean by 'reasonable' or nearly so.

"On the whole, the natural justice or 'reason of the thing' which the common law recognizes and applies does not appear to differ from the 'law of nature' which the Romans identified with 'ius gentium,' and the medieval doctors of the civil and common law boldly adopted as being divine law revealed through man's natural reason."

Sir F. Pollock, Expans. of C. L. 111, citing [1902] 2 Ch. 661, where 'ius naturale' and cequum et bonum were taken to have the same meaning.

1Equum et bonum est lex legum. What is equitable and good is the law of laws. Hob. 224.

IEQUUS. Lat. Equal; even. A provision in a will for the division of the residuary estate ex cequum among the legatees means equally or evenly. Archer v. Morris, 47 Atl. 275, 61 N.J.Eq. 152.

JERA, or ERA. A fixed point of chronological time, whence any number of years is counted; thus, the Christian era began at the birth of Christ, and the Mohammedan era at the flight of Mohammed from Mecca to Medina. The derivation of the word has been much contested. Wharton.

ZERARIUM. Lat. In the Roman law. The treasury, (fiscus.) Calvin.

ATRIAL NAVIGATION. See Aeronautics.

AERODROME. A term originally applied by Professor Langley to his flying machine but now used in the same sense as "airport" (q. v.).

AERONAUT. This term under some statutes includes every person who, being in or upon an airship or anything attached thereto, undertakes to direct its ascent, course, or descent in the air, or the ascent, course, or descent in the air of anything attached to such airship.

Under the Uniform Aeronautics Act it includes aviator, pilot, balloonist, and every other person having any part in the operation of aircraft while in flight. See Aeronautics.

AERONAUTIC ACTIVITY. The term is broad enough to cover what is ordinarily incident to an airplane trip. The aeronautic activities of one who takes such a trip do not begin or end with the actual flight, but include his presence or movements in or near to the machine incidental to beginning or concluding the trip. Blonski v. Bankers' Life Co., 209 Wis. 5, 243 N.W. 410.

AERONAUTIC

1022. Pleasure trip in airplane over airport on pleasant day was not "aeronautic expedition" under life policy. Day v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of U. S., C.C.A.Colo., 83 F.2d 147, 149.

AERONAUTICS. The science, art or practice of sailing in the air; aerial navigation; the branch of aerostatics which treats of floating in or navigating the air as in an airship or airplane. Massachusetts Protective Ass’n v. Bayersdorfer, C.C.A. Ohio, 105 F.2d 595, 597. Operation of aircraft. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of U.S., C.C.A.Colo., 83 F.2d 7, 10. As to an insured, who was a fare-paying passenger on a commercial transport plane over an established route while plane was wholly under the control of the pilot, was not "aeronautic expedition" within life policy. Day v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of U. S., C.C.A.Colo., 83 F.2d 147, 149.

AEROSERIES. "Aerserics" is divided into two branches: aerostation, dealing with artificial flight by machines which are lighter than air; and aviation, dealing with artificial flight by machines which are heavier than air. Bew v. Travelers’ Ins. Co., 95 N.J.Law., 533, 112 A. 859, 860, 14 A.L.R. 983.

A passenger in an airplane, whether he takes part in its operation or not, "participates in aeronautics" within the meaning of an insurance policy. Meredith v. Business Men’s Ass’n of America, 213 Mo.App. 688, 252 S.W. 976, 977. Contra as to a transport airplane passenger who could not pilot an airplane, had no knowledge of flying, and at time of accident was traveling on private business. Gregory v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. of New York, C.C.A.Ark., 78 F.2d 522, 524. As to an insured, who was a fare-paying passenger on a commercial transport plane over an established route while plane was wholly under the control of others. Bayersdorfer v. Massachusetts Protective Ass’n, D.C Ohio, 20 F.Supp. 489, 492. A father riding with son as guest in airplane purchased by father for son. Day v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of U. S., C.C.A.Colo., 83 F.2d 147, 149. And where insured after alighting from a flight, in bending over to avoid a wire, was struck by the propeller of the aero-plane. Tierney v. Occidental Life Ins. Co. of California, 89 Cal.App. 779, 265 P. 400, 401.

See, also, Aircraft; Airship; Airport; Airway; Aviation.

AEROPLANE. See Aircraft; Hydro-Aeroplane; Seaplane.

AEROSTATICS. "Aerostatics" is divided into two main branches: aer: ation dealing, properly, with machines, which, like balloons, are lighter than air, and aviation dealing with the problem of artificial flight by means of flying machines, which, like birds, are heavier than air. Swasey v. Massachusetts Protective Ass’n, C.C.A.Ariz., 96 F.2d 265, 266.

AEROSTATION. See Aerostatics, and Aeronautics, note.

-ES. Lat. In the Roman law, money, (literally, brass) metallic money in general, including gold. Dig. 9, 2, 2, pr.; Dig. 9, 2, 27, 5; Dig. 50, 16, 159.

-ES ALIENUM. A civil law term signifying a debt. Literally translated, the money of another; the civil law considered borrowed money as the property of another, as distinguished from ces suum, one’s own money.

SUUM. One’s own money. In the Roman law, debt; a debt; that which others owe to us, (quod alii nobis debent.) Dig. 50, 16, 213.

IESNECIA. In old English law, Esnecy; the right or privilege of the eldest born. Spelman; Glanv. lib. 7, c. 3; Fleta, lib. 2, c. 66, §1 5, 6.

IESNECIUS. See Aeneicus; Aesnecia.

ESTHETIC. Relating to that which is beautiful or in good taste. People v. Wolf, 216 N.Y.S. 741, 744, 127 Misc. 382. Pertaining to the beautiful. Ha’-A-Tampa Cigar Co. v. Johnson, 149 Fla. 148, 5 So.2d 433, 440.

ESTIMATIO CAPITIS. Lat. The value of a head.

In Saxon law, the estimation or valuation of the head: the price or value of a man. The price to be paid for taking the life of a human being. By the laws of Athelstan, the life of every man not excepting that of the king himself, was estimated at a certain price, which was called the were, or cestimatio capitis. Crabb, Eng. Law, c. 4.

ETAS. Lat. In the civil law. Age.

ESTIMATIO PRIETERI DELICTI EX POST-REMO FACTO NUNQUAM CRESCIT. The weight of a past offense is never increased by a subsequent fact. Bacon.

ETAS INFANTIZE (also written infantili) PROXIMA. The age next to infancy; the first half of the period of childhood (pueritia), extending from seven years to ten and a half. Inst. 3, 20, 9; 4 Bl.Comm. 22. See Age.

ETAS LEGITIMA. Lawful age; the age of twenty-five. Dig. 3, 5, 27, pr.; Id. 26, 2, 32, 2; Id. 27, 7, 1, pr.

ETAS PERFECTA. Complete age; full age; the age of twenty-five. Dig. 4, 4, 32; Id. 22, 3, 25, 1.

ETAS PRIMA. The first age; infancy, (tinfantia). Cod. 6, 61, 8, 3.

ETAS PUBERTATI PROXIMA. The age next to puberty; the last half of the period of childhood (pueritia), extending from ten and a half years to fourteen, in which there might or might not be criminal responsibility according to natural capacity or incapacity. Inst. 3, 20, 9; 4 Bl.Comm. 22. See Age.

ETATE PROBANDA. A writ which inquired whether the king’s tenant holding in chief by chivalry was of full age to receive his lands. It was directed to the escheater of the county. Now disused.

ETHELING. In Saxon law, a noble; generally a prince of the blood.

AFFAIR. (Fr.). A law suit.

The term frequently refers to an amour; intrigue; liaison.
AFFAIRS. An inclusive term, bringing within its scope and meaning anything that a person may do. Walker v. United States, C.C.A.Mo., 93 F.2d 383, 391.

AFFECTED WITH A PUBLIC INTEREST. Affirmatively, phrase means that a business or property must be sun or be so employed as to justify the conclusion that it has been devoted to a public use, and its use thereby in effect granted to the public. Negatively, it does not mean that a business is affected with a public interest merely because it is large or because the public are warranted in having a feeling of concern in respect of its maintenance. H. Earl Clack Co. v. Public Service Commission of State of Montana, 94 Mont. 488, 22 P.2d 1056.

A business given a virtual monopoly in its field or where the public adapt their business or conduct to the methods used by it. Western Buse Telephone Co. v. Northwestern Bell Telephone Co., 288 Minn. 324, 248 N.W. 220, 229. A business must affect the prosperity of a large part of the body politic. Ex parte Kazas, 22 Cal.App. 2d 161, 70 P.2d 962, 967. This phrase means something more than “quasi public,” or “not strictly private,” and similar phrases employed as a basis for upholding police regulations. A business is not affected with a public interest merely because the public derives benefit, accommodation, ease or enjoyment from its existence or operation, such as admissions to places of amusement or entertainment. Tyson & Bro.—United Theatre Ticket Offices v. Ban- ton, 79 U.S. 418, 47 S.Ct. 426, 429, 71 L.Ed. 718, 58 A.L.R. 1236.

Businesses. Three classes of such businesses: (1) Those carried on under the authority of a public grant or privilege expressly or impliedly imposing an affirmative duty of rendering public service demanded by the public, such as common carriers and public utilities; (2) occupations regarded as exceptional, the public interest attaching to which has been recognized from earliest times and has survived the establishment of arbitrary laws by Parliament or colonial legislatures for regulating trades and callings, such as inns, cabs, and grist mills; (3) businesses which, though not public at their inception, have become such by devoting their business to a public use, thereby granting the public an interest in that use and subjecting themselves to public regulation to extent of that interest, although the property continues to belong to its private owner, and to be entitled to protection accordingly, as public warehouses for storage of grain, banks, and insurance companies. Rohrer v. Milk Control Board, 121 Pa.Super. 281, 184 A. 163, 138.

AFFECTIO TUA NOIVIEN IMPONIT OPERI TUO. Your disposition (or motive, intention) gives name (or character) to your work or act. Bract. fol. 2b, 101b.

AFFECTION. The making over, pawning, or mortgaging of a thing to assure the payment of a sum of money, or the discharge of some other duty or service. Crabb, Technol.Dict.

In a medical sense, an abnormal bodily condition. A local “affection” is not a local disease within the meaning of an insurance policy, unless the affection has sufficiently developed to have some bearing on the general health. Cady v. Fidelity & Casualty Co. of New York, 134 Wis. 322, 113 N.W. 967, 971, 17 L.R.A., N.S., 260.

AFFECTION. Disposition; intention, impulse or affection of the mind. One of the causes for a challenge of a juror is propter affectum, on account of a suspicion of bias or favor. 3 Bl.Comm. 363; Co.Litt. 156.

AFFECTION. Affected with a public interest merely because it is large or because the public are warranted in having a feeling of concern in respect of its maintenance. H. Earl Clack Co. v. Public Service Commission of State of Montana, 94 Mont. 488, 22 P.2d 1056.

AFFECTION. Disposition; intention, impulse or affection of the mind. One of the causes for a challenge of a juror is propter affectum, on account of a suspicion of bias or favor. 3 Bl.Comm. 363; Co.Litt. 156.

AFFEERORS. Persons who, in court-leets, upon oath, settle and moderate the fines and amerce-ments imposed on those who have committed of-fenses arbitrarily punishable, or that have no ex-press penalty appointed by statute. They are also so appointed to moderate fines, etc., in courts-baron. Cowell.

AFFERER. L. Fr. To let to farm. Also to make sure, to establish or confirm. Kelham.

AFFIRMANCE. To assure by pledge. A plighting of troth between man and woman. Littleton, § 39.

An agreement by which a man and woman promise each other that they will marry together. Pothier, Traitó du Mar, n. 24. Co.Litt. 34 a. See Dig. 23, 1, 1; Code, 5. 1. 4.

AFFIANT. The person who makes and subscribes an affidavit. The word is used, in this sense, interchangeably with “deponent.” But the latter term should be reserved as the designation of one who makes a deposition.

AFFIDARE. To swear faith to; to pledge one’s name (or character) to your work or act. Bract. fol. 2b, 101b.

AFFIDARE. To swear faith to; to pledge one’s name (or character) to your work or act. Bract. fol. 2b, 101b.

AFFIDATE. To confer a pecuniary reward upon. Bract. fol. 2b, 101b.
AFFIDATIO. A swearing of the oath of fidelity or of fealty to one’s lord, under whose protection the quasi-vassal has voluntarily come. Brown.

AFFIDATIO DOMINORUM. An oath taken by the lords in parliament.

AFFIDATUS. One who is not a vassal, but who for the sake of protection has connected himself with one more powerful. Spelman; 2 Bl.Comm. 46.

AFFIDAVIT. A written or printed declaration or statement of facts, made voluntarily, and confirmed by the oath or affirmation of the party making it, taken before an officer having authority to administer such oath. Cox v. Stern, 170 Ill. 442, 48 N.E. 906, 62 Am.St.Rep. 385; Hays v. Loomis, 84 Ill. 18. A statement or declaration reduced to writing, and sworn to or affirmed before some officer who has authority to administer an oath or affirmation. Shelton v. Berry, 19 Tex. 154, 70 Am.Dec. 326, and In re Breidt, 84 N.J.Eq. 222, 94 A. 214, 216.

A written or printed declaration or statement of facts, made voluntarily, and confirmed by the oath or affirmation of the party making it, taken before an officer having authority to administer such oath. June v. School Dist. No. 1, Southfield Tp., 283 Mich. 533, 278 N.W. 676, 677, 116 A.L.R. 581. Any voluntary ex parte statement reduced to writing and sworn to or affirmed before some person legally authorized to administer oath or affirmation, made without notice to adverse party and without opportunity to cross-examine. Kirk v. Hartlieb, 193 Ark. 37, 97 S.W.2d 434, 435, 436. The word sometimes includes “depositions.” U. S. v. Kaplan, D.C.Ga., 286 F. 963, 970.

“Affidavits” are of two kinds; those which serve as evidence to advise the court in the decision of some preliminary issue or determination of some substantial right, and those which merely serve to invoke the judicial power. Worthen v. State, 189 Ala. 395, 66 So. 868, 668.

AFFIDAVIT OF DEFENSE. An affidavit stating that the defendant has a good defense to the plaintiff’s action on the merits. The statements required in such an affidavit vary considerably in the different states where they are required. Called also an affidavit of merits (q. v.), as in Massachusetts.

AFFIDAVIT OF MERITS. One setting forth that the defendant has a meritorious defense (substantial and not technical) and stating the facts constituting the same. Palmer v. Rogers, 70 Iowa 381, 30 N.W. 645. Represents that, on the substantial facts of the case, justice is with the affiant. Wendel v. Wendel, 58 S.D. 438, 236 N.W. 468, 469.

AFFIDAVIT OF SERVICE. An affidavit intended to certify the service of a writ, notice, or other document.

AFFIDAVIT TO HOLD TO BAIL. An affidavit required in many cases before the defendant in a civil action may be arrested. Such an affidavit must contain a statement, clearly and certainly expressed, by some one acquainted with the fact, of an indebtedness from the defendant to the plaintiff, and must show a distinct cause of action; 1 Chit. Pl. 165.

AFFILARE. L. Lat. To put on record; to file or affile. Affiletur, let it be filed. 8 Coke, 160. De recordo affiliatum, affiled of record. 2 Ld. Raym. 1476.

AFFILE. A term employed in old practice, signifying to put on file. 2 Maule & S. 202. In modern usage it is contracted to file.

AFFILIATE. Signifies a condition of being united, being in close connection, allied, or attached as a member or branch. Johanson v. Riverside County Select Groves, 4 Cal.App.2d 114, 40 P.2d 530, 534.

"Affiliate with" is defined as to receive on friendly terms; to associate with; to be intimate with; to sympathize with; to consort with; and to connect or associate one’s self with. Wolck v. Weedin, C.C.A.Wash., 58 F.2d 928, 930. But "affiliated" does not bear construction that one of affiliated organizations is in all particulars identical with or covered by parent organization with which it may be said to be affiliated. People v. Horiuchi, 114 Cal.App. 415, 300 P. 457, 460.

AFFILIATION. Imports less than membership in an organization, but more than sympathy, and a working alliance to bring to fruition the proscribed program of a proscribed organization, as distinguished from mere co-operation with a proscribed organization in lawful activities, is essential. Bridges v. Wilson, Cal., 326 U.S. 135, 65 S.Ct. 1443, 1447, 89 L.Ed. 2103.

It includes an element of dependability upon which the organization can rely which, though not equivalent to membership duty, rests upon course of conduct that could not be abruptly ended without giving at least reasonable cause for charge of breach of good faith. U. S. ex rel. Kettunen v. Reimer, C.C.A.N.Y., 79 F.2d 315, 317.

The act of imputing or determining the paternity of a bastard child, and the obligation to maintain it.

Corporations

Actual control of corporations by same interests is insufficient; legally enforceable control of stock of corporations by same interests being required. Island Petroleum Co. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A., 57 F.2d 992, 994. Commences with acquisition of corporation from owners outside of group and ends with disposal of all properties or stock to those outside group. Hernandez v. Charles Iliff Co., C.C.A.N.M., 66 F.2d 236, 238.

Ecclesiastical Law

A condition which prevented the superior from removing the person affiliated to another convent. Guyot, Repert.

French Law

A species of adoption which exists by custom in some parts of France. The person affiliated succeeded equally with other heirs to the property acquired by the deceased to whom he had been affiliated, but not to that which he inherited.
AFFINAGE. A refining of metals. Blount.

AFFINES. In the civil law, connections by marriage, whether of the persons or their relatives. Calvinus, Lex.

Neighbors, who own or occupy adjoining lands. Dig. 10, 1, 12.

From this word we have affinity, denoting relationship by marriage; 1 Bla.Com. 434. The singular, affinis, is used in a variety of related significations—a boundary; Du Cange; a partaker or sharer, affinis culpe (an aider or one who has knowledge of a crime); Calvinus, Lex.

AFFINIS MEI AFFINIS NON EST MIHI AFFINIUS. One who is related by marriage to a person related to me by marriage has no affinity to me. Shelf.Mar. & Div. 174.

AFFINITAS. Lat. In the civil law, affinity; relation by marriage. Inst. 1, 10, 6.

AFFINITAS AFFINITATIS. Remote relationship by marriage. That connection between parties arising from marriage which is neither consanguinity nor affinity. Davidson v. Whitehill, 87 Vt. 499, 89 A. 1081, 1085. This term signifies the connection between the kinsmen of the two persons married, as, for example, the husband’s brother and the wife’s sister. Erskine, Inst. 1. 6. 8.

AFFINITY. A close agreement; relation; spiritual, or physical or attraction held to exist between certain persons. State ex inf. Norman v. Ellis, 325 Mo. 154, 28 S.W.2d 363, 367. Relation which, one spouse because of marriage has to blood relatives of the other. State v. Hooper, 140 Kan. 481, 37 P.2d 52.

Degrees of relationship by affinity are computed as are degrees of relationship by consanguinity. The doctrine of affinity grew out of the canonical maxim that marriage makes husband and wife one. The husband has the same relation, by affinity, to his wife’s blood relatives as she has to them by consanguinity and vice versa. State v. Hooper, 140 Kan. 481, 37 P.2d 52.

Affinity is distinguished into three kinds: (1) Direct, or that subsisting between the husband and his wife’s relations by blood, or between the wife and the husband’s relations by blood; (2) secondary, or that which subsists between the husband and his wife’s relations by marriage; (3) collateral, or that which subsists between the husband and the relations of his wife’s relations. Wharton.

In a larger sense, consanguinity or kindred. Co.Litt. 157a.

Quasi Affinity

In the civil law, the affinity which exists between two persons, one of whom has been betrothed to a kinsman of the other, but who have never been married.

In the practice of appellate courts, to affirm a judgment, decree, or order, is to declare that it is valid and right, and must stand as rendered below; to ratify and reassert it; to concur in its correctness and confirm its efficacy. Bowser v. Fall River County Bank, 25 Wyo. 260, 168 P. 726, 727.

Contracts

Pleading

To allege or aver a matter of fact; to state it affirmatively; the opposite of deny or traverse.

Practice

To make affirmation; to make a solemn and formal declaration or asseveration that an affidavit is true, that the witness will tell the truth, etc., this being substituted for an oath in certain cases. Also, to give testimony on affirmation.

AFFIRMANCE. In practice. The confirming, or ratifying of a former law, or judgment. Cowell; Blount.

The confirmation and ratification by an appellate court of a judgment, order, or decree of a lower court brought before it for review. See Affirm, note.

The ratification or confirmation of a voidable contract or act by the party who is to be bound thereby.

The term is in accuracy to be distinguished from ratification, which is a recognition of the validity or binding force as against the party ratifying, of some act performed by another person; and from confirmation, which would seem to apply more properly to cases where a doubtful authority has been exercised by another in behalf of the person ratifying; but these distinctions are not generally observed with much care.

AFFIRMANCE DAY GENERAL. In the English court of exchequer, a day appointed by the judges of the common pleas, and barons of the exchequer, to be held a few days after the beginning of every term for the general affirmation or reversal of judgments. 2 Tidd, Pr. 1091.

AFFIRMANT. A person who testifies on affirmation, or who affirms instead of taking an oath. See Affirmation. Used in affidavits and deposition which are affirmed, instead of sworn to in place of the word “deponent.”

AFFIRMANTI, NON NEGANTI INCUMBIT PROBATIO. The [burden of] proof lies upon him who affirms, not upon one who denies. Steph. Pl. 84.

AFFIRMATION. In practice, a solemn and formal declaration or asseveration that an affidavit is true, that the witness will tell the truth, etc., this being substituted for an oath in certain cases.

A solemn religious asseveration in the nature of an oath. 1 Greenl.Ev. § 371.

Quakers, as a class, and other persons who have conscientious scruples against taking an oath, are allowed to make affirmation in any mode which they may declare to be binding upon their consciences, in confirmation of the truth of testimony which they are about to give. 1 Atk. 21, 46; Cowp. 340, 389; 1 Leach Cr.Cas. 64; 1 Ry. & M. 77.

AFFIRMATION OF FACT. A statement concerning a subject-matter of a transaction which might otherwise be only an expression of opinion but which is affirmed as an existing fact material to that lie transaction, and reasonably induces the other party to consider and rely upon it, as a fact. Stone v. McCarty, 64 Cal.App. 158, 220 P. 690, 694.

AFFIRMATIO UNIUS EXCLUSIO EST ALTERI-
CS. The affirmation of one thing is the exclusion of the other. State v. Evans, 214 La. 472, 38 So.2d 140, 147.

AFFIRMATIVE. That which declares positively; that which avers a fact to be true; that which establishes; the opposite of negative.

The party who, upon the allegations of pleadings joining issue, is under the obligation of making proof, in the first instance, of matters alleged, is said to hold the affirmative, or, in other words, to sustain the burden of proof. Abbott.

As to affirmative "Damages," "Plea," "Proof," "Warranty," see those titles.

AFFIRMATIVE ACTION. The "affirmative action" which the National Labor Relations Board is authorized to take to effectuate the policies of the National Labor Relations Act is action to make effective the redress of rights conferred upon employees by the act. National Labor Relations Board v. National Casket Co., C.C.A.2, 107 F.2d 992, 998.

It is broad, but is not unlimited, is remedial not punitive, and is to be exercised in aid of the Board's authority to restrain violations and as a means of removing or avoiding the consequences of violations. National Labor Relations Board v. Fansteel Metallurgical Corporation, 306 U.S. 240, 59 S.Ct. 490, 497, 83 L. Ed. 627, 123 A.L.R. 599.

AFFIRMATIVE CHARGE. The general "affirmative charge" is an instruction to the jury that, whatever the evidence may be, defendant cannot be convicted under the count in the indictment to which the charge is directed. Coker v. State, 18 Ala.App. 550, 93 So. 384, 386.

AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE. In code pleading. New matter constituting a defense; new matter which, assuming the complaint to be true, constitutes a defense to it. Carter v. Eighth Ward Bank, 33 Misc. 128, 67 N.Y.S. 300.

AFFIRMATIVE EASEMENT. An "affirmative easement" is one which gives to the owner of the dominant tenement the right to use the servient tenement, or to do some act thereon which would otherwise be unlawful. Clements v. Taylor, Tex. Civ.App., 184 S.W.2d 485, 487.

AFFIRMATIVE PREGNANT. In pleading, an affirmative allegation implying some negative in favor of the adverse party. Fields v. State, 134 Ind. 46, 32 N.E. 780.

AFFIRMATIVE RELIEF. Relief, benefit, or compensation which may be due and granted to defendant. Garner v. Hannah, 6 Duer, N.Y., 262. Relief for which defendant might maintain an action independently of plaintiff's claim and on which he might proceed to recovery, although plaintiff abandoned his cause of action or failed to establish it. Southwestern Surety Ins. Co. v. Walser, 77 Okl. 240, 188 P. 335, 336.

AFFIRMATIVE STATUTE. A statute couched in affirmative or mandatory terms. 1 Bl.Comm. 142.

One which directs the doing of an act, or declares what shall be done; as a negative statute is one which prohibits a thing from being done, or declares what shall not be done. Blackstonp describes affirmative acts of parliament as those "wherein justice is directed to be done according to the law of the land." 1 Bl.Comm. 142.

AFFIRMATIVE WARRANTY. Affirms existence of a fact at time policy is entered into, while promissory warranty requires that something be done or not done after policy has taken effect. Sentinel Life Ins. Co. v. Blackmer, C.C.A.Colo., 77 F.2d 347, 350.

AFFIX. Fix or fasten in any way, to attach physically. Penn v. Dyba, 115 Cal.App. 67, 1 P.2d 461, 464. To attach to, inscribe, or impress upon, as a signature, a seal, a trade-mark. Pen.Code N.Y. § 367. To attach, add to, or fasten upon, permanently, as in the case of fixtures annexed to real estate.

A thing is deemed to be affixed to land when it is attached to it by the roots; as in the case of trees, vines, or shrubs; or imbedded in it, as in the case of walls; or permanently resting upon it, as in the case of buildings; or permanently attached to what is thus permanent, as by means of cement, plaster, nails, bolts, or screws. Miller v. Waddingham, 3 Cal.Unrep.Cas. 375, 25 Pac. 688, 11 L.R.A. 510; Tolle v. Vandenberg, 44 Okl. 780, 146 P. 212, 213.

AFFRAY. The fighting of two or more persons in some public place to the terror of the people. Wallace v. Commonwealth, 207 Ky. 122, 268 S.W. 809, 813.

Where two or more persons voluntarily or by agreement engage in any fight, or use any blows or violence towards each other in an angry or quarrelsome manner, in any public place to the disturbance of others.

Words are insufficient, but if one person, by such abusive language toward another as is calculated and intended to bring on a fight, induces the other to strike him, both are guilty of " affray." State v. Maney, 194 N.C. 34, 138 S.E. 441, 442.

AFFRECTAMENTUM. Affreightment; a contract for the hire of a vessel. From the Fr. frete, which, according to Cowell, meant tons or tonnage. Affreightamentum was sometimes used. Du Cange.

AFFREIGHTMENT. A contract of affreightment is a contract with a ship-owner to hire his ship, or part of it, for the carriage of goods. The Fred Smartley, Jr., C.C.A.Va., 100 F.2d 971, 973.

In French law, freighting and affreighting are distinguished. The owner of a ship freights it, (le frete:) he is called the master, (freteur) he is the letter or lessor, (locataire, locator) The merchant affreights (affrete) the ship, and is called the affreighter, (affreteur) he is the hirer, (locataire, conveyor) Emerig. Tr. des Ass. c. 11, § 3.

AFFRETEMENT. Fr. In French law, the hiring for a vessel; affreightment (q. v.). Called also nolissement. Ord.Mar. liv. 1, tit. 2, art. 2; Id. liv. 3, tit. 1, art. 1.

AFFRI. In old English law, plow cattle, bullocks or plow horses. Affri, or afri caruce; beasts of the plow. Spelman.

AFFRON. An insult or indignity; assault, insolence.

AFORESAID. Before, or already said, mentioned, or recited; premised. Plowd. 67. Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. Smith, 191 Ala. 643, 68 So. 56, 57. Foresaid is used in Scotch law.

Although the words 'preceding' and 'aforesaid' generally mean next before, and "following" means next after, yet a different signification will be given to them if required by the context and the facts of the case. Simpson v. Robert, 35 Ga. 180.

AFORETHOUGHT. In criminal law, deliberate; planned; premeditated; prepense. State v. Fiske, 63 Conn. 388, 28 A. 572. See Malice Aforethought; Premeditation, § 8 Bl.Com. 199; Respublica v. Mulatto Bob, 4 Dall. Pa., 146, 1 L.Ed. 776; U. S. v. Cornell, 2 Mas. 91, Fed.Cas.No.14,868.

"Aforethought" as used in the law of murder means thought of beforehand and for any length of time, however short, before the doing of the act, and is synonymous with premeditation. State v. Smith, 26 N.M. 482, 194 P. 869, 872.

AFRICAN DESCENT. Persons of African nativity or of "African descent" within the meaning of the Naturalization Act, as amended by Act July 14, 1870 (8 U.S.C.A. § 703 note), are members of the negro races of Africa or their descendants by intermixture with races constituting free white persons, the negro races referred to being those from which the emancipated slaves in the United States descend. Ex parte Shahid, D.C.S.C., 205 F. 812, 815.

AFTER. Later, succeeding, subsequent to, inferior in point of time or of priority or preference.

AFTER-ACQUIRED. Acquired after a particular date or event. Thus, a judgment is a lien on after-acquired realty, i.e., land acquired by the debtor or after entry of the judgment. Hughes v. Hughes, 152 Pa. 590, 26 A. 101.

AFTER ACQUIRED TITLE. Doctrine under which title acquired by grantor who previously attempted to convey title to land which he did not in fact own, inures automatically to benefit of prior grantees. Perkins v. White, Miss., 43 So.2d 897, 899; Morris v. Futischa, 194 Okl. 224, 148 P.2d 986, 987.

AGENCY. Includes every relation in which one person acts for or represents another by latter’s authority, Saums v. Parfet, 270 Mich. 165, 258 N.W. 235, where one person acts for another, either in the relationship of principal and agent, master and servant, or employer or proprietor and independent contractor, Gorton v. Doty, 57 Idaho 792, 69 P.2d 136, 139.

Properly speaking, agency relates to commercial or business transactions. Humble Oil & Refining Co. v. Bell, Tex.Civ.App., 172 S.W.2d 800,
It also designates a place at which business of company or individual is transacted by an agent. Johnson Freight Lines v. Davis, 170 Tenn. 177, 73 S.W.2d 637, 639.

The relation created by express or implied contract or by law, whereby one party delegates the transaction of some lawful business with more or less discretionary power to another, who undertakes to manage the affair and render to him an account thereof. State ex rel. Cities Service Gas Co. v. Public Service Commission, 337 Mo. 809, 85 S.W.2d 890, 894. Or where one person confides the management of some affair, to be transacted on his account, to another party. 1 Livermore, Prin. & Ag. 2. Or one party is authorized to do certain acts for, or in relation to the rights or property of the other. But means more than tacit permission, and involves request, instruction, or command. Klee v. U. S., C.C.A.Wash., 53 F.2d 58, 61. Being the consensual relation existing between two persons, by virtue of which one is subject to other's control. Tarver, Steele & Co. v. Pendleton Gin Co., Tex.Civ.App., 25 S.W.2d 156, 159.

Actual agency. Exists where the agent is really employed by the principal. Weidenaar v. N. Y. Life Ins. Co., 36 Mont. 592, 94 P. 1, 6.

Agency by estoppel. One created by operation of law and established by proof of such acts of the principal as reasonably lead to the conclusion of its existence. Sigel-Campion Live Stock Commission Co. v. Ardhoain, 71 Colo. 410, 207 P. 82, 83. Arises where principal, by negligence in not revoking the implied agency, or by acting as though he was still the principal's agent. Or where a person confides the management of some affair, to be transacted on his account, to another, who undertakes to manage the affair and render to him an account thereof. State ex rel. Cities Service Gas Co. v. Public Service Commission, 337 Mo. 809, 85 S.W.2d 890, 894. Or where one person confides the management of some affair, to be transacted on his account, to another party. 1 Livermore, Prin. & Ag. 2. Or one party is authorized to do certain acts for, or in relation to the rights or property of the other. But means more than tacit permission, and involves request, instruction, or command. Klee v. U. S., C.C.A.Wash., 53 F.2d 58, 61. Being the consensual relation existing between two persons, by virtue of which one is subject to other's control. Tarver, Steele & Co. v. Pendleton Gin Co., Tex.Civ.App., 25 S.W.2d 156, 159.

Agency of necessity. A term sometimes applied to the kind of implied agency which enables a wife to procure what is reasonably necessary for her maintenance and support on her husband's credit and at his expense, when he fails to make proper provision for her necessities. Bostwick v. Brower, 49 N.Y.S. 1046, 22 Misc. 709.

Deed of agency. A revocable and voluntary trust for payment of debts. Wharton.

Exclusive agency. Defined as an agency by owner that during life of contract he will not sell property to a purchaser procured by another agent, which agreement does not preclude owner himself from selling to a purchaser of his own procuring, while a contract giving a broker "exclusive sale" is more than such exclusive agency, and is an agreement by the owner that he will not sell the property during the life of the contract to any purchaser not procured by the broker in question. Harris v. McPherson, 97 Conn. 164, 115 A. 722, 724, 24 A.L.R. 1530; Harris & White v. Stone, 137 Ark. 23, 207 S.W. 443, 444.

General agency. That which exists when there is a delegation to do all acts connected with a particular trade, business or employment. Hinkson v. Kansas City Life Ins. Co., 93 Or. 473, 183 P. 24, 29. It implies authority on the part of the agent to act without restriction or qualification in all matters relating to the business of his principal. Schwartz v. Maryland Casualty Co., 82 N.H. 177, 131 A. 352, 353.

Implied agency. One created by act of parties and deduced from facts and circumstances. Sigel-Campion Live Stock Commission Co. v. Ardhoain, 71 Colo. 410, 207 P. 82, 83. It is an actual agency, proved by deductions or inferences from other facts, and third party need have no knowledge that the principal's agent, having received a commission for his services as agent of the principal, procured the purchase or sale of property for the principal. Kentucky-Pennsylvania Oil & Gas Corporation v. Clark, 247 Ky. 438, 57 S.W.2d 65.

Ostensible agency. One which exists where the principal intentionally or by want of ordinary care causes a third person to believe another to be his agent who is not really employed by him. Weidenaar v. N. Y. Life Ins. Co., 36 Mont. 592, 94 P. 1, 6. See, also, Agency by Estoppel.

AGENCY COUPLED WITH INTEREST. Interest in continued existence of power or authority to act with reference to business, where secured by contract and based on consideration moving from agent to principal looking to exercise of power as means of reimbursement, creates "agency coupled with an interest." Bowling v. National Convoy & Trucking Co., 101 Fla. 634, 135 So. 541, 544. Agent must have an interest or estate in the thing to be disposed of or managed under the power. One appointed to act as the representative of a corporation and transact its business generally (or business of being agent. Comer v. State, 73 Ind. 343, 32 Am.St.Rep. 749. One who has exclusive supervision and control of some department of a corporation's busi-AGGRAVATION. Any circumstance attending the commission of a crime or tort which increases its guilt or enormity or adds to its injurious consequences, but which is above and beyond the essential constituents of the crime or tort itself.

Matter of aggravation, correctly understood, does not consist of acts of the same kind and description as those constituting the gist of the action, but in something done by the defendant, on the occasion of committing the trespass, which is, to some extent, of a different legal character from the principal act complained of. Hathaway v. Rice, 19 Vt. 107. So on an indictment for murder the prisoner may be convicted of manslaughter, for the averment of malice aforethought is merely matter of aggravation. Co.Litt. 282 a.

In pleading, the introduction of matter into the declaration which tends to increase the amount of damages, but does not affect the right of action itself. Steph.P1. 257; 12 Mod. 597.

AGGRAVATION OF THE DISABILITY. Refers to the course or progress of the workman's condition resulting from the specific injury for which an award or arrangement of compensation has been made. Keefer v. State Industrial Accident Commission, 171 Or. 405, 135 P.2d 806, 809.

AGGREGATE. Entire number, sum, mass, or quantity of something; amount; complete whole, and one provision under will may be the aggregate if there are no more units to fall into that class. In re Curley's Will, 151 Misc. 664, 272 N.Y.S. 489. Composed of several; consisting of many persons united together; a combined whole. 1 Bl.Comm. 469.

AGGREGATE CORPORATION. See Corporation.

AGGREGATES. Name for materials consisting largely of rock, gravel and sand used for construction and surfacing of highways or, as a component part, in forming concrete for such construction. Johnson, Gravel Equipment Mfg. Co. v. Diamond Iron Works, C.C.A.Minn., 72 F.2d 161.

AGGREGATIO MENTIUM. The meeting of minds. The moment when a contract is complete. A supposed derivation of the word "agreement," q. v.

AGGREGATION. In law of patents, it means that the elements of a claimed combination are incapable of co-operation to produce a unitary result, and in its true sense does not need prior art patents to support it. National Popsicle Corporation v. Harvey, D.C.Pa., 6 F.Supp. 784, 786.

AGGROW. It does not imply mechanical interaction of parts, but only union of all elements of invention to realize single purpose. Simplex Piston Ring Co. of America v. Horton-Galco-Creamer Co., C.C.A.Conn., 61 F.2d 748, 750. A combination which merely brings together two or more functions to be obtained independently of each other does not represent "invention" but constitutes mere "aggregation." Hemming v. S. S. Kresge Co., D.C.Conn., 24 F.Suppl. 981, 983. The assembly of old elements, in a device in which each element discloses a separate function in the same way as it did when used alone, without mutuality of action, interaction, or co-operation, is mere "aggregation" not involving invention. In re Smith, 57 App.D.C. 204, 19 F.2d 678, 679.

AGGRIEVED. Having suffered loss or injury; damned; injured.

AGGRIEVED PARTY. One whose legal right is invaded by an act complained of, or whose pecuniary interest is directly affected by a decree or judgment. Glos v. People, 259 Ill. 332, 102 N.E. 763, 766, Ann.Cas.1914C, 119. See next topic. One whose right of property may be established or divested. McFarland v. Pierce, 151 Ind. 546, 45 N.E. 706. The word "aggrieved" refers to a substantial grievance, a denial of some personal or property right, or the imposition upon a party of a burden or obligation. Roulard v. McSoley, 54 R.I. 232, 172 A. 326, 327. Injured in a legal sense. In re Donnelly's Estate, 55 S.D. 426, 226 N.W. 563, 565.

Hubbleston, 173 Ark. 686, 293 S.W. 353, 358; contra, disciplinary proceedings; In re Dolphin, 240 N.Y. 89, 147 N.E. 538, 539; lunacy inquisition. Commonwealth v. Davidson, 269 Pa. 218, 112 A. 115. One against whom error has been committed, Kinealy v. Macklin, 67 Mo. 95. Or one against whom an appealable order or judgment has been entered. Ely v. Frisbie, 17 Cal. 260. Any party having an interest recognized by law in the subject-matter, which interest is injuriously affected by judgment. Hornbeck v. Richards, 80 Mont. 27, 257 P. 1025, 1026. A complainant who has received less than the relief demanded, or a defendant who has not been accorded the full amount of his set-off or counterclaim. Blanchard v. Neill, 83 N.J.Eq. 446, 91 A. 811. See, also, Kondas v. Washoe County Bank, 50 Nev. 181, 254 P. 1080, 1081. One under necessity of answering or replying to irrelevant and redundant matter in a pleading. Shea v. Kiley, Sup., 167 N.Y.S. 570, 572.

AGILD. In Saxon law, free from penalty, not subject to the payment of geld, or weregild; that is, the customary fine or pecuniary compensation for an offense. Speelman; Cowell.

AGILER. In Saxon law, an observer or informer.

AGILLARIUS. L. Lat. In old English law, a hayward, herdward, or keeper of the herd of cattle in a common field. Cowell.

AGIO. In commercial law, a term used to express the difference in point of value between metallic and paper money, or between one sort of metallic money and another. McCul.Dict.

AGIST. In modern law it means to take in and give feed to the cattle of strangers in the king's forest, and to collect the money due for the same to the king's use. Speelman; Cowell.

AGIOTAGE. A speculation on the rise and fall of the public debt of states, or the public funds. The specifier is called "agioteur."

AGIST. In ancient law it meant to take in and give feed to the cattle of strangers in the king's forest, and to collect the money due for the same to the king's use. Speelman; Cowell.

In modern law it means to take in cattle to feed, or pasture, at a certain rate of compensation. Bank of Tehama County v. Federal Realty Co., 2 Cal.2d 333, 40 P.2d 507, 509. See Agistment.
AGISTATIO ANIMALIUM IN FORESTA. The drift or numbering of cattle in the forest.

AGISTER. See Agistor.

AGISTERS, or GIST TAKERS. Officers appointed to look after cattle, etc. See Williams, Common, 232.

AGISTMENT. The taking and feeding of other men's cattle in the king's forest, or on one's own land, at a certain rate. Bank of Tehama County v. Federal Realty Co., 2 Cal.2d 333, 40 P.2d 507, 509. Also the profit or recompense for such pasturing of cattle. Williams v. Miller, 68 Cal. 290, 9 Pac. 166. A species of bailment. Patchen-Wilkes Stock Farm Co. v. Walton, 166 Ky. 705, 179 S.W. 823.

In canon law it is a composition or mean rate at which some right or due might be reckoned. There is also agistment of sea-banks, where lands are charged with a tribute to keep out the sea; and terra agistatce are lands whose owners must keep up the sea-banks. Holthouse.

Tithe of Agistment was a small tithe paid to the rector or vicar on cattle or other produce of grass lands. It was paid by the occupier of the land and not by the person who put in his cattle to graze. Rawle, Exmoor 31.

AGISTOR. One who takes in horses or other animals to pasture at certain rates. Story, Bailm. § 443; Cox v. Chase, 99 Kan. 740, 163 P. 184, 186. An officer who had the charge of cattle pastured for a certain stipulated sum in the king's forest and who collected the money paid for them.

AGITATOR. One who stirs up; excites; ruffles; perturbs. One who incessant advocates a social change.

Labor agitator. One actively engaged in promoting the interests of the laboring men. The term does not imply the use of unlawful or improper means. Wabash R. Co. v. Young, 69 N.E. 1003, 1005, 1006, 162 Ind. 102, 4 L.R.A., N.S., 1091.

AGNATES. In the law of descents, relations by the father, or on the father's side. This word is used in the Scotch law, and by some writers as an English word, corresponding with the Latin agnati, (q. v.) Ersk.Inst. b. 1, tit. 7, § 4.

AGNATI. In Roman law, the term included all the cognates who trace their connection exclusively through males.

A table of cognates is formed by taking each lineal ancestor in turn and including all his descendants of both sexes in the tabular view. If, then, in tracing the various branches of such a genealogical table or tree, we stop whenever we come to the name of a female, and pursue that particular branch or ramification no further, all who remain after the descendants of women have been excluded are agnates, and their connection together is agnatic relationship. Maine, Anc. Law, 142.

All persons are agnatically connected together who are under the same patria potestas, or who have been subjected to laws, and a bad citizen. Wilkes v. Shields, 64 N.W. 921, 62 Minn. 426, 427.

The agnate family consisted of all persons living at the same time, who would have been subject to the patria potestas of a common ancestor, if his life had been continued to their time. Hadl.Rom.Law, 131.

Cognates were all persons who could trace their blood to a single ancestor or ancestress, and agnates were those cognates who traced their connection exclusively through males. Maine, Anc. Law. Between agnati and cognati there is this difference: that, under the name of agnati, cognati are included, but not conversely; for instance, a father's brother, that is, a paternal uncle, is both agnatus and cognatus, but a mother's brother, that is, a maternal uncle, is a cognatus but not agnatus. (Dig. 38, 7, 5, pr.) Burrill.

AGNATIO. In the civil law, relationship on the fathers' side; the relationship of agnati; agnation. Agnatio a patre est. Inst. 3, 5, 4; Id. 3, 6, 6.

AGNATION. Kinship by the father's side. See Agnates; Agnati.

AGNOMEN, Lat. An additional name or title; a nickname. A name or title which a man gets by some action or peculiarity; the last of the four names sometimes given a Roman. Thus, Scipio Africanus, (the African,) from his African victories. Ainsworth; Calvinus, Lex. See Nomen.

AGNOMINATION. A surname; an additional name or title; agnomen.

AGNUS DEL Lat. Lamb of God. A piece of white wax, in a flat, oval form, like a small cake, stamped with the figure of a lamb, and consecrated by the pope. Cowell.

AGPHIA. See Aphasia.

AGRARIAN. Relating to land, or to a division or distribution of land; as an agrarian law.

AGRARIAN LAWS. In Roman law, laws for the distribution among the people, by public authority, of the lands constituting the public domain, usually territory conquered from an enemy.

In common parlance the term is frequently applied to laws which have for their object the more equal division or distribution of landed property; laws for subdividing large properties and increasing the number of landholders.

AGRARIUM. A tax upon or tribute payable out of land.

AGREEMENTUM. In old English law, agreement; an agreement. Spelman.

AGREE. To concur; come into harmony; give mutual assent; unite in mental action; exchange promises; make an agreement; arrange; to settle. Mickleson v. Gypsy Oil Co., 110 Okl. 117, 238 P. 194, 198. Consent. Smith v. Jones, 185 Ga. 236, 194 S.E. 556, 560. Harmonize or reconcile. "You will agree your books." 8 Coke. 67. Concur or acquiesce in; approve or adopt. Agreed, agreed.
to, are frequently used in the books, (like accord,) to show the concurrence or harmony of cases. Agreed per curiam is a common expression. Usually implies some contractual undertaking. In re Gray’s Estate, 160 Misc. 710, 290 N.Y.S. 603, 605. To grant or covenant, as when a grantor agrees that no building shall be erected on an adjoining lot; Hogan v. Barry, 143 Mass. 538, 10 N. E. 253; or a mortgagor agrees to cause all taxes to be paid; Mackay v. Truchon, 171 Mo.App. 42, 153 S.W. 502, 503.

AGREEt. In French law, a person authorized to represent a litigant before the Tribunals of Commerce. If such person be a lawyer, he is called an avocat-agree. Coxe, Manual of French Law.

AGREEANCE. In Scotch law, agreement; an agreement or contract.

AGREED. Settled or established by agreement. This word in a deed creates a covenant. It is a technical term, synonymous with “contracted,” McKisick v. McKisick, Meigs Tenn. 453. It means, ex vi termini, that it is the agreement of both parties. Aikin v. Albany, V. & C. R. Co., 26 Barb.N.Y. 298.

AGREED CASE. Stipulations signed by litigants’ attorneys, constituted an "agreed case". In re Davis Bros. Stone Co., 245 Wis. 130, 13 N.W.2d 512, 515.

Evidence presented by stipulation that stated facts constituted entire evidence is not an "agreed case". Struble-Werneke Motor Co. v. Metropolitan Securities Corporation, 93 Ind.App. 416, 178 N.E. 460, 462. Nor is an agreed statement of facts on which a case is submitted in lieu of evidence. Byers v. Essex Inv. Co., 281 Mo. 375, 219 S. W. 570, 571; Reddick v. Board of Com’rs of Pulaski County, 14 Ind.App. 598, 41 N.E. 834.

AGREED ORDER. The only difference between an agreed order and one which is made in the due course of the proceedings in an action is that in the one case it is agreed to, and in the other it is made as authorized by law. Claflin v. Gibson, 21 Ky.Law Rep. 337, 51 S.W. 439.

AGREED STATEMENT OF FACTS. A statement of facts, agreed on by the parties as true and correct, to be submitted to a court to a ruling on the law of the case. United States Trust Co. v. New Mexico, 183 U.S. 535, 22 Sup.Ct. 172, 46 L.Ed. 315. See Case Stated.

Where testimony was contradictory, stipulation relating to testimony did not constitute an "agreed state of facts". McPherson v. State Industrial Accident Commission, 169 Or. 190, 127 P.2d 344, 346.

AGREEMENT. A coming or knitting together of minds; a coming together in opinion or determination; the coming together in accord of two minds on a given proposition; in law a concord of understanding and intention between two or more parties with respect to the effect upon their relative rights and duties, of certain past or future facts or performances; the consent of two or more persons concurring respecting the transmission of some property, right, or benefits, with the view of contracting an obligation, a mutual obligation. Bac.Abr.; "Rocha v. Hulen, 6 Cal.App.2d 245, 44 P.2d 487, 482.

The act of two or more persons, who unite in expressing a mutual and common purpose, with the view of altering their rights and obligations. The union of two or more minds in a thing done or to be done; a mutual assent to do a thing. Corn. Dig. "Agreement," A 1. See Aggregatio Mentium. Carter v. Prairie Oil & Gas Co., 58 Okl. 365, 160 P. 319, 322. A compact between parties who are thereby subjected to the obligation or to whom the contemplated right is thereby secured. People v. Mills, 160 Misc. 730, 290 N.Y.S. 48, 52.

Although often used as synonymous with "contract," Dohlglass v. W. L. Williams Art Co., 142 Va. 840, 85 S.E. 993, it is a wider term than "contract" (Anson, Cont. 4.) An agreement might not be a contract, because not fulfilling some requirement. And each of a series of mutual stipulations or constituent clauses in a contract might be denominated an "agreement." The meaning of the contracting parties is their agreement. Whitney v. Wyman, 101 U.S. 396, 25 L.Ed. 1050. "Agreement" is seldom applied to specialties. Pars.Cont. 6.

"Agreement" is not synonymous with "promise" or "undertaking." It signifies a mutual contract, on consideration. Andrews v. Pontue, 24 Wsnd.N.Y. 285; Wain v. Warlters, 5 East, 10; wherein parties must have a distinct intention common to both, and without doubt or difference. Blake v. Mosher, 11 Cal.App. 592, 54 P.2d 492, 494.

The writing or instrument which is evidence of an agreement.

Classification

Conditional agreements, the operation and effect of which depend upon the existence of a supposed state of facts, or the performance of a condition, or the happening of a contingency.

Executory agreements, which have reference to past events, or which are at once closed and where nothing further remains to be done by the parties.

Express agreements are such as are to be performed in the future. They are commonly preliminary to other more formal or important contracts or deeds, and are usually evidenced by memoranda, parol promises, etc.

Implied agreements are those in which the terms and stipulations are specifically declared and avowed by the parties at the time of making the agreement.

Implied in law; more aptly termed a constructive or quasi agreement. It signifies a mutual contract, on consideration. Andrews v. Pontue, 24 Wnd.N.Y. 285; Wain v. Warlters, 5 East, 10; wherein parties must have a distinct intention common to both, and without doubt or difference. Blake v. Mosher, 11 Cal.App. 592, 54 P.2d 492, 494.

The writing or instrument which is evidence of an agreement.

AGREEMENT FOR INSURANCE. An agreement often made in short terms preliminary to the filling out and delivery of a policy with specific stipulations.

AGREEMENT NOT TO BE PERFORMED WITHIN A YEAR. An agreement that necessarily must require more than year for performance. Marble AGREEMENT OF SALE; AGREEMENT TO SELL. An agreement of sale may imply not merely an obligation to sell, but an obligation on the part of the other party to purchase (cf. Loud v. St. Louis Union Trust Co., 313 Mo. 552, 281 S.W. 744, 755) while an agreement to sell is simply an obligation on the part of the vendor or promisor to complete his promise of sale; Treat v. White, 181 U.S. 264, 21 Sup.Ct. 611, 45 L.Ed. 853. It is a contract to be performed in future, and, if fulfilled, results in a sale; it is preliminary to sale and is not the sale. Callender v. Crossfield Oil Syndicate, 84 Mont. 263, 275 P. 273, 276.

AGREEMENT TO SELL LAND. A contract to be performed in future which if fulfilled results in sale. In re Frayer's Estate, 401 Ill. 364, 82 N.E. 2d 633, 638.

AGRICULTURAL PRODUCT. Things which have a situs of their production upon the farm and which are brought into condition for uses of society by labor of those engaged in agricultural pursuits as contradistinguished from manufacturing or other industrial pursuits. In re Rodgers, Neb., 134 Neb. 832, 279 N.W. 800, 803.

AGRICULTURAL SCIENCES. That which is the direct result of husbandry and the cultivation of the soil. The product in its natural unmanufactured condition. Getty v. Milling Co., 40 Kan. 281, 19 P. 617. It has been held not to include beef cattle; Davis & Co. v. City of Macon, 64 Ga. 128, 37 Am.Rep. 60; but to include forestry products; Northern Cedar Co. v. French, 131 Wash. 394, 230 P. 837, 846.

AGRICULTURAL PURSUITS. Every process and step taken and necessary to the completion of a finished farm product. Big Wood Canal Co. v. Unemployment Compensation Division of Industrial Accident Board, 61 Idaho 247, 100 P.2d 49, 51.

AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY. One for promoting agricultural interests, such as improvement of land, implements, and brands of cattle. Crete Mills v. Nebraska State Board of Agriculture, 132 Neb. 244, 271 N.W. 684, 688; or for giving agricultural fairs; Town of West Hartford v. Connecticut Fair Ass'n, 88 Conn. 627, 92 A. 432.
AGRICULTURAL WORKER. Tasks incidental to agricultural activities all are within the scope of an "agricultural worker." Melendez v. Johns, Ariz., 76 P.2d 1163, 1167.

AGRICULTURE. The art or science of cultivating the ground, including the harvesting of crops, and in a broad sense, the science or art of production of plants and animals useful to man, including in a variable degree, the preparation of these products for man's use. In the broad sense, it includes farming, horticulture, forestry, together with such subjects as butter, cheese, making sugar, etc. Sancho v. Bowie, C.C.A.Puerto Rico, 93 P.2d 323, 324.

The cultivation of soil for food products or any other useful or valuable growths of the field or garden tillage, husbandry; also, by extension, farming, including any industry practiced by a cultivator of the soil in connection with such cultivation, as breeding and rearing of stock, dairying, etc. The science that treats of the cultivation of the soil. Stand. Diet.; State v. Stewart, 58 Mont. 1, 190 P. 129, 131.

"Agriculture" refers to the field or farm with all its wants, appointments, and products, as distinguished from "horticulture," which refers to the garden, with its less important though varied products. Dillard v. Webb, 55 Ala. 468.

AGUSADURA. In ancient customs, a fee, due from the vassals to their lord for sharpening their plowing tackle.

AHTEID. In old European law, a kind of oath among the Bavarians. Spelman. In Saxon law. One bound by oath, q. d. "oaththied." From ath, oath, and tied. Id.

A person "aids" when being present at the time and place he does some act to render aid to the actual perpetration of the crime, though he takes no direct share in its commission. State v. Johnson, 220 N.C. 773, 18 S.E.2d 358, 360.

This word must be distinguished from its synonym "encourage," the difference being that the former connotes active support and assistance. Although it may not import necessary criminality in the act furthered. See Abet.

AID AND ABET. Help, assist, or facilitate the commission of a crime, promote the accomplishment thereof, help in advancing or bringing it about, or encourage, counsel, or incite as to its commission. State v. Lord, 42 N.M. 638, 84 P.2d 80, 86.

At common law it consisted in being present at the time and place, and doing some act to render aid to the actual perpetrator of the crime, though without taking a direct share in its commission. See 4 Bl.Comm. 34; State v. Tally, 102 Ala. 25, 15 So. 722.

It comprehends all assistance rendered by words, acts, encouragement, support, or presence, actual or constructive, to render assistance if necessary. Johnson v. State, 21 Ala.App. 565, 110 So. 55; State v. Davis, 191 Iowa, 720, 183 N.W. 314, 316. But it is not sufficient that there is a mere negative acquiescence not in any way made known to the principal malefactor. People v. Barnes, 311 Ill. 559, 143 N.E. 445, 447. See Accessory; Abettor; Alder and Abettor.

AID AND ASSIST. The words "aided and assisted," as used in the statute prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors, as regards the condemnation or confiscation of vehicles, implies either knowledge on the part of the owner that the vehicle was being used for unlawful transportation, or such negligence or want of care as to charge him with such knowledge or notice. In re Gattina, 203 Ala. 517, 84 So. 760.

AID AND COMFORT. Help; support; assistance; counsel; encouragement.

As an element in the crime of treason (see Constitution of the United States, art. 3, § 3), the giving of "aid and comfort" to the enemy may consist in a mere attempt. It is not essential to constitute the giving of aid and comfort that the enterprise commenced should be successful and actually render assistance. Young v. United States, 97 U.S. 39, 62, 24 L.Ed. 992. An act which intentionally strengthens or tends to strengthen enemies of the United States, or which weakens or tends to weaken power of the United States to resist and attack such enemies. United States v. Haupt, D.C.Ill., 47 F.Supp. 836, 839. Any intentional act furthering hostile designs of enemies of the United States. United States v. Haupt, D.C.Ill., 47 F.Supp. 836, 839.

AIDER. One who is actually or constructively present at the commission of the offense and is a "principal". State v. Bachmeyer, 247 Wis. 294, 19 N.W.2d 261, 263.

Mere proof of a defendant's presence at the time of the commission of a criminal act is not sufficient to render him an " aider." Gentry v. State, 65 Ga.App. 100, 15 S.E.2d 464, 465.

AIDER AND ABETTOR. One who assists another in the accomplishment of a common design or purpose; he must be aware of, and consent to, such design or purpose. Peats v. State, 213 Ind. 560, 12 N.E.2d 270, 277.

One who advises, counsels, procures, or encourages another to commit a crime, himself being guilty of some overt act or advocacy or encouragement of his principal, actually or constructively present when crime is committed, and participating in commission thereof by some act, deed, word, or gesture; Turner v. Commonwealth, 268 Ky. 311, 104 S.W.2d 1085, and sharing the criminal intent of the principal. State v. Reed, 97 W.Va. 549, 127 S.E. 24, 28. But one who incites or instigates the commission of a felony when he is neither actually nor constructively present is an "alder, abettor, or procurer" within the meaning of a statute. Neal v. State, 104 Neb. 56, 175 N.W. 669, 670.

It is acute when induced by excessive potations at one time or in the course of a single debauch. An attack of delirium tremens and alcoholic homicidal mania are examples of this form. It is chronic when resulting from the long-continued use of spirits in less quantities, as in the case of dipsomania.

ALDERMAN. A judicial or administrative magis- trate.

See Aldermannus.

Originally the word was synonymous with "elder" or "senator," but was also used to designate an earl, and even a king.

In American cities, one of a board of municipal officers next in order to the mayor. State v. Waterman, 95 Conn. 414, 111 A. 623, 624; Board of Lights and Waterworks v. Dobbs, 151 Ga. 53, 105 S.E. 611, 612. The aldermen are generally a legislative body, having limited judicial pow- ers as a body, as in matters of internal police regulation, laying out and repairing streets, constructing sewers, and the like; though in many cities they hold separate courts, and have magisterial powers to a considerable extent.

In English law, an associate to the chief civil magistrate of a corporate town or city.

The word would seem to have been rather an appellation of honor, originally, than a distinguishing mark of office. Spelmar Gloss.

ALDERMANNUS. L. Lat. An alderman.

ALDERMANNUS CIVITATIS VEL BURGI. Alder- man of a city or borough, from which the modern office of alderman has been derived. T. Raym. 435, 437.

ALDERMANNUS COMITATUS. The alderman of the county. According to Spelman, he held an office intermediate between that of an earl and a sheriff. According to other authorities, he was the same as the earl. 1 Bl.Comm. 116.

ALDERMANNUS HUNDRED! SEU WAPEN¬ TACHIL Alderman of a hundred or wapentake. Spelman.

ALDERMANNUS REGIS. Alderman of the king. So called, either because he received his appoint- ment from the king or because he gave the judg- ment of the king in the premises allotted to him.

ALIEN ENEMY. In international law, an alien who is the subject or citizen of some hostile state or power. See Dyer, 2b; Co.Litt. 129b. A person who, by reason of owing a permanent or temporary allegiance to a hostile power, becomes, in time of war, impressed with the character of an enemy. See 1 Kent, Comm. 74; 2 Id. 63; Bell v. Chapman, 10 Johns., N.Y., 183; Dorsey v. Brigham, 177 Ill. 250, 52 N.E. 303, 42 L.R.A. 809. Subjects of a foreign state at war with United States. Caparell v. Goodbody, 132 N.J.Eq. 559, 29 A.2d 563, 569.

Whether or not a person is an alien enemy depends, not on his nationality, but on the place in which he voluntarily resides or carries on business. Porter v. Freudenberg, [1915] 1 K.B. 857. See, also, Noble v. Great American Ins. Co., 194 N.Y.S. 60, 66, 200 App.Div. 773.

ALIEN NÉE. An alien born, i.e., a person who, has been born an alien.

ALIENABLE. Proper to be the subject of alienation or transfer.

ALIENAGE. The condition or state of an alien.

&LIENATE. To convey; to transfer the title to property. Co.Litt. 118b. Alien is very commonly used in the same sense. 1 Washb. Real Prop. 53.

"Sell, alienate, and dispose" are the formal words of transfer in Scotch conveyances of heritable property. Bell. The term has a technical legal meaning, and any transfer of real estate, short of a conveyance of the title, is not an alienation of the estate. Masters v. Insurance Co., 11 Barb., N.Y., 630. See, also, Nichols & Shepard Co. v. Dunnington, 118 Okl. 231, 247 P. 353, 355. But the word has been defined as to convey or transfer to another as title, property, or right, to part voluntarily with ownership of property, and, in widest sense, property is alienated when transferred from one person to another in any way; but generally alienating is restricted to transfer of title to property by act of owner, as distinguished from transfer effected entirely by operation of law. Delfelder v. Poston, 42 Wyo. 176, 293 P. 354, 361.

ALIENATIO LICET PROHIBEATUR, CONSENSU TAMEN OMNIUM, IN QUORUM FAVOREM PROHIBITA EST, POTESTIERI, ET QUILIBET POTEST RENUNCIARE JURI PRO SE INTRODUCTO. Although alienation be prohibited, yet, by the consent of all in whose favor it is prohibited, it may take place; for it is in the power of any man to renounce a law made in his own favor. Co.Litt. any man to renounce a law made in his own favor. Co.Litt. 98.

ALIENATION. In real property law, the transfer of the property and possession of lands, tenements, or other things, from one person to another. Terms de la Ley.

The act by which the title to real estate is voluntarily resigned by one person to another and accepted by the latter, in the forms prescribed by law. Cf. In re Ehrhardt, U.S.D.C., 19 F.2d 406, 407 (bankruptcy proceedings).

It is said to signify the wrongful transfer of property to another or the wrongful conversion of property for which an action of trover was maintainable at common law. Sauls v. Whitman, 171 Okl. 113, 42 P.2d 275, 280.

In medical jurisprudence, a generic term denoting the different kinds or forms of mental aberration or derangement.

ALDIENTOS. The Spanish term for support and maintenance. Escruche Diccionario.

ALIMONY. Comes from Latin "alimonia" meaning sustenance, and means, therefore, the sustenance or support of the wife by her divorced husband and stems from the common-law right of the wife to support her by her husband. Eaton v. Davis, 176 Va. 330, 10 S.E.2d 893, 897. Derived from Latin word "alere," meaning to nourish or sustain. Allowances which husband by court order pays wife for maintenance while they are separated or after they are divorced. Merriman v. Hawbaker, D.C.Ill., 5 F.Supp. 432, 433. Or pending a suit for divorce. And see Bowman v. Worthington, 24 Ark. 522; Lynde v. Lynde, 64 N.J.Eq. 736, 52 A. 694, 58 L.R.A. 471. But in its strictly legal sense relates to the provisions made pendente lite. Warne v. Warne, 36 S.D. 573, 156 N.W. 60, 62. Compare Emerson v. Emerson, 120 Md. 584, 87 A. 1033, 1035, holding that in the absence of statute, in case of an absolute divorce the duty to support ceases and with it the right to alimony.

It does not partake of nature of damages or penalty for husband's misconduct. Kenndard v. Kenndard, 87 N.H. 414, 197 A. 564, 565. Nor is it founded on contract, express or implied, but on husband's natural and legal duty to support wife. Smith v. Smith, D.C.N.Y., 7 F.Supp. 490, 491.

Alimony in gross, or in a lump sum, is in the nature of a final property settlement, and hence in some jurisdictions is not included in the term "alimony," which in its strict or technical sense contemplates money payments at regular intervals. Parmly v. Parmly, 125 N.J.Eq. 545, 5 A.2d 789, 791; 27 C.J.S. Divorce, § 235, p. 965.

Permanent alimony is a provision for the support and maintenance of a wife during her lifetime. In re Spencer, 83 Cal. 460, 23 P. 395, 17 Am.St.Rep. 266.

ALIO INTUITU. Lat. In a different view; under a different aspect. 4 Rob.Adv. & Pr. 151. With another view or object; with respect to another case or condition. 7 East, 558; 6 M. & S. 231. See Diverso Intuitui.

ALIQUID CONCEDITUR NE INJURIA REMANENT IMPUNITA, QUOD ALIAS NON CONCEDERETUR. Something is (will be) conceded, to prevent a wrong remaining unredressed, which otherwise would not be conceded. Co.Litt. 197b.

ALIQUIS NON DEBET ESSE JUDEX IN PROPRIA CAUSA, QUIA NON POTEST ESSE JUDEX ET PARS. A person ought not to be judge in his own cause, because he cannot act as judge and party. Co.Litt. 141; 3 Bl.Comm. 59.

ALIQUOT. Strictly, contained in something else an exact number of times. But as applied to resulting trusts, "aliquot" is treated as meaning fractional. Fox v. Shanley, 94 Conn. 350, 109 A. 249, 251. And means any definite interest. Hinshaw v. Russell, 280 Ill. 235, 117 N.E. 406, 408.

ALITER. Otherwise; as otherwise held or decided.

ALIUD EST CELARE, ALIUD TACERE. To conceal is one thing; to be silent is another. Lord Mansfield, 3 Burr. 1910.

ALIUD EST DISTINCTIO, ALIUD SEPARATIO. Distinction is one thing; separation is another. It is one thing to make things distinct, another thing to make them separable.

ALIUD EST POSSIDERE, ALIUD ESSE IN POSSESSIONE. It is one thing to possess; it is another to be in possession. Hob. 163.

instrument may be explained by evidence alliunde, that is, by evidence drawn from sources exterior to the instrument itself, e.g., the testimony of a witness to conversations, admissions, or preliminary negotiations.

Evidence alliunde (i.e., from without the will) may be received to explain an ambiguity in a will. 1 Greenl. Ev.
§ 291.

ALIUNDE RULE. A verdict may not be impeached by evidence of juror unless foundation for introduction thereof is first made by competent evidence alliunde, or from some other source.
State v. Adams, 141 Ohio St. 423, 48 N.E. 2d 861, 863, 146 A.L.R. 509.

ALIUS. Lat. Other. The neuter form is *aliud, something else; another thing.

ALIVE. As respects birth, it means that child shall have an independent life of its own for some period, even momentarily, after birth. Evidence by respiration or other indications of life, such as beating of heart and pulsation of arteries. Flemartificial respiration, or pulsation of umbilical cord after being severed. In re Stuertz’ Estate, 124 Neb. 149, 245 N.W. 412, 413.

In respect of estate matters, a child en ventre sa mere is “born” and “alive” for all purposes for his benefit. In re Holthusen’s Will, 175 Misc.
1022, 26 N.Y.S. 2d 140, 143.

ALL. Means the whole of—used with a singular noun or pronoun, and referring to amount, quantity, extent, duration, quality, or degree. The whole number or sum of—used collectively, with a plural noun or pronoun expressing an aggregate. Every member of individual component of; each one of—used with a plural noun. In this sense, all is used generically and distributively.
“All” refers rather to the aggregate under which the individuals are subsumed than to the individuals themselves. State v. Hallenberg-Wagner Motor Co., 341 Mo. 771, 108 S.W. 2d 398, 401. See Both.

ALL AMERICAN. Indicative of supremacy, superiority, and distinction in the athletic world.
R. W. Eldridge Co. v. Southern Handkerchief

ALL AND SINGULAR. All without exception.
A comprehensive term often employed in conveyances, wills, and the like, which includes the aggregate or whole and also each of the separate items or components. McClaskey v. Beckman, 227 Minn. 409, 35 N.W. 2d 719, 734.

ALL CASES AT LAW. Within constitutional jurisdiction of jury trial, refers to common law actions as distinguished from causes in equity and certain other proceedings. Breimhorst v. Beckman, 227 Minn. 409, 35 N.W. 2d 719, 734.

ALL DISABILITY. Includes both total and partial disability caused by a permanent injury to the leg or arm, or resulting from or relating to the permanent injury, and embraces not only all incapacity to labor, directly or indirectly arising from such permanent injury, but likewise cases of no incapacity at all. Bausch v. Fidler, 277 Pa.
573, 121 A. 507. Includes pain, annoyance, inconveniences, disability to work, and everything incident to the permanent injury. Vanaskie v. Stev-

ALL FAULTS. A sale of goods with “all faults” covers, in the absence of fraud on the part of the vendor, all such faults and defects as are not inconsistent with the identity of the goods as the 242.

ALL FOURS. Two cases or decisions which are alike in all material respects, and precisely similar in all the circumstances affecting their determination, are said to be or to run on “all fours.”

ALL THE ESTATE. The name given in England to the short clause in a conveyance or other assurance which purports to convey “all the estate, right, title, interest, claim, and demand” of the grantor, lessor, etc., in the property dealt with.
Da°. Conv. 93.

ALL THE MEMBERS. The provision of a church constitution that “all the members” can discharge their parish priest means that all shall have opportunity to participate, but not that all members must attend the meeting or vote in the affirmative for the discharge of the priest. Stryjewski

ALL—ADDENDUM. As respects patent on a tooth gearing, “all-addendum” and “all-dedendum” mean that the working faces of the teeth of one element are outside, and those of the other element inside, their respective “pitch circles” which refer to circles passing through the pitch point and coaxial with the axes of rotation of the inter-meshing gear wheels. In re Cook, Cust. & Pat.
App., 103 F.2d 909, 911.

ALLEGANS CONTRARIA NON EST AUDIEN-DUS. One alleging contrary or contradictory things (whose statements contradict each other) is not to be heard. 4 Inst. 279. Applied to the statements of a witness.

ALLEGANS SUAM TURPITUDINEM NON EST
AUDIENDUS. One who alleges his own infamy is not to be heard. 4 Inst. 279.

ALLEGARI NON DEBUIT QUOD PROBATUM VENIENTE. That ought not to be alleged from some other source or testimony. Stryjewski
v. Panfil, 269 Pa. 568. A similar rule was announced in a Massachusetts case by E conyc. Lond.

ALLEGATA ET PROBATA. Lat. Things alleged and proved. The allegations made by a party to a suit, and the proof adduced in their support.
MITTENDA. An allegation contrary to the deed (or fact) is not admissible.

ALLEGATION. The assertion, declaration, or statement of a party to an action, made in a pleading, setting out what he expects to prove. Mathews v. Underpinning & Foundation Co., 17 N. J.Misc. 79, 4 A.2d 788, 789.

A material allegation in a pleading is one essential to the claim or defense.

In ecclesiastical law, the statement of the facts intended to be relied on in support of the contested suit.

In English ecclesiastical practice the word seems to designate the pleading as a whole; the three pleadings are known as the allegations; and the defendant’s plea is distinguished as the defensive, or sometimes the responsive, allegation, and the complainant’s reply as the rejoining allegation.

ALLEGATION OF FACT. Generally narration of transaction by stating details according to their legal effect, and statement of right or liability flowing from certain facts is conclusion of law. Maylender v. Fulton County Gas & Electric Co., 131 Misc. 514, 227 N.Y.S. 209, 217.

ALLEGATION OF FACTS. A statement made by the wife of the property of her husband, in order to obtain alimony. Wright v. Wright, 3 Tex. 168. See Faculties.

ALLEGE. To state, recite, assert, or charge; to make an allegation. To affirm, assert, or declare. State v. Hostetter, Mo.Sup., 222 S.W. 750, 754.

The citizen or subject owes an absolute and permanent allegiance to his government or sovereign until he becomes a citizen or subject of another government or another sovereign. The alien owes a local and temporary allegiance during period of his residence. U. S. v. Wong Kim, Ark., 169 U.S. 663, 18 Sup.Ct. 456, 42 L.Ed. 890; and so in the United States “it is a political obligation” depending not on ownership of land, but on the enjoyment of the protection of government; Wallace v. Harmstad, 44 Pa. 492; and it “binds the citizen to the observance of all laws” of his own sovereign; Adams v. People, 1 N.Y. 173.

ALLEGIARE. To defend and clear one’s self; to wage one’s own law. An archaic word which simply means to define or justify by due course of law. State v. Hostetter, Mo., 222 S.W. 750.

ALLEGING DIMINUTION. The allegation in an appellate court, of some error in a subordinate part of the nisi prius record. See Diminution.

ALLEN CHARGE. An instruction advising jurors to have deference for each other’s views, that they should listen, with a disposition to be convinced, to each other’s argument, deriving its name from the case of Allen v. United States, 164 U.S. 492, 17 S.Ct. 154, 41 L.Ed. 456, wherein the instruction was approved. Coupe v. United States, 72 App.D.C. 86, 113 F.2d 145, 149; Green v. U. S., 309 F.2d 852. Variously called dynamite charge, shotgun instruction, third degree instruction.

ALLEVIARE. L. Lat. In old records, to levy or pay an accustomed fine or composition; to redeem by such payment. Cowell.

ALLIANCE. The relation or union between persons or families contracted by intermarriage; affinity.

In international law, a union or association of two or more states or nations, formed by league or treaty, for the joint prosecution of a war (offensive alliance), or for their mutual assistance and protection in repelling hostile attacks (defensive alliance). The league or treaty by which the association is formed. The act of confederating, by league or treaty, for the purposes mentioned.

The term is also used in a wider sense, embracing unions for objects of common interest to the contracting parties, as the “Holy Alliance” entered into in 1815 by Prussia, Austria and Russia for the purpose of counteracting the revolutionary movement in the interest of political liberalism.

ALLISION. The running of one vessel into or against another, as distinguished from a collision, i.e., the running of two vessels against each other. But this distinction is not very carefully observed.

ALLOCABLE. Synonymous with “distributable”. In analyzing accounts, the breaking down of a lump sum charged or credited to one account into several parts to be charged or credited to other accounts. Fleming v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.Tex., 121 F.2d 7, 9.

ALLOCATIONE FACIENDA. In old English practice, a writ for allowing to an accountant such sums of money as he hath lawfully expended in his office; directed to the lord treasurer and barons of the exchequer upon application made. Jacob.

ALLOCATO COMITATU. In old English practice, in proceedings in outlawry, when there were but two county courts holden between the delivery of the writ of exigi facias to the sheriff and its return, a special exigi facias, with an allocato comitatu issued to the sheriff in order to complete the proceedings. See Exigent.

ALLOCATUR. Lat. It is allowed. A word formerly used to denote that a writ or order was allowed.

A word denoting the allowance by a master or prothonotary of a bill referred for his consideration, whether touching costs, damages, or matter of account. Lee, Diet.

A special allocatur is the special allowance of a writ (particularly a writ of error) which is required in some particular cases.

ALLOCATUR EXIGNET. A species of writ anciently issued in outlawry proceedings, on the return of the original writ of exigent. 1 Tidd, Pr. 128. See Exigent.

ALLOCATION. Formality of court’s inquiry of prisoner as to whether he has any legal cause to show why judgment should not be pronounced against him on verdict of conviction. Archb. Crim. Pl. 173; State v. Pruitt, Mo., 169 S.W.2d 399, 400.

ALLOCUTUS. See Allocution.

ALLODARII. Owners of allodial lands. Owners of estates as large as a subject may have. Co. Litt 1; Bac. Abr. “Tenure,” A.

ALLODIAL. Free; not helden of any lord or superior; owned without obligation of vassalage or fealty; the opposite of feudal. Barker v. Dayton, 28 Wis. 384; Wallace v. Harmstad, 44 Pa. 499.

ALLODIIUM. Land held absolutely in one’s own right, and not of any lord or superior; land not subject to feudal duties or burdens.

An estate held by absolute ownership, without recognizing any superior to whom any duty is due on account thereof. 1 Washb. Real Prop. 16. McCartee v. Orphan Asylum, 9 Cow., N.Y., 511, 18 Am.Dec. 516.

ALLOGRAPH. A writing or signature made for a person by another; opposed to autograph.

ALLOGRAPH. A piece of paper annexed to a bill of exchange or promissory note, on which to write endorsements for which there is no room on the instrument itself. Pardessus, n. 343; Story, Prom. Notes, §§ 121, 151; Fountain v. Bookstaver, 141 Ill. 461, 31 N.E. 17; Bergmann v. Puhl, 195 Wis. 120, 217 N.W. 746, 748, 56 A.L.R. 915.

ALLOPATHIC PRACTICE. The ordinary method of practicing medicine as adopted and taught by the great body of physicians. Bradbury v. Bardin, 34 Conn. 452, 453, 35 Conn. 577. Also, and more properly, that method of combatting disease by the use of remedies producing effects different from those of the disease being treated;—opposed to homeopathy.

ALLOT. To apportion, distribute; to divide property previously held in common among those entitled, assigning to each his ratable portion, to be held in severally; to set apart specific property, a share of a fund, etc., to a distinct party. Millet v. Bilby, 110 Okl. 241, 237 P. 859, 861.

In the law of corporations, to allot shares, debentures, etc., to appropriate them to the applicants or persons who have applied for them; this is generally done by sending to each applicant a letter of allotment, informing him that a certain number of shares have been allotted to him. Sweet.

ALLOPMENT. A share or portion; that which is allotted; apportionment; division; the distribution of shares in a public undertaking or corporation. Reuter v. Reuter’s Succession, 206 La. 474, 19 So.2d 209, 212. Assignment. Face v. Eoff, Tex. Com.App., 48 S.W.2d 956, 963. Partition; the distribution of land under an enclosure act. The term ordinarily and commonly used to describe land held by Indians after allotment, and before the issuance of the patent in fee that deprives the land of its character as Indian country. Estes v. U. S., C.C.A., 225 F. 980, 981; Harris v. Grayson, 90 Okl. 147, 216 P. 446, 449. See Allottee.

ALLOPMENT CERTIFICATE. A document issued to an applicant for shares in a company or public loan announcing the number of shares allotted or assigned and the dates of the calls or different payments to be made on the same. An “allotment certificate,” when issued to an enrolled member of the Five Civilized Tribes of the Indian Territory, is an adjudication of the special tribunal empowered to decide the question that the party to whom it issues is entitled to the land, and it is a conveyance of the right to this title to the allottee.

ALLOTMENT NOTE. In English law, a writing by a seaman, whereby he makes an assignment of part of his wages in favor of his wife, father or mother, grandfather or grandmother, brother or sister. Motley & Whitley.

ALLOTMENT SYSTEM. Designates the practice in England of dividing land in small portions for cultivation by agricultural laborers and other cottagers at their leisure, and after they have performed their ordinary day's work. Wharton.

ALLOTMENT WARDEN. By the English general inclosure act, 1845, § 108, when an allotment for the laboring poor of a district has been made on an inclosure under the act, the land so allotted is to be under the management of the incumbent and church warden of the parish, and two other persons elected by the parish, and they are to be styled "the allotment wardens" of the parish.
Sweet.

ALLOTTEE. One to whom an allotment is made, who receives a ratable share under an allotment;
a person to whom land under an inclosure act or shares in a public undertaking are allotted.
An "allottee," as the word is used in the act of April 21, 1904 (chapter 1402, 33 Stat. 189-204), is one, generally an Indian, freedman, or adopted citizen of a tribe of Indians, to whom a tract of land out of a common holding has been given by, or under the supervision of, the United States.
Lynch v. Franklin, 37 Okl. 60, 130 P. 599, 600. The word does not include such allottee's heirs. Bradley v. Goddard, 45 Okl. 77, 145 P. 409, 410.

ALLOW. The word has no rigid or precise meaning, but its import varies according to circumstances or context in connection with which it is used. It may mean bestow, assign, to any one as his right or due, to accord, or to imply discretion or qualification; to abate or deduct; as, to allow a sum for leakage. Pittsburgh Brewing Co.

ALLOY. An inferior or cheaper metal mixed with gold or silver in manufacturing or coining.
As respects coining, the amount of alloy is fixed by law, and is used to increase the hardness and durability of the coin.
A compound of two or more metals. Treibacher-Chethis-che Werke Gesellschaft mit Beschränkter Haftung v. Roess-l & Hasslacher Chemical Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 219 F. 210, 211.
A mixture or combination of metals while in state of fusion. Pittsburgh Iron & Steel Foundries Co. v. Seaman-Sleeth Co., D.C.Pa., 236 F. 756, 757; Treibacher-Chethis-che Werke Gesellschaft mit Beschränkter Haftung v. Roessler & Hasslacher Chemical Co., D.C.N.Y., 214 F. 410, 412.

ALLOYNOUR. L. Fr. One who conceals, steals, or carries off a thing privately. Britt. c. 17. See Eloigne.

ALLUVIO MARIS. Lat. In the civil and old English law, the washing up of the sea; the soil thus formed; formation of soil or land from the sea; maritime increase. Hale, Anal. § 8. "Alluvio maris is an increase of the land adjoining, by the projection of the sea, casting up and adding sand and slubb to the adjoining land, whereby it is increased, and for the most part by insensible ALLUVION. That increase of the earth on a shore or bank of a stream or the sea, by the force of the water, as by a current or by waves, which is so gradual that no one can judge how much is added at each moment of time. Inst. 1, 2, t. 1, § 20. Ang. Water Courses, 53. Jefferis v. East Ohio Land Co., 134 U.S. 178, 10 Sup.Ct. 518, 33 L.Ed. 872. Willett v. Miller, 176 Okl. 278, 55 P.2d 90, 92. “Accretion” denotes the act. However, the terms are frequently used synonymously. Katz v. Patterson, 135 Or. 449, 296 P. 54, 55. Avalson is sudden and perceptible. St. Clair County v. Lovingston, 23 Wall. 46, 23 L.Ed. 59. See Accretion; Avalson.

ALLY. A nation which has entered into an alliance with another nation. 1 Kent, Comm. 69. A citizen or subject of one of two or more allied nations. Siemund v. Schmidt, Mun.Ct.N.Y., 168 N.Y.S. 935.

ALMANAC. A publication, in which is recounted the days of the week, month, and year, both common and particular, often distinguishing the fasts, feasts, terms, etc., from the common days by proper marks, pointing out also the several changes of the moon, tides, eclipses, etc.

ALMARIA. The archives, or, as they are sometimes styled, muniments of a church or library.

ALMESFEOH. In Saxon law, alms-fee; alms-money. Otherwise called “Peter-pence.” Cowell.

ALMOIN. Alms; a tenure of lands by divine service. See Frankalmoigne.

ALMONER. One charged with the distribution of alms. The office was first instituted in religious houses and although formerly one of importance is now in England almost a sinecure.

ALMOXARIFAZGO. In Spanish law, a general term, signifying both export and import duties, as well as excise.

ALMS. Charitable donations. Any species of relief bestowed upon the poor. That which is given by public authority for the relief of the poor.

ALMS FEE. Peter-pence (or Peter’s pence), which see.

ALMSHOUSE. A house for the publically supported paupers of a city or county. People v. City of New York, 36 Hun, N.Y., 311. In England an almshouse is not synonymous with a workhouse or poorhouse, being supported by private endowment.

It may be a public institution kept up by public revenues, or it may be an institution, maintained by private endowment and contributions, where the indigent, sick, and poor are cared for without cost to themselves. State Board of Control v. Buckstegge, 18 Ariz. 277, 158 P. 837, 839.

ALNAGER, or ULNAGER. A sworn officer of the king whose duty it was to look to the assise of woolen cloth made throughout the land, and to the putting on the seals for that purpose ordained, for which he collected a duty called “alnage.” Cowell; Termes de la Ley.

ALNETUM. In old records, a place where alders grow, or a grove of alder trees. Doomsday Book; Co.Litt. 4b.

ALOD, Alode, Alodes, Alodis. L. Lat. In feudal law, old forms of alodium or allodium (q. v.).

A term used in opposition to feodum or fief, which means property, the use of which was bestowed upon another by the proprietor, on condition that the grantee should perform certain services for the grantor, and upon the failure of which the property should revert to the original possessor. See 1 Poll. & Maitl. 45.

ALODIAN. Sometimes used for anodial, but not well authorized. Cowell.

ALODIARII. See Allodaril.

ALONG. Lengthwise of, implying motion or at near, distinguished from across. Nicolai v. Wisconsin Power & Light Co., 227 Wis. 83, 277 N.W. 674, 678. By, on, up to, or over, according to the subject-matter and context. State v. Downes, 79 N.H. 505, 112 A. 246; Sioux City Bridge Co. v. Miller, C.C.A., 12 F.2d 41, 48. The term does not necessarily mean touching at all points; Com. v. Franklin, 133 Mass. 569; nor does it necessarily imply contact, Watts v. City of Winfield, 101 Kan. 470, 168 P. 319, 321.

ALSO. Besides; as well; in addition; likewise; item; further; moreover; in the same manner; furthermore; in the same manner; moreover; nearly the same as the word “and” or “likewise.” Schilling v. Central California Traction Co., 1 P. 2d 53, 55, 115 Cal.App. 30.

The word imports no more than “item” and may mean the same as “moreover”; but not the same as “in like manner”; Evans v. Knorr, 4 Rawle (Pa.) 68; nor is it synonymous with “other;” City of Ft. Smith v. Gunter, 106 Ark. 371, 154 S.W. 181, 183. It may be (1) the beginning of an entirely different sentence, or (2) a copulative carrying on the sense of the immediately preceding words into those immediately succeeding. Stroud, Jud. Dict., citing 1 Jarm. 497 n.; 1 Salk. 239; Security State Bank v. Jones, 121 Kan. 396, 247 P. 862, 863.

ALT. In Scotch practice, an abbreviation of Alter, the other; the opposite party; the defendant. 1 Broun, 336, note.

ALTA PRODITIO. L. Lat. In old English law, offerings made on the altar; all profits which accrue to the priest by means of the altar. Ayliffe, Parerg. 61.
ALTER. To make a change in; to modify; to vary in some degree; to change some of the elements or ingredients or details without substituting an entirely new thing or destroying the identity of the thing affected. Davis v. Campbell, 93 Iowa, 524, 61 N.W. 1053. To change partially. Cross v. Nee, D.C.Mo., 18 F.Supp. 589, 594. To change in one or more respects, but without destruction of existence or identity of the thing changed; to increase or diminish. Kraus v. Kraus, 301 Ill.App. 606, 22 N.E.2d 862. See Alteration; Change.

To change may import the substitution of an entirely different thing, while to alter is to operate upon a subject-matter which continues objectively the same while modified in some particular. To "amend" implies that the modification made in the subject improves it, which is not necessarily the case with an alteration. See Ex parte Woo Jan, D.C.Ky., 228 F. 927, 940.

The other; the opposite party. See Alt.

ALTER EGO. Second self. 3 C.J.S. Alter Ego.

Theory that subordinate or servient corporation may be controlled by superior or dominant corporation, so that dominant corporation may be held liable for subordinate corporation's negligence. Barnes v. Liebig, 146 Fla. 219, 1 So.2d 247, 253.

To establish the "alter ego" doctrine, it must be shown that the stockholders disregarded the entity of the corporation, made corporation a mere conduit for the transaction of their own private business, and that the separate individualities of the corporation and its stockholders in fact ceased to exist. Sefton v. San Diego Trust & Savings Bank, Cal.App., 106 P.2d 974, 984.

The doctrine of "alter ego" does not create assets for old corporation, but it simply fastens liability on the individual who uses the corporation merely as an instrumentality in conducting his own personal business, and that liability springs from fraud perpetrated not on the corporation, but on third persons dealing with corporation. Garve v. Matthews, 193 Wash. 152, 74 P.2d 990, 992.

A new corporation taking over all of mortgaged assets of old corporation in exchange for all of old corporation's capital stock and continuing to operate business formerly operated by old corporation was "alter ego" of old corporation so as to be obligated to pay annual patent royalty which old corporation was required to pay, notwithstanding that old corporation retained title to mortgaged assets. Dummer v. Wheeler Osgood Sales Corp., 198 Wash. 381, 88 P.2d 453, 458.

ALTERATION. Variation; changing; making different. A change of a thing from one form or state to another; making a thing different from what it was without destroying its identity. Paye v. City of Grosse Pointe, 279 Mich. 254, 271 N.W. 826, 827. See Alter.

As applied to buildings, it is a change or substitution in a substantial particular of one part of a building for a building different in that particular; a change or changes within the superficial limits of an existing structure; an installation that becomes an integral part of the building and changes its structural quality; a substantial change therein; a varying or changing the form or nature of such building without destroying its identity. Paye v. City of Grosse Pointe, 279 Mich. 254, 271 N.W. 826, 827.

Alteration of highway means change of course of existing highway, leaving it substantially the same highway as before, but with its course in some respects changed. Huening v. Shenkenberg, 208 Wis. 177, 242 N.W. 552, 553.

An alteration is an act done upon the instrument by which its meaning or language is changed. If what is written upon or erased from the instrument has no tendency to produce this result, or to mislead any person, it is not an alteration. Oliver v. Hawley, 5 Neb. 444.

An alteration is said to be material when it affects, or may possibly affect, the rights of the persons interested in the document.

Language different in legal effect, or change in rights, interests, or obligations of parties. Bank of Moberly v. Meals, 316 Mo. 1158, 295 S.W. 73, 77; Commercial Credit Co. v. Giles, Tex.Civ.App., 207 S.W. 596, 598. It introduces some change into instrument's terms, meaning, language, or details. See U. S. v. Sacks, 257 U.S. 37, 42 S.Ct. 38, 39, 66 L. Ed. 118. Strictly speaking, it is some material change on face of instrument by one of the parties thereto without consent of the other. Johnston v. Depuy, 15 N.J.Misc. 94, 188 A. 742, 743; since a mutual agreement of parties concerned creates a new agreement. Leake, Cont. 430. If performed by a mere stranger, it is more technically describable as a spoliation or mutilation. Knox v. Horne, Tex.Civ.App., 200 S.W. 259, 260; Bercot v. Velkoff, 111 Ind. App. 323, 41 N.E.2d 686, 692. The term is not properly applied to any change which involves the substitution of a practically new document. Kempner v. Simon, 195 N.Y.S. 333, 334, 119 Misc.Rep. 60. And it should in strictness be reserved for the designation of changes in form or language, and not used with reference to modifications in matters of substance. The term is also to be distinguished from "defacement." Too, if what is done simply takes away what was given before, or a part of it under a will, it is a revocation; but if it gives something in addition or in substitution, then it is an alteration. Appeal of Miles, 68 Conn. 237, 36 A. 39, 36 L.R.A. 176.

ALTERCATION. Warm contentions in words, dispute carried on with heat or anger, controversy, wrangle, wordy contest. Ivory v. State, 128 Tex.Cr.R. 408, 81 S.W.2d 696, 698.

ALTERIUS CIRCUMVENTIO ALU NON PRIEBET ACTIONEM. The deceiving of one person does not afford an action to another. Dig. 50, 17, 49.

ALTERNAT. A usage among diplomats by which the rank and places of different powers, who have the same right and pretensions to precedence, are changed from time to time, either in a certain regular order or one determined by lot. In drawing up treaties and conventions, for example, it is the usage of certain powers to alternate, both in the preamble and the signatures, so that each power occupies, in the copy intended to be delivered to it, the first place. Wheat.Int. Law, § 157.

ALTERNATE LEGACY. See Legacy.

ALTERNATIVA PETITIO NON EST AUDIENDA. An alternative petition or demand is not to be heard. 5 Coke, 40.

ALTERNATIVE. One or the other of two things; giving an option or choice; allowing a choice between two or more things or acts to be done. See Malone v. Meres, 91 Fla. 709, 109 So. 677, 693.

ALTERNHEIM. A German word meaning "home for old people." German Pioneer Verein v. Meyer, 70 N.J.Eq. 192, 63 A. 835.
ALTERNATIVE CONTRACT. A contract whose terms allow of performance by the doing of either one of several acts at the election of the party from whom performance is due. Crane v. Peer, 43 N.J.Eq. 553, 4 A. 72.

ALTERNATIVE JUDGMENT. See Judgment.

ALTERNATIVE OBLIGATION. An obligation allowing the obligor to choose which of two things he will do, the performance of either of which will satisfy the instrument. A promise to deliver a certain thing or to pay a specified sum of money is an example of this kind of obligation.

ALTERNATIVE PLEADING. A pleading alleging substantive facts so disjunctively that it cannot be determined upon which of them the pleader intends to rely as basis for recovery. Groover v. Savannah Bank & Trust Co., 186 Ga. 476, 198 S.E. 217, 219.

ALTERNATIVE REMAINDERS. Remainders in which disposition of property is made in alternative, one to take effect only in case the other does not, and in substitution of it. Riddle v. Killian, 366 Ill. 294, 8 N.E.2d 629, 634.

ALTERNATIVE REMEDY. Where a new remedy is created in addition to an existing one, they are called "alternative" if only one can be enforced; but if both, "cumulative."

ALTERNATIVE WRIT. A writ commanding the person against whom it is issued to do a specified thing, or show cause to the court why he should not be compelled to do it. Allee v. McCoy, 2 Marv., Del., 465, 36 A. 359. Under the common-law practice, the first mandamus is an alternative writ; 3 Bla.Com. 111; but in modern practice this writ is often dispensed with and its place is taken by a rule to show cause. See Mandamus.

ALTERNIS VICIBUS. L. Lat. By alternate turns; at alternate times; alternately. Co.Litt. 4a; Shep.Touch. 206.

ALTERUM NON LIEDERE. Not to injure another. This maxim, and two others, honeste vivere, and suum cuique tribuere, (q. v.,) are considered by Justinian as fundamental principles upon which all the rules of law are based. Inst. 1, 1, 3.

ALTERUTER. Lat. One of two; either.

ALTUS NON TOLLENDI. In the civil law, a servitude due by the owner of a house, by which he is restrained from building beyond a certain height. Dig. 8, 2, 4; Sandars, Just.Inst. 119.

ALTUS TOLLENDI. In the civil law, a servitude which consists in the right, to him who is entitled to it, to build his house as high as he may think proper. In general, however, every one enjoys this privilege, unless he is restrained by some contrary title. Sandars, Just.Inst. 119.

ALTO ET BASSO. High and low. This phrase is applied to an agreement made between two contending parties to submit all matters in dispute, alto et basso, to arbitration. Cowell.

ALUMNUS. A child which one has nursed; a foster-child. Dig. 40, 2, 14.

Also a graduate from a school, college, or other institution of learning.

ALVEUS. The bed or channel through which the stream flows when it runs within its ordinary channel. Calvinus, Lex. Alveus derelictus, a deserted channel. Mackeld. Rom.Law, § 274.

AMALGAMATION. Union of different races, or diverse elements, societies, or corporations, so as to form a homogeneous whole or new body; inter-fusion; intermarriage; consolidation; coalescence; as, the amalgamation of stock. Stand. Dict.

To join in a single body two or more associations, organizations, or corporations. Peterson v. Evans, 288 Ill.App. 623, 6 N.E.2d 520.

In England it is applied to the merger or consolidation of two incorporated companies or societies.

The word has no definite meaning: it involves the blending of two concerns into one; 1904, 2 Ch. 268.

AMALPHITAN CODE OR TABLE. A collection of sea-laws, compiled about the end of the eleventh century, by the people of Amalphi.

It consists of the laws on maritime subjects, which were or had been in force in countries bordering on the Mediterranean; and was for a long time received as authority in those countries. Azuni; Wharton. It became a part of the law of the sea; The Scotia, 14 Wall., U.S., 170, 20 L.Ed. 822. See Code.

AMANUENSIS. One who writes on behalf of another that which he dictates.

AMBACTOR. A person sent about in the service of another; a servant; a messenger. A person sent by one sovereign to another, with authority, by letters of credence, to treat on affairs of state. Jacob. The personal representatives of the head of the state which sends them, entitled to special honors and special privileges and having varied duties; mouthpiece of communications, government informant, and protector of citizens of his country. Russian Government v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., D.C.N.Y., 293 F. 133. See Letter of Credence; Minister.

A distinction was formerly made between Ambassadors Extraordinary, who were sent to conduct special business or to remain for an indeterminate period, and Ambassadors Ordinary, who were sent on permanent missions; but this distinction is no longer observed.

AMBER, or AMBRA. In old English law, a measure of four bushes.

AMBEDEXTHER. Skillful with both hands; one who plays on both sides. Applied anciently to an attorney who took pay from both sides, and subsequently to a juror guilty of the same offense. Cowell.

AMBIGUA RESPONSIO CONTRA PROFERENTEM EST ACCIPIENDA. An ambiguous answer is to be taken against (is not to be construed in favor of) him who offers it. 10 Coke, 59.

AMBIGUIS CASIBUS SEMPER PLESUMITUR PRO REGE. In doubtful cases, the presumption always is in behalf of the crown. Lofft, Append. 248.

Ambiguitas latens, a latent ambiguity; ambiguitas patens, a patent ambiguity. See Ambiguity.

AMBIGUAS CONTRA STIPULATOREM EST. Doubtful words will be construed most strongly against the party using them.

AMBIGUITAS VERBORUM LATENS VERWICHTIONE SUPPLETUR; NAM QUOD EX FACTO ORITUR AMBIGUUM VERIFICATIONE FACTI TOLLITUR. A latent ambiguity in the language may be removed by evidence; for whatever ambiguity arises from an extrinsic fact may be explained by extrinsic evidence. Bac.Max.Reg. 23. Said to be "an unprofitable subtlety; inadequate and uninstructive." Prof. J. B. Thayer in 6 Harv. L. 417.

AMBIGUAS VERBORUM PATENS NULLA VERIFICATIONE EXCLUDITUR. A patent ambiguity cannot be cleared up by extrinsic evidence (or is never holpen by averment). Lofft, 249; Bacon, Max. 25.

Ambiguity of language is to be distinguished from unintelligibility and inaccuracy, for words cannot be said to be ambiguous unless their signification seems doubtful and uncertain to persons of competent skill and knowledge to understand them. Story, Contr. 272. It does not include uncertainty arising from the use of peculiar words, or of common words in a peculiar sense. Wig. Wills, 174; In re Milliette's Estate, 206 N.Y.S. 342, 349, 123 Misc.Rep. 745. It is latent where the language employed is clear and intelligible and suggests but a single meaning, but some extrinsic fact or extraneous evidence creates a necessity for interpretation or a choice among two or more possible meanings, as where a description apparently plain and unambiguous is shown to fit different pieces of property. Logue v. Von Almen, 379 Ill. 208, 40 N.E.2d 73, 82, 140 A.L.R. 251. A patent ambiguity is that which appears on the face of the instrument, and arises from the defective, obscure, or insensible language used. Carter v. Holman, 60 Mo. 504; Stokeley v. Gordon, 8 Md. 505; Carroll v. Cave Hill Cemetery Co., 172 Ky. 204, 189 S.W. 186, 190.

AMBIGUITY UPON THE FACTUM. An ambiguity in relation to the very foundation of the instrument itself, as distinguished from an ambiguity in regard to the construction of its terms.

The term is applied, for instance, to a doubt as to whether a testator meant a particular clause to be a part of the will, or whether it was introduced with his knowledge, or whether a codicil was meant to republish a former will, or whether the residuary clause was accidentally omitted. Easterly v. Easterly, 1 Cold., Tenn., 461, 465, 78 Am. Dec. 499.

AMBIGUUM PACTUM CONTRA VENDITOREM INTERPRETANDUM EST. An ambiguous contract is to be interpreted against the seller.

AMBIGUUM PLACITUM INTERPRETARI DEBET CONTRA PROFERENTEM. An ambiguous plea ought to be interpreted against the party pleading it. Co.Litt. 303b.

AMBIT. A boundary line, as going around a place; an exterior or inclosing line or limit. Ellicot v. Pearl, 10 Pet., U.S., 412, 442, 9 L.Ed. 475.

The limits or circumference of a power or jurisdiction; the line circumscribing any subject-matter. As to the ambit of a port, see Leonis Steamship Co.; Ltd., v. Rank, Ltd., [1907] 1 K.B. 344, 352; Pyman Bros. v. Dreyfus Bros. & Co. [1890] 24 Q.B.D. 152, 155.

AMBITUS. In the Roman law, a going around; a path worn by going around. A space of at least two and a half feet in width, between neighboring houses, left for the convenience of going around them. Calvin.

The procuring of a public office by money or gifts; the unlawful buying and selling of a public office. Inst. 4, 18, 11; Dig. 48, 14.

AMBLOTIC. Having the power to cause abortion; anything used to produce abortion.

AMBULANCE. A vehicle for the conveyance of the sick or wounded. In time of war they are considered neutral and must be respected by the belligerents. Oppenheim, Int.L. 126.

AMBULANCE CHASER. A lawyer or his agent who follows up accidents in the streets and tries to induce the injured person to sue for damages. Kelley v. Boyne, 239 Mich. 204, 214 N.W. 316, 318, 53 A.L.R. 273.

A popular name for one who solicits negligence cases for an attorney. In re Newell, 160 N.Y.S. 275, 278, 174 App. Div. 94. One seeking out persons and directing them to an attorney in consideration of a percentage of the recovery. In re Mitgang, 385 Ill. 52 N.E.2d 807, 816.
AMENDE HONORABLE. An apology.

In old English law, it was a penalty imposed upon a person by way of disgrace or infamy, as a punishment for any offense, or for the purpose of making reparation for any injury done to another, as the walking into church in a white sheet, with a rope about the neck and a torch in the hand, and begging the pardon of God, or the king, or any private individual, for some delinquency.

A punishment somewhat similar to this, which bore the same name, was common in France for offenses against public decency or morality. It was abolished by the law of the 25th of September, 1791; Merlin, Repert. In 1826 it was re-introduced in cases of sacrilege and was finally abolished in 1830.

AMENDMENT. A change, ordinarily for the better. Musher v. Perera, 162 Md. 44, 158 A. 14, 15. An amelioration of the thing without involving the idea of any change in substance or essence. Van Deussen v. Ruth, 343 Mo. 1096, 125 S.W.2d 1, 3.

Any writing made or proposed as an improvement of some principal writing. Ex parte Woo Jan, D.C.Ky., 228 F. 927, 941; Couch v. Southern Methodist University, Tex.Civ.App., 290 S.W. 256, 260.

In legislation, it is a modification or alteration proposed to be made in a bill on its passage, or an enacted law; also such modification or change when made. Brake v. Callison, C.C.Fla., 122 Fed. 722; State v. MacQueen, 82 W.Va. 44, 95 S.E. 666, 668.

It is to be distinguished from a “substitute for a bill.” In re Ross, 86 N.J.Law, 387, 94 A. 304, 306. It is an alteration in the law already existing, leaving some part of the original still standing. State ex inf. Crain ex rel. Prebles v. Moore, 339 Mo. 492, 99 S.W.2d 17, 19. To effect an improvement or better carry out the purpose for which statute was framed. State ex rel. Foster v. Evatt, 144 Ohio St. 65, 56 N.E.2d 265, 282. And it includes additions to, as well as corrections of, matters already treated. Christian Feigenspan, Inc., v. Bodine, D.C.N.J., 264 F. 186, 190. See, also, State v. Fulton, 99 Ohio St. 168, 124 N.E. 172, 175.

In practice it is the correction of error committed in progress of a cause. Lintott v. McCluskey, 105 N.J.Eq. 354, 148 A. 161, 164. The correction of an error committed in any process, pleading, or proceeding at law, or in equity, and which is done either of course, or by the consent of parties, upon motion to the court in which the proceeding is pending. 3 Bl.Comm. 407, 448; 1 Tidd, Pr. 696.

AMENDS. A satisfaction given by a wrongdoer to the party injured, for a wrong committed. 1 Lil.Reg. 81.

AMENITY. In real property law, such circumstances, in regard to situation, outlook, access to a water course, or the like, as enhance the pleasantness or desirability of an estate for purposes of residence, or contribute to the pleasure and enjoyment of the occupants, rather than to their indispensable needs.

In England, upon the building of a railway or the construction of other public works, "amenity damages" may be given for the defacement of pleasure grounds, the impairment of riparian rights, or other destruction of or injury to the amenities of the estate.

In the law of easements, an "amenity" consists in restraining the owner from doing that which would have done; sometimes called a "negative easement" as distinguished from that class of easements which compel the owner to suffer something to be done on his property by another. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Brennan, 30 Abb.N.C. 260, 24 N.Y.Sup. 784, 788. A restrictive covenant. South Buffalo Stores v. W. T. Grant Co., 274 N.Y.S. 549, 555, 153 Misc. 76.

AMENCES. See Demens.

AMENTIA. Insanity; idiocy. See Insanity.

AMERALIUS. L. Lat. A naval commander, under the eastern Roman empire, but not of the highest rank; the origin, according to Spelman, of the modern title and office of admiral. Spelman.

AMERCE. To impose an amercement or fine; to punish by a fine or penalty.

AMERCEMENT. A pecuniary penalty, in the nature of a fine, imposed upon a person for some fault or misconduct, he being "in mercy" for his offense. It was assessed by the peers of the de-linquent, or the affeerors, or imposed arbitrarily at the discretion of the court or the lord. Good-year v. Sawyer, C.C.Tenn., 17 Fed. 9.

The difference between amercements and fines is as follows: The latter are certain, and are created by some statute; they can only be imposed and assessed by courts of record; the former are arbitrarily imposed. Termes de la Ley, 40.

The word "amercement" has long been especially used of a mulct or penalty, imposed by a court upon its own officers for neglect of duty, or failure to pay over moneys collected. In particular, the remedy against a sheriff for fees and costs: The latter are certain, and are created by statute; they can only be imposed and assessed by courts of record. Stansbury v. Mfg. Co., 5 N.J.Law., 441.

AMERCEMENT ROYAL. In Great Britain a penalty imposed on an officer for a misdemeanor in his office.

AMERICAN. Pertaining to the western hemisphere or in a more restricted sense to the United States. See Beardsley v. Selectmen of Bridgeport, 53 Conn. 493, 3 A. 557, 55 Am.Rep. 152. It was assumed in Life Photo Film Corp. v. Bell, 90 Misc.Rep. 469, 154 N.Y.S. 763, 764, that the term "American" included all classes of citizens, native and naturalized, irrespective of where they originally came from.

AMERICAN AGENCY SYSTEM. Its purport is that upon termination of an insurance agency, if the agent's financial obligations to the insurer are paid in full, all rights in the expiration data of existing insurance procured by the agent belong to him. Woodruff v. Auto Owners Ins. Co., 300 Mich. 54, 1 N.W.2d 450, 453.

AMERICAN CLAUSE. In marine insurance, a proviso in a policy to the effect that, in case of any subsequent insurance, the insurer shall nevertheless be answerable for the full extent of the sum subscribed by him, without right to claim contribution from subsequent underwriters. American Ins. Co. v. Griswold, 14 Wend., N.Y., 399.

AMERICAN EXPERIENCE TABLE OF MORTALITY. A series of tables dealing with life insurance, costs and values, varying according to the age of the insured, the period during which the policy has been in force, and the term of the particular policy. Horton v. Atlantic Life Ins. Co., 187 S.C. 155, 197 S.E. 512, 514, 116 A.L.R. 788.

AMEUBLISSEMENT. In French law, a species of agreement which by a fiction gives to immovable goods the quality of movable. Merl. Répert., 1 Low.Can. 25, 58.

AMI; AMY. A friend; as alien ami, an alien belonging to a nation at peace with us; prochein ami, a next friend suing or defending for an infant, married woman, etc.

AMICABLE. Friendly; mutually forbearing; agreed or assented to by parties having conflicting interests or a dispute; as opposed to hostile or adversary.

AMICABLE ACTION. An action brought and carried on by the mutual consent and arrangement of the parties, to obtain judgment of court on a doubtful question of law, the facts being usually settled by agreement. Lord v. Veazie, 8 How. 251, 12 L.Ed. 1067. See Case Stated.

AMIBLES COMPOSITEURS. See Amicable Compounders.

AMICABLE COMPOUNDERS. In Louisiana law and practice, amicable compounders are arbitrators authorized to abate something of the strictness of the law in favor of natural equity.

AMICABLE SCIRE FACIAS TO REVIVE A JUDGMENT. A written agreement, signed by the person to be bound by the revival, in the nature of a writ of scire facias with a confession of judgment thereon, which must be duly docketed, but which requires no judicial action on the part of the court, and which has the force and effect of a judgment rendered upon an adverse or contested writ of scire facias. Second Nat. Bank, for Use of Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia, v. Faber, 332 Pa. 124, 2 A.2d 747, 749.

AMICUS CURVE, Lat. A friend of the court.

A by-stander (usually a counsellor) who interposes and volunteers information upon some matter of law in regard to which the judge is doubtful or mistaken, Fort Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Greathouse, Tex.Civ.App., 41 S.W.2d 418, 422, 405. He is not a part of the action, and is not a party, but who has escaped its notice, and regarding which it appears to be in danger of going wrong. Blanchard v. Boston & M. R., 86 N.H. 263, 167 A. 158, 160.

Also a person who has no right to appear in a suit but is allowed to introduce argument, authority, or evidence to protect his interests. Ladue v. Goodhead, 181 Misc. 807, 44 N.Y.S.2d 783, 787.
AMIRAL. Fr. In French maritime law, admiral.

NMITA. Lat. An aunt on the father's side.

AMITA magna. A great-aunt on the father's side.

AMITA major. A great-great-aunt on the father's side.

AMITINUS. The child of a brother or sister; a cousin; one who has the same grandfather, but different father and mother. Calvinus, Lex.

AMITTERE. Lat. In the civil and old English law, to lose. Hence the old Scotch "amitt."

AMITTERE CURIAM. To lose the court; to be deprived of the privilege of attending the court.

AMITTERE LEGEM TERRIE. To lose the protection afforded by the law of the land.

AMITTERE LIBERAM LEGEM. To lose one's frank-law.

A term having the same meaning as amittere legem terri, (q. v.) He who lost his law lost the protection extended by the law to a freeman, and became subject to the same laws as thralls or serfs attached to the land.

To lose the privilege of giving evidence under oath in any court; to become infamous, and incapable of giving evidence. Glanville 2. If either party in a wager of battle cried "craven" he was condemned amittere liberam legem; 3 Bla. Com. 340.

AMNESIA. Loss of memory.

AMNESTY. A sovereign act of oblivion for past acts, granted by a government to all persons (or to certain persons) who have been guilty of crime or delict, generally political offenses,—treason, sedition, rebellion,—and often conditioned upon their return to obedience and duty within a prescribed time.

A general pardon or proclamation of such pardon from subjects' offenses against the government; while usually exerted in behalf of certain classes of persons, subject to trial, but not convicted, it is not confined to such cases. Commonwealth v. Hamburg Magistrate, 104 Pa.Super. 221, 158 A. 629, 631.

A declaration of the person or persons who have newly acquired or recovered the sovereign power in a state, by which they pardon all persons who composed, supported, or obeyed the government which has been overthrown.

The word "amnesty" properly belongs to international law, and is applied "to treaties of peace following a state of war, and signifies there the burial in oblivion of the particular cause of strife, so that that shall not be again a cause for war between the parties; and this signification of "amnesty" is fully and poetically expressed in the Indian custom of burying the hatchet. And so amnesty is applied to rebellions which by their magnitude are brought within the rules of international law. It means only "oblivion," and never is a grant. Knowe v. U. S., 10 Ct.Cl. 407.

Amnesty is the abolition and forgetfulness of the offense; pardon is forgiveness. Knowe v. U. S., 95 U.S. 149, 152, 24 L.Ed. 442. The first is usually addressed to crimes against the sovereignty of the state, to political offenses; the second condones infractions of the peace of the state. Burdick v. United States, 236 U.S. 79, 35 S.Ct. 267, 271, 59 L.Ed. 476.

Express amnesty is one granted in direct terms.

Implied amnesty is one which results when a treaty of peace is made between contending parties. Vattel, 1, 4, c. 2, § 20.

Commerce among the states cannot stop at the external boundary line of each state. Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 194, 6 L.Ed. 23; Ft. Sackville & W. R. Co. v. Elevins, 35 Okl. 378, 130 P. 525, 529. Where property is directed by will to be distributed among several persons, it cannot be all given to one, nor can any of the persons be wholly excluded from the distribution. Hudson v. Hudson, 6 Munf., Va., 352.

"Among" is sometimes held to be equivalent to "between"; Hick's Estate, 134 Pa. 507, 19 A. 703; Records v. Fields, 155 Mo. 314, 55 S.W. 1021. But "among" implies more than two objects as differentiated with "between."

St. Louis Union Trust Co. v. Little, 320 Mo. 1058, 10 S.W.2d 47, 53.

AMORTISATION. To amortize.

AMORTISSEMENT. (Fr.) The redemption of a debt by a sinking fund.

AMORTIZATION. An alienation of lands or tenements in mortmain. The reduction of the property of lands or tenements to mortmain.

In its modern sense, amortization is the operation of paying off bonds, stock, a mortgage, or other indebtedness, commonly of a state or corporation, by installments, or by a sinking fund. An "amortization plan" for the payment of an indebtedness is one where there are partial payments of the principal, and accrued interest, at stated periods for a definite time, at the expiration of which the entire indebtedness will be extinguished. Bystra v. Federal Land Bank of Columbia, 82 Fla. 472, 90 So. 478, 480; Applestein v. Royalty Realty Corporation, 181 Md. 171, 28 A.2d 830, 831.

AMORTIZE. To alien lands in mortmain.

AMOTIO. In the civil law, a moving or taking away. "The slightest amotio is sufficient to constitute theft, if the animus furandi be clearly established." 1 Swint. 205. See Amotion.

AMOTION. A putting or turning out; dispossession of lands. Ouster is an amotion of possession. 3 Bl.Comm. 199, 208.

A moving or carrying away; the wrongful taking of personal chattels. Archb.Civil PLIntro.d 2, § 3.

In corporation law, the act of removing an officer, or official representative, of a corporation from his office or official station, before the end of the term for which he was elected or appointed, but without depriving him of membership in the body corporate. In this last respect the term differs from "disfranchisement," or expulsion. Richards v. Clarksburg, 30 W.Va. 491, 4 S.E. 774; In re Koch, 257 N.Y. 318, 178 N.E. 545, 546.
AMOUNT. The effect, substance, or result; the total or aggregate sum. Hilburn v. Railroad Co., 23 Mont. 229, 58 P. 551.

The sum of principal and interest, McCabe v. Cary’s Exrs., 135 Va. 428, 116 S.E. 485, 491. But see In re Stone- man, Sur., 146 N.Y.S. 172, 175 (interest excluded). See, also, Candleria v. Gutierrez, 28 N.M. 434, 213 P. 1037, holding that the “amount of judgment” within a statute requiring a bond for supersededas does not include interest or costs.

AMOUNT COVERED. In insurance, the amount that is insured, and for which underwriters are liable for loss under a policy of insurance.

AMOUNT IN DISPUTE. Value in money of the relief prayed for. Finley v. Smith, Mo.App., 170 S.W.2d 166, 170; or sought but denied, Bushnell v. Mississippi & Fox River Drainage Dist. of Clark County, 340 Mo. 811, 102 S.W.2d 871, 873, and includes value of thing in contest where a thing, instead of an amount, is in dispute. Noel Estate V. Louisiana Oil Refining Corporation, La.App., 170 So. 272, 273.

AMOUNT OF LOSS. In insurance, the diminution, destruction, or defeat of the value of, or of the charge upon, the insured subject to the assured, by the direct consequence of the operation of the risk insured against, according to its value in the policy, or in contribution for loss, so far as its value is covered by the insurance.

AMOUNT TO. To reach in the aggregate, to rise to or reach by accumulation of particular sums or quantities. Peabody v. Forest Preserve District of Cook County, 320 Ill. 454, 151 N.E. 271, 274.

AMOVE. To remove from a post or station. 3 C.J.S. p. 1059.

AMOVEAS MANUS. Lat. That you remove your hands.

After office found, the king was entitled to the things forfeited, either lands or personal property; the remedy for a person aggrieved was by “petition,” or “ monstrans dolo, or "traverses," or "amoveas manus," to establish his superior right. Thereupon a writ issued, quod manus domini regis amoveantur. 3 Bl.Comm. 260.

AMPARO. In Spanish-American law, a document issued to a claimant of land as a protection to him, until a survey can be ordered, and the title of possession issued by an authorized commissioner. Trimble v. Smith's Adm'r, 1 Tex. 790.

AMPLIATION. Action of judge in merely deferring the cause for further examination constitutes “ampliation,” practice in such instances being for judge to make the usual notation of non liquet. Sonnier v. Sonnier, 14 La.App. 588, 130 So. 133, 135.

In civil law, a deferring of judgment until a cause be further examined. Calvin.; Cowell. An order for the rehearing of a cause on a day appointed, for the sake of more ample information. Halifax, Anal. b. 3, c. 13, n. 32.

In this case, the judges pronounced the word amplius, or by writing the letters N. L. for non liquet (q. v.), signifying that the cause was not clear. It is very similar to the common-law practice of entering cur. adv. vult in similar cases.

In French law, a duplicate of an acquittance or other instrument. A notary’s copy of acts passed before him, delivered to the parties.

AMPLIUS. In the Roman law, more; further; more time.

A word which the praetor pronounced in cases where there was any obscurity in a cause, and the judices were uncertain whether to condemn or acquit; by which the case was deferred to a day named. Adam, Rom. Ant. 287.

AMPUTATION OF RIGHT HAND. An ancient punishment for a blow given in a superior court; or for assaulting a judge, sitting in the court.

AMUSEMENT. Pastime; diversion; enjoyment.

A pleasurable occupation of the senses, or that which furnishes it.” Young v. Board of Trustees of Broadwater County High School, 90 Mont. 576, 4 P.2d 725, 726.

AMY. See Ami; Prochein Ami.

AN. The English indefinite article. Equivalent to “one” or “any”; seldom used to denote plurality. Kaufman v. Superior Court, 115 Cal. 152, 46 Pac. 904.

AN ET JOUR. Fr. Year and day; a year and a day.

AN, JOUR, ET WASTE. In feudal law, year, day, and waste. A forfeiture of the lands to the crown incurred by the felony of the tenant, after which time the land escheats to the lord. Terms de la Ley, 40. See Year, Day, and Waste.

ANACRISIS. In the civil law, an investigation of truth, interrogation of witnesses, and inquiry made into any fact, especially by torture.

ANAESTHESIA. In medical jurisprudence. ANCIPITIS USUS. Lat. In international law, of doubtful use; the use of which is doubtful; that may be used for a civil or peaceful, as well as military or warlike, purpose. Gro. de Jure B. lib. 3, c. 1, § 5, subd. 3; 1 Kent, Comm. 140.

AND. A conjunction connecting words or phrases expressing the idea that the latter is to be added to or taken along with the first. Grand Trunk Western Ry. Co. v. Thrift Co., 68 Ind.App. 198, 116 N.E. 756, 759. Added to, together with, joined with, Business Men’s Building & Loan Ass’n v. Tumulty, 13 N.J.Misc. 638, 180 A. 772. As well as. Porter v. Moores, 4 Heisk., Tenn., 16. Including. Finch v. Hunter, 148 Ark. 482, 230 S.W. 553, 554. "And also," Carter v. Keesling, 130 W. 553, 554. "And also," Land & Lake Ass’n v. Conklin, 182 App. Div. 546, 170 N.Y.S. 427, 428. It expresses a general relation or connection, a participation or accompaniment in sequence, having no inherent meaning standing alone but deriving force from what comes before and after. In its conjunctive sense the word is used to conjoin words, clauses, or sentences, expressing the relation of addition or connection, and signifying that something is to follow in addition to that which precedes and its use implies that the connected elements must be grammatically co-ordinate, as where the elements preceding and succeeding the use of the words refer to the same subject matter. While it is said that there is no exact synonym of the word in English, it has been defined to mean "along with", "also", "as well as", "besides", "together with". Oliver v. Oliver, 286 Ky. 6, 149 S.W.2d 540, 542.

When expression "and/or" is used, that word may be taken as will best effect the purpose of the parties as gathered from the contract taken as a whole, or, in other words, as will best accord with the equity of the situation. Bobrow v. U. S. Casualty Co., 231 App.Div. 91, 246 N.Y.S. 363, 367.

The symbol &c indicates things of like character, with the things enumerated just before it. Fleck v. Harmstad, 304 Pa. 302, 155 A. 875, 878, 77 A.L.R. 874. It has been recognized as "sanctioned by age and good use." Brown v. State, 16 Tex.App. 245. And was constantly used by Lord Coke without a suggestion from any quarter that it is not English; Berry v. Osborn, 28 N.H. 28, N.H. 279.

ANGARIA. A term used in the Roman law to denote a forced or compulsory service exacted by the government for public purposes; as a forced rendition of labor or goods for the public service; in particular, the right of a public officer to require the service of vehicles or ships. See Dig. 50, 4, 18, 4.

In feudal law, any troublesome or vexatious personal service paid by the tenant or villein to his lord. Spelman.

In maritime law, a forced service (onus) imposed on a vessel for public purposes; an impression of a vessel. Locc. de Jure Mar. lib. 1, c. 5, §§ 1-6. See Angary, Right Of.

ANGARY, RIGHT OF. In international law, formerly the right (jus angarice) claimed by a belligerent to seize merchant vessels in the harbors of the belligerent and to compel them, on payment of freight, to transport troops and supplies to a designated port. 2 Opp. 446.

At the present day, the right of a belligerent to appropriate, either for use, or for destruction in case of necessity, neutral property temporarily located in his own territory or in that of the other belligerent. The property may be of any description whatever, provided the appropriation of it be for military or naval purposes.

ANGER. A strong passion of the mind excited by real or supposed injuries; not synonymous with "heat of passion," "malice," or "rage or resentment," because these are all terms of wider import and may include anger as an element or as an incipient stage. Hoffman v. State, 97 Wis. 571, 73 N.W. 51.

ANGEL. An ancient English coin, of the value of ten shillings sterling. Jacob.

ANGELICA. An ancient English coin, of the value of it be for military or naval purposes. Spelman. The double gild or compensation was called "twigild," the triple, "trigild," etc. Id. See Angylde.

When a crime was committed, before the Conquest, the angild was the money compensation that the person who had been wronged was entitled to receive. Maitl. Domesday Book & Beyond 274.

ANGELID. In Saxon law, the single value of a man or other thing; a single weregild (q. v.); the compensation of a thing according to its single value or estimation. Spelman. The double gild or compensation was called "twigild," the triple, "trigild," etc. Id. See Angylde.

ANGLESCHERIA. In old English law, English-; the fact of being an Englishman.

ANGLIZE JURA IN OMNI CASU LIBERTATIS DANT FAVOREM. The laws of England in every case of liberty are favorable, (favor liberty in all cases.) Fortes. c. 42.

ANGLICE. In English, a term formerly used in pleading when a thing is described both in Latin and English, inserted immediately after the Latin and as an introduction of the English translation.

ANGLING. Derived from noun "angle," meaning a fishhook; tackle for catching fish, consisting of a line, hook, and bait, with or without a rod. Catching fish by rod, line and hook, or by line and hook. State v. Mears, 213 Ind. 257, 12 N.E.2d 343, 344.

ANGLOK—INDIAN. An Englishman domiciled in the Indian territory of the British crown.

ANGORA GOAT. A more or less degenerate goat, known as the "Cape Angora," produced by breeding the original Angora with the Cape Colony goat, whose hair is shown to be dealt in, used, and known as mohair, is an "Angora goat" within the meaning of that expression in Schedule K, par. 305, Tariff Act of 1913. U. S. v. Beadenkopf Co., 8 Ct.Cust.App. 283, 284.

ANGUISH. Extreme pain of body or mind; excruciating distress. Carson v. Thompson, Mo. App., 161 S.W.2d 995, 1000. Agony, but, as used in law, particularly mental suffering or distress of great intensity. Cook v. Railway Co., 19 Mo.App. 334. It is not synonymous with inconvenience, annoyance, or harassment. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Stewart, Ala.App. 502, 79 So. 200, 201.

ANGYLD. In Saxon law, the rate fixed by law at which certain injuries to person or property were to be paid for; in injuries to the person, it seems to be equivalent to the "were," i.e., the price at which every man was valued. It seems also to have been the fixed price at which cattle and other goods were received as currency, and to have been much higher than the market price, or ceagild. Wharton. See Angild.

AN'HLOTE. In old English law, a single tribute or tax, paid according to the custom of the country as scot and lot.

ANIENS, or ANIENT. Null, void, of no force or effect. Fitzh.Nat.Brev. 214. See Aniented.

ANIMAL. Any animate being which is endowed with the power of voluntary motion. An animate being, not human. Bernardine v. City of New York, 182 Misc. 609, 44 N.Y.S.2d 881, 883.

Domestic animals are tame as distinguished from wild; living in or near the habitations of man or by habit or special training in association with man. Thurston v. Carter, 112 Me. 361, 92 A. 295, L.R.A.1915C, 359.

Domice are those which have been tamed by man; domestic.

Ferae nature are those which still retain their wild nature.

Mansuetce nature are those gentle or tame by nature, such as sheep and cows.

ANIMALS OF A BASE NATURE. Animals in which a right of property may be acquired by re-claiming them from wildness, but which, at common law, by reason of their base nature, are not regarded as possible subjects of a larceny. 3 Inst. 109; 1 Hale, P.C. 511, 512.

Some animals which are now usually tamed come within this class, as dogs and cats; and others which, though wild by nature and often reclaimed by art and industry, clearly fall within the same rule, as bears, foxes, apes, monkeys, ferrets, and the like: 1 Hawk.Pl.Cr. 33, § 36; 4 Bla.Com. 236; 2 East, Pl.Cr. 614. See 1 Wms.Saund. 84, note 2.

ANNA. In East Indian coinage, a piece of money, the sixteenth part of a rupee.

ANNALES. Lat. Annuals; a title formerly given to the Year Books. In old records. Yearlings; cattle of the first year. Cowell.

ANNALS. Masses said in the Romish church for the space of a year or for any other time, either for the soul of a person deceased, or for the benefit of a person living, or for both. Aylif. Parerg.

ANNALY. In Scotch law, to alienate; to convey.
ANNATES. In ecclesiastical law, first-fruits paid out of spiritual benefices to the Pope, so called because the value of one year's profit was taken as their rate.

ANNEX. Derived from the Latin "annectere," meaning to tie or bind to. To attach, and often, specifically, to subjoin. In re Annexation to City of Easton of Tract of Land in Williams Tp., Northampton County, 139 Pa.Super. 146, 11 A.2d 662, 664. To add to; to unite. The word expresses the idea of joining a smaller or subordinate thing with another, larger, or of higher importance. Waterbury Lumber & Coal Co. v. Asterchinsky, 87 Conn. 316, 87 A. 739, 740, Ann.Cas. 1916B, 613. To consolidate, as school districts. Evans v. Hurlburt, 117 Or. 274, 243 P. 553, 554. To make an integral part of something larger.

It implies physical connection or physically joined to, yet physical connection may be dispensed with, and things may be annexed without being in actual contact, when reasonably practicable. Elliott Common School Dist. No. 48 v. County Board of School Trustees, Tex.Civ.App., 76 S.W.2d 786, 789.

In the law relating to fixtures, the expression "annexed to the freehold" means fastened to or connected with it; mere juxtaposition, or the laying of an object, however heavy, on the freehold, does not amount to annexation. Merritt v. Judd, 14 Cal. 64.

ANNEXATION. The act of attaching, adding, joining, or uniting one thing to another; generally spoken of the connection of a smaller or subordinate thing with a larger or principal thing.

The attaching an illustrative or auxiliary document to a deposition, pleading, deed, etc., is called "annexing" it. So the incorporation of newly-acquired territory into the national domain, as an integral part thereof, is called "annexation," as in the case of the addition of Texas to the United States.

In the law relating to fixtures: Actual annexation includes every movement by which a chattel can be joined or united to the freehold. Constructive annexation is the union of such things as have been helden parcel of the realty, but which are not actually annexed, fixed, or fastened to the freehold. Shep.Touch. 469; Amos & F. Fixt. 2.

Scotch Law

The union of lands to the crown, and declaring them inalienable. Also the appropriation of the church-lands by the crown, and the union of lands lying at a distance from the parish church to which they belong, to the church of another parish to which they are contiguous.

ANNUAL VALUE. The net yearly income derivable from a given piece of property; its fair rental value for one year, deducting costs and expenses; the value of its use for a year.

ANNUALLY. In annual order or succession; yearly, every year, year by year. Upham v. Shattuck, 151 Kan. 966, 101 P.2d 901, 903. At end of each and every year during a period of time. Patterson v. McNeeley, 16 Ohio St. 348. Imposed once a year, computed by the year. People ex rel. Mutual Trust Co. v. Westchester County v. Miller, 177 N.Y. 51, 69 N.E. 124, 125.

ANNUITANT. The recipient of an annuity; one who is entitled to an annuity.

ANNUITIES OF TIENDS. In Scotch law, annuities of tithes; 10s. out of the boll of tiend wheat, 8s. out of the boll of beer, less out of the boll of rye, oats, and peas, allowed to the crown yearly of the tiends not paid to the bishops, or set apart for other pious uses.

It is distinguished from an "income," in that the latter is interest or profits to be earned. Grand Rapids Trust Co. v. Herbet, 220 Mich. 321, 190 N.W. 250, 252. Too, it is chargeable on the person merely, and so far personally; while a rent-charge is something reserved out of realty, or fixed as a burden upon an estate in land. 2 Bl. Comm. 40; Rolle, Abr. 226; Horton v. Cook, 10 Watts (Pa.) 127, 36 Am. Dec. 151.

The contract of annuity is that by which one party delivers to another a sum of money, and agrees not to reclaim it so long as the receiver pays the rent agreed upon. This annuity may be either perpetual or for life. See Succession of Vidalat, 155 La. 1005, 99 So. 801, 802.

The name of an action, now disused, (L. Lat. breve de annuo redditu,) which lay for the recovery of an annuity. Reg.Orig. 158b; Bract. fol. 203b; 1 Tidd, Pr. 3.

ANNUITY POLICY. An insurance policy providing for monthly payments to insured to begin at fixed date and continue through insured's life. Hamilton v. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co., 196 Miss. 345, 17 So.2d 278, 280.

ANNUITY-TAX. An impost levied annually in Scotland for the maintenance of the ministers of religion.
ANNUL. To reduce to nothing; annihilate; obliterate; to make void or of no effect; to nullify; to abolish; to do away with. Ex parte Mitchell, 123 W.Va. 283, 14 S.E.2d 771, 774. To cancel; destroy; abrogate. To annul a judgment or judicial proceeding is to deprive it of all force and operation, either ab initio or prospectively as to future transactions. In re Morrow's Estate, 204 Pa. 484, 54 A. 342.

It is not a technical word and there is nothing which prevents the idea from being expressed in equivalent words; Woodson v. Skinner, 22 Mo. 24.

ANNULMENT. Act of annulling; act of making void retrospectively as well as prospectively. Deihl v. Jones, 170 Tenn. 217, 94 S.W.2d 47, 48.

Action for divorce is distinguished from one for annulment, in that "divorce action" is predicated on valid marriage and decree terminates relationship from date thereof, while "annulment" destroys existence of void or voidable marriage and everything appertaining thereto from the beginning. Wigder v. Wigder, 14 N.J.Misc. 880, 188 A. 235, 236.

ANNULUS. Lat. In old English law, a ring; the ring of a door. Per haspam vel annulum hostii exterioris; by the hasp or ring of the outer door. Fleta, lib. 3, c. 15, § 5.

ANNULUS ET BACULUS. (Lat. ring and staff.) The investiture of a bishop was per annulum et baculum, by the prince's delivering to the prelate a ring and pastoral staff, or crozier. 1 Bl.Comm. 378; Spelman.

ANNUM, DIEM, ET VASTUM. See Year, Day, and Waste.

ANNUS. Lat. In civil and old English law, a year; the period of three hundred and sixty-five days. Dig. 40, 7, 4, 5; Calvin.; Bract. fol. 359b.

ANNUS DELIBERANDI. In Scotch law, a year of deliberating; a year to deliberate. The year allowed by law to the heir to deliberate whether he will enter and represent his ancestor. It commences on the death of the ancestor, unless in the case of a posthumous heir, when the year runs from his birth. Bell.

ANNUS, DIES, ET VASTUM. In old English law, year, day, and waste. See Year, Day, and Waste.

ANNUS EST MORA MOTUS QUO SUUM PLAN- ETA PERVOLVAT CIRCULUM. A year is the duration of the motion by which a planet revolves through its orbit. Dig. 40, 7, 4, 5; Calvin.; Bract. 359b.

ANNUS ET DIES. A year and a day.

ANNUS INCEPTUS PRO COMPLETO HABE-TUR. A year begun is held as completed. Tray. Lat.Max. 45.

ANNUS LUCTUS. The year of mourning. It was a rule among the Romans, and also the Danes and Saxons, that widows should not marry infra annum luctus, (within the year of mourning.) Cod. 5, 9, 2; 1 Bl.Comm. 457.

ANNUS UTILIS. A year made up of available or serviceable days. Brissonius; Calvin. In the plural, anni utiles signifies the years during which a right can be exercised or a prescription grows. In prescription, the period of incapacity of a minor, etc., was not counted; it was no part of the anni utiles.

ANNUSUS REDITUS. A yearly rent; annuity. 2 Bl.Comm. 41; Reg.Orig. 158b.

ANOMALOUS. Deviating from common rule; irregular; exceptional; abnormal. Palmer v. Palmer, Woolf & Gray, 183 La. 458, 164 So. 245, 247. Unusual; not conforming to rule, method, or type.

ANOMALOUS INDORSER. A stranger to a note, who endorses it after its execution and delivery but before maturity, and before it has been indorsed by the payee. Buck v. Hutchins, 45 Minn. 270, 47 N.W. 808.

ANOMALOUS PLEA. One which is partly affirmative and partly negative. Baldwin v. Elizabeth, 42 N.J.Eq. 11, 6 A. 275; Potts v. Potts, N.J.Ch., 42 A. 1055.

ANON., AN., A. Abbreviations for anonymous.

ANONYMOUS. Nameless; wanting a name or names. A publication, withholding the name of the author, is said to be anonymous. An anonymous letter is one that has no name signed. Belk v. State, 102 Tex.Cr.R. 561, 278 S.W. 842.

Cases are sometimes reported anonymously, i.e., without giving the names of the parties. Abbreviated to "Anon."

An anonymous society in the Mexican code is one which has no firm name and is designated by the particular designation of the object of the undertaking.

ANOTHER ACTION PENDING. See Auter Action Pendant.

ANOYSANCE. Annoyance; nuisance. Cowell; Kelham.

ANSEL, ANSUL, or AUNCEL. In old English

ANSWER. As a verb, the word denotes an assumption of liability, as to "answer" for the debt or default of another.

Pleading

Strictly speaking, it is a pleading by which defendant in suit at law endeavors to resist the plaintiff's demand by an allegation of facts, either denying allegations of plaintiff's complaint or confessing them and alleging new matter in avoidance, which defendant alleges should prevent recovery on facts alleged by plaintiff. In re Herle's Will, 173 Misc. 879, 19 N.Y.S.2d 263, 265.

In chancery pleading, the term denotes a defense in writing, made by a defendant to the allegations contained in a bill or information filed by the plaintiff against him.

In Massachusetts, the term denotes the statement of the matter intended to be relied upon by the defendant in avoidance of the plaintiff's action, taking the place of special pleas in bar, and the general issue, except in real and mixed actions. Pub.St.Mass.1882, p. 1287.

In matrimonial suits in the (English) probate, divorce, and admiralty division, an answer is the pleading by which the respondent puts forward his defense to the petition. Browne, Div. 223.

Under the old admiralty practice in England, the defendant's first pleading was called his "answer." Williams & B. Adm. Jur. 246.

Frivolous answer. See Sham Answer, infra.

An irrelevant answer is one that has no substantial relation to the controversy;— distinguishable from a sham answer. Rosatti v. Common School Dist. No. 96 of Cass County, 53 N.D. 268, 205 N.W. 678, 679.

A sham answer is one sufficient on its face but so clearly false that it presents no real issue to be tried. Bank of Richards, Mo., v. Sheasgreen, 153 Minn. 363, 190 N.W. 484. C'course in form, but false in fact and not pleaded in good faith. Burkhalter v. Townsend, 139 S.C. 324, 138 S.E. 34, 36. A frivolous answer, on the other hand, is one which on its face sets up no defense, although it may be true in fact.

A voluntary answer, in chancery, was an answer put in by a defendant, when plaintiff had filed no interrogatories which required to be answered. Hunt, Eq.

Practice

A reply to interrogatories; an affidavit in answer to interrogatories. The declaration of a fact by a witness after a question has been put, asking for it.

ANTAPOCHA. In the Roman law, a transcript or counterpart of the instrument called "apocha" (q. v.), signed by the debtor and delivered to the creditor. Calvin.

ANTE. Lat. Before. Usually employed in old pleadings as expressive of time, as price (before) was of place, and coram (before) of person. Townsh.Pl. 22.

Occurring in a report or a text-book, it is used to refer the reader to a previous part of the book.

ANTE EXHIBITIONEM BILJIJE. Before the exhibition of the bill. Before suit begun.

ANTE-FACTUM, or ANTE-GESTUM. Done before. A Roman law term for a previous act, or thing done before.

ANTE JURAMENTUM. See Antejuramentum.

ANTE MORTEM INTEREST. Interests existing only prior to, and not after, transferor's death. Cairns v. Martin, 130 N.J.Eq. 313, 22 A.2d 415, 419.

ANTE NATUS. Born before. A person born before another person or before a particular event.

The term is particularly applied to one born in a country before a revolution, change of government or dynasty, or other political event, such that the question of his rights, status, or allegiance will depend upon the date of his birth with reference to such event. In England, the term commonly denotes one born before the act of un on with Scotland; in America, one born before the declaration of independence. Its opposite is post natum, one born after the event.

ANTEA. Lat. Formerly; heretofore.

ANTECEDENT CREDITORS. Those whose debts are created before the debtor makes a transfer not lodged for record. Stone v. Keith, 218 Ky. 11, 290 S.W. 1042, 1043.

ANTECESSOR. An ancestor (q. v.).

ANTEDATE. To affix an earlier date; to date an instrument as of a time before the time it was written.

ANTEJURAMENTUM. In Saxon law, a preliminary or preparatory oath (called also "prcejuramentum," and "juramentum calumnice," (q. v.), which both the accuser and accused were required to make before any trial or purgation; the accuser swearing that he would prosecute the criminal, and the accused making oath on the very day that he was to undergo the ordeal that he was innocent of the crime with which he was charged. Whishaw.

ANTENATI. See Ante Natus.

ANTENNA. In wireless telegraphy, the wire in the air on the tall mast is called the "antenna." National Electric Signaling Co. v. Telefunken Wireless Telegraph Co. of United States, C.C.A. N.Y., 221. F. 629, 631. A wire, or a combination of wires, supported in the air for directly transmitting electric waves into space, or receiving them therefrom. Webster, Diet.

ANTENUPTIAL. Made or done before a marriage.

ANTENUPTIAL SETTLEMENTS. Contracts or agreements between a man and woman before marriage, but in contemplation and generally in consideration of marriage, whereby the property rights and interests of either the prospective husband or wife, or both of them, are determined, or where property is secured to either or both of them, or to their children. In re Carnevale’s Will, 248 App.Div. 62, 289 N.Y.S. 185, 188.

ANTHRACITE COAL. "Anthracite coal" differs from bituminous coal in the amount of fixed carbon, the amount of volatile matter, color, luster, and structural character. The percentage of fixed carbon in anthracite coal is much higher than in bituminous coal. Anthracite coal is hard, compact and is comparatively clean and free from dust and is commonly termed "hard coal," and burns with practically no smoke. Commonwealth v. Hudson Coal Co., 287 Pa. 64, 134 A. 413, 414.

ANTHROPOMETRY. In criminal law and medical jurisprudence. The measurement of the human body; a system of measuring the dimensions of the human body, both absolutely and in their proportion to each other, the facial, cranial, and other angles, the shape and size of the skull, etc., for purposes of comparison with corresponding measurements of other individuals, and serving for the identification of the subject in cases of doubtful or disputed identity. It was largely adopted after its introduction in France in 1883, but fell into disfavor as being costly and as liable to error. It has given place to the “finger print” system devised by Francis Galton. See Bertillon System.

ANTI MANIFESTO. A term used in international law to denote a proclamation or manifesto published by one of two belligerent powers, alleging reasons why the war is defensive on its part.

ANTICHRESIS. In the civil law. A species of mortgage, or pledge of immovables. An agreement by which the debtor gives to the creditor the income from the property which he has pledged, in lieu of the interest on his debt. Guyot, Repert; Marquise De Portes v. Hurlbut. 44 N.J.Eq. 517, 14 A. 891. It is analogous to the Welsh mortgage of the common law. In the French law, if the income was more than the interest, the debtor was entitled to demand an account of the income, and might claim any excess.

A debtor may give as security for his debt any immovable which belongs to him, the creditor having the right to enjoy the use of it on account of the interest due, or of the capital if there is no interest due; this is called "antichresis." Civ. Code Mex. art. 1927.

By the law of Louisiana, there are two kinds of pledges,—the pawn and the antichresis. A pawn relates to movables, and the antichresis to immovables. The antichresis must be reduced to writing; and the creditor thereby acquires the right to the fruits, etc., of the immovables, deducting yearly their proceeds from the interest, in the first place, and afterwards from the principal of his debt. He is bound to pay taxes on the property, and keep it in repair, unless the contrary is agreed. The creditor does not become the proprietor of the property by failure to pay at the agreed time, and any clause to that effect is void. He can only sue the debtor, and obtain sentence for sale of the property. The possession of the property is, however, by the contract, transferred to the creditor. La.Civil Code, Arts. 3176-3181; Livingston v. Story, 11 Pet. 351, 9 L.Ed. 746.

The "antichresis" is an antiquated contract, and has been resorted to in Louisiana in but a few instances. Harang v. Ragan, 134 La. 201, 63 So. 875, 877. Essential element of contract, Conklin v. Caffall, 179 So. 434, 437, 438, 439, 189 La. 301.

ANTICIPATION. Act of doing or taking a thing before its proper time, Wilmington Trust Co. v. Wilmington Trust Co., 25 Del.Ch. 193, 15 A.2d 665, 668, 669. To do, take up, or deal with, before another; to preclude or prevent by prior action; to be before in doing. State ex rel. Todd v. Thomas, 127 Neb. 891, 257 N.W. 265, 96 A.L.R. 1470.

In conveyancing, the act of assigning, charging, or otherwise dealing with income before it becomes due.

In patent law, a person is said to have been anticipated when he patents a contrivance already known within the limits of the country granting the patent. Topliff v. Topliff, 12 S.Ct. 825, 145 U. S. 156, 36 L.Ed. 658.
ANTICIPATION

An unsuccessful attempt to achieve a particular purpose is not "anticipation". Swan Carburetor Co. v. Nash Motors Co., D.C.Md., 25 F.Supp. 24, 34. The test being whether patentee has added anything of value to the sum of human knowledge, whether he has made the world's work easier, cheaper, and safer, so that return to prior art would be a retrogression. Butler v. Burch Plow Co., C.C.A.Cal., 23 F.2d 15, 24. But invention is not "anticipated" by accidental, incidental or unintentional use of some of its features, unless the benefits or ensuing results from such use are appreciated or recognized. Balaban v. Polyfoto Corporation, D.C.Del., 47 F.Supp. 472, 477, 478.

ANTICIPATORY BREACH OF CONTRACT. See Breach of Contract.

ANTIGRAPHUS. In Roman law. An officer whose duty it was to take care of tax money. A comptroller.

ANTOGRAPHY. A copy or counterpart of a deed.

ANTINOMIA. In Roman law. A real or apparent contradiction or inconsistency in the laws. Merl. Répért. Conflicting laws or provisions of law; inconsistent or conflicting decisions or cases.

ANTINOMY. A term used in logic and law to denote a real or apparent inconsistency or conflict between two authorities or propositions; same as antinomia (q. v.).

ANTIQUA CUSTUMA. In English law. Ancient custom. An export duty on wool, woelfells, and leather, imposed during the reign of Edw. I. It was so called by way of distinction from an increased duty on the same articles, payable by foreign merchants, which was imposed at a later period of the same reign and was called "custuma nova." 1 Bl.Comm. 314.

ANTIQUA STATUTA. Also called "Vetera Statuta." English statutes from the time of Richard I. to Edward III. 1 Reeve, Eng.Law, 227. See Nova Statuta.

ANTIQUARE. In Roman law. To restore a former law or practice; to reject or vote against a new law; to prefer the old law. Those who voted against a proposed law wrote on their ballots the letter "A," the initial of antiquo, I am for the old law. Calvin.

ANTIQUUM DOMICUM. In old English law. Ancient demesne.

ANTITHETARIUS. In old English law. A man who endeavors to discharge himself of the crime of which he is accused, by retorting the charge on the accuser. He differs from an approver in this: that the latter does not charge the accuser, but others. Jacob.

ANTRUSTIO. In early feudal law. A confidential vassal. A term applied to the followers or dependents of the ancient German chiefs, and of the kings and counts of the Franks. Burriil.

ANY. Some; one out of many; an indefinite number. State v. Pierson, 204 Iowa 837, 216 N.W. 43, 44. One indiscriminately of whatever kind or quantity. Federal Deposit Ins. Corporation v. Winton, C.C.A.Tenn., 131 F.2d 780, 782. One or some (indefinitely). Siegel v. Siegel, 135 N.J.Eq. 5, 37 A.2d 57, 58. "Any" does not necessarily mean only one person, but may have reference to more than one or to many. Doherty v. King, Tex.Civ.App., 183 S.W.2d 1004, 1007. As a synonym for "some", Kayser v. Occidental Life Ins. Co. of California, 234 Iowa 310, 12 N.W.2d 582, 587.

It is often synonymous with "either", State v. Antonio, 3 Brev. (S.C.) 562; Carr-Lowry Lumber Co. v. Martin, 144 Miss. 106, 109 So. 849, 850. And is given the full force of "every" or "all", Glen Alden Coal Co. v. City of Scranton, 282 Pa. 45, 127 A. 307, 308; Southern Ry. Co. v. Gaston County, 200 N.C. 780, 158 S.E. 481. Its generality may be restricted by the context. Drainage Dist. No. 1 of Bates County v. Bates County, Mo.Sup., 216 S.W. 949, 953. Thus, the giving of a right to do some act "at any time" is commonly construed as meaning within a reasonable time. Paulson v. Weeks, 80 Or. 468, 157 P. 590, 592, Ann.Cas. 1918D, 741. And the words "any other" following the enumeration of particular classes are to be read as "other such like," and include only others of like kind or character. Southern Ry. Co. v. Columbia Compress Co., C.C.A.S.C., 280 F. 344, 348.

AORTA. The large artery of the body, about one and a half inches in diameter, through which blood is carried away from heart to be ultimately distributed to various parts of body. It is composed of three layers, an inner coat called the "intima," a middle coat called the "media," and an outer coat called the "adventia." Woelfle Connecticut Mut. Life Ins. Co. of Hartford, Conn., 234 Mo.App. 135, 112 S.W.2d 865, 870.

APANAGE. In old French law. A provision of lands or feudal superiorities assigned by the kings of France for the maintenance of their younger sons. An allowance assigned to a prince of the reigning house for his proper maintenance out of the public treasury. 1 Hallam, Mid. Ages, pp. ii, 88; Wharton.

APARTMENT. A part of a house occupied by a person, while the rest is occupied by another, or others. As to the meaning of this term, see People v. St. Clair, 38 Cal. 137.

APARTMENT HOTEL. Generally understood to apply to those houses which contain nonhousekeeping apartments without a kitchen or cooking.

APARTMENT HOUSE. A building arranged in several suites of connecting rooms, each suite designed for independent housekeeping, but with certain mechanical conveniences, such as heat, light, or elevator services, in common to all families occupying the building. Konick v. Champaignes, 108 Wash. 35, 183 P. 75, 77, 6 A.L.R. 459. Sometimes called a flat or flat house. Lignot v. Jaekle, 72 N.J.Eq. 233, 65 A. 221. It comes within the prohibition of a restrictive building covenant forbidding buildings designed for any purpose other than a private dwelling house. Taylor v. Lambert, 279 Pa. 514, 124 A. 169, 170. But it is not a “hotel.” Satterthwait v. Gibbs, 288 Pa. 428, 135 A. 862, 864. A house for two families has been held to be an “apartment house” within a restrictive covenant. Austin v. Richardson, Tex.Com. App., 288 S.W. 180, 181.

An “apartment house” is not a hotel, but is a building used as a dwelling for several families, each living separate and apart. Peirce v. Kelner, 304 Pa. 509, 156 A. 61, 62. It is not a number of private dwellings, built one on another, but a collection of dwellings. A place for housing a number of people grouped in families assigned to different sections in the same structure. Fox v. Sumerson, 338 Pa. 545, 13 A.2d 1, 2.

APARTMENT HOUSE HI—JACKER. One who takes possession of an insolvent or abandoned apartment house business, collects as much rent as possible in advance and pays no bills of any kind, thus seriously affecting, if not destroying, the good will of the business Thompson v. Dubois, 215 Cal. 577, 11 P.2d 862, 863.

APATISATIO. An agreement or compact. Du Cange.

APERTA BREVIA. Open, unsealed writs.

APERTUM FACTUM. An overt act.

APERTURA TESTAMENTI. In the civil law. A form of proving a will, by the witnesses acknowledging before a magistrate their having sealed it.

The apex of ore vein or lode is ascent along line of its dip or outcropping, beyond which it extends no further to surface of land. Bruger v. Lee Yim, 12 Ca1.App.2d 38, 55 P.2d 564, 571.

APEX JURIS. The summit of the law; a legal subtlety; a nice or cunning point of law; close technicality; a rule of law carried to an extreme point, either of severity or refinement. A term used to denote a stricter application of the rules of law than is indicated by the phrase “sumnum jus” (q.v.).

APEX RULE. In mining law. The mineral laws of the United States give to the locator of a mining claim on the public domain the whole of every vein the apex of which lies within his surface exterior boundaries, or within perpendicular planes drawn downward indefinitely on the planes of those boundaries; and he may follow a vein which thus apexes within his boundaries, on its dip, although it may so far depart from the perpendicular in its course downward as to extend outside the vertical side-lines of his location., but he may not go beyond his end-lines or vertical planes drawn downward therefrom. This is called the apex rule. Rev.St.U.S. § 2322 (30 U.S.C.A. § 26); Stewart Mining Co v. Ontario Mining Co., 23 Idaho, 724, 132 P. 787, 792.

APHASIA. In medical jurisprudence. Loss of the faculty or power of articulate speech; a condition in which the patient, while retaining intelligence and understanding and with the organs of speech unimpaired, is unable (in “motor aphasia”) to utter articulate words, or unable to vocalize the particular word which is in his mind and which he wishes to use, or utters words different from those he believes himself to be speaking, or (in “sensory aphasia” or apraxia) is unable to understand spoken or written language. Sensory aphasia includes word blindness and word deafness, visual and auditory aphasia. Motor aphasia often includes agraphia, or the inability to write words of the desired meaning. The seat of the disease is in the brain, but it is not a form of insanity.

APHONIA. In medical jurisprudence. Loss of the power of articulate speech in consequence of morbid conditions of some of the vocal organs. It may be incomplete, in which case the patient can whisper. It is to be distinguished from congenital dumbness, and from temporary loss of voice through extreme hoarseness or minor affections of the vocal cords, as also from aphasia, the latter being a disease of the brain without impairment of the organs of speech.

APICES JURIS NON SUNT JURA [JUS]. Extremities, or mere subtleties of law are not rules of law [are not law]. Co.Litt. 304b; 10 Coke, 126; Wing.Max. 19, max. 14; Broom, Max. 188. Legal principles must not be carried to their extreme consequences, regardless of equity and good sense. Salmond, Jurispr. 639. See Apex Juris.

APICES LITIGANDI. Extremely fine points, or subtleties of litigation. Nearly equivalent to the modern phrase "sharp practice." "It is unconscionable in a defendant to take advantage of the apices litigandi, to turn a plaintiff around and make him pay costs when his demand is just." Per Lord Mansfield, in 3 Burr. 1243.

APNEA. In medical jurisprudence. Want of breath; difficulty in breathing; partial or temporary suspension of respiration; specifically, such difficulty of respiration resulting from over-oxygenation of the blood, and in this distinguished from "asphyxia" (q. v.), which is a condition resulting from a deficiency of oxygen in the blood due to suffocation or any serious interference with normal respiration. The two terms were formerly (but improperly) used synonymously.

APOCHA (also Apoca). Lat. In the civil law. A writing acknowledging payments; acquittance. It differs from acceptilation in this: that acceptilation imports a complete discharge of the former obligation whether payment be made or not; apocha, discharge only upon payment being made. Calvin. See Antapocha.

APOCHIE ONERATORLE. In old commercial law. Bills of lading.

APOCRISARIUS. In civil law. A messenger; an ambassador.

In ecclesiastical law. One who answers for another. An officer whose duty was to carry to the emperor messages relating to ecclesiastical matters, and to take back his answer to the petitioners. An officer who gave advice on questions of ecclesiastical law. An ambassador or legate of the abbot or prior. Reg.Orig. 71, 267; Jacob; Spelman.

APOSTATA CAPIENDO. An obsolete English writ which issued against an apostate, or one who had violated the rules of his religious order. It was addressed to the sheriff, and commanded him to deliver the defendant into the custody of the abbot or prior. Reg.Orig. 71, 267; Jacob; Wharton.

APOSTASY (also spelled Apostasy). In English law. The total renunciation of Christianity, by embracing either a false religion or no religion at all. This offense can take place only in such as have once professed the Christian religion. 4 Bl.Comm. 43; 4 Steph.Comm. 231.

APOSTATE. In civil and old English law. An apostate; a deserer from the faith; one who has renounced the Christian faith. Cod. 1, 7; Reg.Orig. 71b.

APOSTATA. In civil and old English law. An apostate; a deserer from the faith; one who has renounced the Christian faith. Cod. 1, 7; Reg.Orig. 71b.

APOSTLES. In English admiralty practice. A term borrowed from the civil law, denoting brief dismissory letters granted to a party who appeals from an inferior to a superior court, embodying a statement of the case and a declaration that the record will be transmitted.

This term is still sometimes applied in the admiralty courts of the United States to the papers sent up or transmitted on appeals.

APOSTOLI. In civil law. Certificates of the inferior judge from whom a cause is removed, directing to the superior. Dig. 49, 6. See Apostles.

Those sent as messengers. Spelman, Gloss.

APOSTOLUS. A messenger; an ambassador, legate, or nuncio. Spelman.

APOTHECARY. Any person who keeps a shop or building where medicines are compounded or prepared according to prescriptions of physicians, or where medicines are sold. Com. v. Fuller, 2 Walk. (Pa.) 550.

In England and Ireland an apothecary is a member of an inferior branch of the medical profession and is licensed by the Apothecaries Company to practice medicine as well as to sell drugs.
The term "druggist" properly means one whose occupation is to buy and sell drugs without compounding or preparing them. The term therefore has a much more limited and restricted meaning than the word "apothecary," and there is little difficulty in concluding that the term "druggist" may be applied in a technical sense to persons who buy and sell drugs. State v. Donaldson, 41 Minn. 74, 42 N.W. 781.

APPARATOR. A furnisher or provider. Formerly the sheriff, in England, had charge of certain county affairs and disbursements, in which capacity he was called "apparator comitatus" (apparator for the county), and received therefor a considerable emolument. Cowell.

As used in statutes granting exemption from execution, etc., "apparatus" means a complex device or machine designed for the accomplishment of a special purpose; a complex instrument or appliance, mechanical or chemical, for a specific action or operation; machinery; mechanism; as a newspaper printing press, Harris v. Townley, Tex. Civ.App., 161 S.W. 5; or four pool tables, Harris v. Todd, Tex.Civ.App., 158 S.W. 1189; but not a threshing outfit, Corner v. Powell, Tex.Civ.App., 189 S.W. 88, 91; nor a well-drilling rig, consisting of boiler, engine, and other parts of complicated machinery, Thresher v. McEvoy, Tex.Civ. App., 193 S.W. 159, 160. In re Willis, D.C.Tex., 292 F. 872, 873, it was said that the term "apparatus" is practically synonymous with "tools."

APPAREL. The term is said to derive from two sources, "apparel" from the Latin "ad," meaning to, and "par," meaning equal, to point out the line with his group or class. In re Steimes' Estate, 270 N.Y.S. 339, 150 Misc. 279 (a will case).

APPARENT. That which is obvious, evident, or manifest; what appears, or has been made manifest; appearing to the eye or mind. Walker v. John Smith, T., 199 Ala. 514, 74 So. 451, 453; In respect to facts involved in an appeal or writ of error, that which is stated in the record. An error discovered by close scrutiny of the entire evidence is not "apparent." Stewart v. McAllister, Tex.Civ.App., 209 S.W. 704, 706.

"Apparent" means "open to view," "visible to the eye," "within sight or view," and, secondarily, "clear or manifest to the understanding," "plain," "evident," "obvious," "known," "palpable," "indubitable," while "indubitable" has been defined as meaning "certain" or "unquestionable," which is synonymous with "sure." Stevenson v. State, Del., 1 Terry 268, 8 A.2d 914, 915 (in statute requiring driver to stop after automobile accident).

The word "apparent" within rule that use of realty must be apparent to create easement by implication on severance of unity of ownership of dominant and servient tenements does not necessarily mean "visible", but means that easement's indicia, careful inspection of which by person ordinarily conversant with subject would disclose such use, must be plainly visible. Romanchuk v. Plotkin, 215 Minn. 156, 9 N.W.2d 421, 425.

APPARENT AGENCY, See Agency.

APPARENT AUTHORITY. In the law of agency, such authority as the principal knowingly permits the agent to assume, or which he holds the agent out as possessing; such authority as he appears to have by reason of the actual authority which he has; such authority as a reasonably prudent man, using diligence and discretion, in view of the principal's conduct, would naturally suppose the agent to possess. Iowa Loan & Trust Co. v. Sealman, 203 Iowa 310, 210 N.W. 937, 940; Kissell v. Pittsburgh, Ft. W. & C. Ry. Co., 194 Mo.App. 346, 188 S.W. 1118, 1121; Brager v. Levy, 122 Md. 554, 90 A. 102, 104; Atto v. Saunders, 77 N.H. 527, 93 A. 1037, 1039; Campbell Paint & Varnish Co. v. Ladd Furniture & Carpet Co., Tex.Civ.App., 93 S.W.2d 1095, 1097; Humble Oil & Refining Co. v. Wood, Tex.Civ.App., 94 S.W.2d 573, 574.

It includes the power to do whatever is usually done and necessary to be done in order to carry into effect the principal power conferred. Oliver v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 176 N.C. 598, 97 S.E. 490, 491. Such authority as a principal intentionally or by want of ordinary care causes or allows third person to believe that agent possesses. Fireman's Fund Indemnity Co. v. Longshore Beach and Country Club, Inc., 127 Conn. 493, 18 A.2d 347, 349.

It is not actual authority and may often be authority not actually possessed by agent, but is such as principal holds agent out as possessing, Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Steckel, 216 Iowa 1189, 250 N.W. 476; Herbert v. Langhoff, La.App., 164 So. 262, 266.

"Apparent authority" of an agent must be determined by what the principal does, rather than by acts of the agent. Grimore v. Consolidated Products Co., 232 Iowa 328, 5 N.W.2d 646, 651.

It must be traceable to the principal and cannot be established solely by acts and conduct of agent, and principal is only liable for the appearance of authority caused by him. Storms v. United Grain & Millworkers' Union, 64 Ohio App. 19, 27 N.E.2d 781, 783.

APPARENT DANGER. As used with reference to the doctrine of self-defense in homicide, means such overt actual demonstration, by conduct and acts, of a design to take life or do some great personal injury, as would make the killing apparently necessary to self-preservation. Modesett v. Emmons, Tex.Com.App., 292 S.W. 855, 856.

Under a statute providing that it shall not be a defense to an action for injuries to an employee that the dangers inherent or apparent in the employment contributed to the injury, an "apparent danger" is one the existence of which the employee has known, actual or constructive. Standard Steel Car Co. v. Martinez, 66 Ind.App. 672, 113 N.E. 244, 248.

APPARENT DEFECTS. In a thing sold, are those which can be discovered by simple inspection. Code La. art. 2497 (Civil Code, § 2521). See, also, Woolley v. Ablah, 119 Kan. 380, 240 P. 266, 269.

APPARENT EASEMENT. See Easement.

APPARENT HEIR. In English law. One whose right of inheritance is indefeasible, provided he outlive the ancestor. 2 Bl.Comm. 208. See, also, Heir Apparent. In Scotch law. He is the person to whom the succession has actually opened. He is so called until his regular entry on the lands by service or infeftment on a precept of Clare constat.

APPARENT NECESSITY. In actions under the Alabama Homicide Act, "apparent necessity" which will justify killing in self-defense must be such as to impress a reasonable man of its presence and imminence, and must so impress defendant at the time of the fatal shot. Drummond v. Drummond, 212 Ala. 242, 102 So. 112, 114.

APPARITOR. An officer or messenger employed to serve the process of the spiritual courts in England and summon offenders. Cowell.

In the civil law. An officer who waited upon a magistrate or -superior officer, and executed his commands. Calvin.; Cod. 12, 53-57.

APPARLEMENT. In old English law. Resemblance; likelihood; as apparlement of war. St. 2 Rich. II. st. 1, c. 6; Cowell.

APPARURA. In old English law the apparura were furniture, implements, tackle, or apparel. Carucarum apparura, plow-tackle. Cowell.

APEAL. In civil practice. The complaint to a superior court of an injustice done or error committed by an inferior one, whose judgment or decision the court above is called upon to correct or reverse. The removal of a cause from a court of inferior to one of superior jurisdiction, for the purpose of obtaining a review and retrial. Hall v. Kincaid, 64 Ind.App. 103, 115 N.E. 361, 365. Lea County State Bank v. McCaskey Register Co., 39 N.M. 454, 49 P.2d 577, 579.

The word "appeal" has no absolutely fixed and definite meaning, but may be used to denote the review by a court of the action of some board or administrative officer. In re Determination of Relative Rights to Use of Waters of Deschutes River, 108 P.2d 276, 281, 282, 165 Or. 435. An "appeal" is a creature of statute, not a constitutional or inherent right. Carilli v. Hersey, 303 Mass. 82, 20 N.E.2d 492, 495. It is merely a continuation of original lawsuit. Bowersock v. Missouri Valley Drainage Dist. of Holt County, 237 Mo.App. 476, 168 S.W.2d 459. Patterson v. Old Dominion Trust Co., 149 Va. 597, 140 S.E. 810, 813. It has become a term of general application in law, with meaning depending on statutory provisions respecting appellate procedure. Cino v. Driscoll, 130 N.J.L. 535, 34 A.2d 6, 8.

Appeal is sometimes used to denote the nature of appellate jurisdiction, as distinguished from original jurisdiction, without any particular regard to the mode by which a case is transmitted to a superior jurisdiction. Dorris Motor Car Co. v. Colburn, 307 Mo. 137, 270 S.W. 339, 346.

"Appeal" has no conclusive meaning, and it is necessary in each instance to look to the particular act giving an appeal, to determine powers to be exercised by the appellate court. McCaulley v. Imperial Woolen Co., 261 Pa. 312, 104 A. 617, 620.

The fundamental difference between an "appeal" and an action to "review" is that in the case of appeal the tribunal by which the first determination was made is not a higher tribunal. Upon the proceeding to review, while in an appeal to review the tribunal which made the determination is a party to the proceeding to review. Milwaukee County v. Industrial Commission, 228 Wis. 94, 279 N.W. 655, 657, 658.

"Appeal" may also be used to denote the act of invoking another judicial forum for the trial. Newell v. Kalamazoo Circuit Judge, 215 Mich. 153, 183 N.W. 907, 908. See Appealed. As used in statutes authorizing taxpayers or parties to condemnation proceedings to appeal, the term often has its nontechnical sense meaning to "apply for" or "ask." Purcell Bank & Trust Co. of Purcell v. Byars, 66 Okl. 70, 167 P. 216, 218.

An "appeal" is a step in a judicial proceeding, and in legal contemplation there can be no appeal where there has been no decision by a judicial tribunal. Two things are essential to an appeal in its proper sense: First, the decision of a judicial tribunal, and, second, a superior court invested with authority to review the decision of the inferior tribunal. People ex rel. Nelson Bros. Storage & Furniture Co. v. Fisher, 273 Ill. 228, 25 N.E.2d 785, 787.

"Appeal" differs from trial in that it is a review on original record after that has been made in accordance with well-recognized principles of judicial procedure. Koukl v. Weber, 277 N.Y.S. 39, 154 Misc. 659.

In criminal practice. A formal accusation made by one private person against another of having committed some heinous crime. 4 Bl. Comm. 312.

Appeal was also the name given to the proceeding in English law where a person, indicted of treason or felony, and arraigned for the same, confessed the fact before plea pleaded, and appealed, or accused others, his accomplices in the same crime, in order to obtain his pardon. In Maryland he was called an "approver," and the party appealed or accused, the "appellee." 4 Bl. Comm. 330. Appeals have been abolished by statute.

Cross Appeal

Where both parties to a judgment appeal therefrom, the appeal of each is called a "cross-appeal" as regards that of the other. 3 Steph.Comm. 581.

Legislation

The act by which a member of a legislative body who questions the correctness of a decision... of the presiding officer, or "chair," procures a vote of the body upon the decision.

Old French Law

A mode of proceeding in the lords' courts, where a party was dissatisfied with the judgment of the peers, which was by accusing them of having given a false or malicious judgment, and offering to make good the charge by the duel or combat. This was called the "appeal of false judgment." Montesq. Esprit des Lois, liv. 28, c. 27.

Writ of Error Distinguished

The distinction between an appeal and a writ of error is that an appeal is a process of civil law origin, and removes a cause entirely, subjecting the facts, as well as the law, to a review and revision; but a writ of error is of common law origin, and it removes nothing for re-examination but the law. Cunningham v. Neagle, 10 S.Ct. 658, 135 U.S. 1, 34 L.Ed. 55; Buessel v. U. S., C.C.A. Conn., 258 F. 811, 814. The present tendency is to ignore the distinction between "writ of error" and "appeal," and, when found in modern statutes, the meaning given "appeal" must be gathered from the language of the statute itself. Widgins v. Norfolk & W. Ry. Co., 142 Va. 419, 128 S.E. 516, 518.

The sole and only purpose of "appeal bond" is to stay issuance of execution until cause can be passed upon and disposed of by appellate court. State ex rel. Gnekow v. U. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co., Mo.App., 150 S.W.2d 581, 584.

APPEAL IN FORMA PAUPERIS. A privilege given indigent person to prosecute an appeal, otherwise and independently allowable, without payment of fees and costs incident to such prosecution. Millslage v. Olson, C.C.A.Neb., 130 F.2d 212, 213. See, also, In Forma Pauperis.

APPEALED. In a sense not strictly technical, this word may be used to signify the exercise by the party of the right to remove a litigation from one forum to another; as where he removes a cause to another jurisdiction. This was called the "appeal of false judgment." Montesq. Esprit des Lois, liv. 28, c. 27.

Frequently used in judicial proceedings as meaning "clear to the comprehension" when applied to matters of opinion or reasoning, and "satisfactorily or legally known or made known," when used in reference to facts of evidence. Blackshear v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 26 S.E.2d 793, 804, 69 Ga.App. 790. Facts "appear" when the evidence from which facts may be found is introduced, and presumptions disappear when facts appear. Christiansen v. Hilber, 282 Mich. 403, 276 N.W. 495, 497.

APPEAR OF RECORD. A substitution of trustee under deed of trust "appears of record" in the office of the chancery clerk, by being actually spread at large on the record. King v. Jones, 121 Miss. 319, 83 So. 531.

"Appearance" is the act of appearing, coming, or being in sight, becoming visible or clear to apprehension of the mind, of being known as subject of observation or comprehension, or as a thing proved, of being obvious or manifest. Hallock & Howard Lumber Co. v. Bagly, 100 Colo. 402, 68 P.2d 442, 443.

Appearance anciently meant an actual coming into court, either in person or by attorney. Appearance may be made by the party in person or by his agent. Everett Ry. & Light & Power Co. v. U. S., D.C.Wash., 236 F. 806, 808. But in criminal cases the personal appearance of the accused in court is often necessary.

An appearance may be either general or special; the former is a simple and unqualified or unrestricted submission to the jurisdiction of the court, the latter a submission to the jurisdiction for some specific purpose only, not for all the purposes of the suit. Louis ville & N. R. Co. v. Industrial Board of Illinois, 282 Ill. 136, 118 N.E. 483, 485. An original appearance is the appearance of the party in person or by attorney in the court of trial; a subsequent appearance is that of a party who has already entered an appearance, whether made provisionally or to remain good only upon a final determination of some fact. "Appeal bond" is to stay issuance of execution until cause can be passed upon and disposed of by appellate court. State ex rel. Gnekow v. U. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co., Mo.App., 150 S.W.2d 581, 584.

An appearance may also be either compulsory or voluntary, the former where it is compelled by process served on the party, the latter where it is entered by his own will or consent, without the service of process, though process may be outstanding. see Ch. Pr. 77. It is said to be optional when entered by a person who intervenes in the action to protect his own interests, though not joined as a party; it occurs in chancery practice, especially in England; conditional, when coupled with conditions as to its becoming or being taken as a general appearance; gratis, when made by a party to the action, but before the service of any process or legal notice to appear; and esse, when made provisionally or to remain good only upon a future contingency; or when designed to permit a party to a proceeding to refuse to submit his person to the jurisdiction of the court unless it is finally determined that he has forever waived that right. Farmers Trust Co. v. Alexander, 334 Pa. 434, 6 A.2d 262, 265; subsequent, when made by a defendant after an appearance has already been entered for him by the plaintiff; corporal, when the person is physically present in court.

An answer constitutes an "appearance." Wieser v. Richter, 247 Mich. 52, 225 N.W. 542, 543. A party who answears, consents to a continuance, goes to trial, takes an appeal, or does any other substantial act in a case, although he has not been served with summons, is deemed to have entered his "appearance" unless he objects and preserves his protests to the jurisdiction of his person. Robinson v. Bossinger, 195 Ark. 445, 112 S.W.2d 637, 640. Acts of an attorney in prosecuting an action on behalf of his client constitute an "appearance." Pacilio v. Scarpati, 300 N.Y.S. 473, 165 Misc. 586.

Appearance by Attorney

This term and "appearance by counsel" are distinctly different, the former being the substitution of a legal agent for the personal attendance of the suitor, the latter the attendance of an advocate without whose aid neither the party attending nor his attorney in his stead could safely proceed; and an appearance by attorney does not supersede the appearance by counsel. Mercer v. Watson, 1 Watts (Pa.) 351. See In re Ford's Estate, 163 N.Y.S. 960, 98 Misc. 100.

Appearance Day

The day for appearing; that on which the parties are bound to come into court. Cruger v. McCracken (Tex.Civ.App.) 26 S.W. 282. Compare City of Decatur v. Barteau, 260 Ill. 612, 103 N.E. 601, 602.

Appearance Docket

A docket kept by the clerk of the court, in which appearances are entered, containing also a brief abstract of all the proceedings in the cause. See McAdams v. Windham, 191 Ala. 287, 68 So. 51, 52.

Notice of Appearance

A notice given by defendant to a plaintiff that he appears in the action in person or by attorney.

APPEARAND HEIR. In Scotch law. An apparent heir. See Heir Apparent.

APPELLANT. The party who takes an appeal from one court or jurisdiction to another. Used broadly or nontechnically, the term includes one who sues out a writ of error. Widgins v. Norfolk & W. Ry. Co., 142 Va. 419, 128 S.E. 516, 518.

APPELLATE. Pertaining to or having cognizance of appeals and other proceedings for the judicial review of adjudications.

Word "appellate" has a general meaning, and it has a specific meaning indicating the distinction between original jurisdiction and appellate jurisdiction. Woodruff v. Bell, 143 Kan. 110, 53 P.2d 498, 499.

APPELLATE JURISDICTION. The power and authority to take cognizance of a cause and proceed to its determination, not in its initial stages, but only after it has been finally decided by an inferior court, i. e., the power of review and determination on appeal, writ of error, certiorari, or other similar process. Jurisdiction on appeal; jurisdiction to revise or correct the proceedings in a cause already instituted and acted upon by an inferior court, or by a tribunal having the attributes of a court. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Dodd, 105 Miss. 23, 61 So. 743, 49 L.R.A.N.S., 565. The term includes proceedings in error. Miami County v. City of Dayton, 92 Ohio St. 179, 110 N.E. 726, 727.

If court's jurisdiction is appellate, it has no authority to determine a question in an action originally instituted in it. Rogers v. Leahy, 296 Ky. 44, 176 S.W.2d 93, 95, 149 A. L.R. 1267.

Exercise of "appellate jurisdiction" involves power not only to correct errors in judgment under review, but to make such disposition of causes as justice may require in order that a correct principle of decision, arising since judgment appealed from, and having a bearing upon the right disposition of the cause, may be passed on by trial court, whose judgment will be vacated and cause remanded for further proceeding to that end in proper cases. Yates v. St. Johns Beach Development Co., 122 Fla. 141, 165 So. 384, 385.

APPELLATIO. Lat. An appeal.

APPELLATOR. An old law term having the same meaning as "appellant" (q. v.).

In the civil law, the term was applied to the judge ad quem, or to whom an appeal was taken. Calvin.

APPELLEE. The party in a cause against whom an appeal is taken; that is, the party who has an interest adverse to setting aside or reversing the judgment. Slayton v. Horsey, 97 Tex. 341, 78 S.W. 919. Sometimes also called the "respondent.

In a nontechnical sense, "appellee" may include a defendant in writ of error. Widgins v. Norfolk & W. Ry. Co. v. 142 Va. 419, 128 S.E. 516, 518.

In old English law. Where a person charged with treason or felony pleaded guilty and turned approver or "king's evidence," and accused another as his accomplice in the same crime, in order to obtain his own pardon, the one so accused was called the "appellee." 4 Bl.Comm. 330.

APPELLO. Lat. In the civil law. I appeal.

The form of making an appeal apud acta. Dig. 49, 1, 2.

APPELLOR. In old English law. A criminal who accuses his accomplices, or who challenges a jury. See Approver.

APPEND. To add or attach. American Cannel Coal Co. v. Indiana Cotton Mills, 78 Ind.App. 115, 134 N.E. 891, 893.

APPENDAGE. Something added as an accessory to or the subordinate part of another thing. American Cannel Coal Co. v. Indiana Cotton Mills, 78 Ind.App. 115, 134 N.E. 891, 893.

An "appendage" for a schoolhouse includes a well on the school premises. Schofield v. School Dist. No. 113, Labette County, 105 Kan. 343, 184 P. 480, 481, 7 A.L.R. 788. But "appendages" of a railroad do not include Liberty bonds pledged to indemnify a surety on its appeal bond, or cash which was not indispensable to enjoyment of the property nor to its operation. Jackman v. St. Louis & H. R. Co., 304 Mo. 319, 263 S.W. 230, 231.
APPENDANT; A thing annexed to or belonging to another thing and passing with it; a thing of inheritance belonging to another inheritance. Which is more worthy; as an advowson, common, etc., which may be appendant to a manor, common of fishing to a freehold, a seat in a church to a house, etc. It differs from appurtenance, in that appendant must ever be by prescription, i.e., a personal usage for a considerable time, while an appurtenance may be created at this day; for if a grant be made to a man and his heirs, of common in such a moor for his beasts levant or couchant upon his manor, the commons are appurtenant to the manor, and the grant will pass them. Meek v. Breckenridge, 29 Ohio St. 648. See Appurtenance.

APPENDITIA. The appendages or appurtenances of an estate or house, dwelling, etc.; thus, pent-houses are the appenditia domes. Cowell.

APPENDIX. A printed volume, used on an appeal to the English house of lords or privy council, containing the documents and other evidence presented in the inferior court and referred to in the cases made by the parties for the appeal. Answering in some respects to the "paper-book" or "case" in American practice.

APPENSURA. Payment of money by weight instead of by count. Cowell.

APPERTAIN. To belong to; to have relation to; to be appurtenant to. Chattel mortgages, Ferguson v. Steen, Tex.Civ.App., 293 S.W. 318, 320; landlord and tenant, State v. Bodden, 166 Wis. 219, 164 N.W. 1009, 1011. To be used in connection with (sales contract), McVety v. Hayes, 111 Wash. 457, 191 P. 401, 402. See, also, Appurtenance; Appurtenant.

APPERTAINING. Connected with in use or occupancy. It does not necessarily import contiguity, as does "adjoining," and is therefore not synonymous with it: Miller v. Mann, 55 Vt. 475, 479. Peculiar to (sale of goods), Herndon v. Moore, 18 S.C. 339.

APPLE CIDER VINEGAR. Vinegar made from evaporated apples by treating them with a certain percentage of water squeezed out again as apple juice. People v. Douglas Packing Co., 236 N.Y. 1, 139 N.E. 759, 760.

APPLIANCE. Refers to machinery and all instruments used in operating it, and is to be distinguished from word "materials," which includes everything of which anything is made. Things applied to or used as a means to an end. Roberts v. City of Los Angeles, 61 P.2d 323, 330, 7 Cal.2d 477. An "appliances" is a mechanical thing, a device or apparatus. One Black Mule v. State, 204 Ala. 440, 85 So. 749.

When a constitution or court declares that the common law is in force in a particular state so far as it is applicable, it is meant that it must be applicable to the habits and conditions of the community, as well as in harmony with the genius, the spirit, and the objects of their institutions. Wagner v. Bissell, 3 Iowa 402.

When a constitution prohibits the enactment of local or special laws in all cases where a general law would be applicable, a general law should always be construed to be applicable, in this sense, where the entire people of the state have an interest in the subject. But where only a portion of the people are affected, as in locating a county-seat, it will depend upon the facts and circumstances of each particular case whether such a law would be applicable. Evans v. Job, 8 Nev. 322.

APPLICABLE LOCAL LAW. Term used to determine the persons who come within the term heirs and is the law which would be used to ascertain the heirs of the designated ancestor if he had owned the property and had died intestate. Re-statement, Property, § 305e.

APPLICANT. An applicant, as for letters of administration, is one who is entitled thereto, and who files a petition asking that letters be granted. Jerauld v. Chambers, 44 Cal.App. 771, 187 P. 33.

APPLICATE. Lat. In old English law. To fasten to; to moor (a vessel). Anciently rendered, "to apply." Hale, de Jure Mar.

APPLICATIO EST VITA REGULIE. Application is the life of a rule. 2 Bulst. 79.

APPLICATION. A putting to, placing before, preferring a request or petition to or before a person. The act of making a request for something. In re Meyer, 166 N.Y.S. 505, 100 Misc. 587. A written request to have a certain quantity of land at or near a certain specified place. Biddle v. Dougal, 5 Bin. (Pa.) 151. A petition. Scott v. Strobach, 49 Ala. 477, 489. Gardner v. Goodner Wholesale Grocery Co., 113 Tex. 423, 256 S.W. 911, 913. The use or disposition made of a thing. A bringing together, in order to ascertain some relation or establish some connection; as the application of a rule or principle to a case or fact.

Insurance

The preliminary request, declaration, or statement made by a party applying for an insurance policy, such as one on his life, or against fire. Whipple v. Prudential Ins. Co. of America, 222 N.Y. 30, 118 N.E. 211, 212.

An "application" is no more than proposition to insurance company and must be accepted before there can be meeting of minds required to form binding contract.
Payments
Appropriation of a payment to some particular debt; or the determination to which of several demands a general payment made by a debtor to his creditor shall be applied.

Mere uncommunicated intention or belief on part of debtor as to application of payment to creditor is not such an appropriation as constitutes “application” by him. Delaware Dredging Co. v. Tucker Stevedoring Co., C.C.A.Ohio, 10 F.2d 333, 334.

Purchase Money
The disposition made of the funds received by a trustee on a sale of real estate held under the trust.

APPLY. To make a formal request or petition, usually in writing, to a court, officer, board, or company, for the granting of some favor, or of some rule or order, which is within his or their power or discretion. For example, to apply for an injunction, for a pardon, for a policy of insurance, or for a receiver. In re Bucyrus Road Machinery Co., C.C.A.Ohio, 10 F.2d 333, 334.

To use or employ for a particular purpose; to appropriate and devote to a particular use, object, demand, or subject-matter. Thus, to apply payments to the reduction of interest. Foley v. Hastings, 107 Conn. 9, 139 A. 305, 306. See Appropriate.

To put, use, or refer, as suitable or relative; to co-ordinate language with a particular subject-matter; as to apply the words of a statute to a particular state of facts.

The word “apply” is used in connection with statutes in two senses. When construing a statute, in describing the class of persons, things, or functions which are within its scope, as when the statute does not “apply” to transactions in interstate commerce. When discussing the use made of a statute, in referring to the process by which the statute is made operative; as where the jury is told to “apply” the statute of limitation if they find that the cause of action arose before a given date. Brandeis, J., dissenting in Dahnke-Walker Milling Co. v. Bondurant, 42 S.Ct. 106, 110, n., 257 U.S. 282, 66 L. Ed. 239.

APPOINT. To designate, ordain, prescribe, nominate. People v. Fitzsimmons, 68 N.Y. 519; Rhodes v. City of Tacoma, 97 Wash. 341, 166 P. 647. To allot, set apart. Heisler v. Robbins, 17 Ariz. 429, 153 P. 771, 772. To fix, constitute, or ordain, prescribe, settle, also to assign authority to a particular use, task or office, allot, designated. Lambach v. Anderson, 228 Iowa 1173, 293 N.W. 505, 510.

“Appoint” is used where exclusive power and authority is given to one person, officer, or body to name persons to hold certain offices. State v. Doss, 102 W.Va. 162, 134 S.E. 749. It is usually distinguished from “elect,” meaning to choose by a vote of the qualified voters of the city. State ex rel. Smith v. Bowman, 184 Mo.App. 549, 170 S.W. 700, 701. But the distinction is not invariably observed. Schaffner v. Shaw, 191 Iowa 1047, 180 N.W. 853, 854.

APPOINTEE. A person who is appointed or selected for a particular purpose; as the appointee under a power is the person who is to receive the benefit of the power.

“Appointed” and “elected” are used interchangeably. Van Cleve v. Wallace, 216 Minn. 500, 13 N.W.2d 467, 469.

APPOINTMENT. The designation of a person, by the person or persons having authority therefor, to discharge the duties of some office or trust. In re Nicholson’s Estate, 104 Colo. 561, 93 P.2d 880, 884. See, also, Power of Appointment.

The exercise of a right to designate the person or persons who are to take the use of real estate. 2 Washb.Real Prop. 302; Merchants’ Loan & Trust Co. v. Patterson, 308 Ill. 519, 139 N.E. 912, 919. The act of a person in directing the disposition of property, by limiting a use, or by substituting a new use for a former one, in pursuance of a power granted to him for that purpose by a preceding deed, called a “power of appointment;” also the deed or other instrument by which he so conveys. Where the power embraces several permitted objects, and the appointment is made to one or more of them, excluding others, it is called “exclusive.”

Appointment may signify an appropriation of money to a specific purpose. Harris v. Clark, 3 N.Y. 93, 119, 51 Am.Dec. 352. See Illusory Appointment. It may also mean the arranging of a meeting. Spears v. State, 89 Tex.Cr.R. 459, 232 S.W. 326, 328.

Office or Public Function
The selection or designation of a person, by the person or persons having authority therefor, to fill an office or public function and discharge the duties of the same. State v. Braman, 173 Wis. 596, 181 N.W. 729, 730.

The term “appointment” is to be distinguished from “election.” The former is an executive act. Election means that the person is chosen by a principle of selection in the nature of a vote, participated in by the public generally or by the entire class of persons qualified to express their choice in this manner. Mono County v. Industrial Acc. Commission, 175 Cal. 752, 167 P. 377, 378.

“Election” to office usually refers to vote of people, whereas “appointment” relates to designation by some individual or group. Board of Education of Boyle County v. McChesney, 235 Ky. 692, 32 S.W.2d 26, 27.

APPOINTOR. The person who appoints, or executes a power of appointment; as appointee is the person to whom or in whose favor an appointment is made. 1 Steph.Comm. 506, 507; 4 Kent, Comm. 316.

One authorized by the donor, under the statute of uses, to execute a power. 2 Bouv.Inst. n. 1923.

The appointor is the instrument of the donor of the power, and the appointee takes under the original will or instrument which creates the trust, and not from the donee of the power. Barret v. Berea College, 48 R.I. 258, 137 A. 145, 147.

APPORT. L. Fr. In old English law. Tax; tallage; tribute; imposition; payment; charge; expenses. Kelham.

Contracts
The allowance, in case of a severable contract, partially performed, of a part of the entire consideration proportioned to the degree in which the contract was carried out.

Corporate Shares

Incumbrances
Where several persons are interested in an estate, apportionment, as between them, is the determination of the respective amounts which they shall contribute towards the removal of the incumbrance.

Rent
The allotment of their shares in a rent to each of several parties owning it. The determination of the amount of rent to be paid when the tenancy is terminated at some period other than one of the regular intervals for the payment of rent. Gluck v. Baltimore, 81 Md. 315, 32 A. 515, 48 Am. St.Rep. 515.

Representatives
The determination upon each decennial census of the number of representatives in congress which each state shall elect, the calculation being based upon the population. See Const.U.S. art. 1, § 2; Amend. 14, § 2.

Right of Common
A division of the right of common between several persons, among whom the land to which, as an entirety, it first belonged has been divided.

Taxes
The apportionment of a tax consists in a selection of the subjects to be taxed, and in laying down the rule by which to measure the contribution which each of these subjects shall make to the tax. Barfield v. Gleason, 111 Ky. 491, 63 S.W. 964.

APPORTS EN NATURE. In French law. That which a partner brings into the partnership other than cash; for instance, securities, realty or personality, cattle, stock, or even his personal ability and knowledge. Argl.Fr.Merc.Law, 545.

APPORNTUM. In old English law. The revenue, profit, or emolument which a thing brings to the owner. Commonly applied to a corody or pension. Blount.

APPRAISE. In practice. To fix or set a price or value upon; to fix and state the true value of a thing, and, usually, in writing. Vincent v. German Ins. Co., 120 Iowa, 272, 94 N.W. 458. To value property at what it is worth. Tax Commission of Ohio v. Clark, 20 Ohio App. 166, 151 N.E. 780, 781.

To "appraise" money means to count. In re Hollinger's Estate, 259 Pa. 72, 102 A. 409.

APPRAISER. A person appointed by competent authority to make an appraisement, to ascertain and state the true value of goods or real estate.

The title of "appraiser" carries with it a significance that he is to be the judge of the evidence he desires submitted to him on the question of valuation, in cases fairly treated by him. In re Gibert's Estate, 160 N.Y.S. 213, 214, 96 Misc. 401.

General Appraisers

Merchant Appraisers
Where the appraisement of an invoice of imported goods made by the revenue officers at the custom house is not satisfactory to the importer, persons may be selected (under this name) to make a definitive valuation; they must be mer-
APPRECIABLE

APPRECIABLE. Capable of being estimated, weighed, judged of, or recognized by the mind; capable of being perceived or recognized by the senses; perceptible but not a synonym of substantial. Fisher v. Los Angeles Pacific Co., 21 Cal. App. 677, 132 P. 767, 769; Stodder v. Rosen Talking Mach. Co., 247 Mass. 60, 141 N.E. 569, 571.

As used in a decree enjoining operation of a cotton oil mill in such manner as to throw out lint in "appreciable" quantities, "appreciable" may be practically synonymous with unreasonable. Buckeye Cotton Oil Co. v. Ragland, C.C.A.Miss., 11 F.2d 231, 234.

APPRECIATE. To estimate justly; to set a price or value on. Holmes v. Connell’s Estate, 207 Mich. 663, 175 N.W. 148, 149; Brace v. Black, 125 Ill. 33, 17 N.E. 66. When used with reference to the nature and .effect of an act, "appreciate" may be synonymous with "know" or "understand." Western Indemnity Co. v. MacKechnie, Tex.Civ.App., 214 S.W. 456, 460.

APPRECIATION IN VALUE. Appreciation in the value of property has reference to the so-called unearned increment, and does not include that added value of the property made by extensions and permanent improvements. People ex rel. Adirondack Power & Light Corporation v. Public Service Commission, 193 N.Y.S. 186, 189, 200 App.Div. 268.

APPREHEND. To take hold of, whether with the mind, and so to conceive, believe, fear, dread, Trodgon v. State, 133 Ind. 1, 32 N.E. 725; or actually and bodily, and so to take a person on a criminal process; to seize; to arrest, Hogan v. Stophlet, 179 Ill. 150, 53 N.E. 604, 44 L.R.A. 809. To understand. Golden v. State, 25 Ga. 527, 531. To be conscious or sensible of. Collins v. Liddle, 67 Utah, 242, 247 P. 476, 479.

APPREHENSIO. Lat. In the civil and old English law. A taking hold of a person or thing; apprehension; the seizure or capture of a person. Calvin.

One of the varieties or subordinate forms of occupatio, or the mode of acquiring title to things not belonging to any one.

APPREHENSION.

In Practice

The seizure, taking, or arrest of a person on a criminal charge. The term "apprehension" is applied exclusively to criminal cases, and "arrest" to both criminal and civil cases. People v. Martin, 188 Cal. 281, 205 P. 121, 123, 21 A.L.R. 1399.

Civil Law

✓ A physical or corporal act, (corpus,) on the part of one who intends to acquire possession of a thing, by which he brings himself into such a relation to the thing that he may subject it to his exclusive control; or by which he obtains the physical ability to exercise his power over the thing whenever he pleases. One of the requisites to the acquisition of judicial possession, and by which, when accompanied by intention, (animus,) possession is acquired. Mackeld.Rom.Law, §§ 248, 249, 250.

APPRENDRE. A fee or profit taken or received. Cowell.

APPRENTICE. A person, usually a minor, bound in due form of law to a master, to learn from him his art, trade,’ or business, and to serve him during the time of his apprenticeship. 1 Bl.Comm. 426. City of St. Louis v. Bender, 248 Mo. 113, 154 S.W. 88, 89, 44 L.R.A.,N.S., 1072.

APPRENTICE EN LA LEY. An ancient name for students at law, and afterwards applied to counsellors, apprendici ad barras, from which comes the more modern word "barrister." In some of the ancient law-writers the terms apprentice and barrister are synonymous. Co. 2d Inst. 214; Eunomus, Dial. 2, § 53, p. 155.

APPRENTICESHIP. A contract by which one person, usually a minor, called the "apprentice," is bound to another person, called the "master," to serve him during a prescribed term of years in his art, trade, or business, in consideration of being instructed by the master in such art or trade, and (commonly) of receiving his support and maintenance from the master during such term.

The term during which an apprentice is to serve.

The status of an apprentice; the relation subsisting between an apprentice and his master.

APPRENTICIUS AD LEGEM. An apprentice to the law; a law student; a counsellor below the degree of serjeant; a barrister. See Apprentice en la Ley.

APPRIZING. In Scotch law. A form of process by which a creditor formerly took possession of the estates of the debtor in payment of the debt due. It is now superseded by adjudications.

Thus, an "approaching" street car is one coming near to, in point of time and place. Ruffin Coal & Transfer Co. v. Rich, 214 Ala. 622, 108 So. 600, 602.

APPROACH, RIGHT OF. In international law. The right of a ship of war, upon the high sea, to draw near to another vessel for the purpose of ascertaining the nationality of the latter. The Marianna Flora, 11 Wheat., U.S., 43, 44, 6 L.Ed. 405. Kent understood it to be equivalent to the right of visit. 1 Kent, Comm. 153. And at present the right of approach has no existence apart from the right of visit.

APPROACHES. A way, passage, or avenue by which a place or building can be approached; an access. State ex rel. Washington Toll Bridge Au-
Comprising the necessary traffic arteries and adjustment of bridge deck, to develop its maximum traffic capacity. State ex rel. Washington Toll Bridge Authority v. Yelle, 197 Wash. 110, 84 P.2d 688, 691; including embankments, grades, or structures of any sort serving as a passage or way. Starrett v. Inhabitants of Town of Thomson, 126 Me. 205, 137 A. 67, 70. That part of the roadway which is essential to make the bridge accessible and convenient for public use. With respect to bridge or viaduct; In re Rosedale Ave. in City of New York, 162 N.Y.S. 877, 885, 175 App.Div. 864.

APPROBATE AND REPROBATE. In Scotch law. To approve and reject; to attempt to take advantage of one part, and reject the rest. Bell.

APPROPRIATE. To make a thing one's own; to make a thing the subject of property; to exercise dominion over an object to the extent, and for the purpose, of making it subserve one's own proper use or pleasure. People v. Ashworth, 222 N.Y.S. 24, 27, 220 App.Div. 498. To prescribe a particular use for particular moneys; to designate or destine a fund or property for a distinct use, or for the payment of a particular demand. McKenzie Const. Co. v. City of San Antonio, Tex., 50 S.W.2d 349, 352; Jennings v. Kinsey, 308 Mo. 265, 271 S.W. 786, 787. Also used in the sense of distribute.

In this sense it may denote the act of an executor or administrator who distributes the estate of his decedent among the legatees, heirs, or others entitled, in pursuance of his duties and according to their respective rights; to take away from one to whom a chattel belongs, and to devote it to the exclusive use and benefit of him who appropriates it. Davis v. Perkins, 178 Ga. 195, 172 S.E. 562, 565; or properly used in this sense to denote the acquisition of property and right of exclusive enjoyment in the things which before were without an owner or were publics juris. People v. Lammerts, 164 N.Y. 137, 58 N.E. 22.

APPROPRIATE PROCESS. A subpoena, subpoena duces tecum, or order to appear and produce books and records, and to testify within Internal Revenue Code providing that the Commissioner of Internal Revenue may ask the District Court by appropriate process to compel attendance, testimony or production of books, papers or other data. In re Wolrich, D.C.N.Y., 84 F.Supp. 481, 482.

APPROPRIATION. The act of appropriating or setting apart; prescribing the destination of a thing; designating the use or application of a fund. State v. Erickson, 93 Mont. 466, 19 P.2d 227, 229; McKenzie Const. Co. v. City of San Antonio, Tex.Civ.App., 50 S.W.2d 349, 352.

Public Law

The act by which the legislative department of government designates a particular fund, or sets apart a specified portion of the public revenue or of the money in the public treasury, to be applied to some general object of governmental expenditure, or to some individual purchase or expense. Blaine County Inv. Co. v. Gallet, 35 Idaho, 102, 204 P. 1066, 1067. Authority given by Legislature to proper officers to apply distinctly specified sum from designated fund out of treasury in given year for specified object or demand against state. State ex rel. Murray v. Carter, 167 Okl. 473, 30 P.2d 700, 702.

An element of the definition of "appropriation" is that the money appropriated be out of the general revenues of the state. Black and White Taxicab Co. v. Standard Oil Co., 25 Ariz. 381, 218 P. 139, 144. An "expenditure" is the expending, a laying out of money, disbursement, and is not the same as an "appropriation," the setting apart or assignment to a particular person or use. Grout v. Gates, 97 Vt. 434, 124 A. 76, 80; Suppiger v. Enicking, 60 Idaho 292, 91 P.2d 362, 364, 365.

A specific appropriation is an act of the legislature by which a named sum of money has been set apart in the treasury, and devoted to the payment of a particular demand. Stratton v. Green, 45 Cal. 149.

Appropriation of land. The act of selecting, devoting, or setting apart land for a particular use or purpose, as where land is appropriated for public buildings, military reservations, or other public uses. McSorley v. Hill, 2 Wash.St. 638, 27 Pac. 552; Jackson v. Wilcox, 2 Ill. 311. 360. Taking of private property for public use in the exercise of the power of eminent domain. N. Ward Co. v. Board of Street Com'rs of City of Boston, 217 Mass. 381, 104 N.E. 965, 966. In this sense it may refer merely to physical occupation and contemplate payment prior thereto, in contra-distinction to "taking," referring to a legal taking and presupposing payment after damages are due. Keller v. City of Bridgeport, 101 Conn. 669, 127 A. 508, 511.

Appropriation of payments. The application of a payment to the discharge of a particular debt.

Thus, if a creditor has two distinct debts due to him from his debtor, and the latter makes a general payment on account, without specifying at the time to which debt he intends the payment to apply, it is optional for the creditor to appropriate (apply) the payment to either of the two debts he pleases. Gwin v. McLean, 62 Miss. 121; Martin v. Draher, 5 Watts (Pa.) 544.

Appropriation of water. An appropriation of water flowing on the public domain consists in the capture, impounding, or diversion of it from its natural course or channel and its actual application to some beneficial use private or personal to the appropriator, to the extent of the water appropriated) of all other persons. To constitute a valid appropriation, there must be an intent to apply the water to some beneficial use existing at the time or contemplated in the future, a diversion from the natural channel by means of a ditch or canal, or some other open physical act of taking possession of the water, and an actual application of it within a reasonable time to some useful or beneficial purpose. In re Water Rights in Silvies River, 115 Or. 277, 237 P. 322, 336; In re Manse Spring and Its Tributaries, Nye County, 60 Nev. 280, 108 P.2d 311, 314; State of Neb. v. State of Wyo., U.S.Neb. & Wyo., 65 S.Ct. 1332, 1349, 325 U.S. 589, 89 L.Ed. 1815.

It follows water to its original source whether through surface or subterranean streams or through percolation, APPROPRIATION

English Ecclesiastical Law

The perpetual annexing of a benefice to some spiritual corporation either sole or aggregate, being the patron of the living. 1 Bl.Comm. 384; 3 Steph.Comm. 70-75; 1 Crabb, Real Prop. p. 144, § 129.

Where the annexation is to the use of a lay person, it is usually called an “impropriation” (q.v.). 1 Crabb, Real Prop. p. 145, § 130. There have been no appropriations since the dissolution of monasteries.

APPROPRIATION BILL. A measure before a legislative body authorizing the expenditure of public moneys and stipulating the amount, manner, and purpose of the various items of expenditure. State ex rel. Finnegans v. Dammann, 220 Wis. 143, 264 N.W. 622, 624.

APPROPRIATOR. One who makes an appropriation; as, an appropriator of water. Lux v. Haggins, 69 Cal. 255, 10 Pac. 736.

English Ecclesiastical Law

A spiritual corporation entitled to the profits of a benefice.

The act of a judge or magistrate in sanctioning and accepting as satisfactory a bond, security, or other instrument which is required by law to pass his inspection and receive his approbation before it becomes operative.

APPROVE. To be satisfied with; to confirm, ratify, sanction, or consent to some act or thing done by another; to sanction officially; to ratify; to confirm; to pronounce good; think or judge well of; admit the propriety or excellence of; be pleased with. Western Hospital Ass’n v. Indus. Hospital of Indus. Hospital Accident Board, 51 Idaho 334, 6 P.2d 845, 848; MacNeill v. Maddox, 194 Ga. 802, 22 S.E.2d 653, 654; Board of Education of City of Hutchinson v. Reno Community High School, 124 Kan. 175; 257 P. 957, 959; Tibbens v. Clayton, D.C. Okl., 288 F. 393, 394. Distinguishable from “authorize,” meaning to permit a thing to be done in future. Gray v. Gill, 210 N.Y.S. 658, 660, 125 Misc. 70.

To take to one’s proper and separate use. To improve; to enhance the value or profits of anything. To inclose and cultivate common or waste land.

To approve common or waste land is to inclose and convert it to the purposes of husbandry, which the owner might always do, provided he left common sufficient for such as were entitled to it. 3 Kent, Comm. 406.

Old Criminal Law

To accuse or prove; to accuse an accomplice by giving evidence against him.

APPROVED INENDORSED NOTES. Notes indorsed by another person than the maker, for additional security, the indorser being satisfactory to the payee. Mills v. Hunt, 20 Wend., N.Y., 431.

APPROVAL. At ancient common law a practice of criminal prosecutions by which a person accused of treason or felony was permitted to exonerate himself by accusing others and escaping prosecution himself. Lee v. State, 115 Fla. 30, 155 So. 123; Guthrie v. Commonwealth, 171 Va. 461, 198 S.E. 481, 482, 119 A.L.R. 683.

The custom existed only in capital cases, and consisted in the accused, called “approver”, being arraigned and permitted to confess before plea and appeal or accuse another as his accomplice of the same crime in order to obtain his pardon.

APPROVER. L. Fr. To approve or prove; to vouch. Kelham.

APPROVER. An accomplice in crime who accuses others of the same offense, and is admitted as a witness at the discretion of the court to give evidence against his companions in guilt. He is vulgarly called “King’s Evidence.”

One who confesses himself guilty of felony and accuses others of the same crime to save himself from punishment. Myers v. People, 26 Ill. 175. By the old law, if he failed to convict those he accused he was at once hung. Lee v. State, 115 Fla. 30, 155 So. 123. See, also, Antithetarius.

In old English law. Certain men sent into the several counties to increase the farms (rents) of hundreds and wapentakes, which formerly were let at a certain value to the sheriff. Cowell.

Bailiffs of lords in their franchises. Sheriffs were called the king’s “approvers” in 1 Edw. III, st. 1, c. 1. Termes de la Ley, 49.

Approvers in the Marches were those who had license to sell and purchase beasts there.

APPROXIMATION. Equitable doctrine by which precise terms of charitable trust can be varied under certain circumstances. Heustess v. Huntington College, 242 Ala. 272, 5 So.2d 777, 779, 780; applicable solely to charitable trusts and employed only where on failure of trust the court finds a general charitable intent. Waterbury Trust Co. v. Porter, 131 Conn. 206, 38 A.2d 598, 603.
APPRUARE. To take to one's use or profit. Cowell.

APPULEUS. In the civil law. A driving to, as of cattle to water. Dig. 8, 3, 1, 1.

APPUTENANCE. That which belongs to something else; an adjunct; an appendage; something annexed to another thing more worthy as principal, and which passes as incident to it, as a right of way or other easement to land; an out-house, barn, garden, or orchard, to a house or messuage. Cohen v. Whitcomb, 142 Minn. 20, 170 N.W. 851, 852; Alwes v. Richerne, 185 Ark. 535, 47 S.W.2d 1084, 1085; Joplin Waterworks Co. v. Jasper County, 327 Mo. 964, 38 S.W.2d 1068, 1076.

An article adapted to the use of the property to which it is connected, and which was intended to be a permanent accession to the freehold. Szilagy v. Taylor, 63 Ohio App. 105, 25 N.E.2d 360, 361.

An article may become an “appurtenance to realty” without physical attachment. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Jensen, 69 S.D. 225, 9 N.W.2d 140, 141.

APPUTENANT. Belonging to; accessory or incident to; adjunct, appended, or annexed to; something annexed to another thing more worthy as principal, and which passes as incident to it, as a right of way or other easement to land; an out-house, barn, garden, or orchard, to a house or messuage. Cohen v. Whitcomb, 142 Minn. 20, 170 N.W. 851, 852; Alwes v. Richerne, 185 Ark. 535, 47 S.W.2d 1084, 1085; Joplin Waterworks Co. v. Jasper County, 327 Mo. 964, 38 S.W.2d 1068, 1076.

An article adapted to the use of the property to which it is connected, and which was intended to be a permanent accession to the freehold. Szilagy v. Taylor, 63 Ohio App. 105, 25 N.E.2d 360, 361.

APRAXIA. See Aphasia.

APPROVECHAMENTO. In Spanish law. Approval, or improvement and enjoyment of public lands. As applied to public lands, it has particular reference to the commons, and includes not only the actual enjoyment of them but a right to such enjoyment. Hart v. Burnett, 15 Cal. 530, 566.

APT. Fit; suitable; appropriate.

APT TDIE. Apt time sometimes depends upon lapse of time; as, where a thing is required to be done at the first term, or within a given time, it cannot be done afterwards. But the phrase more usually refers to the order of proceedings, as fit or suitable. Holmes Electric Co. v. Carolina Power & Light Co., 150 S.E. 621, 623, 197 N.C. 766.

APT WORDS. Words proper to produce the legal effect for which they are intended; sound technical phrases.

APTA VIRO. Fit for a husband; marriageable; a woman who has reached marriageable years.

APUD ACTA. Among the acts; among the recorded proceedings. In the civil law, this phrase is applied to appeals taken orally, in the presence of the judge, at the time of judgment or sentence. Credit Co., Ltd., v. Arkansas Cent. Ry. Co., 9 S. Ct. 107, 108, 128 U.S. 258, 32 L.Ed. 448.

AQUA. In the civil and old English law. Water; sometimes a stream or water-course.

AQUA zESTIVA. In Roman law. Summer water; water that was used in summer only. Dig. 43, 20, 1, 3, 4.

AQUA CEDIT SOLO. Water follows the land. A sale of land will pass the water which covers it. 2 Bl.Comm. 18; Co.Litt. 4.

AQUA CURRENTS. Running water.

AQUA CURRER ET DEBET CURRERE, UT CURRERE SOLEBAT. Water runs, and ought to run, as it has used to run. A running stream should be left to flow in its natural channel, without alteration or diversion, Goble v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 187 Ga. 243, 200 S.E. 259, 261; that water is the common and equal property of every one through whose domain it flows. Elmore v. Ingalls, 17 So.2d 674, 245 Ala. 481.

AQUA DULCIS, or FRISCA. Fresh water. Reg. Orig. 97; Bract. fols. 117, 135.

AQUA FONTANEA. Spring water. Fleta, lib. 4, c. 27, § 8.

AQUA PROFLUENS. Flowing or running water. Dig. 1, 8, 2.

AQUA QUOTIDIANA. In Roman law. Daily water; water that might be drawn at all times of the year. (qua quis quotidiani possit uti, si vellet). Dig. 43, 20, 1-4.

AQUA SALSA. Salt water.

AQUAZE DUCTUS. In the civil law. A servitude which consists in the right to carry water by means of pipes or conduits over or through the estate of another. Dig. 8, 3, 1; Inst. 2, 3.

AQUELE HAUSTUS. In the civil law. A servitude which consists in the right to draw water from the fountain, pool, or spring of another. Inst. 2, 3, 2; Dig. 8, 3, 1, 1.

AQUA IMMITTEND1E. A civil law easement or servitude, consisting in the right of one whose house is surrounded with other buildings to cast waste water upon the adjacent roofs or yards. Similar to the common law easement of drip. Bellows v. Sackett, 15 Barb. (N.Y.) 96.

AQUAGIUM. A canal, ditch, or water course running through marshy grounds. A mark or gauge placed in or on the banks of a running stream, to indicate the height of the water, was called “aqua g au gium.” Speelman.
AQUATIC RIGHTS. Rights which individuals have to the use of the sea and rivers, for the purpose of fishing and navigation, and also to the soil in the sea and rivers.

AQUILIAN LAW. See Lex Aquilia.

ARABANT. They plowed. A term of feudal law, applied to those who held by the tenure of plowing and tilling the lord's lands within the manor. Cowell.

ARABLE LAND. That which is fit for plowing or tillage, and thus is distinguishable from swamp land, which is land that is too wet for cultivation. 6 C.J.S. p. 143; McCarter v. Sooy Oyster Co., 75 A. 211, 215, 78 N.J.Law, 394.

ARAHO. In feudal law. To make oath in the church or some other holy place. All oaths were made in the church upon the relics of saints, according to the Ripuarian laws. Cowell; Spelman.

ARATOR. A plowman; a farmer of arable land.

ARATRUM TERR. In old English law. A plow of land; a plowland; as much land as could be tilled with one plow (or by a single "arator" or plowman). Whishaw.

ARATURA TERRLE. The plowing of land by the tenant, or vassal, in the service of his lord. Whishaw.

ARATURIA. Land suitable for the plow; arable land. Spelman.

ARBITER. A person chosen to decide a controversy; an arbitrator, referee. A person bound to decide according to the rules of law and equity, as distinguished from an arbitrator, who may proceed wholly at his own discretion, so that it be according to the judgment of a sound man. Cowell.

In the Roman law. A judge invested with a discretionary power. A person appointed by the praetor to examine and decide that class of causes or actions termed "bona fidei," and who had the power of judging according to the principles of equity, (ex cequo et bono;) distinguished from the judex, (q. v.) who was bound to decide according to strict law. Inst. 4, 6, 30, 31.

According to Mr. Abbott, the distinction is as follows: "Arbitrator" is a technical name of a person selected with reference to an established system for friendly determination of controversies, which, though not judicial, is yet regulated by law; so that the powers and duties of the arbitrator, when once he is chosen, are prescribed by law, and his doings may be judicially revised if he has exceeded his authority. "Arbiter" is an untchnical designation of a person to whom a controversy is referred, irrespective of any law to govern the decision; and is the proper word to signify a referee of a question outside of or above municipal law. But it is elsewhere said that the distinction between arbiters and arbitrators is not observed in modern law. Russ.Arb. 112.

ARBITRAGE. Transactions of bankers and mercantile houses by which stocks or bills are bought in one market and sold in another for the sake of the profit arising from a difference in price in the two markets.

ARBITRAMENT. The award or decision of arbitrators upon a matter of dispute, which has been submitted to them. Termes de la Ley.

ARBITRAMENT AND AWARD. A plea to an action brought for the same cause which had been submitted to arbitration and on which an award had been made. Wats.Arb. 256.

ARBITRAMENTUM IEQUUM TRIBUIT CUIQUE SUUM. A just arbitration renders to every one his own. Noy. Max. 248.

ARBITRARILY. See Arbitrary.

A finding that certain orders were "arbitrarily" given by an engineer in charge of a public improvement did not amount to a finding that they were given in bad faith, fraudulently, or through ignorance or incompetency. First Savings & Trust Co. v. Milwaukee County, 158 Wis. 207, 148 N.W. 22, 33.

ARBITRARINESS. Conduct or acts based alone upon one's will, and not upon any course of reasoning and exercise of judgment. Garman v. Myers, 183 Okl. 141, 80 P.2d 624, 626.

ARBITRARY. Means in an "arbitrary" manner, as fixed or done capriciously or at pleasure; without adequate determining principle; not founded in the nature of things; nonrational; not done or acting according to reason or judgment; depending on the will alone; absolutely in power; capriciously; tyrannical; despotic; Cornell v. Swisher County, Tex.Civ.App., 78 S.W.2d 1072, 1074. Without fair, solid, and substantial cause; that is, without cause based upon the law. U. S. v. Lotempio, D.C.N.Y., 58 F.2d 358, 359; not governed by any fixed rules or standard. People ex rel. Hultman v. Gilchrist, 188 N.Y.S. 61, 65, 114 Misc. 651.

ARBITRARY GOVERNMENT. The difference between a free and an arbitrary government is that in the former limits are assigned to those to whom the administration is committed, but the latter depends on the will of the departments or some of them. Kamper v. Hawkins, 1 Va.Cas. 20, 23.

ARBITRARY POWER. Power to act according to one's own will; especially applicable to power conferred on an administrative officer, who is not furnished any adequate determining principle. Fox Film Corporation v. Trumbull, D.C.Conn., 7 F.2d 715, 727.

ARBITRARY PUNISHMENT. That punishment which is left to the decision of the judge, in distinction from those defined by statute.

Compulsory arbitration is that which occurs when the consent of one of the parties is enforced by statutory provisions. Wood v. City of Seattle, 23 Wash. 1, 62 Pac. 135, 52 L.R.A. 369.

Voluntary arbitration is by mutual and free consent of the parties.

The submission is an agreement by which parties agree to submit their differences to the decision of a referee or arbitrators. It is sometimes termed a reference. 3 M. & W. 816; McManus v. McCulloch, 6 Watts (Pa.) 357; Stewart v. Cass, 16 Vt. 663, 42 Am. Dec. 534; Howard v. Sexton, 4 N.Y. 157. As to "final submission," see In re Gitt, 125 N.Y.S. 369, 140 App.Div. 382. In a wide sense, "arbitration" may embrace the whole method of thus settling controversies, and include all the various steps. But in a more strict use, the term denotes only the submission and hearing, the decision being separately spoken of, and called an "award." An award is the judgment or decision of arbitrators or referees on a matter submitted to them. It is also the writing containing such judgment. Cowell; Termes de la Ley; Jenk. 137. See Award.

As distinguished from appraisal, an arbitration presupposes a controversy or a difference to be tried and decided. On the other hand, an appraisal or valuation is generally a mere auxiliary feature, as of a contract of sale, the purpose of which is not to adjudicate a controversy but to avoid one. Toledo S. S. Co. v. Zenith Transp. Co., 184 F. 391, 106 C.C.A. 501.

ARBITRATION CLAUSE. A clause inserted in a contract providing for compulsory arbitration in case of dispute as to rights or liabilities under it; ineffectual if it purports to oust the courts of jurisdiction entirely. See Perry v. Cobb, 88 Me. 435, 34 A. 278, 49 L.R.A. 389.

ARBITRATION OF EXCHANGE. This takes place where a merchant pays his debts in one country by a bill of exchange upon another.

The business of buying and selling exchange (bills of exchange) between two or more countries or markets, and particularly where the profits of such business are to be derived from a calculation of the relative value of exchange in the two countries or markets, and by taking advantage of the fact that the rate of exchange may be higher in the one place than in the other at the same time.

ARBITRATOR. A private, disinterested person, chosen by the parties to a disputed question, for the purpose of hearing their contention, and giving judgment between them; to whose decision (award) the litigants submit themselves either voluntarily, or, in some cases, compulsorily, by order of a court. Fudickar v. Insurance Co., 62 N.Y. 399.

"Referee" is of frequent modern use as a synonym of arbitrator, but is in its origin of broader signification and less accurate than arbitrator.

ARBITRIOS. In Spanish and Mexican law. Taxes imposed by municipalities on certain articles of merchandise, to defray the general expenses of government, in default of revenues from "proprios" (q. v.), e., lands owned by the municipality, or the income of which was legally set apart for its support. Sometimes used in a wider sense, as meaning the resources of a town, including its privileges in the royal lands as well as the taxes. Escriche Dict.; Sheldon v. Milmo, 90 Tex. 1, 36 S.W. 413.

ARBITRIUM. The decision of an arbiter, or arbitrator; an award; a judgment.

ARBITRIUM EST JUDICIUM. An award is a judgment. Jenk.Cent. 137.

ARBITRIUM EST JUDICIUM BONI VIRI, SECUNDUM JEOVMT ET BONUM. An award is the judgment of a good man, according to justice. 3 Bulst. 64.

ARBOR. A tree; a plant; something larger than an herb; a general term including vines, osiers, and even reeds. The mast of a ship. Brissonius. Timber. Ainsworth; Calvinus, Lex.

In a technological sense, "arbor" denotes the core consisting of an iron pipe over which is spread a thin coating of damp sand and which is inserted in the mold used in casting iron pipe. Casey-Hedges Co. v. Gates, 139 Tenn. 63, 201 S.W. 760, 761, L.R.A.1918B, 184.

ARBOR CIVILIS. A genealogical tree. Coke, Inst.

ARBOR CONSANGUINITATIS. A table, formed in the shape of a tree, showing the genealogy of a family. See the arbor civilis of the civilians and canonists. Hale, Com.Law, 335.

ARBOR DUM CRESCIT, LIGNUM DUM CRESCERI NESCIT. [That which is] a tree while it grows, [is] wood when it ceases to grow. Cro. Jac. 166; Hob. 77b, in marg.

ARBOR FINALIS. In old English law. A boundary tree; a tree used for making a boundary line. Bract. fols. 167, 207b.

ARCA. Lat. In the civil law. A chest or coffer; a place for keeping money. Dig. 30, 30, 6; id. 32, 64. Brissonius.

ARCANA IMPERII. State secrets. 1 B1.Comm. 337.

ARCARIUS._ In civil and old English law. A treasurer; a keeper of public money% Cod. 10, 70, 15; Spelman.

ARCAHIONOMIA. A collection of Saxon laws, published during the reign of Queen Elizabeth, in the Saxon language, with a Latin version by Lambard.

ARCHBISHOP. In English ecclesiastical law. The chief of the clergy in his province, having supreme power under the king or queen in all ecclesiastical causes. He has also his own diocese, in which he exercises episcopal jurisdiction, as in his province he exercises archiepiscopal authority. In England he is addressed as Most Reverend.

ARCHDEACON. A dignity of the Anglican church who has ecclesiastical jurisdiction immediately subordinate to that of the bishop, either throughout the whole of his diocese or in some particular part of it. He is a ministerial officer; 1 Bla.Com. 383. He is addressed as Venerable.

ARCHDEACON’S COURT. In English ecclesiastical law. A court held before a judge appointed by the archdeacon, and called his official. Its jurisdiction comprises the granting of probates and administrations, and ecclesiastical causes in general, arising within the archdeaconry. It is the most inferior court in the whole ecclesiastical polity of England. 3 Bl.Comm. 64; 3 Steph.Comm. 430.

ARCHDEACONRY. A division of a diocese, and the circuit of an archdeacon’s jurisdiction.

ARCHERY. In feudal law. A service of keeping a bow for the lord’s use in the defense of his castle. Co.Litt. 157.

ARCHES COURT. In English ecclesiastical law. A court of appeal belonging to the Archbishop of Canterbury, the judge of which is called the “Dean of the Arches,” because his court was anciently held in the church of Saint Mary-le-Bow, (Sancta Maria de Arcubus,) so named from the steeple, which is raised upon pillars built arch-wise. 3 Bl.Comm. 64.

The court was formerly held in the hall belonging to the College of Civilians, commonly called “Doctors’ Commons.” It is now held in Westminster Hall. Its proper jurisdiction is only over the thirteen peculiar parishes belonging to the archbishop in London, but, the office of Dean of the Arches having been for a long time united with that of the archbishop’s principal official, the Judge of the Arches, in right of such added office, it receives and determines appeals from the sentences of all inferior ecclesiastical courts within the province.

ARCHETYPE. The original from which a copy is made.

ARCHIVES. The Rolls; any place where ancient records, charters, and evidences are kept. In libraries, the private depository. Cowell; Spelman.

The derivative meaning of the word (now the more common) denotes the writings themselves thus preserved; thus we say the archives of a college, of a monastery, a public office, etc. Texas M. Ry. Co. v. Jarvis, 69 Tex. 537, 7 S.W. 210.

ARCHIVIST. The custodian of archives.

ARCIFINIOUS. (Lat., arcifinius or arcifinalis; Fr., arcifinie.) Pertaining to landed estates having natural boundaries, such as woods, mountains, or rivers. The owners of such estates, unlike the owners of “agri limitati” (q. v.), have the right of alluvion. Smith v. St. Louis Public Schools, 30 Mo. 290, 303.

Also, having a frontier forming a natural defense. Twiss, Law of Nations, II. 215.
ARENIFODINA. In the civil law. A sandpit. Dig. 7, 1, 13, 5.

ARENTARE. Lat. To rent; to let out at a certain rent. Cowell. Arentatio. A renting.

AREOPAGITE. In ancient Greek law. A lawyer in Athens; a tribunal so called after a hill or slight eminence, in a street of that city dedicated to Mars, where the court was held in which those judges were wont to sit. Wharton.

ARETRO. In arrear; behind. Also written to Mars, where the court was held in which those judges were wont to sit. Wharton.

ARG. An abbreviation of arguendo.

ARGENT. In heraldry. Silver.

ARGENTARIUS (pl., Argentarii). In the Roman law, a money lender or broker; a dealer in money; a banker. Argentarium, the instrument of the loan, similar to the modern word "bond" or "note."

ARGENTARIUS MILES. A money porter in the English exchequer, who carries the money from the lower to the upper exchequer to be examined and tested. Spelman.

ARGENTEUS. An old French coin, answering nearly to the English shilling. Spelman.

ARGENTUM. Silver; money.

ARGENTUM ALBUM. Bullion; uncoined silver; common silver coin; silver coin worn smooth. Cowell; Spelman.

ARGENTUM DEL God's money; God's penny; money given as earnest in making a bargain. Cowell.

ARGUENDO. In arguing; in the course of the argument. A statement or observation made by a judge as a matter of argument or illustration, but not directly bearing upon the case at bar, or only incidentally involved in it, is said (in the reports) to be made arguendo, or in the abbreviated form, arg.

ARGUMENT. An effort to establish belief by a course of reasoning.

In rhetoric and logic, an inference drawn from premises, the truth of which is indisputable, or at least highly probable.

The argument of a demurrer, special case, appeal, or other proceeding involving a question of law, consists of the speeches of the opposed counsel; namely, the "opening" of the counsel having the right to begin, (q. v.,) the speech of his opponent, and the "reply" of the first counsel. It answers to the trial of a question of fact. Sweet. But the submission of printed briefs may technically constitute an argument. State v. California Min. Co., 13 Nev. 209. Also, the opening statement to a jury is part of the argument. State v. McCaskill, 173 Iowa 563, 155 N.W. 976, 977.

A pleading is so called in which the statement on which the pleader relies is implied instead of being expressed, or where it contains, in addition to proper statements of facts, reasoning or arguments upon those facts and their relation to the matter in dispute, such as should be reserved for presentation at the trial.

ARGUMENTATIVE INSTRUCTION. An instruction which singles out or unduly emphasizes a particular issue, theory, or defense, or one which tends to invade the province of the jury with regard to the weight, probative effect, or sufficiency of the evidence or the inferences to be drawn therefrom. See 64 C.J. §§ 594, 601.

ARGUMENTUM A COMMUNITER ACCIDENTIBUS IN JURE FREQUENS EST. An argument drawn from things commonly happening is frequent in law. Broom Max. 44.

ARGUMENTUM A DIVISIONE EST FORTISSIMUM IN JURE. An argument from division [of the subject] is of the greatest force in law. Co. Litt. 213b; 6 Coke 60.

ARGUMENTUM A MAIORI AD MINUS NEGATIVAE VALET; VALET E CONVERSO. An argument from the greater to the less is of no force negatively; affirmatively (or conversely) it is. Jenk.Cent. 281.

ARGUMENTUM A SIMILI VALET IN LEGE. An argument drawn from a like case (from analogy) is good in law. Co.Litt. 191.

ARGUMENTUM AB AUCTORITATE EST FORTISSIMUM IN LEGE. An argument from authority is the strongest in the law. "The book cases are the best proof of what the law is." Co. Litt. 254a.

ARGUMENTUM AB IMPOSSIBILI VALET IN LEGE. An argument drawn from an impossibly is forcible in law. Co.Litt. 92a.

ARGUMENTUM AB INCONVENIENT! An argument arising from the inconvenience which the proposed construction of the law would create.

Where the constitutionality of a statute is concerned, it is only when the question is close and doubtful that this doctrine will be applied and consideration taken of the consequences of declaring the statute unconstitutional. Calhoun County v. Early County, 205 Ga. 169, 52 S.E.2d 854; Smith v. City Council of Augusta, 203 Ga. 511, 47 S.E.2d 582, 587.

ARGUMENTUM AB INCONVENIENT! EST VALIDUM IN LEGE; QUIA LEX NON PERMITTAT ALIQUOD INCONVENIENS. An argument drawn from what is inconvenient is good in law, because the law will not permit any inconvenience. Co.Litt. 66a, 258.

ARGUMENTUM AB INCONVENIENT! EST VALIDUM IN LEGE; QUIA LEX NON PERMITTAT ALIQUOD INCONVENIENS. An argument drawn from what is inconvenient is good in law, because the law will not permit any inconvenience. Co.Litt. 66a,
ARIBANUM

97a, 152b, 258b; Broom, Max. 184. If there be in any deed or instrument equivocal expressions, and great inconvenience must necessarily follow from one construction, it is strong to show that such construction is not according to the true intention of the grantor; but where there is no equivocal expression in the instrument, and the words used admit only of one meaning, arguments of inconvenience prove only want of foresight in the grantor. 3 Madd. 540; 7 Taunt. 496.

ARIBANUM. In feudal law. A fine for not setting out to join the army in obedience to the summons of the king.

ARIERBAN, or ARRIERE-BAN. An edict of the ancient kings of France and Germany, commanding all their vassals, the noblesse, and the vassals' vassals, to enter the army, or forfeit their estates on refusal. Spelman. See, also, Arrier Ban.

ARIMANNI. A medieval term for a class of agricultural owners of small alodial farms, which they cultivated in connection with larger farms belonging to their lords, paying rent and service for the latter, and being under the protection of their superiors. Military tenants holding lands from the emperor. Spelman.

ARISE. To spring up, originate, to come into being or notice, to become operative, sensible, visible, or audible; to present itself. Bergin v. Temple, 111 Mont. 539, 111 P.2d 286, 289, 290, 133 A.L.R. 1115; Lane v. Travelers Ins. Co. of Hartford, Conn., 230 Iowa 973, 299 N.W. 553, 555.

"Accrue" not synonymous; the latter term means to result, to add, to acquire, to receive, to benefit, Rogues v. Continental Casualty Co., 17 La.App. 465, 135 So. 51, 52.

A cause of action or suit "arises", so as to start running of limitation, when party has a right to apply to proper tribunal for relief. Washington Security Co. v. State, 9 Wash.2d 197, 114 P.2d 965, 967, 135 A.L.R. 1330; and it arises at time when and place where act is unlawfully omitted or committed. State ex rel. Birnamwood Oil Co. v. Shaugnessy, 243 Wis. 306, 10 N.W.2d 292, 295.

The words "arising out of employment" refer to the origin of the cause of the injury, while "course of employment" refer to the time, place, and circumstances under which the injury occurred. Walker v. Hyde, 43 Idaho, 625, 253 P. 1104, 1105. See, further, Course; Watson v. Piccinin, Mo.App., 139 S.W.2d 552, 554; Ervin v. Industrial Commission, 364 Ill. 56, 4 N.E.2d 22, 25.

ARISTOCRACY. A government in which a class of men rules supreme; a form of government which is lodged in a council composed of select members or nobles, without a monarch, and exclusive of the people.

A privileged class of the people; nobles and dignitaries; people of wealth and station.

ARISTO-DEMOCRACY. A form of government where the power is divided between the nobles (or the more powerful) and the people.

ARLES. Earnest. Used in Yorkshire in the phrase "Arles-penny." Cowell. In Scotland it has the same signification. Bell.

ARM OF THE SEA. A portion of the sea projecting inland, in which the tide ebbs and flows. 5 Coke, 107. It is considered as extending as far into the interior of a country as the water of fresh rivers is propelled backwards by the ingress of the tide. Adams v. Pease, 2 Conn. 484; U. S. v. Grush, 5 Mason, 290, Fed.Cas.No.15,268; Ex parte Byers, D.C.Mich., 32 Fed. 404. See Fauces Terre.

ARMA. Lat. Arms; weapons, offensive and defensive; armor; arms or cognizances of families.

ARMA DARE. To dub or make a knight.

ARMA IN ARMATOS SUMERE JURA SINUNT. The laws permit the taking up of arms against armed persons. 2 Inst. 574.

ARMA MOLUTA. Sharp weapons that cut, in contradistinction to such as are blunt, which only break or bruise. Fleta, lib. 1, c. 33, par. 6.

ARMA REVERSATA. Reversed arms, a punishment for a traitor or felon. Cowell.

ARMATA VIS. In the civil law. Armed force. Dig. 43, 16, 3; Fleta, lib. 4, c. 4.

ARMED. Furnished or equipped with weapons of offense or defense. People ex rel. Griffin v. Hunt, 270 N.Y.S. 248, 254, 150 Misc. 163.

A vessel is "armed" when she is fitted with a full armament for fighting purposes. Murray v. The Charming Betsy, 2 Cranch, 121, 2 L. Ed. 208.

ARMED FORCE. As used in statutes authorizing peace officers to summon an "armed force" to aid them, this term may refer to a military organization, but this is not necessarily so, and, depending on the context, it may mean only a posses comitatus (q. v.). Chapin v. Ferry, 28 P. 754, 756, 3 Wash. 386, 15 L.R.A. 116.

ARMED NEUTRALITY. An attitude of neutrality between belligerents which the neutral state is prepared to maintain by armed force if necessary.

ARMED PEACE. A situation in which two or more nations, while actually at peace with each other, are armed for possible or probable hostilities.
ARMIGER. An armor-bearer; an esquire. A title of dignity belonging to gentlemen authorized to bear arms. Cowell. In its earlier meaning, a servant who carried the arms of a knight. A tenant by scutage; a servant or valet; applied, also, to the higher servants in convents. Spelman.

ARMING ONE'S SELF. Equipping one's self with higher servants in convents. Spelman.

ARMISCARA. An ancient mode of punishment, which was to carry a saddle at the back as a token of subjection. Spelman.

ARMISTICE. A suspending or cessation of hostilities between belligerent nations or forces for a considerable time. Dooley v. Johnson, 133 Cal. App. 459, 24 P.2d 540.

The term cannot properly be applied to agreements between a government on one side and rioters, brigands, and banditti on the other. O'Neill v. Central Leather Co., 87 Tex. Cr.R. 270, 220 S.W. 554.

ARMORUM APPELLATIONE, NON SOLUM SCUTA ET GLADII ET GALEZE, SED ET FUS-TE ET LAPIDES CONTINENTUR. Under the name of arms are included, not only shields and swords and helmets, but also clubs and stones. Co.Litt. 162.

ARMS. Anything that a man wears for his defense, or takes in his hands, or uses in his anger, to cast at or strike at another. Co.Litt. 161b, 162a; State v. Buzzard, 4 Ark. 18.

Arms, or coat of arms, signifies insignia, i. e. ensigns of honor, such as were formerly assumed by soldiers of fortune, and painted on their shields to distinguish them; or nearly the same as armorial bearings (q. v.).

ARMS, LAW OF. That law which gives precepts and rules concerning war; how to make and observe leagues and truce, to punish offenders in the camp, and such like. Cowell; Blount. Now more commonly called the "law of war." See, also, War.

ARMY. The armed forces of a nation intended for military service on land.

An "army" is a body of men whose business is war, while the "militia" is a body of men composed of citizens occupied temporarily in the pursuit of civil life, but organized by discipline and drill, and called into the field for temporary military service when the exigencies of the country require it. And see Brown v. Soldiers' Bonus Board, 44 R.I. 483, 116 A. 280, 281.

—Regular army. The permanent military establishment, which is maintained both in peace and war according to law. 10 U.S.C.A. § 3; State v. Moorhead, 102 Neb. 276, 167 N.W. 70, 71.

AROMATARIUS. A word formerly used for a grocer. 1 Vent. 142.

Thus, sheep branded "0" on the hip or side may be within a mortgage covering sheep described as branded "0" around the hip bone.

ARPEN, Arpent, Arpennus. A measure of land of uncertain quantity mentioned in Domeday and other old books; by some called an "acre," by others "half an acre," and by others a "furlong." Spelman; Cowell; Blount. Quoted in McMillan v. Aiken, 205 Ala. 35, 88 So. 135, 143.

A French measure of land, containing one hundred square perches, of eighteen feet each, or about an acre. But the quantity varied in different provinces. Spelman. An "arpent" is a land measure varying in dimension from .84 of an acre to 1404 acres and to 1.28 acres, accordingly as the arpenteur meant is an arpent de Paris, an arpent corn-moun, or an arpent d'ordonnance. Troll v. City of St. Louis, 257 Mo. 626, 168 S.W. 167, 171. In Louisiana, the terms "arpent" and "acre" are sometimes used interchangeably; but there is a considerable difference, the arpent being the square of 192 feet and the acre of 209 and a fraction. Randolph v. Sentilles, 110 La. 419, 34 So. 587.

ARPENDATOR. A measurer or surveyor of land. Cowell; Spelman.

ARRA. In the civil law. Earnest; earnest-money; evidence of a completed bargain. Used of a contract of marriage, as well as any other. Spelled, also, Arrha, Arrhce, Arce, Calvin. Cf. Arles.

ARRAIGN. In criminal practice. To bring a prisoner to the bar of the court to answer the matter charged upon him in the indictment. Ex parte Jeffcoat, 109 Fla. 207, 146 So. 827, 828. The arraignment (q. v.) of a prisoner consists of calling upon him by name, and reading to him the indictment, (in the English tongue,) and demanding of him whether he be guilty or not guilty, and entering his plea. State v. Voelpel, 213 Iowa 702, 239 N.W. 677, 679.

In old English law. To order, or set in order; to conduct in an orderly manner; to prepare for trial. To arraign an assise was to cause the tenant to be called to make the plaint, and to set the cause in such order as the tenant might be enforced to answer thereunto. Litt. § 442; Co. Litt. 262b.

ARRAIGNMENT. See Arraign.

ARRAIGNS, CLERK OF. In English law. An assistant to the clerk of assise.
ARRAMEUR. In old French law. An officer employed to superintend the loading of vessels, and the safe stowage of the cargo. 1 Pet.Adm.Append. XV.

ARRANGEMENT, DEED OF. A term used in England to express an assignment for the benefit of creditors.

ARRAS. In Spanish law. The donation which the husband makes to his wife, by reason or on account of marriage, and in consideration of the dote, or portion, which he receives from her. Miller v. Dunn, 62 Mo. 219. The property contributed by the husband ad sustinenda onera matrimonii (for bearing the expenses).

ARRAY. The whole body of jurors summoned to attend a court, as they are arrayed or arranged on the panel. Dane, Abr. Index; 1 Chit.Crim.Law, 536; Com.Dig. "Challenge," B. Durrah v. State, 44 Miss. 789. A ranking, or setting forth in order; the order in which jurors’ names are ranked in the panel containing them. Co.Litt. 156a; 3 Bl.Com. 359.

ARRAYER. An English military officer in the early part of the fifteenth century. His duties were similar to those of the modern Lord Lieutenant of a county.

ARREARS, or ARREARAGES. Money unpaid at the due time, as rent behind; the remainder due after payment of a part of an account; money in the hands of an accounting party. Board of Education of Glen Ellyn Tp. High School Dist. No. 87 v. Boger, 291 Ill. 191, 125 N.E. 768, 770. Indebtedness. State ex rel. City of South Euclid v. Zangerle, 145 Ohio St. 433, 62 N.E.2d 160, 162.

ARRECT. To accuse or charge with an offense. Arrestati, accused or suspected persons.

ARRENT. In old English law. To let or demise at a fixed rent. Particularly used with reference to the public domain or crown lands; as where a license was granted to inclose land in a forest with a low hedge and a ditch, under a yearly rent, or where an encroachment, originally a purpresture, was allowed to remain on the fixing and payment of a suitable compensation to the public for its maintenance.

ARREST. To deprive a person of his liberty by legal authority. Taking, under real or assumed authority, custody of another for the purpose of holding or detaining him to answer a criminal charge or civil demand. Ex parte Sherwood, 29 Tex.App. 334, 15 S.W. 812. Physical seizure of person by arresting officer or submission to officer’s authority and control is necessary to constitute an “arrest.” Thompson v. Boston Publ. Co., 285 Mass. 344, 189 N.E. 210, 213. It is a restraints however slight, on another’s liberty to come and go. Turney v. Rhodes, 42 Ga.App. 104, 155 S.E. 112. It is the taking, seizing or detaining the person of another, touching or putting hands upon him in the execution of process, or any act indicating an intention to arrest. U. S. v. Benner, Bald. 234, 239, Fed.Cas.No.14,568; State v. District Court of Eighth Judicial Dist. in and for Cascade County, 70 Mont. 378, 225 P. 1000, 1001; Hoppes v. State, 105 P.2d 433, 439, 70 Okl.Cr. 179.

As used in Bankruptcy Act, § 9 (11 USCA § 27), arrest includes ‘imprisonment.’ Ex parte Harrison, D.C.Mass., 272 F. 543, 344.

One of the means which the law gives the creditor to secure the person of his debtor while the suit is pending, or to compel him to give security for his appearance after judgment. La.Code Pr c. art. 210.

As ordinarily used, the terms arrest and attachment coincide in meaning to some extent; though in strictness, as a distinction, an arrest may be said to be the act resulting from the service of an attachment. And in the more extended sense which is sometimes given to attachment, including the act of taking, it would seem to differ from arrest in that it is more peculiarly applicable to a taking of property, while arrest is more commonly used in speaking of persons.

 Arrest is also applied in some instances to a seizure and detention of personal chattels, especially of ships and vessels; thus, in admiralty actions a ship or cargo is arrested when the marshal has served the writ in an action in rem. Pelham v. Rose, 9 Wall. 103, 19 L. Ed. 602.

Civil Practice
The apprehension of a person by virtue of a lawful authority to answer the demand against him in a civil action. Gentry v. Griffith, 27 Tex. 462.

Criminal Cases
The apprehending or detaining of the person in order to be forthcoming to answer an alleged or suspected crime. Ex parte Sherwood, 29 Tex.App. 334, 15 S.W. 812.

The word arrest is said to be more properly used in civil cases, and apprehension in criminal. Thus, a man is arrested under a capias ad respondendum, and apprehended under a warrant charging him with larceny.

Malicious Arrest
An arrest made willfully and without probable cause, but in the course of a regular proceeding.

Parol Arrest
One ordered by a judge or magistrate from the bench, without written complaint or other proceedings, of a person who is present before him, and which is executed on the spot; as in case of breach of the peace in open court.

Rearrest
Right of an officer to take without warrant one forcibly freeing himself after arrest. Gross v.

Second Arrest

The "second arrest" forbidden after discharge on habeas corpus means an imprisonment based on the same information and not under a new information followed by a lawful warrant. State v. Riley, 109 Minn. 437, 124 N.W. 13. See, also, Stair v. Heska Amone Congregation, 128 Tenn. 190, 159 S.W. 840, 841.

Warrant of Arrest

A written order issued and signed by a magistrate, directed to a peace officer or some other person specially named, and commanding him to arrest the body of a person named in it, who is accused of an offense. Brown v. State, 109 Ala. 70, 20 So. 103.

ARREST OF INQUEST. Pleading in arrest of taking the inquest upon a former issue, and showing cause why an inquest should not be taken.

ARREST OF JUDGMENT. The act of staying a judgment, or refusing to render judgment in an action at law and in criminal cases, after verdict, for some matter intrinsic appearing on the face of the record, which would render the judgment, if given, erroneous or reversible. 3 Bl. Comm. 393; 3 Steph. Comm. 628; 2 Tidd, Pr. 918; Speer v. Pierce, 18 Tenn. App. 351, 77 S.W. 2d 77, 78; State v. Ferguson, 165 Tenn. 61, 52 S.W. 2d 140.

It is the fact that a motion in arrest of judgment is based on some defect on the face of the record or pleadings which aids in distinguishing it from a motion for a new trial. Maddox Coffee Co. v. McHan, 22 Ga. App. 198, 95 S. E. 736. It differs also from a motion to set aside a judgment, in that a motion in arrest of judgment must be made during the term when the judgment was rendered. Love v. National Liberty Ins. Co., 157 Ga. 259, 121 S. E. 648, 650. A motion in arrest of judgment is practically a demurrer, People v. Cordisco, 77 Cal. App. 780, 246 P. 461, 462, and has been abolished in some jurisdictions. State v. Sharp, Mo. Sup., 300 S.W. 501.

ARRESTANDIS BONIS NE DISSIPENTUR. In old English law. A writ which lay for a person whose cattle or goods were taken by another, who during a contest was likely to make away with them, and who had not the ability to render satisfaction. Reg.Orig. 126.

ARRESTANDO IPSUM QUI PECUNIAI RECEPTUM. In old English law. A writ which issued for apprehending a person who had taken the king's prest money to serve in the wars, and then hid himself in order to avoid going.

ARRESTATIO. In old English law. An arrest (q. v.).

ARRESTEE. In Scotch law. The person in whose hands, the movables of another, or a debt due to another, are arrested by the creditor of the latter by the process of arrestment. 2 Kames, Eq. 173, 175.

If, in contempt of the arrestment, he make payment of the sum or deliver the goods arrested to the common debtor, he is not only liable criminally for breach of the arrestment, but he must pay the debt again to the arrestee; Erskine, Inst. 3, 6, 6.

ARRESTER. In Scotch law. One who sues out and obtains an arrestment of his debtor's goods or movable obligations. Erskine, Inst. 3. 6. 1.

ARRESTMENT. In Scotch law. Securing a criminal's person till trial, or that of a debtor till he give security judicio sisti. The order of a judge, by which he who is debtor in a movable obligation to the arrestee's debtor is prohibited to make payment or delivery till the debt due to the arrestee be paid or secured. Erskine, Inst. 3. 6. 1; 1. 2. 12.

ARRESTMENT JURISDICTIONIS FUNDANDI CAUSA. In Scotch law. A process to bring a foreigner within the jurisdiction of the courts of Scotland. The warrant attaches a foreigner's goods within the jurisdiction, and these will not be released unless caution or security be given.

ARRESTO FACTO SUPER BONIS MERCATORIUM ALIENIGENORUM. In old English law. A writ against the goods of aliens found within this kingdom, in recompense of goods taken from a denizen in a foreign country, after denial of restitution. Reg.Orig. 129. The ancient civilians called it "clarigatio," but by the moderns it is termed "reprisalia."

ARRET. Fr. A judgment, sentence, or decree of a court of competent jurisdiction.

The term is derived from the French law, and is used in Canada and Louisiana.

ARRETTED. Convened before a judge and charged with a crime.

Ad rectum malefactoriern is, according to Bracton, to have a malefactor forthcoming to be put on his trial.

Imputed or laid to one's charge; as, no folly may be arrested to one under age. Bracton, 1. 3, tr. 2, c. 10; Cunningham, Diet.; Cowell.

ARRHABO. In the civil law. Earnest; money given to bind a bargain. Calvin.

ARRILE. In the civil law. Money or other valuable things given by the buyer to the seller, for the purpose of evidencing the contract; earnest. See Arra; Pot-de-vin.

Arrhe sponsolitice were the earnest or present given by one betrothed to the other at the betrothal.

ARRIAGE AND CARRIAGE. In English and Scotch law. Indefinite services formerly demandable from tenants, but prohibited by statute, (20 Geo. II, c. 50, §§ 21, 22.) Holthouse; Ersk.Inst. 2, 6, 42.
ARRIER

ARRIER BAN. In feudal law. A second summons to join the lord, addressed to those who had neglected the first. A summons of the inferiors or vassals of the lord. Spelman, Gloss. See, also, Arierban.

ARRIERE FIEF, or FEE. In feudal law. A fief or fee dependent on a superior one; an inferior fief granted by a vassal of the king, out of the fief held by him. Montesq. Esprit des Lois, liv. 31, cc. 26, 32.

ARRIERE VASSAL. In feudal law. The vassal of a vassal.

ARRIVAL. In marine insurance, arrival of a vessel means an arrival for purposes of business, requiring an entry and clearance and stay at the port so long as to require some of the acts connected with business, and not merely touching at a port for advices, or to ascertain the state of the market, or being driven in by an adverse wind and sailing again as soon as it changes. F. S. Royster Guano Co. v. U. S., C.C.A.Va., 18 F.2d 469, 470.

"A vessel arrives at a port of discharge when she comes, or is brought to a particular place where it is intended to discharge her, and where is the usual and customary place of discharge. When a vessel is insured to one or two ports, and sails for one, the risk terminates on her arrival there. If a vessel is insured to a particular port of discharge, and is destined to discharge cargo successively at two different wharves, docks, or places, within that port, each being a distinct place for the delivery of cargo, the risk ends when she has been moored twenty-four hours in safety at the first place. But if she is destined to one or more places for the delivery of cargo, and delivery or discharge of a portion of her cargo is necessary, not by reason of her having reached any destined place of delivery, but as a necessary and usual nautical measure, to enable her to reach such usual and destined place of delivery, she cannot properly be considered as having arrived at the usual and customary place of discharge, when she is at anchor for the purpose only of using such means as will better enable her to reach it. If she cannot get to the destined and usual place of discharge in the port because she is too deep, and must be lightered to get there, and, to aid in prosecuting the voyage, cargo is thrown overboard or put into lighters, such discharge does not make that the place of arrival; it is only a stopping-place in the voyage. When the vessel is insured to a particular port of discharge, arrival within the limits of the harbor does not terminate the risk, if the place is not one where vessels are discharged and voyages completed. The policy covers the vessel through the port navigation, as well as on the open sea, until she reaches the destined place." Simpson v. Insurance Co., Holmes, 137, Fed.Cas.No.12,886.

"Arrival of ship," within meaning of bills of lading requiring claims to be filed, must be construed, where M/delivery is charged, as meaning date when cargo is discharged or off-ed for delivery. The Cardiganshire, D.C. Cal., 9 F.2d 416, 420. "Arrival" within the immigration laws means compliance with the requirements entitling an alien to enter. See 8 USCA §§ 106, 380. In re Kempson, D. C.Wash., 14 F.2d 668, 669.

ARRIVE. To come to a particular place; to reach a particular or certain place. Thompson v. U. S., 1 Brock. 411, Fed.Cas.No.13,985; 8 B. & C. 119.

The words "arrive" and "enter" are not always synonymous; there certainly may be an arrival without an actual entry or attempt to enter. United States v. Open Boat, 5 Mason, 120, 132, Fed.Cas.No.15,967. And where a vessel from a foreign port, laden with liquors, anchored within four leagues of the coast, and the master without a permit therefor allowed part of the cargo to be taken away, with the intention of so disposing of the entire cargo, the vessel had "arrived" within the meaning of Tariff Act 1922, § 586 (19 USCA § 488). The Cherie, C.C.A.Me., 13 F.2d 992, 993.

ARROGATION. In the civil law. The adoption of a person who was of full age or sui juris. 1 Browne, Civil & Adm.Law, 119; Dig. 1, 7, 5; Inst. 1, 11, 3. Reinders v. Koppelmann, 68 Mo. 497, 30 Am.Rep. 802.

ARRONDISSEMENT. In France, one of the subdivisions of a department.

ARSZE ET PENSATIE. Burnt and weighed. A term formerly applied to money tested or assayed by fire and by weighing.

ARENAS. Store-houses for arms; dock-yards, magazines, and other military stores.

ARSER IN LE MAIN. Fr. Burning in the hand. The punishment by burning or branding the left thumb of lay offenders who claimed and were allowed the benefit of clergy, so as to distinguish them in case they made a second claim of clergy. 5 Coke, 51; 4 Bl.Comm. 367; Termes de la Ley.

ARSON. At common law, the malicious burning of the house or outhouse of another. 4 Bla.Com. 220; Thacker v. Commonwealth, 219 Ky. 789, 294 S.W. 491, 492; State v. Berry, 188 La. 612, 177 So. 684, 686; Commonwealth v. Cooper, 264 Mass. 378, 162 N.E. 733, 734.

At common law burning buildings other than dwelling houses is not arson. Sawyer v. State, 100 Fla. 1603, 132 So. 188, 193. Part of building ignited sufficient to establish corpus delicti. State v. Caliendo, 4 A.2d 837, 840, 136 Me. 572, 125 A. 739.

At common law it must be the house of another. 1 Bish. Cr.Law, § 389; State v. Beckwith, Me., 198 A. 739, 742. But it is now an offense to burn one's own house under the statutes of New Hampshire, Arkansas, California, and other states. State v. Blumenthal, 136 Ark. 532, 203 S.W. 36, 37, L.R.A.1918E, 482.

Whether "house" or "dwelling house" be used in statute defining the crime may be of importance in determining whether occupancy is or is not an element. 1 Hale, P.C. 566, 567; Commonwealth v. Barney, 64 Mass. (10 Cush.) 428. Some states have expressly eliminated occupancy as an element, State v. Snover, 101 N.J.Law, 543, 126 A. 850; P.L. 1919, p. 257; while others have made it a distinction between degrees of the crime, People v. Abrams, 174 Cal. 172, 162 P. 395, 396.

In several states, this crime is divided into arson in the first, second, and third degrees, the first degree including the burning of an inhabited dwelling-house in the nighttime; the second degree, the burning (at night) of a building other than a dwelling-house, but so situated with reference to a dwelling-house as to endanger it; the third degree, the burning of any building or structure not the subject of arson in the first or second degree, or the burning of property, his own or another's with intent to defraud or prejudice an insurer thereof. State v. Jessup, 42 Kan. 422, 22 P. 627.

ARSURA. The trial of money by heating it after it was coined. The loss of weight occasioned by this process. A pound was said to burn so many pence (tot ardere denarios) as it lost by the fire. Spelman. The term is now obsolete.

ART. Systematic application of knowledge or skill in effecting a desired result; also an employment, occupation or business requiring such knowledge or skill; a craft; as industrial arts.

In the law of patents, this term means a useful art or manufacture which is beneficial and which is described with exactness in its mode of operation. Such an art can be protected only in the mode and to the extent thus described. Jacobs v. Baker, 7 Wall. 297, 19 L.Ed. 200. It is synonymous with process or method when used to produce a useful result, and may be either a force applied, a mode of application, or the specific treatment of a specific object, and must produce physical effects. Emmett v. Metals Processing Corporation, C.C.A.Ariz., 118 F.2d 796, 798.

—Prior Art. In patent law, something that a man skilled in the art may by diligence discover. Davis-Bournonville Co. v. Alexander Milburn Co., C.C.A. N.Y., 1 F.2d 227, 231.

In seduction cases, "art" means the skillful and systematic arrangement of means for the attainment of a desired end. Hayes v. State, 19 Ala. App. 241, 96 So. 647.

ART, WORDS OF. Words used in a technical sense; words scientifically fit to carry the sense assigned them.

ART AND PART. In Scotch law. The offense committed by one who aids and assists the commission of a crime, but who is not the principal or chief actor in its actual commission. An accessory. A principal in the second degree. Paters. Comp.

ARTESIAN BASIN. A body of water more or less compact, moving through soils with more or less resistance. Justesen v. Olsen, 40 P.2d 802, 810, 86 Utah, 158.

ARTESIAN WELL. A well bored through impermeable strata into a subterranean body of water which, being under pressure, rises naturally to the surface. Loosely, any deep bored well. 6 C.J.S. p. 773.

ARTHEL, ARDHEL, OR ARDELIO. To avouch; as if a man were taken with stolen goods in his possession he was allowed a lawful arhel, e., vouchee, to clear him of the felony; but provision was made against it by 28 Hen. VIII, c. 6. Blount,

In English ecclesiastical law. A complaint exhibited in the ecclesiastical court by way of libel. The different parts of a libel, responsive allegation, or counter allegation in the ecclesiastical courts. 3 Bl.Comm. 109.

ARTICLED CLERK. In English law. A clerk bound to serve in the office of a solicitor in consideration of being instructed in the profession. This is the general acceptation of the term; but it is said to be equally applicable to other trades and professions. Reg. v. Reeve, 4 Q.B. 212.

ARTICLES. 1. A connected series of propositions; a system of rules. The subdivisions of a document, code, book, etc. A specification of distinct matters agreed upon or established by authority or requiring judicial action. 2. A statute; as having its provisions articulatedly expressed under distinct heads. Several of the ancient English statutes were called "articles" (articuli.) 3. A system of rules established by legal authority; as articles of war, articles of the navy, articles of faith. (See infra.) 4. A contractual document executed between parties, containing stipulations or terms of agreement; as articles of agreement, articles of partnership, 5. A naval term meaning employment contract. South Chicago Coal & Dock Co. v. Bassett, C.C.A. Ill., 104 F.2d 522, 526. 6. In chancery practice. A formal written statement of objections filed by a party, after depositions have been taken, showing ground for discrediting the witnesses. 7. In ecclesiastical law. A complaint in the form of a libel exhibited to an ecclesiastical court. See Article.

ARTICLES APPROBATORY, In Scotch law. That part of the proceedings which corresponds to the answer to the charge in an English bill in chancery. Paters. Comp.

ARTICLES IMPROBATORY. In Scotch law. Articulate averments setting forth the facts relied upon. Bell. That part of the proceedings which corresponds to the charge in an English bill in chancery to set aside a deed. Paters. Comp. The answer is called "articles approbatory."

ARTICLES, LORDS OF. A committee of the Scottish parliament, which, in the mode of its election, and by the nature of its powers, was calculated to increase the influence of the crown, and to confer upon it a power equivalent to that of a negative before debate. This system appeared inconsistent with the freedom of parliament, and at the revolution the convention of estates declared it a grievance, and accordingly it was suppressed by Act 1690, c. 3. Wharton.

ARTICLES OF AGREEMENT. A written memorandum of the terms of an agreement. It is a common practice for persons to enter into articles of agreement, preparatory to the execution of a formal deed, whereby it is stipulated that one of the parties shall convey to the other certain lands, or release his right to them, or execute some other disposition of them.

When persons form voluntary associations for religious, literary, social, or other purposes, and adopt rules by which to regulate their conduct and measure their rights, by the provisions of which members may be admitted and expelled, such rules are articles of agreement, to which all who have become members are parties, and by which they must be governed in their relations to the associations. Brown v. Harris 'County Medical Soc., Tex.Civ.App., 19-1 S. W. 1179, 1180.

ARTICLES OF ASSOCIATION, OR OF INCORPORATION. Articles subscribed by the members of a joint-stock company or corporation organized under a general law, and which create the corporate union between them. Such articles are in the nature of a partnership agreement, and commonly specify the form of organization, amount of capital, kind of business to be pursued, location of the company, etc. Articles of association are to be distinguished from a charter, in that the latter is a grant of power from the sovereign or the legislature.

ARTICLES OF CONFEDERATION. The name of the instrument embodying the compact made between the thirteen original states of the Union, before the adoption of the present constitution.

ARTICLES OF FAITH. In English law. The system of faith of the Church of England, more commonly known as the "Thirty-Nine Articles."

ARTICLES OF IMPEACHMENT. A formal written allegation of the causes for impeachment; answering the same office as an indictment in an ordinary criminal proceeding.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION. The instrument by which a private corporation is formed and organized under general corporation laws. People v. Golden Gate Lodge, 128 Cal. 257, 60 P. 865. See Articles of Association.

ARTICLES OF PARTNERSHIP. A written agreement by which the parties enter into a copartnership upon the terms and conditions therein stipulated.

ARTICLES OF RELIGION. In English ecclesiastical law. Commonly called the "Thirty-Nine Articles;" a body of divinity drawn up by the convocation in 1562, and confirmed by James I.

ARTICLES OF ROUP. In Scotch law. The terms and conditions under which property is sold at auction.

ARTICLES OF SET. In Scotch law. An agreement for a lease. Paters. Comp.

ARTICLES OF THE CLERGY. The title of a statute passed in the ninth year of Edward II. for the purpose of adjusting and settling the great questions of cognizance then existing between the ecclesiastical and temporal courts. 2 Reeve, Hist. Eng.Law, 291-296.

ARTICLES OF THE NAVY. A system of rules prescribed by act of parliament for the government of the English navy; also, in the United States, there are articles for the government of the navy.

ARTICLES OF THE PEACE. A complaint made or exhibited to a court by a person who makes oath that he is in fear of death or bodily harm from some one who has threatened or attempted to do him injury. The court may thereupon order the person complained of to find sureties for the peace, and, in default, may commit him to prison. 4 Bl.Comm. 255.

ARTICLES OF UNION, In English law. Articles agreed to, A.D. 1707, by the parliaments of England and Scotland, for the union of the two kingdoms. They were twenty-five in number. 1 BL Comm. 96.

ARTICLES OF WAR. Codes framed for the government of a nation's army or navy.

ARTICULATE ADJUDICATION, In Scotch law. Where the creditor holds several distinct debts, a separate adjudication for each claim is thus called.

ARTICULATEDLY. Article by article; by distinct clauses or articles; by separate propositions.

ARTICULI. Lat. Articles; items or heads. A term applied to some old English statutes, and occasionally to treatises.

ARTICULI CLERI. "Articles of the clergy" (q. v.). See Circumspecte Agatis, ARTICULI DE MONETA. Articles concerning money, or the currency. The title of a statute passed in the twentieth year of Edward I. 2 Reeve, Hist.Eng.Law, 228; Crabb, Eng.Law (Amer. Ed.) 167.

ARTICULI MAGNAE CHARTAE. The preliminary articles, forty-nine in number, upon which the Magna Charta was founded.

ARTICULI SUPER CHARTAS. Articles upon the charters. The title of a statute passed in the twenty-eighth year of Edward I. st. 3, confirming or enlarging many particulars in Magna Charta, and the Charta de Foresta, and appointing a method for enforcing the observance of them, and for the punishment of offenders. 2 Reeve, Hist. Eng.Law, 103, 233.

ARTICULO MORTIS. (Or more commonly in articulo mortis.) At the point of death; in the article of death, which means at the moment of death; in the last struggle or agony. Succession of Villa, 132 La. 714, 61 So. 765, 770.

A representation contrary to a well-known fact, such as a representation that pregnancy will not result from natural sexual intercourse, will not constitute artifice, deception, or promises.

ARTIFICER. One who buys goods in order to reduce them, by his own art or industry, into other forms, and then to sell them. Lansdale v. Bra-sher, 3 T.B.Mon. (Ky.) 335.

One who is actually and personally engaged or employed to do work of a mechanical or physical character, not including one who takes contracts for labor to be performed by others. Ingram v. Barnes, 7 El. & Bl. 135; Chawner v. Cummings, 8 Q.B. 321.

One who is master of his art, and whose employment consists chiefly in manual labor. Wharton; Cunningham.

ARTIFICIAL. Is in opposition to the word "natural". California Casualty Indemnity Exchange v. Industrial Accident Commission of California, 13 Cal.2d 529, 90 P.2d 289; Created by art, or by law; existing only by force of or in contemplation of law.

ARTIFICIAL FORCE. In patent law. A natural force so transformed in character or energies by human power as to possess new capabilities of action; this transformation of a natural force into a force practically new involves a true inventive act. Wall v. Leck, 60 Fed. 555, 13 C.C.A. 630.

ARTIFICIAL MEMBER OF BODY. A substitute for, and not a mere aid to, a natural part, organ, limb, or other separable part of body. California Casualty Indemnity Exchange v. Industrial Accident Commission, Cal.App., 82 P.2d 1115, 1116.

ARTIFICIAL PRESUMPTIONS. Also called "legal presumptions," those which derive their force and effect from the law, rather than their natural tendency to produce belief. 3 Starkie, Ev. 1238. Gulick v. Loder, 13 N.J.Law, 72, 23 Am.Dec. 711.

ARTIFICIAL SUCCESSION. The succession between predecessors and successors in a corpora-tion aggregate or sole. Thomas v. Dakin, 22 Wend. (N.Y.) 100.

ARTIFICIAL WATER COURSE. See Water Course.

ARTIFICIALLY. Technically; scientifically; using terms of art. A will or contract is described as "artificially" drawn if it is couched in apt and technical phrases and exhibits a scientific arrangement.

ARTIFICIALLY DEVELOPED WATER. "Artificially developed water," to which one may acquire right superior to adjudicated rights of earlier appropriators of natural waters of stream into which he turns it, is water produced and contributed by him, which would not have reached stream if left to flow in accordance with natural laws. C.L. § 1766. In re Nix, 45 P.2d 176, 178, 96 Colo. 540.

ARUBA. An old English law term, signifying a day's work in plowing.

ARVIL–SUPPER. A feast or entertainment made at a funeral in the north of England; arvil bread is bread delivered to the poor at funeral solemnities, and arvil, arval, or arfal, the burial or funeral rites. Cowell.

AS or A/S or A/s. Account sales; also after sight, at sight.

AS. Lat. In the Roman and civil law. A pound weight; and a coin originally weighing a pound, called also "libra") divided into twelve parts, called "unciae."

The parts were reckoned (as may be seen in the law, Servum de heredibus, Inst. lib. xiii. Pandect) as follows: unci, 1 ounce; sextans, 2 ounces; triens, 3 ounces; quadrans, 4 ounces; quincunx, 5 ounces; semis, 6 ounces; septunx, 7 ounces; bes, 8 ounces; dodrans, 9 ounces; dextans, 10 ounces; deunx, 11 ounces.

Any integral sum, subject to division in certain proportions.

Frequently applied in the civil law to inheritances; the whole inheritance being termed "as," and its several proportions parts "sextans," "quadrans," etc. Burrill.

The term "as," and the multiples of its uncia, were also used to denote the rates of interest. 2 Bl.Comm. 462, note m.

AS. Used as an adverb, etc., means like, similar to, of the same kind, in the same manner, in the manner in which. Van Pelt v. Hilliard, 75 Fla. 792, 78 So. 693, 697, L.R.A.1918E 639; Price v. Skystead, 69 Mont. 453, 222 P. 1059, 1060. It may also have the meaning of because, since, or it being the case that; State v. Rudman, 126 Me. 177, 136 A. 817, 819; in the character or under the name of; State v. Blue, 134 La. 561, 64 So. 411, 414; when; Shane Bros. & Wilson Co. v. Barrett,
AS

AS AGAINST; AS BETWEEN. These words contrast the relative position of two persons, with a tacit reference to a different relationship between one of them and a third person. For instance, the temporary bailee of a chattel is entitled to it as between himself and a stranger, or as against a stranger; reference being made by this form of words to the rights of the bailor. Wharton.

AS IS. A sale of goods by sample "as is" requires that the goods be of the kind and quality represented, even though they be in a damaged condition. Schwartz v. Kohn, Sup., 155 N.Y.S. 547, 548. Use of expression in sales agreement that goods are sold "as is" implies that buyer is taking delivery of goods in some way defective and upon express condition that he must trust to his own examination. Roby Motors Co. v. Cade, La.App., 158 So. 840, 841.

AS LONG AS. The phrase "as long as life doth last," in a will, is tantamount to "forever." In re Brown, 119 Kan. 402, 239 P. 747.

AS OF COURSE. Under a statute providing that an attachment will be dissolved, "as of course," upon defendant's entering his appearance and filing his answer, the quoted words mean when asked by defendant. Pitman v. West, 198 Mo.App. 92, 199 S.W. 756, 757.

AS PER. "As per" is a sort of law and business term which is hardly susceptible of literal translation, but which is commonly understood to mean, "in accordance with," or "in accordance with the terms of," or "as by the contract authorized." Continental Bank & Trust Co. v. Times Pub. Co., 142 La. 209, 76 So. 612, 617, L.R.A.1918B, 632.

AS SOON AS. This term has a relative meaning according to the thing which is to be done. Eichelbaum & Smith v. Bishop, 75 Pa.Super.Ct. 528, 529. It often denotes merely a reasonable time; Childers v. Brown, 81 Or. 1, 158 P. 166, 168, Ann. Cas.1918D, 170; and it may be the equivalent of "whenever"; People v. Merhige, 180 N.W. 418, 422, 212 Mich. 601. Sometimes it means immediately. Columbia Digger Co. v. Rector, D.C.S.D., 215 F. 618, 630.

AS SOON AS MAY BE. Promptly and with due diligence; as soon as was reasonably possible; within a reasonable time; as soon as possible; forthwith; as soon as they conveniently can. George A. Fuller Co. v. Jersey City, 21 N.J.Misc. 38, 29 A.2d 720, 722.

AS SOON AS POSSIBLE. When used with reference to the time of performing some act, such as the shipment of goods, these words mean merely within a reasonable time. Birmingham Paper Co. v. Holder, 24 Ga.App. 630, 101 S.E. 692; National Cash Register Co. v. McCann, 140 N.Y.S. 916, 920, 80 Misc. 165 ("as soon as possible" requires a much more speedy fulfillment than within a reasonable time).

These words are not synonymous with "as soon as possible"; they mean ordinarily as soon as reasonably can be expected. Texas Employers' Ins. Ass'n v. Mummey, Tex. Civ.App., 200 S.W. 251, 253; or "in due time," Texas Employers' Ins. Ass'n v. Mummey, Tex.Civ.App., 200 S.W. 251, 252. But the words have also been construed as practically synonymous with speedily. Roberson v. Weaver, 145 Ga. 620, 89 S.E. 769, 772.

AS SPEEDILY AS POSSIBLE. Means within reasonable time or without unreasonable delay, having regard to all the circumstances of the case and the things to be done. Tatum v. Levi, 117 Cal. App. 83, 3 P.2d 963, 967.

AS SUCH. When used to give some example of a rule, is never exclusive of other cases which that rule is made to embrace. Dinnat v. Succession of Lewis, 8 La.App. 820, 821.

ASCEND. To go up; to pass up or upwards; to go or pass in the ascending line. 4 Kent, Comm. 393, 397.

ASCENDANTS. Persons with whom one is related in the ascending line; one's parents, grandparents, great-grandparents, etc.

ASCENDIENTES. In Spanish law. Ascendants; ascending heirs; heirs in the ascending line. Schm.Civil Law, 259.

ASCENT. Passage upwards; the transmission of an estate from the ancestor to the heir in the ascending line. See 4 Kent, Comm. 393, 397.

ASCRPTITIUS (or ASCRPTITIUS). In Roman law. A foreigner who had been registered and naturalized in the colony in which he resided. Cod. 11, 47.
A man bound to the soil but not a slave. 2 Holdsw.Hist.E.L. 217. See Adscriptitii.

ASCUN, or ASCUNS. L. Fr. Any; any one; some. Adams Gloss.

ASESINATO. In Spanish law, murder. The term is said to be derived from the "assassins" of Syria. Escriche Diccionario. The offense corresponds closely to the common-law crime of murder in the first degree. U. S. v. Alias, 18 Philippine 453, 455; U. S. v. Pico, 18 Philippine 386, 388.

ASEXUALIZATION. See Vasectomy.

ASK. In an affidavit wherein affiant asks that a cause be reinstated and set down for trial, "asks" is practically synonymous with "moves." Harris v. Chicago House-Wrecking Co., 314 Ill. 500, 145 N.E. 666, 669.

ASPECT. View; object; possibility. Implies the existence of alternatives. Used in the phrases "bill with a double aspect" and "contingency with a double aspect."

ASPERSIONS. "Aspersions" may mean the making of calumnious report or may mean nothing more than criticism or censure. Fitts v. Davis, 269 F. 1018, 1019, 50 App.D.C. 234.

To constitute "asportation," the thing taken must have been in entire or absolute possession of taker. Adams v. Commonwealth, 153 Ky. 88, 154 S.W. 381, 44 L.R.A.,N.S., 637. But goods need not be removed from owner's premises, but act of thief in putting property into sack which he carries is sufficient. 21 Okl.St.Anns. 8 1701. Brinkley v. State, 60 Okl.Cr. 106, 61 P.2d 1023, 1025. The slightest removal of goods from the place where the owner placed them or wanted them to be is sufficient. Driggers v. State, 118 So. 20, 21, 96 Fla. 232.

ASPORTAVIT. He carried away. Sometimes used as a noun to denote a carrying away. An "asportavit of personal chattels." 2 H.B1. 4.

ASSART. In English law. The offense committed in the forest, by pulling up the trees by the roots that are thickets and coverts for deer, and making the ground plain as arable land. It differs from waste, in that waste is the cutting down of coverts which may grow again, whereas assart is the plucking them up by the roots and utterly destroying them, so that they can never afterward grow. This is not an offense if done with license to convert forest into tillage ground. Consult Manwood’s Forest Laws, pt. I, p. 171. Wharton. See Essarter.

ASSART RENTS. Rents paid to the Crown for assarted lands.

ASSASSINATION. Murder committed for hire, without provocation or cause of resentment given to the murderer by the person upon whom the crime is committed. Ersk.Inst. 4, 4, 45. A murder committed treacherously or by stealth or surprise, or by lying in wait. Sorrell v. State, 135 Tex.Cr.R. 535, 120 S.W.2d 1058, 1059.

ASSATH. An ancient custom in Wells, by which a person accused of crime could clear himself by the oaths of three hundred men. It was abolished by St. 1 Hen. v. c. 6. Cowell; Spelman.

AssAxaz. An intentional, unlawful offer of corporal injury to another by force, or force unlawfully directed toward person of another, under such circumstances as create well-founded fear of imminent peril, coupled with apparent present ability to execute attempt, if not prevented. State v. Staw, 97 N.J.L. 349, 116 A. 425; Naler v. State, 148 So. 880, 25 Ala.App. 486.

Intention to harm is of the essence. Raefeldt v. Koenig, 152 Wis. 459, 140 N.W. 56, 57, L.R.A.1918E, 1052; but general malice or recklessness is sufficient, State v. Fine, 328 Mo. 19, 121 S.W.2d 578, 580. It is also the essence of Wit. People v. Dong Pok Yip, 164 Cal. 143, 127 P. 1031,
ASSAULT WITH INTENT TO COMMIT ROBBERY. Involves an assault as well as an intent to commit robbery. Foss v. State, 36 Ohio App. 417, 173 N.E. 296, 297.

ASSAULT WITH INTENT TO COMMIT MURDER. To constitute this assault and specific intent to kill, actuated by malice aforethought, must concur. Perez v. State, 114 Tex.Cr.R. 473, 22 S.W.2d 309, 310; Griffin v. State, 177 S.E. 511, 50 Ga.App. 213.

ASSAULT WITH INTENT TO COMMIT RAPE. Is constituted by the existence of the facts which bring the offense within the definition of an assault, coupled with an intention to commit the crime of rape. Steptoe v. State, 133 Tex.Cr.R. 194, 115 S.W.2d 916, 917; State v. Jackson, 200 La. 432, 8 So.2d 285, 286.

ASSAULT WITH INTENT TO COMMIT ROBBERY. Involves an assault as well as an intent to commit robbery. Foss v. State, 36 Ohio App. 417, 173 N.E. 296, 297.

Secret Assault
Under a North Carolina statute, to warrant conviction for malicious, "secret assault," state must prove all essential elements of crime, namely, malice, use of deadly weapon in secret manner, with intent to kill. State v. Kline, 190 N.C. 177, 129 S.E. 417, 418.

It is not essential, however, that the person assaulted be unconscious of the presence of his adversary, though the purpose of such adversary must not be known. State v. Oxendine, 187 N.C. 658, 122 S.E. 568, 571.

Aggravated Assault
One committed with the intention of committing some additional crime, or one attended with circumstances of peculiar outrage or atrocity. This class includes assault with a dangerous or deadly weapon; Brinkley v. State, 82 Tex.Cr.R. 150, 198 S.W. 940; assault upon infants or females, if it create a sense of shame; Wren v. State, 27 Ariz. 491, 232 P. 398; and assault of lust, meaning an assault, less than felonious, with intent to have improper sexual connection; State v. Eslick, Mo.App., 216 S.W. 974, 975.

ASSAY. The proof or trial, by chemical experiments, of the purity or fineness of metals,—particularly of the precious metals, gold and silver. West v. State, 140 Tex.Cr.R. 493, 145 S.W.2d 580, 584.

A trial of weights and measures by a standard; as by the constituted authorities, clerks of markets, etc. Reg.Orig. 280.

ASSAY OFFICE. The staff of persons by whom (or the building or department in which) the process of assaying gold and silver, required by government, incidental to maintaining the coinage, is conducted.

ASSAYER. One whose business is to make assays of the precious metals. West v. State, 140 Tex.Cr.R. 493, 145 S.W.2d 580, 584.

ASSAYER OF THE KING. An officer of the royal mint, appointed by St. 2 Hen. VI. c. 12, who received and tested the bullion taken in for coin; also called "assayator regis." Cowell; Termes de la Ley.

ASSECURARE. To assure, or make secure by pledges, or any solemn interposition of faith. Cowell; Spelman.

ASSESSMENT. In Scotch law. An old term, used indiscriminately to signify a lease or feu-right. Bell; Ersk.Inst. 2, 6, 20.

ASSEMBLE. When applied to a machine, "assemble" means to collect or gather together the parts and place them in their proper relation to each other to constitute the machine. Citizens' Vat. Bank v. Bucheit, 14 Ala.App. 511, 71 So. 82, 38.

&ASSEMBLY. The concourse or meeting together of a considerable number of persons at the same place. Also the persons so gathered.

Popular assemblies are those where the people meet to deliberate upon their rights; these are guaranteed by the constitution. Const. U.S. Amend. art. 1.

Political assemblies are those required by the constitution and laws: for example, the general assembly.

The lower or more numerous branch of the legislature in many of the states is also called the "Assembly" or "House of Assembly," but the term seems to be an appropriate one to designate any political meeting required to be held by law.

ASSEMBLY GENERAL. The highest ecclesiastical court in Scotland, composed of a representation of the ministers and elders of the church, regulated by Act 5th Assem. 1694.

ASSEMBLY, UNLAWFUL. In criminal law. The assembling of three or more persons together to do an unlawful act, who separate without actually doing it, or making any motion towards it. 3 Inst. 176; 4 Bl. Comm. 146. It differs from a riot or rout, because in each of the latter cases there is some act done besides the simple meeting.

ASSENT. Compliance; approval of something done; a declaration of willingness to do something in compliance with a request. Norton v. Davis, 83 Tex. 32, 18 S.W. 430; Appeal of Pittsburgh, 115 Pa. 4, 7 A. 778; To approve, ratify and confirm. People v. Consolidated Indemnity Co., 83 Tex. 32, 18 S.W. 430; Appeal of Pitts.

ASSESS. To ascertain; fix the value of. State ex rel. Ambrose v. Trimble, 304 Mo. 533, 263 S.W. 840, 842. In re Calhoun Beach Holding Co., 205 Minn. 582, 287 N.W. 317, 322. To fix the amount of the damages or the value of the thing to be ascertained. New Orleans Terminal Co. v. Dixie Rendering, La.App., 179 So. 98, 100. To impose a pecuniary payment upon persons or property; People v. Priest, 169 N.Y. 435, 62 N.E. 568. To ascertain, adjust, and settle the respective shares to be contributed by several persons toward an object beneficial to them all, in proportion to the benefit received.

In connection with taxation of property, means to make a valuation and appraisal of property, usually in connection with listing of property liable to taxation, and implies the exercise of discretion on the part of officials charged with duty of assessing, including the listing or inventory of property involved, determination of extent of physical property, and placing of a value thereon. Montana-Dakota Power Co. v. Weeks, D.C.N.D., 8 F.Supp. 935, 936. To tax. Johnson City v. Clinchfield R. Co., 163 Tenn. 332, 43 S.W. 2d 386, 387.

To adjust or fix the proportion of a tax which each person, of several liable to it, has to pay; to apportion a tax among several; to distribute taxation in a proportion founded on the proportion of burden and benefit. Seymour v. Peters, 67 Mich. 415, 35 N.W. 62. To calculate the rate and amount of taxes. Flanigan v. Police Jury of Jackson Parish, 145 La. 613, 82 So. 722, 726.

"Assess" is sometimes used as synonymous with "levy"; Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. State Board of Taxes and Assessment, 101 N.J.Law. 298, 128 A. 432, 433; and is sometimes distinguished therefrom; City of Portland v. Portland Ry. Light & Power Co., 80 Or. 271, 156 P. 1058, 1064.

ASSESSED VALUATION. Value on each unit of which a prescribed amount must be paid as property taxes. In re Calhoun Beach Holding Co., 205 Minn. 582, 287 N.W. 317, 322.

ASSESSMENT. In a general sense, the process of ascertaining and adjusting the shares respectively to be contributed by several persons towards a common beneficial object according to the benefit received.

Taxation

The listing and valuation of property for the purpose of apportioning a tax upon it, either according to value alone or in proportion to benefit received. Also determining the share of a tax to be paid by each of many persons; or apportioning the entire tax to be levied among the different taxable persons, establishing the proportion due from each. Town of Albertville v. Hooper, 196 Ala. 642, 72 So. 258. Northwestern Imp. Co. v. Henneford, 184 Wash. 502, 51 P.2d 1083, 1085. Iowa Nat. Bank. v. Stewart, 214 Iowa 1229, 232 N.W. 445, 451. It fixes the liability of the taxpayer, and ascertains the facts and furnishes the data for the proper preparation of the tax rolls. Dallas Joint Stock Land Bank of Dallas v. State, Tex.Civ.App., 118 S.W.2d 941, 942.

"Assessment" and "levy" are frequently used interchangeably. Huyler v. Huyler's, 44 N.Y.S.2d 255, 257. Though properly speaking it does not include the levy of taxes. Commissioner of Internal Revenue v. Patrick Cudahy Family Co., C.C.A.7, 102 F.2d 930, 932. Assessment is also popularly used as a synonym for taxation in general, the authoritative imposition of a rate or duty to be paid, but in its technical signification it is only taxation for a special purpose or local improvement, local taxation, as distinguished from general taxation; taxation on principle of apportionment according to the relation between burden and benefit; whole taxes are impositions for purpose of general revenue. Collister v. Kovanda, 51 Ohio App. 43, 194 N.E.2d 307; Home Owners' Loan Corporation v. Tyson, 133 Ohio St. 184, 12 N.E.2d 478, 480; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Town of Ahoskie, 192 N.C. 258, 134 S.E. 653, 654.

An assessment is doubtless a tax, but the term implies something more; it implies a tax of a particular kind, predicated upon the principle of equivalents, or benefits which are peculiar to the persons or property charged therewith, and which are said to be assessed or appraised, according to the measure or proportion of such equivalents; whereas a simple tax is imposed for the purpose of supporting the government generally, without reference to any special advantage which may be supposed to accrue to the persons taxed. Taxes must be levied, without discrimination, equally upon all the subjects of property; whilst assessments are only levied upon lands, or some other specific property, the subjects of the supposed benefits; to repay which the assessment is levied. In re Walker River Irr. Dist., 44 Nev. 321, 195 P. 327, 330.

Corporations

Installments of the money subscribed for shares of stock, called for from the subscribers by the directors, from time to time as the company requires money, are called "assessments," or, in England, "calls." Water Co. v. Superior Court, 92 Cal. 47, 28 Pac. 54, 27 Am.St.Rep. 91; Spangler v. Railroad Co., 21 Ill. 278; Stewart Publishing Co., 1 Wash.St. 521, 20 Pac. 605. While the terms "call" and "assessment" are generally used synonymously, the latter term applies with peculiar aptness to contributions above the par value of stock or the subscription liability of the stockholders; Porter v. Northern Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 36 N.D. 199, 161 N.W. 1012, 1014; whereas "call" or "installments" means action of the board of directors demanding payment of all or portion of unpaid subscriptions; Seyberth v. American Commander Min. & Mill. Co., 42 Idaho, 254, 245 P. 392, 395.

It has been said, however, that the superadded liability of stockholders to creditors, is not in a true sense an "assessment," but is a "statutory liability." Leach v. Arthur Sa. Bank, 203 Iowa, 1052, 213 N.W. 772, 773.

Damages

Fixing the amount of damages to which the successful party in a suit is entitled after an interlocutory judgment has been taken; also the name given to the determination of the sum which a corporation proposing to take lands for a public use must pay satisfaction of the demand proved or the value taken.

Insurance

An apportionment made in general average upon the various articles and interests at risk, according to their value at the time and place of being in safety, for contribution for damage and sacrifices purposely made, and expenses incurred for escape from impending common peril. 2 Phil. Ins. c. xv.

A sum specially levied in mutual benefit insurance upon a fixed and definite plan within the limit of the company's or society's fundamental law of organization to pay losses, or losses and expenses incurred, being to a certain degree substantially the equivalent of premiums. Beaver State Merchants' Mut. Fire Ins. Ass'n v. Smith, 97 Or. 579, 192 P. 789, 800. The periodical demands made by a mutual insurance company, under its charter and by-laws, upon the makers of premium notes, are also denominated "assessments." Hill v. Insurance Co., 129 Mich. 141, 88 N.W. 392. Meaning "premiums," Ancient Order of United Workmen of Kansas v. Hobbs, 136 Kan. 708, 18 P.2d 561, 562; and being the consideration for the insurance contracts. Downing v. School Dist. of City of Erie, 297 Pa. 474, 147 A. 239, 240.

Mining

"Assessment" as applied to labor on mining claims is universally understood to mean the annual labor required by Rev.St.U.S. § 2324 (30 U.S. C.A. § 28), in order to hold the right to the possession of the claim after a discovery and complete location has been made. Smith v. Union Oil Co., 166 Cal. 217, 135 P. 966, 969. See Assessment Work.

ASSESSMENT ASSOCIATION. This term, as defined by the Nebraska insurance laws, does not include an insurance company which requires the payment of a fixed premium in advance and provides benefits not in any degree dependent upon the collection of assessments from other members, and which does not provide for the levying of extra assessments, if necessary. Western Life & Accident Co. of Colorado v. State Ins. Board of Nebraska, 101 Neb. 152, 162 N.W. 530.

ASSESSMENT COMPANY. In life insurance. A company in which a death loss is met by levy-

ASSESSMENT CONTRACT. One wherein the payment of the benefit is in any manner or degree dependent on the collection of an assessment levied on persons holding similar contracts. Folkens v. Insurance Co., 98 Mo.App. 480, 72 S.W. 720.

ASSESSMENT DISTRICT. In taxation. Any subdivision of territory, whether the whole or part of any municipality, in which by law a separate assessment of taxable property is made by the officers elected or appointed therefor. Rev. Stat.Wis.1898, § 1031 (St.1931, § 70.04).

ASSESSMENT FOR BENEFITS. A burden levied under the power of taxation. Jackson v. City of Lake Worth, 156 Fla. 452, 23 So.2d 526, 528.

ASSESSMENT FUND. The assessment fund of a mutual benefit association is the balance of the assessments, less expenses, out of which beneficiaries are paid. Kerr v. Ben. Ass’n, 39 Minn. 174, 39 N.W. 312, 12 Am.St.Rep. 631.

ASSESSMENT LABOR. These words in Act Feb. 12, 1903 (30 U.S.C.A. § 102), providing that such labor on oil claims may be done on one of a group of contiguous claims refers to the annual labor required of the locator of a mineral claim after discovery by Rev.St. § 2324 (30 U.S.C.A. § 28), and not to work before discovery. Union Oil Co. of California v. Smith, 39 S.Ct. 308, 311, 249 U.S. 337, 63 L.Ed. 635. See Assessment, under the heading "In Mining."

ASSESSMENT LIST. The list furnished by the assessor to the board of equalization. Adsit v. Park, 144 La. 934, 81 So. 430, 434.

ASSESSMENT PERIOD. Means taxable period. Johnson City v. Clinchfield R. Co., 163 Tenn. 332, 43 S.W.2d 386, 387.

ASSESSMENT ROLL. In taxation. The list or roll of taxable persons and property, completed, verified, and deposited by the assessors, not as it appears after review and equalization. Brady v. Weissenstein, 260 Mich. 678, 245 N.W. 798, 799.

ASSESSMENT WORK. Under the mining laws of the United States, the holder of an unpatented mining claim on the public domain is required, in order to hold his claim, to do labor or make improvements upon it to the extent of at least one hundred dollars in each year. Rev.St.U.S. § 2324 (30 U.S.C.A. § 28). This is commonly called by miners "doing assessment work."

ASSESSOR. An officer chosen or appointed to appraise, value, or assess property.

The assessing power, and not merely the county assessor. Board of Com’rs of San Miguel County v. Floaten, 66 Colo. 540, 181 P. 122.

A person learned in some particular science of industry, who sits with the judge on the trial of a cause requiring such special knowledge and gives his advice.

In England it is the practice in admiralty business to call assessors, in cases involving questions of navigation or seamanship. They are called "nautical assessors" (q. v.), and are always Brethren of the Trinity House.

Civil and Scotch Law

Persons skilled in law, selected to advise the judges of the inferior courts. Bell; Dig. 1, 22; Cod. 1, 51.

ASSETS. The word, though more generally used to denote everything which comes to the representatives of a deceased person, yet is by no means confined to that use, but has come to signify everything which can be made available for the payment of debts, whether belonging to the estate of a deceased person or not. Hence we speak of the assets of a bank or other monied corporation, the assets of an insolvent debtor, and the assets of an individual or private copartnership; and we always use this word when we speak of the means which a party has, as compared with his liabilities or debts. Pelican v. Rock Falls, 81 Wis. 428, 51 N.W. 871.

Bankruptcy

The property or effects of a bankrupt or insolvent, applicable to the payment of his debts.

The term "assets" includes all property of every kind and nature, chargeable with the debts of the bankrupt, that comes into the hands of and under the control of the signee; and the value thereof is not to be considered a less sum than that actually realized out of said property, and received by the assignee for it. In re Taggert, 16 N. B. R. 351, Fed. Cas. No. 13, 725; Progressive Building & Loan Co. v. Hall, C.C.A.Va., 220 F. 45, 46.

Commercial Law

The aggregate of available property, stock in trade, cash, etc., belonging to a merchant or mercantile company.

The term "assets," as applied to a bank, is broad enough to cover anything which is or may be available to pay creditors; but, as usually understood, it refers to the tangible property of the corporation, and not to the liability of stockholders contingent upon insolvency. Hill v. Smathers, 173 N.C. 642, 92 S.E. 607, 609; Deariso v. Mobley, 38 Ga.App. 313, 143 S.E. 915, 920. But when the individual liability of stockholders has been enforced by the superintendent of banks, funds collected by him thereunder are "assets." Bennett v. Wilkes County, 164 Ga. 970, 139 S.E. 566, 568.

But on other hand stockholders' voluntary assessment to relieve bank or for betterment of stock. Thomson v. Holt, 345 Mo. 296, 132 S.W.2d 974, 977; bank stockholders' liability, Farmers & Merchants Bank of Morgantown v. Bank of Masontown, 123 W.Va. 451, 15 S.E.2d 569, 572; and bank directors' contribution to special bond account to make good shrinkage in regular bond were held to be assets. Asher v. West End Bank, 345 Mo. 89, 131 S.W.2d 549, 551.
ASSETS

Probate Law

Property of a decedent available for the payment of debts and legacies; the estate coming to the heir or personal representative which is chargeable, in law or equity, with the obligations which such heir or representative is required, in his representative capacity, to discharge.

In an accurate and legal sense, all the personal property of the deceased which is of a salable nature, and may be converted into ready money, is deemed assets. But the word is not confined to such property; for all other property of the deceased, real or personal, tangible or intangible, legal or equitable, which can be made available for or can be appropriated to payment of debts, is, in a large sense, assets. Trust Co. v. Earle, 110 U.S. 710, 4 Sup.Ct. 231, 28 L.Ed. 30; Condo v. Barbour, 101 Ind.App. 483, 200 N.E. 76; Tapp v. Stuart, D.C.Okl., 6 F.Supp. 577, 578.

General

—Assets entre mains. L. Fr. Assets in hand; assets in the hands of executors or administrators, applicable for the payment of debts. Terms de la Ley; 2 Bl.Comm. 510; 1 Crabb, Real Prop. Ti; Favorite v. Booher, 17 Ohio St. 557.

—Assets per descent. That portion of the ancestor’s estate which descends to the heir, and which is sufficient to charge him, as far as it goes, with the specialty debts of his ancestors. 2 Williams, Exrs., 1011.

—Equitable assets. Equitable assets are all assets which are chargeable with the payment of debts or legacies in equity, and which do not fall under the description of legal assets. 1 Story, Eq.Jur. § 552. Those portions of the property which by the ordinary rules of law are exempt from debts, but which the testator has voluntarily charged as assets, or which, being non-existent at law, have been created in equity. Adams, Eq. 254, et seq.

They are so called because they can be reached only by the aid and instrumentality of a court of equity, and because their distribution is governed by a different rule from that which governs the distribution of legal assets. 2 Fonbl. Eq. b. 4, pt. 2, c. 2, § 1, and notes; Story, Eq. Jur. § 552.

—Legal assets. See Legal Assets.

—Personal assets. Chattels, money, and other personal property belonging to a bankrupt, insolvent, or decedent estate, which go to the assignee or executor.

—Quick assets. This term was used in a corporation credit statement merely to distinguish liquid assets from those permanently invested in the business, like real estate and machinery, and included amounts charged against officers for return of part of salaries paid them in a previous year, in accordance with the agreement of employment. In re American Knit Goods Mfg. Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 173 F. 480, 97 C.C.A. 486.

—Real assets. Lands or real estate in the hands of an heir, chargeable with the payment of the debts of the ancestor. 2 Bl.Comm. 244, 302.

ASSEVERATION. An affirmation; a positive assertion; a solemn declaration. This word is sel-dom, if ever, used for a declaration made under oath, but denotes a declaration accompanied with solemnity or an appeal to conscience, whereas by an oath one appeals to God as a witness of the truth of what one says.

ASSEWiare. To draw or drain water from marsh grounds. Cowell.

ASSIGN, v. To make over or set over to another. North Tex. Nat. Bank v. Thompson, Tex.Civ.App., 23 S.W.2d 494, 499. To appoint, allot, select, or designate for a particular purpose, or duty.

Thus, in England, justices are said to be “assigned to take the assises,” “assigned to hold pleas,” “assigned to make gaol delivery,” “assigned to keep the peace,” etc. St. Westm. 2, c. 30; Reg. Orig. 68, 69; 3 Bl.Comm. 58, 59, 353; 1 Bl. Comm. 351.

To transfer persons, as a sheriff is said to assign prisoners in his custody.

Conveyancing

To transfer; as to assign property, or some interest therein. Cowell; 2 Bl.Comm. 326; North Texas Nat. Bank v. Thompson, Tex.Civ.App., 23 S.W.2d 494, 499; To transfer the title or ownership, as of choses in action. Burkett v. Doty, 176 Cal. 89, 167 P. 518, 520.

Practice

To point at, or point out; to set forth, or specify; to mark out or designate; to particularize; as to assign errors on a writ of error; to assign breaches of a covenant. 2 Tidd, Pr. 1168; 1 Tidd, 686; Commercial Standard Ins. Co. v. Noack, Tex. Civ.App., 45 S.W.2d 798, 801.

ASSIGNABILITY. "Survivability" convertible term. People ex rel. Rude v. La Salle County, 310 Ill.App. 541, 34 N.E.2d 865, 867; City of Milwaukee v. Boynton Cab Co., 201 Wis. 581, 231 N.W. 597, 598.

ASSIGNABLE. That may be assigned or transferred; transferable; negotiable, as a bill of exchange. Comb. 176; Story, Bills, § 17.

ASSIGNATION. In French law. A writ of summons.

In Scotch law. A term equivalent to summons.

ASSIGNATUS UTITUR JURE AUCTORIS. An assignee uses the right of his principal; an assignee is clothed with the rights of his principal... Wing.Max. 56; 1 Exch. 32; 18 Q.B. 878.

ASSIGNAY. In Scotch law. An assignee.

Assignee for the benefit of creditors. has been made in fact by the party having the assignment has been made. Michigan Trust Co. v. Chaffee, D.C.N.D., 44 F.Supp. 848, 850.

Assignee in fact is one to whom an assignment has been made in fact by the party having the right. Tucker v. West, 31 Ark. 643. One to whom an assignment has been made. Power & Light Corporation, 187 N.Y.S. 216, 228.

Assignee in law is one in whom the law vests the right; as an executor or administrator.

Old Law

A person deputed or appointed by another to do any act, or perform any business. Blount. An assignee, however, was distinguished from a deputy, being said to occupy a thing in his own right, while a deputy acted in right of another. Cowell.

Assignee for the benefit of creditors. One to whom, under an insolvent or bankrupt law, the whole estate of a debtor is transferred to be administered for the benefit of creditors; he is a trustee for the creditors who stands in the shoes of an assignor, and can assert no claim to property which assignor could not. Slater v. Oriental Mills, 18 R.I. 352, 27 A. 443, 444; Textor v. Orr, 86 Md. 392, 38 A. 939, 940.

Assignment. A transfer or making over to another of the whole of any property, real or personal, in possession or in action, or of any estate or right therein. Bostrom v. Bostrom, 60 N.D. 792, 236 N.W. 732, 734. It includes transfers of all kinds of property, Higgins v. Monckton, 28 Cal.App.2d 723, 83 P.2d 516, 519. But is ordinarily limited to transfers of choses in action and to rights in or connected with property, as distinguished from the particular item of property. In re Beffa’s Estate, 54 Cal.App. 186, 201 P. 616, 617. It is generally appropriate to the transfer of equitable interests. Kavanaugh v. Cohoes Power & Light Corporation, 187 N.Y.S. 216, 228, 114 Misc. 590.

To constitute valid “assignment,” there must be perfected transaction between parties intended to vest in assignee present right in thing assigned. In re Lynch’s Estate, 272 N.Y.S. 79, 85, 151 Misc. 549. It is contract, and is subject to same requisites as to validity as other contracts, such as proper parties, mutual assent, consideration, and legal subject-matter. Hutsell v. Citizens’ Nat. Bank, 166 Tenn. 598, 64 S.W.2d 188.

The transfer of the interest one has in lands and tenements; more particularly applied to the unexpired residue of a term or estate for life or years; Cruise, Dig. tit. xxxii. (Deed) c. vii, § 15; 1 Steph.Com. 507.

The distinction between an “assignment” and a “sublease” is that an assignment transfers the entire unexpired term. Sandfield v. Ambassador Restaurant Co., 247 N.Y.S. 655, 657, 139 Misc. 3.

A transfer of the title to a bill, note, or check. An assignment at common law differs from an indorsement in that by an assignment the assignor passed title to the assignee but did not subject himself to any contractual liability, whereas an indorser, in addition to passing title, impliedly contracts to pay note at maturity on demand and notice on maker’s failure to so do. Johnson v. Beickey, 64 Utah, 43, 228 P. 189, 191.

In patent law, the transfer of the entire interest in a patented invention or of an undivided portion of such entire interest as to every section of the United States. Rob. Pat. § 762. It differs from grant in relation to the territorial area to which they relate. A grant is the transfer of the exclusive right in a specific part of the United States. It is an exclusive sectional right. A license is a transfer of a less or different interest than either the interest in a whole patent or an undivided part of such whole interest or an exclusive sectional interest. Littlefield v. Perry, 21 Wall. 205, 22 L.Ed. 577.

A license is distinguished from an assignment and a grant in that the latter transfers the monopoly as well as the invention, while a license transfers only the invention and does not affect the monopoly otherwise than by estopping the licensor from exercising his prohibitory powers in derogation of the privileges conferred by him upon the licensee. Rob. Pat. § 806. See Pope Mfg. Co. v. Mfg. Co., 144 U.S. 248, 12 S.Ct. 641, 36 L.Ed. 423.

The distinctive test between an “assignment” and a sale, where another creditor is to be paid off, is that in the former case, another creditor is to receive some of the property or its proceeds, and in the latter the creditor to whom title is passed takes for himself the whole property, stipulating to pay the other creditor out of his own means and not out of the property or its proceeds. Silver & Goldstein v. Chapman, 163 Ga. 604, 135 S.E. 914, 919.

Assignment of account. Transfer to assignee giving him a right to have moneys when collected applied to payment of his debt. Nanny v. H. E. Pogue Distillery Co., 56 Cal.App.2d 817, 133 P.2d 686, 688.

Assignment of dower. The act by which the share of a widow in her deceased husband’s real estate is ascertained and set apart to her. Bettis v. McNider, 117 Ala. 588, 34 So. 813, 97 Am.St.Rep. 59.

Assignment of error. See Error.

Assignment pro tanto. Where an order is drawn upon a third party and made payable out of a particular fund then due or to become due to the drawer, the delivery of the order to the payee operates as an assignment pro tanto of the fund. Doyle v. East New York Sā’y. Bank, 44 N.Y.S.2d 318, 323.

Under Mechanics’ Lien Law a workman or materialman who serves on owner a stop notice becomes an assignee pro tanto of debt due from owner to contractor. Commonwealth Roofing Co. v. Riccio, 81 N.J.Eq. 486, 87 A. 114, 115.

Assignment with preferences. An assignment for the benefit of creditors, with directions to the ASSIGNOR. A person who assigns a right, whether or not he is the original owner thereof. Re-statement, Contracts, § 149(2).

ASSIGNS. Assignees; those to whom property shall have been transferred. Now seldom used except in the phrase, in deeds, "heirs, administrators, and assigns." Stannard v. Marboe, 159 Minn. 119, 198 N.W. 127. It generally comprehends all those who take either immediately or remotely from or under the assignor, whether by conveyance, devise, descent, or act of law. Ferrell v. Bouchaud, 10 Paige (N.Y.) 445.

ASSISA. In old English and Scotch law. An assise; a kind of jury or inquest; a writ; a sitting of a court; an ordinance or statute; a fixed or specific time, number, quantity, quality, price, or weight; a tribute, fine, or tax; a real action; the name of a writ. See Assise.

ASSISA ARMA RUM. Assise of arms. A statute or ordinance requiring the keeping of arms for the common defense. Hale, Com.Law, c. 11.

ASSISA CADERE. To fail in the assise; e., to be nonsuited. Cowell; 3 Bl.Com. 402.

ASSISA CADIT IN JURATUM. The assise falls (turns) into a jury; hence to submit a controversy to trial by jury.

ASSISA CONTINUANDA. An ancient writ addressed to the justices of assise for the continuance of a cause, when certain facts put in issue could not have been proved in time by the party alleging them. Reg.Orig. 217.

ASSISA DE CLARENDON. The assise of Clarendon. A statute or ordinance passed in the tenth year of Henry II., by which those that were accused of any heinous crime, and not able to purge themselves, but must abjure the realm, had liberty of forty days to stay and try what succor they could get of their friends towards their sustenance in exile. Bract. fol. 136; Co.Litt. 159a; Cowell.

ASSISA DE NOCUMENTO. An assise of nuisance; a writ to abate or redress a nuisance.

ASSISA DE UTRUM. An obsolete writ, which lay for the parson of a church whose predecessor had alienated the land and rents of it.

ASSISA FRISCZE FORTIJE. Assise of fresh force, which see.

ASSISA MORTIS D'ANCESTORIS. Assise of mort d'ancestor, which see.

ASSISA NOVAE DISSEISINAE. Assise of novel disseisin, which see.

ASSISA PANIS ET CEREVISLE. Assise of bread and ale, or beer. The name of a statute passed in the fifty-first year of Henry III., containing regulations for the sale of bread and ale; sometimes called the "statute of bread and ale." Co.Litt. 159b; 2 Reeve, Hist.Eng.Law, 56; Cowell; Bract. fol. 155.

ASSISA PROROGANDA. An obsolete writ, which was directed to the judges assigned to take assises, to stay proceedings, by reason of a party to them being employed in the king's business. Reg.Orig. 208.

ASSISA ULTDLE PRIESENTATIONIS. Assise of darrein presentment, (q.v.).

ASSISA VENALIUM. The assise of salable commodities, or of things exposed for sale.

ASSISE, or ASSIZE. An ancient species of court, consisting of a certain number of men, usually twelve, who were summoned together to try a disputed cause, performing the functions of a jury, except that they gave a verdict from their own investigation and knowledge and not upon evidence adduced. From the fact that they sat together, (assideo,) they were called the "assise." See Bract. 4, 1, 6; Co.Litt. 153b, 159b. A court composed of an assembly of knights and other substantial men, with the . baron or justice, in a certain place, at an appointed time. Grand Cou. cc. 24, 25.

The verdict or judgment of the jurors or recognizors of assise. 3 Bl.Com. 57, 59.

In modern English law, the name "assises" or "assizes" is given to the court, time, or place where the judges of assises or nisi priests, who are sent by special commission from the crown on circuits through the kingdom, proceed to take indictments, and to try such disputed causes issuwere in England called "assises" down to the time, number, quantity, quality, weight, measure, etc. Spelman.

An ordinance, statute, or regulation. Spelman gives this meaning of the word the first place among his definitions, observing that statutes were in England called "assises" down to the reign of Henry III.

A species of writ, or real action, said to have been invented by Glanville, chief justice to Henry II., and having for its object to determine the right of possession of lands, and to recover the possession. 3 Bl.Comm. 184, 185.

The whole proceedings in court upon a writ of assise. Co.Litt. 159b. The verdict or finding of the jury upon such a writ. 3 Bl.Comm. 57.

—Assise of Clarendon. See Assisa.

—Assise of darrein presentment. A writ of assise which formerly lay when a man or his ancestors under whom he claimed presented a clerk to a benefice, who was instituted, and afterwards, upon the next avoidance, a stranger presented a clerk and thereby disturbed the real patron. 3 Bl.Comm. 245; St. 13 Edw. I. (Westm. 2) c. 5. It has given way to the remedy by quare impedit.

—Assise of fresh force. In old English practice. A writ which lay by the usage and custom of a city or borough, where a man was disseised of his lands and tenements in such city or borough. It was called "fresh force," because it was to be sued within forty days after the party's title accrued to him. Fitzh.Nat.Brev. 7 C.

—Assise of mort d'ancestor. A real action which lay to recover land of which a person had been deprived on the death of his ancestor by the abatement or intrusion of a stranger. 3 Bl.Comm. 185; Co.Litt. 159a. It was abolished by St. 3 & 4 Wm. IV, c. 27.

—Assise of novel disseisin. A writ of assise which lay for the recovery of lands or tenements, where the claimant had been lately disseised.

—Assise of nuisance. A writ of assise which lay where a nuisance had been committed to the complainant's freehold; either for abatement of the nuisance or for damages.

—Assise of the forest. A statute touching orders to be observed in the king's forests. Manwood, 35.

—Assise of utrum. A writ of assise which lay for a parson to recover lands which his predecessor had improperly allowed the church to be deprived of. 3 Bla.Com. 257.

An assise for the trial of the question of whether land is a lay fee, or held in frankalmoinage. 1 Holdsw.Hist.E.L. 21.

—Assise rents. The certain established rents of the freeholders and ancient copyholders of a manor; so called because they are assised, or made precise and certain.

—Grand assize. A peculiar species of trial by jury, introduced in the time of Henry II., giving the tenant or defendant in a writ of right the alternative of a trial by battel, or by his peers. Abolished by 3 & 4 Wm. IV, c. 42, § 13. See 3 Bl. Comm. 341. See Battel.

ASSISER. An assessor; juror; an officer who has the care and oversight of weights and measures.

ASSISORS. In Scotch law. Jurors; the persons who formed that kind of court which in Scotland was called an "assise," for the purpose of inquiring into and judging divers civil causes, such as perambulations, cognitions, molestations, purpures, and other matters; like jurors in England. Holthouse.

ASSIST. To help; aid; succor; lend countenance or encouragement to; participate in as an auxiliary. People v. Hayne, 83 Cal. 111, 23 Pac. 1, 7 L.R.A. 348, 17 Am.St.Rep. 211. To contribute effort in the complete accomplishment of an ultimate purpose intended to be effected by those engaged. People v. Thurman, 62 Cal.App. 147, 216 P. 394, 395.

ASSISTANCE, or (ASSISTANTS) COURT OF. See Court of Assistants.

ASSISTANCE, WRIT OF. See Writ of Assistance.

ASSISTANCE, WRIT OF. See Writ of Assistance.

ASSISTANT. A deputy, agent, or employee; as, an assistant assessor. Pryor Brown Transfer Co. v. Gibson, 154 Tenn. 260, 290 S.W. 33, 35, 51 A.L.R. 193. One who stands by and aids or helps another, and is not an agent. Wells-Dickey Co. v. Embody, 82 Mont. 150, 266 P. 869, 874. Ordinarily refers to employee whose duties are to help his superior, to whom he must look for authority to act. State ex rel. Dunn v. Ayers, 112 Mont. 120, 113 P. 2d 785, 788.

ASSISTANT JUDGE. A judge of the English court of general or quarter sessions in Middlesex. He differs from the other justices in being a barrister of ten years' standing, and in being salaried. St. 7 & 8 Vict. c. 71; 22 & 23 Vict. c. 4; Pritch. Quar. Sess. 31.
ASSISTANT

ASSISUS. Rented or farmed out for a specified assise; that is, a payment of a certain assessed rent in money or provisions.

ASSITHMENT. Weregild (q.v.) or compensation by a pecuniary mulct. Cowell.

ASSIZE. In the practice of the criminal courts of Scotland, the fifteen men who decide on the conviction or acquittal of an accused person are called the "assize," though in popular language, and even in statutes, they are called the "jury." Wharton. See Assise.

ASSIZES. Sessions of the justices or commissioners of assize. These assizes are held twice in each year in each of the various shires of England, with some exceptions, for the trial of matters of fact in issue in both civil and criminal cases. They still retain the ancient name in popular language, though the commission of assize is no longer issued. See Assise.

ASSIZES DE JERUSALEM. A code of feudal jurisprudence prepared by an assembly of barons and lords A. D. 1099, after the conquest of Jerusalem. It was compiled principally from the laws and customs of France.

An officer in each of the English courts of common law, appointed by the chief judge of the court, and holding his office during good behavior, whose duties were to superintend the entry of causes, to attend the sittings of nisi prius, and there receive and enter verdicts, and to draw up the postees and any orders of nisi prius. The associates are now officers of the Supreme Court of Judicature, and are styled "Masters of the Supreme Court." Wharton.

A person associated with the judges and clerk of assise in the commission of general jail delivery. Mozley & Whitley.

The term is frequently used of the judges of appellate courts, other than the presiding judge or chief justice.

ASSOCIATES IN OFFICE. "Associates in office" are those who are united in action; who have a common purpose; who share the responsibility or authority and among whom is reasonable equality; those who are authorized by law to perform the duties jointly or as a body. Barton v. Alexander, 27 Idaho 286, 148 P. 471, 474, Ann.Cas. 1917D, 729.

ASSOCIATION. The act of a number of persons in uniting together for some special purpose or business. The persons so joining. It is a word of vague meaning used to indicate a collection of persons who have joined together for a certain object. U. S. v. Martindale, D.C.Kan., 146 F. 280, 284; In re Sautter's Estate, 142 Neb. 42, 5 N.W.2d 263, 268; W. R. Roach & Co. v. Harding, 348 Ill. 454, 181 N.E. 331, 336. An unincorporated society; a body of persons united and acting together without a charter, but upon the methods and forms used by incorporated bodies for the prosecution of some common enterprise. Clark v. Grand Lodge of Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, 328 Mo. 1084, 43 S.W.2d 404, 408. It is not a legal entity separate from the persons who compose it. Meinhart v. Contresta, Sup., 194 N.Y.S. 593, 594.

A confederacy or union for particular purposes, good or ill. Johnson's Dict.

In that sense "association" is a generic term and indifferently comprehend a voluntary confederacy, which is a partnership dissoluble by the persons who formed it or a corporate confederacy, deriving its existence from confederacy, and dissoluble only by the law." Campbell v. Floyd, 153 Pa. 84, 25 A. 1033, 1036.

A body of persons invested with some, yet not full, corporate rights and powers, but will not include the state. State v. Taylor, 7 S.D. 533, 64 N.W. 548.

It is fundamentally a large partnership, from which it differs in that it is not bound by the acts of the individual partners, but only by those of its manager or trustee and that shares in it are transferable, and that it is no dissolved by the retirement, death, or bankruptcy of it, individual members. In re Lloyds of Texas, D.C.Tex., 4: F.2d 383, 385.

A "business trust" is an "association" when it has continuing entity throughout trust period, centralization of management, continuity of trust uninterrupted by death among beneficial owners, means for transfer of beneficial interests, and limitation of personal liabilities of participants to the property embanked in undertaking. Fletcher v. Clark, D.C.Wyo., 57 F. Supp. 479, 480.

"Association" has been held to include a common-law business or Massachusetts trust. Tracy v. Banker, 17 Mass. 266, 49 N.E. 308, 39 L.R.A. 508.

Articles of association. See Articles.

English Law

A writ directing certain persons (usually the clerk and his subordinate officers) to associate themselves with the justices and sergeants for the purpose of taking the assizes. 3 Bla.Comm. 59.

National Banking Associations

ASSOCIE EN NOM. In French law. In a societ en commandite an associe en nom is one who is liable for the engagements of the undertaking to the whole extent of his property. This expressio arises from the fact that the names of the associd... so liable figure in the firm-name or form part of the sociéité en i.nom collectif. Arg.Fr.Merc.Law, 546.

ASSOIL. (Spelled also assoile, absoile, assoilyie.) To absolve; acquit; to set free; to deliver from excommunication. St. 1 Hen. IV, c. 7; Cowell.

ASSOILZIE. In Scotch law. To acquit the defendant in an action; to find a criminal not guilty.

ASSUME. To pretend. To undertake; engage; to absolve; acquit; to set free; to deliver from excommunication. St. 1 Hen. IV, c. 7; Cowell.

ASSUMED RISK. See Assumption of Risk.

ASSUMPSIT. Lat. He undertook; he promised.

A promise or engagement by which one person assumes or undertakes to do some act or pay something to another. It may be either oral or in writing, but is not under seal. It is express if the promisor puts his engagement in distinct and definite language; it is implied where the law infers a promise (though no formal one has passed) from the conduct of the party or the circumstances of the case. Dukes v. Rogers, 67 Ga. App. 661, 21 S.E.2d 295, 297.

Practice

A form of action which lies for the recovery of damages for the non-performance of a parol or simple contract; or a contract that is neither of record nor under seal. 7 Term. 351; Ballard v. Walker, 3 Johns. Cas. (N.Y.) 60. A liberal and equitable action, applicable to almost every case where money has been received which in equity and good conscience ought to be refunded; express promise is not necessary to sustain action, but it may be maintained whenever anything is received or done from the circumstances of which the law implies a promise of compensation. Armour & Co. v. Whitney & Kemmerer, Inc., 164 Va. 12, 178 S.E. 889, 98 A.L.R. 596.

Express assumpsit. See Express Assumpsit

Special assumpsit is an action of assumpsit brought upon an express contract or promise.

General (common or indebitatus) assumpsit is an action of assumpsit brought upon the promise or contract implied by law in certain cases. It is founded upon what the law terms an implied promise on the part of defendant to pay what, in good conscience, he is bound to pay to plaintiff. Tr. and Ha. Pr. 1490; Ruse v. Williams, 14 Ariz 445, 130 P. 887, 888, 45 L.R.A.,N.S., 923.

The action of assumpsit differs from trespass and trover, which are founded on a tort, not upon a contract; from covenant and debt, which are appropriate where the ground of recovery is by instrument, or terms of the obligator to pay a fixed sum; and from replevin which seeks the recovery of specific property, if attainable, rather than damages.

ASSUMPTION. The act of conceding or taking for granted. Gordon v. Schellhorn, 95 N.J.Eq. 563, 123 A. 549, 552.

The act of assuming or taking upon one's self; the undertaking or adoption of a debt or obligation primarily resting upon another, as where the purchaser of real estate "assumes" a mortgage resting upon it, in which case he adopts the mortgage debt as his own and becomes personally liable for its payment. Lenz v. Railroad Co., 111 Wis. 198, 86 N.W. 607; Bell Telephone Co. of Pennsylvania v. Public Service Commission of Pennsylvania, 119 Pa.Super. 292, 181 A. 73, 75.

The difference between the purchaser of land assuming a mortgage on it and simply buying subject to the mortgage, is that in the former case he makes himself personally liable for the payment of the mortgage debt, while in the latter case he does not. Hancock v. Fleming, 103 Ind. 533, 3 N.E. 254. When he takes the conveyance subject to the mortgage, he is bound only to the extent of the property. Brichetto v. Raney, 76 Cal.App. 232, 245 P. 238, 241. Where one "assumes" a lease, he takes to himself the obligations, contracts, agreements, and benefits to which the other contracting party was entitled under the terms of the lease. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Indiana, etc., R. Co., 44 Ohio St. 287, 314, 7 N.E. 152.

ASSUMPTION OF INDEBTEDNESS. Means for one person to bind himself to pay debt incurred by another. Pawnee County Excise Board v. Kurn, 187 Okl. 110, 101 P.2d 614, 618.

ASSUMPTION OF RISK. Exists where none of fault for injury rests with plaintiff, but where plaintiff assumes consequences of injury occurring through fault of defendant, third person, or fault of no one. Rodgers v. Stoller, 284 Ky. 108, 143 S.W.2d 1047, 1048. It is based upon the maxim “volenti non fit injuria,” which means that to which a person assents is not regarded in law as an injury. Poole v. Lutz & Schmidt, 273 Ky. 586, 117 S.W.2d 575, 576. And predicated upon knowledge and consent. Kansas City Southern Ry. Co. v. Diggs, 205 Ark. 150, 167 S.W.2d 879, 883. While more generally used as between master and servant, courts do not confine it to such relationship. Adams’ Adm’r v. Callis & Hughes, 253 Ky. 382, 69 S.W.2d 711, 712.

In some jurisdictions, doctrine confined to master and servant relation. Dowse v. Maine Cent. R. R., 91 N.H. 419, 20 A.2d 629, 631; Parker v. Grand Trunk Western R. Co., 261 Mich. 293, 246 N.W. 125, 126; West Texas Utilities Co. v. Reuner, Tex., 32 S.W.2d 264, 270. A term or condition in a contract of employment, either express or implied from the circumstances of the employment, by which the employee agrees that dangers of injury ordinarily or obviously incident to the discharge of his duty in the particular employment shall be at his own risk. Parker v. City of Wichita, 150 Kan. 249, 92 P.2d 86, 89; Wisconsin & Arkansas Lumber Co. v. Otts, 178 Ark. 283, 10 S.W.2d 364, 365; Southern Pac. Co. v. McCready, C.C.A.Cal., 47 F.2d 673, 675. It has reference to dangers that are normally and necessarily incident to the occupation, which are deemed to be assumed by workmen of mature years, whether they are actually aware of them or not. Chesapeake & O. Ry. Co. v. Cochran, C.C.A.W.Va., 22 F.2d 22, 25.

It is founded upon the knowledge of the servant either actual or constructive, as to the hazards to be encountered and his consent to take the chance of danger. Schuppenies v. Oregon Short Line R. Co., 38 Idaho, 672, 225 P. 501, 505. But it does not include the risks from the negligence of the master, or the gross negligence of his superior servant. Burton Const. Co. v. Metcalfe, 162 Ky. 366, 172 S.W. 698, 702. “Contributory negligence” is not synonymous with assumption of risk. Dolese Bros. Co. v. Kahl, C.C.A.Iowa, 203 P. 627, 630. “Assumed risk” is founded upon the knowledge of the employee, either actual or constructive, of the risks to be encountered, and his consent to take the chance of injury therefrom. Contributory negligence implies misconduct, the doing of an imprudent act by the Injured party, or his dereliction in failing to take proper precaution for his personal safety. The doctrine of assumed risk is founded upon contract, while contributory negligence is solely matter of conduct. Wheeler v. Tyler, 129 Minn. 206, 152 N.W. 137.

ASSUMPTION OF SKILL. The doctrine known as the “assumption of skill” on the part of the master sometimes makes the knowledge implied against the master relative to the safety of the place of work, and the nature, constituents, and general characteristics of the things used in the business, superior to that implied against the servant, especially where the servant is inexperienced. Hines v. Little, 26 Ga.App. 136, 105 S. E. 618.

The term was formerly of very frequent use in the modern sense of insurance, particularly in English maritime law, and still appears in the policies of some companies, but is otherwise seldom seen of late years. There seems to be a tendency, however, to use assurance for the contracts of life insurance companies, and insurance for risks upon property.

In conveyancing. A deed or instrument of conveyance. The legal evidences of the transfer of property are in England called the “common assurances” of the kingdom, whereby every man’s estate is assured to him, and all controversies, doubts, and difficulties are either prevented or removed. 2 Bl.Comm. 294. State v. Farrand, 8 N.J.Law, 335.

ASSURANCE, FURTHER, COVENANT FOR. See Covenant for Further Assurance.

ASSURED. A person who has been insured by some insurance company, or underwriter, against losses or perils mentioned in the policy of insurance. Brockway v. Insurance Co., C.C.Pa., 29 Fed. 766.

Thus where a wife insures her husband’s life for her own benefit and he has no interest in the policy, she is the “assured” and he the “insured.”

The person for whose benefit the policy is issued and to whom the loss is payable, not necessarily the person on whose life or property the policy is written. Insurance Co. v. Luchs, 2 S.Ct. 949, 108 U.S. 498, 27 L.Ed. 800. Ordinarily synonymous with insured. Thompson v. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co., 161 Iowa, 446, 143 N.W. 518.

ASSURED CLEAR DISTANCE AHEAD. Requires driver keep automobile under such control that he can stop in distance that he can clearly see. The distance varying with circumstances. Lauerman v. Strickler, 141 Pa.Super. 240, 14 A.2d 608, 610; Smiley v. Arrow Spring Bed Co., 138 Ohio St. 81, 33 N.E.2d 3, 5, 6, 7, 9, 133 A.L.R. 960.

ASSURER. An insurer against certain perils and dangers; an underwriter; and indemnifier.

ASSYTHEMENT. In Scotch law. Damages awarded to the relative of a murdered person from the guilty party, who has not been convicted and punished. Paters. Comp.
ASTIPULATION. A mutual agreement, assent, and consent between parties; also a witness or record.

ASTITRARIUS Hi\ERES. An heir apparent who has been placed, by conveyance, in possession of his ancestor's estate during such ancestor's lifetime. Co.Litt. 8.

ASTITUTION. An arraignment (q. v.).

ASTRARIUS. In old English law. A householder; belonging to the house; a person in actual possession of a house.

ASTRARIUS H\ERES. Where the ancestor by conveyance hath set his heir apparent and his family in a house in his lifetime. Cunningham, L. Dict.

ASTRER. In old English law. A householder, or occupant of a house or hearth.

ASTRICT. In Scotch law. To assign to a particular mill.

ASTRICTIO TO A MILL. A servitude by which grain growing on certain lands or brought within them must be carried to a certain mill to be ground, a certain mulature or price being paid for the same. Jacob.

ASTRIHILTET. In Saxon law. A penalty for a wrong done by one in the king's peace. The offender was to replace the damage twofold. Spelman.

ASTRUM. A house, or place of habitation. Bract. fol. 267b; Cowell.

ASYLUM. A sanctuary, or place of refuge and protection, where criminals and debtors found shelter, and from which they could not be taken without sacrilege. Cromie v. Institution of Mercy, 3 Bush (Ky.) 391.

Shelter; refuge; protection from the hand of justice. The word includes not only place, but also shelter, security, protection.

A fugitive from justice, who has committed a crime in a foreign country, "seeks an asylum" at all times when he claims the use of the territories of the United States. In re De Giacomo, 12 Blatchf. 395, Fed.Cas.No.3,747. Every sovereign state has the right to offer an asylum to fugitives from other countries, but there is no corresponding right in the part of the alien to claim asylum. In recent years this right of asylum has been voluntarily limited by most states by treaties providing for the extradition (q. v.) of fugitive criminals.

In time of war, a place of refuge in neutral territory for belligerent war-ships.

An institution for the protection and relief of unfortunates, as asylums for the poor, for the deaf and dumb, or for the insane. Lawrence v. Leidigh, 58 Kan. 594, 50 P. 600, 62 Am.St.Rep. 631. The term may also include a hospital constructed and maintained by the United States government for the treatment of soldiers and ex-soldiers. Kemp v. Heebner, 77 Colo. 177, 234 P. 1068, 1069.

AT. A term of considerable elasticity of meaning. As used to fix a time, it does not necessarily mean eo instantaneo or the identical time named, or even a fixed definite moment. Barnett v. Strain, 151 Ga. 553, 107 S.E. 530, 532; In re Clark's Estate, 61 P.2d 1221, 1222, 17 Cal.App.2d 323; And may mean on the same day, Perry v. Gross, 172 Cal. 468, 156 P. 1031, 1032. But "at" may often express simply nearness and proximity, and consequently may denote a reasonable time. Smeltzer v. Atlanta Coach Co., 44 Ga.App. 53, 160 S.E. 665, 666. Primarily, "at" means "near" or "near to," and involves the idea of proximity. Chesapeake & O. Ry. Co. v. Hill, 215 Ky. 222, 284 S.W. 1047, 1048, 48 A.L.R. 327; "At" a village or city may mean "near." Howell v. State, 164 Ga. 204, 138 S.E. 206, 209; Board of Trustees of Albany College v. Monteith, 64 Or. 356, 130 P. 633, 636. Depending on the context, "at" may be equivalent to "in"; Millikan v. Security Trust Co., 187 Ind. 307, 118 N.E. 568; Fayette County Board of Education v. Tompkins, 212 Ky. 751, 280 S.W. 114, 116; "toward"; State v. Cunningham, 107 Miss. 140, 65 So. 115, 117, 51 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1179; "after"; Davis v. Godart, 131 Minn. 221, 154 N.W. 1091, 1092; "not later than"; Smith v. Jacksonville Oil Mill Co., 21 Ga.App. 679, 94 S.E. 900, 901; or be equivalent to the words on, by, about, under, over, through, from, to, etc.

AT ARM'S LENGTH. Beyond the reach of personal influence or control.

AT ISSUE. Whenever the parties come to a point in the pleadings which is affirmed on one side and denied on the other, they are said to be at an issue. Willard v. Zehr, 215 Ill. 154, 74 N.E. 107, 108.

AT LARGE. Not limited to any particular place, district, person, matter, or question; open to discussion or controversy; not precluded. Free; unrestrained; not under corporal control; as a ferocious animal so free from restraint as to be liable to do mischief. Fully; in detail; in an extended form.

A congressman at large Is one who is elected by the electors of an entire state.

AT LAW. According to law; by, for, or in law; particularly in distinction from that which is done in or according to equity; or in titles such as sergeant at law, barrister at law, attorney or counsellor at law. Hooker v. Nichols, 116 N.C. 157, 21 S.E. 208.

AT LEAST. In deed of trust covenant specifying amount of fire insurance, means at lowest estimate, at smallest concession or claim, in smallest or lowest degree, at smallest number. Browne v. Franklin Fire Ins. Co., 225 Mo.App. 665, 37 S.W.2d 977, 979.
AT ONCE. In contracts of various kinds the phrase is construed as synonymous with "immediately" and "forthwith," where the subject-matter is the giving of notice. The use of such term does not ordinarily call for instantaneous action, but rather that notice shall be given within such time as is reasonable in view of the circumstances. George v. Aetna Casualty and Surety Co., 121 Neb. 647, 238 N.W. 36, 39. Likewise, contracts or statutes requiring the performance of a particular act "at once" are usually held to mean simply within a reasonable time. Arizona Power Co. v. State, 19 Ariz. 114, 166 P. 275, 277. An order to "ship at once" is synonymous with "as soon as possible". Myers v. Hardín, 208 Ark. 505, 186 S.W. 2d 925, 928.

AT WAR. Death of seaman from Pearl Harbor Attack as occurring while nation was "at war". Rosenau v. Idaho Mut. Ben. Ass'n, 65 Idaho 408, 145 P.2d 227, 232.

AT ANY TIME PRIOR TO. Synonymous with "not later than". Hughes v. United States, C.C.A. Tenn., 114 F.2d 285, 287.

AT THE END OF THE WILL. The words "at the end of the will" within statute providing that every will shall be subscribed by testator at the end of the will mean the end of the language and not paper on which it is written. In re Golden's Will, 300 N.Y.S. 737, 738, 165 Misc. 205; In re Hildreth's Will, 36 N.Y.S.2d 938, 939, 940.

AT TIME CAUSE OF ACTION ACCRUES. Is sometimes applied to present enforcible demand, but more often simply must arise or come into existence. Stone v. Phillips, 142 Tex. 216, 176 S.W. 2d 932, 933.

ATAMITA. In the civil law. A great-great-great-grandfather's sister.

ATAVIA. In the civil law. A great-grandmother's grandfather.

ATAVUNCULUS. The brother of a great-grandfather's grandfather, or a great-great-grandfather's brother.

ATAVUS. The male ascendant in the fifth degree. The great-grandfather's or great-grandmother's grandfather; a fourth grandfather.

The ascending line of inelance ancestry runs thus: Pater, Avus, Proavus, Abavus, Atavus, Tritavus. The seventh generation in the ascending scale will be Tritavia-pater, and the next above it Proavai-atanus.

ATHA. (Spelled also Atta, Atha, Atte.) In Saxon law. An oath; the power or privilege of exacting and administering an oath. Spelman.

ATIA. Hatred or See De Odio et Atia.

ATILIAN LAW. See Lex Atilia.

ATILUM. The tackle or rigging of a ship; the harness or tackle of a plow. Spelman.

ATINIAN LAW. See Lex Atinia.

ATMATERTERA. A great-grandfather's grandmother's sister, (atavice soror;) called by Bracton "atmaterwera magna." Bract. fol. 68b.

ATOMIZE. To reduce to atoms or atom-like particles; pulverize; spray. In re Preble, Cust. & Pat.App., 45 F.2d 1007, 1009; Stearns-Roger Mfg. Co. v. Greenawalt, C.C.A.Colo., 62 F.2d 1033, 1039.

ATPATRUUS. The brother of a great-grandfather's grandfather.

ATRAVESADOS. In maritime law. A Spanish term signifying athwart, at right angles, or asea; sometimes used as descriptive of the position of a vessel which is "lying to." The Hugo, D.C.N.Y., 57 F. 403, 410.

ATROCITY. A word implying conduct that is outrageously or wantonly wicked, criminal, vile, cruel; extremely horrible and shocking. State v. Wyman, 56 Mont. 600, 186 P. 1, 3.

ATROPINE. A drug employed for purposes of dilating the eye so as to put the small muscles inside the eye at rest and to prevent adhesions of the iris and lens. State v. Staw, 97 N.J.Law, 349, 116 A. 425.

ATS. At suit of.

ATTACH. To bind, fasten, tie, or connect, to make fast or join, and its antonyms are separate, detach, remove. State v. Modenr Box Makers, 217 Minn. 41, 13 N.W.2d 731, 733. To take or apprehend by commandment of a writ or precept. Buckeye Pipe-Line Co. v. Fee, 62 Ohio St. 543, 57 N.E. 446, 78 Am.St.Rep. 743.

ATTACK. To bind, fasten, tie, or connect, to make fast or join, and its antonyms are separate, detach, remove. State v. Modern Box Makers, 217 Minn. 41, 13 N.W.2d 731, 733. To take or apprehend by commandment of a writ or precept. Buckeye Pipe-Line Co. v. Fee, 62 Ohio St. 543, 57 N.E. 446, 78 Am.St.Rep. 743.

ATTACHED. A term describing the physical union of two otherwise independent structures or objects, or the relation between two parts of a single structure, each having its own function. National Brake & Electric Co. v. Christensen, C. C.A.Wis., 229 F. 564, 570. As applied to buildings, the term is often synonymous with "annexed." Williams Mfg. Co. v. Insurance Co. of North America, 93 Vt. 161, 106 A. 657, 659.

The word "attached," in an affidavit of service of a notice, used to designate a notice appearing on the reverse side of the affidavit, is improper. Wood v. Yearous, 159 Iowa, 211, 140 N.W. 362, 364.

ATTACHIAMENTA BONORUM. A distress form-erly taken upon goods and chattels, by the legal attachiators or bailiffs, as security to answer an action for personal estate or debt.

ATTACHIAMENTA DE SPINIS ET BOSCIS. A privilege granted to the officers of a forest to take to their own use thorns, brush, and windfalls, within their precincts. Kenn.Par.Antiq. 209.

ATTACHIAMENTUM. L. Lat. An attachment.

ATTACHMENT. The act or process of taking, apprehending, or seizing persons or property, by virtue of a writ, summons, or other judicial order, and bringing the same into the custody of the law; used either for the purpose of bringing a person before the court, of acquiring jurisdiction over the property seized, to compel an appearance, to furnish security for debt or costs, or to arrest a fund in the hands of a third person who may become liable to pay it over. Also the writ or other process for the accomplishment of the purposes above enumerated, this being the more common use of the word. A remedy ancillary to an action by which plaintiff is enabled to acquire a lien upon property or effects of defendant for satisfaction of judgment which plaintiff may obtain. First Nat. Bank & Trust Co. of Vermillion v. Kirby, 62 S.D. 489, 253 N.W. 616; Lipscomb v. Rankin, Tex.Civ.App., 139 S.W.2d 367, 369. Though sometimes called an ancillary or auxiliary proceeding, it is in all essential respects, a suit. Farmers State Bank of Lexington v. Lemper, 130 Neb. 211, 264 N.W. 415, 416.

The purpose is to take defendant’s property into legal custody, so that it may be applied on defendant’s debt to plaintiff when established. John Deere Plow Co. of St. Louis v. L. D. Jennings, Inc., 203 S.C. 426, 27 S.E.2d 571, 572; Union Bank & Trust Co. v. Edwards, 281 Ky. 693, 137 S.W.2d 344, 348. At common law, "attachment" was procedure whereby sheriff was, commanded to attach a defendant who, after being personally served, disobeyed original writ of summons, by keeping certain of his goods which he would forfeit if he did not appear, or by making him find securities who would be merged if he continued his nonappearance, and, if after such attachment he still neglected to appear, he would not only forfeit this security, but was compelled by a writ of distraings infinite. Grimmett v. Barnwell, 184 Ga. 461, 192 S.E. 191, 194, 116 A.L.R. 257.

Execution and attachment distinguished. See Execution.

Persons

A writ issued by a court of record, commanding the sheriff to bring before it a person who has been guilty of contempt of court, either in neglect or abuse of its process or of subordinate powers. 3 Bl.Comm. 280; 4 Bl.Comm. 283; Commonwealth v. Shetzer, 250 Pa. 282, 95 A. 468, 470.

Property

A species of mesne process, by which a writ is issued at the institution or during the progress of an action, commanding the sheriff to seize the property, rights, credits, or effects of the defendant to be held as security for the satisfaction of such judgment as the plaintiff may recover. It is principally used against absconding, concealed, or fraudulent debtors. U. S. Capsule Co. v. Isaacs, 23 Ind.App. 533, 55 N.E. 832.

To Give Jurisdiction

Where the defendant is a non-resident, or beyond the territorial jurisdiction of the court, his goods or land within the territory may be seized upon process of attachment; whereby he will be compelled to enter an appearance, or the court acquires jurisdiction so far as to dispose of the property attached. This is sometimes called "foreign attachment." Megee v. Beirne, 39 Pa. 50; Bray v. McClury, 55 Mo. 128. In such a case, the proceeding becomes in substance one in rem against the attached property. St. John v. Parsons, 54 Ohio App. 420, 7 N.E.2d 1013, 1014.

Domestic and Foreign

In some jurisdictions it is common to give the name "domestic attachment" to one issuing against a resident debtor, (upon the special ground of fraud, intention to abscond, etc.) and to designate an attachment against a non-resident, or his property, as "foreign." Longwell v. Hartwell, 30 A. 495, 164 Pa. 533; David E. Kennedy, Inc. v. Schleindl, 290 Pa. 38, 137 A. 815, 816, 53 A.L.R. 1020.

But the term "foreign attachment" more properly belongs to the process otherwise familiarly known as garnishment. It was a peculiar and ancient remedy open to creditors within the jurisdiction of the city of London, by which they were enabled to satisfy their own debts by attaching or seizing the money or goods of the debtor in the hands of a third person within the jurisdiction of the city. Welsh v. Blackwell, 14 N.J.Law, 346. This power and process survive in modern law, in all common-law jurisdictions, and are variously denominated "garnishment," "trustee process," or "factorizing." Rague v. McConnell, 25 Pa. 362, 363. A "foreign attachment" is a mesne process issued to compel a foreign debtor to appear to the suit of his creditor, while "attachment execution" is a final process issued for the purpose of enforcing a judgment already obtained. Williams v. Ricca, 324 Pa. 33, 187 A. 722, 723.
ATTACHMENT EXECUTION. A name given in some states to a process of garnishment for the satisfaction of a judgment. As to the judgment debtor it is an execution; but as to the garnishee it is an original process—a summons commanding him to appear and show cause, if any he has, why the judgment should not be levied on the goods and effects of the defendant in his hands. Sniderman v. Nerone, 7 A.2d 496, 499, 136 Pa. Super. 381.

ATTACHMENT OF PRIVILEGE. In English law. A process by which a man, by virtue of his privilege, calls another to litigate in that court to which he himself belongs, and who has the privilege to answer there. A writ issued to apprehend a person in a privileged place. Terms de la Ley.

ATTACHMENT OF THE FOREST. One of the three courts formerly held in forests. The highest court was called “justice in eyre’s seat;” the middle, the “swainmore;” and the lowest, the “attachment.” Manwood, 90, 99.

ATTAIN. To reach or come to by progression or motion; to arrive at; as, to attain a ripe old age. Watkins v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 156 Kan. 27, 131 P.2d 722, 723.

ATTAINDER. That extinction of civil rights and capacities which takes place whenever a person who has committed treason or felony receives sentence of death for his crime. 1 Steph.Com. 408; 1 Bish. Cr.L. § 641; State v. Hastings, 37 Neb. 96, 55 N.W. 781.

The effect of “attainder” upon such felon is, in general terms, that all his estate, real and personal, is forfeited. Caldwell v. Hill, 179 Ga. 417, 176 S.E. 381, 386, 98 A.L.R. 1124. It differs from conviction, in that it is after judgment, whereas conviction is upon the verdict of guilty, but before judgment pronounced, and may be quashed upon some point of law reserved, or judgment may be arrested. The consequences of attainder are forfeiture of property and corruption of blood. 4 Bl.Comm. 380. At the common law, attainder resulted in three ways, viz.: by confession, by verdict, and by process or outlawry. The first case was where the prisoner pleaded guilty at the bar, or having fled to sanctuary, confessed his guilt and abjured the realm to the face of the court. The second was where the prisoner pleaded not guilty at the bar, and the jury brought in a verdict against him. The third, when the person accused made his escape and was outlawed. Coke, Litt. 391.

In England, by statute 33 & 34 Vict. c. 23, attainder upon conviction, with consequent corruption of blood, forfeiture, or escheat, is abolished. In the United States, the doctrine of attainder is now, scarcely known, although during and shortly after the Revolution acts of attainder were passed by several of the states. The passage of such bills is expressly forbidden by the constitution.

Bill of Attainder

A legislative act, directed against a designated person, pronouncing him guilty of an alleged crime, (usually treason,) without trial or conviction according to the recognized rules of procedure, and passing sentence of death and attainder upon him.

“Bills of attainder,” as they are technically called, are such special acts of the legislature as inflict capital punishments upon persons supposed to be guilty of high offenses, such as treason and felony, without any conviction in the ordinary course of judicial proceedings. If an act inflicts a milder degree of punishment than death, it is called a “bill of pains and penalties,” but both are included in the prohibition in the Federal constitution. Losier v. Sherman, 157 Kan. 153, 138 P.2d 272, 273; State v. Graves, 352 Mo. 1102, 182 S.W.2d 46, 54.

ATTAIN’T. Attainted, stained, or blackened.

In old English practice. A writ which lay to inquire whether a jury of twelve men had given a false verdict, in order that the judgment might be reversed. 3 Bl.Comm. 402; Bract. fol. 288b-292; Fleta, 1, 5, c. 22, § 8.

This inquiry was made by a grand assize or jury of twenty-four persons, usually knights, and, if they found the verdict a false one, the judgment was that the jurors should become infamous, should forfeit their goods and the profits of their lands, should themselves be imprisoned, and their wives and children thrust out of doors, should have their houses razed, their trees extirpated, and their meadows plowed up, and that the plaintiff should be restored to all that he lost by reason of the unjust verdict. 3 Bl.Comm. 404; Co.Litt. 294b.

ATTAIN D’UNE CAUSE, In French law. The gain of a suit.

ATTEMPT.

In Civil Matters

In Criminal Law

An effort or endeavor to accomplish a crime, amounting to more than mere preparation or planning for it, which, if not prevented, would have resulted in the full consummation of the act attempted, but which, in fact, does not bring to pass the party’s ultimate design. Dooley v. State, 27 Ala.App. 261, 170 So. 96, 98.

Acts amounting to mere preparation for commission of crime, if unaccompanied by some overt act toward actual commission, do not amount to an “attempt” and cannot be punished as such. People v. Lombard, 131 Cal.App. 525, 21 P.2d 955. Implies an intent and an actual effort to carry out or consummate the intent or purpose. Dooley v. State, 27 Ala.App. 261, 170 So. 96, 97, 98.

To constitute an act of attempt, the act must possess four characteristics: First, it must be a step toward a punishable offense; second, it must be apparently (but not necessarily in reality) adapted to the purpose intended; third, it must come dangerously near to success; fourth, it must not succeed. State v. Ainsworth, 146 Kan. 261, 107 So. 103, 104.

ATTENDANT, n. One who owes a duty or service to another, or in some sort depends upon him. Terms de la Ley. One who follows and waits upon another.

ATTENDANT TERMS. In English law, terms, (usually mortgages,) for a long period of years, which are created or kept outstanding for the ATTORNARE. Lat. To attorn; to transfer or turn over; to appoint an attorney or substitute.

ATTEST. To bear witness to; to bear witness to a fact; to affirm to be true or genuine; to act as a witness to; to certify; to certify to the verity of a copy of a public document; formally by signature; to make solemn declaration in words or writing to support a fact; to signify by subscription of his name that the signer has witnessed the execution of the particular instrument. Lind- sey v. Realty Trust Co., Tex.Civ.App., 75 S.W.2d 322, 324; City Lumber Co. of Bridgeport v. Gorsuk, 131 Conn. 640, 41 A.2d 775, 778.

Also the technical word by which, in the practice in many of the states, a certifying officer gives assurance of the genuineness and correctness of a copy. Thus, an "attested" copy of a document is one which has been examined and compared with the original, with a certificate or memorandum of its correctness, signed by the persons who have examined it. Gerner v. Mosher, 58 Neb. 135, 78 N.W. 384, 46 L.R.A. 244.

ATTESTATION. The act of witnessing an instrument in writing, at the request of the party making the same, and subscribing it as a witness. In re Jones’ Estate, 101 Wash. 128, 172 P. 206, 207. The act of witnessing the execution of a paper and subscribing the name of the witness in testimony of such fact. In re Carlson’s Estate, 156 Or. 597, 68 P.2d 119, 121.

Execution and attestation are clearly distinct formalities; the former being the act of the party, the latter of the witnesses only. Subscription differs from attestation, in that the former is the mere manual or mechanical act of signing—the act of the hand, whereas the latter signifies the mental act of bearing witness to—the act of the senses. In re Smith’s Estate, 130 Neb. 739, 266 N.W. 611, 613.

ATTESTATION CLAUSE. That clause wherein the witnesses certify that the instrument has been executed before them, and the manner of the execution of the same.

In wills. A certificate certifying as to facts and circumstances attending execution of will. In re Bragg’s Estate, 106 Mont. 132, 76 P.2d 57, 62.

There is some authority to the effect that there may be a perfect attestation without subscription, on the theory that attestation is mental, and subscription is mechanical. In re Chambers’ Estate, 187 Wash. 417, 60 P.2d 41, 44.

ATTESTED COPY. See Attest.

ATTESTING WITNESS. One who signs his name to an instrument, at the request of the party or parties, for the purpose of proving and identifying it. In re McDonough’s Estate, 193 N.Y.S. 734, 736, 201 App.Div. 203.

ATTESTOR. One who attests or vouches for.

ATTESTOR OF A CAUTIONER. In Scotch practice. A person who attests the sufficiency of a cautioner, and agrees to become subsidiarie liable for the debt. Bell.

ATTILE. In old English law. The rigging or furniture of a ship. Jacob, L.Dict. Rigging; tackle. Cowell.

ATTINCTA, L. Lat. An attainit, stain, or blackening; a conviction or finding of guilty of some offense. Adams Gloss.

ATTORN. To turn over; to transfer to another money or goods; to assign to some particular use or service. Hemminger v. Klaprath, 15 N.J. Misc. 163, 189 A. 363, 364. To consent to the transfer of a rent or reversion. To agree to become tenant to one as owner or landlord of an estate previously held of another, or to agree to recognize a new owner of a property or estate and promise payment of rent to him. Hurley v. Stevens, 220 Mo.App. 1057, 279 S.W. 720, 722.

Feudal Law

To turn over; to transfer to another money or goods; to assign to some particular use or service. 2 Bla.Comm. 288; 1 Spence, Eq.Jur. 137.

Where a lord aliened his seigniory, he might, with the consent of the tenant, and in some cases without, attorn or transfer the homage and service of the latter to the alienor or new lord. Bract. fols. 81b, 82.

ATTORNARE, Lat. To attorn; to transfer or turn over; to appoint an attorney or substitute.
ATTORNAE

ATTORNAE REM. To turn over money or goods, i.e., to assign or appropriate them to some particular use or service.

ATTORNAE FACIENDO VEI RECIPIENDO. An obsolete writ, which commanded a sheriff or steward of a county court or hundred court to receive and admit an attorney to appear for the person that owed suit of court. Fitz. N.B. 156, 349.

ATTORNAUS. One who is attorne$$y, or put in the place of another; a substitute; hence, an attorney. 7 C.J.S. p. 694.

ATTORNAUS FERE IN OMNIBUS PERSONAM DOMINI REPRESENTAT. An attorney represents the person of his master in almost all respects. Adams Gloss., citing Bract. fol. 342.

ATTORNEY. In the most general sense this term denotes an agent or substitute, or one who is appointed and authorized to act in the place or stead of another. Nardi v. Poinsatte, D.C. Ind., 46 F.2d 347, 348. An agent, or one acting on behalf of another. Sherts v. Fulton Nat. Bank of Lancaster, 342 Pa. 337, 21 A.2d 18.

When used with reference to the proceedings of courts, or the transaction of business in the courts, the term always means ‘attorney at law’ (q.v.) unless a contrary meaning is clearly indicated. In re Morse, 98 Vt. 85, 126 A. 550, 551, 36 A.L.R. 527.

‘Lawyer’ and ‘attorney’ are synonymous. People v. Taylor, 56 Colo. 441, 138 P. 762, 763.

—Attorney ad hoc. See Ad Hoc.

—Attorney at law. An advocate, counsel, or official agent employed in preparing, managing, and trying cases in the courts. An officer in a court trying cases in the courts. An officer in a court.

—Attorney of the wards and liveries. In English law. This was the third officer of the duchy court. Bac.Abr. “Attorney.”

—Attorney’s certificate. In English practice, a certificate of the commissioners of stamps that the attorney therein named has paid the annual tax or duty. This must be renewed yearly; and the penalty for practising without such certificate is fifty pounds; Stat. 37 Geo. III. c. 90, §§ 26, 28, 30. See also 7 & 8 Vict. c. 73, §§ 21-26; 16 & 17 Vict. c. 63.

—Attorney’s lien. See Attorney’s Lien.

—Letter of attorney. A power of attorney; a written instrument by which one person constitutes another his true and lawful attorney, in order that the latter may do for the former, and in his place and stead, some lawful act. People v. Smith, 112 Mich. 192, 70 N.W. 466, 67 Am.St.Rep. 392. An instrument of writing, appointing an attorney in fact for an avowed purpose and setting forth his powers and duties. Mullins v. Commonwealth, 179 Ky. 71, 200 S.W. 9, 11. It is, in effect, a mere contract of agency. Filsch v. Bishop, 118 Okl. 272, 247 P. 1110, 1111. A general power authorizes the agent to act generally in behalf of the principal. A special power is one limited to particular acts.

—Power of attorney. Commonly meant the instrument by which authority of one person to act in place and stead of another as attorney in fact is set forth. In re Katz’ Estate, 274 N.Y.S. 202, 152 Misc. 757.

—Public attorney. A name sometimes given to an attorney at law, as distinguished from a private attorney, or attorney in fact.
ATTORNEY GENERAL.

English Law

The chief law officer of the realm, being created by letters patent, whose office is to exhibit informations and prosecute for the crown in matters criminal, and to file bills in the exchequer in any matter concerning the king's revenue. 3 Bla. Comm. 27; Termes de la Ley; Wilentz v. Hendrickson, 133 N.J.Eq. 447, 33 A.2d 366, 374.

American Law

The attorney general of the United States is the head of the department of justice, appointed by the president, and a member of the cabinet. He appears in behalf of the government in all cases in the supreme court in which the government is interested, and gives his legal advice to the president and heads of departments upon questions submitted to him. Act of Sept. 24, 1789 (5 U.S.C.A. §§ 291, 303, 309).

He is the chief law officer of the federal and state governments with the duty of representing the sovereign, national or state. Johnson v. Commonwealth, ex rei. Meredith, 291 Ky. 829, 165 S.W.2d 820, 826.

In each state also there is an attorney general, or similar officer, who appears for the people, as in England the attorney general appears for the crown. State v. District Court, 22 Mont. 25, 55 Pac. 916; He is the chief law officer of the state and head of the legal department. People v. Newcomer, 284 Ill. 315, 120 N.E. 244, 247; Darling Apartment Co. v. Springer, 22 A.2d 397, 403, 25 Del. 420, 137 A.L.R. 803.

ATTORNEY'S LIEN. The right of an attorney at law to hold or retain in his possession the money or property of a client until his proper charges have been adjusted and paid. It requires no equitable proceeding for its establishment. Sweeney v. Sieman, 123 Iowa, 183, 98 N.W. 571. Also a lien on funds in court payable to the client, or on a judgment or decree or award in his favor, recovered through the exertions of the attorney, and for the enforcement of which he must invoke the equitable aid of the court. Fowler v. Lewis, 36 W. Va. 112, 14 S.E. 447.

Charging lien. An attorney's lien, for his proper compensation, on the fund or judgment which his client has recovered by means of his professional aid and services. Goodrich v. McDonald, 112 N.Y. 157, 19 N.E. 649; In re Craig, 157 N.Y.S. 310, 311, 171 App. Div. 218. It is a specific lien covering only the services rendered by an attorney in the action in which the judgment was obtained, whereas a retaining lien is a general lien for the balance of the account between the attorney and his client, and applies to the property of the client which may come into the attorney's possession in the course of his employment. In re Heinsheimer, 143 N.Y.S. 895, 896, 159 App. Div. 33.

Retaining lien. The lien which an attorney has upon all his client's papers, deeds, vouchers, etc., which remain in his possession, entitling him to retain them until satisfaction of his claims for professional services. In re Wilson, D.C.N.Y., 12 F. 239; It is a general lien. Roxana Petroleum Co. v. Rice, 109 Okl. 161, 235 P. 502, 507.

ATTORNEYSHIP. The office of an agent or attorney.

ATTENTION. In feudal and old English law. A turning over or transfer by a lord of the services of his tenant to the grantee of his seigniory.

Attornment is the act of a person who holds a leasehold interest in land, or estate for life or years, by which he agrees to become the tenant of a stranger who has acquired the fee in the land, or the remainder or reversion, or the right to the rent or services by which the tenant holds. Snyder v. Bernstein Bros., 201 Iowa, 931, 208 N.W. 503, 504. It is an act by which a tenant acknowledges his obligation to a new landlord. Del-New Co. v. James, 167 A. 747, 748, 111 N.J.L. 157.

And requires an overt act by the tenant. Hemminger v. Klaprath, 189 A. 363, 15 N.J.Misc. 163.

The doctrine of attornment grew out of the peculiar relations existing between the landlord and his tenant under the feudal law, and the reasons for the law to hold or retain in his possession the money covered through the exertions of the attorney, and those have been adjusted and paid. It requires no equitable proceeding for its establishment. Sweeley v. McDonald, 112 N.Y. 157, 19 N.E. 649; In re Craig, 284 Ill. 315, 120 N.E. 244, 247; Darling Apartment Co. v. Springer, 22 A.2d 397, 403, 25 Del. 420, 137 A.L.R. 803.

It is a specific lien covering only the services rendered by an attorney in the action in which the judgment was obtained, whereas a retaining lien is a general lien for the balance of the account between the attorney and his client, and applies to the property of the client which may come into the attorney's possession in the course of his employment. In re Heinsheimer, 143 N.Y.S. 895, 896, 159 App. Div. 33.

AU BESOIN. Fr. In case of need. "Au besoin chez Messieurs..." "In case of need, apply to Messrs..." A phrase sometimes used in the direction of a bill of exchange, pointing out the person to whom application may be made for payment in case of failure or refusal of the drawee to pay. Story, Bills § 65.

A sale by auction is a sale by public outcry to the highest bidder on the spot. Barber Lumber Co. v. Gifford, 25 Idaho, 654, 139 P. 557, 560.

While auction is very generally defined as a sale to the highest bidder, and this is the usual meaning, there may be a sale to the lowest bidder, as where land is sold for non-payment of taxes to whomsoever will take it for the shortest term; or where a contract is offered to the one who will perform it at the lowest price. And these appear fairly included in the term "auction." Abbott.

Dutch Auction

A method of sale by auction which consists in the public offer of the property at a price beyond its value, and then gradually lowering the price until some one becomes the purchaser. Crandall v. State, 28 Ohio St. 482.

PUBLIC AUCTION

A sale of property at auction, where any and all persons who choose are permitted to attend and offer bids. The phrase imports a sale to the highest and best bidder with absolute freedom for competitive bidding. State v. Miller, 52 Mont. 562, 160 P. 513, 515.

Though this phrase is frequently used, it is doubtful whether the word "public" adds anything to the force of the expression, since "auction" itself imports publicity. If there can be such a thing as a private auction, it must be where the property is sold to the highest bidder, but only certain persons, or a certain class of persons, are permitted to be present or to offer bids.

AUCTIONARIES. Catalogues of goods for public sale or auction.

AUCTIONARIUS. A seller; a regrator; a retailer; one who bought and sold; an auctioneer, in the modern sense. Spelman, Gloss. One who buys poor, old, worn-out things to sell again at a greater price. Du Cange.

AUCTIONEER. A person authorized or licensed by law to sell lands or goods of other persons at public auction; one who sells at auction. City of Chicago v. Ornstein, 323 Ill. 258, 154 N.E. 100, 112 A.L.R. 489; One who sells goods at public auction for another on commission, or for a recompense. State ex rel. Danziger v. Recorder of Mortgages for Parish of Orleans, 206 La. 259, 19 So.2d 129, 132.

Auctioneers differ from brokers, in that the latter may both buy and sell, whereas auctioneers can only sell; also brokers may sell by private contract only, and auctioneers by public auction only. Auctioneers can only sell goods for ready money, but factors may sell upon credit. Wilkes v. Ellis, 2 H. Bl. 557; Steward v. Winters, 4 Sandf.Ch. (N. Y.) 590.

AUCTORITAS. In the civil law. Authority.

In old European law. A diploma, or royal charter. A word frequently used by Gregory of Tours and later writers. Spelman.

AUCTORITATES PHILOSOPHORUM, MEDICORUM, ET POETARUM, SUNT IN CAUSIS ALLEGANDZE ET TENENDJE. The opinions of philosophers, physicians, and poets are to be alleged and received in causes. Co.Litt. 264.

AUCUPIA VERBORUM SUNT JUDICE INDIGENA. Catching at words is unworthy of a judge. Hob. 343. Applied in State v. Flemming, 66 Me. 142, 151, 22 Am.R. 552.

AUDI ALTERAM PARTEM. Hear the other side; hear both sides. No man should be condemned unheard. Broom, Max. 113; L.R. 2 P.C. 106; Lowry v. Inman, 46 N.Y. 119; Shaw v. Stone, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 243.

AUDIENCE. In international law. A hearing; interview with the sovereign. The king or other chief executive of a country grants an audience to a foreign minister who comes to him duly accredited; and, after the recall of a minister, an "audience of leave" ordinarily is accorded to him.

AUDIENCE COURT. In English law. A court belonging to the Archbishop of Canterbury, having jurisdiction of matters of form only, as the confirmation of bishops, and the like. This court has the same authority with the Court of Arches, but is of inferior dignity and antiquity. The Dean of the Arch is the official auditor of the Audience court. The Archbishop of York has also his Audience court.

AUDIENDO ET TERMINANDO. A writ or commission to certain persons to appease and punish any insurrection or great riot. Fitzh.Nat.Brev. 110.

AUDIT, n. The process of auditing accounts; the hearing and investigation had before an auditor. People v. Barnes, 114 N.Y. 317, 20 N.E. 609; An official examination of an account or claim, comparing vouchers, charges, and fixing the balance. Williams v. Tompkins, Tex.Civ.App., 42 S.W.2d 106, 110.

AUDIT, v. To hear; to examine an account; and in a broad sense it includes its adjustment or allowance, disallowance, or rejection. New York Catholic Protectors v. Rockland County, 144 N.Y. S. 552, 556, 159 App.Div. 455. An audience; a hearing; an examination in general; a formal or official examination and authentication of accounts, with witnesses, vouchers, etc. Green-Boots Const. Co. v. State Highway Commission, 165 Oki. 288, 25 P.2d 783.

Sometimes restricted to a mere mathematical calculation or process, but, in its generally accepted sense, includes an investigation and weighing of the evidence and deciding of whether entries in books are true and correct. Lumber Mut. Casualty Ins. Co. of New York v. Horowitz, 1 N.Y.S.2d 191, 193, 165 Misc. 506.
AUDITA QUERELA. The name of a writ constituting the initial process in an action brought by a judgment defendant to obtain relief against the consequences of the judgment, on account of some matter of defense or discharge, arising since its rendition and which could not be taken advantage of otherwise. Barnett v. Gitlitz, 290 Ill.App. 212, 8 N.E.2d 517, 520. May also lie for matters arising before judgment where defendant had no opportunity to raise such matters in defense. Louis E. Bower, Inc., v. Silverstein, 298 Ill.App. 145, 18 N.E.2d 385, 387.

In some states, where the same relief may be obtained by motion, the remedy by motion has superseded the ancient remedy.

AUDITOR. A public officer whose function is to examine and pass upon the accounts and vouchers of officers who have received and expended public money by lawful authority. An officer who examines accounts and verifies the accuracy of the statements therein. Hicks v. Davis, 100 Kan. 4, 163 P. 799.

General

Auditor of the imprest. Any of several officers in the English exchequer, who formerly had the charge of auditing the accounts of the customs, naval and military expenses, etc., now performed by the commissioners for auditing public accounts. Jacob.

State auditor. An officer whose business is to examine and certify accounts and claims against the state and to keep an account between the state and its treasurer. State v. Jorgenson, 29 N.D. 173, 150 N.W. 565, 567.

English Law

An officer or agent of the crown, or of a private individual, or corporation, who examines periodically the accounts of under officers, tenants, stewards, or bailiffs, and reports the state of their accounts to his principal.

Practice

An officer (or officers) of the court, assigned to state the items of debit and credit between the parties in a suit where accounts are in question, and exhibit the balance. Campbell v. Crout, 3 R.I. 60.

AUGMENTATION. The increase of the crown’s revenues from the suppression of religious houses and the appropriation of their lands and revenues. Also the name of a court (now abolished) erected 27 Hen. VIII., to determine suits and controversies relating to monasteries and abbey-lands. The court was dissolved in the reign of Mary, but the office of augmentations remained long after. Cowell.

A share of the great tithes temporarily granted to the vicars by the appropriators, and made perpetual by statute 29 Car. II. c. 8. The word is used in a similar sense in the Canadian law.

AUGUSTA LEGIBUS SOLUTA NON EST. The empress or queen is not privileged or exempted from subjection to the laws. 1 Bl.Comm. 219; Dig. 1, 3, 31.

AULA. In old English law. A hall, or court; the court of a baron, or manor; a court baron. Spelman.

This word was employed in mediaeval England along with curia; it was used of the meetings of the lord’s men held there in the same way that the word court was used. McIlwain, High Court of Parl. 30.

AULA ECCLESLE. A nave or body of a church where temporal courts were anciently held.

AULA REGIS. (Called also Aula Regia.) The king’s hall or palace. The chief court of England in early Norman times. It was established by William the Conqueror in his own hall. It was composed of the great officers of state, resident in the palace, and followed the king’s household in all his expeditions. See, also, Curia Regis.

AULIC. Pertaining to a royal court.

AULIC COUNCIL. In the old German empire, the personal council of the emperor, and one of the two supreme courts of the empire which decided without appeal. It was instituted about 1502, was modified in 1654, and ceased to exist on the extinction of the German Empire in 1806. The title was also given to the Council of State of the former Emperor of Austria. Cent.Dict.

AULNAGE. See Alnager.

AULNER. See Alnager.

AUMONE, SERVICE IN. Where lands are given in alms to some church or religious house, upon condition that a service or prayers shall be offered at certain times for the repose of the donor’s soul. Britt. 164.

AUNCHEL WEIGHT. In English law. An ancient mode of weighing, described by Cowell as “a kind of weight with scales hanging, or hooks fastened to each end of a staff, which a man, lifting up upon his forefinger or hand, discerneth the quality or difference between the weight and the thing weighed.”
AUNT

AUNT. The sister of one's father or mother, and a relation in the third degree, correlative to niece or nephew. See 2 Comyn, Dig. 474; Dane, Abr. c. 126, a. 3, § 4.

AURA EPILEPTICA. In medical jurisprudence, a term used to designate the sensation of a cold vapor frequently experienced by epileptics before the loss of consciousness occurs in an epileptic fit. Aurentz v. Anderson, 3 Pittsb.R. (Pa.) 311.

AURES. A Saxon punishment by cutting off the ears, inflicted on those who robbed churches, or were guilty of any other theft.

AURUM REGINAE. Queen’s gold. A royal revenue belonging to every queen consort during her marriage with the king.

AUSTRALIAN BALLOT. An official ballot on which the names of all the candidates are printed. Its use is accompanied by safeguards designed to maintain secrecy in voting. The so-called Australian ballot laws, widely adopted in various forms in the United States, have generally been sustained by the courts. 29 C.J.S. p. 224.

AUTER, Autre. L. Fr. Another; other. See Autre.

AUTHENTIC. Genuine; true; real; pure; reliable; trustworthy; having the character and authority of an original; duly vested with all necessary formalities and legally attested; competent, credible, and reliable as evidence. Downing v. Brown, 3 Colo. 590; Woods v. Jastremski, 201 La. 1092, 11 So.2d 4, 8.

AUTHENTIC ACT. In the civil law. An act which has been executed before a notary or public officer authorized to execute such functions, or which is testified by a public seal, or has been rendered public by the authority of a competent magistrate, or which is certified as being a copy of a public register. Nov. 73, c. 2; Cod. 7, 52, 6, 4, 21; Dig. 22, 4; Mossier Acceptance Co. v. Osborne, La. App., 14 So.2d 492, 493.

AUTHENTICATION. In the law of evidence. The act or mode of giving authority or legal authenticity to, a statute, record, or other written instrument, or a certified copy thereof, so as to render it legally admissible in evidence. Volo- shin v. Ridenour, C.C.A.Canal Zone, 299 F. 134. Verifications of judgments. Collette v. Hanson, 174 A. 466, 467, 133 Me. 146.

An attestation made by a proper officer by which he certifies that a record is in due form of law, and that the person who certifies it is the officer appointed so to do. Acts done with a view of causing an instrument to be known and identified.

AUTHENTICS. In the civil law. A Latin translation of the Novels of Justinian by an anonymous author; so called because the Novels were translated entire, in order to distinguish it from the epitome made by Julian. 1 Mackeldy, Civ. Law, § 72. A collection of extracts made from the Novels by a lawyer named Irnier, which he inserted in the code at the places to which they refer. These extracts have the reputation of not being correct. Merlin, Rôpert. Authentique.

AUTHENTICUM. In the civil law. An original instrument or writing; the original of a will or other instrument, as distinguished from a copy. Dig. 22, 4; ld. 29, 3, 12.

A beginner or mover of anything; hence efficient cause of a thing; creator; originator; a composer, as distinguished from an editor, translator or compiler. Remick Music Corp. v. Interstate Hotel Co. of Neb., D.C.Neb., 58 F.Supp. 923, 931.

AUTHORITIES. Citations to statutes, precedents, judicial decisions, and text-books of the law, made on the argument of questions of law or the trial of causes before a court, in support of the legal positions contended for, or adduced to fortify the opinion of a court or of a text writer upon any question.

General

Authority by estoppel. Not actual, but apparent only, being imposed on the principal because his conduct has been such as to mislead, so that it would be unjust to let him deny it. Moore v. Switzer, 78 Colo. 63, 239 P. 874, 875. See Apparent Authority.

Authority coupled with an interest. Authority given to an agent for a valuable consideration, or which forms part of a security. See Unger v. Newlin Haines Co., 94 N.J.Eq. 458, 120 A. 331, 335.

Apparent authority. That which, though not actually granted, the principal knowingly permits the agent to exercise, or which he holds him out as possessing. L. E. Mumford Banking Co. v. Farmers’ & Merchants’ Bank of Kilmarnock, 116 Va. 449, 82 S.E. 112, 118. See Authority by Es- toppel.
Express authority. That given explicitly, either in writing or orally. See Express Authority.

General authority. That which authorizes the agent to do everything connected with a particular business. Story, Ag. § 17. It empowers him to bind his principal by all acts within the scope of his employment; and it cannot be limited by any private direction not known to the party dealing with him. Paley, Ag. 199.

Implied authority. Actual authority circumstantially proved. Koivisto v. Bankers' & Merchants' Fire Ins. Co., 148 Minn. 255, 181 N.W. 580, 582. That which the principal intends his agent to possess, and which is implied from the principal's conduct. Moore v. Switzer, 78 Colo. 63, 239 P. 874, 875. It includes only such acts as are incident and necessary to the exercise of the authority expressly granted. Coulson v. Stevens, 122 Miss. 797, 85 So. 83, 85.

Limited authority. Such authority as the agent has when he is bound by precise instructions.

Naked authority. That arising where the principal delegates the power to the agent wholly for the benefit of the former.

Special authority. That which is confined to an individual transaction. Whitehead v. Tuckett, 15 East, 400, 408. Such an authority does not bind the principal, unless it is strictly pursued. Paley, Ag. 202.

Unlimited authority. That possessed by an agent when he is left to pursue his own discretion.

Governmental Law

Legal power; a right to command or to act; the right and power of public officers to require obedience to their orders lawfully issued in the scope of their public duties.

In the English law relating to public administration, an authority is a body having jurisdiction in certain matters of a public nature.

AUTHORIZE. To empower; to give a right or authority to act. Board of Com’rs of Sedgwick County v. Toland, 121 Kan. 109, 245 P. 1019, 1021. To clothe with authority, warrant, or legal power. Arkansas & Memphis Ry. Bridge & Terminal Co. v. State, 174 Ark. 420, 295 S.W. 378, 380. To permit a thing to be done in the future. Gray v. Gill, 210 N.Y.S. 658, 660, 125 Misc. 70. It has a mandatory effect or meaning, implying a direction to act. Quality Building & Securities Co. v. Bledsoe, 125 Cal.App. 493, 14 P.2d 128, 132.

"Authorized" is sometimes construed as equivalent to "permitted"; Crecelius v. Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 274 Mo. 671, 205 S.W. 181, 186; and sometimes as equivalent to "directed"; U. S. Sugar Equalization Board v. P. De Ronde & Co., C.C.A.Del., 7 F.2d 981, 986; or to similar mandatory language. Catron v. Marron, 19 N.M. 200, 142 P. 380, 382. The word indicates merely possessed of authority; that is, possessed of legal or rightful power, the synonym of which is "competency." Doherty v. Kansas City Star Co., 143 Kan. 802, 57 P.2d 43, 45.

AUTO ACORDADO. In Spanish colonial law. An order emanating from some superior tribunal, promulgated in the name and by the authority of the sovereign. Schm.Civil Law, 93.

AUTO LIVERY SERVICE. The business of furnishing for hire an automobile with a chauffeur, the car to be driven where the hirer directs. The term is also applied to the business of leasing driverless cars. See Collette v. Page, 44 R.I. 26, 114 A. 136, 18 A.L.R. 74.

See Automobile; Drive it Yourself Cars.

AUTO-OPTIC EVIDENCE. An exhibit of a thing offered before jury as evidence to be seen through jury's own eyes. Johnson v. State, 139 Tex.Cr.R. 279, 139 S.W.2d 579, 581. See, also, Autoptic Preference.

AUTO STAGE. A motor vehicle used for the purpose of carrying passengers, baggage, or freight on a regular schedule of time and rates. State v. Ferry Line Auto Bus Co., 99 Wash. 64, 168 P. 893, 894. See Automobile.

AUTOCRACY. The name of an unlimited monarchical government. A government at the will of one man, (called an "autocrat,") unchecked by constitutional restrictions or limitations.

AUTOGRAPH. One's handwriting.

AUTOMATISM. In medical jurisprudence, this term is applied to actions or conduct of an individual apparently occurring without will, purpose, or reasoned intention on his part; a condition sometimes observed in persons who, without being actually insane, suffer from an obscuration of the mental faculties, loss of volition or of memory, or kindred affections. "Ambulatory automatism" describes the pathological impulse to purposeless and irresponsible wanderings from place to place often characteristic of patients suffering from loss of memory with dissociation of personality.

AUTOMOBILE. A vehicle for the transportation of persons or property on the highway, carrying its own motive power and not operated upon fixed For "Auto Stage," "Family Automobile Doctrine," "Family Car Doctrine," and "Family Purpose Doctrine," see those titles.

AUTONOMY. The political independence of a nation; the right (and condition) of power of self-government; the negation of a state of political influence from without or from foreign powers. Lieber, Civ.Lib.; Green v. Obergfell, 121 F.2d 46, 57, 73 App.D.C. 298.

AUTOPTIC PREFERENCE. Proffering or presenting in open court of articles for observation or inspection of the tribunal. Kabase v. State, 31 Ala.App. 77, 12 So.2d 758, 764.

AUTRE. Fr. Another.

AUTRE ACTION PENDANT. In pleading. Another action pending. A species of plea in abatement. 1 Chit.Pl. 454.

AUTRE DROIT. In right of another, e. g., a trustee holds trust property in right of his cestui que trust. A prochein amy sues in right of an infant. 2 Bl.Comm. 176.

AUTRE VIE. Another's life. A person holding an estate for or during the life of another is called a tenant "pur autre vie," or "pur terme d'autre vie." Litt. § 56; 2 Bl.Comm. 120. See Estate Pur Autre Vie.

AUTREFOIS. L. Fr. At another time; formerly; before; heretofore.

AUTREFOIS ACQUIT. Fr. Formerly acquitted. In criminal law. The name of a plea in bar to a criminal action, stating that the defendant has been once already indicted and tried for the same alleged offense and has been acquitted. Simco v. State, 9 Tex.App. 348; State v. Bilton, 156 S.C. 324, 153 S.E. 269, 272.

AUTREFOIS ATTAIN'T. In criminal law. Formerly attainted. A plea that the defendant has already been attainted for one felony, and therefore cannot be criminally prosecuted for another. 4 Bl.Comm. 336; 12 Mod. 109; R. & R. 268. This is not a good plea in bar in the United States, nor in England in modern law. 1 Bish.Cr.L. § 692; Singleton v. State, 71 Miss. 782, 16 So. 295, 42 Am. St.Rep. 488.

AUTREFOIS CONVICT. Fr. Formerly convicted. In criminal law. A plea by a criminal in bar to an indictment that he has been formerly convicted of the same crime. 4 Bl.Comm. 336; 4 Steph.Comm. 404.

AUXILIATOR. Lat. Helper or assistant; the word is closely related to the English word auxiliary. Esta Co. v. Burke, D.C.Pa., 257 F. 743, 746.

AUXILILUM. In feudal and old English law. Aid; compulsory aid, hence a tax or tribute; a kind of tribute paid by the vassal to his lord, being one of the incidents of the tenure by knight's service. Spelman; Fitzh.Nat.Brev. 62.

AUXILILUM AD FILIUM MILITEM FACIENDUM ET FILIAM MARITANDAM. An ancient writ which was addressed to the sheriff to levy compulsorily an aid towards the knighting of a son and the marrying of a daughter of the tenants in capite of the crown.

AUXILILUM CURVE. In old English law. A precept or order of court citing and convening a party, at the suit and request of another, to warrant something. Kenn.Par.Ant. 477.

AUXILILUM REGIS. In English law. The king's aid or money levied for the royal use and the public service, as taxes granted by parliament. A subsidy paid to the king. Spelman.

AUXILILUM VICE COMITI. An ancient duty paid to sheriffs. Cowell.
AVAIL OF MARRIAGE. In feudal law. The right of marriage, which the lord or guardian in chivalry had of disposing of his infant ward in matrimony. A guardian in socage had also the same right, but not attended with the same advantage. 2 Bl.Comm. 88.

In Scotch law. A certain sum due by the heir of a deceased ward vassal, when the heir became of marriageable age. Ersk.Inst. 2, 5, 18.

AVAILABILITY FOR WORK. Within Unemployment Compensation Law requires no more than availability for suitable work which claimant has no good cause for refusing. Hagadone v. Kirkpatrick, 66 Idaho 55, 154 P.2d 181, 182.

AVAILABILITY FOR WORK. Within Unemployment Compensation Law requires no more than availability for suitable work which claimant has no good cause for refusing. Hagadone v. Kirkpatrick, 66 Idaho 55, 154 P.2d 181, 182.

AVAIL. In French law. The guaranty of a bill of exchange; so called because usually placed at the foot or bottom (awl) of the bill. Story, Bills, §§ 394, 454. 11 Harv.L.Rev. 55.

In Canadian law. The act of subscribing one's signature at the bottom of a promissory note or of a bill of exchange; properly an act of suretyship, by the party signing, in favor of the party to whom the note or bill is given. 1 Low.Can. 221; 9 Low.Can. 360.

AVANTURE. L. Fr. Chance; hazard; mischance.

AVARIA, AVARIE. Average; the loss and damage suffered in the course of a navigation. Poth. Mar.Louage, 105.

AVERAGE. A certain quantity of oats paid by a tenant to his landlord as rent, or in lieu of some other duties. Jacob, L.Dict.

AVERAGE. A mean proportion, medial sum or quantity, made out of unequal sums or quantities. If applied to something which is incapable of expression in terms of measure or amount, it signifies that the thing or person referred to is of the ordinary or usual type.

Average charges. "Average charges for toll and transportation" are understood to mean, and do mean, charges made at a mean rate, obtained by dividing the entire receipts for toll and transportation by the whole quantity of tonnage carried, reduced to a common standard of tons moved one mile. Hersh v. Railway Co., 74 Pa. 190.

Average prices. Such as are computed on all the prices of any articles sold within a certain period or district.

General average (also called "gross") consists of expense purposely incurred, sacrifice made, or damage sustained for the common safety of the vessel, freight, and cargo, or the two of them, at risk, and is to be contributed for by the several interests in the proportion of their respective values exposed to the common danger, and ultimately surviving, including the amount of expense, sacrifice, or damage so incurred in the contributory value. Star of Hope v. Annan, 9 Wall. 203, 19 L. Ed. 638; Lex Rhodia, Dig. 14, 2, 1.

"General average" is a contribution by the several interests engaged in a maritime venture to make good the loss of one of them for the voluntary sacrifice of a part of the ship or cargo to save the residue of the property and the lives of those on board, or for extraordinary expenses necessarily incurred for the common benefit and safety of all. California Canneries Co. v. Canton Ins. Office, 25 Cal.App. 303, 143 P. 549, 553. The law of general average is part of the maritime law, and not of the municipal law, and applies to maritime adventures only. Ralli v. Troop, 157 U.S. 386, 15 S.Ct. 657, 39 L.Ed. 742.

Gross average. More commonly called "general average" (q. v.). Where loss or damage occurs to a vessel or its cargo at sea, average is the adjustment and apportionment of such loss between the owner, the freight, and the cargo, in proportion to their respective interests and losses, in order that one may not suffer the whole loss, but each contribute ratably. Coster v. Insurance Co., 2 Wash.C.C. 51, 6 Fed.Cas. 611.

Particular average is a loss happening to the ship, freight, or cargo which is not to be shared by contribution among all those interested, but must be borne by the owner of the subject to which it occurs. It is thus called in contradistinction to general average. Bargett v. Insurance Co., 3 Bosw. (N.Y.) 395.

Petty average denotes such charges and disbursements as, according to occurrences and the custom of every place, the master necessarily furnishes for the benefit of the ship and cargo, either at the place of loading or unloading, or on the voyage; such as the hire of a pilot for conducting a vessel from one place to another, towage, light money, beaconage, anchorage, bridge toll, quarantine and such like. Park, Ins. 100; Le Guidon, c. 5, a. 13; Weyt, de A. 3, 4; Weskett, art. Petty Av.; 2 Phill.Ins. § 1269, n. 1; 2 Arnould, Mar.Ins. 927.

Simple average is the same as "particular average" (q. v.).

In maritime law. Loss or damage accidentally happening to a vessel or to its cargo during a voyage. Also a small duty paid to masters of ships, when goods are sent in another man's ship, for their care of the goods, over and above the freight.

In old English law. A service by horse or carriage, ancienly due by a tenant to his lord. Cowell. A labor or service performed with working cattle, horses, or oxen, or with wagons and carriages. Spelman.

Stubble, or remainder of straw and grass left in corn-fields after harvest. In Kent it is called "gratten," and in other parts "roughings."

AVERIA. In old English law. A term applied to working cattle, such as horses, oxen, etc.
AVIATION, ENGAGED EN. The phrase "engaged in aviation" within the meaning of an insurance policy denotes the act of flying in the air in a machine heavier than air, whether piloting or riding as a passenger. Masonic Acc. Ins. Co. v. Jackson, Ind.App., 147 N.E. 156. See Aeronautics.

AVIZANDUM. In Scotch law. To make avizandum with a process is to take it from the public court to the private consideration of the judge. Bell.

AVOCAT. Fr. An advocate; a barrister.

AVOID. To annul; cancel; make void; to destroy the efficacy of anything. To evade; escape. Graves v. Apt, 233 Mass, 587, 124 N.E. 432, 433. But it has no sinister meaning, and does not imply subterfuge or artifice in escape. Booth v. Scott, 276 Mo. 1, 205 S.W. 633, 639.

AVOE. In pleading. To acknowledge and justify an act done. 3 Bla.Comm. 150. To make an avowry. Tleeta, 1.1, c. 4, Cunningham, Dict. See Avowry; Justification.

AVOWAL. An open declaration. Purpose is to enable the court to know what the witness would have stated in answer to the question propounded, and to inform the court what the interrogator would prove contrary to the testimony given at the trial. Fennell v. Frisch's Adm'r., 192 Ky. 535, 234 S.W. 198 (1921); Robertson v. Commonwealth, 269 Ky. 317, 107 S.W.2d 292, (1937). See Clay, Kentucky Practice, Rule 43.10. Fed.R.Civ.P. 43 (c).

AVOWANT. One who makes an avowry.

AVOWEE. In ecclesiastical law. An advocate of a church benefice.

AVOWRY. A pleading in the action of replevin, by which the defendant avows, that is, acknowledges, the taking of the distress or property complained of, where he took it in his own right, and sets forth the reason of it; as for rent in arrear, damage done, etc. 3 Bl.Comm. 149; 1 Tidd Pr. 645. L. A. W. Acceptance Corporation v. Chernick, 143 A. 783, 784, 49 R.I. 434.

Avowry is the setting forth, as in a declaration, the nature and merits of the defendant’s case, showing that the distress taken by him was lawful, which must be done with such sufficient authority as will entitle him to a retorno habendo. Wilhem v. Boyd, 172 Md. 79, 190 A. 823, 826.

An avowry must be distinguished from a justification. The former species of plea admits the plaintiff’s ownership of the property, but alleges a right in the defendant sufficient to warrant him in taking the property and which still subsists. A justification, on the other hand, denies that the plaintiff had the right of property or possession in the subject-matter, alleging it to have been in the defendant or a third person, or avers a right sufficient to warrant the defendant in taking it, although such right has not continued in force to the time of making answer. See 2 W.Jones, 25.

AVOWTERER. In English law. An adulterer with whom a married woman continues in adultery. Termes de la Ley.

AVOWTRY. In old English law. Adultery. Termes de la Ley.

AVULSION. The removal of a considerable quantity of soil from the land of one man, and its deposit upon or annexation to the land of another, suddenly and by the perceptible action of water. 2 Washb.Real Prop. 452; Wharton. Rees v. McDaniel, 115 Mo. 145, 21 S.W. 913; Schwartzstein v. B. B. Bathing Park, 197 N.Y.S. 490, 492, 203 App. Div. 700; Conkey v. Knudsen, 143 Neb. 5, 8 N.W. 2d 538, 542.

Where running streams are the boundaries between states, the same rule applies as between private proprietors, and, if the stream from any cause, natural or artificial, suddenly leaves its old bed and forms a new one by the process known as ‘avulsion,’ the resulting change of channel works no change of boundary, which remains in the middle of the old channel though no water may be...

To constitute "avulsion," rather than "accretion," so as to preclude change in boundary between riparian owners, it is not necessary that soil washed away be identifiable; it being sufficient that change is so sudden that owner of land washed away is able to point out approximately as much land added to opposite bank as he had washed away. 60 Okl.St.Ann. §§ 335, 336. Goins v. Merryman, 183 Old. 155, 80 P.2d 268.

See Accretion; Alluvion; Reliction.

AVUNCULUS. In the civil law. A mother's brother. 2 Bl.Comm. 230. Avunculus magnus, a great-uncle. Avunculus major, a great-grandmother's brother. Avunculus maximus, a great-great-grandmother's brother. See Dig. 38, 10, 10; Inst. 3, 6, 2.

AVUS. In the civil law. A grandfather. Inst. 3, 6, 1.

AWAIT. Used in old statutes to signify a lying in wait, or waylaying.

AWARD, v. To grant, concede, or adjudge to. To give or assign by sentence or judicial determination. Hobson v. Superior Court of Tulare County, 69 Cal.App. 230. Thus, a jury awards damages; the court awards an injunction. Starkey v. Minneapolis, 19 Minn. 206 (Gil. 166). One awards a contract to a bidder. Jackson v. State, 194 Ind. 130, 142 N.E. 1, 2, (holding that a finding that a contract was "awarded to" a bidder meant it was entered into with all required legal formalities).

AWARD, n. The decision or determination rendered by arbitrators or commissioners, or other private or extrajudicial deciders, upon a controversy submitted to them; also the writing or document embodying such decision. Keiser v. Berks County, 253 Pa. 167, 97 A. 1067, 1068.

Under Workmen's Compensation Acts, the term may be used in the above sense, as signifying a decision or determination of the Industrial Board, or some equivalent body. Frankfort General Ins. Co. v. Conduit, 74 Ind.App. 584, 127 N.E. 212, 213. It may also be used to refer to the amount of compensation fixed by the board, an "award" being an amount fixed by arbitration. Odrowski v. Swift & Co., 99 Kan. 163, 162 P. 268, 269. Hence, a compensation agreement, which is not approved by the Industrial Board, is not an award. Bruce v. Stutz Motor Car Co. of America, 83 Ind.App. 257, 148 N.E. 161, 162.

AWAY-GOING CROP. A crop sown before the expiration of a tenancy, which cannot ripen until after its expiration to which, however, the tenant is entitled. Broom, Max. 412; Miller v. Gray, Tex. Civ.App., 108 S.W.2d 265, 267, 268.

AWM. Also aum or awme. In old English statutes. A measure of wine, or vessel containing forty gallons.

AWN-HINDE. See Third-Night-Awn-Hinde.

AXIOM. In logic. A self-evident truth; an indisputable truth.

AXMINSTER. The trade-name of a certain kind of rug. The term now generally includes the machine-made product as well as the handmade. Beuttell & Sons v. U. S., 8 Ct.Cust.App. 409, 412.

AYANT CAUSE. In French law, and also in Louisiana, this term signifies one to whom a right has been assigned, either by will, gift, sale, exchange, or the like; an assignee. An avant cause differs from an heir who acquires the right by inheritance. 8 Toullier, n. 245.

AYLE. See Aiel.

AYRE. In old Scotch law. Eyre; a circuit or iter.

AYUNTAMIENTO. In Spanish law. A congress of persons; the municipal council of a city or town. 1 White, Coll. 416; Friedman v. Goodwin, 9 Fed.Cas. 818; Strother v. Lucas, 12 Pet. 442, 9 L.Ed. 1137, notes.

AZURE. A term used in heraldry, signifying blue.
B. The second letter of the English alphabet; is used to denote the second of a series of pages, notes, etc.; the subsequent letters, the third and following numbers.

B. C. An abbreviation for "before Christ," "bail court," "bankruptcy cases," and "British Columbia."

B. D. S. A. Business and Defense Services Administration.

B. E. An abbreviation for "Baron of the Court of Exchequer."

B. F. An abbreviation for bonum factum, a good or proper act, deed, or decree; signifies "approved."

B. R. An abbreviation for Bancus Regis, (King’s Bench,) or Bancus Regina (Queen’s Bench.) It is frequently found in the old books as a designation of that court. In more recent usage, the initial letters of the English names are ordinarily employed, i. e., K. B. or Q. B.

B. S. Bancus Superior, that is, upper bench.

B— S—. Designation of statements of another as b— s— carried the implications that they were absurd and fanciful. People v. Nitti, 312 Ill. 73, 143 N.E. 448, 456.

BABBITT. To line or furnish with "babbitt metal," which is a soft white anti-friction metal, of varying compositions, or any of several alloys similarly used. Ingersol v. National Sash & Door Factory, 134 La. 19, 63 So. 609, 610.

"BABY ACT." A plea of infancy, interposed for the purpose of defeating an action upon a contract made while the person was a minor, is vulgarly called "pleading the baby act.- By extension, the term is applied to a plea of the statute of limitations.

BACHELERIA. In old records. Commonalty or yeomanry, in contradistinction to baronage.

BACHELOR. One who has taken the first degree (baccalaureate) in the liberal arts and sciences, or in law, medicine, or divinity, in a college or university.

A man who has never been married.

A kind of inferior knight; an esquire.

BACK, v. To indorse; to sign on the back; to sign generally by way of acceptance or approval. Where a warrant issued in one county is presented to a magistrate of another county and he signs it for the purpose of making it executory in his county, he is said to "back" it. 4 Bl.Comm. 291.

This custom prevails in England, Scotland, and some of the United States. So an indorser of a note or bill is colloquially said to "back" it. Searby v. Hungerford, 2 Hill (N.Y.) 80.

BACK, adv. To the rear; backward; in a reverse direction. Also, in arrear.

BACK CARRY. In forest law, the crime of having, on the back, game unlawfully killed. See Backbear.

BACK LANDS. A term of no very definite import, but generally signifying lands lying back from (not contiguous to) a highway or a water course. See Ryerss v. Wheeler, 22 Wend. (N.Y.) 150.

BACK TAXES. Those assessed for a previous year or years and remaining due and unpaid from the original tax debtor. M. E. Church v. New Orleans, 107 La. 611, 32 So. 101.

BACKADATION. See Backwardation.

BACKBEAR. In forest law. Carrying on the back. One of the cases in which an offender against vert and venison might be arrested, as being taken with the mainour, or manner, or found carrying a deer off on his back. Manwood; Cowell.

BACKBEREND (also Backberende). Sax. Bearing upon the back or about the person. Applied to a thief taken with the stolen property in his immediate possession. Bract. 1, 3, tr. 2, c. 32. Used with handhabend, having in the hand.

BACKBOND. A bond of indemnification given to a surety.

In Scotch law. A deed attaching a qualification or condition to the terms of a conveyance or other instrument. This deed is used when particular circumstances render it necessary to express in a separate form the limitations or qualifications of a right. Bell. The instrument is equivalent to a declaration of trust in English conveyancing.

BACKING A WARRANT. See Back.

BACKSIDE. In English law. A term formerly used in conveyances and also in pleading; it imports a yard at the back part of or behind a house, and belonging thereto.
BACKWARDATION (also called Backadation). In the language of the stock exchange, this term signifies a consideration paid for delay in the delivery of stock contracted for, when the price is lower for time than for cash. Dos Passos, Stock-Brok. 270.

BACKWARDS. In a policy of marine insurance, the phrase "forwards and backwards at sea" means from port to port in the course of the voyage, and not merely from one terminus to the other and back. 1 Taunt. 475.

BACKWATER. Water in a stream which, in consequence of some dam or obstruction below, is detained or checked in its course, or flows back. Webster v. North Poudre Irr. Co., 74 Colo. 565, 223 P. 36. Water caused to flow backward from a steam-vessel by reason of the action of its wheels or screw.

BACULUS. A rod, staff, or wand, used in old English practice in making livery, of seisin where no building stood on the land, (Bract. 40;) a stick or wand, by the erection of which on the land involved in a real action the defendant was summoned to put in his appearance; this was called "baculus nuntiatorius." 3 B1.Comm. 279.

BAD BEHAVIOR. Where a judgment in a cram. inal case has been suspended on condition of good behavior, the term "good behavior" means conduct that is authorized by law, and "bad behavior" means conduct such as the law will punish. State v. Hardin, 183 N.C. 815, 112 S.E. 593, 594.

BAD DEBT. Generally speaking, one which is uncollectible.

BAD FAITH. The opposite of '"good faith," generally implying or involving actual or constructive fraud, or a design to mislead or deceive another, or a neglect or refusal to fulfill some duty or some contractual obligation, not prompted by an honest mistake as to one's rights or duties, but by some interested or sinister motive. State v. Griffin, 100 S.C. 331, 84 S.E. 876, 877; Penn Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Mechanics' Savings Bank & Trust Co., C.C.A.Tenn., 73 F. 653, 19 C.C.A. 316, 38 L.R.A. 33, 70; Spiegel v. Beacon Participations, 297 Mass. 398, 8 N.E.2d 895, 907.

BAD MOTIVE. Intentionally doing a wrongful act knowing at the time that it is wrongful. Luhmann v. Schaefer, Mo.App., 142 S.W.2d 1088, 1090; Davis v. Nash Central Motors, Mo.App., 332 S.W. 2d 475, 480.

BAD PLACE. Under a contract requiring the employer to timber all bad places in the mine unless caused by the miner's negligence, a "bad place" was a place in the roof which could not be made reasonably safe by the ordinary propping usually done by the miner himself. W. G. Duncan Coal Co. v. Thompson's Adm'r, 157 Ky. 304, 162 S.W. 1139, 1140.

BAD TITLE. One which conveys no property to the purchaser of the estate; one which is so radically defective that it is not marketable, and hence such that a purchaser cannot be legally compelled to accept it. Heller v. Cohen, 15 Misc. 378, 36 N.Y.S. 668.

BADGE. A mark or cognizance worn to show the relation of the wearer to any person or thing; the token of anything; a distinctive mark of office or service.

BADGE OF FRAUD. A term used relatively to the law of fraudulent conveyances made to hinder and defraud creditors. It is defined as a fact tending to throw suspicion upon a transaction, and calling for an explanation. Bump, Fraud.Conv. 31; Phelps v. Samson, 113 Iowa, 145, 84 N.W. 1051. It is a suspicious circumstance that overhangs a transaction, or appears on the face of the papers, Toone v. Walker, 115 Okl. 289, 243 Pa. 147, 148. A circumstance which does not alone prove fraud, but which warrants inference of fraud, especially where there is a concurrence of many such badges. Brennecke v. Riemann, Mo., 102 S.W.2d 874, 877, 40 A.L.R. 1214.

Recognized "badges of fraud" include fictitious consideration, false statements as to consideration, transactions different from usual course of doing business, transfer of all of a debtor's property, insolvency, confidential relationship of parties, and transfers in anticipation of suit or execution. Hendrix v. Goldman, Mo., 92 S.W.2d 733, 736.

BADGER. In old English law. One who made a practice of buying corn or victuals in one place, and carrying them to another to sell and make profit by them.

BAG. A sack or satchel. A certain and customary quantity of goods and merchandise in a sack. Wharton, An uncertain quantity of goods and merchandise, from three to four hundred. Jacob.

BAGA. In English law. A bag or purse. Thus, there is the petty-bag-office in the common-law jurisdiction of the court of chancery, because all original writs relating to the business of the crown were formerly kept in a little sack or bag, in parva bagel. 1 Madd.Ch. 4.

BAGAVEL. The citizens of Exeter had granted to them by charter from Edward I. the collection of a certain tribute or toll upon all manner of wares brought to that city to be sold, toward the paving of the streets, repairing of the walls, and maintenance of the city, which was commonly called bagavel, bethugavel and chippinggavel. Antiq. of Exeter.

BAGGAGE. In the law of carriers, this term, comprises such articles of personal convenience or necessity as are usually carried by passengers for their personal use. It includes whatever the passenger takes with him for his personal use or convenience according to the habits or wants of the particular class to which he belongs, either with reference to the immediate necessities or ultimate purpose of the journey. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Bryant, Tex.Civ.App., 11 S.W.2d 659, 660

Thus, jewelry suitable to the condition in life of the passenger and intended for personal use on the journey is "baggage." Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Pugh, 157 Ark. 383, 248 S.W. 897. But it is not baggage where carried by a traveler for the use of another or for the purpose of business or sale. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Fontaine, 217 Ky. 211, 289 S.W. 263, 266, 52 A.L.R. 1064.

A multitude of objects have been held to be baggage: e.g., razors in a trunk checked by a male passenger, San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. v. Green, Tex.Civ.App., 170 S.W. 110, 111, and a thimble carried in her trunk by the mother of two small children, Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Hestle, 200 Ala. 137, 75 So. 885, 887. Other articles have been held not to be baggage, such as stocks and bonds, Jandorf v. Pullman Co., 171 N.Y.S. 321, 322, 104 Misc. 79; a gun and gun case, not connected with the purpose of the trip, House v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co., 32 S.D. 209, 142 N.W. 736, 738; and an article for use in housekeeping after the end of a passenger's journey, Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Fletcher, 194 Ala. 257, 69 So. 634, 635.

BAGGAGE CAR. A closed car in a passenger train used to transport the property of the passengers. Ward v. Gulf, M. & N. R. Co., 23 Tenn.App. 533, 134 S.W.2d 917.

BAGGAGE CAR SERVICE. A service rendered in such car in connection with the transportation of passengers by a passenger train movement or its equivalent. Ward v. Gulf, M. & N. R. Co., 23 Tenn.App. 533, 134 S.W.2d 917, 923.

BAHADUM. A chest or coffer. Fleta.

BAIL, v. To procure the release of a person from legal custody, by undertaking that he shall appear at the time and place designated and submit himself to the jurisdiction and judgment of the court.

To deliver the defendant to persons who, in the manner prescribed by law, become security for his appearance in court. To set at liberty a person arrested or imprisoned, on security being taken for his appearance on a day and a place certain, which security is called "bail," because the party arrested or imprisoned is delivered into the hands of those who bind themselves for his forthcoming, (that is, become bail for his due appearance when required,) in order that he may be safely protected from prison. Wharton. Stafford v. State, 10 Tex.App. 49.

To procure release of one charged with an offense by insuring his future attendance in court and compelling him to remain within jurisdiction of court. Manning v. State ex rel. Williams, 190 Okl. 65, 120 P.2d 980, 981.

The object of "bail" in civil cases is either directly or indirectly to secure payment of a debt or performance of other civil duties, while in criminal cases object is to secure appearance of principal before the court when his presence is required, which is a debt or obligation of record, acknowledged before some court or magistrate authorized to take it, with condition to do some particular act, and which need not be executed by the parties. State v. Bradsher, 189 N.C. 401, 127 S.E. 349, 351, 38 A.L.R. 1102. But under the law of Connecticut, "recognizance" and "bail" are interchangeable. National Surety Co. v. Nazzaro, 239 Mass. 341, 32 Mass. 49, 132 N.E. 49, 50.

BAIL absolute. Sureties whose liability is conditioned upon the failure of the principal to duly account for money coming to his hands as administrator, guardian, etc.

Bail below, or bail to the sheriff. See Bail to the sheriff or bail below, infra.

Bail bond. A bond executed by a defendant who has been arrested, together with other persons as sureties, naming the sheriff, constable, or marshal as obligee, in a penal sum proportioned to the damages claimed or penalty denounced, conditioned that the defendant shall duly appear to answer to the legal process in the officer's hands, or shall cause special bail to be put in, as the case may be.

An obligation signed by the accused with sureties, conditioned that the same shall be void on the performance by the accused of such acts as he is required to perform. State v. Wilson, 265 Mo. 1, 175 S.W. 603, 605.

Its purpose is to secure the presence of the one charged in court when his presence is required in order to answer to the charge. State v. Clark, 234 Iowa 338, 11 N.W.2d 722. In criminal cases, a bail bond is a contract under seal, which, from its nature, requires sureties or bail, and therefore differs from a "recognizance," which is a debt or obligation of record, acknowledged before some court or magistrate authorized to take it, with condition to do some particular act, and which need not be executed by the parties. State v. Bradsher, 189 N.C. 401, 127 S.E. 349, 351, 38 A.L.R. 1102. But under the law of Connecticut, "recognizance" and "bail" are interchangeable. National Surety Co. v. Nazzaro, 239 Mass. 341, 32 Mass. 49, 132 N.E. 49, 50.

Bail common. A fictitious proceeding, intended only to express the appearance of a defendant, in cases where special bail is not required. It is put in the same form as special bail, but the sureties are merely nominal or imaginary persons, as John Doe and Richard Roe. 3 Bl.Comm. 287.

Bail court. In English law and practice. An auxiliary court of the court of queen's bench at Westminster, wherein points connected more particularly with pleading and practice are argued and determined. Holthouse; Wharton, Law Dict. 2d Lond. ed. It has been abolished.

Bail dock. Formerly at the Old Bailey, in London, a small room taken from one of the corners of the court, and left open at the top, in which certain malefactors were placed during trial. Cent. Dict.

Bail in error. That given by a defendant who intends to bring a writ of error on the judgment and desires a stay of execution in the meantime.

Bail piece. A formal entry or memorandum of the recognizance or undertaking of special bail in civil actions, which, after being signed and acknowledged by the bail before the proper officer, is filed in the court in which the action is pending. 3 Bl.Comm. 291; Worthen v. Prescott, 60 Vt. 68, 11 Atl. 690.

Bail to the action or bail above. Special bail (q.v.).

Bail to the sheriff or bail below. Persons who undertake that a defendant arrested upon mesne process in a civil action shall duly appear to answer the plaintiff; such undertaking being in the form of a bond given to the sheriff, termed a "bail bond" (q. v.). 3 Bl.Comm. 290; 1 Tidd, Pr. 221. Sureties who bind themselves to the sheriff to secure the defendant's appearance, or his putting in bail to the action on the return-day of the writ.

"Bail to the sheriff was originally designed to temporarily liberate the defendant from close custody, and to place means in the sheriff's hands to insure the defendant's appearance to answer at the return of the writ. * * * The appearance which was contemplated was not, however, necessarily an actual appearance in person, but by putting in new bail, called bail to the action, special bail, or bail above. This special bail, or bail above, was by recognizance, which was matter of record, and an act of appearance, and by it the bail were bound that if the defendant should be condemned he should pay or render himself a prisoner, and if he did not, that they would pay the condemnation. The undertaking of the bail to the sheriff, or bail below, was wholly different, and was adapted to the specific exigency. It was in the form of a bond to the sheriff, and was conditioned for the defendant's appearance at the return of the writ, which meant putting in and perfecting bail above." De Myer v. McGonegal, 32 Mich. 120, 124.

—Civil bail. That taken in civil actions.

—Common bail. Fictitious sureties formally en- tered in the proper office of the court. See Bail, supra.

—Special bail. Responsible sureties who undertake as bail above. Persons who undertake jointly and severally in behalf of a defendant arrested on mesne process in a civil action that, if he be condemned in the action, he shall pay the costs and condemnation, (that is, the amount which may be recovered against him,) or render himself a prisoner, or that they will pay it for him. 3 Bl. Comm. 291; 1 Tidd, Pr. 245; Sellon, Pr. 137. See Bail to the sheriff or bail below, supra.

—Straw bail. Nominal or worthless bail. Irresponsible persons, or men of no property, who make a practice of going bail for any one who will pay them a fee therefor, and who originally, as a mark of their purpose, wore straw in their shoes.

—Bail a cheptel. A contract by which one of the parties gives to the other cattle to keep, feed and care for, the borrower receiving half the profit of increase, and bearing half the loss. Duverger.

—Bail a ferme. A contract of letting lands.

—Bail a longues années. A lease for more than nine years; the same as bail emphyteotique (see infra) or an emphyteutic lease.

—Bail it loyer. A contract of letting houses.

—Bail It rente. A contract partaking of the nature of the contract of sale, and that of the contract of lease; it is translative of property, and the rent is essentially redeemable. Clark's Heirs v. Christ's Church, 4 La. 286; Poth. Bail a Rente, 1, 3.

—Bail emphyteotique. An emphyteutic lease; a lease for a term of years with a right to prolong indefinitely; practically equivalent to an alienation. 5 Low. C. 381; 6 Low. C. 58. See Emphyteusis.

BAILABLE. Capable of being bailed; admitting of bail; authorizing or requiring bail.

BAILABLE ACTION. One in which the defendant is entitled to be discharged from arrest only upon giving bond to answer.

BAILABLE OFFENSE. One for which the prisoner may be admitted to bail.

BAILABLE PROCESS. Such as requires the officer to take bail, after arresting the defendant. That under which the sheriff is directed to arrest the defendant and is required by law to discharge him upon his tendering suitable bail as security for his appearance. A capias ad respondendum is bailable; not so a capias ad satisfaciendum.

BAILEE. In the law of contracts. One to whom goods are bailed; the party to whom personal property is delivered under a contract of bailment. Hotels Statler Co. v. Safier, 103 Ohio St. 638, 134 N.E. 460, 462, 22 A.L.R. 1190. A species of agent to whom something movable is committed in trust for another. Cowart v. State, 16 Ala.App. 119, 75 So. 711, 713; Smith v. State, 78 Okl.Cr. 375, 148 P.2d 206, 208.

BAILEE POLICIES. Floating policies which cover goods while in possession of warehouse without particular description in the policy. Gillespie v. Federal Compress & Warehouse Co., 265 S.W.2d 21, 27, 37 Tenn.App. 476.

BAILIE. In the Scotch law. (1) A magistrate having inferior criminal and civil jurisdiction, similar to that of an alderman, (q. v.;) (2) an officer appointed to confer infeoffment, (q. v.;) a bailiff, (q. v.;) a server of writs. Bell.

BAILIFF. One to whom some authority, care, guardianship, or jurisdiction is delivered, committed, or intrusted; one who is deputed or appointed to take charge of another's affairs; an overseer or superintendent; a keeper, protector, or guardian; a steward. Spelman. A sheriff's officer or deputy. 1 Bl.Comm. 344. A court attendant, sometimes called a tipstaff.

A magistrate, who formerly administered justice in the parliaments or courts of France, answering to the English sheriffs as mentioned by Bracton.

A person acting in a ministerial capacity who has by delivery the custody and administration of lands or goods for the benefit of the owner or bailor, and is liable to render an account thereof. Co.Litt. 271; Story, Eq.Jur. § 446; West v. Weyer, 18 N.E. 537, 46 Ohio St. 66, 15 Am.St.Rep. 552.

—Bailiff-errant. A bailiff's deputy.

—Bailiffs of franchises. In English law. Officers who perform the duties of sheriffs within liberties or privileged jurisdictions, in which formerly the king’s writ could not be executed by the sheriff. Spelman.

—Bailiffs of hundreds. In English law. Officers appointed over hundreds, by the sheriffs, to collect fines therein, and summon juries; to attend the judges and justices at the assises and quarter sessions; and also to execute writs and process in the several hundreds. 1 Bl.Comm. 345; 3 Steph. Comm. 29; Bract. fol. 116.

—Bailiffs of manors. In English law. Stewards appointed over hundreds, by the sheriffs, to collect fines, and quit rents, inspect the buildings, repair orders, cut down trees, impound cattle, take an account of wastes, soils, and misdemeanors in the woods and demesne lands, and do other acts for the lord’s interest. Cowell.

—High bailiff. An officer attached to an English county court. His duties are to attend the court when sitting; to serve summonses; and to execute orders, warrants, writs, etc. St. 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, § 33; Poll.C.C.Pr. 16. He also has similar duties under the bankruptcy jurisdiction of the county courts.

—Special bailiff. A deputy sheriff, appointed at the request of a party to a suit, for the special purpose of serving or executing some writ or process in such suit.

BAILIVIA. In old law. A bailiff’s jurisdiction, a bailiwick; the same as bailium. Spelman. See Bailiwick.

In old English law. A liberty, or exclusive jurisdiction, which was exempted from the sheriff of the county, and over which the lord of the liberty appointed a bailiff with such powers within his precinct as an under-sheriff exercised under the sheriff of the county. Whishaw.

BAILWICK. A bailiwick.

BAILLEUR DE FONDS. In Canadian law. The unpaid vendor of real estate. 1 Low. C. 1, 6; 9 Low. C. 497.

BAILLI. In old French law. One to whom judicial authority was assigned or delivered by a superior.

BAILMENT. A delivery of goods or personal property, by one person to another, in trust for the safe-keeping of the thing intrusted to the custody of the bailee, and the bailee agrees to keep it and restore it on the request of the bailor, in the same condition substantially as he received it, excepting injury or loss from causes for which he is not responsible.

A delivery of goods for some purpose, upon a contract, express or implied, that after the purpose has been fulfilled they shall be re-delivered to the bailor, or otherwise dealt with according to his direction, or kept until reclaimed. In re George L. Nadell & Co., 294 Mich. 150, 292 N.W. 684, 686. A delivery of something of a personal nature by one party to another to be held according to the purpose or object of the delivery and to be returned or delivered on the expiration of the purpose or object accomplished. B & D Mortgage Co. v. Grant. Tex.Civ.App., 54 S.W.2d 189, 190; Hogan v. O’Brien, 206 N.Y.S. 831, 833, 123 Misc. 865. The term “bailment” is derived from the French word “bailleur,” meaning “to deliver.” It imports a delivery of personal property by one person to another in trust for a specific purpose, with a contract, express or implied, that the trust shall be faithfully executed and the property returned or duly accounted for when the specific purpose is accomplished or kept until bailor claims it. Commonwealth v. Polk, 256 Ky. 100, 75 S.W.2d 761, 764.

According to Story, the contract does not necessarily imply an undertaking to redeem the goods. On the other hand, Blackstone, although his definition does not include the return, speaks of it in all his examples of bailments as a duty of the bailee; and Kent says that the application of the term to cases in which no return or re-delivery to the owner or his agent is contemplated, is extending the definition of the term beyond its ordinary acceptation in English law. A consignment to a factor would be a bailment for sale, according to Story; while according to Kent it would not.

Classification
Sir William Jones has divided bailments into five sorts, namely: Depositum, or deposit; mandatum, or commission without recompense; commodatum, or the use without pay; pignori acceptum, or pawn; locatum, or hiring, which is always with reward. This last is subdivided into locatio rei, or hiring, by which the hirer gains a temporary use of the thing; locatio operis faciendi, when something is to be done to the thing delivered; locatio operis mercium vehendarum, when the thing is merely to be carried from one place to another. Jones, Balm, 36.

Lord Holt divided bailments thus:

(1) Depositum, or a naked bailment of goods, to be kept for the use of the bailor.

(2) Commodatum. Where goods or chattels that are useful are lent to the bailee gratis, to be used by him.

(3) Locatio rei. Where goods are lent to the bailee to be used by him for hire.

(4) Vadium. Pawn or pledge.

(5) Locatio operis faciendi. Where goods are delivered to be carried, or something is to be done about them, for a reward to be paid to the bailee.

(6) Mandatum. A delivery of goods to somebody who is to carry them, or do something about them, gratis. 2 Ld. Raym. 909.

Another division, suggested by Bouvier as being a better general division for practical purposes, is as follows: First, those bailments which are for the benefit of the bailor, or of some person whom he represents; second, those for the benefit of the bailee, or some person represented by him; third, those which are for the benefit of both parties.

In General
—Bailment for hire. A contract in which the bailor agrees to pay an adequate recompense for the safe-keeping of the thing intrusted to the custody of the bailee, and the bailee agrees to keep it and restore it on the request of the bailor, in the same condition substantially as he received it, excepting injury or loss from causes for which he is not responsible.

—Bailment for mutual benefit. One in which the parties contemplate some price or compensation in return for benefits flowing from the bailment, necessarily involving an express or implied agreement or undertaking to that effect.
—Actual bailment. One which exists where there is either (a) an "actual delivery," consisting in giving to the bailee or his agent the real possession of the chattel, or (b) a "constructive delivery," consisting of any of those acts which, although not truly comprising real possession of the goods transferred, have been held by legal construction equivalent to acts of real delivery. Wentworth v. Riggs, 159 App.Div. 899, 143 N.Y.S. 955, 956.

—Constructive bailment. One arising where the person having possession of a chattel holds it under such circumstances that the law imposes upon him the obligation to deliver it to another. Wentworth v. Riggs, 159 App.Div. 899, 143 N.Y.S. 955, 956. See, also, Involuntary bailment, infra.

—Gratuitous bailment. Another name for a depositum or naked bailment, which is made only for the benefit of the bailor and is not a source of profit to the bailee. Foster v. Essex Bank, 17 Mass. 499, 9 Am.Dec. 168.

A "bailment" is created by the element of lawful possession and the duty to act for the thing as the property of another, whether such possession is based on contract in the ordinary sense or not. Foulke v. New York Consol. R. Co., 228 N.Y. 269, 127 N.E. 237, 239, 9 A.L.R. 1384. See Constructive bailment, supra.

—Lucrative bailment. One which is undertaken upon a consideration and for which a payment or recompense is to be made to the bailee, or from which he is to derive some advantage. Prince v. Alabama State Fair, 106 Ala. 340, 17 So. 449, 28 L.R.A. 716.

—Bailment lease. A legal method by which one desiring to purchase an article but unable to pay therefor at the time, may secure possession thereof with the right to use and enjoy it as long as he pays stipulated rentals and becomes absolute owner after completing such installment payments, on payment of an additional sum which may be nominal. In re Robinson, D.C.Pa., 40 F. Supp. 320, 322, 323.

Bailments as Distinguished from Other Transactions

—Chattel mortgages. A radical distinction between a bailment and a chattel mortgage is that, by a mortgage, the title is transferred to the mortgagee, subject to be revested by performance of the condition, but, in case of a bailment, the bailor retains the title and parts with the possession for a special purpose. Walker v. Staples, 5 Allen (Mass.) 34.

—Debt. The distinction between an obligation to restore the specific thing received, or of returning others of equal value, is the distinction between a "bailment" and a "debt." Alamitos Land Co. v. Texas Co., 11 Cal.App. 2d 614, 54 P.2d 489, 491.

—Exchanges. An agreement by which A is to let B have a horse, in consideration that B will let A have another horse, creates an exchange, not a bailment. Austin v. Seligman, C.C.N.Y., 21 Blatchf. 506, 18 Fed. 519.

—Partnerships. Where animals are delivered to be taken care of for a certain time, and at the expiration of that time the same number of animals is to be returned, and any increase is to be enjoyed by both parties, there is a bailment, not a partnership. Simmons v. Shaft, 91 Kan. 553, 138 P. 614, 615.

—Sales. The test of a bailment is that the identical thing is to be returned in the same or in some altered form; if another thing of equal value is to be returned, the transaction is a sale. Sturm v. Baker, 14 S.Ct. 99, 150 U.S. 312, 37 L.Ed. 1093; Borman v. U. S., C.C.A.N.Y., 262 F. 26, 29.

—Conditional sale. Contemplates that at some time the title shall pass to the purchaser and that he shall pay the purchase price, while a "bailment" contemplates that the title shall not pass to the bailee, but remain in the bailor, and that the property shall be returned to the bailor. Vermont Acceptance Corporation v. Wiltshire, 103 Vt. 219, 153 A. 199, 200, 73 A.L.R. 792.

—Trusts. The passing of the legal title from the owner to the party to whom personal property is delivered distinguishes a "trust" from a bailment. National Cattle Loan Co. v. Ward, 113 Tex. 312, 255 S.W. 160, 164; McIntyre v. Smith, 154 Md. 660, 141 A. 405, 410.

BAILOR. The party who bails or delivers goods to another, in the contract of bailment. McGee v. French, 49 S.C. 454, 27 S.E. 487; Story, Bailm. §174, 388.

BAIRNS. In Scotch law. A known term, used to denote one's whole issue. Ersk.Inst. 3, 8, 48. But it is sometimes used in a more limited sense. Bell.

BAIT. To attack with violence; to provoke and harass. 2 A. & E. Encyc. 63; L.R. 9 Q.B. 380.

BAITING ANIMALS. In English law. Procuring them to be worried by dogs. Punishable on summary conviction, under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 92, 13.

BAKER. In its ordinary use respecting a bakery business, a generic term including in its scope different services connected with the bakery business, such as doing shop service in putting bread in boxes. Futopolus v. Midland Casualty Co., 174 Wis. 208, 182 N.W. 845, 847.

BAKERY. Any place used for the purpose of mixing, compounding, or baking for sale or for purposes of a restaurant, bakery or hotel, any bread, biscuit, pretzels, crackers, buns, rolls, macaroni, cake, pies, or any food products of which flour or meal is a principal ingredient. Continental Baking Co. v. Campbell, 176 Okl. 218, 55 P.2d 114, 116.

BAKING POWDER. A mixture in dry form of certain alkali and acid substances, combined with a filler; when moistened and heated, as in baking dough, a chemical reaction occurs, liberating carbonic gas, which "raises" or leavens the bread. Royal Baking Powder Co. v. Emerson, C.C.A.Ark., 270 F. 429, 436.

BALIENA. A large fish, called by Blackstone a "whale." Of this the king had the head and the queen the tail as a perquisite whenever one was taken on the coast of England. 1 Bl.Comm. 222; Prynne, Ann.Reg. 127.

BALANCE. An equality between the sums total of the two sides of an account, or the excess on either side. Jones v. Marrs, 114 Tex. 62, 263 S.W. 570, 574.

The conclusion or result of the debit and credit sides of an account. It implies mutual dealings, and the existence of debt and credit, without which there could be no balance. Thillman v. Shadrick, 69 Md. 528, 16 Atl. 138. The amount remaining due from one person to another on a settlement of the accounts involving their mutual dealings; the difference between the two sides (debit and credit) of an account.

Often used in the sense of residue or remainder, and, in a general sense, may be defined as what remains or is left over. Commercial Discount Co. v. Holland, 107 Cal.App. 83, 89 P. 906, 908.

—Balance of convenience. A term descriptive of a rule for determining in a doubtful case what decree should be made; for example, whether an injunction should be granted. Cohen v. City of Houston, Tex.Civ.App., 176 S.W. 809, 814. It pertains to a test to determine what order will with the least inconvenience to either party assure the victorious one the fruits of his decree. Town of Williams v. Iowa Falls Electric Co., 185 Iowa, 493, 170 N.W. 815.

—Balance of power. In international law. A distribution and an opposition of forces, forming one system, so that no state shall be in a position, either alone or united with others, to impose its will on any other state or interfere with its independence. Ortolan.

—Balance sheet. A statement made by merchants and others to show the true state of a particular business.

When it is desired to ascertain the exact state of a merchant’s business, or other commercial enterprise, at a given time, all the ledger accounts are closed up to date and balances struck; and these balances, when exhibited together on a single page, and so grouped and arranged as to close into each other and be summed up in one general result, constitute the “balance-sheet.” Eyre v. Harmon, 92 Cal. 580, 28 P. 779.

—General balance. Sometimes used to signify the difference which is due to a party claiming a lien on goods in his hands for work or labor done, or money expended in relation to those and other goods of the debtor. 3 B. & P. 485; 3 Esp. 268; McWilliams v. Allan, 45 Mo. 573.

—Net balance. In commercial usage, the balance of the proceeds, as from a sale of stock, after deducting the expenses incident to the sale. Evans v. Wain, 71 Pa. 74.

BALCÁNIFER, or BALDAKINIFER. The standard-bearer of the Knights Templar.

BALCONIES. Small galleries of wood or stone on the outside of houses. In London, the erection of them is regulated by the building acts.

BALDIO. In Spanish law. Waste land; land that is neither arable nor pasture. White New Recop. b. 2, tit. 1, c. 6, § 4, and note. Unappropriated public domain, not set apart for the support of municipalities. Sheldon v. Milmo, 90 Tex. 1, 36 S.W. 415.

BALE. A pack or certain quantity of goods or merchandise, wrapped or packed up in cloth and corded round very tightly, marked and numbered with figures corresponding to those in the bills of lading for the purpose of identification. Wharton.

A bale of cotton is a certain quantity of that commodity compressed into a cubical form, so as to occupy less room than when in bags. 2 Car. & P. 525. Penrice v. Cocks, 2 Miss. 229.

A standard package of merchantable lint cotton, separated from the seed by the first process of a cotton gin, weighing approximately 500 pounds, and classifiable under one of the recognized market grades. Wichita Falls Compress Co. v. W. L. Moody & Co., Tex.Civ.App., 154 S.W. 1032, 1045.

BALISE. Fr. In French marine law. A buoy.

BALIUS. In the civil law. A teacher; one who has the care of youth; a tutor; a guardian. Du Cange; Spelman.

BALIVA. (Spelled also Balliva; equivalent to Balivatus, Balivia). L. Lat. In old English law. A bailiwick; the jurisdiction of a sheriff; the whole district within which the trust of the sheriff was to be executed. Cowell; 3 Bla.Com. 283.

BALIVO AMOVENDO. See Ballivo Amovendo.

BALL—HOOTING. In lumbering, a term designating a process of sliding log down a mountain side. Bradford v. English, 190 N.C. 742, 130 S.E. 705.

BALLAST. That which is used for trimming a ship to bring it down to a draft of water proper and safe for sailing. Great Western Ins. Co. v. Thwing, 13 Wall. 674, 20 L.Ed. 607.

There is considerable analogy between ballast and dunnage. Dunnage is placed under the cargo to keep it from being wetted by water getting into the hold, or between the different parcels to keep them from bruising and injuring each other. Great Western Ins. Co. v. Thwing, 13 Wall. 674, 20 L.Ed. 607.
BALLASTAGE

BALLASTAGE. A toll paid for the privilege of taking up ballast from the bottom of a port or harbor. This arises from the property in the soil. 2 Chitty, Comm.Law 16.

BALLIUM. A fortress or bulwark; also bail. Cunningham.

BALLIVO AMOVENDO. An ancient writ to remove a bailiff from his office for want of sufficient land in the bailiwick. Reg.Orig. 78.

BALLOON. See Aeronaut; Aeronautics; Aircraft.

BALLOON MORTGAGE. A mortgage providing for specific payments at stated regular intervals, and final payment of more than twice any of the periodic payments. Bellman v. Yarmark Enterprises, Inc., Fla.App., 180 So.2d 663, 665.

BALLOT. Derived from ballotta, a round bullet, a voice or lot, means act of voting, usually in secret, by balls or by written or printed tickets or slips of paper; the system of voting by ballots or tickets, or by any device for casting or recording votes, as by voting machine. Norris v. Mayor and City Council of Baltimore, 192 A. 531, 535, 172 Md. 667. Also piece of paper on which the voter gives expression to his choice. Sawyer Stores v. Mitchell, 103 Mont. 148, 62 P.2d 342, 348.

A slip of paper bearing the names of the offices to be filled at the particular election and the names of the candidates for whom the elector desires to vote, or containing a particular question of administration or public policy on which the voter is asked to express his views. It may be printed, or written, or partly printed and partly written, and is deposited by the voter in a "ballot box" which is in the custody of the officers holding the election. Denny v. Pratt, 164 Conn. 396, 133 A. 107, 108.

Used as a symbol of secrecy, while "viva voce" is used as a symbol of publicity. Day v. Walker, 124 Neb. 500, 247 N.W. 350, 351.

The whole amount of votes cast.

Joint Ballot

In parliamentary practice, an election or vote by ballot participated in by the members of both houses of a legislative assembly sitting together as one body, the result being determined by a majority of the votes cast by the joint assembly thus constituted, instead of by concurrent majorities of the two houses. See State v. Shaw, 9 S.C. 144.

Official Ballot

Depending on its use in local statutes, this term has a varied meaning. It may refer to a ballot which has been furnished by the clerk; Cain v. Garvey, Tex.Civ.App., 187 S.W. 1111, 1116; or it may contemplate that a ballot must have been printed under the supervision of a designated member of the electoral board, sealed by the board, and by resolution declared to be one of the official ballots for the election to be held; Xippas v. Commonwealth, 141 Va. 497, 126 S.E. 207, 209.

Mutilated Ballot

One from which the name of the candidate is cut out. Murray v. Waite, 113 Me. 485, 94 A. 943, 945, Ann.Cas.1918A, 1128. One which is destitute or deprived of some essential or valuable part; greatly shortened. Stubbs v. Moursund, Tex.Civ.App., 222 S.W. 632, 634.

BALLOT-BOX. A case usually made of wood for receiving ballots.

BALLOTEMENT. Fr. In medical jurisprudence. A test for pregnancy by palpation with the finger inserted in the vagina to the mouth of the uterus. The tip of the finger being quickly jerked upward, the foetus, if one be present, can be felt rising upward and then settling back against the finger.

BANNEARIL In the Roman law. Those who may contemplate that a ballot must have been reaped, and gathering the vintage, exercised by certain seignorial lords. Guyot, Repert. Univ.

BAN.

In Old English and Civil Law

A proclamation; a public notice; the announcement of an intended marriage. Cowell. An excommunication; a curse, publicly pronounced. A proclamation of silence made by a crier in court before the meeting of champions in combat. Cowell. A statute, edict, or command; a fine, or penalty. An expanse; an extent of space or territory; a space inclosed within certain limits; the limits or bounds themselves. Spelman. An open field; the outskirts of a village. A privileged space or territory around a town, monastery, or other place.

French Law

The right of announcing the time of mowing, reaping, and gathering the vintage, exercised by certain seignorial lords. Guyot, Repert. Univ.

Old European Law

A military standard; a thing unfurled, a banner. Spelman. A summoning to a standard; a calling out of a military force; the force itself so summoned; a national army levied by proclamation.

BANAL. In Canadian and old French law. Pertaining to a ban or privileged place; having qualities or privileges derived from a ban. Thus, a banal mill is one to which the lord may require his tenant to carry his grain to be ground.

BANALITY. In Canadian law. The right by virtue of which a lord subjects his vassals to grind at his mill, bake at his oven, etc. Used also of the region within which this right applied. Guyot, Repert. Univ.; 1 Low.C. 31; 3 Low.C. 1.

BANC. Bench; the place where a court permanently or regularly sits; the seat of judgment; as, banc le roy, the king's bench; banc le common pleas, the bench of common pleas.

The full bench, full court. A "sitting in bane" is a meeting of all the judges of a court, usually for the purpose of hearing arguments on demurrers, points reserved, motions for new trial, etc., as distinguished from the sitting of a single judge at the assises or at nisi Arierus and from trials at bar. Cowell.
BANCI NARRATORES. In old English law. Advocates; countors; serjeants. Applied to advocates in the common pleas courts. 1 Bl.Comm. 24; Cowell.

BANCO. Ital. A seat or bench of justice; also, in commerce, a word of Italian origin signifying a bank. Also a small tract of land on opposite side of river from country to which it belongs, and so existing by virtue of an avulsive change in the river. San Lorenzo Title & Improvement Co. v. Cowell.

BANCUS. L. Lat. In old English law and practice. A bench or seat in the king’s hall or palace. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 16, § 54. Synonymous with exilement and imports a compulsory loss of one’s country. 3 P. Wms. 34.

It is inflicted principally upon political offenders, “transportation” being the word used to express a similar punishment of ordinary criminals. Banishment, however, merely forbids the return of the person banished before the expiration of the sentence, while transportation involves the idea of deprivation of liberty after the convict arrives at the place to which he has been carried. Rap. & L.

BANISTER AND RAILING. These words, in the New York Tenement House Law, § 35, mean a balustrade, consisting of balusters or supports, upon which is placed a railing commonly placed on the outer or open edge of a stairway. Cahill v. Kleinberg, 233 N.Y. 255, 135 N.E. 323.

BANK. A bench or seat; the bench of justice; a court. The full bench, or full court; the assembly of all the judges of a court.

A “sitting in bank” is a meeting of all the judges of a court, usually for the purpose of hearing arguments on demurrers, points reserved, motions for new trial, and other law points, as distinguished from the sitting of a single judge and from trials at nisi prius and from trials at bar to determine facts. 3 Bla.Comm. 28, n. But in this sense, banc is perhaps the more usual form of the word. “Sitting in bank” is also described as an official meeting of four of the judges of a common-law court. Wharton, Lex. Bank le Roy. The king’s bench. Finch, 198.

An acclivity; an elevation or mound of earth, especially that which borders the sides of a water course.

That part of a stream which retains the water. Dawson County v. Phelps County, 94 Neb. 112, 142 N.W. 697, 699.

The elevation of land which confines the waters of a stream to their natural channel when they rise to their highest stage, and do not overflow the banks. Department of Health of New Jersey v. Chemical Co. of America, 90 N.J.Eq. 425, 107 A. 164, 166. A water-washed and relatively permanent elevation or acclivity at the outer line of a river bed which separates it from the adjacent upland, and serves to confine the waters within the bed and to preserve the course of the river. State of Oklahoma v. State of Texas, 43 S.Ct. 221, 260 U.S. 606, 67 L.Ed. 428; Horton v. Niagara, Lockport & Ontario Power Co., 247 N.Y.S. 741, 745, 231 App.Div. 386. The land lying between the edge of the water of a stream at its ordinary low stage and the line which the edge of the water reaches in its ordinary high stage. Wemple v. Eastham, 150 La. 247, 90 So. 637, 638.

An elevation of land which confines the waters of a stream when they rise out of the bed. Neither the line of ordinary high-water mark, nor of ordinary low-water mark, nor of a middle stage of water can be assumed as the line dividing the bed from the banks. Banks are fast land, on which vegetation appropriate to such land in the particular locality grows wherever the bank is not too steep to permit such growth, and bed is soil of a different character, and having no vegetation, or only such as exists, when commonly submerged in water. State v. Nolegs, 139 P. 945, 946, 40 Okl. 479. On the borders of navigable streams, where there are levees established according to law, the levees form the “banks of the river.” 152 La. 158, 94 So. 769, 772.

An institution, of great value in the commercial world, empowered to receive deposits of money, to make loans, and to issue its promissory notes, (designed to circulate as money, and commonly called "bank-notes" or "bank-bills," or to perform any one or more of these functions. State v. Wagner, 202 Iowa, 739, 210 N.W. 901, 902; People v. Bartow, 6 Cow.N.Y. 290; Dearborn v. Northwestern Savings Bank, 42 Ohio St. 617; In re Prudence Co., D.C.N.Y., 10 F.Supp. 33, 36.

An institution, usually incorporated with power to issue its promissory notes intended to circulate as money (known as bank notes); or to receive the money of others on general deposit, to form a joint fund that shall be used by the institution, for its own benefit, for one or more of the purposes of making temporary loans and discounts; of dealing in notes, foreign and domestic bills of exchange, coin, bullion, credits, and the remission of money; or with both these powers, and with the privileges, in addition to these basic powers, of receiving special deposits and making collections for the holders of negotiable paper, if the institution sees fit to engage in such business. State of Kansas ex rel. Boynton v. Hayes, C.C.A.Kan., 62 F.2d 597, 600.

The term "bank" is usually restricted in its application to an incorporated body; while a private individual making it his business to conduct banking operations is generally denominated a "banker." Hobbs v. Bank, C.C.A. N.Y., 101 F. 75, 41 C.C.A. 205; Wells, Fargo & Co. v. Northern Pac. R. Co., C.C.Or., 23 F. 469.

The house or place where the business of banking is carried on.

Banks in the commercial sense are of three kinds, viz.: (1) of deposit; (2) of discount; (3) of circulation. Strictly speaking, the term "bank" implies a place for the deposit of money, as that is the most obvious purpose of such an institution. Originally the business of banking consisted only in receiving deposits, such as bullion, plate, and the like, for safe-keeping until the depositor should see fit to draw it out for use, but the business, in the progress of events, was extended, and bankers assumed to discount bills and notes, and to loan money upon mortgage, pawn, or other security, and, at a still later period, to issue notes of their own, intended as a circulating currency and as a medium of exchange, instead of gold and silver. Modern bankers frequently exercise any two or even all three of those functions, but it is still true that an institution prohibited from exercising any more than one of these functions is a bank, in the strictest commercial sense. Oulton v. German Sa'y. & L. Soc., 17 Wall. 118, 21 L.Ed. 618; Millikan v. Security Trust Co., 118 N.E. 568, 569, 187 Ind. 307; Rev.Stat.U.S. § 3407 (12 USC § 561).

—Bank-account. A sum of money placed with a bank or banker, on deposit, by a customer, and subject to be drawn out on the latter's check. The statement or computation of the several sums deposited and those drawn out by the customer on checks, entered on the books of the bank and the depositor's passbook. Gale v. Drake, 51 N.H. 84.

—Bank cashier. A chief executive officer and general agent through whom financial operations of bank are conducted. Hamilton Nat. Bank of Chattanooga, Tenn., v. Lerman, 229 Ala. 363, 157 So. 75.

—Bank charges. This term in an action on a bill of exchange is equivalent to expenses of noting and may be especially endorsed as a liquidated demand; [1893] 1 Q.B. 318.

—Bank check. See Check.

—Bank credit. A credit with a bank by which, on proper security given to the bank, a person receives liberty to draw to a certain extent agreed upon. In Scotland also called a cash account. Cent. Dict.

—Bank draft. A check, draft, or other order for payment of money, drawn by an authorized officer of a bank upon either his own bank or some other bank in which funds of his bank are deposited. Polotsky v. Artisans Sa'y. Bank, Del., 180 A. 791, 792, 7 W.W.Harr. 142.

—Bank note. A promissory note issued by a bank or banker authorized to do so, payable to bearer on demand, and intended to circulate as money. Townsend v. People, 4 Ill. 328; Low v. People, 2 Park.Cr.R. (N.Y.) 37. See, also, Banker's note.

In the early history of banks, their notes were generally denominated bills of credit. Briscoe v. Bank of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, 11 Pet. 257, 9 L.Ed. 709.

—Bank stock. Shares in the capital of a bank; shares in the property of a bank. In England the term is applied chiefly to the stock of the Bank of England.

—Bank teller. See Teller.

—Bank of issue. One which, pursuant to authority conferred by its charter, issues its own notes intended to circulate as money. Millikan v. Security Trust Co., 187 Ind. 307, 118 N.E. 568, 569.

—Joint-stock banks. In English law. Joint-stock companies for the purpose of banking. They are regulated, according to the date of their incorporation, by charter, or by 7 Geo. IV, c. 46; 7 & 8 Vict. cc. 32, 113; 9 & 10 Vict. c. 45, (in Scotland and Ireland,) 19 & 20 Vict. c. 49; and 27 & 28 Vict. c. 32; or by the "Joint-Stock Companies Act, 1862," (25 & 26 Vict. c. 89.) Wharton.

—Savings bank. An institution in the nature of a bank, formed or established for the purpose of receiving deposits of money, for the benefit of the persons depositing, to accumulate the produce of so much thereof as shall not be required by the depositors, their executors or administrators, at compound interest, and to return the whole or any part of such deposit, and the produce thereof, to the depositors, their executors or administrators, deducting out of such produce so much as shall be necessary for the necessary expenses attending the management of such institution, but deriving no benefit whatever from any such deposit or the produce thereof. Grant, Banks, 546; Bulakowski v. Philadelphia Sa'y Fund Soc., 270 Pa. 538, 113 A. 553, 554. They differ from the ordinary banks of discount and deposit in not being engaged in business for profit. Commercial Trust Co. of New Jersey v. Hudson County Board of Taxation, 86 N.J.Law, 424, 92 A. 263, 265.

BANK HOLIDAY OF 1933. Presidential Proclamations No. 2039, issued March 6, 1933, and No. 2040, issued March 9, 1933, temporarily suspended banking transactions by member banks of the Federal Reserve System. Normal banking functions were resumed on March 13, subject to certain restrictions. The first proclamation, it was held, had no authority in law until the passage on March 9, 1933, of a ratifying act (12 U.S.C.A. § 95b). Anthony v. Bank of Wiggins, 183 Miss. 885, 184 So. 626. The present law forbids member banks of the Federal Reserve System to transact banking business, except under regulations of the Secretary of the Treasury, during an emergency proclaimed by the President. 12 U.S.C.A. § 95.

BANK NIGHT. A device by which a theater provides a registration book which any person over eighteen years of age, whether a patron of the theater or not, may sign. The book is placed in the lobby or outside the doors of the theater and no charge is made for registration nor need one who does so buy a ticket to the theater. A number is given to each name. On stated occasions, the numbers representing all the names registered are placed in a container on the stage of the theater and one number is drawn. The name of the person having that registration number is announced both inside and outside the theater and on coming forward within a certain time, he receives a sum of money which the theater provides from its own funds. If the person whose number is drawn is outside the theater, he is permitted to enter and claim the award without paying the admission. If he does not come forward within the time set, the money is added to the sum to be awarded on the next bank night. Under the plan, various safeguards are thrown about the operation to insure fairness in the allotment of the money. State v. Dorau, 124 Conn. 160, 198 A. 573, 574. If not a lottery, a bank night is at least a gift enterprise. Barker v. State, 56 Ga. App. 705, 193 S.E. 605, 609. But it is generally considered to be a lottery. State ex rel. Hunter v. Fox Beatrice Theatre Corporation, 133 Neb. 392, 275 N.W. 605, 606; Furst v. A. & G. Amusement Co., 128 N.J.L. 311, 25 A.2d 892, 893; Commonwealth v. Lund, 142 Pa.Super. 208, 15 A.2d 839, 846.

BANKABLE PAPER. In mercantile law. Notes, checks, bank bills, drafts, and other securities for money, received as cash by the banks. The term does not necessarily mean discountable paper, but paper of such high credit that, if the time of payment was reasonable and the banks had loanable funds, they would ordinarily discount it. Edward P. Allis Co. v. Madison Electric Light, Heat & Power Co., 9 S.D. 459, 70 N.W. 650, 652.

National bank notes are received as bankable money without regard to the locality of the bank issuing them. U.S.Rev.Stat. § 5133 (12 USCA § 21); Veazie Bank v. Fenno, 8 Wall. 533, 19 L.Ed. 482.

BANKER. A private person who keeps a bank; one who is engaged in the business of banking. People v. Doty, 80 N.Y. 228; Auten v. Bank, 19 S.Ct. 628, 174 U.S. 125, 43 L.Ed 920.

Individual Banker

Under some statutes, an individual banker, as distinguished from a “private banker” (q. v.), is a person who, having complied with the statutory requirements, has received authority from the state to engage in the business of banking, while a private banker is a person engaged in banking without having any special privileges or authority from the state. Perkins v. Smith, 116 N.Y. 441, 23 N.E. 21.

Private Banker

One who carries on the business of banking by receiving money on deposit with or without interest, by buying and selling bills of exchange, promissory notes, gold or silver coin, bullion, uncurrenct money, bonds or stock, or other securities, and by loaning money without being incorporated. State ex rel. Barker v. Sage, 267 Mo. 493, 184 S.W. 984, 988. See Individual banker, supra.

BANKER’S ACCEPTANCE. A draft or bill of exchange of which the acceptor is a bank or banker engaged generally in the business of granting bankers’ acceptance credits. Atterbury v. Bank of Washington Heights of City of New York, 241 N.Y. 231, 149 N.E. 841, 843.

BANKER’S LIEN. A lien which a banker has by virtue of which he can appropriate any money or property in his possession belonging to a customer to the extinguishment of any matured debt of such customer to the bank, provided such property or money has not been charged, with the knowledge of the bank, with the subservience of a special burden or purpose, or does not constitute a trust fund of which the banker has notice. American Surety Co. of New York v. Bank of Italy, 63 Cal.App. 149, 218 P. 466, 468.

BANKER’S NOTE. A commercial instrument resembling a bank note in every particular except that it is given by a private banker or unincorporated banking institution. 6 Mod. 29; 3 Chit. Comm.Law 590.
BANKRUPT. Originally and strictly, a trader who secretes himself or does certain other acts tending to defraud his creditors. 2 Bl.Com. 471; Shor v. McGregor, C.C.A.Tex., 108 F.2d 421, 423.

In a looser sense, an insolvent person; a broken-up or ruined trader. Everett v. Stone, 3 Story, 453, Fed.Cas.No.4,577.

In the English law there were two characteristics which distinguished bankrupts from insolvencies: the former must have been a trader and the object of the proceedings against, not by, him. As used in American law, the distinction between a bankrupt and an insolvent is not generally regarded. Sturgis v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 4 L.Ed. 529; 2 Kent, 390; McCormick v. Pickering, 4 N.Y. 283. On the continent of Europe, however, the distinction still exists. Holtz. Enc. voc. sig. Bankrott.

A person who has committed an act of bankruptcy; one who has done some act or suffered some act to be done in consequence of which, under the laws of his country, he is liable to be proceeded against by his creditors for the seizure and distribution among them of his entire property. Ashby v. Steere, 2 Woodb. & M. 347, 2 Fed. Cas. 15; In re Scott, 21 Fed.Cas. 803; U. S. v. Pusey, 27 Fed.Cas. 632. For "Examination of bankruptcy", see Examination.

The term includes one against whom involuntary petition has been filed. United States v. Agresti, C.C.A.N.Y., 130 F.2d 152, 153, 154.

A person who, by the formal decree of a court, has been declared subject to be proceeded against under the bankruptcy laws, or entitled, on his voluntary application, to take the benefit of such laws. See Bankruptcy Act July 1, 1898, c. 541, § 1, 30 Stat. 544 (11 USCA § 1).

BANKRUPT LAW. A law for benefit and relief of creditors and their debtors in cases in which the latter are unable or unwilling to pay their debts. Campbell v. Alleghany Corporation, C.C. A.Md., 75 F.2d 947, 951.

A bankrupt law is distinguished from the ordinary law between debtor and creditor, as involving these three general principles: (1) A summary and immediate seizure of all the debtor's property; (2) a distribution of it among the creditors in general, instead of merely applying a portion of it to the payment of the individual complainant; and (3) the discharge of the debtor from future liability for the debts then existing.

The leading distinction between a bankrupt law and an insolvent law, in the proper technical sense, consists in the character of the persons upon whom it is designed to operate,—the former contemplating as its objects bankrupts only, that is, traders of a certain description; the latter, insolvents in general, or persons unable to pay their debts. This has led to a marked separation between the two systems, in principle and in practice, which in England has always been carefully maintained, although in the United States it has of late been disregarded. A bankrupt law, moreover, in its proper sense, is a remedy intended primarily for the benefit of creditors; it is set in motion at their instance, and operates upon the debtor against his will, (in invitum,) although in its result it effectually discharges him from his debts. An insolvent law, on the other hand, is chiefly intended for the benefit of the debtor, and is set in motion at his instance, though possibly less effective as a discharge in its final result. Sturgis v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 194, 4 L.Ed. 529; Vanuxen v. Hartford, 4 N.J.Law, 192, 7 Am.Dec. 582; Adams v. Storey, 1 Paine, 79, 1 Fed.Cas. 142; Kunzler v. Kohaus, 5 Hill (N.Y.) 317.

The only substantial difference between a strictly bankrupt law and an insolvent law lies in the circumstance that the former affords relief upon the application of the creditor, and the latter upon the application of the debtor. Martin v. Berry, 37 Cal. 222.

BANKRUPTCY. The state or condition of one who is a bankrupt; amenability to the bankruptcy laws; the condition of one who has committed an act of bankruptcy, and is liable to be proceeded against by his creditors therefor, or of one whose circumstances are such that he is entitled, on his voluntary application, to take the benefit of the bankrupt laws.

The term is used in a looser sense as synonymous with "insolvency."—inability to pay one's debts; the stopping and breaking up of business because the trader is broken down, insolvent, ruined. Pipps v. Harding, C.C.A.Wis., 70 Fed. 468, 17 C.C.A. 203, 30 L.R.A. 513.

It constitutes a branch of equity jurisprudence. In re Flour Mills of America, D.C.Mo., 27 F.Supp. 559, 560. Its purpose is to secure finally to creditors distribution of value of at least part of debtor's assets and to bankrupt discharge from his debts, to end that creditors may be paid as much as may be and that bankrupt may have new start in life. In re Jones, D.C.Mo., 10 F.Supp. 165, 167.

Insolvency means a simple inability to pay as debts should become payable, whereby the debtor's business would be broken up; bankruptcy means the particular legal status, to be ascertained and declared by a judicial decree. In re Black, 2 Ben. 196, Fed.Cas.No.1,487.

The proceedings taken under the bankrupt law, against a person (or firm or company) to have him adjudged a bankrupt, and to have his estate administered for the benefit of the creditors, and divided among them. That branch of jurisprudence, or system of law and practice, which is concerned with the definition and ascertainment of acts of bankruptcy and the administration of bankrupts' estates for the benefit of their creditors and the absolution and restitution of bankrupts.

Act of Bankruptcy. See Act.

Adjudication of Bankruptcy
The judgment or decree of a court having jurisdiction, that a person against whom a petition in bankruptcy has been filed, or who has filed his voluntary petition, be ordered and adjudged to be a bankrupt.

Bankruptcy Courts. Courts for the administration of the bankrupt laws.

Bankruptcy Proceedings

Controversies Arising in Bankruptcy Proceedings. See Proceedings in bankruptcy.

Extension. See Extension.

Involuntary Bankruptcy. See Voluntary bankruptcy, infra.

Voluntary Bankruptcy
Bankruptcy (in the sense of proceedings taken under the bankruptcy law) is either voluntary or involuntary; the former where the proceeding is initiated by the debtor's own petition to be adjudged a bankrupt and have the benefit of the law. In re Murray, D.C.Iowa, 96 F. 600; Metsker v. Bonebrake, 2 Sup.Ct. 351, 108 U.S. 66, 27 L.Ed. 654, the latter where he is forced into bankruptcy on the petition of a sufficient number of his creditors.

See Bankrupt; Bankrupt Law.

Bankruptcy Rule
Allows claim only for amount of debt, less value of security. In re Baker, 333 Pa. 273, 3 A.2d 785, 786.

BANLEUCA. (Same as the French banlieue).
An old law term, signifying a space or tract of country around a city, town, or monastery, distinguished and protected by peculiar privileges. Spelman.

BANLIEU, or BANLIEUE. In French and Canadian law. The same as banlieue (q. v.).

BANNER. A small flag bearing a device or symbol and intended to be carried or waved. L.R. 2 P.C. 387. The term includes a canvas, parti-colored or bearing party words and stretched across a street. 4 O'M. & H. 179.

BANNI NUPTIARUM. L. Lat. In old English law. The bans of matrimony.

BANNIMUS. Lat. We ban or expel. The form of expulsion of a member from the University of Oxford, by affixing the sentence in some public places, as a promulgation of it. Cowell.

BANNIRE AD PLACITA, AD MOLENDINUM.
To summon tenants to serve at the lord's courts, to bring corn to be ground at his mill.

BANNITIO. Banishment; expulsion by a ban or public proclamation. Adams Gloss.

BANNITUS. See Banni.

BANNS OF MATRIMONY. Public notice or proclamation of a matrimonial contract, and the intended celebration of the marriage of the parties in pursuance of such contract. Cowell; 1 Bla. Comm. 439; Pothier, Du Man age p. 2, c. 2.

Such announcement is required by the English law to be made in a church or chapel, during service, on three consecutive Sundays before the marriage is celebrated. The object is to afford an opportunity for any person to interpose an objection if he knows of any impediment or other just cause why the marriage should not take place. The publication of the banns may be dispensed with by procuring a special license to marry.

ANNUM. A ban (q. v.).

BANNUS. In old English law. A proclamation. Bannus regis; the king's proclamation, made by the voice of a herald, forbidding all present at the trial by combat to interfere either by motion or word, whatever they might see or hear. Bract. fol. 142.

BANQUE. Fr. A bench; the table or counter of a trader, merchant, or banker. Banque route; a broken bench or counter; bankrupt.

BANS OF MATRIMONY. See Banns of Matrimony.

BANYAN. In East Indian law. A Hindoo merchant or shop-keeper. The word is used in Bengal to denote the native who manages the money concerns of a European, and sometimes serves him as an interpreter.

BAR. A partition or railing running across a court-room, intended to separate the general public from the space occupied by the judges, counsel, jury, and others concerned in the trial of a cause. In the English courts it is the partition behind which all outer-barristers and every member of the public must stand. Solicitors, being officers of the court, are admitted within it; as are also queen's counsel, barristers with patients of precedence, and serjeants, in virtue of their ranks. Parties who appear in person also are placed within the bar on the floor of the court.

A particular part of the court-room; for example, the place where prisoners stand at their trial, hence the expression "prisoner at the bar."

The court, in its strictest sense, sitting in full term. The presence, actual or constructive, of the court. Thus, a trial at bar is one had before the full court, distinguished from a trial had before a single judge at nisi prius. So the "case at bar" is the case now before the court and under its consideration; the case being tried or argued.

In another sense, the whole body of attorneys and counsellors, or the members of the legal profession, collectively, who are figuratively called the "bar," from the place which they usually occupy in court. They are thus distinguished from the "bench," which term denotes the whole body of judges.

In the practice of legislative bodies, the outer boundary of the house; therefore, all persons, not being members, who wish to address the house, or are summoned to it, appear at the bar for that purpose.

In the law of contracts, an impediment, obstacle, or preventive barrier. -

Thus, relationship within the prohibited degrees is a bar to marriage. In this sense also we speak of the "bar of the statute of limitations."

That which defeats, annuls, cuts off, or puts an end to.

Thus, a provision "in bar of dower" is one which has the effect of defeating or cutting off the dower-rights which the wife would otherwise become entitled to in the particular land.

In pleading, a special plea, constituting a sufficient answer to an action at law; so called because it barred, i.e., prevented, the plaintiff from further prosecuting it with effect, and, if established by proof, defeated and destroyed the action altogether. Now called a special "plea in bar." It may be further described as a plea or peremptory exception of a defendant to destroy the plaintiff's action. City of San Antonio v. John-

BAR ASSOCIATION. An association of members of the bar. Such associations have been organized in most states. The first was in Mississippi in 1825, but it is not known to have had a continued existence. An association of Grafton and Coos counties in New Hampshire had an existence before 1800, and probably a more or less continuous life since then, having finally merged into a state association. Similar associations exist in many of the counties in various states.

—Bar integration. See Integrated Bar,

BAR FEE. In English law. A fee taken by the sheriff, time out of mind, for every prisoner who is acquitted. Bac.Abr. "Extortion." Abolished by St. 14 Geo. III. c. 26; 55 Geo. III. c. 50; 8 & 9 Vict. c. 114.

BAR ROOM. A place where intoxicating liquors are sold to be drunk on the same premises. City of Spokane v. Baughman, 103 P. 14, 17, 54 Wash. 315.

A room containing a bar or counter at which liquors are sold, or a room with a bar where liquors and refreshments are served. Mustard v. Elwood, C.C.A.Alaska, 223 F. 225, 226.

The words "bar" and "bar room" have a more restrictive meaning than "saloon," and mean a place from which intoxicating liquors are to be sold. Greil Bros. Co. v. Mabson, 179 Ala. 444, 60 So. 876, 877, 43 L.R.A.,N.S., 664.

BAR SINISTER. A term popularly though erroneously used for baton, a mark of illegitimacy. Webster.

BARAGARIA. In old Lombardic law. An uncle, patruus.

BART. See Berat,

BARATRIAM COMMITIT QUI PROPTER PECUNIAM JUSTITIAM BARACTAT. He is guilty of barratry who for money sells justice. Bell. (This maxim, however, is one pertaining more to the meaning of "barratry" as used in Scotch law than to its common-law meaning. See Barratry.)

BARBANUS. In old Lombardic law. An uncle, patruus.

The term has been held to include a woman, who, being employed in a beauty parlor serving women customers exclusively, cut a woman's hair in the style of bobbed hair. State v. Leftwich, 142 Wash. 329, 253 P. 448, 449, 59 A.L.R. 539. But it has also been thought that the proprietor of a "hairdressing and beauty parlor," the important features of whose business included cutting hair, massaging, clipping hair with barber clippers, singeing the hair, giving tonics, shampooing, and manicuring, but not shaving the face, was not a "barber" within a statute subjecting barbers to examination and regulation. Keith v. State Barber Board, 112 Kan. 834, 212 P. 871, 872, 31 A.L.R. 432.

In England in former times, barbers also practiced surgery and dentistry, but by 32 Hen. VIII, c. 42, barbers, although they were thereby incorporated with the surgeons of London, were not to practice surgery, except the drawing of teeth.

BARBICANAGE. In old European law. Money paid to support a barbican or watchtower.
BARE OR MERE LICENSEE. One whose presence on premises is merely tolerated; while a "licensee" or "invitee" is one who is on the premises by invitation, express or implied. Chicago, R.I. & P. Ry. Co. v. McCleary, 175 O. 347, 53 P.2d 555, 557.

BARE PATENT LICENSE. A grant of authority to make, use or vend patented product throughout the United States or in a given part thereof, with no right of exclusion. 35 U.S.C.A. § 47. Innis, Speiden & Co. v. Food Machinery Corporation, D. C.Del., 2 F.R.D. 261, 263.

BARE TRUSTEE. One whose trust is to convey, or a trustee to whose office no duties were originally attached, or who, although such duties were originally attached to his office, would, on the requisition of his cestuis que trust, be compellable in equity to convey the estate to them or by their direction. Christie v. Ovington, 1 Ch.Div. 279, 281.

BAREBONES PARLIAMENT. A parliament summoned by Cromwell in 1653.

BARET. L. Fr. A wrangling suit. Britt. c. 92; Co.Litt. 368b.

BARGAIN. A mutual undertaking, contract, or agreement.

A contract or agreement between two parties, the one to sell goods or lands, and the other to buy them. Bank v. Archer, 16 Miss. 192.

As a verb, to sell for cash, or on terms, rather than to trade or exchange. In re Wellings' Estate, 197 Cal. 189, 240 P. 21, 24.

"If the word 'agreement' imports a mutual act of two parties, surely the word 'bargain' is not less significative of the consent of two. In a popular sense, the former word is frequently used as declaring the engagement of one only. A man may agree to pay money or to perform some other act, and the word is then used synonymously. With 'promise' or 'engage.' But the word 'bargain' is seldom used, unless to express a mutual contract or undertaking." Packard v. Richardson, 17 Mass. 131, 9 Am.Dec. 123.

—Bargain money. These words in a contract for the sale of land have much the same significance as earnest money. Morgan v. Forbes, 236 Mass. 480, 128 N.E. 792, 793.

—Catching bargain. A bargain by which money is loaned, at an extortionate or extravagant rate, to an heir or any one who has an estate in reversion, to be repaid on the vesting of his interest; or a similar unconscionable bargain with such person for the purchase outright of his expectancy. See Edler v. Frazier, 174 Iowa, 46, 156 N.W. 182, 187. That kind of fraud often perpetrated upon young, inexperienced, or ignorant people. Provident Life & Trust Co. v. Fletcher, C.C.A.N.Y., 258 F. 583, 586.

See Unconscionable Bargain

BARGAIN AND SALE. In conveyancing. The transferring of the property of a thing from one to another, upon valuable consideration, by way of sale. Shep.Touch. (by Preston.) 221.

A contract or bargain by the owner of land, in consideration of money or its equivalent paid, to sell land to another person, called the "bargainee," whereupon a use arises in favor of the latter, to whom the seisin is transferred by force of the statute of uses. Laing v. McClung, 103 W. Va. 341, 137 S.E. 744, 745.

The proper and technical words to denote a bargain and sale are "bargain and sell," but any other words that are sufficient to raise a use upon a valuable consideration are sufficient. 2 Wood.Conv. 15; Jackson ex dem. Hudson v. Alexander, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 484, 3 Am.Dec. 517.

The expression "bargain and sale" is also applied to transfers of personality, in cases where there is first an executory agreement for the sale, (the bargain,) and then an actual and completed sale.

BARGAIN OR CONTRACT IN RESTRAINT OF TRADE. Any bargain or contract which purports to limit in any way right of either party to work or to do business. Stoia v. Miskinis, 298 Mich. 105, 298 N.W. 469, 474.

BARGAINEE. The grantee of an estate in a deed of bargain and sale. The party to a bargain to whom the subject-matter of the bargain or thing bargained for is to go.

BARGAINOR. The person who makes a bargain. The party to a bargain who is to receive the consideration and perform the contract by delivery of the subject-matter.

BARGE. Name originally applied to a small sailing vessel but afterwards came into general use for a flat bottomed boat used for carrying goods on inland waterways. Barges are usually towed or fitted with some kind of engine. The Sakito Maru, D.C.Cal., 41 F.Supp. 769, 778.

BARK. It is sometimes figuratively used to denote the mere words or letter of an instrument, or outer covering of the ideas sought to be expressed, as distinguished from its inner substance or essential meaning. "If the bark makes for them, the pith makes for us." Bacon.

BARLEYCORN. In linear measure. The third of an inch.

BARMOTE COURTS. Courts held in certain mining districts belonging to the Duchy of Lancaster, for regulation of the mines, and for deciding questions of title and other matters relating thereto. 3 Steph.Comm. 347, note b.

It may be both a cornhouse and a stable; State v. Smith, 21 Iowa 565, 568; and has been used interchangeably with stable; Saylor v. Commonwealth, 22 Ky.L.Rep. 472, 57 S. W. 614, 615.

BARNARD'S INN. An inn of chancery. See Inns of Chancery.
BARO

BARO. In old law, a man, whether slave or free. In later usage, a freeman or freedman; a strong man; a good soldier; a hired soldier; a vassal; a baron; a feudal tenant or client. A man of dignity and rank; a knight. A magnate in the church. A judge in the exchequer (baro scaccarii). The first-born child. A husband.

The word is said by Spelman to have been used more frequently in the last sense; Spelman, Gloss.

BARON. A lord or nobleman; the most general title of nobility in England. 1 Bl.Comm. 398, 399. A particular degree or title of nobility, next to a viscount. The lowest title in Great Britain. A judge of the court of exchequer. 3 Bl.Comm. 44; Cowell. A freeman. Co.Litt. 58a. Also a vassal holding directly from the king. A husband; occurring in this sense in the phrase "baron et feme," husband and wife.

The term has essentially the same meanings as Baro [q. v.].

BARON COURT. See Court-Baron.

BARON ET FEME. Man and woman; husband and wife. Spelman, Gloss.; 1 Bla.Comm. 442.

A wife being under the protection and influence of her baron, lord, or husband, is styled a "feme-covert," (femina viro cooperta,) and her state of marriage is called her "coverture." Cummings v. Everett, 82 Me. 260, 19 A. 456.

BARONES SCACCARI. See Barons of the Exchequer.

BARONET. An English name or hereditary title of dignity or rank (but not a title of nobility, being next below that of baron), established in 1611 by James I. It is created by letters patent, and descends to the male heir. Spelman, Gloss.; 1 Bla.Comm. 442; 2 Holdsw.Hist.Eng.L. 159.

In Scotland, a large freehold estate, even though the proprietor is not a baron. See Barony of Land, infra.

BARONY. The dignity of a baron; a species of tenure; the territory or lands held by a baron. Spelman; 2 Holdsw.Hist.Eng.L. 159.

In Scotland, a large freehold estate, even though the proprietor is not a baron. See Barony of Land, infra.

BARONY OF LAND. In England, a quantity of land amounting to 15 acres. In Ireland, a subdivision of a county.

BARRA, or BARRE. In old practice. A plea in bar. The bar of the court. A barrister.

BARRATOR. One who commits barratry. See Barretor.

BARRATROUS. Fraudulent; having the character of barratry.

BARRATRY. In criminal law. Also spelled "Barretry." The offense of frequently exciting and stirring up quarrels and suits, either at law or otherwise. 4 Bla.Com. 134; State v. Batson, 220 N.C. 411, 17 S.E.2d 511, 512, 513.

Common barratry is the practice of exciting groundless judicial proceedings. Pen.Code Cal. § 158; Lucas v. Pico, 55 Cal. 128; Corn. v. McCulloch, 15 Mass. 229; Ex parte McCluskey, 82 Tex.Cr.R. 531, 199 S.W. 1101, 1102.

In maritime law. An act committed by the master or mariners of a vessel, for some unlawful or fraudulent purpose, contrary to their duty to the owners, whereby the latter sustain injury. It may include negligence, if so gross as to evidence fraud. Hansen v. Barnard, C.C.A.N.Y., 270 F. 163, 166.

Some fraudulent act of the master or mariners, tending to their own benefit, to the prejudice of the owner of the vessel, without his privity or consent. Kendrick v. Delafield, 2 Caines N.Y. 67.

A generic term, which includes many acts of various kinds and degrees. It comprehends any unlawful, fraudulent, or dishonest act of the master or mariners, and every violation of duty by them arising from gross and culpable negligence contrary to their duty to the owner of the vessel, and which might work loss or injury to him in the course of the voyage insured. A mutiny of the crew, and forcible disposition by them of the master and other officers from the ship, is a form of barratry. Greene v. Pacific Mut. Ins. Co., 9 Allen, Mass., 217.

In Scotch law. The crime committed by a judge who receives a bribe for his judgment. Skene; Brande.

See Champerty.

BARRIED. Obstructed by a bar; subject to hindrance or obstruction by a bar or barrier which, if interposed, will prevent legal redress or recovery; as, when it is said that a claim or cause of action is “barred by the statute of limitations.” Wilson v. Knox County, 132 Mo. 387, 34 S.W. 45, 477.

In agricultural and mercantile parlance, as also in the inspection laws, the term means, prima facie, not merely a certain quantity, but, further, a certain state of the article; namely, that it is in a cask. State v. Moore, 33 N.C. 72.

BARREN MONEY. In the civil law. A debt which bears no interest.

BARRENNESS. Sterility; the incapacity to bear children.

BARRETOR. In criminal law. A common mover, excitor, or maintainer of suits and quarrels either in courts or elsewhere in the country; a disturber of the peace who spreads false rumors and calumnies, whereby discord and disquiet may grow among neighbors. Co.Litt. 368.
Common Barretor

One who frequently excites and stirs up groundless suits and quarrels, either at law or otherwise. Mate v. Batson, 220 N.C. 411, 17 S.E.2d 511, 512, 513.

BARTER. A contract by which parties exchange goods or property are always exchanged for money. Finker v. Boyer, 331 Mo. 1242, 56 S.W.2d 372.

It differs from sale, in this : that in the latter transaction goods or property are always exchanged for money. Guerreiro v. Pelle, 3 Barn. & Ald. 617; Cooper v. State, 37 Ark. 418; Meyer v. Rousseau, 47 Ark. 460, 2 S. W. 112. In a sale there is a fixed price; in a barter there is not. Speigle v. Meredith, 4 Biss. 123, Fed.Cas.No.13,227.

BASTARD. An illegitimate child; a child born of an unlawful intercourse, and before the lawful marriage of its parents. Pettus v. Dawson, 82 Tex. 18, 17 S.W. 714.

A child born after marriage, but under circumstances which render it impossible that the husband of his mother can be his father. State v. Coliton, 73 N.D. 582, 17 N.W.2d 546, 548, 549, 156 A.L.R. 1403.
A child is not a bastard if born after marriage, although begotten before. 1 Bla.Com. 455, 456; 8 East, 210; State v. Herman, 35 N.C. 502.

One begotten and born out of lawful wedlock. Ex parte Newsome, 312 Ala. 168, 102 So. 216, 218.

This definition, which is substantially the same as Blackstone's, is open to the objection that it does not include with sufficient certainty those cases where children are born during wedlock but are not the children of the mother's husband.

Such children as are not born either in lawful wedlock or within a competent time after its determination. In re Paterson's Estate, 34 Cal.App.2d 305, 93 P.2d 825, 827.

The term also includes a child born of parents while in a state of slavery, inasmuch as the parents were under disability to contract marriage. Cole v. Taylor, 132 Tenn. 92, 177 S.W. 61, 65.

In Louisiana, "bastards," as distinguished from "natural children," are illegitimate children who have not been acknowledged by their parents. "Natural children" are those who have been acknowledged by both or either of their parents. Briggs v. McLaughlin, 134 La. 133, 63 So. 851, 852.

—Bastard eigne. In old English law. Bastard, elder. If a child was born of an illicit connection, and afterwards the parents intermarried and had another son, the elder was called bastard eigne, or, as it is now spelled, aine, and the second son was called puisne, or since born, or sometimes he was called mulier puisne. 2 Bla.Comm. 248.

—Special bastard. One born of parents before marriage, the parents afterward intermarrying. 3 Bl.Comm. 335.

By the civil and Scotch law, as well as by the statute law prevailing in over half of the states of the Union, the child would then be legitimated.

BASTARDIZE. To declare one a bastard, as a court does. To give evidence to prove one a bastard. A mother (married) cannot bastardize her child.

BASTARDUS NON POTEST HABERE ILEREDEM NISI DE CORPORE SUO LEGITIME PROCREATUM. A bastard can have no heir unless it be one lawfully begotten of his own body. Tray. Lat.Max. 51.

BASTARDUS NULLIUS EST FILIUS, AUT FILIUS POPULI. A bastard is nobody's son, or the son of the people.

BASTARDY PROCESS. The method provided by statute of proceeding against the putative father to secure a proper maintenance for the bastard.

It is of a special character in nature of civil action. In re Mitchell, 189 Okl. 51, 113 P.2d 979, 980.

BASTON. In old English law, a baton, club, or staff. A term applied to officers of the wardens of the prison called the "Fleet," because of the staff carried by them. Cowell; Spelman; Termes de la Ley. See Justices of Trail-Baston.

BATTLE. In old English law. Battel; the trial by combat or duelium.

BATH, KNIGHTS OF THE. See Knights of the Bath.

BATIMENT. In French marine law. A vessel or ship.

BATONNIER. The chief of the French bar in its various centres, who presides in the council of discipline. Arg.Fr.Merc.Law, 546.

BATTLE. Trial by combat; wager of battel. See Wager of Battel.

BATTERY. Any unlawful beating, or other wrongful physical violence or constraint, inflicted on a human being without his consent. Goodrum v. State, 60 Ga. 511.

The artnal to use force to th9 inuiru aannther person is assault; the use of it is battery,yantich always includes an assa ; Thence the two terms are commonly 76 Â‰Bined nt t e term "assault and battery." Harris v. State, 15 Okl.Cr. 369, 177 P.122, 123.

A surgical operation is a technical "battery" regardless of its result, and is excusable only when there is express or implied consent by the patient. Bonner v. Moran, 126 F.2d 121, 122, 75 U.S.App.D.C. 156, 139 A.L.R. 1366.

—Assault and Battery of a High and Aggravated Nature. An unlawful act of violent injury to the person of another, accompanied by circumstances of aggravation, such as the use of deadly weapon, great disparity between the ages and physical conditions of the parties, or the purposeful infliction of shame and disgrace. State v. Jones, 133 S.C. 167, 130 S.E. 747, 751.

—Simple Battery. One not accompanied by circumstances of aggravation, or not resulting in grievous bodily injury.

BATTONIER. In French and Canadian law. A member of the bar selected as the head of the bar.

BATTURE. According to Richelet and the French Academy, a marine term, used to denote a bottom of sand, stone, or rock, mixed together, and rising towards the surface of the water; as a technical word and also in common parlance, an elevation of the bed of a river, under the surface of the water. The term is, however, sometimes used to denote the same elevation of the bank, when it has risen above the surface of the water, or is as high as the land on the outside of the bank. Conkey v. Knudsen, 143 Neb. 5, 8 N.W.2d 538, 541.

In this latter sense it is synonymous with "alluvion." It means, in common-law language, land formed by accretion. Producers' Oil Co. v. Hanszen, 132 La. 691, 61 So. 754.

The term is used in Louisiana, and is applied principally to certain portions of the bed of the Mississippi river which are uncovered at time of low water but are covered annually at time of ordinary high water. Boyce Cottonseed Oil Mfg. Co. v. Board of Com'rs of Red River, Atchafalaya & Bayou Beauf Levee Dist., 160 La. 727, 107 So. 506, 508.

BAWD. One who procures opportunities for persons of opposite sexes to cohabit in an illicit manner; who may be, while exercising the trade of a bawd, perfectly innocent of committing in his or her own proper person the crime either of adultery or of fornication. See Dyer v. Morris, 4 Mo. 216.

To constitute a bawdy-house, the house must be "resorted to" or "frequented," that is to say, used a number of times, by lewd people of both sexes. State v. Seba, Mo. App., 200 S.W. 300; but need not be inhabited or resorted to by more than one woman for purpose of prostitution. Trent v. Commonwealth, 181 Va. 338, 25 S.E.2d 350, 351.

BAY. A pond-head made of a great height to keep in water for the supply of a mill, etc., so that the wheel of the mill may be turned by the water rushing thence, through a passage or flood-gate. St. 27 Eliz. c. 19. (This is generally called a forebay.)

A bending or curving of the shore of the sea or of a lake, so as to form a more or less inclosed body of water. State v. Town of Gilmanton, 14 N.H. 477. An opening into the land, or an arm of the sea, where the water is shut in on all sides except at the entrance. Mayo v. New York Cent. R. Co., 263 N.Y. 277, 189 N.E. 217, 218.

BAYGALL. A low-lying wet land matter with vegetable fibres and often with gallberry and other thick-growing bushes. McNeal v. Carter, 191 Ga. 441, 12 S.E.2d 332, 333.

BAY WINDOW. A window projecting from the wall of a building so as to form a recess or bay within, and, properly speaking, rising from the ground or basement, with straight sides only; but the term is also ordinarily applied to such projecting windows with curved sides, properly called bow windows, and also to projecting windows supported from the building, above the ground, properly called oriel windows. Hieronymus v. Moran, 272 I11. 254, 111 N.E. 1022, 1023.

BAYOU. A species of creek or stream common in Louisiana and Texas. An outlet from a swamp, pond, or lagoon, to a river, or the sea. See Surgett v. Lapice, 8 How. 48, 70, 12 L.Ed. 982.

BEACH. This term, in its ordinary signification, when applied to a place on tide waters means the space between ordinary high and low water mark; East Hampton v. Kirk, 6 Hun (N.Y.) 257; or the space over which the tide usually ebbs and flows. It is a term not more significant of a sea margin than "shore." Niles v. Patch, 13 Gray (Mass.) 257; Hodge v. Boothby, 48 Me. 68.

In common parlance designates that portion of shore consisting generally of sand and pebbles, resulting usually from the action of water, as distinct from the upland, to which it often extends above normal high-water mark. Borden v. Town of Westport, 112 Conn. 152, 151 A. 512, 515.

Beach is synonymous with "shore," "strand," or "flats." Littlefield v. Littlefield, 28 Me. 180.

The term may also include the sandy shore above mean high water which is washed by storms and exceptionally high tides. Newkirk v. Sherwood, 94 A. 982, 984, 89 Conn. 598.

To "beach" a ship is to run it upon the beach or shore; this is frequently found necessary in case of a fire, leak, etc.

See Foreshore; Sea-Shore.

Public Beach

One left by the state or others claiming it open to the common use of the public, which the unorganized public and each of its members have a right to use while it remains such. Brower v. Wakeman, 88 Conn. 8, 89 A. 913, 914.

BEACON. A light-house, or sea-mark, formerly used to alarm the country, in case of the approach of an enemy, but now used for the guidance of vessels. Comyns, Dig. Navig. (H).

BEADLE. In English ecclesiastical law. An inferior parish officer, who is chosen by the vestry, and whose business is to attend the vestry, to give notice of its meetings, to execute its orders, to attend upon inquests, and to assist the constables. Wharton. See, also, Bedel.

BEAMS AND BALANCE. Instruments for weighing goods and merchandise.

BEAR. To support, sustain, or carry; to give rise to, or to produce, something else as an incident or auxiliary. See Stevenson v. Mellor, 252 Pa. 219, 97 A. 393, 394; to render, to manage, or direct, or to conduct; to carry on, or maintain; to be answerable for, and to defray. Teeter v. Mid-West Enterprise Co., 174 Okl. 644, 52 P.2d 810, 812.

BEAR ARMS. To carry arms as weapons and with reference to their military use, not to wear them about the person as part of the dress. Aymette v. State, 2 Humph. (Tenn.) 158.

As applied to fire-arms, includes the right to load and shoot them, and to use them as such things are generally used. Hill v. State, 53 Ga. 480.

BEAR INTEREST. To generate interest, so that the instrument or loan spoken of shall produce or yield interest at the rate specified by the parties or granted by law. Slaughter v. Slaughter, 21 Ind. App. 641, 52 N.E. 995.

BEARER. One who bears, carries, or holds a thing. Defined by the Negotiable Instruments Act as the person in possession of a bill or note which is payable to bearer. Miller v. People's Say. Bank, 193 Mo.App. 498, 186 S.W. 547, 550.

When a check, note, draft, etc., is payable to “bearer,” it imports that the contents thereof shall be payable to any person who may present the instrument for payment. Thompson v. Perrine, 106 U.S. 589, 1 S.Ct. 564, 568, 27 L. Ed. 298.

BEARERS. In old English law. Such as bear down or oppress others; maintainers. Cowell.

BEARING DATE. Disclosing a date on its face; having a certain date. Words frequently used in pleading and conveyancing to introduce the date which has been put upon an instrument. See 2 Greenl.Ev. § 160; 2 Dowl. & L. 759.

BEAST. An animal; a domestic animal; a quadruped, such as may be used for food or in labor or for sport; e. g., a cow; Taylor v. State, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 285; a horse; Winfrey v. Zimmerman, 8 Bush (Ky.) 587; and a hog; State v. Enslov, 10 Iowa, 115; but a dog was held not to be; U. S. v. Gideon, 1 Minn. 292 (Gil. 226); but see Morewood v. Wakefield, 133 Mass. 241.

BEASTS OF THE CHASE. In English law. Properly, the buck, doe, fox, martin, and roe, but in a common and legal sense extending likewise to all the beasts of the forest, which beside the others are reckoned to be the hind, hare, bear, and wolf, and, in a word, all wild beasts of prey or hunting. Co.Litt. 233; 2 Bla.Comm. 39.

BEASTS OF THE PLOW. An old term for animals employed in the operations of husbandry, including horses. Somers v. Emerson, 58 N.H. 49.

BEAT, v. To strike or hit repeatedly, as with blows. Regina v. Hale, 2 Car. & K. 327; Com. v. McClellan, 101 Mass. 35; Corn. v. McClellan, 101 Mass. 35.

In the criminal law and the law of torts, with reference to assault and battery, the term includes any unlawful physical violence offered to another. See Battery.

To beat, in a legal sense, is not merely to whip, wound, or hurt, but includes any unlawful imposition of the hand or arm. Goodrum v. State, 60 Ga. 511; Yarbrough v. State, 17 Ga.App. 828, 88 S.E. 710, 711.

BEAT, n. In some of the southern states (as Alabama, Mississippi, South Carolina) the principal legal subdivision of a county, corresponding to towns or townships in other states; or a voting precinct. Eaton v. State, 20 Ala.App. 110, 101 So. 94, 95.

BEATING OF THE BOUNDS. An ancient custom in England by which, once a year, the minister, etc., of a parish walked about its boundaries to preserve a recollection of them. Cent.Dict. (Perambulation).

BEAUPLEADER. (L. Fr. fair pleading). A writ of prohibition directed to the sheriff or another, directing him not to take a fine for beaupleader.

There was anciently a fine imposed called a fine for beaupleader, which is explained by Coke to have been originally imposed for bad pleading. Coke, 2d Inst. 123. The statute of Marlborough (52 Hen. Ill.) c. 11, enacts, that neither in the circuit of justices, nor in counties, hundreds, or courts-baron, any fines shall be taken for fair pleading; namely, for not pleading fairly or aptly to the purpose. Upon this statute this writ was ordained, directed to the sheriff, bailiff, or him who shall demand the fine; and it is a prohibition or command not to do it. Cowell; Co. 2d Inst. 122; Crabb, Eng.Law 150.

BEAUTY CULTURE. Generally, the means employed to improve personal appearance, is an occupation operating directly on the person. Hoff v. State, Del.Super., 197 A. 75, 78, 81.

BECAUSE OF EMPLOYMENT. In this phrase as used in the Workmen’s Compensation Act, excepting an employer from liability for the willful act of a third person directed against an employee because of his employment, the words “because of” are not synonymous with “caused by” but with “on account of,” or “by reason of.” Saucier’s Case, 122 Me. 325, 119 A. 860, 861.

BECOME. To pass from one state to another; to enter into some state or condition.

Hence one who is a member of a particular organization at the time of the enactment of a statute making it felony to “become” a member of such an organization cannot be said to be within the purview of the act. State v. Laundry, 103 Or. 443, 204 P. 958, 963.

BED. The hollow or channel of a water course; the depression between the banks worn by the regular and usual flow of the water.

Soil only which the water occupies sufficiently long and continuously to wrest it from vegetation.

The land that is covered by the water in its ordinary low stage. Wemple v. Eastham, 150 La. 247, 90 So. 637, 638.

That portion of its soil which is alternately covered and left bare as there may be an increase or diminution in the supply of water, and which is adequate to contain it at its average and mean state during an entire year. Maufrais v. State, 142 Tex. 559, 180 S.W.2d 144, 147.

Area extending between the opposing banks measured from the foot of the banks from the top of the water at its ordinary stage, including sand bars which may exist between the foot of said banks as thus defined. Town of Refugio v. Heard, Tex.Civ.App., 95 S.W.2d 1008, 1010.

It includes the lands below ordinary high water mark. United States v. Chicago, M., St. P. & P. R. Co., 61 S.Ct. 772, 775, 312 U.S. 592, 313 U.S. 543; 85 L. Ed. 1064.

Also, the right of cohabitation or marital intercourse; as in the phrase "divorce from bed and board," or a mensa et thoro.

BED OF JUSTICE. In old French law. The seat or throne upon which the king sat when personally present in parliament; hence it signified the parliament itself.

BED-ALE or BID-ALE. A friendly assignation for neighbors to meet and drink at the house of newly married persons or other poor, people and then for the guests to contribute to the housekeepers. Cowell. See Bidal.

BEDDING. Covers practically everything, that is to say, mattresses, springs, cots, couches, quilts, cushions, and also the bed itself. Baltimore Bedding Corporation v. Moses, 182 Md. 229, 34 A.2d 338, 340.

BEDEHOUSE. A hospital or almshouse for bedmen or poor people who prayed for their founders and benefactors. Cunningham.

BEDEL, In English law. A crier or messenger and benefactors. Cunningham.

BEDELY. The jurisdiction of a bedel, as a bailiwick is the jurisdiction of a bailiff. Co.Litt. 234b; Cowell.

BEDERPE. A service which certain tenants were anciently bound to perform, as to reap their landlord's corn at harvest. Said by Whishaw to be still in existence in some parts of England. Blount; Cowell; Whishaw.

BEDEREPE. Those which we now call banditti; profligate and excommunicated persons. Cunningham.

BEDLAM. A corruption of Bethlehem. The hospital of St. Mary of Bethlehem in London, originally a priory, founded about 1247, but used from about 1400 as an asylum for the insane.

BEEF. Used frequently to mean an animal of the cow species and not beef prepared for market. A beef or one beef is an expression frequently used to designate an animal fit for use as beef, instead of designating it as a steer, a heifer, an ox, or a cow. Davis v. State, 40 Tex. 135.

BEER. A liquor compounded of malt and hops, differing from ales, not so much in its ingredients as in its processes of fermentation.

A brewed liquor made of grain, especially barley, flavored with hops, which has undergone fermentation and contains alcohol. State v. Lynch, 5 Boyce (Del.) 569, 96 A. 324, 328; alcoholic beverage resulting from the fermentation of cereals or other starchy substances. U. S. v. Standard Brewery, D.C.Md., 260 F. 486, 487.

In its ordinary sense, it denotes a beverage which is intoxicating; Moffitt v. People, 59 Colo. 406, 149 P. 104, 107; Hopkins v. Commonwealth, 171 Ky. 204, 188 S.W. 348, 349; and is within the fair meaning of the words "strong or spirited liquors," used in the statutes on this subject. Maier v. State, 2 Tex.Civ.App. 296, 21 S.W. 974.

But also held that "liquor," in common parlance, does not ordinarily mean "beer." Lea v. State, 181 S.W.2d 351, 353, 181 Tenn. 378.

Any liquor, whether intoxicating or not, made by the usual process of making beer, although fermentation is arrested to reduce the percentage of alcohol. Brown v. State, 17 Ariz. 314, 152 P. 578, 582.

BEER-HOUSE; BEER-SHOP. In English law. A place where beer is sold to be consumed on the premises; as distinguished from a "beer-shop," which is a place where beer is sold to be consumed off the premises. 16 Ch.Div. 721.

BEFORE. Prior to; preceding. In the presence of; under the official purview of; as in a magistrate's jurat, "before me personally appeared," etc. State v. Murnane, 172 Minn. 401, 215 N.W. 863.

Thus, an acknowledgment made to an officer over a telephone wire by one who is not present with the officer, is not an acknowledgment "before" the officer. Hutchinson v. State, 79 Fla. 157, 84 So. 151, 154.

In the absence of any statutory provision governing the computation of time, the authorities are uniform that, where an act is required to be done a certain number of days or weeks before a certain other day upon which another act is to be done, the day upon which the first act is done is to be excluded from the computation, and the whole number of days or weeks must intervene before the day fixed for doing the second act. Ward v. Walters, 63 Wis. 44, 22 N.W. 844.

When used as a preposition, does not indicate a period of time as do the prepositions "for," "during," and "throughout," but merely an event or act preceding in time, or earlier than, or previously to, the time mentioned. First Nat. Corporation v. Perrine, 43 P.2d 1073, 1077, 99 Mont. 454.

BEG. To solicit alms or charitable aid. The act of a cripple in passing along the sidewalk and silently holding out his hand and receiving money from passers-by is "begging for alms," within the meaning of a statute which uses that phrase. In re Haller, 3 Abb.N.C.,N.Y., 65.

BEGA. A land measure used in the East Indies. In Bengal it is equal to about a third part of an acre.

BEGAR. One who lives by begging charity, or who has no other means of support than solicited alms.

BEGIN. To originate; to come into existence; to commence.

BEGGAR. One who lives by begging charity, or who has no other means of support than solicited alms.

BEGIN. To originate; to come into existence; to start; to institute; to initiate; to commence. People ex rel. Northchester Corporation v. Miller, 31 N.Y.S.2d 586, 587, 263 App.Div. 83.

BEGGOTTEN. "To be begotten" means the same as "begotten," embracing all those whom the par; ent shall have begotten during his life, quos procreavit. Cox v. Newby, 85 S.E. 369, 370, 101 S.C. 193. The term is peculiarly and chiefly applicable to a father. Swain v. Bowers, 91 Ind. App. 307, 158 N.E. 598, 601.

BEGUM. In India. A lady, princess, woman of high rank.

BEGIN. In a statute providing that nothing contained in it should affect prosecutions "begun" under any existing act, the word "begun" means both those which have already been begun and those which may hereafter be begun. Lang v. U. S., C.C.A.II., 133 F. 201, 66 C.C.A. 255.

BEHALF. Benefit, support, defence, or advantage. A witness testifies on "behalf" of the party who calls him, notwithstanding his evidence proves to be adverse to that party's case. Richerson v. Sternburg, 65 Ill. 274. See, further, 12 Q.B. 693; 18 Q.B. 512.

BEHAVIOR. Manner of having, holding, or keeping one's self; manner of behaving, whether good or bad; conduct; manners; carriage of one's self, with respect to propriety and morals; deportment. Webster. State v. Roll, 1 Ohio Dec. 284; Schneiderman v. United States, Cal., 63 S.Ct. 1333, 1340, 320 U.S. 118, 87 L.Ed. 1796.

Surety to be of good behavior is a larger requirement than surety to keep the peace. Dalton, c. 122; 4 Burns, Just. 355. See Good Behavior.

BEHETRIA. In Spanish law. Lands situated in districts and manors in which the inhabitants had the right to select their own lords.

BEHOOF. Use; benefit; profit; service; advantage. It occurs in conveyances, e. g., "to his and their use and behoof." Stiles v. Japhet, 84 Tex. 91, 19 S.W. 450.

BEING STRUCK. Collision, or striking together of two objects, one of which may be stationary. Davilla v. Liberty Life Ins. Co., 114 Cal.App. 308, 299 P. 831, 834.

Conviction of the mind, arising not from actual perception or knowledge, but by way of inference, or from evidence received or information derived from others. A conviction of the truth of a given proposition or an alleged fact resting upon grounds insufficient to constitute positive knowledge. Boone v. Merchants' & Farmers' Bank, D.C.N.C., 285 F. 183, 191.

With regard to things which make not a very deep impression on the memory, it may be called "belief." "Knowledge" is nothing more than a man's firm belief. The difference is ordinarily merely in the degree; to be judged by the court, when addressed to the court; by the jury, when addressed to the jury. Hatch v. Carpenter, 9 Gray (Mass.) 274.

Knowledge is an assurance of a fact or proposition founded on perception by the senses, or intuition; while "belief" is an assurance gained by evidence, and from other persons. Brooks v. Sessoms, 47 Ga.App. 554, 171 S.E. 222, 224.

BELIEVERS. In international law. The status of de facto statehood attributed to a body of insurgents, by which their hostilities are legalized.

Before they can be recognized as belligerents they must have some sort of political organization and be carrying on what in international law is regarded as legal war. There must be an armed struggle between two political bodies, each of which exercises de facto authority over persons within a determined territory, and commands an army which is prepared to observe the ordinary laws of war. Moore, Int. Law Dig. I, 196; Dana's Wheaton, note 15, page 35; In re Jones, 71 W.Va. 567, 77 S.E. 1029, 45 L.R. A.,N.S., 1030, Ann.Cas.1914C, 31.

Quality of being belligerent; status of a belligerent; act or state of waging war; warfare. Webster's New Int. Diet.

BELLIGERENT. In international law. As an adjective, it means engaged in lawful war. As a noun, it designates either of two nations which are actually in a state of war with each other, as well as their allies actively co-operating, as distinguished from a nation which takes no part in the war and maintains a strict indifference as between the contending parties, called a "neutral." U. S. v. The Ambrose Light, D.C.N.Y., 25 F. 412; Johnson v. Jones, 44 Ill. 151, 92 Am.Dec. 159.

BELLIGERENTS. A body of insurgents who by reason of their temporary organized government are regarded as conducting lawful hostilities. Also, militia, corps of volunteers, and others, who although not part of the regular army of the state, are regarded as lawful combatants provided they observe the laws of war. See Ex parte Toscano, D.C.Cal., 208 F. 938. See, also, Belligerency.

BELLOM. Lat. In public law. War. An armed contest between nations; the state of those who forcibly contend with each other. Jus belli, the law of war.

BELONG. To appertain to; to be the property of. Property "belonging" to a person has two general meanings: (1) ownership; People ex rel. Gill v. Lake Forest University, 367 Ill. 103, 10 N.E.2d 667, 671; and (2) less than ownership, i.e., less than an unqualified and absolute title, such as the absolute right of user. City and County of San Francisco v. McGovern, 28 Cal.App. 491, 152 P. 980, 984.

A road may be said with perfect propriety to belong to a man who has the right to use it as of right although the soil does not belong to him; 31 L.J.Ex. 227.

When used in public and private statutes, and especially when used in reference to habitancy, the poor, etc., designates the place of a person's legal settlement, and not merely his place of residence. City of Bridgeport v. Town of Greenwich, 165 A. 797, 116 Conn. 537.

BELONGING. That which is connected with a principal or greater thing; an appendage, an appurtenance; also ownership. Church of the Holy Faith v. State Tax Commission, 39 N.M. 403, 48 P.2d 777, 779.

BELONGINGS. That which belongs to one; property; possessions; a term properly used to express ownership. In a will. Ford's Adm'r v. Wade's Adm'r, 242 Ky. 18, 45 S.W.2d 818, 820.

BELOW. In practice. Inferior; of inferior jurisdiction, or jurisdiction in the first instance. The court from which a cause is removed for review is called the "court below."

Preliminary; auxiliary or instrumental.

Bail to the sheriff is called "bail below," as being preliminary to and intended to secure the putting in of bail above, or special bail. See Bail.

BENCH. A seat of judgment or tribunal for the administration of justice; the seat occupied by judges in courts; also the court itself, or the aggregate of the judges composing a court, as in the phrase "before the full bench."

The judges taken collectively, as distinguished from counsellors and advocates, who are called the bar.

The term, indicating originally the seat of the judges, came to denote the body of judges taken collectively, and also the tribunal itself, as the King's Bench.

In English ecclesiastical law. The aggregate body of bishops.

BENCH LEGISLATION. See Judge-made law under the title Judge.

BENCH WARRANT. Process issued by the court itself, or "from the bench," for the attachment or arrest of a person; either in case of contempt, or where an indictment has been found, or to bring in a witness who does not obey the subpoena. So called to distinguish it from a warrant, issued by a justice of the peace, alderman, or commissioner. Oxford v. Berry, 204 Mich. 197, 170 N.W. 83, 87.

BENCHERS. In English law. Seniors in the Inns of Court, intrusted with their government, and usually, but not necessarily, king's counsel, elected by co-optation, and having the entire management of the property of their respective inns.

BENE. Lat. Well; in proper form; legally; sufficiently.

BENEDICTA EST EXPOSITIO QUANDO RES REDIMITUR A DESTRUCTIONE. 4 Coke, 26. Blessed is the exposition when anything is saved from destruction. It is a laudable interpretation which gives effect to the instrument, and does not allow its purpose to be frustrated.

BENEFICE. In ecclesiastical law. In its technical sense, this term includes ecclesiastical preferments to which rank or public office is attached, otherwise described as ecclesiastical dignities or offices, such as bishoprics, deaneries, and the like; but in popular acceptation, it is almost invariably appropriated to rectories, vicarages, perpetual curacies, district churches, and endowed chapels. 3 Steph.Comm. 77.

"Benefice" is a term derived from the feudal law, in which it signified a permanent stipendiary estate, or an estate held by feudal tenure. 4 Bl.Comm. 107.

BENEFICE DE DISCUSSION. Benefit of discussion. The right of a guarantor to require that the creditor should exhaust his recourse against the principal debtor before having recourse to the guarantor himself.

BENEFICE DE DIVISION. Benefit of division; right of contribution as between co-sureties.

BENEFICE D'INVENTAIRE. A term which corresponds to the beneficium inventarii of Roman law, and substantially to the English law doctrine that the executor properly accounting is only liable to the extent of the assets received by him.

BENEFICIAIRE. The person in whose favor a promissory note or bill of exchange is payable; or the place of residence. City of Bridgeport v. Town of Greenwich, 165 A. 797, 116 Conn. 537.

BENEFICIAL. Tending to the benefit of a person; yielding a profit, advantage, or benefit; enjoying or entitled to a benefit or profit. This term is applied both to estates (as a "beneficial interest") and to persons (as "the beneficial owner"). Kolb v. Landes, 277 M. 440, 115 N.E. 539, 541; In re Williams' Will, 50 Mont. 142, 145 P. 957, 959.

BENEFICIAL OR BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION. A voluntary association for mutual assistance in time of need and sickness, and for the care of families of deceased members. Lafferty v. Supreme Council Catholic Mut. Ben. Ass'n, 259 Pa. 452, 103 A. 280, 281; but also held to include incorporated organizations. State v. Texas...
BENEFICIAL ENJOYMENT. The enjoyment which a man has of an estate in his own right and for his own benefit, and not as trustee for another. 11 H.L.Cas. 271.

BENEFICIAL ESTATE. An estate in expectancy which a man has of an estate in his own right and is one where the right to the possession is postponed to a future period, and is "beneficial" where the devisee takes solely for his own use or benefit, and not as the mere holder of the title for the use of another. In re Seaman's Estate, 147 N.Y. 69, 41 N.E. 401.

BENEFICIAL INTEREST. Profit, benefit, or advantage resulting from a contract, or the ownership of an estate as distinct from the legal ownership or control. People v. Schaefer, 266 Ill. 334, 107 N.E. 617, 619; Christiansen v. Department of Social Security, 15 Wash.2d 465, 131 P.2d 189, 191, 192.

When considered as designation of character of an estate, is such an interest as a devisee, legatee, or donee takes solely for his own use or benefit, and not as holder of title for use and benefit of another. People v. Northern Trust Co., 330 Ill. 238, 161 N.E. 525, 528.

BENEFICIAL POWER. In New York law and practice. A power which has for its object the donee of the power, and which is to be executed solely for his benefit; as distinguished from a trust power, which has for its object a person other than the donee, and is to be executed solely for the benefit of such person. Jennings v. Conboy, 73 N.Y. 234; In re New York Life Ins. & Trust Co., Sur., 139 N.Y.S. 695, 705; People, by Van Schaick v. New York Title & Mortgage Co., 270 N.Y.S. 473, 150 Misc. 488.

BENEFICIAL USE. The right to use and enjoy property according to one's own liking or so as to derive a profit or benefit from it, including all that makes it desirable or habitable, as light, air, and access; as distinguished from a mere right of occupancy or possession. Reining v. Railroad Co., Super.Ct., 13 N.Y Supp. 240.

Such right to enjoyment of property where legal title is in one person while right to such use or interest is in another. Christiansen v. Department of Social Security, 15 Wash.2d 465, 131 P.2d 189, 191.

BENEFICIARY. One for whose benefit a trust is created; a cestui que trust. 195 N.E. 557, 564, 97 A.L.R. 1170. A person having the enjoyment of property of which a trustee, executor, etc., has the legal possession. The person to whom a policy of insurance is payable. Parrott Estate Co. v. McLaughlin. D.C.Cal., 12 F.Supp. 23, 25; Odom v. Prudential Ins. Co. of America, 173 Or. 435, 145 P.2d 480, 482. One receiving benefit or advantage, or one who is in receipt of benefits, profits, or advantage. Bauer v. Myers, C.C.A.Kan., 244 F. 902, 908. For "Favored Beneficiary," see that title.

BENEFICIARY ASSOCIATION. See Beneficial or Benevolent Association.

BENEFICIARY HEIR. In the law of Louisiana. One who has accepted the succession under the benefit of an inventory regularly made. Civ.Code La. art. 883. Also, one who may accept the succession with benefit of inventory. Succession of Galiano, La.App., 195 So. 377, 379.

BENEFICIO PRIMA, or PRIMO [ECCLESIASTICO HABENDO]. In English law. An ancient writ, which was addressed by the king to the lord chancellor, to bestow the benefice that should first fall in the royal gift, above or under a specified value, upon a person named therein. Reg.Orig. 307.

BENEFICIUM.

In Early Feudal Law

A benefice; a permanent stipendary estate; the same with what was afterwards called a "fief," "feud," or "fee." 3 Steph.Comm. 77, note i; Spelman. It originally meant a "benefaction" from the king, usually to a noble.

In the Civil Law

A benefit or favor; any particular privilege. Dig. 1, 4, 3; Cod. 7, 71; Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 196.

A general term applied to ecclesiastical livings. 4 Bl.Comm. 107; Cowell.

In General

—Beneficium cedendarum actionum. In Roman law. The privilege by which a surety could, before paying the creditor, compel him to make over to him the actions which belonged to the stipulator, so as to avail himself of them. Sandars, Just. Inst. (5th Ed.) 332, 351.

—Beneficium clericale. Benefit of clergy (q.v.).

Such right to enjoyment of property where legal title is in one person while right to such use or interest is in another. Christiansen v. Department of Social Security, 15 Wash.2d 465, 131 P.2d 189, 191.

A defendant's privilege of being condemned only in an amount which he could pay without being reduced to a state of destitution. Sand. Justinian iv. vi. 37.

—Beneficium divisionis. In civil and Scotch law. The privilege of one of several co-sureties (cautioners) to insist upon paying only his pro rata share of the debt. Bell; La.Civ.Code, arts. 3045-3051.
BENEFICIO

—Beneficium inventarii. See Benefit of Inventory.

—Beneficium ordinis. In civil and Scotch law. The privilege of order. The privilege of a surety to require that the creditor should first proceed against the principal and exhaust his remedy against him, before resorting to the surety. Bell.

—Beneficium separationis. In the civil law. The right to have the goods of an heir separated from those of the testator in favor of creditors.

BENEFICIO INVITO NON DATUR. A privilege or benefit is not granted against one's will. Adams Gloss.

BENEFICIO NON DATUM NISI PROPER
FICUM. Hob. 148. A remuneration is not given, unless on account of a duty performed.

BENEFICIO NON DATUR NISI OFFICI CAU-
SA. A benefice is not granted except on account or in consideration of duty. Adams Gloss.

BENEFICIO PRINCIPIS DEBET ESSE MAN-
SURUM. The benefaction of a prince ought to be lasting. Adams Gloss.

In the Workmen’s Compensation Act, the term "benefit" is used of an award to be granted when an injury results in death, and is distinguished from 'compensation,' which is to be granted when an injury results in incapacity or disability. Di Cicco v. Industrial Commission of Ohio, 11 Ohio App. 271, 273.

In Contracts

When it is said that a valuable consideration for a promise may consist of a benefit to the promisor, "benefit" means that the promisor has, in return for his promise, acquired some legal right to which he would not otherwise have been entitled. Irving v. Irwin, 24 P.2d 215, 216, 133 Cal. App. 374. Wlooms v. Sizemore, 267 Ky. 384, 102 S.W.2d 323, 324.

"Benefit" is not limited to pecuniary gains, nor to any particular kind of advantage; it refers to what is advantageous, whatever promotes prosperity or happiness, what enhances the value of the property or rights of citizens as contradistinguished from what is injurious. Hooper v. Merchants' Bank & Trust Co., 130 S.E. 49, 52, 190 N. C. 423.

In Eminent Domain

It is a rule that, in assessing damages for private property taken or injured for public use, "special benefits" may be set off against the amount of damage found, but not "general benefits." Within the meaning of this rule, general benefits are such as accrue directly to the community at large, to the vicinage, or to all property similarly situated with reference to the work or improvement in question; while special benefits are such as accrue directly and solely to the owner of the land in question and not to others. Brand v. Union Elevated R. Co., 101 N.E. 247, 249, 258 Ill. 133, Ann.Cas.1914B, 473, L.R.A.1918A, 878.

In Taxation

With reference to an assessment for a drainage ditch, a benefit is anything that will make land more valuable for tillage or more desirable for a residence or more valuable in the general market. Watson v. Armstrong, 180 Ind. 49, 102 N.E. 273.

BENEFIT ASSOCIATION. See Benefit Societies.

BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY. The original name for what is now more commonly called a "building society" (q. v.).

BENEFIT CERTIFICATE. A written obligation to pay the person therein named the amount specified upon the conditions therein stipulated. Green v. Grand United Order of Odd Fellows, Tex.Civ. App., 163 S.W. 1068, 1070.

Also a term usually applied to policies issued by fraternal and beneficiary societies. Chandler v. New York Life Ins. Co., 194 Ark. 6, 104 S.W.2d 1060, 1061.

BENEFIT OF BARGAIN RULE. Under such rule a defrauded purchaser may recover the difference between the real and the represented value of the property purchased regardless of the fact that the actual loss suffered might have been less. Stewart v. Potter, 44 N.M. 460, 104 P.2d 736, 739.

BENEFIT OF CESSION. In the civil law. The release of a debtor from future imprisonment for his debts, which the law operates in his favor upon the surrender of his property for the benefit of his creditors. Poth.Proc.Civil, pt. 5, c. 2, § 1.

BENEFIT OF CLERGY. In its original sense, the phrase denoted the exemption which was accorded to clergymen from the jurisdiction of the secular courts, or from arrest or attachment on criminal process issuing from those courts in certain particular cases. Afterwards, it meant a privilege of exemption from capital punishment was anciently allowed to clergymen only, but afterwards to all who were connected with the church, even to its most subordinate officers, and at a still later time to all persons who could read. This privilege of exemption from capital punishment was anciently allowed to clergymen only, but afterwards to all who were connected with the church, even to its most subordinate officers, and at a still later time to all persons who could read, (then called "clerks," whether ecclesiastics or laymen. It does not appear to have been extended to cases of high treason, nor did it apply to mere misdemeanors. The privilege was claimed after the person’s conviction, by a species of motion in arrest of judgment, technically called “praying his clergy.” As a means of testing his clerical character, he was given a psalm to read, (usually, or always, the fifty-first,) and, upon his reading it correctly, he was turned over to the ecclesiastical courts, to be tried by the bishop or a jury of twelve clerks. These heard him on oath, with his witnesses and compurgators, who attested their belief in his innocence. This privilege operated greatly to mitigate the extreme rigor of the criminal laws, but was found to involve such gross abuses that parliament began to enact that certain crimes should be felonies "without benefit of clergy," and finally, by St. 7 Geo. IV. c. 28, § 6, it was altogether abolished. The act of congress of April 30, 1790, c. 9, § 31, 1 Stat. 119, provided that there should be no benefit of clergy for any capital crime against the United States, and, if this privilege formed a part of the common law of the several states before the Revolution, it no longer exists.

Benefit of Counsel. The guaranty of "benefit of counsel" to accused, given in the Georgia Bill of Rights of Const. art. 1, § 1, par. 5, means more than the mere appointment by the court of counsel to represent the accused and implies also that such counsel be given a reasonable time for preparation to properly represent the accused at the trial. Reliford v. State, 140 Ga. 777, 79 S.E. 1128, 1129. Sheppard v. State, 165 Ga. 460, 141 S.E. 196, 198.

Benefit of Discussion. In the civil law. The right which a surety has to cause the property of the principal debtor to be applied in satisfaction of the obligation in the first instance. Civ.Code La. arts. 3045-3051. In Scotch law. That whereby the antecedent heir, such as the heir of line in a pursuit against the heir of tailzie, etc., must be first pursued to fulfill the defunct’s deeds and pay his debts. This benefit is likewise competent in many cases to cautioners.

Benefit of Division. Same as beneficium divisionis (q. v.).

Benefit of Inventory. In the civil law. The privilege which the heir obtains of being liable for the charges and debts of the succession, only to the value of the effects of the succession, by causing an inventory of these effects within the time and manner prescribed by law. Civil Code La. art. 1032.

Benefit of Order. See Beneficium Ordinis.

Benefit Societies. Under this and several similar names, in various states, corporations exist to receive periodical payments from members, and hold them as a fund to be loaned or given to members needing pecuniary relief. Such are beneficial societies of Maryland, fund associations of Missouri, loan and fund associations of Massachusetts, mechanics’ associations of Michigan, protection societies of New Jersey. Friendly societies in Great Britain are a still more extensive and important species belonging to this class. Comm. v. Equitable Ben. Ass’n, 137 Pa. 412, 18 A. 1112.

Benerth. A feudal service rendered by the tenant to his lord with plow and cart. Cowell.

Benevolence. The doing of a kind or helpful action towards another, under no obligation except an ethical one.

The love of humanity; the desire to promote its prosperity or happiness. The term includes acts of well-wishing towards others, for the promotion of general happiness, and plans actuated by love of others and a desire for their well-being. In re Peabody’s Estate, 208 N.Y.S. 664, 671, 124 Misc. 338. Also beneficent; doing well.

It is a broader term than “charity” which it includes, and with which it is frequently used synonymously. "Charity" in its legal sense implies giving without consideration or expectation of return, and "benevolence" applies to any act which is prompted by love for its object the well-being of others. State v. Texas Mut. Life Ins. Co. of Texas, Tex.Civ.App., 51 S.W.2d 405, 410.

In public law. Nominally a voluntary gratuity given by subjects to their king, but in reality a tax or forced loan. Cowell; 1 Bla.Comm. 140.

Benevolent. Philanthropic; humane; having a desire or purpose to do good to men; intended for the conferring of benefits, rather than for gain or profit; loving others and actively desirous of their well being. In re Altman’s Estate, 149 N.Y.S. 601, 605, 87 Misc. 255.

This word is certainly more indefinite, and of far wider range, than “charitable” or “religious;” it would include all gifts prompted by good-will or kind feeling towards the recipient, whether an object of charity or not. The natural and usual meaning of the word would so extend it. It has no legal meaning separate from its usual meaning. "Charitable" has acquired a settled limited meaning in law, which confines it within known limits. But in all the decisions in England on the subject it has been held that a devise or bequest for benevolent objects, or in trust to give to such objects, is too indefinite, and therefore void. Suter v. Hilliard, 132 Mass. 413, 42 Am.Rep. 444.

This word, as applied to objects or purposes, may refer to those which are in their nature charitable, and may also have a broader meaning and include objects and purposes not charitable in the legal sense of that word. Acts of kindness, friendship, forethought, or good-will; possibly be described as benevolent. It has therefore been held that gifts to trustees to be applied for “benevolent purposes” at their discretion, or to such benevolent purposes as they could agree upon, do not create a public charity. But where the word is used in connection with other words explanatory of its meaning, and indicating the intent of the donor to limit the purposes strictly charitable, it has been held to be synonymous with, or equivalent to, “charitable.” Suter v. Hilliard, 132 Mass. 412, 42 Am.Rep. 444;

Benevolent Associations. Those having a philanthropic or charitable purpose, as distinguished from such as are conducted for profit; specifically, "benefit associations" or "beneficial associations." Methodist Episcopal Church Bara-cac Club v. City of Madison, 167 Wis. 207, 167 N. W. 258, L.R.A.1918D, 1124.

Benevolent Corporation. One that ministers to all; the purpose may be anything that promotes the mental, physical, or spiritual welfare of man. Society of Helpers of Holy Souls v. Law, 267 Mo. 667, 186 S.W. 718, 725; with respect to exemption from succession tax. Corbin v. American Industrial Bank & Trust Co., 95 Conn. 50, 110 A. 459, 461. The term may include a corporation to which a bequest is made to be used in the improvement of the social, physical, and economic condition of the employees of a business corporation. In re Altman’s Estate, 149 N.Y.S. 601, 605, 87 Misc. 255.
BENEVOLENT

BENEVOLENT SOCIETY. Benevolent association. Spring Park Ass'n v. Rosedale Park Amusement Co., 216 Ala. 549, 114 So. 43, 44. In English law, "benevolent societies" are societies established and registered under the Friendly Societies Act, 1875, for any charitable or benevolent purposes.

BENEVOLENTIA REGIS HABENDA. The form in ancient fines and submissions to purchase the king's pardon and favor in order to be restored to place, title or estate. Paroch. Antiq. c. 25.

BENHURST. In Berkshire, a remedy for the inhabitants thereof to levy money recovered against them on the statute of hue and cry. 39 Eliz. c. 25.

BENIGNA FACIENDE SUNT INTERPRETATIONES CHARTARUM, UT RES MAGIS VALERE QUAM PEREAT; ET QUE LIBET CONCESSIO FORTISSIME CONTRA DONATOREM INTERPRETANDA EST. Liberal interpretations are to be made of deeds, so that the purpose may rather stand than fall; and every grant is to be taken most strongly against the grantor. Hayes v. Kershow, 1 Sandf. Ch. (N.Y.) 258, 268.

BENIGNA FACIENDE SUNT INTERPRETATIONES, PROPTER SIMPLICITATEM LAICORUM, UT RES MAGIS VALERE QUAM PEREAT; ET VERBA INTENTIONIS, NON E CONTRA, DEBENT INSERVIRE. Constructions [of written instruments] are to be made liberally, on account of the simplicity of the laity, [or common people,] in order that the thing [or subject-matter] may rather have effect than perish, [or become void]; and words must be subject to the intention, not the intention to the words. 2 Bla. Com. 379; 1 Bulstr. 175; Krider v. Lafferty, 1 Whart. (Pa.) an.

BENIGNIOR SENTENTIA IN VERBIS GENERALIBUS SEU DUBIBUS, EST PREFERENDA. The more favorable construction is to be placed on general or doubtful expressions. 2 Kent 557.

BENIGNIUS LEGES INTERPRETANDAE SUNT QUO VOLUNTAS EARUM CONSERVETUR. Laws are to be more liberally interpreted, in order that their intent may be preserved. Dig. 1, 3, 18.

BEQUEATH. To give personal property by will to another. Fielding v. Alkire, 124 Kan. 592, 261 P. 597, 599. It therefore is distinguishable from "devise," which is properly used of realty. Stubbs v. Abel, 114 Or. 610, 233 P. 852, 857; Fleck v. Harmstad, 155 A. 875, 876, 304 Pa. 302, 77 A.L.R. 874.

But if the context clearly shows the intention of the testator to use the word "bequeath" as synonymous with "devise," it may be held to pass real property. Stubbs v. Abel, 114 Or. 610, 233 P. 852, 859.

BEQUEST. A gift by will of personal property; a legacy. In re Fratt's Estate, 60 Mont. 526, 199 P. 711, 714; In re Wood's Estate, 6 N.W. 2d 846, 848, 232 Iowa 1004; Disposition of realty in will is termed "devise." Grand Island Trust Co. v. Snell, 249 N.W. 293, 125 Neb. 148.

The term does not mean a "gift" in the narrow sense of a voluntary act of charity or good will, but ordinarily means a testamentary disposition of the testator's personalty. First Presbyterian Church of Mt. Vernon v. Dennis, 178 Iowa, 1352, 161 N.W. 183, 185, L.R.A.1917C, 1005. It is not necessarily limited to a gratuity, and may include a recompense. U. S. v. Merriam, 44 S.Ct. 69, 70, 263 U.S. 179, 68 L. Ed. 240, 29 A.L.R. 1547.

"Bequest" and "devise" are often used synonymously. In re McGovern's Estate, 77 Mont. 182, 250 F. 812, 817.

Conditional Bequest
One the taking effect or continuing of which depends upon the happening or non-occurrence of a particular event. Merrill v. College, 74 Wis. 415, 43 N.W. 104.

Executory Bequest
The bequest of a future, deferred, or contingent interest in personality.

Residuary Bequest
A gift of all the remainder of the testator's personal estate, after payment of debts and legacies, etc.

Specific Bequest
One whereby the testator gives to the legatee all his property of a certain class or kind; as all his pure personalty.

BERAT. Also barat. A warrant or patent of dignity or privilege given by an Oriental monarch. Cent. Dict.

BERBIAGE. A rent paid for the pasturing of sheep. Wharton.

BERCARIA. In old English law, a sheepfold; also a place where the bark of trees was laid to tan.

BERCARIUS, or BERCATOR. A shepherd.

BEREWICHA, or BEREWICA. A plain; a large open field. Wharton.

BERG. A rock (Cent. Dict.); a hill (Wharton); in South Africa, a mountain (Webster).

BERGHMAYSTER. An officer having charge of the cattle of a mine. A bailiff or chief officer among the Derbyshire miners, who, in addition to his other duties, executes the office of coroner among them. Blount; Cowell.

BERGHMOTH, or BERGHMOTE. The ancient name of the court now called "barmote," (q. v.).

BERIA, BERIE, or BERRY. A plain; a large open field. Wharton. See Berra.

BERM BANK. A ledge at the bottom of a cutting or bank, as of a creek, to catch earth that may roll down the slope, or to strengthen the bank. Miller v. State, 149 N.Y.S. 788, 789, 164 App.Div. 322.
BERNET. In Saxon law. Burning; the crime of house burning, now called "arson." Cowell; Blount.

BERRA. In old law. A plain; open heath. Cowell.

BERRY, or BURY. A villa or seat of habitation of a nobleman; a dwelling or mansion house; a sanctuary.

BERTILLON SYSTEM. A method of anthropometry (q. v.), used chiefly for the identification of criminals and other persons, consisting of the taking and recording of a system of numerous, minute, and uniform measurements of various parts of the human body, absolutely and in relation to each other, the facial, cranial, and other angles, and of any eccentricities or abnormalities noticed in the individual.

BERTON. A large farm; the barn-yard of a large farm.

BES. Lat. In the Roman law. A division of the as, or pound, consisting of eight unciae, or duodecimal parts, and amounting to two-thirds of the as. 2 Bl.Comm. 462 note m.

Two-thirds of an inheritance. Inst. 2, 14, 5.

Eight per cent. interest. 2 Bl.Comm. ubi supra.

BESAILE, BESAYLE. The great-grandfather, pro avus. 1 Bl.Comm. 186.

BESAYEL, Besaiel, Besayle. In old English law. A writ which lay where a great-grandfather died seised of lands and tenements in fee-simple, and on the day of his death a stranger abated, or entered and kept out the heir. Reg.Orig. 226; Fitzh. Nat.Brev. 221 D; 3 Bl.Comm. 186.

BESIDES. In addition to; moreover; also; likewise. State v. State Road Commission, 100 W.Va. 531, 131 S.E. 7, 10.

In provisions in a will for children "besides" an eldest son, no children take unless there be a son. 4 Dr. & War. 325.

BESEECH. To entreat; to emplore. Tiencken v. Zerbst, 196 S.C. 438, 13 S.E.2d 483, 484.

BESOIN. Fr. Need. See Au Besoin.

BEST. Of the highest quality; of the greatest usefulness for the purpose intended. For example:

The "best bid" of interest by a prospective depositary of school funds would not necessarily be the highest bid, but, looking to the solvency of the bidder, the bond tendered, and all the circumstances surrounding the transaction, the safety and preservation of the school fund, the "best bid" might be the lowest bid. Donna Independent School Dist. v. First State Bank of Donna, Tex.Civ.App., 227 S.W. 974, 975.

Where one covenants to use his "best endeavors," there is no breach if he is prevented by causes wholly beyond his control and without any default on his part. 7 H. & N. 92.

The "best interests" of a child whose custody is in question has reference more particularly to the moral welfare than to mere comforts, benefits, or advantages that wealth can give. Jones v. Moore, 61 Utah, 383, 213 P. 191, 194. The "best interests" of an estate mean the greatest or most advantage or usefulness to such estate. Stockyards Nat. Bank of South Omaha v. Bragg, 67 Utah, 60, 245 P. 966, 971.

BEST EVIDENCE. Primary evidence, as distinguished from secondary; original, as distinguished from substitutionary; the best and highest evidence of which the nature of the case is susceptible, not the highest or strongest evidence which the nature of the thing to be proved admits of. See, also, Primary Evidence.

A written instrument is itself always regarded as the primary or best possible evidence of its existence and contents; a copy, or the recollection of a witness, would be secondary evidence. Manhattan Malting Co. v. Swete-land, 14 Mont. 269, 36 P. 84.

"Best evidence" or "primary evidence" includes the best evidence which is available to a party and procurable under the existing situation, and all evidence falling short of such standard, and which in its nature suggests there is better evidence of the same fact, is "secondary evidence." Best v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc., Mo.App., 299 S.W. 118, 120.

The best evidence of a fact is the testimony of a person who knows. State v. Normandale, 154 La. 523, 97 So. 798, 799 (mother could testify to the date of her daughter's birth, as against an objection that the baptismal certificate or the registry was the best evidence).

"Best evidence rule." Is that highest available degree of proof must be produced. Cheadle v. Bardwell, 95 Mont. 299, 26 P.2d 336. It means that no evidence which is merely substitutionary in its nature shall be received so long as original evidence can be had; Pettit v. Campbell, Tex.Civ. App., 149 S.W.2d 633, 635, 636; that contents of document must be proved by producing document itself. Nunan v. Timberlake, 85 F.2d 407, 410, 66 App.D.C. 150.

BESTIR, A beast, as a being without reason;—opposed to man; while animal, a living being, includes man also. Adams Gloss., citing Just. Inst., 2, 1, 12.

BESTIALITY. A sexual connection between a human being and a brute of the opposite sex. State v. Poole, 122 P.2d 415, 416, 59 Ariz. 44.

At common law the term "crime against nature" embraced both "sodomy" and "bestiality." State v. Poole, 122 P.2d 415, 416, 59 Ariz. 44. See Sodomy.

BESTOW. To give, grant, confer, or impart; not necessarily limited in meaning to "devise." Tillett v. Nixon, 180 N.C. 195, 104 S.E. 352, 355.

BET. An agreement between two or more persons that a sum of money or other valuable thing, to which all jointly contribute, shall become the sole property of one or some of them on the happening in the future of an event at present uncertain, or according as a question disputed between them is settled in one way or the other. Coulter v. State, 122 Tex.Cr.R. 9, 53 S.W.2d 477, 480.

A contract by which two or more parties agree that a sum of money, or other thing, shall be paid or delivered to one of them on the happening or not happening of an uncertain event. Grooms v. Knox, 25 Ala.App. 185, 142 So. 582.

In a "bet" or "wager" money belongs to the persons posting it, each of whom has a chance to win it, but, in the case of a "purse" or "premium," money belongs to the person offering it, who has no chance to win it, but is certain to lose it. Toomey v. Penwell, 76 Mont. 166, 245 P. 943, 945, 45 A.L.R. 993.

Bet and wager are synonymous terms. Woodcock v. McQueen, 11 Ind. 16; Shumate v. Com., 15 Grat. (Va.) 660.

BETHELHEM. See Bedlam.

BETTING BOOK. A book kept for registering bets on the result of a race as operated on race track. In a broader sense, the "betting book" is that book which enables the professional bettor to carry on his business, and to promote a race, and it includes the book, the making book and the bookmaker. State v. Austin, 142 La. 384, 76 So. 809, 810; People v. Semmler, 345 Ill. 272, 178 N.E. 100, 101.

BETRAYAL. A "betrayal," as of a professional secret on the part of a physician, signifies a wrongful disclosure in violation of the trust imposed by the patient. Simonsen v. Swenson, 104 Neb. 224, 177 N.W. 831, 832, 9 A.L.R. 1250.

BETROTHED. One who has exchanged promises to marry. The term may be synonymous with "intended wife." Mace v. Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W. of Massachusetts, 234 Mass. 299, 125 N.E. 569.

BETROTHMENT, BETROTHAL. Mutual promise of marriage; the plighting of troth; a mutual promise or contract between a man and woman intended to lose it. Toomey v. Penwell, 76 Mont. 166, 245 P. 943, 945, 45 A.L.R. 993.

BETWEEN. A space which separates. Hobson v. Postal Telegraph-Cable Co., 161 Tenn. 419, 32 S. W.2d 1046. Strictly applicable • only with reference to two things, but this may be understood as including cases in which a number of things are discriminated collectively as two wholes, or as taken in pairs, or where one thing is set off against a number of others. In re McShane's Will, 286 N.Y.S. 680, 682, 158 Misc. 777. Sometimes used synonymously with "among". In re Moore's Estate, 157 Pa.Super. 296, 43 A.2d 359.

As a measure or indication of distance, this word has the effect of excluding the two termini. Morris & E. R. Co. v. Central R. Co., 31 N.J.Law, 212.

If an act is to be done "between" two certain days, it must be performed before the commencement of the latter day. In computing the time in such a case, both the days named are to be excluded. Hodges v. Filstrup, 94 Fla. 943, 114 So. 521, 522. But a clause in a contract of sale to the effect that the purchaser could require the vendor to repurchase between the fifth and sixth year from a certain date means during the sixth year. Van Demark v. California Home Extension Ass'n, 43 Cal.App. 685, 185 P. 866, 868.

In case of a devise to A. and B. "between them," these words create a tenancy in common. Lashbrook v. Cock, 2 Mer. 70.

Between equal equities the law must prevail. This is hardly of general application.

This term is properly used to distinguish a sale of liquors to be drunk in obedience to a physician's advice, Falstaff Corporation v. Allen, D.C.Mo., 38 F.Supp. 991, 992.

BEWARYED. O. Eng. Expended. Before the Britons and Saxons had introduced the general use of money, they traded chiefly by exchange of wares. Wharton.

BEYOND A REASONABLE DOUBT. In evidence means fully satisfied, entirely convinced, satisfied to a moral certainty; State v. Harris, 28 S.E.2d 232, 237, 223 N.C. 697; and phrase is the equivalent of the words clear, precise and indubitable. Ferguson Packing Co. v. Mihalic, 99 Pa. Super. 158, 162.

An accused's guilt must be established "beyond a reasonable doubt," which means that facts proven must, by virtue of their probative force, establish guilt. People ex rel. Schubert v. Finder, 9 N.Y.S.2d 311, 312, 170 Misc. 345.

BEYOND SEA. Beyond the limits of the kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland; outside the United States; out of the state.

Beyond sea, beyond the four seas, beyond the seas, and out of the realm, are synonymous. Prior to the union of the two crowns of England and Scotland, on the accession of James I., the phrases "beyond the four seas," "beyond the seas," and "out of the realm," signified out of the

In Pennsylvania, it has been construed to mean "without the limits of the United States," which approaches the literal signification. Ward v. Hallam, 2 DaIl. 217, 1 L. 1 d. 355. The same construction has been given to it in Missouri. Keeton’s Heirs v. Keeton’s Adm’r, 20 Mo. 530. See Ang.Lim. §§ 200, 201.

As used in law regarding disqualification of judge, refers to mental attitude or disposition of the judge toward a party to the litigation, and not to any views that he may entertain regarding the subject matter involved. State ex rel. Mitchell v. Sage Stores Co., 157 Kan. 622, 143 P.2d 652, 655.

Actual bias consists in the existence of a state of mind on the part of the juror which satisfies the court, in the exercise of a sound discretion, that the juror cannot try the issues impartially and without prejudice to the substantial rights of the party challenging. People v. Wells, 100 Cal. 227, 34 P. 718.

BIBLE. See Family Bible.

BICAMERAL SYSTEM. A term applied by Jeremy Bentham to the division of a legislative body into two chambers, as in the United States government.

BID. An offer by an intending purchaser to pay a designated price for property which is about to be sold at auction. U. S. v. Vestal, D.C.N.C., 12 F. 59. Payne v. Cave, 3 Term, 149; Eppes v. Railroad Co., 35 Ala. 56. See Chilling a sale.

An offer to perform a contract for work and labor or supplying materials at a specified price. Similarly, an offer to do any of various other acts, as the payment by a bank of a particular rate of interest for the privilege of becoming a depositary of county funds. Casey v. Independence County, 109 Ark. 11, 159 S.W. 24, 25, Ann. Cas. 1915C, 1008. A "bid" for bonds is no more nor less than a proposition. Joint School Dist. No. 132 in Major County and Alfalfa County v. Dabney, 127 Okl. 234, 260 P. 486, 491.

—Bid in. Property sold at auction is said to be "bid in" by the owner or an incumbancer or some one else who is interested in it, when he attends the sale and makes the successful bid.

—Bid off. One is said to "bid off" a thing when he bids for it at an auction sale, and it is knocked down to him in immediate succession to the bid and as a consequence of it. Eppes v. Railroad Co., 35 Ala. 56; Doudna, v. Harlan, 45 Kan. 484, 25 Pac. 883.

—Bidder. One who makes a bid. One who offers to pay a specified price for an article offered for sale at a public auction. Webster v. French, 11 Ill. 254. As to "Responsible bidder" see that title.

—Biddings. Offers of a designated price for goods or other property put up for sale at auction.

—By-bidding. In the law relating to sales by auction, this term is equivalent to "puffing." The practice consists in making fictitious bids for the property, under a secret arrangement with the owner or auctioneer, for the purpose of misleading and stimulating other persons who are bidding in good faith.

—Competitive bidding. "Competitive bidding" means that the council must by due advertisement give opportunity for everyone to bid, but does not mean that more than one bid must be submitted. Blanton v. Town of Wallins, 218 Ky. 295, 291 S.W. 372, 375. The term means bidding upon the same undertaking, upon the same material items in the subject-matter, upon the same thing. Leininger v. Ward, 126 Okl. 114, 258 P. 863, 864.

—Upset bid. A bid made after a judicial sale, but before the successful bid at the sale has been confirmed, larger or better than such successful bid, and made for the purpose of upsetting the sale and securing to the "upset bidder" the privilege of taking the property at his bid or competing at a new sale. Yost v. Porter, 80 Va. 858.

BIDAL, or BIDALL. An invitation of friends to drink ale at the house of some poor man, who hopes thereby to be relieved by charitable contribution. It is something like "house-warming," i. e., a visit of friends to a person beginning to set up housekeeping. Wharton. See Bed-Ale.

"There was an antient Custom called a Bid-Ale * * * when any honest Man decayed in his Estate, was set up again by the liberal Benevo-lence and Contributions of Friends at a Feast, to which those Friends were bid or invited. It was most used in the West of England, and in some Counties called a Help Ale." Brand’s Pop. Antiq. (1777), p. 339, note.

BIELBRIEF. Germ. In European maritime law. A document furnished by the builder of a vessel, containing a register of her admeasurement, particularizing the length, breadth, and dimensions of every part of the ship.

It sometimes also contains the terms of agreement between the party for whose account the ship is built, and the ship-builder. It has been termed in English the "grand bill of sale;" in French, "contrat de construction ou de la vente d’un vaisseau," and corresponds in a great degree with the English, French, and American "register," (q. v.) being an equally essential document to the lawful ownership of vessels. Jac. Sea Laws, 12, 13, and note. In the Danish law, it is used to denote the contract of bottomry.

BIENES. Sp. In Spanish law. Goods; property of every description, including real as well as personal property; all things (not being persons) which may serve for the uses of man. Larkin v. U. S., 14 Fed.Cas. 1154.

—Bienes comunes. Common property; those things which, not being the private property of any person, are open to the use of all, such as the air, rain, water, the sea and its beaches. Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 255, 315, 10 Pac. 707.
VERSIS TEMPORIBUS ET
wives.
bigamy. The criminal offense of willfully and successively has married two or three times and successively has married two wives. 4 Inst. 88.

BIENNIALLY. This term, in a statute, signifies, not duration of time, but a period for the happening of an event; once in every two years. People v. Tremain, 9 Hun (N.Y.) 576; People v. Kilbourn, 68 N.Y. 479.

BIENS. In English law. Property of every description, except estates of freehold and inheritance. Sugd. Vend. 495; Co.Litt. 119b.

In French law. This term includes all kinds of property, real and personal. Biens are divided into biens meubles, movable property; and biens immubles, immovable property. The distinction between movable and immovable property is recognized by the continental jurists, and gives rise, in the civil as well as in the common law, to many important distinctions as to rights and remedies. Story, Confl. Laws, § 13, note 1. Castle v. Castle, C.C.A.Hawaii, 267 F. 521, 523.

BIGA, or BIGATA. A cart or chariot drawn with two horses, coupled side to side; but it is said to be properly a cart with two wheels, sometimes drawn by one horse; and in the ancient records it is used for any cart, wain, or wagon. Jacob.

BIGAMUS. In the civil law. A man who was twice married; one who at different times and successively has married two wives. 4 Inst. 88.
One who has two wives living. One who marries a widow.

Used in ecclesiastical matters as a reason for denying benefit of the clergy. Termes de la Ley.

BIGAMUS SEU TRIGAMUS, ETC., EST QUI DI-VERISIS TEMPORIBUS ET SUCCESSIVI DUAS
SEU TRES UXORES HABUIT. 4 Inst. 88. A big-amus or trigamus, etc., is one who at different times and successively has married two or three wives.

BIGAMY. The criminal offense of willfully and knowingly contracting a second marriage (or go-thing through the form of a second marriage) while the first marriage, to the knowledge of the offender, is still subsisting and undisolved. Scoggins v. State, 32 Ark. 213; People v. Manfredonio, 191 N.Y.S. 748, 117 Misc. 632, 39 N.Y.Cr.R. 41.

The state of a man who has two wives, or of a woman who has two husbands, living at the same time. State v. Lindsey, 26 N.M. 526, 194 P. 877.
Farewell v. Commonwealth, 189 S.E. 321, 323, 167
Va. 475.

The offense of having a plurality of wives at the same time is commonly denominated "polygamy;" but the name "bigamy" has been more frequently given to it in legal proceedings. 1 Russ.Crimes, 185.

The use of the word "bigamy" to describe this offense is well established by long usage, although often criticized as a corruption of the true meaning of the word. Polygamy is suggested as the correct term, instead of bigamy, to de designate the offense of having a plurality of wives or husbands at the same time, and has been adopted for that purpose in the Massachusetts statutes. But as the substance of the offense is marrying a second time, while having a lawful husband or wife living, without regard to the number of marriages that may have taken place, biga-my seems not an inapposite term. The objection to its use urged by Blackstone (4 Bl.Com. 163) seems to be founded not so much upon considerations of the etymology of the word as upon the propriety of distinguishing the ecclesiastical offense termed 'bigamy' in the canon law, and which is defined below, from the offense known as 'bigamy' in the modern criminal law. The same distinction is carefully made by Lord Coke, (4 Inst. 88.) But, the ecclesiastical offense being now obsolete, this reason for substituting polygamy to denote the crime here defined ceases to have weight. Abbott.

In the canon law, the term denoted the offense committed by an ecclesiastic who married two wives successively. It might be committed either by marrying a second wife after the death of a first or by marrying a widow.

BIGOT. An obstinate person, or one that is wedded to an opinion, in matters of religion, etc.

BILAGINES. By-laws of towns; municipal laws.

BILAN. A term used in Louisianna, derived from the French. A book in which bankers, merchants, and traders write a statement of all they owe and all that is due them; a balance-sheet. See Dauphin v. Soulie, 3 Mart. (N.S.) 446.

BILANCIIS DEFERENDIS. In English law. An obsolete writ addressed to a corporation for the buying of weights to such a haven, there to weigh the wool annually licensed for transportation. Reg.Orig. 270.

BILATERAL CONTRACT. A term, used originally in the civil law, but now generally adopted, denoting a contract in which both the contracting parties are bound to fulfill obligations reciprocally towards each other; as a contract of sale, where one becomes bound to deliver the thing sold, and the other to pay the price of it. Montpelier Semiexecutory on both sides, National Surety Co. v.
City of Atlanta, 102 S.E. 175, 176, 24 Ga.App. 732, and one which includes both rights and duties on each side, Crane Ice Cream Co. v. Terminal Freezing & Heating Co., 147 Md. 588, 128 A. 280, 282, 39 A.L.R. 1184. One containing mutual promises between parties; each party being both promisor and promisee. Aden v. Dalton, 341 Mo. 454, 107 S.W.2d 1070, 1073.

"Every convention properly so called consists of a promise or mutual promises proffered and accepted. Where one only of the agreeing parties gives a promise, the convention is said to be 'unilateral.' Wherever mutual promises are proffered and accepted, there is, in strictness, two or more conventions. But where the performance of either of the promises is made to depend on the performance of the other, the several conventions are commonly deemed BILGED. In admiralty law and marine insurance. That state or condition of a vessel in which water is freely admitted through holes and breaches made in the planks of the bottom, occasioned by injuries, whether the ship's timbers are broken or not. Peele v. Insurance Co., 3 Mason, 27, 39, 19 Fed.Cas. 103.

BILINGUIS. Of a double language or tongue; that can speak two languages. A term applied in English law, an alien party to a suit is, in certain cases, entitled to; more commonly called a "jury de medietate linguae." 3 Bl.Comm. 360; 4 Steph. Comm. 422.

BILINE. A word used by Britton in the sense of "collateral." En line biline, in the collateral line. Britt, c. 119.

BILL. A formal declaration, complaint, or statement of particular things in writing.

As a legal term, this word has many meanings and applications, the more important of which are enumerated below.

1. A formal written statement of complaint to a court of justice

In the ancient practice of the court of king's bench, the usual and orderly method of beginning an action was by a bill, or original bill, or plaint. This was a written statement of the plaintiff's cause of action, like a declaration or complaint, and always alleged a trespass as the ground of it, in order to give the court jurisdiction. 3 Bl.Comm. 43.

In Scotch law, every summary application in writing, by way of petition to the Court of Session, is called a "bill." Cent. Dict.

—Bill chamber. In Scotch law. A department of the court of session in which petitions for suspension, interdict, etc., are entertained. It is equivalent to sittings in chambers in the English and American practice. Paters. Comp.

—Bill of proof. In English practice. The name given, in the mayor's court of London, to a species of intervention by a third person laying claim to the subject-matter in dispute between the parties to a suit.

2. A species of writ

A formal written declaration by a court to its officers, in the nature of process.

—Bill of Middlesex. An old form of process similar to a capias, issued out of the court of king's bench in personal actions, directed to the sheriff of the county of Middlesex, (hence 'the name,) and commanding him to take the defendant and have him before the king at Westminster on a day named, to answer the plaintiff's complaint.

3. A formal written petition

To a superior court for action to be taken in a cause already determined, or a record or certified account of the proceedings in such action or some portion thereof, accompanying such a petition.

—Bill of advocation. In Scotch practice. A bill by which the judgment of an inferior court is appealed from, or brought under review of a superior. Bell.

—Bill of certiorari. A bill: the object of which is to remove a suit in equity from some inferior court to the court of chancery, or some other superior court of equity, on account of some alleged incompetency of the inferior court, or some injustice in its proceedings. Story, Eq.P1. (5th Ed.) § 298.

—Bill of evidence. Stenographer's transcript of testimony heard at trial and may be considered on appeal as bill of exceptions. Spencer v. Commonwealth, 250 Ky. 370, 63 S.W.2d 288.

—Bill of exceptions. A formal statement in writing of the objections or exceptions taken by a party during the trial of a cause to the decisions, rulings, or instructions of the trial judge, stating the objection, with the facts and circumstances on which it is founded, and, in order to attest its accuracy, signed and sealed by the judge; the object being to put the controverted rulings or decisions upon the record for the information of the appellate court. Buessel v. U. S., C.C.A.Conn., 258 Fla. 811, 815.

It is designed to preserve and make a part of the record proceedings not otherwise of record. Yott v. Yott, 100 N. E. 902, 903, 257 Ill. 419; It is only that part of the proceedings not embraced in the judgment roll. When the ends of justice require it, the terms "bill of exceptions" and "statement of case" are regarded as synonymous; Shawnee Commercial College v. Aydelotte, 38 P.2d 579, 581, 170 Okd. 15.

"Bill of exceptions" and "transcripts of evidence," however, are clearly distinguishable. The latter may contain no objection or exception, and nothing other than the evidence introduced on the trial; the former is, strictly speaking, only a record which points out alleged errors committed below in relation to evidence as well as other things. Broadway & Newport Bridge Co. v. Commonwealth, 173 Ky. 165, 190 S.W. 715, 719.

4. In equity practice

A formal written complaint, in the nature of a petition, addressed by a suitor in chancery to the chancellor or to a court of equity or a court having equitable jurisdiction, showing the names of the parties, stating the facts which make up the case and the complainant's allegations, averring that the acts disclosed are contrary to equity, and pleading for process and for specific relief, or for such relief as the circumstances demand. Sharon v. Sharon, 67 Cal. 185, 7 P. 456.
—Bill for a new trial. A bill in equity in which the specific relief asked is an injunction against the execution of a judgment rendered at law, and a new trial in the action, on account of some fact which would render it inequitable to enforce the judgment, but which was not available to the party on the trial at law, or which he was prevented from presenting by fraud or accident, without concurrent fraud or negligence on his own part.
—Bill for foreclosure. One which is filed by a mortgagee against the mortgagor, for the purpose of having the estate sold, thereby to obtain the sum mortgaged on the premises, with interest and costs. 1 Madd. Ch. Pr. 528.
—Bill for fraud. The object and effect of it, even if the fraud consists of want of notice, are to vacate the former decree, not to retry the case. Caldwell v. Huffstutter, 173 Tenn. 225, 116 S.W.2d 1017, 1019.
—Bill in nature of a bill of review. A bill in equity, to obtain a re-examination and reversal of a decree, filed by one who was not a party to the original suit, nor bound by the decree.
—Bill in nature of a bill of revivor. Where, on the abatement of a suit, there is such a transmission of the interest of the incapacitated party that the title to it, as well as the person entitled, may be the subject of litigation in a court of chancery, the suit cannot be continued by a mere bill of revivor, but an original bill upon which the title may be litigated must be filed. This is called a "bill in the nature of a bill of revivor." It is founded on privity of estate or title by the act of the party. And the nature and operation of the whole act by which the privity is created is open to controversy. Story, Eq. P1. §§ 378-380; 2 Amer. & Eng. Enc. Law, 271.
—Bill in nature of a supplemental bill. A bill filed when new parties, with new interests, arising from events happening since the suit was commenced, are brought before the court; wherein it differs from a supplemental bill, which is properly applicable to those cases only where the same parties or the same interests remain before the court. Story, Eq. P1. (5th Ed.) § 345 et seq.
—Bill in nature of interpleader. See Bill of Interpleader.
—Bill of conformity. One filed by an executor or administrator, who finds the affairs of the deceased so much involved that he cannot safely administer the estate except under the direction of a court of chancery. This bill is filed against the creditors, generally, for the purpose of having all their claims adjusted, and procuring a final decree settling the order of payment of the assets. 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 440.
—Bill of discovery. A proceeding by a party against an adversary for discovery of facts within adversary's knowledge, or discovery of documents, writings, or other things within his possession or power, to be used either offensively or defensively in a pending or contemplated action. Dallas Joint Stock Land Bank v. Rawlins, Tex. Civ. App., 129 S. W. 2d 485, 486; First Nat. Bank v. Dade-Broward Co., 171 So. 510, 125 Fla. 594.
In aid of action at law is equitable remedy to enable litigant to obtain, prior to trial, such information as is in exclusive possession of adverse party and is necessary to establishment of complainant's case. Yorkshire Worsted Mills v. National Transit Co., 325 Pa. 427, 190 A. 897, 898.
—Bill of information. Where a suit is instituted on behalf of the crown or government, or of those of whom it has the custody by virtue of its prerogative, or whose rights are under its particular protection, the matter of complaint is offered to the court by way of information by the attorney or solicitor general, instead of by petition. Where a suit immediately concerns the crown or government alone, the proceeding is purely by way of information, but, where it does not do so immediately, a relator is appointed, who is answerable for costs, etc., and, if he is interested in the matter in connection with the crown or government, the proceeding is by information and bill. Information differ from bills in little more than name and form, and the same rules are substantially applicable to both. 3 Bl. Comm. 261.
—Bill of interpleader. The name of a bill in equity to obtain a settlement of a question of right to money or other property adversely claimed, in which the party filing the bill has no interest, although it may be in his hands, by compelling such adverse claimants to litigate the right or title between themselves, and relieve him from liability or litigation. Republic Casualty Co. v. Fischmann, 99 N. J. Eq. 758, 134 A. 179, 180.
—Bill of peace. One which is filed when a person has a right which may be controverted by various persons, at different times, and by different actions. Smith v. Cretors, 164 N. W. 338, 340, 181 Iowa 189.
—Bill of review. One which is brought to have a decree of the court reviewed, corrected, or reversed. Dodge v. Northrop, 85 Mich. 243, 48 N. W. 505. It is in the nature of a writ of error. Rubin v. Midlinsky, 327 Ill. 89, 158 N. E. 395.
It is equitable procedure to procure explanation, alteration, or reversal of final decree by court which rendered it. People v. Sterling, 357 Ill. 354, 192 N. E. 229, 234.
The object of a "bill of review" and of a bill in nature of a bill of review in the old chancery practice was to procure a reversal, modification, or explanation of a decree in a former suit. Barz v. Sawyer, 159 Iowa 481, 141 N. W. 319, 321.
A “bill of review,” or a bill in the nature of a bill of review, are of three classes; those for error appearing on the face of the record, those for newly discovered evidence, and those for fraud impeaching the original transaction. Moore v. Shook, 276 Ill. 47, 114 N.E. 592, 593. Such bills are peculiar to courts of equity at common law. Satterwhite v. State, 149 Ark. 147, 231 S.W. 886, 887.

—Bill of review. One which is brought to continue a suit which has abated before its final consummation, as, for example, by death, or marriage of a female plaintiff. Brooks v. Laurent, C.C.A. Fla., 98 F. 647, 39 C.C.A. 201.

—Bill of review and supplement. One which is a compound of a supplemental bill and bill of review, and not only continues the suit, which has abated by the death of the plaintiff, or the like, but supplies any defects in the original bill arising from subsequent events, so as to entitle the party to relief on the whole merits of his case. Westcott v. Minter, 2 Ala. 411.

—Bill quia timet. A bill invoking the aid of equity “because he fears,” that is, because the complainant apprehends an injury to his property rights or interests, from the fault or neglect of another. Bisp.Eq. § 568; 2 Story, Eq.Jur. § 826.

Such bills are entertained to guard against possible or prospective injuries, and to preserve the means by which existing rights may be protected from future or contingent violations; differing from injunctions, in that the latter correct past and present or imminent and certain injuries. De Carlí v. O’Brien, 41 P.2d 411, 416, 150 Or. 35, 97 A.L.R. 693.

—Bill to carry a decree into execution. One which is filed when, from the neglect of parties or some other cause, it may become impossible to carry a decree into execution without the further decree of the court. Hind, Ch.Pr. 68; Story, Eq.P1. § 42.

—Bill to perpetuate testimony. A bill in equity filed in order to procure the testimony of witnesses to be taken as to some matter not at the time before the courts, but which is likely at some future time to be in litigation. Story, Eq.P1. (5th Ed.) 300 et seq.

—Bill to quiet possession and title. Also called a bill to remove a cloud on title (q. v.), and though sometimes classed with bills quia timet or for the cancellation of void instruments, they may be resorted to in other cases when the complainant’s title is clear and there is a cloud to be removed; Maguire v. City of Macomb, 293 Ill. 441, 127 N.E. 682, 686.

—Bill to suspend a decree. One brought to avoid or suspend a decree under special circumstances.

—Bill to take testimony de bene esse. One which is brought to take the testimony of witnesses to a fact material to the prosecution of a suit at law which is actually commenced, where there is good cause to fear that the testimony may otherwise be lost before the time of trial. 2 Story, Eq.Jur. § 1813, n.

—Cross-bill. One which is brought by a defendant in a suit against a plaintiff in or against other defendants in the same suit, or against both, touching the matters in question in the original bill. Story, Eq.P1. § 389; Mitf.Eq.P1. 80.

It is a bill brought by a defendant against a plaintiff, or other parties in a former bill depending, touching the matter in question in that bill. It is usually brought either to obtain a necessary discovery of facts in aid of the defense to the original bill, or to obtain full relief to all parties in reference to the matters of the original bill. It is to be treated as a mere auxiliary suit. Kidder v. Barr, 35 N. H. 251; Blythe v. Hinckley, C.C.Cal., 84 F. 234. A species of pleading, used for the purpose of obtaining a discovery necessary to the defense, or to obtain some relief founded on the collateral claims of the party defendant to the original suit. Tison v. Tison, 14 Ga. 167. Also, if a bill of exchange or promissory note be given in consideration of another bill or notice, it is called a “cross” or “counter” bill or note. Landon v. Public Utilities Commission of Kansas, D.C.Kan., 234 F. 152, 167.

—Supplemental bill. A bill to bring before the court matters arising after the filing of the original bill or not then known to complainant. Puget Sound Power & Light Co. v. City of Seattle, C.C.A. Wash., 5 F. (2d) 393. See Bill in nature of a supplemental bill.

5. In legislation and constitutional law

The word means a draft of an act of the legislature before it becomes a law; a proposed or projected law. A draft of an act presented to the legislature, but not enacted. Hubbard v. Lowe, D. C.N.Y., 226 F. 135, 137. Also a special act passed by a legislative body in the exercise of a quasi judicial power. Scudder v. Smith, 331 Pa. 165, 200 A. 601, 604.

The word “bill” may mean the bill as it is first introduced in one of the houses of the legislature, or it may refer to it at any time in any of its stages until finally passed. People v. Brady, 262 Ill. 578, 105 N.E. 1, 4. An act is the appropriate term for it, after it has been acted on by, and passed by, the legislature. Herbring v. Brown, 92 Or. 176, 180 P. 328, 330. Thus, bills of attainder, bills of pains and penalties, are spoken of.

—Bill of attainder. See Attainder.

—Bill of indemnity. ’ In English law. An act of parliament, passed every session until 1869, but discontinued in and after that year, as having been rendered unnecessary by the passing of the promissory oaths act, 1868, for the relief of those who have unwittingly or unavoidably neglected to take the necessary oaths, etc., required for the purpose of qualifying them to hold their respective offices. Wharton.

—Bill of pains and penalties. A special act of the legislature which inflicts a punishment, less than death, upon persons supposed to be guilty of treason or felony, without any conviction in the ordinary course of judicial proceedings.

It differs from a bill of attainder in this : that the punishment inflicted by the latter is death.

—Private bill. One dealing only with a matter of private personal or local interest. Lowell, Gov. of Eng. 266.

All legislative bills which have for their object some particular or private interest are so termed, as distinguished from such as are for the benefit of the whole community, which are thence termed “public bills.” People v. Chautauqua County, 43 N.Y. 17.

—Private bill office. See Private.
—Private member’s bill. One of a public nature introduced by a private member;—distinguished from a private bill, which is one dealing only with a matter of private personal or local interest. Lowell, Gov. of Eng. 266.

6. A solemn and formal legislative declaration of popular rights and liberties Promulgated on certain extraordinary occasions, as the famous Bill of Rights in English history.

—Bill of rights. A formal and emphatic legislative assertion and declaration of popular rights and liberties usually promulgated upon a change of government; particularly the statute 1 W. & M. St. 2, c. 2. Also the summary of the rights and liberties of the people, or of the principles of constitutional law deemed essential and fundamental, contained in many of the American state constitutions. Hamill v. Hawks, C.C.A.Okl., 58 F.2d 41, 47. That portion of Constitution guaranteeing rights and privileges to the individual. Brown v. State, 219 Ind. 251, 37 N.E.2d 73, 77, 137 A.L.R. 679.

7. In the law of contracts

An obligation; a deed, whereby the obligor acknowledges himself to owe to the obligee a certain sum of money or some other thing. It may be indented or poll, and with or without a penalty.

—Bill obligatory. A bond absolute for the payment of money. It may be indented or poll, and with or without a penalty. See Bill penal. Bank v. Greiner, 2 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 115.

—Bill penal. A written obligation by which a debtor acknowledges himself indebted in a certain sum, and binds himself for the payment thereof, in a larger sum, called a "penalty." Bonds with conditions have superseded such bills in modern practice. They are sometimes called bills obligatory, and are properly so called; but every bill obligatory is not a bill penal. Comyns, Dig. Obligations, D; Cro.Car. 515. See 2 Ventr. 106, 198.

—Bill single. A written promise to pay to a person or persons named a stated sum at a stated time, without any condition. When under seal, as is usually the case, it is sometimes called a "bill obligatory," (q. v.) It differs from a "bill penal," (q. v.) in that it expresses no penalty.

8. In commercial law

A written statement of the terms of a contract, or specification of the items of a transaction or of a demand; also a general name for any item of indebtedness, whether receivable or payable.

As a verb, as generally and customarily used in commercial transactions, "bill" is synonymous with "charge" or "invoice." George M. Jones Co. v. Canadian Nat. R. Co., D.C.Mich., 14 F.2d 852, 855.

—Bill-book. In mercantile law. A book in which an account of bills of exchange and promissory notes, whether payable or receivable, is stated.

—Bill-head. A printed form on which merchants and traders make out their bills and render accounts to their customers.

—Bill of lading. In common law. The written evidence of a contract for the carriage and delivery of goods sent by sea for a certain freight. Mason v. Lickbarrow, 1 H.B. 1. 359. A written memorandum, given by the person in command of a merchant vessel, acknowledging the receipt on board the ship of certain specified goods, in good order or "apparent good order," which he undertakes, in consideration of the payment of freight, to deliver in like good order (dangers of the sea excepted) at a designated place to the consignee therein named or to his assigns. Devato v. Barrels, D.C.N.Y., 20 Fed. 510.

The term is often applied to a similar receipt and undertaking given by a carrier of goods by land. A bill of lading is an instrument in writing, signed by a carrier or his agent, describing the freight so as to identify it, stating the name of the consignor, the terms of the contract for carriage, and agreeing or directing that the freight be delivered to the order or assigns of a specified person at a specified place. See Civil Code Cal. § 2126a; Aman v. Dover & Southbound R. Co., 179 N. C. 310, 102 S.E. 392, 393; Rudin v. King-Richardson Co., 143 N.E. 198, 201, 311. Ill. 513. It is receipt for goods, contract for their carriage, and is documentary evidence of title to goods. Schwalb v. Erie R. Co., 293 N.Y.S. 842, 846, 161 Misc. 743.

A clean bill of lading is one which contains nothing in the margin qualifying the words in the bill of lading itself. 61 Law T. 330; Creery v. Holly, 14 Wend. (N.Y.) 26; Sayward v. Stevens, 3 Gray (Mass.) 97.

An order bill of lading is one in which it is stated that goods are consigned to order of any person named therein. F. L. Shaw Co. v. Coleman, Tex.Civ.App., 236 S.W. 178, 180.

A straight bill of lading is one in which it is stated that goods are consigned to a specified person. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Roe, 91 Fla. 762, 109 So. 205, 207.

A through bill of lading is one by which a railroad contracts to transport over its own line for a certain distance carloads of merchandise or stock, there to deliver the same to its connecting lines to be transported to the place of destination at a fixed rate per carload for the whole distance. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Vaughn, 4 Willson, Ct. App.Tex. § 182, 16 S.W. 775.

—Bill of parcels. A statement sent to the buyer of goods, along with the goods, exhibiting in detail the items composing the parcel and their several prices, to enable him to detect any mistake or omission; an invoice.
—Bill of sale. In contracts. A written agreement, formerly limited to one under seal, by which one person assigns or transfers his right to or interest in goods and personal chattels to another. Wilson v. Voche, 172 S.E. 672, 48 Ga.App. 173. An instrument by which, in particular, the property in ships and vessels is conveyed. Young v. Stone, 70 N.Y.S. 558, 61 App.Div. 364. See Grand bill of sale, infra.

—Bill payable. In a merchant's accounts, all bills which he has accepted, and promissory notes which he has made, are called "bills payable," and are entered in a ledger account under that name, and recorded in a book bearing the same title. See West Virginia Pulp & Paper Co. v. Karnes, 137 Va. 714, 120 S.E. 321, 322.

—Bill receivable. In a merchant's accounts, all notes, drafts, checks, etc., payable to him, or of which he is to receive the proceeds at a future date, are called "bills receivable," and are entered in a ledger-account under that name, and also noted in a book bearing the same title. State v. Robinson, 57 Md. 501. Miami Coal Co. v. Fox, 203 Ind. 99, 176 N.E. 11, 16, 79 A.L.R. 333.

—Bill rendered. A bill of items rendered by a creditor to his debtor; an "account rendered," as distinguished from "an account stated." Hill v. Hatch, 11 Me. 455.

—Grand bill of sale. In English law. The name of an instrument used for the transfer of a ship while she is at sea. An expression which is understood to refer to the instrument whereby a ship was originally transferred from the builder to the owner, or first purchaser. 3 Kent, Comm. 133.

9. In the law of negotiable instruments
A promissory obligation for the payment of money.

Standing alone or without qualifying words, the term is understood to mean a bank note, United States treasury note, or other piece of paper circulating as money. Green v. State, 28 Tex.App. 493, 13 S.W. 785.

—Bill of credit. In constitutional law. A bill or promissory note issued by the government of a state or nation, upon its faith and credit, designed to circulate in the community as money, and redeemable at a future day. Hale v. Huston, 44 Ala. 138, 4 Am.Rep. 124. In mercantile law. A license or authority given in writing from one person to another, very common among merchants, bankers, and those who travel, empowering a person to receive or take up money of their correspondents abroad.

—Bill of exchange. A written order from A. to B., directing B. to pay to C. a certain sum of money therein named. Byles, Bills, 1. An open (that is, unsealed) letter addressed by one person to another directing him, in effect, to pay, absolutely and at all events, a certain sum of money therein named, to a third person, or to any other to whom that third person may order it to be paid, or it may be payable to bearer or to the drawer himself. 1 Daniel, Neg.Inst. 27.

An unconditional order in writing addressed by one person to another, signed by the person giving it, requiring the person to whom it is addressed to pay on demand or at a fixed or determinable future time a sum certain in money to order or to bearer. Clayton Town-Site Co. v. Clayton Drug Co., 147 P. 460, 20 N.M. 185; Smythe v. Sanders, 101 So. 435, 436, 136 Misc. 382; Sometimes called a "trade acceptance." Jones v. Revere Preserving Co., 247 Mass. 225, 142 N.E. 70, 71.

A "check" differs from a "bill of exchange" in that it is always drawn on a deposit whereas a bill is not. Wilson v. Buchenan, D.C.Cal., 43 F.Supp. 272, 275.

—Domestic bill of exchange. A bill of exchange drawn on a person residing in the same state with the drawer; or dated at a place in the state, and drawn on a person living within the state. It is the residence of the drawer and drawee which must determine whether a bill is domestic or foreign. Ragsdale v. Franklin, 25 Miss. 143. See also, Inland bill of exchange.

—Foreign bill of exchange. A bill of exchange drawn in one state or country, upon a foreign state or country. See Story, Bills, § 22; 3 Kent, Comm. 94, note.

A bill of exchange drawn in one country upon another country not governed by the same homogeneous laws, or not governed throughout by the same municipal laws. A bill of exchange drawn in one of the United States upon a person residing in another state is a foreign bill.

—Inland bill of exchange. One of which the drawer and drawee are residents of the same state or country. Miller v. American Gold Mining Co., 3 Alaska, 1. See Domestic bill of exchange.

10. In maritime law
The term is applied to contracts of various sorts, but chiefly to bills of lading and to bills of adventure.

—Bill of adventure. A written certificate by a merchant or the master or owner of a ship, to the effect that the property and risk in goods shipped on the vessel in his own name belong to another person, to whom he is accountable for the proceeds alone.

—Bill of gross adventure. In French maritime law. Any written instrument which contains a contract of bottomry, respondentia, or any other kind of maritime loan. There is no corresponding English term. Hall, Marit. Loans, 182, n.

—Bill of health. An official certificate, given by the authorities of a port from which a vessel clears, to the master of the ship, showing the state of the port, as respects the public health, at the time of sailing, and exhibited to the authorities of the port which the vessel next makes, in token that she does not bring disease.

If the bill alleges that no contagious or infectious disease existed, it is called a "clean" bill; if it admits that one was suspected or anticipated, or that one actually prevailed, it is called a "touched" or a "foul" bill.
BILL

11. In revenue law and procedure
   The term is given to various documents filed in or issuing from a custom house, principally of the sorts described below.

   —Bill of entry. An account of the goods entered at the custom-house, both incoming and outgoing.
It must state the name of the merchant exporting or importing, the quantity and species of merchandise, and whither transported, and whence.

   —Bill of sight. When an importer of goods is ignorant of their exact quantity or quality, so that he cannot make a perfect entry of them, he may give to the customs officer a written description of them, according to the best of his information and belief. This is called a "bill of sight."

   —Bill of store. In English law. A kind of license granted at the custom-house to merchants, to carry such stores and provisions as are necessary for their voyage, custom free. Jacob.

   —Bill of sufferance. In English law. A license granted at the custom-house to a merchant, to suffer him to trade from one English port to another, without paying custom. Cowell.

12. In criminal law
   A bill of indictment, see infra.

   —Bill of appeal. An ancient, but now abolished, method of criminal prosecution. See Battel.

   —Bill of indictment. A formal written document accusing a person or persons named of having committed a felony or misdemeanor, lawfully laid before a grand jury for their action upon it. State
v. Ray, Rice (S.C.) 4, 33 Am.Dec. 90. See Presentment.

   If the grand jury decide that a trial ought to be had, ythey indorse on it "a true bill;" if otherwise, "not a true bill" or "not found."

13. In common-law practice
   An itemized statement or specification of particular details, especially items of cost or charge.

   of costs. A certified, itemized statement of the amount of costs in an action or suit. Doe v.
Thompson, 22 N.H. 219.

   By the English usage, this term is applied to the statement of the charges and disbursements of an attorney or solicitor incurred in the conduct of his client's business, and which might be taxed upon application, even though not incurred in any suit. Thus, conveyancing costs might be taxed. Wharton.

   —Bill of particulars. In practice. A written statement or specification of the particulars of the demand for which an action at law is brought, or of a defendant's set-off against such demand, (including dates, sums, and items in detail,) furnished by one of the parties to the other, either voluntarily or in compliance with a judge's order for that purpose. 1 Tidd, Pr. 596-600; 2 Archb.Pr.
221; Ferguson v. Ashbell, 53 Tex. 250; Baldwin v.
Gregg, 13 Metc. (Mass.) 255.

   It is designed to aid the defendant in interposing the proper answer and in preparing for trial, by giving him detailed information regarding the cause of action stated in the complaint. Wetmore v. Goodwin Film & Camera Co., (D.C.) 226 F. 352, 353. It is neither a pleading nor proof of the facts therein contained, Nilson v. Ebey Land Co., 90 Wash. 295, 155 P. 1036, and is not for the purpose of discovering evidence, nor to find what plaintiff knows, but what he claims. Intermountain Ass'n of Credit Men v. Mil-

   A bill of particulars is not designed to uphold an insufficient indictment, but to give accused fair notice of what he is called on to defend. Clary v. Commonwealth, 163 Ky.
48, 173 S. W. 171, 173. People v. Bain, 359 Ill. 455, 195 N.E.
42.

14. In English law
   A draft of a patent for a charter, commission, dignity, office, or appointment.

   Such a bill is drawn up in the attorney general's patent bill office, is submitted by a secretary of state for the King's signature, when it is called the "King's bill," and is then countersigned by the secretary of state and sealed by the privy seal, and then the patent is prepared and sealed. Sweet.

   For Exchequer Bills, see that title.

Cubbage (Del.), 210 A.2d 555 (1965).

BLACK MUSLIM. An organization of American Negroes, founded in Detroit in 1930 by an American Negro calling himself Mohammad Elijah. To the traditional Koran the founders added the doctrine of Black Supremacy and proclaimed the desirability of maintaining (or regaining) the purity of the black race. 62 Col.L.Rev. 1488 (1962) ; State v. Cubbage (Del.), 210 A.2d 555 (1965).

BLACK RENTS. In old English law. Rents reserved in work, grain, provisions, or baser money than silver, in contradistinction to those which were reserved in white money or silver, which were termed "white rents," (reditus albi,) or blanch farms. Tomlins; Whishaw. See Blackmail.

BLACK—ROD, GENTLEMAN USHER OF. In England, the title of a chief officer of the king, deriving his name from the Black Rod of office, on the top of which reposes a golden lion, which he carries. During the session of Parliament he attends on the peers, summons the Commons to the House of Lords; and to his custody all peers impeached for any crime or contempt are first committed.
BLACK WARD. A subvassal, who held ward of the king's vassal.

BLACKJACK. A short bludgeon consisting of a heavy head, as of metal, on an elastic shaft or with a flexible handle; a bludgeon- or weapon consisting of a lead slug attached to a leather thong; a small leather-covered club or bilby weighted at the head and having an elastic shaft. 5 Words and Phrases, Perm. Ed.

As a card game, another name for vingt-et-un (twenty-one) ; also, a variety of hearts in which the jack of spades counts as ten hearts. Webster, New Intl. Dict.

BLACKLEG. A person who gets his living by frequenting race-courses and places where games of chance are played, getting the best odds, and giving the least he can, but not necessarily cheating. That is not indictable either by statute or at common law. Barnett v. Allen, 3 Hurl. & N. 379.

In a later case it has been thought that "blackleg" ordinarily means a swindler, but does not mean a "scab" or strike breaker, and that its use may be libellous per se. United Mine Workers of America v. Cromer, 159 Ky. 605, 167 S. W. 891, 892.

BLACKLIST. A list of persons marked out for special avoidance, antagonism, or enmity on the part of those who prepare the list or those among whom it is intended to circulate; as where a trades-union "blacklists" workmen who refuse to conform to its rules, or where a list of insolvent or untrustworthy persons is published by a commercial agency or mercantile association. Quoted and relied on in Dick v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co., 86 Wash. 211, 150 P. 8, 12, Ann.Cas.1917A, 638, holding that this word is a generic term having no such well-defined meaning in law as to make its use in a pleading a definite charge of any specific misconduct against a person so charged. Cleary v. Great Northern Ry. Co., 147 Minn. 403, 180 N.W. 545, 546; Masters v. Lee, 39 Neb. 574, 58 N.W. 222; Mattison v. Railway Co., 2 Ohio N.P. 279.

BLACKMAIL. In one of its original meanings, this term denoted a tribute paid by English dwellers along the Scottish border to influential chieftains' of Scotland, as a condition of securing immunity from raids of marauders and border thieves.

Also, rents payable in cattle, grain, work, and the like. Such rents were called "blackmail," (reditus nigri,) in distinction from white rents, (blanche firmes,) which were rents paid in silver. See Black rents.

The extortion of money by threats or overtures towards criminal prosecution or the destruction of a man's reputation or social standing.

In common parlance, the term is equivalent to and synonymous with, "extortion,"—the exaction of money, either for the performance of a duty, the prevention of an injury, or the exercise of an influence. It supposes the service to be unlawful, and the payment involuntary. Not infrequently it is extorted by threats, or by operating upon the fears or the credulity, or by promises to conceal, or offers to expose, the weaknesses, the follies, or the crimes of the victim. Mitchell v. Sharon, C.C.Cal., 51 F. 424; In re Mills, 104 Wash. 278, 176 P. 556, 562. "Blackmail" has a broader meaning than the New York statutory crime of blackmail, and denotes extortion in any mode by means of intimidation, as the extortion of money by threats of accusation or exposure, or of unfavorable criticism in the press. Guenther v. Ridgway Co., 156 N.Y.S. 534, 535, 170 App. Div. 725.

BLACKSMITH SHOP. A place to which the people of a community resort for the purpose of having machinery and tools repaired and iron work done. State v. Shumaker, 103 Kan. 741, 175 P. 978, 979.

BLADA. In old English law. Growing crops of grain of any kind. Spelman. All manner of annual grain. Cowell. Harvested grain. Bract. 217b; Reg.Orig. 94b, 95.

BLADARIUS. In old English law. A cornmonger; meal-man or corn-chandler; a bladier, or engrosser of corn or grain. Blount.

BLANC SEIGN. In Louisiana, a paper signed at the bottom by him who intends to bind himself, give acquittance, or compromise, at the discretion of the person whom he intrusts with such blanc seign, giving him power to fill it with what he may think proper, according to agreement. Musson v. U. S. Bank, 6 Mart.O.S. (La.) 718.

BLANCH HOLDING. An ancient tenure of the law of Scotland, the duty payable being trifling, as a penny or a pepper-corn, etc., if required; similar to free and common socage.

BLANCHE FIRME. White rent; a rent reserved, payable in silver.

BLANCUS. In old law and practice. White; plain; smooth; blank.

BLANK. A space left unfilled in a written document, in which one or more words or marks are to be inserted to complete the sense. Angle v. Insurance Co., 92 U.S. 337, 23 L.Ed. 556.

Also a skeleton or printed form for any legal document, in which the necessary and invariable words are printed in their proper order, with blank spaces left for the insertion of such names, dates, figures, additional clauses, etc., as may be necessary to adapt the instrument to the particular case and to the design of the party using it.

BLANK ACCEPTANCE. An acceptance of a bill of exchange written on the paper before the bill is made, and delivered by the acceptor.

BLANK BAR. Also called the "common bar." The name of a plea in bar which in an action of trespass is put in to oblige the plaintiff to assign the certain place where the trespass was committed. It was most in practice in the common bench. See Cro.Jac. 594.

BLANK BONDS. Scotch securities, in which the creditor's name was left blank, and which passed by mere delivery, the bearer being at liberty to put in his name and sue for payment. Declared void by Act 1696, c. 25.

BLANK ENDORSEMENT. The indorsement of a bill of exchange or promissory note, by merely writing the name of the indorser, without mentioning any person to whom the bill or note is to be paid; called "blank," because a blank or space is left over for the insertion of the name of the indorsee, or of any subsequent holder. Otherwise called an indorsement "in blank." 3 Kent, Comm. 89; Story, Prom. Notes, § 138.

BLANKET. In tariff acts: A heavy cover for a bed or a horse, with a thick, soft nap on both sides. Riley & Co. v. U. S., 8 Ct.Cust.App. 116, 118.

BLANKET POLICY. See Insurance—Blanket Policy.

BLANKS. A kind of white money, (value 8d.,) coined by Henry V. in those parts of France which were then subject to England; forbidden to be current in that realm by 2 Hen. VI. c. 9. Wharton.

BLASARIUS. An incendiary.

BLASPHEMY.

In English Law
Blasphemy is the offense of speaking matter relating to God, Jesus Christ, the Bible, or the Book of Common Prayer, intended to wound the feelings of mankind or to excite contempt and hatred against the church by law established, or to promote immorality. Sweet.

In American Law

In general, blasphemy may be described as consisting in speaking evil of the Deity with an impious purpose to derogate from the divine majesty, and to alienate the minds of others from the love and reverence of God. It is purposely using words concerning God calculated and designed to impair and destroy the reverence, respect, and confidence due to Him as the intelligent creator, governor, and judge of the world. It embraces the idea of detraction, when used towards the Supreme Being, as "calumny" usually carries the same idea when applied to an individual. It is a willful and malicious attempt to lessen men's reverence of God by denying His existence, or His attributes as an intelligent creator, governor, and judge of men, and to prevent their having confidence in Him as such. Corn. v. Kneeland, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 211, 212.

The use of this word is, in modern law, exclusively confined to sacred subjects; but blasphemia and blasphemare were anciently used to signify the reviling by one person of another. Nov. 77, c. 1, § 1; Spelman.

BLASTING. Practice or occupation of rending heavy masses, especially of rock, by means of explosives, as in oil well drilling, quarrying, etc. Seismic Explorations v. Dobray, Tex.Civ.App., 169 S.W.2d 739, 742.

BLEACHERS. A relatively low-priced seat for a spectator at sports or games, or the section or structure (originally roofless) containing such seats. Lowden v. Jefferson County Excise Board, 122 P.2d 991, 992, 190 Okl. 276; Zeitz v. Cooperstown Baseball Centennial, N.Y.Sup., 29 N.Y.S.2d 56, 57.

BLEES. In old English law. Grain; particularly corn.

BLENCHE, BLENCHE HOLDING. See Blanch Holding.

BLENDED FUND. In England, where a testator directs his real and personal estate to be sold, and disposes of the proceeds as forming one aggregate, this is called a "blended fund."

BLENDED PRICE. As applied to milk, a price paid to producers based upon a pool average weighted by the volume of milk disposed of, according to different types of utilization. Queensboro Farm Products v. State, 24 N.Y.S.2d 413, 417, 175 Misc. 574.

BLEND. In English law, the condition of one who is deprived of the faculty of seeing.

A voter is not "blind" within the meaning of Ky. St. § 1475, authorizing clerk to mark ballot for blind person, if he has left his spectacles at home, but a person so devoid of sight that he cannot see pencil mark made by clerk is "blind." Smith v. Jones, 221 Ky. 546, 299 S.W. 170, 171. One who by accident lost all vision except enough to enable him to recognize a form without distinguishing its outlines is "blind" within the Workmen's Compensation Act. Industrial Commission of Colorado v. Johnson, 64 Colo. 461, 172 P. 422, 423.

BLIND CAR. On railroads, one on which there is neither steps nor platform at the ends. Helm v. Hines, 109 Kan. 48, 196 P. 426.

BLIND CORNER. One where the building extends to the property line. Mobile Light & R. Co. v. Gadik, 211 Ala. 582, 100 So. 837, 838.

BLIND NAILING. "Blind nailing," in a contract relating to the interior finish of a house, means driving the nails in with a nail set, and concealing them with putty and paint. Sterling Engineering and Construction Co. v. Berg, 161 Wis. 280, 152 N.W. 851, 852.

BLIND WAGON. Such as one used for moving furniture and the like, is one without the name or address of the owner of it thereon. Mike Berninger Moving Co. v. O'Brien, Mo.App., 240 S.W. 481, 483.

BLIND WAGON. A natural descriptive term identifying in a broad sense work of the blind, conveying the idea of the blind performing deftly at any of the various skills or trades to which their talents are applied or leaving the suggestion of dexterity and skill of the blind as well as their handiwork itself. San Francisco Ass'n for Blind v. Industrial Aid for Blind, D.C.Mo., 58 F.Supp. 995, 1001.
BLINKS. In old English law. Boughs broken down from trees and thrown in a way where deer are likely to pass. Jacob.

BLOCK. A square or portion of a city or town inclosed by streets, whether partially or wholly occupied by buildings or containing only vacant lots. Also used synonymous with "square." Weeks v. Hetland, 202 N.W. 807, 812, 813, 52 N.D. 351. The platted portion of a city surrounded by streets. Cravens v. Putnam, 101 Kan. 161, 165 P. 801, 802. The term need not, however, be limited to blocks platted as such, but may mean an area bounded on all sides by streets or avenues. St. Louis-San Francisco R. Co. v. City of Tulsa, Okl., C.C.A.Okl., 15 F.2d 960, 963. It must be surrounded on at least three sides by streets, which must be marked on the ground, and not simply indicated as such on a plat. Seested v. Dickey, 318 Mo. 192, 300 S.W. 1088, 1098.

BLOCK BOOK SYSTEM. An abstract of property assessed for taxes and also of property unrendered and of which owners were unknown, together with maps and plats. Southern Surety Co. v. Lafferty, Tex.Civ.App., 43 S.W.2d 460, 463.

BLOCK-BOOKING. The practice of licensing or offering for license one motion picture feature or group of features on condition that exhibitor will also license another feature or group of features released by distributor during a given period. U. S. v. Paramount Pictures, N.Y., 68 S.Ct. 915, 928, 334 U.S. 131, 92 L.Ed. 1260.

BLOCK-HOLER. One who follows up the miner to blast or throw down large rocks left in the process of mining in a "stope." Mesich v. Tamarack Mining Co., 184 Mich. 363, 151 N.W. 564, 566.

BLOCH OF SURVEYS. In Pennsylvania land law. Any considerable body of contiguous tracts surveyed in the name of the same warrantee, without regard to the manner in which they were originally located; a body of contiguous tracts located by exterior lines, but not separated from each other by interior lines. Morrison v. Seaman, 183 Pa. 74, 38 A. 710.

BLOCK TO BLOCK RULE. The "block to block rule" for assessing the benefits for the opening of a new street is, the assessment against the lots in each block of the cost of acquiring the lands in that block. In re St. Raymona Ave. in City of New York, 162 N.Y.S. 185, 188, 175 App.Div. 518.

BLOCKADE. In international law. A marine investment or beleaguering of a town or harbor. A sort of circumvallation round a place by which all foreign connection and correspondence is, as far as human power can effect it, to be cut off. 1 C.Rob.Adm. 151.

It is not necessary, however, that the place should be invested by land, as well as by sea, in order to constitute a legal blockade; and, if a place be blockaded by sea only, it is no violation of belligerent rights for the neutral to carry on commerce with it by inland communications. 1 Kent, Comm. 147.

The actual investment of a port or place by a hostile force fully competent, under ordinary circumstances, to cut off all communication therewith, so arranged or disposed as to be able to apply its force to every point of practicable access or approach to the port or place so invested. The Olinde Rodrigues, D.C.S.C., 91 Fed. 274; Id., 19 S.Ct. 851, 174 U.S. 510, 43 L.Ed. 1065; The Peterhoff, 5 Wall. 50, 18 L.Ed. 564; Grinnan v. Edwards, 21 W.Va. 347.

It is called a "blockade de facto" when the usual notice of the blockade has not been given to the neutral powers by the government causing the investment, in consequence of which the blockading squadron has to warn off all approaching vessels.

Pacific Blockade

A means of coercion short of war, usually adopted by the joint action of several nations.

An instance of it occurred when Great Britain and Germany united to prevent the slave traffic and stop the importation of arms on the east coast of Africa. Snow. Int. Law 79. In 1827 Greece was blockaded by France, Russia, and Great Britain; in 1850 the Greek ports were blockaded by Great Britain, and again in 1855 by the combined fleets of the five Great Powers. In 1887 the Institute of International Law unanimously declared in favor of the legality of pacific blockade, subject to certain conditions. See 21 L. Mag. & Rev. 285; 2 Oppen. §§ 40-49.

Paper Blockade

The state of a line of coast proclaimed to be under blockade in time of war, when the naval force on watch is not sufficient to repel a real attempt to enter.

Public Blockade

A blockade which is not only established in fact, but is notified, by the government directing it, to other governments; as distinguished from a simple blockade, which may be established by a naval officer acting upon his own discretion or under direction of superiors, without governmental notification. The Circassian, 2 Wall. 150, 17 L. Ed. 796.

Simple Blockade

One established by a naval commander acting on his own discretion and responsibility, or under the direction of a superior officer, but without governmental orders or notification. The Circassian, 2 Wall. 150, 17 L.Ed. 796.

BLOCKAGE. Recognition in the field of taxation of fact that in some instances a large block of stock cannot be marketed and turned into cash as readily as a few shares. Citizens Fidelity Bank & Trust Co. v. Reeves, Ky., 259 S.W.2d 432, 433.

BLOCKAGE RULE. Process of determining value of large blocks of corporate stock for gift and estate tax purposes, based on the postulate that a large block of stock cannot be marketed as readily and as advantageously in price as can a few shares. Montclair Trust Co. v. Zink, Prerog., 57 A.2d 372, 376, 380, 141 N.J.Eq. 401.

BLOCKHEAD. A term importing want of natural cleverness, and slowness and obstinacy of mind.

BLOOD

A person may be said to be "of the blood" of another who has any, however small a portion, of the blood derived from a common ancestor, Miller v. Grimes, 262 Pa. 226, 105 A. 92, thus including half blood as well as whole blood, Gardner's Estate v. Gardner, 42 Utah, 40, 129 P. 360, 361. All persons are of the blood of an ancestor who may, in the absence of other and nearer heirs, take by descent from that ancestor. Cornell v. Child, 156 N.Y.S. 449, 452, 170 App.Div. 240.

Half-Blood

A term denoting the degree of relationship which exists between those who have the same father or the same mother, but not both parents in common.

Mixed Blood

A person is "of mixed blood" who is descended from ancestors of different races or nationalities; but particularly, in the United States, the term denotes a person one of whose parents (or more remote ancestors) was a negro. U. S. v. First Nat. Bank of Detroit, Minn., 234 U.S. 245, 34 S.Ct. 846, 848, 58 L.Ed. 1298.

Whole Blood

Kinship by descent from the same father and mother; as distinguished from half blood, which is the relationship of those who have one parent in common, but not both.

BLOOD FEUD. Avenging the slaughter of kin on the person who slaughtered him, or on his belongings.

Whether the Teutonic or the Anglo-Saxon law had a legal right of blood feud has been disputed, but in Alfred's day it was unlawful to begin a feud until after the attempt had been made to exact the price of the life (weregild, q. v.).

BLOOD MONEY. A weregild, or pecuniary mulct paid by a slayer to the relatives of his victim. Also used, in a popular sense, as descriptive of money paid by way of reward for the apprehension and conviction of a person charged with a capital crime.

BLOOD STAINS, TESTS FOR. See Precipitin Test.

BLOODHOUNDS. Dogs remarkable for their sense of smell and ability to follow a scent or track a human being. Pedigo v. Com., 103 Ky. 41, 44 S.W. 143, 42 L.R.A. 432, 82 Am.St.Rep. 566.

It has been held that to permit evidence that a hound has tracked an alleged criminal, it must be shown that it had been trained in that work.

BLOODY HAND. In forest law. The having the hands or other parts bloody, which, in a person caught trespassing in the forest against venison, was one of the four kinds of circumstantial evidence of his having killed deer, although he was not found in the act of chasing or hunting. Manwood.

BLOWING WATER. By a ship is throwing water in the hold back and forth and forcing it through crevices in the ceiling and coming in contact with the cargo. The Charles Rohde, D.C.Md., 8 F.2d 506.

BLUDGEON. Part of a boy's baseball bat, the upper end of which had been broken off, has been held to be a bludgeon within a statute relating to the carrying of any concealed instrument. People v. McPherson, 220 N.Y. 123, 115 N.E. 515, 516. Contra as to an iron bar, twenty inches long and three-eighths to one-half inch in diameter. People v. Visarities, 222 N.Y.S. 401, 403, 220 App.Div. 657.

BLUE. As applied to a cow, generally denoting either a modified shade of black, or black with white intermingled, or dark gray, dove, or slate color, which, in contrast with some decided color or with white, suggests and somewhat resembles blue. Graham v. State, 16 Ga.App. 221, 84 S.E. 981, 983.

BLUE LAWS. A supposititious code of severe laws for the regulation of religious and personal conduct in the colonies of Connecticut and New Haven; hence any rigid Sunday laws or religious regulations. The assertion by some writers of the existence of the blue laws has no other basis than the adoption, by the first authorities of the New Haven colony, of the Scriptures as their code of law and government, and their strict application of Mosaic principles. Century Dict.

BLUE NOTES. Notes accepted by a life insurance company for the amount of premiums on the policy, which provide for the continuance of the policy in force until the due date of the notes. Robnett v. Cotton States Life Ins. Co., 148 Ark. 199, 230 S.W. 257, 258.

BLUFF. A high, steep bank, as by a river, the sea, a ravine, or a plain, or a bank or headland with a broad, steep face. Columbia City Land Co. v. Ruhl, 70 Or. 246, 141 P. 208, 210.

BLUFF. As applied in cases of ordinary negligence is the want of or absence of ordinary care, a failure to do what should have been done or-the doing of that which should not have been done, resulting in the happening of an event or injury which could have and should have been foreseen and avoided by use of such care as a reasonably prudent person would have exercised under the same or similar circumstances. Loyd v. Pierce, Tex.Civ.App., 89 S.W.2d 1035, 1038.

BLUNDERBUSS. A firearm intended to shoot objects at close quarters, without exact aim. Moline v. Kotch, 213 Minn. 326, 6 N.W.2d 462.

BOARD. An official or representative body organized to perform a trust or to execute official or representative functions or having the management of a public office or department exercising administrative or governmental functions. Commissioners of State Ins. Fund v. Dinowitz, 39 N.Y. S.2d 34, 38, 179 Misc. 278.

A committee of persons organized under authority of law in order to exercise certain authorities, have oversight or control of certain matters, or discharge certain functions of a magisterial, representative, or fiduciary character. Thus, "board of aldermen," "board of health," "board of directors," "board of works."

Also lodging, food, entertainment, furnished to a guest at an inn or boarding house.

When used with reference to prisoners, as a basis for the sheriff’s fee, board may be equivalent to "necessary food." Pacific Coal Co. v. Silver Bow County, 79 Mont. 323, 256 P. 386.

Strictly speaking, borrowing implies a gratuitous loan. Carter-Mullaly Transfer Co. v. Angell, Tex.Civ.App., 181 S. W. 237, 238. But money may be “borrowed” on an agreement to pay interest for its use. Legal Tender Cases, 110 U.S. 421, 4 S.Ct. 122, 28 L.Ed. 204. Though the word is often used in the sense of returning the thing borrowed in specie, where money is borrowed, the identical money loaned is not to be returned. In a broad sense the term means a contract for the use of money. State v. School Dist., 13 Neb. 88, 12 N.W. 812. The term may be used to express the idea of receiving something from another for one’s own use, to appropriate. Finch v. McClellan, 77 Ind. App. 533, 130 N.E. 13, 15. The word “loan” is the correlative of “borrow.” U. S. v. Watson, D.C.Idaho, 295 F. 328, 330. The term when used in connection with lending an automobile chauffeur does not imply that the owner surrenders control over him. Hooper v. Brawner, 148 Md. 417, 129 A. 672, 677. Compare Henderson v. State, 75 Fla. 464, 78 So. 427, 428, holding that an indictment alleging that defendant “did borrow” a shotgun sufficiently alleged that defendant received the shotgun into his possession. The right to borrow money as applied to a municipal corporation is a power to create indebtedness. Jones v. Board of Education of Guilford County, 185 N.C. 303, 117 S.E. 37, 40.

BOTTOMAGE. L. Fr. Bottomry.

BOTTOMRY. In maritime law. A contract by which the owner of a ship borrows for the use, equipment, or repair of the vessel, and for a definite term, and pledges the ship (or the keel or bottom of the ship, pars pro toto) as security; it being stipulated that if the ship be lost in the specified voyage, or during the limited time, by any of the perils enumerated, the lender shall lose his money. Carrington v. The Pratt, 18 How. 63, 15 L.Ed. 267; Braynard v. Hoppock, 7 Bow. N.Y. 157.

A contract by which a ship or its freightage is hypothecated as security for a loan, which is to be repaid only in case the ship survives a particular risk, voyage, or period. Civ.Code Cal. § 3017. The contract usually in form a bond.
When the loan is not made on the ship, but on the goods on board, and which are to be sold or exchanged in the course of the voyage, the borrower's personal responsibility is deemed the principal security for the performance of the contract, which is therefore called respondentia.

BOTTOMRY BOND. The instrument embodying the contract or agreement of bottomry. A contract for a loan on the bottom of the ship, at an extraordinary interest, upon maritime risks, to be borne by the lender for a voyage, or for a definite period. The Grapeshot, 9 Wall. 135, 19 L.Ed. 651.

One who commits a breach of the peace is guilty of disorderly conduct, but not all disorderly conduct is necessarily a "breach of the peace." Garvin v. City of Waynesboro, 15 Ga.App. 633, 84 S.E. 90, 91; City of Seattle v. Franklin, 191 Wash. 297, 70 P.2d 1049, 1051.

A constructive breach of the peace is an unlawful act which, though wanting the elements of actual violence or injury to any person, is yet inconsistent with the peaceable and orderly conduct of society. An apprehended breach of the peace is caused by the conduct of a man who threatens another with violence or physical injury, or who goes about in public with dangerous and unusual weapons in a threatening or alarming manner, or who publishes an aggravated libel upon another, etc.

BREACH OF TRUST. Any act done by a trustee contrary to the terms of his trust, or in excess of his authority and to the detriment of the trust; or the wrongful omission by a trustee of any act required of him by the terms of the trust. Also the wrongful misappropriation by a trustee of any fund or property which had been lawfully committed to him in a fiduciary character. Every violation by a trustee of a duty which equity lays upon him, whether wilful and fraudulent, or done through negligence, or arising through mere oversight and forgetfulness, is a "breach of trust." The term, therefore, includes every omission and commission in carrying out the trust according to its terms, of care and diligence in protecting and investing the trust property, and of using perfect good faith. H. B. Cartwright & Bro. v. United States Bank & Trust Co., 23 N.M. 82, 167 P. 436, 453. A violation by the trustee of any duty which he owes to the beneficiary. Bruun v. Hanson, C.C.A.Idaho, 103 F.2d 685, 699.

BREAD ACTS. Laws providing for the sustenance of persons kept in prison for debt.

BREAK. "Break" may be used in a broad sense, as in seller's covenant in contract of sale of auto, to indicate a weakness, impairment, or destruction of parts, however caused. American Locomotive Co. v. National Wholesale Grocery Co., 226 Mass. 314, 115 N.E. 404, 405, L.R.A.1917D, 1125.

BREAK A LEG. Pertaining to a broken bone anywhere between ankle and hip, with possible exception of patella, 100% American Local Mut. Life & Accident Ass'n of El Paso v. Work, Tex. Civ.App., 289 S.W. 1020.

BREAK AND TAKE. Sale of merchandise or amusement where customer pays for a chattel and a chance for another unpaid for chattel, the ticket being the opportunity for fortuitous selection of a differentiated article. Minter v. Federal Trade Commission, C.C.A.3, 102 F.2d 69, 73.

BREAKDOWN SERVICE. As applied to an electric public service corporation is primarily a service for emergency and is used in case the electric plant of the customer breaks down; it is also used when very little electricity is required, as upon holidays and Sundays, and also at the peak of the service when a maximum current is required during the day. People ex rel. New York Edison Co. v. Public Service Commission for First Dist., 191 App.Div. 237, 181 N.Y.S. 259, 261.

BREAKING. Forcibly separating, parting, disintegrating, or piercing any solid substance.

In the law as to housebreaking and burglary, it means the tearing away or removal of any part of a house or of the locks, latches, or other fastenings intended to secure it, or otherwise exerting force to gain an entrance, with the intent to commit a felony; or violently or forcibly breaking out of a house, after having unlawfully entered it, in the attempt to escape. Sims v. State, 136 Ind. 358, 36 N.E. 278; Melton v. State, 24 Tex.App. 287, 6 S.W. 303. Actual "breaking" involves application of some force. Rains v. Commonwealth, 293 Ky. 429, 169 S.W.2d 41, 44, the action of accused must have been such as would, without additional effort, have made an entry possible. Armour v. State, 72 Okl.Cr. 44, 112 P.2d 1116, 1119, but there is no requirement that there be shown violence, a latch lifted, or a BREAKING A CASE. The expression by the tank releasing handle is sufficient "breaking". Chaney v. of their opinions. "We are breaking the case, construction implies force. State v. Stuart, 316 Mo. 150, 289 S.W. 576, 577; McFarland v. Commonwealth, 227 Ky. 411, 13 S.W.2d 277, 278. The slightest force is sufficient, as the lifting or opening of a latch. Dennis v. State, 71 Tex.Cr. 162, 158 S.W. 1008, 1010; State v. Gendusa, 193 La. 59, 190 So. 332, 339; or the raising of a window, Hollis v. State, 69 Tex.Cr.R. 286, 153 S.W. 853, 854; State v. Chappell, 185 S.C. 111, 193 S.E. 924, 925; or the opening of a door, State v. Lapoint, 87 Vt. 115, 88 A. 523, 47 L.R.A. N.S., 717; Gibson v. Commonwealth, 204 Ky. 704, 265 S.W. 339, 345; Yearygin v. State, 54 Okl.Cr. 34, 14 P.2d 431, 432; Kidd v. Commonwealth, 273 Ky. 300, 116 S.W.2d 636, 638; or the opening of an unfastened transom. State v. Chappell, 185 S.C. 111, 193 S.E. 924; or entry with a key or by manipulating hasp from outside, McGilvery v. State, 111 Tex.Cr.R. 256, 12 S.W.2d 585; or turning of knob of door, State v. Edell, 7 W.W.Harr. Del., 404, 183 A. 630. But entry by open door, window, or other opening does not constitute 'breaking', George v. State, 183 Miss. 327, 184 So. 67, 68. Breaking lock securing pump handle on gasoline tank releasing handle is sufficient "breaking". Chaney v. State, 25 Ala.App. 141, 142 So. 103.

As an element of the crime of burglary breaking may be either actual or constructive. Davis v. Commonwealth, 132 Va. 521, 110 S.E. 356. Entering a building by a channery is a constructive breaking. State v. Hart, 94 S.C. 214, 77 S.E. 862.

BREAKING A CASE. The expression by the judges of a court, to one another, of their views of a case, in order to ascertain how far they are agreed, and as preliminary to the formal delivery of their opinions. "We are breaking the case, that we may show what is in doubt with any of us." Holt, C. J., addressing Dolbin, J., 1 Show. 423.

Wrongdoer need only set in motion some dangerous agency which in itself, though quite distant from wrongdoer, inflicts wrong. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Bush, 191 Ark. 1085, 89 S.W.2d 723, 725, 103 A.L.R. 367.

some larger document, or of a series of papers, facts and circumstances, or propositions.

In American practice. A written or printed document, prepared by counsel to serve as the basis for an argument upon a cause in an appellate court, and usually filed for the information of the court. It embodies the points of law which the counsel desires to establish, together with the arguments and authorities upon which he rests his contention. A brief, within a rule of court requiring counsel to furnish briefs, before argument, implies some kind of statement of the case for the information of the court.
Gardner v. Stover, 43 Ind. 356. A "brief" is the vehicle of BRIS. In French maritime law. Literally, breaking; wreck. Distinguished from naufrage, (q. v.).

BRISTOL BARGAIN. In English law. A contract by which A. lends B. £1,000 on good security, and it is agreed that £500, together with interest, shall be paid at a time stated; and, as to the other £500, that B., in consideration thereof, shall pay to A. £100 per annum for seven years. Wharton.

BRITISH COLUMBIA. The territory on the north-west coast of North America, once known by the designation of "New Caledonia." Its government is provided for by 21 & 22 Vict. c. 99. Vancouver Island is united to it by the 29 & 30 Vict. c. 67. See 33 & 34 Vict. c. 66.

BROAD INTERPRETATION. That interpretation of Constitution or statute which, brushing aside minor objections and trivial technicalities, effectuates intent of act. In re Senate Resolution No. 2 Concerning Constitutionality of House Bill No. 6, 94 Colo. 101, 31 P.2d 325, 332.

BROCAGE. The wages, commission, or pay of a broker (also called "brokerage"). Also the avocation or business of a broker.

BROCARIUS, BROCATOR. In old English law. A broker; a middleman between buyer and seller; the agent of both transacting parties. Bell; Cowell.

BROCELLA. In old English law. A wood, a thicket or covert of bushes and brushwood. Cowell; Blount.

BROKEN STOWAGE. In maritime law. That space in a ship which is not filled by her cargo.

A voyage is called a "broker" where no fish are caught on a fishing voyage or from some other reason there are no proceeds from a fish auction. The Dirigo First, D.C.Mass., 60 F.Supp. 675.

For distinction between "commission merchant" and "broker," see Commission Merchant. For "Factor" and "broker" as synonymous or distinguishable, see Factor.

Ordinarily, the term is applied to one acting for others but is applicable to one in business of negotiating purchases or sales for himself. McCormick & Co., Bankers, v. Tolmie Bros., 42 Idaho 1, 243 P. 355, 358; Johnson v. Winslow, 155 Misc. 170, 279 N.Y.S. 147.

A "broker" is an agent with special and limited authority. Stephenson v. Golden, 279 Mich. 710, 276 N.W. 849, 858; Portsmouth Cotton Oil Refining Corp. v. Madrid Cotton Oil Co., 200 Ala. 634, 77 So. 8, 9. A middleman, as distinguished from a broker, is employed merely to bring the parties together when each desires to exchange his property for that of the other, or where one desires to sell and the other to purchase and his services are not rendered as the agent of either party; but a "broker" is the agent of a party, employed to procure a customer or to effect the sale or exchange. Tracey v. Blake, 229 Mass. 57, 118 N.E. 271, 272.

Brokers are of many kinds, the most important being enumerated and defined as follows:

Exchange Broker

See Exchange Broker.

Merchandise Brokers

Buyers and sellers of goods and negotiators between buyer and seller, but without having the custody of the property.

Money-Broker

A money-changer; a scrivener or jobber; one who lends or raises money to or for others.

Note Brokers

Negotiators of the discount or sale of commercial paper.
BROKER

Pawnbrokers
Lenders of money on goods deposited with them in pledge, taking high rates of interest.

Real Estate Brokers
Persons who procure the purchase or sale of land, acting as intermediary between vendor and purchaser, and who negotiate loans on real-estate security, manage and lease estates, etc. Latta v. Kilbourn, 150 U.S. 524, 14 S.Ct. 201, 37 L.Ed. 169; Abraham v. Wasaff, 111 Okl. 138, 239 P. 138, 140.

Ship-Brokers
Who transact business between the owners of ships and freighters or charterers, and negotiate the sale of vessels.

Stock. Brokers
Brokers employed to buy and sell for their principals stocks, bonds, government securities, etc. The term "broker" applies as well to a broker on the Board of Trade as to one on the Stock Exchange. Cutler v. Pardridge, 182 Ill.App. 350, 358.

BROKERAGE. The wages or commissions of a broker; also, his business or occupation.

BROKERAGE CONTRACT. A contract of agency, whereby broker is employed to make contracts of kind agreed upon in name and on behalf of his principal, and for which he is paid an agreed commission. A unilateral contract wherein the principal makes an offer which is interpreted as promise to pay broker a commission in consideration of his producing a buyer ready, able, and willing to buy the property on the principal's terms. In re Cowan's Estate, Sur., 13 N.Y.S. 2d 374, 376.

BROSSUS. Bruised, or injured with blows, wounds, or other casualty. Cowell.

BROTHER. One person is a brother "of the whole blood" to another, the former being a male, when both are born from the same father and mother. He is a brother "of the half blood" to that other (or half-brother) when the two are born to the same father by different mothers or by the same mother to different fathers.

In the civil law, the following distinctions are observed: Two brothers who descend from the same father, but by different mothers, are called "consanguine" brothers. If they have the same mother, but are begotten by different fathers, they are called "uterine" brothers. If they have both the same father and mother, they are denominated brothers "germane."

BROTHER-IN-LAW. A wife's brother or a sister's husband. There is not any relationship, but only affinity, between brothers-in-law. Farmers' L. & T. Co. v. Iowa Water Co., C.C., 80 Fed. 46g. See State v. Foster, 112 La. 533, 36 So. 554. Two men are not brothers-in-law from the circumstance merely of having married sisters. Cruse v. State, 87 Fla. 406, 100 So. 264, 265.

BROTHERHOOD AND GUESTLING, COURT OF. The Brotherhood was a conference of seven towns (i.e., the Cinque Ports and two other ancient towns) as to the provision of the necessary ships and as to arranging for the herring sale at Yarmouth, and for other such purposes. The Guestling was rather a wider meeting, at which not merely the Brotherhood, but deputes from other associated towns were present for the discussion of subjects of common interest to all.

A proceeding is not "brought" as regards defendant until process has been issued from an appropriate court in good faith intending or making an effort to serve it. City of Revere v. Special Judge of Dist. Court of Chelsea, 262 Mass. 393, 160 N.F. 431, 433. A writ of error is not "brought" until it is filed or lodged in the court, or with the clerk of the court, which rendered the judgment. U. S. v. Shaffer, D.C.Wash., 278 F. 549, 531.

BROUGHT IN QUESTION UPON THE RECORD. The constitutionality of an act is "brought in question upon the record" when it is clearly questioned by the allegation of any pleading, or by any other formal objection filed in the case. Brosco v. Frost, 63 R.I. 1, 6 A.2d 705, 706.

BROUGHT TO ATTENTION OF. Equivalent to the expression "made known to." State v. Sullivan, 159 La. 589, 105 So. 631, 636.

BROUGHT TO TRIAL. An action is not brought to trial until the trial is commenced. Miller & Lux v. Superior Court of California in and for Merced County, 192 Cal. 333, 219 P. 1006, 1009.

BROWN DECREE. A decree which terminates marriage without specifying in whose favor issue as to grounds for divorce was decided. Spector v. Spector, 382 P.2d 659, 666, 94 Ariz. 175.

BRUARIUM. In old English law. A heath ground; ground where heath grows. Spelman.

BRUGBOTE. See Brigbote.

Veal, 10 Ind. 356, 71 Am.Dec. 331; Com. v. J., 21 Pa.Co.Ct.R. 626. This term is often used interchangeably with " sodomy"; but even when so used, it does not necessarily include the act called "fellatio" or " fellation." State v. Murry, 136 La. 253, 66 So. 963, 964.

See Sodomy.

BUILD. To construct and raise anew. Attorney General ex rel. Gibson v. Board of Sup'rs of Montcarm County, 141 Mich. 590, 104 N.W. 792, 794.

To form by uniting materials into a regular structure. United States v. Blair, C.C.N.Y., 190 F. 372, 374. The term may also be employed in the sense of obtain, secure, or acquire. Verner v. Muller, 89 S.C. 545, 72 S.E. 393.

"Build" is not synonymous with amend, repair, or maintain. State v. White, 16 R.I. 591, 18 A. 179; Hutchinson v. City of Olympia, 2 Wash.T. 314, 5 P. 606, 608. But it has been held that a grant of power to build a railroad, or a requirement that certain persons shall build bridges, may include the power or duty of maintenance or repair. Central R. Co. v. Collins, 40 Ga. 582, 624; Franklin County Com'rs v. White Water Valley Canal Co., 2 Ind. 162, 163.

"Erecting" as synonym. Board of Com'rs of Guadalupe County v. State, 43 N.M. 409, 94 P.2d 515, 516, 520; "premises" as synonym. Everett v. Patrons' & Farmers' Mut. Fire Ins. Co. of Jackson County, 222 Mo.App. 1010, 7 S.W.2d 463, 468.

A ship as building within gambling statute. People v. Chase, 117 Cal.App.Sup. 775, 1 P.2d 60, 61.

BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATION. An organization for the purpose of accumulating a fund by subscriptions and savings of its members to assist them in building or purchasing for themselves dwellings or real estate by the loan to them of the requisite money. McCauley v. Association, 97 Tenn., 13 Pickle, 421, 37 S.W. 212, 213, 35 L.R.A. 24; Rhodes v. Missouri Savings & Loan Co., 173 Ill. 621, 50 N.E. 998, 1000, 43 L.R.A. 93. A juristic person organized by government to accomplish certain ends, which may be public or quasi public. Hopkins Federal Savings & Loan Ass'n v. Cleary, Wis., 396 U.S. 315, 56 S.Ct. 235, 80 L.Ed. 251, 100 L.R.A. 1403. Quasi public corporations chartered to encourage thrift and promote ownership of homes. Hopkins Federal Savings & Loan Ass'n v. Cleary, Wis., 296 U.S. 315, 56 S.Ct. 235, 237, 241, 80 L.Ed. 251, 100 A.L.R. 1403.

A private corporation designed for the purpose of accumulating its treasury, by means of the gradual payment by its members of their stock subscriptions in periodic installments, a fund to be invested from time to time in advances made to such shareholders on their stock as may apply for this privilege on approved security, the borrowing members paying interest and a premium for this preference in securing an advancement over other members, and continuing to pay the regular installments on their stock in addition, all of which funds, together with payments made by the nonborrowing members, including fines, forfeitures, and other like revenues, go into the common fund until it, with the profits thereon, aggregates the face value of all the shares in the association, the legal effect of which is to extinguish the liability incurred for the loans and advancements, and to distribute to each nonborrowing member the par value of his stock. Washington Nat. Building, Loan & Investment Ass'n v. Stanley, 38 Or. 319, 63 P. 489, 492, 84 Am.St.Rep. 793. See, also, Wilkinson v. Mutual Bldg. & Sav'rs, Ass'n, C.C.A. Wis., 13 F.2d 997, 998.

BUILDING IS COVERED. The words ordinarily mean that the property shall be insured in the standard form of insurance from that instant for a reasonable time until either the policy or policies can be written out, or their issuance approved or disapproved or some other temporary impediment to the complete formal contract of insurance can be removed. Shumway v. Home Fire & Marine Ins. Co. of California, 301 Mass. 391, 17 N.E.2d 212, 214.

BUILDING LEASE. A lease of land for a long term of years, usually 99, at a rent called a "ground rent," the lessee covenanting to erect certain edifices thereon according to specification, and to maintain the same, etc., during the term.

BUILDING LINE. A line established by municipal authority, to secure uniformity of appearance in the streets of the city, drawn a certain uniform distance from the curb or from the edge of the sidewalk, and parallel thereto, upon which the fronts of all buildings on that street must be placed, or beyond which they are not allowed to project. See Tear v. Freebody, 4 C.B.,N.S., 263.

As used in a city charter authorizing the establishment of a "building line" along boulevards, the term means a mark of division or demarkation; an outline or contour; a limit or boundary; not a straight line. City of St. Louis v. Handlan, 242 Mo. 88, 145 S.W. 421, 422, 423. As to the meaning of the term in town and city plats, see Simpson v. Mikkelsen, 196 Ill. 575, 63 N.E. 1036, 1037.

BUILDING LOAN AGREEMENT. An agreement by which one undertakes to advance to another BUILDING PERMIT. A permit to erect a building. Commissioners of Easton v. Covey, 74 Md. 262, 22 A. 266; Commonwealth v. Devlin, 305 Pa. 440, 158 A. 161, 163.

BUILDING SITE. As used in contract, for filling of the "building site" to grade, term contemplated the entire lot. Myevre v. Liberty Realty & Securities Co., 156 La. 496, 100 So. 694, 696.

BUILDING SOCIETY. An association in which the subscriptions of the members form a capital stock or fund out of which advances may be made to members desiring them, on mortgage security.

BUL. In the ancient Hebrew chronology, the eighth month of the ecclesiastical, and the second of the civil year. It has since been called "Marsh-evan," and answers to our October.

BULL. In ecclesiastical law. An instrument granted by the pope of Rome, and sealed with a seal of lead, containing some decree, commandment, or other public act, emanating from the pontiff. Bull, in this sense, corresponds with edict or letters patent from other governments. Cowell; 4 Bl.Comm. 110; 4 Steph.Comm. 177, 179.

BULL PEN. A certain place of confinement at a penitentiary. State v. Kelley, 118 Or. 397, 247 P. 146, 148.

BULLA. A seal used by the Roman emperors, during the lower empire; it was of four kinds,—gold, silver, wax, and lead.

BULLET. Synonymous with "shot," meaning a projectile, particularly a solid ball or bullet that is not intended to fit the bore of a piece. Green v. Commonwealth, 122 Va. 862, 94 S.E. 940, 941.

BULDOZER. A blade, the arms of which are fastened to a tractor and hold the blade in front of the tractor. Eldredge v. Sargent, 150 Kan. 824, 96 P.2d 870, 871.

BULL PEN. A certain place of confinement at a penitentiary. State v. Kelley, 118 Or. 397, 247 P. 146, 148.

BULLA. A seal used by the Roman emperors, during the lower empire; it was of four kinds,—gold, silver, wax, and lead.

BULLET. Synonymous with "shot," meaning a projectile, particularly a solid ball or bullet that is not intended to fit the bore of a piece. Green v. Commonwealth, 122 Va. 862, 94 S.E. 940, 941.

BULLETIN. An officially published notice or announcement concerning the progress of matters of public importance. In France, the registry of the laws.

BULLETIN DES LOIS. In France, the official sheet which publishes the laws and decrees; this publication constitutes the promulgation of the law or decree.

BULLION. Gold and silver intended to be coined.

The term is usually applied to a quantity of these metals ready for the mint, but as yet lying in bars, plates, lumps, or other masses; but it may also include ornaments or dishes of gold and silver, or foreign coins not current as money, when intended to be descriptive of its adaptability to be coined, and not of other purposes to which it may be put. Thalheim v. State, 38 Fla. 169, 20 So. 938. The term may import money. Emery Bird Thayer Dry Goods Co. v. Williams, C.C.A.Mo., 98 F.2d 166, 171.

BULLION FUND. A fund of public money maintained in connection with the mints, for the purpose of purchasing precious metals for coinage, and also of enabling the mint to make returns of coins to private depositors of bullion without waiting until such bullion is actually coined.
BUM-BAILIFF. A person employed to dun one for a debt; a bailiff employed to arrest a debtor. Probably a vulgar corruption of "bound-bailiff" (q. v.).

BUNCO GAME. Any trick, artifice, or cunning calculated to win confidence and to deceive, whether by conversation, conduct, or suggestion. State v. Ferrato, 72 Wash. 112, 129 P. 898, 899.

BUNDA. In old English law. A bound, boundary, border, or limit (terminus, times).

BUNDLE, v. To sleep on the same bed without undressing; applied to the custom of a man and woman, especially lovers, thus sleeping. A. & E. Ency. This custom is adverted to in Seagar v. Sligerland, 2 Caines, N.Y., 219, and Hollis v. Wells, 3 Clark, Pa., 169.

BUOY. In maritime law. A piece of wood or cork, or a barrel, raft, or other thing, made secure and floating upon a stream or bay, intended as a guide and warning to mariners, by marking a spot where the water is shallow, or where there is a reef or other danger to navigation, or to mark the course of a devious channel. Buoys are regulated by federal legislation; see 14 U.S.C.A. § 87.

BURDEN. A burden, as on interstate commerce, means anything that imposes either a restrictive or onerous load upon such commerce. State of Missouri v. Kansas Natural Gas Co., D.C.Mo., 282 F. 341, 345.

Where the Railroad Commission ordered construction of a viaduct carrying a street over railroad tracks, construction and operation of street car tracks on the viaduct was not an "additional burden," and did not entitle abutting owners to damages. In eminent domain or condemnation proceedings see In re Ely Ave. in City of New York, 88 Misc. 320, 150 N.Y.S. 698, 701.

The term "burden of proof" is not to be confused with "prima facie Case," Kendall v. Brownson, 47 N.H. 200; Carver v. Carver, 97 Ind. 511, or with expressions referring to a similar idea, such as the "burden of evidence," Hyer v. C. E. Holmes & Co., 12 Ga.App. 837, 79 S.E. 58, 60, or "the burden of proceeding," Mason v. Geist, Mo.App., 263 S.W. 236, 237, or "the burden of going forward with the evidence," First Nat. Bank v. Ford, 30 Wyo. 110, 216 F. 691, 694, 31 A.L.R. 1441.

It is frequently said, however, to have two distinct meanings: (1) the duty of producing evidence as the case progresses, and (2) the duty to establish the truth of the claim by preponderance of the evidence, and though the former may pass from party to party, the latter rests throughout upon the party asserting the affirmative of the issue. Sellers v. Kincaid, 303 Ill. 216, 135 N.E. 429, 433; Stofer v. Dunham, Mo.App., 208 S.W. 641, 644.

Again "burden of proof" is sometimes used to refer merely to the rule of practice fixing the order of proof, as distinguished from the "preponderance of the evidence" meaning the weight of evidence. Thompson v. Dyson, 120 Kan. 591, 244 P. 867, 868.

BUREAU. An office for the transaction of business. A name given to the several departments of the executive or administrative branch of government, or their divisions. In re Strawbridge, 39 Ala. 375; In re McLaughlin, 124 Misc. 766, 210 N.Y.S. 68, 72.

As applied to a division of an administrative department, the term may include the operating force. People v. Coffin, 202 Ill. App. 100.

BUREAUCRACY. A system in which the business of government is carried on in departments, each under the control of a chief, in contradistinction from a system in which the officers of government have a co-ordinate authority.

BURGAGE. A name anciently given to a dwelling-house in a borough town. Blount.

BURGAGE-HOLDING. A tenure by which lands in royal boroughs in Scotland were held of the sovereign. The service was watching and warding, and was done by the burgesses within the territory of the borough, whether expressed in the charter or not.

BURGAGE-tenure. In English law. One of the three species of free socage holdings; a tenure whereby houses and lands which were formerly the site of houses, in an ancient borough, are held of some lord by a certain rent. There are a great many customs affecting these tenures, the most remarkable of which is the custom of Borough English. See Litt. § 162; 2 BLComm. 82.

BURGATOR. One who breaks into houses or inclosed places, as distinguished from one who committed robbery in the open country. Spelman.

BURGBOTE. In old English law. A term applied to a contribution towards the repair of castles or walls of defense, or of a borough.

BURGENSES. In old English law. Inhabitants of a burgus or borough; burgesses. Fleta, lib. 5, c. 6, § 10.

BURGERISTH. A word used in Domesday, signifying a breach of the peace in a town. Jacob.

BURGESS. In English law. An inhabitant or freeman of a borough or town; a person duly and legally admitted a member of a municipal corporation. Spelman; 3 Steph.Comm. 188, 189. A magistrate of a borough. Blount. An elector or voter; a person legally qualified to vote at elections. The word in this sense is particularly defined by the statute 5 & 6 Wm. IV. c. 76, §§ 9, 13. 3 Steph.Comm. 192. A representative of a borough or town, in parliament. Co.Litt. 109a; 1 Bl.Comm. 174.

In American law. The chief executive officer of a borough, bearing the same relation to its government and affairs that the mayor does to those of a city; so used in Pennsylvania. In Connecticut boroughs the board of burgesses corresponds to the township board or board of trustees in some other states, or to the common council of a city. Cent. Dict.

BUTTS. In old English law. Short pieces of land left unplowed at the ends of fields, where the plow was turned about (otherwise called “headlands”) as sidelings were similarly unplowed pieces on the sides. Burrill; Cowell. Also a place where bowmen meet to shoot at a mark.

BUTTS AND BOUNDS. A phrase used in conveyancing, to describe the end lines or circumscribing lines of a certain piece of land. The phrase “metes and bounds” has the same meaning. The angles or points where these lines change their direction. Cowell; Spelman, Gloss. See Abuttals.

BUTTY. A local term in the north of England, for the associate or deputy of another; also of things used in common.

BUY. To acquire the ownership of property by giving an accepted price or consideration therefor; or by agreeing to do so; to acquire by the payment of a price or value; to purchase. Webster. To obtain something for a price, usually money. In re Troy, 43 R.I. 279, 111 A. 723, 724. As applied to prohibition law, means to possess. Slaughter v. State, 23 Ala.App. 390, 128 So. 129.

BUY IN. To purchase, at public sale, property which is one’s own or which one has caused or procured to be sold.

BUYER. One who buys; a purchaser, particularly of chattels.

BUYER 60 CONTRACT. A contract wherein purchaser not wishing to pay for stock purchased outright buys it at a price in excess of the market and is allowed 60 days’ time to pay for stock. Herrlein v. Tocchini, 128 Cal.App. 612, 18 P.2d 73, 75.

BUYING LONG. Purchase of stocks now with the expectation of selling them for a profit in the future. Henderson v. Usher, 125 Fla. 709, 170 So. 846, 851.

BUYING TITLES. The purchase of the rights or claims to real estate of a person who is not in possession of the land or is disseised. Void, and an offense, at common law and by 32 Hen. VIII, c. 9. This rule has been generally adopted in the United States, and is affirmed by statute in some states; 3 Washb.R.P. *596. Hinman v. Hinman, 4 Conn. 575; Helms v. May, 29 Ga. 124; Wash v. McBrayer, 1 Dana, Ky., 566; Bush v. Cooper, 26 Miss. 599, 59 Am.Dec. 270. But in other states, such a purchase is valid. Fetrow v. Merriwether, 53 Ill. 279; Hall’s Lessee v. Ashby, 9 Ohio, 96, 34 Am. Dec. 424.

See, also, Bracery.

BY AN ACQUITTANCE FOR THE LAST PAYMENT ALL OTHER ARREARAGES ARE DISCHARGED. Noy, 40.

BY-BIDDER. One employed by the seller or his agent to bid on property with no purpose to become a purchaser, so that bidding thereon may be stimulated in others who are bidding in good faith. Osborn v. Apperson Lodge, Free and Accepted Masons, No. 195, of Louisa, Ky., 213 Ky. 533, 281 S.W. 500, 502, 46 A.L.R. 117.

BY-BIDDING. See Bid.

BY BILL, BY BILL WITHOUT WRIT. In practice. Terms anciently used to designate actions commenced by original bill, as distinguished from those commenced by original writ, and applied in modern practice to suits commenced by capias ad respondendum. 1 Arch.Pr. pp. 2, 337; 3 Bla. Comm. 285, 286. See Harkness v. Harkness, 5 Hill, N.Y., 213. The usual course of commencing an action in the King’s Bench was by a bill of Middlesex. In an action commenced by bill it is not necessary to notice the form or nature of the action. 1 Chit.Pl. 283.

BY COLOR OF OFFICE. Acts done “by color of office” are where they are of such a nature that office gives no authority to do them. State v. National Surety Co., 162 Tenn. 547, 39 S.W.2d 581, 583.

BY ESTIMATION. In conveyancing. A term used to indicate that the quantity of land as stated is estimated only, not exactly measured; it has the the same meaning and effect as the phrase "more or less." Hays v. Hays, 126 Ind. 92, 25 N.E. 600, 11 L.R.A. 376. It is said that the meaning of these words has never been precisely ascertained by judicial decision. See Sugden, Vend. 231; Noble v. Googins, 99 Mass. 234.

BY GOD AND MY COUNTRY. In old English criminal practice. The established formula of reply by a prisoner, when arraigned at the bar, to the question, "Culprit, how wilt thou be tried?"

BY-LAW MEN. In English law. The chief men of a town, representing the inhabitants. In an ancient deed, certain parties are described as "yeomen and by-law men." 6 Q.B. 60. They appear to have been men appointed for some purpose of limited authority by the other inhabitants, under by-laws of the corporation appointing.

BY-LAWS. Regulations, ordinances, rules or laws adopted by an association or corporation or the like for its government. The word has also been used to designate the local laws or municipal statutes of a city or town. See Kilgour v. Gratto, 224 Mass. 78, 112 N.E. 489, 490. But of late the tendency is to employ the word "ordinance" exclusively for this class of enactments, reserving "by-law" for the rules adopted by private corporations.

In England the term by-law includes any order, rule or regulation made by any local authority or statutory corporation subordinate to Parliament; 1 Odgers, C.L. 91.

BY OPERATION OF LAW. Effected by some positive legal rule or amendment. Terminals & Transportation Corporation v. State, 169 Misc. 703, 8 N.Y.S.2d 282, 284.

BY-PASSING. As used in a contract for the construction of a subway, requiring the by-passing of all gas pipes whose service cannot be temporarily dispensed with, "by-passing" means the temporary cutting out of the gas mains under the street and laying of substituted temporary overhead gas pipes until all danger in using the original pipes is passed. Degnon Contracting Co. v. City of New York, 202 App.Div. 390, 196 N.Y.S. 63, 64.

BY THE BY (also Bye). Incidentally; without new process. A term used in former English practice to denote the method of filing a declaration against a defendant who was already in the custody of the court at the suit of a different plaintiff or of the same plaintiff in another cause. It is no longer allowed; Archbold, New Pr. 293.

BYE-BIL-WUFFA. In Hindu law. A deed of mortgage or conditional sale.

BYRLAWS. See Burlaws.

BYROAD. The statute law of New Jersey recognizes three different kinds of roads: A public road, a private road, and a byroad. A byroad is a road used by the inhabitants, and recognized by statute, but not laid out. Such roads are often called "driftways." They are roads of necessity in newly-settled countries. Van Blarcom v. Frike, 29 N.J.Law, 516. See, also, Stevens v. Allen, 29 N.Y.Law, 68. An obscure or neighborhood road in its earlier existence, not used to any great extent by the public, yet so far a public road that the public have of right free access to it at all times. Wood v. Hurd, 34 N.J.Law, 89.

Under statutes relating to summoning of bystanders to complete jury panel, "bystanders" may be held to mean qualified talemen summoned by sheriff from county at large. Commonwealth v. Sacco, 255 Mass. 369, 151 N.E. 839, 847. The term means qualified electors, not necessarily persons present in court. Bennett v. State, 161 Ark. 496, 257 S.W. 372, 373.

Under statutes authorizing "bystanders" to certify bill of exceptions, parties to the suit and their attorneys, Walker v. State, 88 Tex.Cr.R. 389, 227 S.W. 308, 312; and also witnesses in the case, McConnell v. McCord, 170 Ark. 839, 281 S.W. 384, as well as persons not present at the trial, are not bystanders, Buck v. St. Louis Union Trust Co., 267 Mo. 644, 185 S.W. 208, 211. Though jurors are not "bystanders" in the ordinary meaning of that term, they can sign a bystanders' bill of exceptions to acts and comments by the court and the argument of attorneys thereon. Alamo Iron Works v. Prado, Tex.Civ.App., 220 S.W. 282, 29L.

Special Calendar
A calendar or list of causes, containing those set down specially for hearing, trial, or argument.

CALENDS. Among the Romans the first day of every month, being spoken of by itself, or the very day of the new moon, which usually happen together. And if pridie, the day before, he added to it, then it is the last day of the foregoing month, as pridie calend. Septemb. is the last day of August. If any number be placed with it, it signifies that day in the former month which comes so much before the month named, as the tenth calend of October is the 20th day of September; for if one reckons backwards, beginning at October, that 20th day of September makes the 10th day before October. In March, May, July, and October, the calends begin at the sixteenth day, but in other months at the fourteenth; which calend must ever bear the name of the month following, and be numbered backwards from the first day of the said following months. Jacob. See Rives v. Guthrie, 46 N.C. 87.

CALUMNIZE JURAMENTUM. In the old canon law. An oath similar to the calumnice jusjurandum, (q. v.).

CALUMNIZE JUSJURAND1UM. The oath of (against) calumny. An oath imposed upon the parties to a suit that they did not sue or defend with the intention of calumniating, (calumniand e), with a malicious design, but from a firm belief that they had a good cause. Inst. 4, 16. The object was to prevent vexatious and unnecessary suits. It was especially used in divorce cases, though of little practical utility; Bish. Marr. & Div. § 353; 2 Bish.Marr.Div. & Sep. § 264. A somewhat similar provision is to be found in the requirement made in some states that the defendant shall file an affidavit of merits.

CALUMNIATOR. In the civil law. One who accused another of a crime without cause; one who brought a false accusation. Cod. 9, 46.

CALUMNY. Defamation; slander; false accusation of a crime or offense. See Calumnia.

CALVIN'S CASE. Calvin v. Smith, 7 Rep. 1; 2 S.T. 559, decided in 1608, in which it was held that persons born in Scotland after the accession of James I to the crown of England in 1603 were not aliens but were capable of inheriting land in England. Wharton.

CALVO DOCTRINE. The doctrine stated by the Argentine jurist, Carlos Calvo, that a government is not bound to indemnify aliens for losses or injuries sustained by them in consequence of domestic disturbances or civil war, where the state is not at fault, and that therefore foreign states are not justified in intervening, by force or otherwise, to secure the settlement of claims of their citizens on account of such losses or injuries. Such intervention, Calvo says, is not in accordance with the practice of European States towards one another, and is contrary to the principle of state sovereignty. 3 Calvo §§ 1280, 1297. The Calvo Doctrine is to be distinguished from the Drago Doctrine (q. v.).

See 18 Green Bag 377.

Canon law. A body of ecclesiastical jurisprudence. In England, according to Blackstone, there is a kind of national canon law. 1 Bl. Comm. 82. The canon law is contained in two principal parts,—the decrees or ecclesiastical constitutions made by the popes and cardinals; and the decretals or canonical epistles written by the pope, or by the pope and cardinals, at the suit of one or more persons. As the decrees set out the origin of the canon law, and the rights, dignities, and decrees of ecclesiastical persons, with their manner of election, ordination, etc., so the decretals contain the law to be used in the ecclesiastical courts. Jacob. The canon law forms no part of the law of England, unless it has been brought into use and acted on there; 11 Q.B. 649. See generally Encyel.Br., sub voce, Canon Law; Maitland, Canon Law; Jenks’ Teutonic Law; 1 Sel. Essays on Anglo-Amer.Leg.Hist. 46; Ayliffe, Par.Jur.Can. CAPERS. Vessels of war owned by private persons, and different from ordinary privateers only in size, being smaller. Beawes, Lex Mere. 230.

CAPIAS. Lat. "That you take." The general name for several species of writs, the common characteristic of which is that they require the officer to take the body of the defendant into custody; they are writs of attachment or arrest.

In English practice, the process on an indictment when the person charged is not in custody, and in cases not otherwise provided for by statute. 4 Steph.Comm. 383.

Capias Ad Audiendum Judicium

A writ issued, in a given town, city, or county, goes from house to house in an effort to take orders for goods; in this sense, to be distinguished from traveling salesmen. City of El Dorado Springs v. Highfill, 268 Mo. 501, 188 S.W. 68.
CAPIAS

Capias Ad Computandum
In the action of account render, after judgment of quod computet, if the defendant refuses to appear personally before the auditors and make his account, a writ by this name may issue to compel him. The writ is now disused. See Thesaurus Brevium, 38; Coke, Entries, 46, 47, Rastell, Entries, 14 b. 15.

Capias Ad Respondendum
A judicial writ, (usually simply termed a "capias," and commonly abbreviated to ca. resp.) by which actions at law were frequently commenced; and which commands the sheriff to take the defendant, and him safely keep, so that he may have his body before the court on a certain day, to answer the plaintiff in the action. 3 Bl.Comm. 282; 1 Tidd, Pr. 128. It notifies defendant to defend suit and procures his arrest until security for plaintiff's claim is furnished. Null v. Staiger, 333 Pa. 370, 4 A.2d 883, 885.

Capias Ad Satisfaciendum
A writ of execution, (usually termed, for brevity, a "ca. sa.,") which commands the sheriff to take the party named, and keep him safely, so that he may have his body before the court on a certain day, to satisfy the damages or debt and damages in certain actions. It deprives the party taken of his liberty until he makes the satisfaction awarded. 3 Bl.Comm. 414, 415; 2 Tidd, Pr. 993, 1025; Litt. § 504; Co.Litt. 289a; Strong v. Linn, 5 N.J.Law, 803. As 'a rule it lay in all cases where a capias ad respondendum lay. It was a very common form of execution; but its efficiency has been destroyed by statutes.

Capias Extendi Facias
A writ of execution issuable in England against a debtor to the crown, which commands the sheriff to take "arrest the body, and "cause to be extended" the lands and goods of the debtor. Man.Exch.Pr. 5.

Capias in Withernam
A writ, in the nature of a reprisal, which lies for one whose goods or cattle, taken under a distress, are removed from the county, so that they cannot be repleved, commanding the sheriff to seize other goods or cattle of the distrainor of equal value.

Capias Pro Fine
(That you take for the fine or in mercy.) Formerly, if the verdict was for the defendant, the plaintiff was adjudged to be amerced for his false claim; but, if the verdict was for the plaintiff, then in all actions vi et armis, or where the defendant, in his pleading, had falsely denied his own deed, the judgment contained an award of a capiatur pro fine; and in all other cases the defendant was adjudged to be anerced. The insertion of the misericordia or of the capiatur in the judgment is now unnecessary. Wharton; 8 Coke, 60; 11 Coke, 43; Co.Litt. 131; 3 Bl.Comm. 398; 5 Mod. 285. A writ in all respects an execution for collection of fine. Board of Councilmen of City of Frankfort v. Rice, 249 Ky. 771, 61 S.W.2d 614, 615.

Capias Utlagatum
(You take the outlaw.) In English practice. A writ which lies against a person who has been outlawed in an action, by which the sheriff is commanded to take him, and keep him in custody until the day of the return, and then present him to the court, there to be dealt with for his contempt. Reg.Orig. 138b; 3 Bl.Comm. 284.

CAPIATUR PRO FINE. (Let him be taken for the fine.) In English practice. A clause inserted at the end of old judgment records in actions of debt, where the defendant denied his deed, and it was found against him upon his false plea, and the jury were troubled with the trial of it. Cro. Jac. 64. See Capias pro Fine.

CAPITA. Heads, and, figuratively, entire bodies, whether of persons or animals. Spelman.

Persons individually considered, without relation to others, (polls :) as distinguished from stirpes or stocks of descent. The term in this sense, making part of the common phrases, in capita, per capita, is derived from the civil law. Inst. 3, 1, 6.

CAPITA, PER. By heads; by the poll; as individuals. In the distribution of an intestate's personalty, the persons legally entitled to take are said to take per capita, that is, equal shares, when they claim, each in his own right, as in equal degree of kindred; in contradistinction to claiming by right of representation, or per stirpes.

CAPITAL, n. The word may have different meanings when used in different connections. Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation v. Filoon, 310 Mass. 374, 38 N.E.2d 693, 699, 700, 705.

In re Green’s Estate, 109 Misc. 112, 178 N.Y.S. 353, 361.

CAPITALIZATION METHOD. A method of measuring values of realty for purpose of determining values of mortgages by expertly estimating the gross income which property should throw off, and separately the expenses reasonably required to carry it, and thus arriving at a fair estimate of net income and using a capitalization figure or factor, expertly chosen. Depreciation must be taken into consideration in use of such method. In re New York Title & Mortgage Co. (Series B-K), 21 N.Y.S.2d 575, 594, 595.

CAPITANEOUS. A tenant in capite. He who held his land or title directly from the king himself. A captain; a naval commander. This latter use began A. D. 1264. Spelman, Gloss. Capitanus, Admiralius. A commander or ruler over others, either in civil, military, or ecclesiastical matters.

CAPITARE. In old law and surveys. To head, front, or abut; to touch at the head, or end.

CAPITATIM. Lat. By the head; by the poll; severally to each individual.

CAPITATION TAX. A poll tax. A tax or imposition upon the person. Leddy v. Bourbon, 12 Ind. App. 486, 40 N.E. 640; Hattiesburg Grocery Co. v. Robertson, 126 Miss. 34, 88 So. 4, 5, 25 A.L.R. 748. It is a very ancient kind of tribute, and answers to what the Latins called "tributum," by which taxes on persons are distinguished from taxes on merchandise, called "vectigalia." Wharton.

CAPITE. Lat. By the head.

Tenure in capite was an ancient feudal tenure, whereby a man held lands of the king immediately. It was of two sorts,—the one, principal and general, or of the king as the source of all tenure; the other, special and subaltern, or of a particular subject. It is now abolished. Jacob. As to distribution per capita, see Capita, per.

CAPITE MINUTUS. In the civil law. One who had suffered capitis diminutio, one who lost status or legal attributes. See Dig. 4, 5.

CAPITIS DIMINUATIO. In Roman law. A diminishing or abridgment of personality; a loss or curtailment of a man's status or aggregate of legal attributes and qualifications.

CAPITIS DIMINUATIO MAXIMA. The highest or most comprehensive loss of status. This occurred when a man's condition was changed from one of freedom to one of bondage, when he became a slave. It swept away with it all rights of citizenship and all family rights.

CAPITIS DIMINUATIO MEDIA. A lesser or most comprehensive degree of loss of status. This agreement between the commanding officers which subjects of the latter, residents in the territory of the former, were exempt from the laws of the places where they dwelt. 1 Kinglake, Invasion of Crimea 116.

The 'usages of the Franks' begin in what are known in international law as 'the capitulations,' granting rights of extraterritoriality to Christians residing or traveling in Mohammedan countries. * * * By these * * * capitulations a usage was established that Franks [a generic name for all participants in such privileges], being in Turkey, whether domiciled or temporarily, should be under the jurisdiction, civil and criminal, of their respective ministers and consuls." Dainese v. United States, 15 C.t.C1. 64.

CAPPA. In old records. A cap. Cappa honoris, the cap of honor. One of the solemnities or ceremonies of creating an earl or marquis.

CAPTAIN. A head-man; commander; commanding officer.

The captain of a war-vessel is the officer first in command. In the United States navy, the rank of "captain" is intermediate between that of "commander" and "commodore." The governor or controlling officer of a vessel in the merchant service is usually styled "captain" by the inferior officers and seamen, but in maritime business and admiralty law is perhaps more commonly designated as "master." In foreign jurisprudence his title is often that of "patron." In the United States army (and the militia) the captain is the commander of a company of soldiers, one of the divisions of a regiment. The term is also used to designate the commander of a squad of municipal police.

The "captain of the watch" on a vessel is a kind of foreman or overseer and is an officer within statutes regulating conduct of officers to seamen. U. S. v. Trice, D.C.Tenn., 30 Fed. 491.

CAPTATION. In French law. The act of one who succeeds in controlling the will of another, so as to become master of it; used in an invidious sense. Succession of Schlumbrecht, 138 La. 173, 70 So. 76, 79.

It was formerly applied to the first stage of the hypnotic or mesmeric trance.

CAPTATOR. A person who obtains a gift or legacy through artifice. See Captation.
CAPTIO. In old English law and practice. A taking or seizure; arrest; receiving; holding of property. In a stricter sense, captio and indorsements, and who were summoned and confining it, or absolute ownership by killing it.

CAPTION. In Practice. That part of a legal instrument, as a commission, indictment, etc., which shows where, when, and by what authority it is taken, found, or executed. U. S. v. Beebe, 2
Dak, 292, 11 N.W. 505.

When used with reference to an indictment, • caption signifies the style or preamble or commencement of the indictment; when used with reference to a commission, it signifies the certificate to which the commissioners' names are subscribed, declaring when and where it was executed. Brown. The caption is not a part of the indictment, Brown; Hudspeth, C.C.A.Kan., 103 F.2d 958, 959, but is the formal history of its finding, and is to be distinguished from the introductory portion. Harrington v. U. S., C.C.A.
Iowa, 267 F. 97, 100. Caption of indictment is entry of record showing when and where court is held, who presided, venire and indorsements, and who were summoned and sworn as grand jurors. Williams v. State, 20 Ala.App. 26, 100 So. 573, 574.

The caption of a pleading, deposition, or other paper connected with a case in court, is the heading or introductive clause which shows the names of the parties, name of the court, number of the case on the docket or calendar, etc. Quoted with approval in St. Louis Lightning Rod Co. v. Johnson, 18 Ga.App. 190, 89 S.E. 169, 170. The terms
"title" and "caption" are synonymous. Id. The caption of depositions should state the title of the cause, the names of the parties, and at whose instance the depositions are made; Knight v. Nichols, 34 Me. 208. See Waskern v. Diamond, 1 Hemp. 701, Fed.Cas.No.17,248. Generally, the title or caption is not part of the pleading, unless expressly made so by reference in the body thereof. Jackson v.
Ashon, 8 Pet. 148, 8 L.Ed. 898.

Also signifies a taking, seizure, or arrest of a person. 2
Salk. 498. The word in this sense is now obsolete in English law.

In Scotch law. Caption is an order to incarcerate a debtor who has disobeyed an order, given to him by what are called "letters of horning," to pay a debt or to perform some act enjoined thereby. Bell.

CAPTIVES. Prisoners of war. As in the goods of an enemy, so also in his person, a sort of qualified property may be acquired, by taking him a prisoner of war, at least till his ransom be paid. 2
Al.Comm. 402.

CAPTOR. In international law. One who takes or seizes property in time of war; one who takes the property of an enemy. In a stricter sense, one who takes a prize at sea. 2 Bl.Comm. 401;
1 Kent, Comm. 86, 96, 103. Consult Oakes v. U. S., 174 U.S. 778, 19 S.Ct. 864, 43 L.Ed. 1169. The term also designates a belligerent who has captured the person of an enemy.

CAPTURE. In international law. The taking or wresting of property from one of two belligerents by the other. Also a taking of property by a belligerent from an offending neutral.

In some cases, this is a mode of acquiring property. Thus every one may, as a general rule, on his own land, or on the sea, capture any wild animal, and acquire a qualified ownership in it by confining it, or absolute ownership by killing it.
2 Steph.Comm. 79.

Capture, in technical language, is a taking by military power; a seizure is a taking by civil authority. U. S. v.

The sequestering of alien enemy property under vesting orders by the alien property custodian is in the nature of a "capture". Crowley v. Allen, D.C.Cal., 52 F.Supp. 850, 852.

CAPUT. A head; the head of a person; the whole person; the life of a person; one's personality; status; civil condition.

At common law. A head. Caput comitatis, the head of the county; the sheriff; the king.

baron.

Caput jejunii. The beginning of the Lent fast, et., Ash Wednesday.

Caput loci. The head or upper part of a place.

Caput lupinum. In old English law. A wolf's head. An outlawed felon was said to be caput lupinum, and might be knocked on the head like a wolf. 4 Bla.Comm. 320, 284.

Caput mortuum. A dead head; dead; obsolete.

Caput portus. In old English law. The head of a port. The town to which a port belongs, and which gives the denomination to the port, and is the head of it. Hale de Jure Mar. pt. 2, (de portu-bus maris,) c. 2.

Caput, principium, et finis. The head, beginning, and end. A term applied in English law to the king, as head of parliament. 4 Inst. 3; 1 Bl.
Comm. 188.

CARDINAL. In ecclesiastical law. A dignitary of the court of Rome, next in rank to the pope. There are cardinal bishops, cardinal priests, and cardinal deacons. See Fleury, Hist. Eccles. liv. xxxv. n. 17, li. n. 19; Thomassin, part. ii. liv. l. c. 53, part. iv. liv. i. cc. 79, 80; Loiseau, Traite des Ordres, c. 3, n. 31; Andre Droit Canon.

CARDS. In criminal law. Small papers or paste-boards of an oblong or rectangular shape, on which are printed figures or points, used in playing certain games. See State v. Lewis, 12 Wis. 434.

There are three degrees of care which are frequently recognized, corresponding (inversely) to the three degrees of negligence, viz.: slight care, ordinary care, and great care.

SLIGHT CARE is such a degree of care, precaution, or diligence as may fairly and properly be expected or required, having regard to the nature of the action, or of the subject-matter, and the circumstances surrounding the transaction. See Johnson v. Hudson River R. Co., 6 Duer, N.Y., 646; Appel v. Eaton & Price Co., 97 Mo.App. 428, 71 S.W. 741; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Noble, 142 Ill. 578, 32 N. E. 684. It is such care as an ordinarily prudent person would exercise under the conditions existing at the time he is called upon to act. Midland Valley R. Co. v. Bell, C.C.A.Okl., 242 F. 803, 808; Leverage v. Carmichael, 164 Minn. 76, 204 N.W. 921, 922. Substantially synonymous with ordinary or due care. Kucera v. Grigsby, 24 Ohio
CARE

Great care is such as persons of ordinary prudence usually exercise about affairs of their own which are of great importance; or it is that degree of care usually bestowed upon the matter in hand by the most competent, prudent, and careful persons having to do with the particular subject. Railway Co. v. Smith, 87 Tex. 348, 28 S.W. 520; Telegraph Co. v. Cook, Cal., 61 F. 628, 9 C.C.A. 680.

Highest degree of care and utmost degree of care have substantially the same meaning. Brogan v. Union Traction Co., 76 W.Va. 698, 86 S.E. 753, 756. "Highest degree of care" only requires the care and skill exacted of persons engaged in the same or similar business. Birmingham Ry., Light & Power Co. v. Cockrell, 10 Ala.App. 578, 65 So. 704. It means the highest degree required by law where human safety is at stake, and the highest degree known to the usage and practice of very careful, skillful, and diligent persons engaged in the same business by similar means or agencies. Birmingham Ry., Light & Power Co. v. Barrett, 179 Ala. 274, 60 So. 262, 264.

This division into three degrees of care, however, does not command universal assent. Raymond v. Portland R. Co., 100 Me. 529, 62 A. 602, 605, 3 L.R.A.N.S., 94; Pornroy v. Bangor & Aroostook R. Co., 102 Me. 497, 67 A. 561, 562.

CARENA. A term used in the old ecclesiastical law to denote a period of forty days.

CARENCE. In French law. Lack of assets; insolvency.

A procès-verbal de carence is a document setting out that the huissier attended to issue execution upon a judgment, but found nothing upon which to levy. Arg.Fr. Merc.Law, 547.

CARETA (spelled, also, Carreta and Carecta). A cart; a cart-load.

CARETORIUS, or CARECTARIUS. A carter. Blount.

CARGAISON. In French commercial law. Cargo; lading.

CARGARE. In old English law. To charge. Spelman.

CARGARE. In old English law. To charge. Spelman.

CARGO. In mercantile law. The load or lading of a vessel; the goods, merchandise, or whatever is conveyed in a ship or other merchant vessel. Seamans v. Loring, 21 Fed.Cas. 920; Thwing v. Insurance Co., 103 Mass. 401, 4 Am.Rep. 567.

While "cargo" is primarily the load of the ship, it may have a varying meaning. Pennsylvania Sugar Co. v. Czarnecki-Rionda Co., C.C.A.Pa., 245 F. 913, 915. The term may be applied in such a sense as to include passengers, as well as freight, but in a technical sense it designates goods only. Wolcott v. Eagle Ins. Co., 4 Pick., Mass., 429. Thus, we say, A cargo of emigrants. See 7 M. & G. 729, 744; Davison v. Von Lingen, 113 U.S. 49, 5 S.Ct. 155, 57 L.Ed. 323.

CARIAGIUM. In old English law. Carriage; the carrying of goods or other things for the king.

CARISTIA. Dearth, scarcity, dearness. Cowell.

CARK. In old English law. A quantity of wool, whereof thirty make a sarplar. (The latter is equal to 2,240 pounds in weight.) St. 27 Hen. VI. c. 2. Jacob.

CARLISLE TABLES. Life and annuity tables, compiled at Carlisle, England, about 1780. Used by actuaries, etc.

CARMEN. In the Roman law. Literally, a verse or song. A formula or form of words used on various occasions, as of divorce. Tayl.Civil Law, 349.

CARNAL. Pertaining to the body, its passions and its appetites; animal; fleshly; sensual; impure; sexual. People v. Battilana, 52 Cal.App.2d 685, 126 P.2d 923, 928.

CARNAL KNOWLEDGE. Coitus; copulation; the act of a man in having sexual bodily connection with a woman; sexual intercourse. State v. Normandale, 154 La. 523, 97 So. 798, 800; Patton v. State, 105 Tex.Cr.R. 128, 287 S.W. 51, 52. There is "carnal knowledge" if there is the slightest penetration of the sexual organ of the female by the sexual organ of the male. It is not necessary that the vagina be entered or that the hymen be ruptured; the entering of the vulva or labia is sufficient. State v. Huggins, 84 N.J.Law, 254, 87 A. 630, 633.

CARNALLY KNEW. In pleading. A technical phrase in an indictment to charge the defendant with the crime of rape. Some authorities suggest that the words "carnally knew" are included in the term "rapuit" and are therefore unnecessary; 2 Hawk. P.C. c. 25, § 56; 2 Stark. Cr. Pl. 431, n. (e), at least in states in which the statutes do not designate the crime by the words "did ravish and carnally know"; 1 Hale, P.C. 628, 632; 3 Russell, Cr. (6th ed.) 230. See Noble v. State, 22 Ohio St. 545; Dawkins v. State, 58 Ala. 378, 29 Am. Rep. 754.

CARNO. In old English law. An immunity or privilege. Cowell.

CAROOME. In English law. A license by the lord mayor of London to keep a cart.

CARPEMEALS. Cloth made in the northern parts of England, of a coarse kind, mentioned in 7 Jac. I. c. 16. Jacob.

CARRERA. In Spanish law. A carriage-way; the right of a carriage-way. Las Partidas, pt. 3, tit. 31, 1. 3.

CARRIAGE. A vehicle used especially for the transportation of persons either for pleasure or business, and drawn by horses or other draught animals over the ordinary streets and highways of the country; not including cars used exclusively upon railroads or street railroads expressly constructed for the use of such cars. Snyder v. North Lawrence, 8 Kan. 84; Cream City R. Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 63 Wis. 93, 23 N.W. 425, 53 Am. Rep. 267.

The act of carrying, or a contract for transportation of persons or goods.

In admiralty, "carriage" includes ability to lift a cargo and hold it aloft, and does not necessarily involve any translation of the vessel from one place to another. The Junghoved, D.C.N.Y., 272 F. 122, 124.

The business of carriage is that arising under contracts by which a person obligates himself, for an agreed price, to transport, or have transported, an object of some kind, to a designated place. Koche v. Gamier, 15 La. App. 461, 131 So. 198, 199.

The contract of carriage is a contract for the conveyance of property, persons, or messages, from one place to another. Civ. Code Cal. § 2085; Comp. Laws N.D. 1913, § 6185; Comp. Laws S.D. 1929, § 6185.

CARRICLE, or CARRACLE. A ship of great burden.

CARRIER. One undertaking to transport persons or property, Windham v. Pace, 192 S.E. 271, 6 S.E.2d 270, 274; or one employed in or engaged in the business of carrying goods for others for hire. Roeske v. Lamb, 39 N.M. 111, 41 P.2d 522, 523.

In common speech, carriers means transportation systems as distinguished from corporations owning or operating them. Virginian Ry. Co. v. Mullens, 271 U.S. 220, 46 Ct. 526, 529, 70 L.Ed. 915. And this is its meaning as used in the Federal Control Act, § 10. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Ault, 256 U.S. 554, 41 S.Ct. 593, 65 L.Ed. 1087; Birmingham Trust & Savings Co. v. Atlanta, B. & A. Ry. Co., D.C.Ga., 271 F. 731, 739 (Transportation Act). An electric railway that is part of the "general steam-railroad system" is a "carrier" subject to the Railway Labor Act, Sprague v. Wolf, C.C.A. 111.1., 124 F.2d 767, 769.

Carriers are either common or private. Standard Oil Co. v. Public Service Commission of Wisconsin, 217 Wis. 563, 259 N.W. 598.

Common carriers are those that hold themselves out or undertake to carry persons or goods of all persons indiscriminately, or of all who choose to employ them. Merchants Parcel Delivery v. Pennsylvania Public Utility Comm. 150 Pa. Super. 120, 28 A.2d 340, 344; Burnett v. Riter, Tex. Civ. App., 276 S.W. 347, 349; or those whose occupation or business is transportation of persons or things for hire or reward, In re Rodgers, Neb., 279 N.W. 800, 803, 804.

Common carriers of passengers are those that undertake to carry all persons indiscriminately who may apply for passage, so long as there is room, and there is no legal excuse for refusal. Lazor v. Banas, 114 Pa. Super. 425, 174 A. 817, 819; Anderson v. Fidelity & Casualty Co. of New York, 100 Misc. 411, 166 N.Y.S. 640, 642.

Private carriers are those who transport or undertake to transport in a particular instance for hire or reward. Allen v. Sackrider, 37 N.Y. 341; Columbus-Cincinnati Trucking Co. v. Public Utilities Commission, 141 Ohio St. 228, 47 N.E.2d 623, 625, 626.

For "Extension", see that title.

CARRIER'S LIEN. The right to hold the consignee's cargo until payment is made for the work of transporting it. Sommers Const. Co. v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 62 Ga.App. 23, 7 S.E.2d 429, 431.

CARROTED FUR, Fur that has been treated by a solution of nitrate of mercury, so as to remove the water-repellant substance covering the fibers, making them more pliable and more easily to interlock with other fibers of fur, or of wool. Matteawan Mfg. Co. v. Emmons Bros. Co., C.C.A. Mass., 253 F. 372, 375.

CARRUCA. See Caruca.

CARRY. To bear, bear about, sustain, transport, remove, or convey. To have or bear upon or about one's person, as a watch or weapon;—locomotion not being essential. State v. Nieto, 101 Ohio St. 409, 130 N.E. 663, 665. Compare Heaton v. State, 130 Tenn. 163, 169 S.W. 750. As applied to insurance, means "possess" or "hold." San Francisco Realty Co. v. Linnard, 98 Cal. App. 33, 276 P. 368, 370.

CARRY A MEMBER. To pay the assessments about one's person, as a watch or weapon;—locomotion not being essential. State v. Nieto, 101 Ohio St. 409, 130 N.E. 663, 665. Compare Heaton v. State, 130 Tenn. 163, 169 S.W. 750. As applied to insurance, means "possess" or "hold." San Francisco Realty Co. v. Linnard, 98 Cal. App. 33, 276 P. 368, 370.
CARRY

CARRY AN ELECTION. For a candidate to be elected, or a measure carried, at an election, he or it must receive a majority or a plurality of the legal votes cast. McKinney v. Barker, 180 Ky. 526, 203 S.W. 303, 304, L.R.A.1918E, 581.

CARRY ARMS OR WEAPONS. To wear, bear, or carry them upon the person or in the, clothing or in a pocket, for the purpose of use, or for the purpose of being armed and ready for offensive or defensive action in case of a conflict with another person. State v. Carter, 36 Tex. 89; State v. Murray, 39 Mo.App. 128.

CARRY STOCK. To provide funds or credit for its payment for the period agreed upon from the date of purchase. Saltus v. Genin, 16 N.Y.Super. Ct. 260. And see Pickering v. Demerritt, 100 Mass. 421.

CARRY THE IRON. See Fire Ordeal under the title Ordeal.

CARRYING AWAY. In criminal law. The act of removal or asportation, by which the crime of larceny is completed, and which is essential to constitute it. Getttinger v. State, 13 Neb. 308, 14 N.W. 403.

CART. In its ordinary and primary acceptation, a carriage with two wheels; yet it may mean a carriage in general, Favers v. Glass, 22 Ala. 624, 58 Am.Dec. 272; but not an automobile, Whitney v. Weltz, 153 Minn. 162, 190 N.W. 57, 28 A.L.R. 68. The vehicle in which criminals are taken to execution.

CART BOTE. Wood or timber which a tenant is allowed by law to take from an estate, for the purpose of repairing instruments, (including necessary vehicles,) of husbandry. 2 Bl.Comm. 35. See Bote.

CARTA. In old English law. A charter, or deed. Any written instrument.

In Spanish law. A letter; a deed; a power of attorney. Las Partidas, pt. 3, tit. 18, 1. 30.

CARTA MERCATORIA. A grant (1303) to certain foreign merchants, in return for custom duties, of freedom to deal wholesale in all cities and towns of England, power to export their merchandise, and liberty to dwell where they pleased, together with other rights pertaining to speedy justice; 1 Holdsw.Hist.E.L. 311.

CARTE. In French marine law. A chart.

CARTE BLANCHE. A white sheet of paper; an instrument signed, but otherwise left blank. A sheet given to an agent, with the principal's signature appended, to be filled up with any contract or engagement as the agent may see fit. Hence, metaphorically, unlimited authority.

CARTEL.

In Trade and Commerce
A combination of producers of any product joined together to control its production, sale, and price, and to obtain a monopoly in any particular industry or commodity. Also, an association by agreement of companies or sections of companies having common interests, designed to prevent extreme or unfair competition and allocate markets, and to promote the interchange of knowledge resulting from scientific and technical research, exchange of patent rights, and standardization of products. U. S. v. National Lead Co., D.C. N.Y., 63 F.Supp. 513.

State of War
An agreement between two hostile powers for the delivery of prisoners or deserters, or authorizing certain non-hostile intercourse between each other which would otherwise be prevented by the state of war; for example, agreements for intercommunication by post, telegraph, telephone, railway. II Op. 282.

Duel
A written challenge to a duel.

CARTULARY. A place where papers or records are kept.

CARUCA, or CARUA. A plow. A four-wheeled carriage. A team for a plow, or four oxen abreast. See Carucata.

CASE. Action, Cause, Suit, or Controversy

A general term for an action, cause, suit, or controversy, at law or in equity; a question con-

The word "case" or "cause" means a judicial proceeding for the determination of a controversy between parties wherein rights are enforced or protected, or wrongs are prevented or redressed, Ex parte Chesser, 93 Fla. 590, 112 So. 87, 90; any proceeding judicial in its nature, McCarthy v. Clancy, 110 Conn. 382, 148 A. 551, 557.

Case of actual controversy. The phrase in Federal Declaratory Judgment Act connotes controversy of justiciable

Case sufficient to go to a jury. A case that has proceeded upon sufficient proof to that stage where it must be sub-mited to jury and not decided against the state as a matter of law. State v. McDonough, 129 Conn. 483, 29 A.2d 582, 584.

Cases and controversies. This term, as used in the constitution of the United States, embraces claims or contentions of litigants brought before the court for adjudication by regular proceedings established for the protection or enforcement of rights, or the prevention, redress, or punishment of wrongs; and whenever the claim or contention of a party takes such a form that the judicial power is capable of acting upon it, it has become a case or controversy. Interstate Commerce Com'n v. Brimson, 154 U.S. 447, 14 Sup.Ct. 1125, 38 L.Ed. 1047. These two terms are to be distinguished; for there may be a "separable controversy" within a "case," which may be removed from a state court to a federal court, though the case as a whole is not removable. Snow v. Smith, C.C.Va., 88 Fed. 658. The term "controversies", if distinguishable from "cases", is so in so that it is less comprehensive than the term "cases" and includes only suits of a civil nature, Smith v. Blackwell, C.C.A.S.C., 115 F.2d 186, 188.

Applications and Special Proceedings

The word "case" may include application for divorce, applications for the establishment of highways, applications for orders of support of rela-

Statement of Facts

A statement of the facts involved in a transaction or series of transactions, drawn up in writing in a technical form, for submission to a court or judge for decision or opinion. Under this meaning of the term are included a "case made" for a motion for new trial, a "case reserved" on the trial of a case, an "agreed case" for decision without trial, etc.

Case agreed on. A formal written enumeration of the facts in a case, asstented to by both parties as correct and complete, and submitted to the court by their agreement, in order that a decision may be rendered without a trial, upon the court’s conclusions of law upon the facts as stated.

Case for motion. In English divorce and probate practice, when a party desires to make a motion, he must file, among other papers, a case for motion, containing an ab-tract of the proceedings in the suit or action, a statement of the circumstances on which the motion is founded, and the prayer or nature of the decree or order desired. Browne, Div. 251; Browne, Prob.Pr. 295.

Case-made. A statement of facts in relation to a disputed point of law, agreed to by both parties and submitted to the court without a preceding action. This is found only in the Code states. See De Armond v. Whitaker, 99 Ala. 252, 13 So. 613; A complete record of each successive action of the trial court at the trial, including testimony. In re Opinion of the Judges, 29 Okl.Cr. 27, 232 P. 121, 122. A 'case-made' consists of those things which transpired in court during the trial, and which are not a part of the record. Jones v. State, 9 Okl.Cr. 189, 130 P. 1178.

Case on appeal. In American practice. Before the argument in the appellate court of a case brought there for review, the appellant's counsel prepares a document or brief, bearing this name, for the information of the court, detailing the testimony and the proceedings below. In English practice. The "case on appeal" is a printed statement prepared by each of the parties to an appeal to the house of lords or the privy council, setting out methodically the facts which make up his case, with appropriate references to the evidence printed in the "appendix." The term also denotes a written statement, prepared and transmitted by an inferior court or judge raising a question of law for the opinion of a superior court.

Case reserved. A statement in writing of the facts proved on the trial of a cause, drawn up and settled by the attorneys and counsel for the respective parties under the supervision of the judge, for the purpose of having certain points of law, which arose at the trial and could not then be satisfactorily decided, determined upon full argument before the court in Banc. This is otherwise called a 'special case;' and it is usual for the parties, where the law of the case is doubtful, to agree that the jury shall find a general verdict for the plaintiff, subject to the opinion of the court upon such a case to be made, instead of obtaining from the jury a special verdict. 3 Bl.Com. 453; 3 Steph.Com. 621; Steph.Pl. 92, 93; 1 Burritt, Pr. 242, 463.

Case to move for new trial. In practice. A case prepared by the party against whom a verdict has been given, upon which to move the court to set aside the verdict and grant a new trial.

Supplementary Proceedings

The word "cases" in section providing that "act shall apply in all cases now pending or hereafter instituted in which the final decree of divorce was recorded prior to the effective date of this act," is synonym of "supplementary proceedings". Chia-petta v. Jordan, 16 So.2d 641, 644, 153 Fla. 788.

As used with reference to the removal of an officer or employee, "cause" means a just, not arbitrary, cause; one relating to a material matter, or affecting the public interest. Brokaw v. Burk, 89 N.J.L. 132, 98 A. 11, 12; a cause relating to and affecting administration of office and of substantial nature directly affecting public's rights and interests, State ex rel. Rockwell v. State Board of Educ., 213 Minn. 184, 6 N.W.2d 251, 260, 143 A.L.R. 503.

Statute permitting an award to be set aside for "cause" means for good cause or some such cause as fraud or surprise, Elsenpeter v. Potvin, 213 Minn. 129, 5 N.W.2d 499, 501.

In Civil and Scotch Law

The consideration of a contract, that is, the inducement to it, or motive of the contracting party for entering into it. Dig. 2, 14, 7; Toullier, liv. 3, tit. 3, c. 2, § 4; 1 Abb. 28; Bell, Dict.

The civilians use the term "cause," in relation to obligations, in the same sense as the word "consideration." It is used in the jurisprudence of England and the United States. It means the motive, the inducement to the agreement.-id quod inducit ad contrahere. Adams v. Mouton v. No. B. 1, 1 La. Ann. 192. But see Ames, 3 Sel. Essays in Anglo-American Hist. 279; Poll.Contr. 74.

Used also in the civil law in the sense of res (a thing). Non porcellum, non agnellen nec alia causa (not a hog, not a lamb, nor other thing). Du Cange.

In Pleading

Reason; motive; matter of excuse or justification. See S Co. 67; 11 East 451; 1 Chit.Pl. 585.

In Practice

A suit, litigation, or action. Any question, civil or criminal, litigated or contested before a court of justice.

As used in venue statute, "cause" means "cause of action," which means the right which a party has to institute a judicial proceeding. Bergin v. Temple, 111 Mont. 539, 111 P.2d 286, 289, 133 A.L.R. 1115.

A distinction is sometimes taken between "cause" and "action." Burrrill observes that a cause is not, like an action or suit, said to be commenced, nor is an action, like a cause, said to be tried. But, if there is any substantial difference between these terms, it must lie in the fact that "action" refers more peculiarly to the legal procedure of a controversy; "cause" to its merits or the state of facts involved. Thus, we cannot say "the cause should have been reinpered. Nor would it be correct to say "the plaintiff pleaded his own action."

As to "Probable Cause" and "Proximate Cause," see those titles. As to challenge for cause," see "Challenge."

CAUSE-BOOKS. Books kept in the central office of the English supreme court, in which are entered all writs of summons issued in the office. Rules of Court, v 8.

CEP. Lat. I have taken. This word was of frequent use in the returns of sheriffs when they were made in Latin, and particularly in the return to a writ of copias.

The full return (in Latin) to a writ of copies was commonly made in one of the following forms: Cepi corpus, I have taken the body, 1. e., arrested the body of the defendant; Cepi corpus et bail, I have taken the body and released the defendant on a bail-bond; Cepi corpus et committitur, I have taken the body and he has been committed (to prison); Cepi corpus et est in custodia, I have taken the defendant and he is in custody; Cepi corpus et est languidus, I have taken the defendant and he is sick, i. e., so sick that he cannot safely be removed from the place where the arrest was made; Cepi corpus et paratum habeo, I have taken the body and have it (him) ready, i. e., in custody and ready to be produced when ordered.

CEPIT. In civil practice. He took. This was the characteristic word employed in (Latin) writs of trespass for goods taken, and in declarations in trespass and replevin.

Replevin in the cepit is a form of replevin which is brought for carrying away goods merely. Wells, Repl. 53; Ford v. Ford, 3 Wis. 399.

In criminal practice. A technical word necessary in an indictment for larceny. The charge must be that the defendant took the thing stolen with a felonious design. Bac.Abr. "Indictment," G, 1.

CEPIT ET ABDUXIT. He took and led away. The emphatic words in writs in trespass or indictments for larceny, where the thing taken was a living chattel, i. e., an animal.

CEPIT ET ASPORTAVIT. He took and carried away. Applicable in a declaration in trespass or an indictment for larceny where the defendant has carried away goods without right. 4 Bl. Comm. 231.

CEPIT IN ALIO LOCO. In pleading. A plea in replevin, by which the defendant alleges that he took the thing repleved in another place than that mentioned in the declaration. 1 Chit.P1. 490; Rast.Entr. 554, 555; Morris, Repl. 141; Wells Repl. § 707.

CEPPAGIUM. In old English law. The stump: or roots of trees which remain in the ground after the trees are felled. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 41, § 24.
CERA, or CERE. In old English law. Wax; a seal.

CERA IMPRESSA. Lat. An impressed seal.

It may include an impression made on wafers or other adhesive substances capable of receiving an impression, or even paper. Pierce v. Indseth, 106 U.S. 44, 1 S.Ct. 27 L.Ed. 254.

CERAGRUM. In old English law. A payment to dents of several manors to the lords thereof, for the certain keeping of the leet, (pro certo letce;) and sometimes to the hundred. Blount; 6 Coke, 78; Cowell.

CERAGRNA. In old English law. A payment to dents of several manors to the lords thereof, for the certain keeping of the leet, (pro certo letce;) and sometimes to the hundred. Blount; 6 Coke, 78; Cowell.

CERTA DEBET ESSE INTENTIO, ET NARRATIO, ET CERTUM FUNDAMENTUM, ET CERTA RES QUEE DEDUCITUR IN JUDICLUM. The design and narration ought to be certain, and the foundation certain, and the matter certain, which is brought into court to be tried. Co.Litt. 303a.

CERTA RES. In old English law. A certain thing. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 60, §§ 24, 25.

CERTAIN. Ascertained; precise; identified; definitive; clearly known; unambiguous; or, in law, capable of being identified or made known, without liability to mistake or ambiguity, from data already given. Losecco v. Gregory, 108 La. 648, 32 So. 986; White v. Wadahms, 204 Mich. 381, 170 N.W. 60, 62. Not specifically named; indeterminate, indefinite; one or some. Willhite v. Armstrong, 328 Mo. 1064, 43 S.W.2d 422, 423. Some among possible others, In re Mineral Lac Paint Co., D.C.Pa., 17 F.Supp. 2. That which may be made certain. Brown v. City of Shreveport, La. App., 15 So.2d 234, 236; Singer v. Campbell, 217 Ky. 830, 290 S.W. 667, 668; Civ.Code La. art. 3556; Lee v. Pearson, La.App., 143 So. 516, 518.

CERTAIN SERVICES. In feudal and old English law. Such services as were stinted (limited or defined) in quantity, and could not be exceeded on any pretense; as to pay a stated annual rent, or to plow such a field for three days. 2 Bl.Comm. 61.

In Pleading

Distinctness; clearness of statement; particularity.

Thus, precision and explicitness in the statement of alleged facts that the pleader’s averments and contentions may be readily understood by the pleader on the other side, as well as by the court and jury. State v. Burke, 151 Mo. 143, 52 S.W. 226.

This word is technically used in pleading in two different senses, signifying either distinctness, or particularity, as opposed to undue generality.

Certainty is said to be of three sorts: (1) Certainty to a common intent is such as is attained by using words in their ordinary meaning, but is not exclusive of another meaning which might be made out by argument or inference. See 2 H.Bla. 530; Andr.Steph.Pla. 384. (2) Certainty to a certain intent in general is that which allows of no misunderstanding if a fair and reasonable construction is put upon the language employed, without bringing in facts which are possible, but not apparent. 1 Wms. Saund. 49; Fuller v. Hampton, 5 Conn. 423. (3) Certainty to a certain intent in particular is the highest degree of technical accuracy and precision. Co.Litt. 303; 2 H.B1. 530; State v. Parker, 34 Ark. 158, 36 Am.Rep. 5; Lawes, Pl. 54. These definitions, which have been adopted from Coke, have been subjected to severe criticism, but are of some utility in drawing attention to the different degrees of exactness and fulness of statement required in different instances. 13 East, 112; 3 Maule & S. 14; People v. Dunlap, 13 Johns., N.Y., 437.

In Contracts

A thing is certain when its essence, quality, and quantity are described, distinctly set forth, etc. Dig. 12, 1, 6. It is uncertain when the description is not that of an individual object, but designates only the kind. Civ.Code La. art. 3556, par. 7; 5 Coke, 121.

In Determining Negotiability of Instrument

That is certain which may be rendered certain; a commercial, and not mathematical, certainty. Gerrish v. Atlantic Ice & Coal Co., C.C.A.Ga., 80 F. 2d 648, 650, CERTIFICANDO DE RECOGNITIONE STAPULIE. In English law. A writ commanding the mayor of the staple to certify to the lord chancellor a statute-staple taken before him where the party himself detains it, and refuses to bring in the same. There is a like writ to certify a statute-merchant, and in divers other cases. Reg.Orig. 148, 151, 152.

CERTIFICATE. A document in use in the English customhouse. No goods can be exported by certificate, except foreign goods formerly imported, on which the whole or a part of the customs paid on importation is to be drawn back. Wharton.

Written assurance, or official representation, that some act has or has not been done, or some event occurred, or some legal formality been complied with.

CERTIFICATE

A writing by which testimony is given that a fact has or has not taken place. Laclede Land & Improvement Co. v. Morten, 153 Mo.App. 637, 167 S.W. 658.

CERTIFICATE FOR COSTS. In English practice. A certificate or memorandum drawn up and signed by the judge before whom a case was tried, setting out certain facts the existence of which must be thus proved before the party is entitled to recover costs.

CERTIFICATE INTO CHANCERY. In English practice. This is a document containing the opinion of the common-law judges on a question of law submitted to them for their decision by the chancery court.

CERTIFICATE LANDS. In Pennsylvania, in the period succeeding the revolution, lands set apart in the western portion of the state, which might be bought with the certificates which the soldiers of that state in the revolutionary army had received in lieu of pay. Cent. Dict.

CERTIFICATE OF ACKNOWLEDGMENT. The certificate of a notary public, justice of the peace, or other authorized officer, attached to a deed, mortgage, or other instrument, setting forth that the parties thereto personally appeared before him on such a date and acknowledged the instrument to be their free and voluntary act and deed.

CERTIFICATE OF ASSIZE. A writ granted for the re-examination or retrial of a matter passed by assize before justices. Fitzh:Nat.Brev. 181. It is now entirely obsolete. 3 Bla.Comm. 389. Consult also, Comyns, Dig. Assize (B, 27, 28).

CERTIFICATE OF DEPOSIT. A written acknowledgment by a bank or banker of a deposit with promise to pay to depositor, to his order, or to some other person or to his order, Wheelock v. Cantley, 227 Mo.App. 102, 50 S.W.2d 731, 734; Mariland Finance Corporation v. People's Bank of Keyser, 99 W.Va. 230, 128 S.E. 294, 295. A bank's promissory note, Dickenson v. Charles, 173 Va. 393, 4 S.E.2d 351, 353.

CERTIFICATE OF DONATION. A permit or right granted certificate holder to enter upon land belonging to state to make improvements required by law. Young v. Pumphrey, 191 Ark. 98, 83 S.W. 2d 84, 86.

CERTIFICATE OF HOLDER OF ATTACHED PROPERTY. A certificate required by statute, in some states, to be given by a third person who is found in possession of property subject to an attachment in the sheriff's hands, setting forth the amount and character of such property and the nature of the defendant's interest in it. Code Civil Proc.N.Y. § 650, Civil Practice Act; § 918.

CERTIFICATE OF INCORPORATION. The instrument by which a private corporation is formed, under general statutes, executed by several persons as incorporators and filed in some designated public office as evidence of corporate existence. This is properly distinguished from a "charter," which is a direct legislative grant of corporate existence and powers to named individuals.

CERTIFICATE OF INDEBTEDNESS. An obligation sometimes issued by corporations having practically the same force and effect as a bond, though not usually secured on any specific property. Christie v. Duluth, 82 Minn. 202, 84 N.W. 754. It may, however, create a lien on all the property of the corporation issuing it, superior to the rights of general creditors. Jefferson Banking Co. v. Trustees of Martin Institute, 146 Ga. 383, 91 S.E. 463, 466.

CERTIFICATE OF INTEREST. An instrument evidencing a fractional or percentage interest in oil and gas production. People v. Sidwell, 27 Cal. 2d 121, 162 P.2d 913, 915.

A certificate issued by public officer to successful bidder at a judicial sale (such as a tax sale), which will entitle him to a deed upon confirmation of sale by the court, or (as the case may be) if the land is not redeemed within the time limited. Lightcap v. Bradley, 186 Ill. 510, 58 N.E. 221.

CERTIFICATE OF REGISTRY. In maritime law. A certificate of the registration of a vessel according to the registry acts, for the purpose of giving her a national character. 3 Steph.Comm. 274; 3 Kent, Comm. 139-150.

CERTIFICATE OF SALE. The same as "certificate of purchase," supra.

CERTIFICATE SENT TO 1 B. Notation reading “Certificate Sent to 1 B” meant that certificate was to be sent to single beneficiary if war risk insurance application should be accepted. McCormack v. U. S., C.C.A.N.Y., 66 F.2d 519, 521.

CERTIFICATE, TRIAL BY. A mode of trial now little in use; it is resorted to in cases where the fact in issue lies out of the cognizance of the court, and the judges, in order to determine the question, are obliged to rely upon the solemn averment or information of persons in such a station as affords them the clearest and most competent knowledge of the truth. Brown.

CERTIFICATION, In Scotch practice. This is the assurance given to a party of the course to be followed in case he does not appear or obey the order of the court.

CERTIFICATION OF ASSIZE. In English practice. A writ ancienly granted for the re-examination or retrial of a matter passed by assize before justices, now entirely superseded by the remedy afforded by means of a new trial. See Certificate of Assize.

CERTIFICATS DE COUTUME. In French law. Certificates given by a foreign lawyer, establishing the law of the country to which he belongs and rights and liabilities resulting therefrom. Hengst v. Kummer, 188 N.J.L. 159, 81 A. 583, 586; State ex rel. Hengst v. Kummer, 188 N.J.L. 159, 81 A. 583, 586.

CERTIFIED CARRIERS. Carriers using highways of state to whom certificates of public convenience and necessity have been issued. People v. Henry, 131 Cal.App. 82, 21 P.2d 672.

CERTIFIED CHECK. A depositor’s check recognized and accepted by bank officer as valid appropriation of the amount specified and as drawn against funds held by bank.

The usual method of certification is for cashier or teller to write across face of check, over his signature, statement that it is good when properly indorsed. See McAdoo v. Farmers’ State Bank of Zenda, 106 Kan. 662, 189 P. 155, 156; Bathgate v. Exchange Bank of Chula, 199 Mo.App. 583, 205 S.W. 875, 876.

The certification of a check is a statement of fact, amounting to an estoppel of the bank to deny liability. Bank of Bay Biscayne v. Ball, 99 Fla. 745, 128 So. 491, 492.

A warranty that sufficient funds are on deposit and have been set aside. World Exchange Bank v. Commercial Casualty Ins. Co., 253 N.Y. 1, 173 N.E. 902, 904. It means that bank holds money to pay check and is liable to pay it to proper party. Sundial Const. Co. v. Liberty Bank of Buffalo, 277 N.Y. 137, 13 N.E.2d 745, 746.

CERTIFIED COPY. A copy of a document or record, signed and certified as a true copy by the officer to whose custody the original is intrusted. People v. Foster, 27 Misc. 576, 58 N.Y. Supp. 574; Ehrlich v. Mulligan, 104 N.J.Law, 375, 140 A. 463, 465, 57 A.L.R. 596.

CERTIORARI

Liquor License No. R-8981, Issued to John Mami, 144 Pa.Super. 285, 19 A.2d 549, 552; or whether judgment is prejudicial and materially harmful, Jacksonville American Pub. Co. v. Jacksonville Paper Co., 143 Fla. 835, 197 So. 672, 674. It performs the office of the common-law writ of error, Berry v. Recorder's Court of Town of West Orange, 124 N.J.L. 385, 11 A.2d 743, 745. Limited review only is involved in the writ. Brundage v. O'Berry, 101 Fla. 320, 134 So. 520, 521. Quashal of record or proceeding is the only relief available. State ex rel. St. Louis County v. Evans, 346 Mo. 209, 139 S.W.2d 967, 969.

Originally, and in English practice, an original writ commanding judges or officers of inferior courts to certify or to return records or proceedings in a cause for judicial review of their action. Jacob; Ashworth v. Hatcher, 98 W.Va. 323, 128 S.E. 93. For other common-law definitions, see F. N. B. 554 A; Bac.Abr. 162, 168, citing 4 Burr. 2244; In re Dance, 2 N. D. 184, 49 N.W. 733, 33 Am.St.Rep. 768.

In Florida the writs of "certiorari" in use are the common-law writs, the statutory writ to review judgments of civil courts of record, the rule certiorari to review locutory appeals in equity, the rule certiorari for supplying omitted parts of records on appeals or writs of error, and writs of certiorari issued to review quasi judicial judgments or orders of quasi judicial bodies or officers. Kilgore v. Bird, 149 Fla. 570, 6 So.2d 541, 544, 545.

In Massachusetts it is a writ by the supreme judicial court commanding inferior tribunal to certify and return its records in a particular case that any errors or irregularities which appear in the proceedings may be corrected. Pub.St.Mass.1882, p. 1288; Coolidge v. Bruce, 249 Mass. 455, 160 N.E. 397.

In Texas, the ordinary office of writ of "certiorari" is to perfect the record on appeal. Rev.St.1925, art. 932. Zamora v. Garza, Tex.Civ.App., 117 S.W.2d 165.

In some states the writ has been abolished by statute so far as the common-law name is concerned, but the remedy is preserved under the new name of "writ of review"; Southwestern Telegraph & Telephone Co. v. Robinson, Tex., 1 C.C.A. 91, 48 F. 771.

CERTIORARI, BILL OF. In English chancery practice. An original bill praying relief. It was filed for the purpose of removing a suit pending in some inferior court of equity into the court of chancery, on account of some alleged incompetency or inconvenience.

CESSANTE STATU PRIMITIVO, CESSAT DERIVATIVUS. When the primitive or original estate determines, the derivative estate determines also. 8 Coke, 34; Broom, Max. 495; 4 Kent 32.

CESSARE. L. Lat. To cease, stop, or stay.

CESSAVIT PER BIENNIUM. In practice. An obsolete writ, which could formerly have been sued out when the defendant had for two years ceased or neglected to perform such service or to pay such rent as he was bound to do by his tenure, and had not upon his lands sufficient goods or chattels to be distrained. Fitzh.Nat.Brev. 208.

It also lay where a religious house held lands on condition of performing certain spiritual services which it failed to do. 3 Bl.Comm. 232. Emig v. Cunningham, 62 Md. 460.

CESSE. (1) An assessment or tax; (2) a tenant of land was said to cesse when he neglected or ceased to perform the services due to the lord. Co.Litt. 373a, 380b.

CESSER. Neglect; a ceasing from, or omission to do, a thing. 3 Bl.Com. 232. The determination of an estate. 1 Coke, 84; 4 Kent, Comm. 33, 90, 105, 295. The determination or ending of a term, annuity, etc. Sweet.

As to the cesser clause in a charter party, see Steamship Rutherford Co. v. Howard Houlder & Partners, N.Y., 122 C.C.A. 166, 203 F. 848; The Marpesia, C.C.A.N.Y., 292 F. 957, 973.

CESSER, PROVISO FOR. A provision in a settlement creating long terms that when the trusts are satisfied, the term should cease and determine. Sweet. This proviso generally expresses three events: (1) The trusts never arising; (2) their becoming unnecessary or incapable of taking effect; (3) the performance of them. Sugd.Vend. (14th Ed.) 621-623.

CESET EXECUTIO. (Let execution stay.) In practice. A stay of execution; or an order for such stay; the entry of such stay on record. 2 Tidd, Pr. 1104.

CESET PROCESSUS. (Let process stay.) A stay of proceedings entered on the record. See 2 Doug. 627; 11 Mod. 231. Formal order for stay of process or proceedings, Brooks v. Super Service, 183 Miss. 833, 183 So. 484.

CESSIO. Lat. A cession; a giving up, or relinquishment; a surrender; an assignment.

CESSIO BONORUM. In Roman law. Cession of goods. A surrender, relinquishment, or assignment of all his property and effects made by an insolvent debtor for the benefit of his creditors. The term is commonly employed in modern continental jurisprudence to designate a bankrupt's assignment of property to be distributed among his creditors, and is used in the same sense by some English and American writers, but here rather as a convenient than as a strictly technical term. See 2 Bl.Comm. 473; Dig. 2, 4, 25; 48, 19, 1; Nov. 4, 3; La.Civ.Code art. 2166 (Civ.Code, art. 2170); Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 4 L.Ed. 529.

CESSIO IN JURE. In Roman law. A fictitious suit, in which the person who was to acquire the thing claimed (vindicabat) the thing as his own, the person who was to transfer it acknowledged the justice of the claim, and the magistrate pronounced it to be the property (addicebat) of the claimant. Sandars' Just.Inst., 5th Ed., 89, 122.

CESSION. The act of ceding; a yielding or giving up; surrender; relinquishment of property or rights.

CHART. The word "chart," as used in the copyright law, does not include sheets of paper exhibiting tabulated or methodically arranged information. Taylor v. Gilman, C.C.N.Y., 24 Fed. 632.

CHARTA. In Old English Law A charter or deed; an instrument written and sealed; the formal evidence of conveyances and contracts. Also any signal or token by which an estate was held.

The term came to be applied, by way of eminence, to such documents as proceeded from the sovereign, granting liberties or privileges, and either where the recipient of the grant was the whole nation, as in the case of Magna Charta, or a public body, or private individual, in which case it corresponded to the modern word "charter."

In the Civil Law

Paper, suitable for the inscription of documents or books; hence, any instrument or writing. See Dig. 32, 52, 6; Nov. 44, 2.

Charta Communis

In old English law. An indenture; a common or mutual charter or deed; one containing mutual covenants, or involving mutuality of obligation; one to which both parties might have occasion to refer, to establish their respective rights. Bract. fols. 33b, 34.

Charta Cyrographata (or Chyrographata)

In old English law. A chirographed charter; a charter executed in two parts, and cut through the middle, (scindit per medium,) where the word "cyrographum," or "chirographum," was written in large letters. Bract. fol. 34; Fieta, lib. 3, c. 14, § 3. See Chirograph.

Charta De Foresta

A collection of the laws of the forest, made in the 9th Hen. Ill, and said to have been originally a part of Magna Charta.

The charta de foresta was called the Great Charter of the woodland population, nobles, barons, freemen, and slaves, loyally granted by Henry III. early in his reign (A.D.1217). Inkerwick, King's Peace 159; Stubb's Charters 847. There is a difference of opinion as to the original charter of the forest similar to that which exists respecting the true and original Magna Carta (q. v.), and for the same reason, viz., that both required repeated confirmation by the kings, despite their supposed inviolability. This justifies the remark of recent historians as to the great charter that this theoretical sanctity and such practical insecurity are
CHARTA

Shared with 'the Great Charter of Liberties' by the Charter of the Forest which was issued in 1217. 1 Poll. & Matll. 158. It is asserted with great positiveness by Inverwick that no forest charter was ever granted by King John, but that Henry III. issued the charter of 1217 (which he puts in the third year of the reign, which, however, only commenced Oct. 28, 1216), in pursuance of the promises of his father; and Lord Coke, referring to it as a charter on which the lives and liberties of the woodland population depended, says that it was confirmed at least thirty times between the death of John and that of Henry V.; 4 Co. Inst. 303.

Weber, under the title Magna Charta, says that the name is applied to the charter granted in the 9th Hen. III. and confirmed by Edw. I. Prof. Maitland, in speaking of Magna Carta, refers to 'the sister-charter which defined the forest law' as one of the four documents which, at the death of Henry III., comprised the written law of England. 1 Soc. England 410. Edward I. in 1297 confirmed 'the charter made by the common consent of all the realm in the time of Henry III. to be kept in every point without breach.' Inverwick, King's Peace 160; Stubb's Charters 486. The Century Dictionary refers to this latter charter of Edw. I. as the Charter of the Forest; but it was, as already shown, only a confirmation of it, and a comparison of the authorities leaves little if any doubt that the date was as above stated and the history as here given. Its provisions may be found in Stubb's Charters and they are summarized by Inverwick, in his work above cited.

Chapter De Una Parte
A deed-poll; a deed of one part. Formerly used to distinguish a deed poll—that is, an agreement made by one party only—from a deed inter partes. Co.Litt. 229.

Charter Partita
(Literally, a deed divided.) A charter-party. 3 Kent, Comm. 201.

CHARTA DE NON ENTE NON VALET. A deed of a thing not in being is not valid. Co.Litt. 36.

CHARTA NON EST NISI VESTIMENTUM DONATIONIS. A deed is nothing else than the vestment of a gift. Co.Litt. 36.

CHAUSSEE. Fr. A levee of earth, made to retain the water of a river or pond; a levee made in low, wet, and swampy places to serve as a road. Armas v. New Orleans, 3 La. 86, 99.

CHARTIE LIBERTATUM. The charters (grants) of liberties. These are Magna Charta and Charta de Foresta.

CHARTARUM SUPER FIDEM, MORTUIS TESTIBUS, AD PATRIAM DE NECESSITUDINE RECURRERE EST. Co.Litt. 36. The witnesses being dead, the truth of charters must of necessity be referred to the country, i.e., a jury.

CHARTER. Fr. A chart, or plan, which mariners use at sea.

CHARTÈRE-PARTIE. Fr. In French marine law. A charter-party.

CHARTIE. A variant of "cartel" (q. v.).

CHARTER, v. In mercantile law. To hire or lease a vessel for a voyage. Thus, a "chartered" is distinguished from a "seeking" ship. 7 East, 24.

CHARTER, n. An instrument emanating from the sovereign power, in the nature of a grant, either to the whole nation, or to a class or portion of the people, or to a colony or dependency, and assuring to them certain rights, liberties, or powers. Such was the "Great Charter" or "Magna Charta," and such also were the charters granted to certain of the English colonies in America. See Story, Const. § 161; 1 Bla.Comm. 108.

A charter differs from a constitution, in that the former is granted by the sovereign, while the latter is established by the people themselves.

An act of a legislature creating a corporation, or creating and defining the franchise of a corporation. Baker v. Smith, 41 R. 17, 102 A. 721, 723; Bent v. Underdown, 156 Ind. 516, 60 N.E. 307. Also a corporation's constitution or organic law; Schultz v. City of Phoenix, 18 Ariz. 35, 156 P. 75, 76; C. J. Kubach Co. v. McGuire, 199 Cal. 215, 248 P. 676, 677; that is to say, the articles of incorporation taken in connection with the law under which the corporation was organized; Chicago Open Board of Trade v. Imperial Bldg. Co., 136 Ill.App. 606; In re Hanson's Estate, 38 S.D. 1, 159 N.W. 399, 400. The authority by virtue of which an organized body acts. Ryan v. Witt, Tex. Civ.App., 173 S.W. 952, 959. A contract between the state and the corporation, between the corporation and the stockholders, and between the stockholders and the state. Bruun v. Cook, 280 Mich. 484, 273 N.W. 774, 777.

In Old English Law
A deed or other written instrument under seal; a conveyance, covenant, or contract. Cowell; Spelman; Co.Litt. 6; 1 Co. 1; F.Moore 687.

In Old Scotch Law
A disposition made by a superior to his vassal, for something to be performed or paid by him. 1 Forb.Inst. pt. 2, b. 2, c. 1, tit. 1. A writing which contains the grant or transmission of the feudal right to the vassal. Ersk.Inst. 2, 3, 19.

Blank Charter
A document given to the agents of the crown in the reign of Richard II. with power to fill up as they pleased.

Charter of Pardon
In English law. An instrument under the great seal, by which a pardon is granted to a man for a felony or other offense.

Charter of the Forest
See Charts de foresta.

Charter Rolls
Ancient English records of royal charters, granted between the years 1199 and 1516.

CHARTER-HOUSE. Formerly a convent of Carthusian monks in London; now a college founded and endowed by Thomas Sutton. The governors of the charter-house are a corporation aggregate without a head, president, or superior, all the members being of equal authority. 3 Steph. Comm. (7th Ed.) 14, 97.

CHARTER-LAND. In English law. Otherwise called "book-land." Property held by deed under certain rents and free services. It, in effect, differs nothing from the free socage lands, and hence have arisen most of the freehold tenants, who hold of particular manors, and owe suit and service to the same. 2 Bl.Comm. 90.

CHARTER-PARTY. A contract by which a ship, or some principal part thereof, is let to a merchant for the conveyance of goods on a determined voyage to one or more places. Fish v. Sullivan, 40 La.Ann. 193, 3 So. 730; Vang v. Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation, D.C.Pa., 7 F.Supp. 475, 478.

A specific and express contract by which the owner lets a vessel or some particular part thereof to another person for a specified time or use. Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation v. Vang, C.C.A.Pa., 73 F.2d 88, 91.

The contract by which a ship owner may either let the capacity or burden of the ship, continuing the employment of the owner’s master, crew, and equipments, or may surrender the entire ship to the charterer, who then provides himself. The master or part owner may be a charterer. Civil Code Cal. § 1127.

"A charter party may be a contract for the lease of the vessel, or for a special service to be rendered by the owner of the vessel. Where, as is very frequently the case, the shipowner undertakes to carry a cargo, to be provided by the charterer, on a designated voyage, the arrangement is a mere contract of affreightment." United States v. Hvoslef, 237 U. S. 1, 35 S.Ct. 459, 460, 59 L. Ed. 813, Ann. Cas.1916A, 286.

CHARTERED SHIP. A ship hired or freighted; a ship which is the subject-matter of a charter-party.

CHARTERER. In mercantile law. One who charters (i.e., hires or engages) a vessel for a voyage; a freighter. 2 Steph.Comm. 184; 3 Kent, Comm. 137; Turner v. Cross, 83 Tex. 218, 18 S.W. 578, 15 L.R.A. 262.

CHARTIS REDDENDIS. (For returning the charters.) An ancient writ which lay against one who had charters of feoffment intrusted to his keeping and refused to deliver them. Reg.Orig. 159.

CHARTOPHYLAX. In old European law. A keeper of records or public instruments; a charturess; a registrar. Spelman.

CHARLIE. In old English law. A plow. Bestes des charges; beasts of the plow.

CHASE. The liberty or franchise of hunting, one’s self, and keeping protected against all other persons, beasts of the chase within a specified district, without regard to the ownership of the land. 2 Bl.Comm. 414-416.

The act of acquiring possession of animals ferce naturce by force, cunning, or address. 2 Chit.Bl.Comm. 383, note. In a devise, however, they may be of the same import. Shep.Touch. 447; 2 Fonbl. Eq. 335.

A privileged place for preservation of deer and beasts of the forest. It is commonly less than a forest and of larger compass than a park. Every forest is a chase, but every chase is not a forest. It differs from a park in that it is not inclosed, yet it must have certain metes and bounds. Manwood, 49: Termes de la Ley.

In old English law. A place where all alike were entitled to hunt wild animals.

CHASSIS. As applied to a motor car,- the rectangular metal framework, as distinguished from its body and seats, but including its accessories for propulsion, as the tanks, motor, etc., and general running gear. Kansas City Automobile School Co. v. Holcker-Elberg Mfg. Co., Mo.App., 182 S.W. 759, 761.

CHASTE CHARACTER. Denoting purity of mind and innocence of heart;—not limited merely to unlawful sexual intercourse. State v. Wilcoxen, 200 Iowa 1250, 206 N.W. 260, 261.

As used in statutes, means actual personal virtue. It may include the character of one who was formerly unchaste but is reformed. Boak v. State, 5 Iowa, 430; People v. Nelson, 153 N.Y. 90, 46 N.E. 1040, 60 Am.St.Rep. 92.

CHASTITY. Purity; continence.

It means that virtue which prevents the unlawful intercourse of the sexes; the state of purity or abstinence from unlawful sexual connection, People v. Kehoe, 123 Cal. 224, 55 P. 911, 69 Am.St.Rep. 52; actual personal virtue and character, and not a mere external reputation for chastity. People v. Weinstock, 27 N.Y.Cr.R. 53, 140 N.Y.S. 453, 457. See Chaste.

The term "chattels" is a more comprehensive one than "goods," as it includes animate as well as inanimate property. 2 Chit.Bl. Comm. 383, note. In a devise, however, they may be of the same import. Shep.Touch. 447; 2 Fonbl. Eq. 335.

Chattel Interest
An interest in corporeal hereditaments less than a freehold. 2 Kent, Comm. 342.

Personal Chattels
Movable things. 2 Bl.Comm. 387; 2 Kent, 340; Co.Litt. 48a; 4 Co. 6; In re Gay, 5 Mass. 419; Miller v. Hirschmann, 170 Md. 145, 183 A. 259, 263.

Evidences of debt are chattels personal. Greene Line Terminal Co. v. Martin, 122 W.Va. 483, 10 S.E.2d 901, 906.

Real Chattels
Such as concern, or savor of, the realty, such as leasehold estates; interests issuing out of, or annexed, to, real estate; such chattel interests as An instrument of sale of personality conveying title to mortgagee with terms of defeasance; and, if the terms of redemption are not complied with, then, at common law, the title becomes absolute. Stewart v. Slater, 3 Duer (N. Y.) 99; In re Packard Press, C.C.A.N.Y., 5 F.2d 633, 635. A bill of sale with a defeasance clause incorporated in it. Monongahela Ins. Co. v. Batson, 111 Ark. 167, 163 S.W. 510, 511; Bank of Dillon v. Murchison, C.C.A.4, 213 F. 147, 151.

An absolute pledge, to become an absolute interest if not redeemed at a fixed time. Cortelyou v. Lansing, 2 Caines, Cas., N.Y., 200, per Kent, Ch.

A pledge is distinguished from a chattel mortgage in that the title to the property is conveyed; in a pledge, the possession. Jones, Mortg. § 4; Security Trust Co. v. Edwards, 90 N.J.Law. 558, 101 A. 384, 385, L.R.A.1917F, 273; Thompson v. Dollidy, 132 Mass. 103, 107; Thorn v. First Nat. Bank, 157 Mass. 271; 157 Mass. 111, 113; In pledge, the pawning has only a special property in the thing deposited. Evans v. Darlington, 5 Blackf., Ind., 320.

A conditional sale is distinguished from a chattel mortgage in that the purchaser has merely a right to purchase, and no debt or obligation exists on the part of the vendor. Weathersly v. Weathersly, 40 Miss. 462, 90 Am.Dec. 344; Gomez v. Kamping, 4 Daly, N.Y., 77. In mortgage, title passes; in conditional sale possession is transferred and title retained. Pettig v. Aero Inv. Co., 191 Minn. 500, 254 N.W. 629.

CHATTEL REAL. All interests in real estate of lesser dignity than a freehold estate, and which lesser estates or interest descended under the rules for devaluation of personal property and not as freehold or fee simple estates. Intermountain Realty Co. v. Allen, 60 Idaho 228, 90 P.2d 704, 705, 122 A.L.R. 647.

CHAUD-MEDLEY. A homicide committed in the heat of an affray and while under the influence of passion; it is thus distinguished from chance medley, which is the killing of a man in a casual affray in self-defense. 4 Bl.Comm. 184. It has been said, however, that the distinction is of no great importance. See 1 Russ.Crimes, 660.

Test whether person is a chauffeur is whether he operated motor vehicle in whole or part-time employment, whether he was at such time an employee, servant, agent, or independent contractor, and whether he was paid for his service. Maryland Casualty Co. v. Cronholm, D.C.Tex., 32 F.Supp. 375, 377.

CHAUMPERT. A kind of tenure mentioned in a patent of 35 Edw. III. Cowell; Blount.

CHAU NTRY RENTS. Money paid to the crown by the servants or purchasers of chauanaly-lands. See Chantry.

The words “cheat and defraud” usually mean to induce a person to part with the possession of property by reason of intentionally false representations relied and acted upon by such person to his harm. Antonio Pepe Co. v. Apuzzo, 98 Conn. 807, 120 A. 681, 682; They include not only the crime of false pretenses, but also all civil frauds. Hinshaw v. State, 188 Ind. 147, 122 N.E. 418, 419. They include all tricks, devices, artifices, or deceptions used to deprive another of his known right, by some willful device, contrary to the plain rules of common honesty.” Hawk.P.C. b. 2, c. 23, § 1. “The fraudulent obtaining the property of another by any deceitful and illegal practice or trick (short of felony) which affects or may affect the public.” Steph.Crim. Law, 93.

Cheats, punishable at common law, are such cheats (not amounting to felony) as are effected by deceitful or illegal symbols or tokens which may affect the public at large, and against which common prudence could not have guarded. 2 Whart.Crim.Law, § 1116; 2 East, P.C. 818; Von Mumm v. Frash, C.C.N.Y., 56 F. 836; State v. Parker, 43 N.H. 85.

CHEATERS, or ESCHEATORS, were officers appointed to look after the king’s escheats, a duty which gave them great opportunities of fraud and oppression, and in consequence many complaints were made of their misconduct. Hence it seems that a cheater came to signify a fraudulent person, and thence the verb to cheat was derived. Wharton.

CHECK, v. To control or restrain; to hold within bounds. To verify or audit; to verify, guard, or examine the work of another. Marsh v. State, 125

A draft or order upon a bank or banking-house, purporting to be drawn upon a deposit of funds, for the payment at all events of a certain sum of money to a certain person therein named, or to him or his order, or to bearer, and payable immediately on demand or on presentment. Daniel, Neg. Hist. 1566; Bank v. Wheaton, 4 R.I. 33; Economy Fusic & Mfg. Co. v. Standard Electric Mfg. Co., 359 Ill. 504, 194 N.E. 922, 924.

A bill of exchange drawn on a bank payable on demand. Commercial & Savings Bank Co. of Bellafontaine, Ohio, v. Citizens' Nat. Bank of Franklin, 68 Ind. App. 417, 120 N.E. 670, 674; Bell-Wayland Co. v. Bank of Sugden, 95 Okl. 67, 218 P. 705, 706; Thomas v. Berger, 118 Pa.Super. 422, 180 A. 32. A bill of exchange drawn on a bank or bankers, and is payable immediately on presentment, without days of grace; it is payable immediately on presentment, and no acceptance as distinct from payment is required; it is supposed to be drawn upon a previous deposit of funds, and is an absolute appropriation of so much money in the hands of the bankers to the holder of the check. Merchants' Nat. Bank v. State Nat. Bank, 10 Wall. 647, 19 L.Ed. 1008; People v. Compton, 123 Cal. 403, 56 P. 44.

The term "check," within the ordinary meaning of that term, includes "draft," the only distinction being that in a draft the drawer is an individual. Leach v. Mechanics' Sav. Bank, 225 Ala. 533, 144 So. 81, 82, 86 A.L.R. 455; Roff v. Crenshaw, del.App., 159 P.2d 661, 662.

Cashier's Check

One issued by an authorized officer of a bank directed to another person, evidencing that the payee is authorized to demand and receive upon presentation from the bank the amount represented by the check. State v. Tyler County State Bank, Tex.Com.App., 277 S.W. 625, 627, 42 A.L.R. 1347. A form of a check by which the bank lends its credit to the purchaser of the check, the purpose being to make it available for immediate use in banking circles. Duke v. Johnson, 127 Wash. 601, 221 P. 321, 322. A bill of exchange drawn by a bank upon itself, and accepted by the maker when the loan falls due. This understanding is evidenced by writing the word "Mem." on the check. This is not unusual among merchants. See U. S. v. Isham, 17 Wall. 502, 21 L.Ed. 728; Franklin Bank v. Freeman, 16 Pick., Mass., 539; Story, Pr.Notes § 499.

CHIEF, TENANT IN. In English feudal law. All the land in the kingdom was supposed to be helden mediately or immediately of the king, who was styled the "Lord Paramount," or "Lord Above All;" and those that held immediately under him, in right of his crown and dignity, were called his tenants "in capite" or "in chief," which was the most honorable species of tenure, but at the same time subjected the tenant to greater and more burdensome services than inferior tenures did. Brown. One who held directly of the king. 1 Washb.R.P. *19.

CHIEFRIE. In feudal law. A small rent paid to the lord paramount.

CHILD. See Children.

CHILDREN. Progeny

Child of tender age or years

Child's Part

A "child's part," which a widow, by statute in some states, is entitled to take in lieu of dower or the provision made for her by will, is a full share to which a child of the decedent would be entitled, subject to the debts of the estate and the cost of administration up to and including distribution. Benedict v. Wilmarth, 46 Fla. 535, 35 So. 84.

Illegitimate Child

A bastard (q. v.).

Legitimate Child

One born in lawful wedlock.

Natural Child

A bastard (q. v.); a child born out of lawful wedlock. But in a statute declaring that adopted shall have all the rights of "natural" children, the word "natural" was used in the sense of "legitimate." Barns v. Allen, 9 Am.Law Reg., 8 S., 747. In Louisiana. Illegitimate children who have been acknowledged by the father. Civ.Code La. art. 202. In the civil law. A child by natural relation or procreation; a child by birth, as distinguished from a child by adoption. Inst. 1, 11, pr.; Id. 3, 1, 2; Id. 3, 8 pr. See, also, Conner v. Parsley, 192 Ky. 827, 234 S.W. 972, 974; Middletown Trust Co. v. Gaffey, 96 Conn. 61, 112 A. 689, 691.

A child by concubining, in contradistinction to a child by marriage. Cod. 5, 27.

Posthumous Child

One born after the father's death.

Quasi Posthumous Child

In the civil law. One who, born during the life of his grandfather, or other male ascendant, was not his heir at the time he made his testament, but who by the death of his father became his heir in his lifetime. Inst. 2, 13, 2; Dig. 28, 3, 13.

The word "child" in statutes often means either child or children. Cunningham v. Dunn, 84 W.Va. 593, 100 S.E. 410, 411. See Children.

"Children" is ordinarily a word of description, limited to persons standing in the same relation, and has the same effect as if all the names were given. Rowley v. Currie, 94 N.J.Eq. 606, 120 A. 653, 656.

The words "child or children," in their usual sense, are words of purchase. Phillips v. Mercantile Trust Co. of Baltimore, 195 A. 394, 395, 173 Md. 290; Kelly v. Kelly, 176 Ark. 548, 3 S.W.2d 305; Deener v. Watkins, 191 Ark. 776, 87 S.W.2d 994, 995; they may, however, be used as words of limitation, Bonds v. Hutkinson, 199 S.C. 197, 18 S. E.2d 661, 662, 663; Crawford v. Withrow, 314 Pa. 497, 171 A. 894, 895; Young v. Munsey Trust Co., 72 App.D.C. 73, 111 F.2d 514, 515.

The terms "child" or "children" may include or apply to:

Adopted children. Dyer v. Lane. 202 Ark. 571, 151 S.W.2d 678, 680; Ex parte Cline, 213 Ala. 599, 105 So. 686, 687., Ryan v. Foreman, 262 Ill. 175, 104 N.E. 189; but some decisions hold that adopted children are not included in absence of manifest intention, Savells v. Brown's Guardian, 187 Ky. 134, 218 W. 462, 463; Melek v. Curtiss of University of Missouri, 213 Mo.App. 572, 250 S.W. 614, 615; for cases holding that "child" or "children" does not include adopted children, see Everett v. LaSpeyre, 195 Ga.

CIRUMDUCTION OF THE TERM. In Scotch practice. The sentence of a judge, declaring the time elapsed within which a proof ought to have been led, and precluding the party from bringing forward any further evidence. Bell.

CIRUMSEPTE AGATIS. The title of a statute passed 13 Edw. I (1285) and so called from the Initial words of it, the object of which was to ascertain the boundaries of ecclesiastical jurisdiction in some particularas, or, in other words, to regulate the jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical and temporal courts. 2 Reeve, Eng.Law, 215, 216. See, however, 2 Holdsw.Hist.E.L. 246. And see Articles of the clergy.

The terms "circumstance" and "fact" are, in many applications, synonymous; but the true distinction of a circumstance is its relative character. "Any fact may be a circumstance with reference to any other fact." 1 Benth. Jud.Evid. 42, note; Id. 142. "Circumstances" are minor facts, Pulliam v. State, 196 Ga. 782, 28 S.E.2d 139, 147; related or accessory facts, occurrences or things which stand around, or about, which attend upon, which closely precede or follow, which surround, and accompany, which depend upon, or which support or qualify a principal fact or event, Salter v. State, 163 Ga. 80, 135 S.E. 408, 409.

As used in a statute for an allowance for the wife in a divorce action, having regard to the "circumstances" of the parties, it includes practically everything which has a legitimate bearing on present and prospective matters relating to the lives of both parties. Lamborn v. Lamborn, 80 Cal. App. 494, 251 P. 943, 945.

The "circumstances of the transaction itself," as used in the doctrine of dying declarations, are the circumstances or facts leading up to, causing, or attending the homicide, and are not confined to occurrences at the very time there of. Pendleton v. Commonwealth, 131 Va. 676, 109 S.E. 201, 209.

Thrift, integrity, good repute, business capacity, and stability of character, for example, are "circumstances" which may be very properly considered in determining the question of "adequate security." Martin v. Duke, 5 Rea. Sur. (N.Y.) 600.
CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE. The term includes all evidence of indirect nature. Milligan v. State, 109 Fla. 219, 147 So. 260, 263.

It is direct evidence as to facts deposed to but indirect as to the factum probandum, Brown v. State, 126 Tex.Cr.R. 449, 72 S.W.2d 269, 270; evidence of facts or circumstances from which the existence or nonexistence of fact in issue may be inferred. People v. Steele, 37 N.Y.S.2d 199, 200, 175 Misc. 387; Wolff v. Employers Fire Ins. Co., 282 Ky. 824, 140 S.W.2d 640, 645, 130 A.L.R. 682; Scott v. State, 57 Ga.App. 489, 195 S.E. 923, 924; inferences drawn from facts proved, Hatfield v. Levy Bros., 18 Cal.2d 798, 117 P.2d 841, 845; preponderance of probabilities, Hercules Powder Co., v. Nieratko, 113 N.J.L. 188, 173 A. 606, 610; process of decision by which court or jury may reason from circumstances known or proved, to establish by inference the principal fact, People v. Taddio, 292 N.Y. 488, 55 N.E.2d 749, 750.

It means that existence of principal facts is only inferred from circumstances. Twin City Fire Ins. Co. v. Lonas, 255 Ky. 717, 75 S.W.2d 348, 350.

When the existence of the principal fact is deduced from evidentiary by a process of probable reasoning, the evidence and process said to be presumptive. Best, Pres. 246; id. 12. All presumptive evidence is circumstantial because necessarily derived from or made up of circumstances, but all circumstantial evidence is not presumptive. Burrill.

The proof of various facts or circumstances which usually attend the main fact in dispute, and therefore tend to prove its existence, or to sustain, by their consistency, the hypothesis claimed. Or as otherwise defined, it consists in reasoning from facts which are known or proved to establish such as are conjectured to exist.

CIRCUMSTANTIBUS, TALES DE. See Tales.

CIRCUMVENTION. In Scotch law. Any act of fraud whereby a person is reduced to a deed by deceit. It has the same sense in the civil law. Dig. 50, 17, 49, 155. And see Oregon v. Jennings, 7 S.Ct. 124, 119 U.S. 74, 30 L.Ed. 323.

CIRCUS. A large inclosure with one end rounded for races, a show in which feats of horsemanship, tumbling, strength, etc., are exhibited. Zucarro v. State, 82 Tex.Cr.R. 1, 197 S.W. 982, 985, L.R.A. 1918B, 354.

It is synonymous with the term emplazamiento in the old Spanish law, and the in jus vocatio of the Roman law.

CITATIO. Lat. A citation or summons to court.

CITATIO AD REASSUMENDAM CAUSAM. A summons to take up the cause. A process, in the civil law, which issued when one of the parties to a suit died before its determination, for the plaintiff against the defendant’s heir, or for the plaintiff’s heir against the defendant, as the case might be; analogous to a modern bill of revivor, which is probably borrowed from this proceeding.

CITATIO EST DE JURI NATURALI. A summons is by natural right. Cases in Banco Regn. Wm. III. 453.

It is usually original process in any proceeding where used, and in such respect is analogous to a writ of capias or summons at law and subpena in chancery. Gondas v. Gondas, 99 N.J Eq. 473, 134 A. 615, 618.

As the act of the court through its proper officer commanding the appearance of defendant at the time and place named to answer to plaintiff’s petition, it has the dignity of official character and weight of superior authority. Mor. Oil & Gas Co. v. Anderson, Tex.Civ.App., 223 S.W. 1031, 1032. It is used in this sense, in American law, in the practice upon writs of error from the United States supreme court, and in the proceedings of courts of probate in many of the states. Durfee v. Durfee, 293 Mass. 472, 200 N.E. 395, 397; Schwartz v. Lake, 109 La. 1081, 34 So. 96.

It is also the name of the process used in the English ecclesiastical, probate, and divorce courts to call the defendant or respondent before them. 3 B1.Comm. 100; 3 Steph. Comm. 720. And in Scotch practice it is the calling of a party to an action done by an officer of the court under a proper warrant; the service of a writ or bill of summons. Paters. Comp.

CITATION OF AUTHORITIES. The reading, or production of, or reference to, legal authorities and precedents, (such as constitutions, statutes, reported cases, and elementary treatises,) in arguments to courts, or in legal text-books, to establish or fortify the propositions advanced.

CITATIONS, LAW OF. In Roman law. An act of Valentinian, passed A. D. 426, providing that the writings of only five jurists, viz., Papinian, Paul, Gaius, Ulpian, and Modestinus, should be quoted as authorities. The majority was binding on the judge. If they were equally divided the opinion of Papinian was to prevail; and in such a case, if Papinian was silent upon the matter, then the judge was free to follow his own view of the matter. Brown.

CITATIONES NON CONCEDANTUR PRIUS QUAM EXPRIMATUR SUPER QA RE FIERI DEBET CITATIO. Citations should not be granted before it is stated about what matter the citation is to be made. (A maxim of ecclesiastical law.) 12 Coke, 44.

CITE. L. Fr. City; a city. Cite de Loundr, city of London.
The term appears to have been used in the Roman government to designate a person who had the freedom of the city, and the right to exercise all political and civil privi-eges of the government. There was also, at Rome, a partial citizenship, including civil, but not political rights.
Cooley, Const.Lim. 77. One of the sovereign people. A member of a nation or body politic of the sovereign state or political society who owes allegiance, Luria v. U.
S., 34 S.Ct. 10, 19, 231 U.S. 9, 58 L.Ed. 101; U. S. v. Polzin,
D.C.Md., 48 F.Supp. 476, 479. A member of the civil state entitled to all its privileges.
Cooley, Const.Lim. 77. One of the sovereign people. A constituent member of the sovereignty synonymous with the people. Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. 404, 15 L.Ed. 691.

In American Law
One who, under the constitution and laws of the United States, or of a particular state, is a member of the political community, owing allegiance and being entitled to the enjoyment of full civil rights. Amy v. Smith, 1 Litt. (Ky.) 331; Minor v.
Happersett, 21 Wall. 162, 22 L.Ed. 627.

All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and

CITE CIVIL ACTION

In English Law

The word “subject” is used to designate an inhabitant of the country, or one amenable to the laws of the nation.

CITIZENSHIP. The status of being a citizen (q. v.).

CITY.

In England

An incorporated town or borough which is or has been the see of a bishop. Co.Litt. 108; 1 Bl.Comm. 114; Cowell, 1 Steph.Comm. 115. State v. Green, 126 N.C. 1032, 35 S.E. 462.

There is said, however, to be no necessary connection between a city and a see. Oxford Diet., citing Freeman.

In America

The fundamental distinction between town and city organization is that in the former all the qualified inhabitants meet together to deliberate and vote as individuals, each in his own right, while in the latter all municipal functions are performed by deputies; the one being direct, the other representative. In re Opinion of the Justices, 229 Mass. 601, 119 N.E. 778, 781.

The word “city,” however, is often used to include an incorporated town. Noble v. State, 112 Tex.Cr.R. 676, 18 S.W.2d 619, 620; and to include villages, People v. City of Chicago, 349 Ill. 304, 182 N.E. 419, 431. It has also been held that, under statutes, the term includes all municipal corporations and corporate authorities, such as a board of park commissioners; People v. Kesner, 321 Ill. 230, 151 N.E. 481, 483; but that it does not include a village; Village of Depue v. Banschbach, 273 Ill. 574, 113 N.E. 156, 159.

In Medieval History

In the Middle Ages in Germany, fortified places in the enjoyment of market-jurisdiction.

The German as well as the French cities are a creation of the Middle Ages; there was an organic connection with the Roman town-system. Schroder, Lehrbuch des Deutschen Rechtsgeschichte 588.

CITY COUNCIL. The name of a group of municipal officers constituting primarily a legislative and administrative body, but which is often charged with judicial or quasi judicial functions, as when sitting on charges involving the removal of an officer for cause. Rutter v. Burke, 89 Vt. 14, 93 A. 842, 849.

CITY ELECTION. Any election in a city at which people of the city may vote, Wing v. Ryan, 6 N.Y.S.2d 825, 829, 255 App.Div. 163.

CITY OF LONDON COURT. A court having a local jurisdiction within the city of London. It is to all intents and purposes a county court, having the same jurisdiction and procedure.

CITY WARRANT. A command of council to treasurer to pay amount. State v. McCarthy, 282 P. 1045, 1048, 86 Mont. 100.

CIUDADES. Sp. In Spanish law, cities; distinguished from towns (pueblos) and villages (villas.) Hart v. Burnett, 15 Cal. 537.

CIVIC. Pertaining to a city or citizen, or to citizenship. Cleveland Opera Co. v. Cleveland Civic Opera Ass’n, 22 Ohio App. 400, 154 N.E. 352, 353.

CIVIC ENTERPRISE. A project or undertaking in which citizens of a city co-operate to promote the common good and general welfare of the people of the city. James McCord Co. v. Citizens’ Hotel Co., Tex.Civ.App., 287 S.W. 906, 908.

CIVIL. Originally, pertaining or appropriate to a member of a civitas or free political community; natural or proper to a citizen. Also, relating to the community, or to the policy and government of the citizens and subjects of a state.

The word is derived from the Latin civilis, a citizen. Byers v. Sun Savings Bank, 41 Okl. 728, 139 P. 948, 949, 52 L.R.A.N.S., 320, Ann.Cas.1916D.222. In law, it has various significations. In contradistinction to barbarous or savage, it indicates a state of society reduced to order and regular government. In contradistinction to criminal, it indicates the private rights and remedies of men. It is also used in contradistinction to military, ecclesiastical, natural, or foreign. Story, Const. § 791; 1 Bla.Comm. 6, 125, 251; Montesquieu, Sp. of Laws, b. 1, c. 3; Rutherforth, Inst. b. 2, c. 2; id. c. 3; id. c. 8, p. 395; Heineccius, Elem. Jurisp.Nat. b. 2, ch. 6.

A prisoner’s statutory obligation to pay for his keep and maintenance is civil. Auditor General v. Hall, 300 Mich. 215, 1 N.W.2d 516, 518, 139 A.L.R. 1022.

As to civil “Commotion,” “Conspiracy,” “Contempt,” “Corporations,” “Death,” “Injury,” “Liberty,” “Obligation,” “Officer,” “Possession,” “Remedy,” “Rights,” and “War,” see those titles. See also, the following titles beginning with “Civil.”

CIVIL ACTION. In general

An action wherein an issue is presented for trial formed by averments of complaint and de-

In the Civil Law
A personal action which is instituted to compel payment, or the doing of some other thing which is purely civil. Pothier, Introd. Gen. aux Cont. 110.

At Common Law
One which seeks the establishment, recovery, or redress of private and civil rights. One brought to recover some civil right, or to obtain redress for some wrong not being a crime or misdemeanor. Wheeling Traction Co. v. Pennsylvania Co., D.C.Ohio, 1 F.2d 478, 479.

Civil suits relate to and affect only individual rights whereas criminal prosecutions involve public wrongs. Can-cemi v. People, 18 N.Y. 128. They include all cases, both at law and in equity, which cannot legally be denominated “criminal cases.” Fenstermacher v. State, 19 Or. 504, 25 P. 142; Welford v. Havard, 127 Miss. 83, 89 So. 812, 813.

In Code Practice
The one form of action for enforcement or protection of private rights and prevention or redress of private wrongs. Code N.Y. § 69. It may also be brought for the recovery of a penalty or forfeiture.

“Civil action” implies adversary parties and an issue, and is designed for the recovery or vindication of a civil right or the redress of some civil wrong. Bost v. Williams, 287 Mo. 317, 229 S.W. 796, 798. It is a generic term, and does not necessarily imply jury trial. State Board of Medical Examiners v. Macy, 92 Wash. 614, 159 P. 801, 804.

CIVIL BILL COURT. A tribunal in Ireland with a jurisdiction analogous to that of the county courts in England. The judge of it is also chairman of quarter sessions (where the jurisdiction is more extensive than in England), and performs the duty of revising barristers. Wharton.

CIVIL DAMAGE ACTS. Acts which provide in certain cases an action for damages to one injured because of the furnishing of liquor. Tarwater v. Atlantic Co., 176 Tenn. 510, 144 S.W.2d 746, 747.

CIVIL DAY. See the title Day.

CIVIL INQUEST. A proceeding to determine whether an individual is a criminal sexual psycho-pathic person within statute providing for confinement and treatment of such persons. People v. Chapman, 301 Mich. 584, 4 N.W.2d 18, 26.

CIVIL LAW. "Civil Law," "Romani Law" and "Roman Civil Law" are convertible phrases, meaning the same system of jurisprudence.

That rule of action which every particular nation, commonwealth, or city has established peculiarly for itself; more properly called "municipal" law, to distinguish it from the "law of nature," and from international law. See Bowyer, Mod. Civil Law, 19; Sevier v. Riley, 189. Cal. 170, 244 P. 323, 325.

That division of municipal law which is occupied with the exposition and enforcement of civil rights as distinguished from criminal law.

The system of jurisprudence held and administered in the Roman empire, particularly as set forth in the compilation of Justinian and his successors,—comprising the Institutes, Code, Digest, and Novels, and collectively denominated the "Corpus Juris Civii/ia,"—as distinguished from the common law of England and the canon law.

The word "civi," as applied to the laws in force in Louisiana, before the adoption of the Civil Code, is not used in contradistinction to the word "criminal," but must be restricted to the Roman law. It is used in contradistinction to the laws of England and those of the respective states. Jennison v. Warmack, 5 La. 493.

CIVIL LIABILITY. The amenability to civil action as distinguished from amenability to criminal prosecution. Corn. v. Shimpeno, 160 Pa. Super. 104, 50 A.2d 39, 43. A sum of money assessed either as general, special or liquidated damages, either single, double or treble for violation such as overcharges. Lewis v. Anderson, D.C.Cal., 72 F.Supp. 119, 123.

CIVIL LIST. In English public law. An annual sum granted by parliament, at the commencement of each reign, for the expenses of the royal household and establishment, leaving a provision made for the crown out of the taxes in lieu of its proper patrimony. 2 Steph. Comm. 591; 1 Bl. Comm. 332.

CIVIL NUISANCE. At common law, anything done to hurt or annoyance of lands, tenements, or hereditaments of another. Brownesey v. General Printing Ink Corporation, 118 N.J.L. 505, 193 A. 824, 826.

CIVIL OBLIGATION. One which binds in law, and may be enforced in a court of justice. Pothier, Obl. 173, 191.

CIVIL OFFICE. An office, not merely military in its nature, that pertains to the exercise of the powers or authority of civil government. State ex rel. Landis v. Futch, 122 Fla. 837, 165 So. 907, 909. Requisites are continuity, creation and definition of powers and duties by Constitution or Legislature, or their authority, possession of governmental power, and independence unless controlled by superior officers. State ex rel. McIntosh v. Hutchinson, 187 Wash. 61, 59 P.2d 1117, 1118, 105 A.L.R. 1234.

CIVIL OFFICER. See Officer.
CIVIL RESPONSIBILITY. The liability to be called upon to respond to an action at law for an injury caused by a delict or crime, as opposed to criminal responsibility, or liability to be proceeded against in a criminal tribunal.

CIVIL RIGHTS. See Right.

CIVIL SERVICE. This term properly includes all functions under the government, except military functions. In general it is confined to functions in the great administrative departments of state. People v. Cram, 61 N.Y.S. 858, 29 Misc. 359. But in enlarged sense means all service rendered to and paid for by state, nation, or political subdivisions thereof, except that pertaining to naval or military affairs. Long v. Wells, 186 Ga. 602, 198 S.E. 763, 768.

CIVIL SERVICE REFORM. Substitution of business principles and methods for spoils system in conduct of civil service, especially in matter of appointments. Ward v. Leche, 189 La, 113, 179 So. 52, 55.

CIVIL SIDE. When the same court has jurisdiction of both civil and criminal matters, proceedings of the first class are often said to be on the civil side; those of the second, on the criminal side.

COLLEGIALITER. In a corporate capacity. 2 Kent, Comm. 296.

COLLEGIATE CHURCH. In English ecclesiastical law. A church built and endowed for a society or body corporate of a dean or other president, and secular priests, as canons or prebendaries in the said church; such as the churches of Westminster, Windsor, and others. Cowell.

COLLEGIIUM. Lat. In the civil law. A word having various meanings; e. g., an assembly, society, or company; a body of bishops; an army; a class of men. But the principal idea of the word was that of an association of individuals of the same rank and station, or united for the pursuit of some business or enterprise. Sometimes, a corporation, as in the maxim "tres factiunt collegium" (1 Bl.Comm. 469), though the more usual and proper designation of a corporation was "universitas."

COLLEGIIUM AMMIRALITATIS. The college or society of the admiralty.
COLLEGIUM

COLLEGIUM EST SOCIETAS PLURIUM COR-
PORUM SIMUL HABITANTUM. Jenk.Cent. 229.
A college is a society of several persons dwelling together.

COLLEGIUM ILLICITUM. One which abused its right, or assembled for any other purpose than that expressed in its charter.

COLLEGIUM LICITUM. An assemblage or society of men united for some useful purpose or business, with power to act like a single individual.
2 Kent, Comm. 269.

COLLIDE. To strike or dash against; to come into collision; to clash. Collins v. Leahy, Mo.
App., 102 S.W.2d 801, 809.

COLLIERY. This term is sufficiently wide to include all contiguous and connected veins and seams of coal which are worked as one concern, without regard to the closes or pieces of ground under which they are carried, and apparently also the engines and machinery in such contiguous and Bright, 58 Pa. 85.

It includes every operation and work, both under and above ground, used or to be used to mine and prepare coal.

COLLIGENDUM BONA DEFUNCTI. See Ad
Colligendum, etc.

COLLISION. Striking together of two objects, one of which may be stationary. Davilla v. Liberty Life Ins. Co., 114 Cal.App. 308, 299 P. 831, 834. Act or instance of colliding; state of having
Wis. 478, 17 N.W.2d 570, 571.

Maritime Law
The act of ships or vessels striking together.

In its strict sense, collision means the impact of two vessels both moving, and is distinguished from allision, which designates the striking of a moving vessel against one that is stationary. But collision is used in a broad sense, to include allision, and perhaps other species of contingency of a collision of the insured vessel with another vessel and the liability of the insured for the injury to such other vessel. Fire-Wash., 236 F. 618, 631. Also known as “running down” clause.

COLLISTRIGIUM. The pillory.

COLLOBIUM. A hood or covering for the shoulders, formerly worn by serjeants at law.

COLLOCATION. In French law. The arrangement or marshaling of the creditors of an estate in the order in which they are to be paid according to law. Merl. Repert.

COLLOQUIUM. One of the usual parts of the declaration in an action for slander. It is a general averment that the words complained of were spoken “of and concerning the plaintiff,” or concerning the extrinsic matters alleged in the inducement, and its office is to connect the whole publication with the previous statement. Van 339; Lukehart v. Byerly, 53 Pa. 421; Express Pub.
Co. v. Wilkins, Tex.Civ.App., 218 S.W. 614, 616;
Kee v. Armstrong, Byrd & Co., 75 Okl. 84, 182 P.
494, 498, 5 A.L.R. 1349.

An averment that the words in question are spoken of or concerning some usage, report, or fact which gives to words otherwise indifferent the peculiar defamatory meaning assigned to them. Carter v. Andrews, 16 Pick., Mass., 6; Moore v. Leverett, Tex.Civ.App., 33 S.W.2d 838, 842.
COLLUSION. Is an agreement between two or more persons to defraud a person of his rights by the forms of law, or to obtain an object forbidden by law. It implies the existence of fraud of some kind, the employment of fraudulent means, or of lawful means for the accomplishment of an unlawful purpose. May Hosiery Mills v. United States District Court in and for Dist. of Montana, C.C.A. Mont., 64 F.2d 450, 454.

A secret combination, conspiracy, or concert of action between two or more persons for fraudulent or deceitful purpose, W. E. Bowen Improvement Co. v. Van Half ten, 209 Mo.App. 629, 238 S.W. 147, 149; Daly v. Haight, 156 N.Y.S. 538, 541, 170 App.Div. 469.

A secret arrangement between two or more persons, whose interests are apparently conflicting, to make use of the forms and proceedings of law in order to defraud a third person, or to obtain that which justice would not give them, by deceiving a court or its officers. Railroad Co. v. Gay, 86 Tex. 571, 26 S. W. 599, 25 L.R.A. 52; Balch v. Beach, 119 Wis. 77, 95 N.W. 132. A secret agreement between two persons that one should institute a suit against the other, in order to obtain the decision of a judicial tribunal for some sinister purpose. In re Insull Utility Investments, D.C.I11., 6 F.Supp. 653, 655.

In divorce proceedings, collusion is an agreement between husband and wife that one of them shall commit, or fail to commit, or to have committed, or be represented in court as having committed, acts constituting a cause of divorce, for the purpose of enabling the other to obtain a divorce. But it also means connivance or conspiracy in initiating or prosecuting the suit, as where there is a compact for mutual aid in carrying it through to a decree. Beard v. Beard, 65 Cal. 354, 4 P. 229; Pohiman v. Pohiman, 60 N.J.Eq. 28, 46 A. 658; McCauley v. McCauley, 88 N.J.Eq. 392, 103 A. 20, 23. Rosenweig v. Rosenweig, 246 N.Y.S. 231, 233, 231 App.Div. 13.

COLLUSIVE ACTION. An action not founded upon an actual controversy between the parties to it, but brought for purpose of securing a determination of a point of law for the gratification of curiosity or to settle rights of third persons not parties. It will not be entertained. City and County of San Francisco v. Boyd, 22 Cal.2d 685, 140 P.2d 666, 669, 670.

COLLYBISTA. In the civil law. A money-changer; a dealer in money.

COLLYBUM. In the civil law. Exchange.

COLNE. In Saxon and old English law. An account or calculation.

OLONUS. In old European law. A husbandman; an inferior tenant employed in cultivating the lord's land. A term of Roman origin, corresponding with the Saxon ceorl. 1 Spence, Ch. 51.

COLONY. A dependent political community, consisting of a number of citizens of the same country who have emigrated therefrom to people another, and remain subject to the mother-country. U. S. v. The Nancy, 3 Wash.C.C. 287, Fed.Cas.No.15,854.

A settlement in a foreign country possessed and cultivated, either wholly or partially, by immigrants and their descendants, who have a political connection with and subordination to the mother-country, whence they emigrated. In other words, it is a place peopled from some more ancient city or country. Wharton.

COLONY. In the English government, this is the department of state through which the sovereign appoints colonial governors, etc., and communicates with them. Until the year 1854, the secretary for the colonies was also secretary for war.

Colonial Laws

In America, this term designates the body of law in force in the thirteen original colonies before the Declaration of Independence. In England, the term signifies the laws enacted by Canada and the other present British colonies.

COLOR. An appearance, semblance, or simulacrum, as distinguished from that which is real. A prima facie or apparent right. Hence, a deceptive appearance; a plausible, assumed exterior, concealing a lack of reality; a disguise or pre-text. Railroad Co. v. Allfree, 64 Iowa 500, 20 N.W. 779; Broughton v. Haywood, 61 N.C. 383; Wilt v. Bueter, 186 Ind. 98, 111 N.E. 926, 929.

In pleading. Ground of action admitted to subsist in the opposite party by the pleading of one of the parties to an action, which is so set out as to be apparently valid, but which is in reality legally insufficient.

A term of the ancient rhetoricians, and early adopted into the language of pleading. It was an apparent or prima facie right; and the meaning of the rule that pleadings in confession and avoidance should give color was that they should confess the matter adversely alleged, to such an extent, at least, as to admit some apparent right in the opposite party, which required to be encountered and avoided by the allegation of new matter. Color was either express, i. e., inserted in the pleading, or implied, which was naturally inherent in the structure of the pleading. Steph.P1. 233; Merten v. Bank, 5 Okl. 585, 49 P. 913. Wheeler v. Nickels, 168 Or. 604, 126 P.2d 32, 36.

The word also means the dark color of the skin showing the presence of negro blood; and hence it is equivalent to African descent or parentage. Johnson v. Board of Education of Wilson County, 166 N.C. 468, 82 S.E. 832, 834, L.R.A.1915A, 828.

COLOR OF AUTHORITY. That semblance or presumption of authority sustaining the acts of a public officer which is derived from his apparent title to the office or from a writ or other process in his hands apparently valid and regular. State v. Oates, 86 Wis. 634, 57 N.W. 296, 39 Am.St.Rep. 912.

COLOR OF LAW. The appearance or semblance, without the substance, of legal right. State v. Brecher, 185 Wis. 599, 202 N.W. 144, 148.

COLOR OF OFFICE. An act unjustly done by the countenance of an office, being grounded upon corruption, to which the office is as a shadow and color. Plow. 64. Day v. National Bond & Investment Co., Mo.App., 99 S.W.2d 117, 119.

COLOR OF TITLE. The appearance, semblance, or simulacrum of title. Also termed "apparent title." Any fact, extraneous to the act or mere will of the claimant, which has the appearance, on its face, of supporting his claim of a present title to land, but which, for some defect, in reality falls short of establishing it. Howth v. Farrar, C.C.A. Tex., 94 F.2d 654, 658; Saltmarsh v. Crommelin, 24 Ala. 352.

A writing upon its face professing to pass title but which does not, either through want of title in the grantor or in a defective mode of conveyance. Philbin v. Carr, 75 Ind.App. 560, 129 N.E. 19, 24; Glass v. Lynchburg Shoe Co., 212 N.C. 70, 192 S.E. 899.

That which the law considers prima facie a good title, but which, by reason of some defect, not appearing on its face, does not in fact amount to title. An absolute nullity, as a void deed, judgment, etc., will not constitute color of title. Causey v. White, 143 Ga. 7, 84 S.E. 58; Stearns Coal & Lumber Co. v. Boyatt, 168 Ky. 111, 181 S. W. 962, 964. That which is in appearance to be title but not in reality. Ftschen Bros. Commercial Co. v. Noyes' Estate, 76 Mont. 175, 246 P. 773, 779; Boland v. Heck, 179 Okl. 403, 65 P.2d 1213, 1215.

"Any instrument having a grantor and grantee, and containing a description of the lands intended to be conveyed, and apt words for their conveyance, gives color of title to the lands described. Such an instrument purports to be a conveyance of the title, and because it does not, for some reason, suit that to which it purports, it passes only color or the semblance of a title." Brooks v. Bruyn, 35 Ill. 392.

"Color of title" is not synonymous with "claim of title." To constitute "color of title" there must be a paper title to give color to the adverse possession, whereas, a "claim of title" may be shown wholly by parol. Walton v. Sikes, 165 Ga. 422, 141 S.E. 188, 190.

COLORABLE. That which has or gives color. That which is in appearance only, and not in reality, what it purports to be. Counterfeit, feigned, having the appearance of truth. Ellis v. Jones, 73 Colo. 516, 216 P. 257, 258.

COLORABLE ALTERATION. One which makes no real or substantial change, but is introduced only as a subterfuge or means of evading the patent or copyright law.

COLORABLE CAUSE OR INVOCATION OF JURISDICTION. With reference to actions for malicious prosecution, a "colorable cause or invocation of jurisdiction" means that a person, apparently qualified, has appeared before a justice and made a complaint under oath and in writing, stating some facts which in connection with other facts constitute a criminal offense or bear a similitude thereto. Hotel Supply Co. v. Reid, 16 Ala. App. 563, 80 So. 137, 138.

COLORABLE CLAIM. In bankruptcy law, a claim made by one holding the property as an agent or bailee of the bankrupt; a claim in which as a matter of law, there is no adverseness. In re if tim, C.C.A.Wis., 202 F. 883, 884; In re Western Rope & Mfg. Co., C.C.A.Okl., 298 F. 926, 927.

COLORABLE IMITATION. In the law of trademarks, this phrase denotes such a close or ingenious imitation as to be calculated to deceive or ordinary persons.

COLORABLE PLEADING. The practice of giving color in pleading.

COLORABLE TRANSACTION. One presenting an appearance which does not correspond with the reality, and, ordinarily, an appearance intended to conceal or to deceive. Osborn v. Osborn, 102 Kan. 890, 172 P. 23, 24.

COLORE OFFICII. Lat. By color of office. Officer's acts unauthorized by officer's position, though done in form that purports that acts are done by reason of official duty and by virtue of office. Richards v. American Surety Co. of New York, 48 Ga.App. 102, 171 S.E. 924. See, also, Color of Office.

COLORED. By common usage in America, this term, in such phrases as "colored persons," "the colored race," "colored men," and the like, is used to designate negroes or persons of the African race, including all persons of mixed blood descended from negro ancestry. Collins v. Oklahoma State Hospital, 76 Okl. 229, 184 P. 946, 949, 7 A.L.R. 895; Theophanis v. Theophanis, 244 Ky. 689, 51 S.W.2d 957.

But where a state Constitution provided for separate schools for the white and colored races, the term "white race" was held to be limited to the Caucasian race, and the term "colored races" to embrace all other races. Rice v. Gong Lum, 139 Miss. 760, 104 So. 105, 107.

It has also been held that there is no legal technical signification to the phrase "colored person" which the courts are bound judicially to know. Pauska v. Daus, 31 Tex. 74.

COPICES. Young poles, which, being cut down, are made levers or lifters. Blount.

COPINDACII. In old Scotch law. A young beast or cow, of the age of one or two years; in later times called a "cowdasfi."

COLT. An animal of the horse species, whether male or female, not more than four years old. Russ. & R. 416; Mallory v. Berry, 16 Kan. 295; Pullen v. State, 11 Tex.App. 91.

COM. An abbreviation for "company," exactly equivalent to "Co." Keith v. Sturges, 51 Ill. 142.

COMBARONES. In old English law. Fellow-barons; fellow-citizens;—the citizens or freemen of the Cinque Ports being anciently called "barons;" the term "combarones" is used in this sense in a grant of Henry III. to the barons of the port of Frevesham. Cowell.

COMBAT. A forcible encounter between two or more persons; a battle; a duel. Trial by battle.

Mutual Combat
One into which both the parties enter willingly or voluntarily; it implies a common intent to COMBATERIE. A valley or piece of low ground between two hills. Kennett, Gloss.

COMBE. A small or narrow valley.

In patent law. A composition of old or new elements, and it is patentable, if it produces new and useful results, though all its constituents were well known and in common use before it was made, provided the results are a product of the combination, and not a mere aggregate of several results. U. S. Industrial Chemical Co. v. Therox Co., C.C.A.Md., 25 F.2d 387, 391.

The distinction between a ‘combination’ and an ‘aggregation’ lies in the presence or absence of mutuality of action; a “combination” essentially requiring that there be some joint operation performed by its elements, producing a result due to their joint and cooperating action, while in an ‘aggregation’ there is a mere adding together of separate contributions, each operating independently of the other. Ball v. Coker, C.C.A.S.C., 210 F. 278, 282; Mead Morrison Mfg. Co. v. Exeter Mach. Works, D.C.Pa., 215 F. 731.

COMBINATION IN RESTRAINT OF TRADE. A trust, pool, or other association of two’ or more individuals or corporations having for its object to monopolize the manufacture or traffic in a particular commodity, to regulate or control the output, restrict the sale, establish and maintain the price, stifle or exclude competition, or otherwise to interfere with the normal course of trade under conditions of free competition. Northern Securities Co. v. U. S., 193 U.S. 197, 24 S.Ct. 436, 48 L.Ed. 679; U. S. v. Knight Co., 156 U.S. 1, 15 S.Ct. 249, 39 L.Ed. 325.

COMBINED CARBON. As used in the metallurgy of iron and steel, carbon in union with some one or more metallic constituents in the iron alloy. Pittsburgh Iron & Steel Foundries Co. v. Seaman-Sleeth Co., C.C.A.Pa., 248 F. 705, 707.

COMBUSTIO. Burning. In old English law. The punishment inflicted upon apostates.
COMITES

66. Also, the retinue or train of a prince or high governmental official. Spelman. The retinue which accompanied a Roman proconsul to his province. Du Cange. The personal following of professional warriors. Taylor, Jurispr. 216.

COMITES PALEYS. Counts or earls palatine; those who had the government of a county palatine.

COMITIA. In Roman law. An assembly, either (1) of the Roman curiae, in which case it was called the "comitia curiata vel calata"; or (2) of the Roman centuries, in which case it was called the "comitia centuriata" (called also comitia majora); or (3) of the Roman tribes, in which case it was called the "comitia tributa." Only patri- cians were members of the first comitia, and only plebians of the last; but the comitia centuriata comprised the entire populace, patricians and plebians both, and was the great legislative assembly passing the leges, properly so called, as the senate passed the senatus consulta, and the comitia tributa passed the plebiscita. Under the Lex Horten sia, 287 B.C., the plebiscitum acquired the force of a lex. Brown.

COMITISSA. In old English law. A countess; an earl's wife.

COMITIVA. In old English law. The dignity and office of a comes (count or earl); the same with what was afterwards called "comitatus."

Also a companion or fellow-traveler; a troop or company of robbers. Jacob.

COMITY. Courtesy; complaisance; respect; a willingness to grant a privilege, not as a matter of right, but out of deference and good will. Dow v. Lillie, 26 N.D. 512, 144 N.W. 1082, 1088, L.R.A. 1915D, 754; Cox v. Terminal R. Ass'n of St. Louis, 331 Mo. 910, 55 S.W.2d 685.

Comity of Nations

(Lat. comitas gentium)

The most appropriate phrase to express the true foundation and extent of the obligation of the laws of one nation within the territories of another. Story, Confl.Laws, § 38. That body of rules which states observe towards one another from courtesy or mutual convenience, although they do not form part of international law. Holtz. Enc. s. v. Hilton v. Guyot, 159 U.S. 113, 16 S.Ct. 139, 40 L.Ed. 95; People v. Rushworth, 294 Ill. 455, 128 N.E. 555, 558; Second Russian Ins. Co. v. Miller, C.C.A.N.Y., 297 F. 404, 409.

It is derived altogether from the voluntary consent of the latter; and it is inadmissible when it is contrary to its known policy, or prejudicial to its interests. In the silence of any positive rule affirming or denying or restraining the operation of foreign laws, courts of justice presume the tacit adoption of them by their own government, unless repugnant to its policy, or prejudicial to its interests. It is not the comity of the courts, but the comity of the nation, which is administered and ascertained in the same way, and guided by the same reasoning, by which all other principles of the municipal law are ascertained and guided.

The recognition which one nation allows within its territory to the legislative, executive, or judicial acts of another nation, having due regard both to international duty and convenience and to the rights of its own citizens or of other persons who are under the protection of its laws. State ex rel. National Surety Corporation v. Price, 129 Neb. 433, 261 N.W. 894.

"The use of the word 'comity' as expressing the basis of jurisdiction has been criticized. It is, however, a mere question of definition. The principles lying behind the word are recognized. * * * The truth remains that jurisdiction depends upon the law of the forum, and this law in turn depends upon the public policy disclosed by the acts and declarations of the political departments of the government." Russian Socialist Federated Soviet Republic v. Cibrario, 235 N.Y. 255, 139 N.E. 259, 260.

Judicial Comity

The principle in accordance with which the courts of one state or jurisdiction will give effect to the laws and judicial decisions of another, not as a matter of obligation, but out of deference and respect. Franzén v. Zimmer, 35 N.Y.S. 612, 90 Hun 103; Stowp v. Bank, C.C.Me., 92 F. 96; Strawn Mercantile Co. v. First Nat. Bank, Tex. Civ.App., 279 S.W. 473, 474; Bobala v. Bobala, 68 Ohio App. 63, 33 N.E.2d 845, 849.

There is no statute or common-law rule by which one court is bound to abide by the decisions of another court of equal rank. It does so simply for what may be called comity among judges. There is no common law or statutory rule to oblige a court to bow to its own decisions; it does so on the ground of judicial comity. (1884) 9 P.D. 98, per Brett, M. R.

Of such a use of the word, however, Dicey says: 'The term 'comity' * * * is open to the charge of implying that the judge, when he applies foreign law to a particular case, does so as a matter of caprice or favor.'

Comity is not a rule of law, but one of practice, convenience and expediency. It is something more than mere courtesy, which implies only deference to the opinion of others, since it has a substantial value in securing uniformity of decision, and discouraging repeated litigation of the same question. But its obligation is not imperative. Comity persuades; but it does not command. It declares not how a case shall be decided, but how it may with propriety be decided. Mast, Fos & Co. v. Mfg. Co., 177 U.S. 485, 488, 20 S.Ct. 708, 44 L.Ed. 856; National Electric Sig- naling Co. v. Telefunken Wireless Telegraph Co. of United States, C.C.A.N.Y., 221 F. 629, 632; Lauer V. Freudenthal, 96 Wash. 394, 165 P. 98, 99.

Comity of States

Simply a phrase designating the practice by which the courts of one state follow the decision of another on a like question, though not bound by law of precedents to do so. Larrick v. Walters, 39 Ohio App. 363, 177 N.E. 642, 645.

COMMA. A point used to mark the smallest structural divisions of a sentence, or a rhetorical punctuation mark indicating the slightest possible separation in ideas or construction. Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Pomerantz, 124 Misc. 250, 207 N.Y.S. 81, 86.

COMMAND. An order, imperative direction, or behest. State v. Mann, 2 N.C. 4; Barney v. Hayes, COMMENCEMENT.

An authoritative order of a judge or magisterial officer.

In criminal law. The act or offense of one who commands another to transgress the law, or do anything contrary to law, as theft, murder, or the like. Particularly applied to the act of an accessory before the fact, in inciting, procuring, setting on, or stirring up another to do the fact or act. 2 Inst. 182.

COMMARCHIO. A boundary; the confines of land.

To commence an action or suit is to demand something by the institution of process in a court of justice. Cohens v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 408, 5 L.Ed. 257.

To "bring" a suit is an equivalent term; an action is "commenced" when it is "brought," and vice versa. Goldberg v. Murphy, 108 U.S. 162, 2 S. Ct. 388, 27 L.Ed. 686; Hannan v. Gordon, Tex.Com.App., 261 S.W. 1006, 1007.

An action is "commenced" within the meaning of the statute of limitations as soon as the summons is signed and sealed in good faith, for the purpose of immediate service, and that purpose is not afterwards abandoned. Wilson v. Clear, 85 N.J.L. 474, 89 A. 1031. Compare Glenn v. Payne, 153 Tenn. 240, 280 S. W. 1019, 1021. Owen v. City of Eastland, 124 Tex. 419, 78 S.W.2d 178, 179.

A suit in a court of record is "commenced", so as to save suit from bar of statute of limitations, when the petition is filed, even though process is not issued until the period of limitation has run, since plaintiff has done all he can toward commencement of the suit. Mo.St.Ann. § 724, p. 940. City of St. Louis v. Miller, 235 Mo.App. 987, 145 S.W.2d 504, 505.

A suit in equity is not commenced until the issuance of a subpoena following by a bona fide effort to serve it. U. S. v. Scheurman, D.C.Idaho, 218 F. 915, 919.

To commence drilling operations within the meaning of an oil and gas lease has reference to the first movement of the drill in penetrating the ground. Solberg v. Sunburst Oil & Gas Co., 73 Mont. 94, 235 P. 761, 763. But see Terry v. Texas Co., Tex.Civ.App., 228 S.W. 1019, holding that a lessee, by placing timbers for the erection of a derrick, together with machinery, including a boiler, on the ground where an oil well was to be drilled, complied with a provision requiring him to "commence to drill." But compare Lauderdale Power Co. v. Perry, 202 Ala. 394, 80 So. 476, 480.

Criminal prosecution is "commenced" within statute of limitations when complaint is filed with magistrate in good faith and warrant issued. Hicks v. State, 54 Okl.Cr. 431, 23 P.2d 219.

Commencement of building or improvement, within the meaning of Lien Law, is the visible commencement of actual operations on the ground for the erection of the building, which every one can readily recognize as commencement of a building, and which is done with intention to continue the work until building is completed. Security Stove & Mfg. Co. v. Sellards, 133 Kan. 747, 3 P.2d 481, 482, 76 A.L.R. 1397.

COMMANDITY. In French law. A partnership in which some furnish money, and others furnish their skill and labor in place of capital. A special or limited partnership, where the contract is between one or more persons who are general partners, and jointly and severally responsible, and one or more other persons who merely furnish a particular fund or capital stock, and thence are called "commanditaires," or "com- menditaires," or "partners en commandité," the business being carried on under the social name or firm of the general partners only, composed of the names of the general or complementary partners, the partners in commandité being liable to losses only to the extent of the funds or capital furnished by them. Story, Partn. § 78; 3 Kent, Comm. 34. The term includes a partnership containing dormant rather than special partners. Story, Partn. § 109.
COMMENCEMENT

COMMENCEMENT OF A DECLARATION. That part of the declaration which follows the venue and precedes the circumstantial statement of the cause of action.

It formerly contained a statement of the names of the parties, and the character in which they sue or are sued, if any other than their natural capacity; of the mode in which the defendant had been brought into court, and a brief statement of the form of action. In modern practice, however, in most cases, it contains little else than the names and character of the parties.

COMMENDA. In French law. The delivery of a benefice to one who cannot hold the legal title, to keep and manage it for a time limited and render an account of the proceeds. Guyot, Rep.Univ.

In Mercantile Law. An association in which the management of the property was intrusted to individuals. Troub.Lim.Partn. c. 3, § 27.

COMMENDA EST FACULTAS RECIPIENDI ET RETINENDI BENEFICIUM CONTRA JUS POSITIVUM À SUPREMA POTESTATE. Moore, 905. A commendam is the power of receiving and retaining a benefice contrary to positive law, by supreme authority.

COMMENDAM. In ecclesiastical law. The appointment of a suitable clerk to hold a void or vacant benefice or church living until a regular pastor be appointed. Hob. 144; Latch, 236.

In Commercial Law. A species of limited partnership. The limited partnership (or Societe en commandite) of the French law has been introduced into the Code of Louisiana under the title of "Partnership in Commendam." Civil Code La. art. 2810 ( Civ.Code, art. 2839). See Mitchell, in 3 Sel.Essays, Anglo-Amer.L.H. 183; Commandite; Societe.

COMMENDATIO. In the civil law. Commenda as praise, or recommendation, as in the maxim "simpex commendatio non obligat," meaning that mere recommendation or praise of an article by the seller of it does not amount to a warranty of its qualities. 2 Kent, Comm. 485.

COMMENDATION. In feudal law. The act by which an owner of alodial land placed himself and his land under the protection of a lord, so as to constitute himself his vassal or feudal tenant.

COMMENDATORS. Secular persons upon whom ecclesiastical benefices were bestowed, as in Scotland; called so because the benefices were commended and intrusted to their supervision. They are merely trustees.

COMMENDATORY. He who holds a church living or preferment in commendam.

COMMENDATORY LETTERS. In ecclesiastical law. Such as are written by one bishop to another on behalf of any of the clergy, or others of his diocese traveling thither, that they may be received among the faithful, or that the clerk may be promoted, or necessaries administered to others, etc. Wharton.

COMMENDATUS. In feudal law. One who intrusts himself to the protection of another. Spelman. A person who, by voluntary homage, put himself under the protection of a superior lord. Cowell.

COMMENT. The expression of the judgment passed upon certain alleged facts by a person who has applied his mind to them, and who while so commenting assumes that such allegations of fact are true. The assertion of a fact is not a "comment." Horn v. State, 106 Tex.Cr.R. 190, 292 S.W. 227, 228.

COMMENT UPON THE EVIDENCE. Means that trial judge is prohibited from conveying to jury trial judge's personal opinion as to the truth or falsity of any evidence, but prohibition does not prohibit judges from giving counsel reasons for rulings on questions presented during progress of trial, or prohibit them in all cases from stating, when necessary, the facts upon which they base their conclusions. State v. Brown, 19 Wash. 2d 195, 142 P.2d 257, 259, 260.

Intercourse by way of trade and traffic between different peoples or states and the citizens or inhabitants thereof, including not only the purchase, sale, and exchange of commodities, but also the instrumentalities and agencies by which it is promoted and the means and appliances by which it is carried on, and the transportation of persons as well as of goods, both by land and by sea. Brennan v. Titusville, 14 S.Ct. 829, 153 U.S. 289, 38 L.Ed. 719; Railroad Co. v. Fuller, 17 Wall. 568, 21 L.Ed. 710; Hoke v. United States, 33 S.Ct. 281, 283, 227 U.S. 308, 57 L.Ed. 523, 43 L.R.A.,N.S., 906, Ann.Cas.1913E, 905. Also interchange of ideas, sentiments, etc., as between man and man. U.S. v. Eason Oil Co., D.C.Okl., 8 F.Supp. 365, 368.

Commerce, in its simplest signification, means an exchange of goods; but in the advancement of society, labor, transportation, intelligence, care and various mediums of exchange, become commodities and enter into commerce; the subject, the vehicle, the agent, and their various operations become the objects of commercial regulation. Lorenzetti v. American Trust Co., D.C.Okl., 45 F.Supp. 128, 132.

The words "commerce" and "trade" are often used interchangeably; but, strictly speaking, commerce relates to intercourse or dealings with foreign nations, states, or political communities, while trade denotes business intercourse or mutual traffic within the limits of a state or nation, or the buying, selling, and exchanging of articles between members of the same community. Hooker v. Vandewater, 4 Denio, N.Y., 353, 47 Am. Dec. 258; Jacob; Wharton.

—Commerce among the states. Transportation from one state to another, and also all commercial intercourse between the different states, and all component parts of such intercourse. Dahnke-Walker Milling Co. v. Bondurant, 257 U.S. 282, 42 S.Ct. 106, 108, 66 L.Ed. 239.

—Commerce with foreign nations. Commerce between citizens of the United States and citizens of subjects of foreign governments; commerce which, either immediately or at some stage of its progress, is extraterritorial. U. S. v. Holliday, 3 Wall. 409, 18 L.Ed. 182; Veazie v. Moor, 14 How. 573, 14 L.Ed. 545; Lord v. Steamship Co., 102 U.S. 544, 26 L.Ed. 224. The same as "foreign commerce," which see infra.

—Commerce with Indian tribes. Commerce with individuals belonging to such tribes, in the nature of buying, selling, and exchanging commodities, without reference to the locality where carried on, though it be within the limits of a state. U. S. v. Holliday, 3 Wall. 407, 18 L.Ed. 182; U. S. v. Cisna, 25 Fed.Cas. 424.

—Domestic commerce. Commerce carried on wholly within the limits of the United States, as distinguished from foreign commerce. Also, commerce carried on within the limits of a single state, as distinguished from interstate commerce. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Tennessee R. R. Com'n, C.C. Tenn., 19 Fed. 701.

—Foreign commerce. Commerce or trade between the United States and foreign countries. Com. v. Housatonic R. Co., 143 Mass. 264, 9 N.E. 547; Foster v. New Orleans, 94 U.S. 246, 24 L.Ed. 122. The term is sometimes applied to commerce between ports of two sister states not lying on the same coast, e. g., New York and San Francisco.

—Internal commerce. Such as is carried on between individuals within the same state, or between different parts of the same state. Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 145 U.S. 192, 12 S.Ct. 805, 36 L.Ed. 672; Steamboat Co. v. Livingston, 3 Cow. (N.Y.) 713. Now more commonly called "intrastate" commerce.

—International commerce. Commerce between states or nations entirely foreign to each other. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Tennessee R. R. Com'n, C.C.Tenn., 19 F. 701.

—Interstate commerce. Such as is carried on between different states of the Union or between points lying in different states. See Interstate Commerce.

COMMERCIA BELLII. War contracts. Contracts between nations at war, or their subjects.

Agreements entered into by belligerents, either in time of peace to take effect in the event of war, or during the war itself, by which arrangement is made for non-hostile intercourse. They may take the form of armistices, truces, capitulations, cartels, passports, safe-conducts, safeguards. 1 Kent 159; 2 Opp. 274.

Contracts between citizens of one belligerent and those of another, or between citizens of one belligerent and the other belligerent. They may take the form of ransom bills (q. v.), bills of exchange drawn by prisoners of war, or receipts for requisitions. 1 Kent 104.

COMMERCIAL AGENCY. The same as a "mercantile" agency. In re United States Mercantile Reporting, etc., Co., 4 N.Y.S. 916, 52 Hun, 611. See Mercantile.

COMMERCIAL AGENT. An officer in the consular service of the United States, of rank inferior to a consul. Also used as equivalent to "commercial broker," see infra.

COMMERCIAL BROKER. One who negotiates the sale of merchandise without having the possession or control of it, being distinguished in the latter particular from a commission merchant. Adkins v. Richmond, 98 Va. 91, 34 S.E. 967, 47 L.R.A. 583, 81 Am.St.Rep. 705.

COMMERCIAL CORPORATION. One engaged in commerce in the broadest sense of that term; hence including a railroad company. Sweatt v. Railroad Co., 23 Fed.Cas. 530.

COMMERCIAL COURT. A name applied in English practice to the trial of commercial causes in London and Liverpool before judges of the High Court. It is said to be "a mere piece of convenience in the arrangement of business." [1895] 2 Ch. 491.

COMMERCIAL DOMICILE. See Domicile.

COMMERCIAL ESTABLISHMENT. A place where commodities are exchanged, bought or sold. State ex rel. Kansas City Power & Light Co. v. Smith, 342 Mo. 75, 111 S.W.2d 513, 515.

COMMERCIAL FRUSTRATION. Excuse of party from performance if contract depends on existence of given person or thing and such person or thing perishes, and if contract is rendered impossible by act of God, the law, or other party. Wood v. Bartolino, 48 N.M. 175, 146 P.2d 883, 885, 890.

In theory it amounts to no more than a condition or term of a contract which the law implies to take the place of a covenant that it is assumed would have been inserted by the parties had the contingency which arose occurred to them at the time they made the contract. Lloyd v. Murphy, Cal.App., 142 P.2d 939, 942, 943. And doctrine is predicated upon premise of giving relief in a situation where parties could not reasonably protect themselves by terms of a contract against happening of subsequent events. Berline v. Waldschmidt, 159 Kan. 585, 156 P.2d 865, 867. Hence doctrine has no application where events were reasonably foreseeable and controllable by the parties.
COMMERCIAL

COMMERCIAL INSOLVENCY. Inability of a businessman to pay his debts as they become due in the regular and ordinary course of business. Willing v. Eveloff, C.C.A.Pa., 94 F.2d 344, 346.

COMMERCIAL INSURANCE, See Insurance.

COMMERCIAL LAW. A phrase used to designate the whole body of substantive jurisprudence applicable to the rights, intercourse, and relations of persons engaged in commerce, trade, or mercantile pursuits. It is not a very scientific or accurate term. As foreign commerce is carried on by means of shipping, the term has come to be used occasionally as synonymous with "maritime law;" but, in strictness, the phrase "commercial law" is wider, and includes many transactions or legal questions which have nothing to do with shipping or its incidents. Watson v. Tarpley, 18 How. 521, 15 L.Ed. 509; Williams v. Gold Hill Min. Co., C.C.Cal., 96 F. 464.

COMMERCIAL LETTER OF CREDIT. See Letter of Credit under the title Credit.

COMMERCIAL MARK. In French law. A trademark is specially or purely the mark of the manufacturer or producer of the article, while a "commercial" mark is that of the dealer or merchant who distributes the product to consumers or the trade. La Republique Francaise v. Schultz, C.C.N.Y., 57 F. 41.

COMMERCIAL PAPER. Bills of exchange, promissory notes, bank-checks, and other negotiable instruments for the payment of money, which, by their form and on their face, purport to be such instruments as are, by the law-merchant, recognized as falling under the designation of "commercial paper." In re Hercules Mut. L. Assur. Soc., 68 Mo. 302, 30 Am.Rep. 795; Seiple v. Irwin, 30 Pa. 513; Kornemann v. Monaghan, 24 Mich. 36.

In military law. An officer whose principal duties are to supply an army with provisions and stores. As to the rank and duties of such officers in the United States army, see 10 U.S.C.A. § 71 et seq.

COMMISSARY COURT. A Scotch ecclesiastical court of general jurisdiction, held before four commissioners, members of the Faculty of Advocates, appointed by the crown.

COMMISSION. A warrant or authority or letters patent, issuing from the government, or one of its departments, or a court, empowering a person or persons named to do certain acts, or to exercise jurisdiction, or to perform the duties and exercise the authority of an office, (as in the case of an officer in the army or navy.) Bledsoe v. Colgan, 138 Cal. 34, 70 P. 924.

Also, in private affairs, it signifies the authority or instructions under which one person transacts business or negotiates for another.

In a derivative sense, a body of persons to whom a commission is directed. A board or committee officially appointed and empowered to perform certain acts or exercise certain jurisdiction of a public nature or relation; as a "commission of assise."

Civil Law
A species of bailment, being an undertaking, without reward, to do something in respect to an article bailed; equivalent to "mandate."

Commercial Law
The recompense or reward of an agent, factor, broker, or bailee, when the same is calculated as a percentage on the amount of his transactions or on the profit to the principal. In this sense, however, the word occurs perhaps more frequently in the plural. Gray v. Stern, 85 Wash. 645, 149 P. 26, 28. Jackson v. Stanfield, 137 Ind. 592, 57 N.E. 14, 23 L.R.A. 588. Sinclair Coal Co. v. Pittsburg and Ashland Coal and Dock Co., 178 Minn. 114, 226 N.W. 206, 208. But the term may mean simply a compensation; Smith v. Starke, 196 Mich. 311, 162 N.W. 988, 999; and does not necessarily imply a mere per centum valuation; Jenkins v. Locke-Paddon Co., 30 Cal.App. 52, 157 P. 537.

Also, a compensation to an administrator for the faithful discharge of his duties. In re Jula's Estate, 3 N.J.Misc. 976,130 A. 733, 735.

Criminal Law

Practice
An authority or writ issuing from a court, in relation to a cause before it, directing and authorizing a person or persons named to do some act or exercise some special function; usually to take the depositions of witnesses.

COMMISSION DAY. In English practice. The opening day of the assises.

COMMISSION DE LUNATICO INQUIRENDO. The same as a commission of lunacy, (see infra.) In re Misselwitz, 117 Pa. 359, 35 A. 722.

COMMISSION DEL CREDERE. In commercial law. Where an agent of a seller undertakes to guaranty to his principal the payment of the debt due by the buyer. Story, Ag. 28.

The phrase "del credere" is borrowed from the Italian language, in which its signification is equivalent to our word "guaranty" or "warranty."

COMMISSION GOVERNMENT. A method of municipal government in which the legislative power is in the hands of a few persons. State v. Üre, 91 Neb. 31, 135 N.W. 224. Gardner v. Board of Park Directors, 35 Cal.App. 597, 170 P. 672, 673 (mayor held not a "commissioner").

COMMISSION MERCHANT. A term which is synonymous with "factor." It means one who receives goods, chattels, or merchandise for sale, exchange, or other disposition, and who is to receive a compensation for his services, to be paid by the owner, or derived from the sale, etc., of the goods. State v. Thompson, 120 Mo. 12, 25 S.W. 34. One whose business is to receive and sell goods for a commission, being intrusted with the possession of the goods to be sold, and usually selling in his own name. Hughes v. Young, 17 Tenn.App. 24, 65 S.W.2d 858, 864.

Factors are frequently called "commission merchants", and it is said that there is no difference in the meaning of these terms, the latter being perhaps more commonly used in America. Thompson v. Woodruff, 7 Cold. 410; Duguid v. Edwards, 50 Barb., N.Y., 288; Lyon v. Alvord, 18 Conn. 80.

A commission merchant or factor differs from a broker in that he may buy and sell in his own name without disclosing his principal and has the goods in his possession while the broker can only buy or sell in the name of his principal, and has no possession of the goods sold. Slack v. Tucker, 23 Wall. 321, 330, 23 L.Ed. 143; Perkins v. State, 50 Ala. 154, 156. A commission merchant has a lien upon the goods for his charges, advances, and commissions, while the broker has no control of the property and is responsible only for bad faith. A commission merchant or factor has a special property in the goods. Sutton v. Kiel Cheese & Butter Co., 155 Ky. 465, 159 S.W. 950, 951.

A "factor" or "commission merchant" is one who has the actual or technical possession of goods or wares of another for sale, while a "merchandise broker" is one who negotiates the sale of merchandise without having it in his possession or control, being simply an agent with very limited powers. Hughes v. Young, 17 Tenn.App. 24, 65 S.W.2d 858, 864.

See, also, Factor.

COMMISSION OF ANTICIPATION. In English law. An authority under the great seal to collect a tax or subsidy before the day.

COMMISSION OF APPRAISEMENT AND SALE. Where property has been arrested in an admiralty action in rem and ordered by the court to be sold, the order is carried out by a commission of appraisement and sale; in some cases (as where the property is to be released on bail and the value is disputed) a commission of appraisement only is required. Sweet.

COMMISSION OF ARRAY. In English law. A commission issued to send into every county officers to muster or set in military order the inhabitants. The introduction of commissions of lieu-tenancy, which contained, in substance, the same powers as these commissions, superseded them.
2 Steph.Comm. (7th Ed.) 582,

COMMISSION OF ASSIZE. In English practice.
A commission which formerly issued from the king, appointing certain persons as commissioners or judges of assize to hold the assizes in association with discreet knights during those years in which the justices in eyre did not come. A commission issued to judges of the high court or court of appeal, authorizing them to sit at the assizes for the trial of civil actions.

COMMISSION OF BANKRUPT. A commission or authority formerly granted by the lord chancellor to such persons as he should think proper, to examine the bankrupt in all matters relating to his trade and effects, and to perform various other important duties connected with bankruptcy matters. But now, under St. 1 & 2 Wm. IV. c. 56, § 12, a flat issue instead of such commission.

COMMISSION OF CHARITABLE USES. This commission issues out of chancery to the bishop and others, where lands given to charitable uses are misemployed, or there is any fraud or dispute concerning them, to inquire of and redress the same, etc.

COMMISSION OF DELEGATES. When any sentence was given in any ecclesiastical cause by the archbishop, this commission, under the great seal, was directed to certain persons, usually lords, bishops, and judges of the law, to sit and hear an appeal of the same to the king, in the court of chancery. But latterly the judicial committee of the privy council has supplied the place of this commission. Brown.

COMMISSION OF LUNACY. A commission isuing from a court of competent jurisdiction, authorizing an inquiry to be made into the mental condition of a person who is alleged to be a lunatic.

A writ issued out of chancery, or such court as may have jurisdiction of the case, directed to a proper officer, to inquire whether a person named therein is a lunatic or not. In re Moore, 68 Cal. 281, 9 P. 164.

COMMISSION OF PARTITION. In the former English equity practice, this was a commission or authority issued to certain persons, to effect a division of lands held by tenants in common desiring a partition; when the commissioners reported, the parties were ordered to execute mutual conveyances to confirm the division. Commissons appointed to make partition are in the nature of arbitrators. Clough v. Cromwell, 250

COMMISSION OF REBELLION. In English law.
An attaching process, formerly issuable out of chancery, to enforce obedience to a process or decree; abolished in August, 1841.

COMMISSION OF 'REVIEW. In English ecclesiastical law. A commission formerly sometimes granted in extraordinary cases, to revise the sentence of the court of delegates. 3 Bl.Comm. 67.
Now out of use, the privy council being substituted for the court of delegates, as the great court of appeal in all ecclesiastical causes. 3 Steph.
Comm. 432.

COMMISSION OF THE PEACE. In English law.
A commission from the crown, appointing certain persons therein named, jointly and severally, to keep the peace, etc. Justices of the peace are always appointed by special commission under the great seal, the form of which was settled by all the judges, A. D. 1590, and continues with little alteration to this day. 1 Bl.Comm. 351; 3 Steph.
Comm. 39, 40.

COMMISSION OF TREATY WITH FOREIGN PRINCES. Leagues and arrangements made between states and kingdoms, by their ambassadors and ministers, for the mutual advantage of the kingdoms in alliance. Wharton.

COMMISSION OF UNLIVERY. In an action in the English admiralty division, where it is necessary to have the cargo in a ship unladen in order to have it appraised, a commission of unlivery is issued and executed by the marshal. Williams &

COMMISSION TO EXAMINE • WITNESSES. In practice. A commission issued out of the court in which an action is pending, to direct the taking of the depositions of witnesses who are beyond the territorial jurisdiction of the court.

COMMISSION TO TAKE ANSWER IN CHAN-CERY. In English law. A commission issued when defendant lives abroad to swear him to such answer. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, § 21. Obsolete. See

COMMISSION TO TAKE DEPOSITIONS. A written authority issued by a court of justice, giving power to take the testimony of witnesses who cannot be personally produced in court. Tracy v.
Suydam, 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 110.

COMMISSIONED OFFICERS. In the United States army and navy and marine corps, those of or above the rank of second lieutenant. Davis, Mil. L. 26. Those who hold their rank and office under commissions issued by the president, as distinguished from non-commissioned officers (in the army, including sergeants, corporals, etc.) and warrant officers (in the navy, including boatswains, gunners, etc.) and from privates or enlisted men. Stephens v. Civil Service Commis-

COMMISSIONER. A person to whom a commission is directed by the government or a court.
State v. Banking Co., 14 N.J.L. 437; In re Canter,
81 N.Y.S. 338, 40 Misc. 126;

COMMISSIONER. A person to whom a commission is directed by the government or a court.
State v. Banking Co., 14 N.J.L. 437; In re Canter,
81 N.Y.S. 338, 40 Misc. 126.

In the governmental system of the United States, this term denotes an officer who is charged with the administration of the laws relating to some particular subject-matter, or the management of some bureau or agency of the govern-

340
COMMISSIONS. The compensation or reward paid to a factor, broker, agent, bailee, executor, trustee, receiver, etc., usually calculated as a percentage on the amount of his transactions or the amount received or expended. See Commission.

COMMISSIVE. Caused by or consisting in acts of commission, as distinguished from neglect, sufferance, or toleration; as in the phrase "commis-sive waste," which is contrasted with "permissive waste." See Waste.

COMMISSORIA LEX. In Roman law. A law according to which a seller might stipulate that he should be freed from his obligation, and might rescind the sale, if the purchase price were not paid at the appointed time. Also a law by which a debtor and his pledgee might agree that, if the debtor did not pay at the day appointed, the pledge should become the absolute property of the creditor. This, however, was abolished by a law of Constantine. Cod. 8, 35. 3. See Dig. 18, 3; Mackeld. Rom.Law, §§ 447, 461; 2 Kent, Comm. 583.

COMMIT. To perpetrate, as a crime; to perform, as an act. Groves v. State, 116 Ga. 516, 42 S.E. 755, 59 L.R.A. 598.

To send a person to prison by virtue of a lawful authority, for any crime or contempt, or to an asylum, workhouse, reformatory, or the like, by authority of a court or magistrate. People v. Beach, 122 Cal. 37, 54 P. 369.

To deliver a defendant to the custody of the sheriff or marshal, on his surrender by his bail. 1 Tidd, Pr. 285, 287.

COMMITMENT. In practice. The warrant or mittimus by which a court or magistrate directs an officer to take a person to prison. Authority for holding in prison one convicted of crime. Ex parte Haynes, 98 Tex.Cr.R. 609, 267 S.W. 490, 493. A process directed to a ministerial officer by which a person is to be confined in prison, usually issued by a court or magistrate. People ex rel. Wojek v. Henderson, 235 N.Y.S. 173, 178, 134 Misc. 228.

A warrant which does not direct an officer to commit a party to prison but only to receive him into custody and safely keep him for further examination, is not a commitment. Gilbert v. U. S., 23 Ct.C1. 218.

The act of sending a person to prison by means of such a warrant or order. Allen v. Hagan, 170 N.Y. 46, 62 N.E. 1086.

A proceeding for the restraining and confining of insane persons for their own and the public’s protection. Vance v. Ellerbe, 150 La. 388, 90 So. 735, 740.

COMMITTED IN PRESENCE OF OFFICER. Under statutes authorizing arrest without warrant, when facts and circumstances occurring within officer’s observation, in connection with what, under circumstances, may be considered as common knowledge, give him probable cause to believe or reasonable grounds to suspect that such is the case. Noce v. Ritchie, 109 W.Va. 391, 155 S.E. 127, 128.

COMMITTEE. A person, or an assembly or board of persons, to whom the consideration, determination, or management of any matter is committed or referred, as by a court. Lloyd v. Hart, 2 Pa. 473, 45 Am.Dec. 612; Farrar v. Eastman, 5 Me.
COMMITTEE

345; Blaisdell v. Inhabitants of Town of York, 110 Me. 500, 87 A. 361, 370.

An individual or body to whom others have delegated or committed a particular duty, or who have taken on themselves to perform it in the expectation of their act being confirmed by the body they profess to represent or act for. 15 Mees. & W. 529.

The term is especially applied to the person or persons who are invested, by order of the proper court, with the guardianship of the person and estate of one who has been adjudged a lunatic.

In parliamentary law. A portion of a legislative body, comprising one or more members, who are charged with the duty of examining some matter specially referred to them by the house, or of deliberating upon it, and reporting to the house the result of their investigations or recommending a course of action.

A committee may be appointed for one special occasion, or it may be appointed to deal with all matters which may be referred to it during a whole session or during the life of the body. In the latter case, it is called a "standing committee." It is usually composed of a comparatively small number of members, but may include the whole house.

Joint committee. A joint committee of a legislative body comprising two chambers is a committee consisting of representatives of each of the two houses, meeting and acting together as one committee.

Secret committee. A secret committee of the house of commons is a committee specially appointed to investigate a certain matter, and to which secrecy being deemed necessary in furtherance of its objects, its proceedings are conducted with closed doors, to the exclusion of all persons not members of the committee. All other committees are open to members of the house, although they may not be serving upon them. Brown.

COMMITTING MAGISTRATE. An inferior judicial officer who is invested with authority to conduct the preliminary hearing of persons charged with crime, and either to discharge them for lack of sufficient prima facie evidence or to commit them to jail to await trial or (in some jurisdictions) to accept bail and release them thereon. The term is said to be synonymous with "examining court." State v. Rogers, 31 N.M. 485, 247 P. 828, 833.

COMMITTITUR. In practice. An order or minute, setting forth that the person named in it is committed to the custody of the sheriff.

COMMITTITUR PIECE. In English law. An instrument in writing on paper or parchment, which charges a person, already in prison, in execution at the suit of the person who arrested him. 2 Chit. Archb. Pr. (12th Ed.) 1208.

COMMIXTIO, or COMMIXTION. In the civil law. The mixing together or confusion of things, dry or solid, belonging to different owners, as distinguished from confusio, which has relation to liquids. Lec. Elem. du Dr. Rom. §§ 370, 371; Story, Bailm. § 40; 1 Bouvier, Inst. n. 506.

COMMODE. Where property is loaned gratuitously by owner for sole benefit, accommodation, and use of borrower, and specific thing loaned is to be returned. The Pegeen, D.C. Cal., 14 F. Supp. 748, 751. See, also, Commodatum.

COMMODATI ACTIO. Lat. In the civil law. An action of loan; an action for a thing lent. An action given for the recovery of a thing loaned, commodatum, and not returned to the lender. Inst. 3, 15, 2; Id. 4, 1, 16.

COMMODATO. In Spanish law. A contract by which one person lends gratuitously to another some object not consumable, to be restored to him in kind at a given period; the same contract as commodatum (q. v.).

COMMODATUM. A contract by which one of the parties binds himself to return to the other certain personal chattels which the latter delivers to him to be used by him without reward; loan for use. Slack v. Bryan, 299 Ky. 132, 184 S.W. 2d 873, 876.

A gratuitous loan of goods to be temporarily used by the bailee, and returned in specie. Hanes v. Shapiro & Smith, 168 N.C. 24, 84 S.E. 33, 35; He who lends to another a thing for a definite time, to be enjoyed and used under certain conditions, without any pay or reward, is called commodans; the person who receives the thing is called commodatarius, and the contract is called commodatum. It differs from locatio and conductio, in this: that the use of the thing is gratuitous. Dig. 13, 6; Inst. 3, 2, 14; Story, Bailm. § 221. Coogs v. Bernard, 2 Ld. Raym. 909; Adams v. Mortgage Co., 82 Miss. 263, 34 So. 482, 17 L.R.A., N.S., 138, 100 Am. St. Rep. 633; World's Columbian Exposition Co. v. Republic of France, C.C.A. Ill., 96 F. 693, 38 C.C.A. 483.

COMMODITIES. Those things which are useful or serviceable, particularly articles of merchandise movable in trade. American League Baseball Club of Chicago v. Chase, 149 N.Y.S. 6, 15, 86 Misc. 441.

This word is a broader term than merchandise, and, in referring to commerce may include almost any article of movable or personal property. Pound v. Lawrence, Tex. Civ. App., 233 S. W. 359, 361; Shuttleworth v. State, 35 Ala. 415; State v. Henke, 19 Mo. 225.

Labor has been held not to be a commodity. Rohlf v. Kasemeier, 140 Iowa 182, 118 N.W. 276, 23 L.R.A., N.S., 1285. But it has been held that the supplying of telephone service is the supplying of a commodity of commerce; Northern Telegraph Co. v. Cumberland Telephone Co., 153 Wis. 359, 140 N.W. 38, 39; and it has also been thought that the privilege of receiving property by will or intestate succession is a commodity subject to the Massachusetts excise law; Dana v. Dana, 226 Mass. 297, 115 N.E. 418, 419.

COMMODITIES CLAUSE. A clause in the act of Congress, June 29, 1906 (49 USCA § 1 (8), providing that it shall be unlawful for any railroad company to transport commodities (excepting timber and its manufactured products) manufactured, mined or produced by it, or under its authority, or which it may own in whole or in part, or in which it may have any interest, direct or indirect, except such articles or commodities as COMMODY. In the most comprehensive sense, convenience, accommodation, profit, benefit, advantage, interest, commodiousness.

In the commercial sense, any movable or tangible thing that is produced or used as the subject of barter or sale. People v. Epstein, 170 N.Y.S. 68, 79, 102 Misc. 476. See Commodities.

COMMODITY RATE. With reference to railroads, a rate which applies to a specific commodity alone; distinguished from a "class rate," meaning a single rate which applies to a number of articles of the same general character. Nor-

COMMON DEBET. No person ought to have advantage from his own wrong. Jenk.Cent. 161; Finch, Law, b. 1, c. 3, n. 62.

COMMON, n. An incorporeal hereditament which connects in a profit which one man has in connection with one or more others in the land of another. Trustees v. Robinson, 12 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 31; Thomas v. Inhabitants of Marshfield, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 364; 3 Kent 403; United States v. 1,010.8 Acres, More or Less, Situate in Sussex County, Del., D.C.Del., 56 F.Supp. 120, 132, 134.

In English law, is an incorporeal right which lies in grant, originally commencing on some agreement between lords and tenants, which by time has been formed into prescription, and continues good, although there be no deed or instrument to prove the original contract. 4 Coke, 37; 1 Crabb, Real Prop. p. 258, § 268.

Common, or a right of common, is a right or privilege which several persons have to the produce of the lands or waters of another. Van Rensselaer v. Radcliff, 10 Wend., N.Y., 647, 25 Am.Dec. 582.

Also an uninclosed piece of land set apart for public or municipal purposes, in many cities and villages of the United States. Newell v. Hancock, 67 N.H. 244, 35 A. 253. United States v. 1,010.8 Acres, More or Less, Situate in Sussex County, Del., D.C.Del., 56 F.Supp. 120, 122, 134.

—Common appendant. A right annexed to the possession of arable land, by which the owner is entitled to feed his beasts on the lands of another, usually the owner of the manor of which the lands entitled to common are a part. 2 Bl.Comm. 33; Van Rensselaer v. Radcliff, 10 Wend. (N.Y.) 648.

—Common appurtenant. A right of feeding one's beasts on the land of another, (in common with the owner or with others,) which is founded on a grant, or a prescription which supposes a grant. 1 Crabb, Real Prop. p. 264, § 277.

This kind of common arises from no connection of tenure, and is against common right; it may commence by grant within time of memory, or, in other words, may be created at the present day; it may be claimed as annexed to any kind of land, and may be claimed for beasts not commonable, as well as those that are. 2 Bl.Comm. 33; Van Rensselaer v. Radcliff, 10 Wend., N.Y., 649.

—Common because of vicinage is where the inhabitants of two townshirps which lie contiguous to each other have usually intercommoned with one another, the beasts of the one straying mutually into the other's fields, without any molestation from either. 2 Bl.Comm. 33; Co. Lit. 122a; 4 Co. 38a; 10 Q.B. 581, 589, 604; Smith v. Floyd, 18 Barb. (N.Y.) 523.

This is, indeed, only a permissive right, intended to excuse what, in strictness, is a trespass in both, and to prevent a multiplicity of suits, and therefore either township may interclude and bar out the other, though they have intercommoned time out of mind.

—Common in gross, or at large. A species of common which is neither appandant nor appurtenant to land, but is annexed to a man's person, being granted to him and his heirs by deed; or it may be claimed by prescriptive right, as by a person of a church or the like corporation sole. 2 Bl.Comm. 34. It is a separate inheritance, entirely distinct from any other landed property, vested in the person to whom the common right belongs. 2 Steph.Comm. 6; Mitchell v. D'Olier, 68 N.J.L. 375, 53 A. 467, 59 L.R.A. 949.

—Common of digging. Common of digging, or common in the soil, is the right to take for one's use part of the soil or minerals in another's land; the most usual subjects of the right are sand, gravel, stones, and clay. It is of a very similar nature to common of estovers and of turbary. Elton, Com. 109.

—Common of estovers. A liberty of taking necessary wood for the use or furniture of a house or farm from off another's estate, in common with the owner or with others. 2 Bl.Comm. 35. It may be claimed, like common of pasture, either by grant or prescription. 2 Steph.Comm. 10; Plowd. 381; Van Rensselaer v. Radcliff, 10 Wend. (N.Y.) 648.

—Common of fishery. The same as Common of piscary. See infra.

—Common of fowling. In some parts of the country a right of taking wild animals (such as conies or wildfowl) from the land of another has been found to exist; in the case of wildfowl, it is called a "common of fowling." Elton, Corn. 118.

—Common of pasture. The right or liberty of pasturing one's cattle upon another man's land. It may be either appandant, appurtenant, in gross, or because of vicinage. Van Rensselaer v. Radcliff, 10 Wend. (N.Y.) 647.

—Common of piscary. The right or liberty of fishing in another man's water, in common with the owner or with other persons. 2 Bl.Comm. 34. A liberty or right of fishing in the water covering the soil of another person, or in a river running through another's land. 3 Kent, Comm. 409. Har din v. Jordan, 11 S.Ct. 808, 140 U.S. 371, 35 L.Ed. 428. It is quite different from a common fishery.
with which, however, it is frequently confounded. See Fishery.

—Common of shack. A species of common by vicinage prevailing in the counties of Norfolk, Lincoln, and Yorkshire, in England; being the right of persons occupying lands lying together in the same common field to turn out their cattle after harvest to feed promiscuously in that field. 2 Steph.Comm. 6, 7; 5 Coke, 65; 1 B. & Ald. 710.

—Common of turbary. In its modern sense the right of taking peat or turf from the waste land with which, however, it is frequently confounded. Bract. fols. 53b, 222b; 10 Wend. (N.Y.) 647; 4 Co. 37; 3 Atk. 189, Noy, 145; 7 East, 127.

—Common sans nombre. Common without number, that is, without limit as to the number of cattle which may be turned on; otherwise called "common without stint." Bract. fols. 53b, 222b; 2 Steph.Comm. 6, 7; 2 Bl.Comm. 34. United States v. 1,010.8 Acres, More or Less, Situate in Sussex County, Del., D.C.Del., 56 F.Supp. 120, 133.

—Common, tenants in. See Tenants in Common.

—Common without stint. Another name for Common sans nombre. See supra.

COMMON, adj. Usual, ordinary, accustomed; shared among several; owned by several jointly. Koen v. State, 35 Neb. 676, 53 N.W. 595, 17 L.R.A. 821. Belonging or pertaining to many or to the majority; generally or prevalent, of frequent or ordinary occurrence or appearance; familiar by reason of frequency. Webb v. New Mexico Pub. Co., 47 N.M. 279, 141 P.2d 333, 335. Also, usual, customary, and habitual, professed, or confessed, and used indefinitely in various terms implying illegal or criminal conduct, such as common scold, common thief, etc. Levine v. State, 166 A. 300, 302, 110 N.J.L. 467.

—Common appearance. That which could be filed by the plaintiff, who could enter a rule on the defendant to plead, where the defendant, after due service of process on him, had removed from the jurisdiction without having entered an appearance, or could not be found. 12 Geo. II., c. 29; 1 Troub. & Haly, Pr. 159; Bender v. Ryan, 9 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 144.

—Common assurances. The several modes or instruments of conveyance established or authorized by the law of England. Called "common" because thereby every man’s estate is assured to him. 2 Bl.Comm. 294. The legal evidences of the translation of property, whereby every person’s estate is assured to him, and all controversies, doubts, and difficulties are either prevented or removed. Wharton.

—Common causes or suits. A term anciently used to denote civil actions, or those depending between subject and subject, as distinguished from pleas of the crown. Dallet v. Feltus, 7 Phila. (Pa.) 627.

—Common condidit. See Condedit.

—Common danger. "Common danger" which gives a right to contribution in general average does not mean equal danger; hence, the fact that a part of the cargo of a stranded steamship is of a kind which is in little danger of injury does not relieve it of the liability to contribute. Willcox, Peck & Hughes v. American Smelting & Refining Co., D.C.N.Y., 210 F. 89, 91.

—Common design. In criminal law. Community of intention between two or more persons to do an unlawful act. State v. Hill, 273 Mo. 329, 201 S.W. 58, 60.

—Common enterprise. See Joint enterprise.

—Common fine. In old English law. A certain sum of money which the residents in a leet paid to the lord of the leet, otherwise called "head silver," "cert money," "(q. v.,)" or "certum letce." Termes de la Ley; Cowell; Fleta; Wharton. A sum of money paid by the inhabitants of a manor to their lord, towards the charge of holding a court leet. Bailey, Diet.

—Common form. A will is said to be proved in common form when the executor proves it on his own oath; as distinguished from "proof by witnesses," which is necessary when the paper pronounced as a will is disputed. Hubbard v. Hubbard, 7 Or. 42; Sutton v. Hancock, 118 Ga. 436, 45, S.E. 504.

—Common hall. A court in the city of London, at which all the citizens, or such as are free of the city, have a right to attend.

—Common liquor dealer. In Florida, one who, being charged with unlawfully engaging in and carrying on the business of a dealer in liquors, has been before convicted of a like offense and duly sentenced therefor. Thomas v. State, 74 Fla. 200, 76 So. 780. See, also, Common thief, infra.

—Common peril. See Common danger, supra.

—Common place. Common pleas. The English court of common pleas is sometimes so called in the old books.

—Common prayer. The liturgy, or public form of prayer prescribed by the Church of England to be used in all churches and chapels, and which the clergy are enjoined to use under a certain penalty.

—Common repute. The prevailing belief in a given community as to the existence of a certain fact —Common right. A term applied to rights, privileges, and immunities appertaining to and enjoyed by all citizens equally and in common, and which have their foundation in the common law. Co. Inst. 142a; Spring Valley Waterworks v. Schottler, 62 Cal. 106.

—Common seller. A common seller of any commodity (particularly under the liquor laws of many states) is one who sells it frequently, usually, customarily, or habitually; in some states, one who is shown to have made a certain number of sales, either three or five. State v. O’Connor, 49 Me. 596; State v. Nutt, 28 Vt. 598; Moundsville v. Fountain, 27 W.Va. 194; Com. v. Tubbs, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 2.

—Common sense. Sound practical judgment, that degree of intelligence and reason, as exercised upon the relations of persons and things and the ordinary affairs of life, which is possessed by the generality of mankind, and which would suffice to direct the conduct and actions of the individual in a manner to agree with the behavior of ordinary persons.

—Common service. That service in which are engaged (with reference to the fellow-servant rule) all those who enter into the service of a common master, except those who become heads of and vested with absolute control of separate departments or branches of a great and diversified business. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Marone, C.C.A. Neb., 246 F. 916, 923.

The term, in its broadest and most obvious sense, would include all activities prosecuted in the business of the master which have for their purpose the attainment of a common end; nevertheless, an employee, invested with the duty of overseeing, directing, and controlling workmen, is not a fellow servant with respect to the discharge of those duties, but is a representative of the master. Funk v. Fulton Iron Works Co., 311 Mo. 77, 277 S. W. 566, 569.

—Common thief. One who by practice and habit is a thief; or, in some states, one who has been convicted of three distinct larcenies at the same term of court. Stevens v. Com., 4 Metc. (Mass.) 364.

—Common use. This phrase, as used in an anti-trust law extending to contracts affecting the prices of articles or commodities in "common use," describes articles used by the people in general; such articles or commodities as are in general use or used to a great extent in the homes of the people; the articles which are produced to be sold to the people, to be consumed and used by the people in general, and to be found for sale in all the marts of trade. People v. Epstein, 102 Misc. 476, 170 N.Y.S. 68, 75. It suggests the opposite of casual use. Geis v. State, 126 Md. 265, 94 A. 909, 910.

—Common victualer. The keeper of a restaurant or public eating house, where the food sold is eaten on the premises. Commonwealth v. Meckel, 221 Mass. 70, 108 N.E. 917.

—Common weal. The public or common good or welfare.

—Common woman. One who is low, inferior, vulgar, or coarse; also, one who is unchaste. But the term does not necessarily impute unchastity. Daniel v. Moncure, 58 Mont. 193, 190 P. 983, 985.

COMMON BAR. In pleading. (Otherwise called "blank bar.") A plea to compel the plaintiff to assign the particular place where the trespass has been committed. Steph.Pi. 256.

COMMON BENCH. The ancient name for the English court of common pleas. Its original title appears to have been simply "The Bench," but it was designated "Common Bench" to distinguish it from the "King's Bench," and because in it were tried and determined the causes of common persons, i.e., causes between subject and subject, in which the crown had no interest.

COMMON ENEMY DOCTRINE. Recognized as to surface waters in but a few states, under which no natural easement or servitude exists in favor of the superior or higher land as to mere surface water, or such as falls or accumulates by rains or the melting of snow; and the proprietor of the inferior or lower tenement or estate may at his option lawfully obstruct or hinder the flow of such water thereon, and in so doing may turn back or off of his own lands, and onto and over the lands of other proprietors, such water, without liability by reason of such obstruction or diversion. Miller v. Letzerich, 121 Tex. 248, 49 S.W.2d 404, 411, 85 A.L.R. 451.

COMMON HUMANITY DOCTRINE. Where a passenger becomes sick or is injured while en route, carrier owes duty under "common humanity doctrine" to render to passenger such reasonable care and attention as common humanity would dictate. Alabama Great S. R. Co. v. Taylor, 190 Miss. 69, 199 So. 310, 312.

COMMON KNOWLEDGE. Is what court may declare applicable to action without necessity of proof. It is knowledge that every intelligent person has. Strain v. Isaacs, 59 Ohio App. 495, 18 N. E.2d 816, 825. It includes matters of learning, experience, history, and facts of which judicial notice may be taken. Shelley v. Chilton's Adm'r, 236 Ky. 221, 32 S.W.2d 974, 977.

COMMON LAW. As distinguished from the Roman law, the modern civil law, the canon law, and other systems, the common law is that body of law and juristic theory which was originated, developed, and formulated and is administered in England, and has obtained among most of the states and peoples of Anglo-Saxon stock. Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 255, 10 P. 674.

As distinguished from law created by the enactment of legislatures, the common law comprises the body of those principles and rules of action, relating to the government and security of persons and property, which derive their authority solely from usages and customs of immemorial antiquity, or from the judgments and decrees of

As distinguished from equity law, it is a body of rules and principles, written or unwritten, which are of fixed and immutable authority, and which must be applied to controversies vigorously and in their entirety, and cannot be modified to suit the peculiarities of a specific case, or colored by any judicial discretion, and which rests confessedly upon custom or statute, as distinguished from any claim to ethical superiority. Klever v. Seawall, C.C.A. Ohio, 65 F. 395, 12 C.C.A. 661.

As distinguished from ecclesiastical law, it is the system of jurisprudence administered by the purely secular tribunals.

As concerns its force and authority in the United States, the phrase designates that portion of the common law of England (including such acts of parliament as were applicable) which had been adopted and was in force here at the time of the Revolution. This, so far as it has not since been expressly abrogated, is recognized as an organic part of the jurisprudence of most of the United States. Industrial Acceptance Corporation v. Webb, Mo.App., 287 S.W. 657, 660.

The "common law" of England, which is the rule of decision in all courts of Montana, in so far as it is not repugnant to the Constitution of the United States or the Constitution or laws of that state, means that body of jurisprudence as applied and modified by the courts of this country up to the time it was adopted in Montana. Herrin v. Sutherland, 74 Mont. 587, 241 P. 328, 330, 42 A.L.R. 937. See, also, Norvell-Wilder Hardware Co. v. McCamey, Tex. Civ.App., 290 S.W. 772, 773; Fletcher v. Los Angeles Trust & Savings Bank, 182 Cal. 177, 187 P. 425, 427.

The common law of England, adopted by Pol. Code Cal. § 4468, does not refer solely to the lex non scripta, the common law unmodified by statute, but contemplates the whole body of jurisprudence as it stood, influenced by statute at the time when the Code section was adopted, and also embraces equity. Martin v. Superior Court of California in and for Alameda County, 176 Cal. 289, 168 P. 135, 136, L.R.A.1918B, 313.

In a wider sense than any of the foregoing, the "common law" may designate all that part of the positive law, juristic theory, and ancient custom of any state or nation which is of general and universal application, thus marking off special or local rules or customs.

For "Federal Common Law," see that title.

As a compound adjective "common-law" is understood as contrasted with or opposed to "statutory," and sometimes also to "equitable" or to "criminal." See examples below.

COMMON-LAW ACTION. A civil suit, as distinguished from a criminal prosecution or a proceeding to enforce a penalty or a police regulation; not necessarily an action which would lie at common law. Kirby v. Railroad Co., C.C.Iowa, 106 F. 551; U. S. v. Block, 24 Fed.Cas. 1,174.

COMMON-LAW ASSIGNMENTS. Such forms of assignments for the benefit of creditors as were known to the common law, as distinguished from such as are of modern invention or authorized by statute. Ontario Bank v. Hurst, C.C.A.Mich., 103 F. 231, 43 C.C.A. 193.

COMMON-LAW CHEAT. The obtaining of money or property by means of a false token, symbol, or device; this being the definition of a cheat or "cheating" at common law. State v. Renick, 33 Or. 584, 56 Pac. 275, 44 L.R.A. 266, 72 Am.St.Rep. 758.

COMMON-LAW CONTEMPT. A name sometimes applied to proceedings for contempt which are criminal in their nature, as distinguished from those which are intended as purely civil remedies ordinarily arising out of the alleged violation of some order entered in the course of a chancery proceeding. People v. Samuel, 199 Ill.App. 294, 297; People v. Buconich, 199 Ill.App. 410, 412.

COMMON-LAW CRIME. One punishable by the force of the common law, as distinguished from crimes created by statute. In re Greene, C.C. Ohio, 52 F. 104.

COMMON-LAW JURISDICTION. Jurisdiction of a court to try and decide such cases as were cognizable by the courts of law under the English common law; the jurisdiction of those courts which exercise their judicial powers according to the course of the common law. U. S. v. Power, 27 Fed.Cas. 607.

COMMON-LAW LARCENY. See Larceny.

COMMON-LAW LIEN. One known to or granted by the common law, as distinguished from statutory, equitable, and maritime liens; also one arising by implication of law, as distinguished from one created by the agreement of the parties. The Menominie, D.C.Minn., 36 F. 197; Tobacco Warehouse Co. v. Trustee, 117 Ky. 478, 78 S.W. 413, 64 L.R.A. 219.

It is a right extended to a person to retain that which is in his possession belonging to another, until the demand or charge of the person in possession is paid or satisfied. Whiteside v. Rocky Mountain Fuel Co., C.C.A.Colo., 101 F.2d 765, 769; Goldwater v. Mendelson, 8 N.Y.S. 627, 629, 170 Misc. 422.

COMMON-LAW MARRIAGE. One not solemnized in the ordinary way, but created by an agreement to marry, followed by cohabitation; a consummated agreement to marry, between persons legally capable of making marriage contract, per verba de praesenti, followed by cohabitation. Collins v. Hoag and Rollins, 121 Neb. 716, 238 N.W. 351.

There must be a public and continued recognition of such relation by the parties as distinguished from incidental or accidental recognition. Whitaker v. Shenault, Tex.Civ. App., 172 S.W. 202, 203.
COMMON-LAW MORTGAGE. One possessing the characteristics or fulfilling the requirements of a mortgage at common law; not known in Louisiana, where the civil law prevails; but such a mortgage made in another state and affecting lands in Louisiana, will be given effect there as a "recovery" mortgage, affecting third persons after due inscription. Gates v. Gaither, 46 La. Ann. 286, 15 So. 50.

COMMON-LAW PROCEDURE ACTS. Three acts of parliament, passed in the years 1852, 1854, and 1860, respectively, for the amendment of the procedure in the common-law courts. The common-law procedure act of 1852 is St. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76; that of 1854, St. 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125; and that of 1860, St. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 126. Mozley & Whitely.

The "right of a common-law remedy," saved to suitors in actions maritime in their nature arising under charter parties by U. S. Judicial Code 1911, § 24, par. 3 (see Historical and Revision Notes under 28 U.S.C.A. § 1333) did not include attempted changes by the states in the substantive admiralty law, but did include all means, other than proceedings in admiralty, which may be employed to enforce the right or to redress the injury involved, and included remedies in pais, as well as proceedings in court; judicial remedies conferred by statute, as well as those existing in the common law; remedies in equity, as well as those enforceable in a court of law. Red Cross Line v. Atlantic Fruit Co., 44 S.Ct. 274, 277, 264 U.S. 109, 68 L.Ed. 582.

COMMON-LAW TRADE-MARK. One appropriated under common-law rules, regardless of statutes. Stratton & Terstegge Co. v. Stiglitz Furnace Co., 258 Ky. 678, 81 S.W.2d 1, 3.

COMMON-LAW WIFE. A woman who was party to a "common-law marriage," as above defined; or one who, having lived with a man in a relation of concubinage during his life, asserts a claim, after his death, to have been his wife according to the requirements of the common law. In re Brush, 49 N.Y.S. 803, 25 App.Div. 610.

COMMON LAWYER. A lawyer learned in the common law.

COMMON NIGHTWALKER. See Night Walkers.

COMMON NUISANCE. A danger or damage threatening the public. Canfield v. Quaye, 10 N. Y.S.2d 781, 784, 170 Misc. 621.

COMMON PLEAS. The name of a court of record having general original jurisdiction in civil suits.

COMMON RECOVERY. In conveyancing. A species of common assurance, or mode of conveying lands by matter of record, formerly in frequent use in England. It was in the nature and form of an action at law, carried regularly through, and ending in a recovery of the lands against the tenant of the freehold; which recovery, being a supposed adjudication of the right, bound all persons, and vested a free and absolute fee-simple in the recoverer. 2 Bl.Comm. 357. Christy v. Burch, 25 Fla. 942, 2 So. 258. Common recoveries were abolished by the statutes 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 74.

They were resorted to when the object was to create an absolute bar of estates tail, and of the remainders and reversions expectant on the determination of such estates. 2 BlaComm. 357. Though it has been used in some of the states, this form of conveyance is practically obsolete, and was considered easier and less expensive modes of making conveyances having been substituted. Frost v. Cloutman, 7 N. H. 9, 26 Am. Dec. 723.

COMMONABLE. Entitled to common. Commonable beasts are either beasts of the plow, as horses and oxen, or such as manure the land, as kine and sheep. Beasts not commonable are swine, goats, and the like. Co. Litt. 122a; 2 Bl.Comm. 33.

COMMONALTY. The great body of citizens; the mass of the people, excluding the nobility.

The body of people composing a municipal corporation, excluding the corporate officers.

The body of a society or corporation, as distinguished from the officers. 1 Perr. & D. 243.

Charters of incorporation of the various tradesmen’s societies, etc., in England are usually granted to the master, wardens, and commonalty of such corporation.

COMMONANCE. The commoners, or tenants and inhabitants, who have the right of common or commoning in open field. Cowell.

COMMONERS. In English law. Persons having a right of common. So called because they have a right to pasture on the waste, in common with the lord. 2 H.B1. 389.

COMMONS. The class of subjects in Great Britain exclusive of the royal family and the nobility. They are represented in parliament by the house of commons.

Part of the demesne land of a manor, (or land the property of which was in the lord,) which, being uncultivated, was termed the "lord’s waste," and served for public roads and for common of pasture to the lord and his tenants. 2 Bl.Comm. 90.

Squares; pleasure grounds and spaces or open places for public use or public recreation owned by towns;—in modern usage usually called "parks." Jones v. City of Jackson, 104 Miss. 449, 61 So. 456, 457.

COMMONS, HOUSE OF. See House of Commons.
COMMONTY. In Scotch law. Land possessed in common by different proprietors, or by those having acquired rights of servitude. Bell.

COMMONWEALTH. The public or common weal or welfare. This cannot be regarded as a technical term of public law, though often used in political science. It generally designates, when so employed, a republican frame of government,—one in which the welfare and rights of the entire mass of people are the main consideration, rather than the privileges of a class or the will of a monarch; or it may designate the body of citizens living under such a government.

Sometimes it may denote the corporate entity, or the government, of a jural society (or state) possessing powers of self-government in respect of its immediate concerns, but forming an integral part of a larger government, (or nation.) State v. Lambert, 28 S.E. 930, 44 W.Va. 308.

In this latter sense, it is the official title of several of the United States (as Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Virginia, and Kentucky), and would be appropriate to them all. In the former sense, the word was used to designate the English government during the protectorate of Cromwell.

See Government; Nation; State.

COMMORANCY. The dwelling in any place as an inhabitant; which consists in usually lying there. 4 Bl.Comm. 273. In American law it is used to denote a mere temporary residence. Pullen v. Monk, 82 Me. 105, 26 A. 1049.

COMMORANT. Staying or abiding; dwelling temporarily in a place. One residing in a particular town, city, or district. Barnes, 162.

COMMORIENTES. Several persons who perish together. Bract. fol. 7b.

COMMORIENTES. Several persons who perish at the same time in consequence of the same calamity.

COMMORTY, or COMORTH. A contribution which was gathered at marriages, and when young priests said or sung the first masses. Prohibited by 26 Hen. VIII. c. 6. Cowell.

COMMOTE. Half a cantred or hundred in Wales, containing fifty villages. Also a great seignory or lordship, and may include one or divers manors. Co. Litt. 5.

COMMISSION. A "civil commotion" is an insurrection of the people for general purposes, though it may not amount to rebellion where there is a usurped power. 2 Marsh.Ins. 793; Boon v. Insurance Co., 40 Conn. 584; Grame v. Assur. Soc., 5 S.Ct. 150, 112 U.S. 273, 28 L.Ed. 716; Spruill v. Insurance Co., 46 N.C. 127.

A civil commotion is an uprising among a mass of people which occasions a serious and prolonged disturbance and infraction of civil order not attaining the status of war or an armed insurrection; it is a wild and irregular action of many persons assembled together. Hartford Fire Ins. Co., Hartford, Conn. v. War Eagle Coal Co., C.C. A.W.Va., 295 F. 663, 665. The term refers to political disorders, not to an economic disturbance. The Poznan, D.C.N.Y., 276 F. 418, 427.

COMMUNE, adj. Lat. See Communis.

COMMUNE, n. A self-governing town or village. The name given to the committee of the people in the French revolution of 1793; and again, in the revolutionary uprising of 1871, it signified the attempt to establish absolute self-government in Paris, or the mass of those concerned in the attempt. In old French law, it signified any municipal corporation. And in old English law, the commonality or common people. 2 Co.Inst. 540.

COMMUNE CONCILIUM. The King's Council. See Privy Council.

COMMUNE CONCILIUM REGNI. The common council of the realm. One of the names of the English parliament. See Communitas Regni An-

COMMUNE FORUM. The common place of justice. The seat of the principal courts, especially those that are fixed.

COMMUNE PLACITUM. In old English law. A common plea or civil action, such as an action of debt.

COMMUNE VINCULUM. A common or mutual bond. Applied to the common stock of consanguinity, and to the feodal bond of fealty, as the common bond of union between lord and tenant. 2 Bl.Comm. 250; 3 Bl.Comm. 230.

COMMUNI CUSTODIA. In English law. An obso-lete writ which anciently lay for the lord, whose tenant, holding by knight's service, died, and left his eldest son under age, against a stranger that entered the land, and obtained the ward of the body. Reg. Orig. 161.

COMMUNI DIVIDUNDO. In the civil law. An action which lies for those who have property in common, to procure a division. It lies where parties hold land in common but not in partnership. Calvin.

COMMUNIA. In old English law. Common things, res communes. Such as running water, the air, the sea, and sea shores. Bract. fol. 7b.

COMMUNIA PLACITA. In old English law. Common pleas or actions; those between one subject and another, as distinguished from pleas of the crown.

COMMUNIA PLACITA NON TENENDA IN SCACCARIO. An ancient writ directed to the treasurer and barons of the exchequer, forbidding them to hold pleas between common persons (i.e., not debtors to the king, who alone originally sued and were sued there) in that court, where neither of the parties belonged to the same. Reg. Orig. 187.

COMMUNLE. In feudal law on the continent of Europe, this name was given to towns enfranchised by the crown, about the twelfth century, and formed into free corporations by grants called "charters of community."

COMMUNIBUS ANNIS. In ordinary years; on the annual average.

COMMUNICATION. Information given, the sharing of knowledge by one with another; conference; consultation or bargaining preparatory to making a contract. Intercourse; connection. Also, the Masonic equivalent for the word "meeting."

Something said by one person to another; so used in a statute providing that neither a party nor his or her spouse shall be examined as a witness to personal transactions or communications between witness and persons since deceased. See v. Si'ier, 188 Iowa, 1126, 161 N.W. 769, 772, 176 N.W. 981.

"Transactions and communications," within statute declaring inadmissible testimony of interested witness concerning transactions and communications between himself and deceased person, embrace every variety of affairs which conform to the subject of negotiation, interviews, or actions between two persons, and include every method by which one person can derive impressions or information from the conduct, condition or language of another. Bright v. Virginia & Gold Hill Water Co., C.C.A.Nev., 270 F. 410, 413.

The act of communicating; so used in a statute declaring that no husband or wife shall be compelled to disclose any confidential communication made by one to the other during marriage. Whitford v. North State Life Ins. Co., 163 N.C. 223, 79 S.E. 501, 502, Ann.Cas.1915B, 270. In a broader sense, the word embraces all knowledge upon the part of either obtained by reason of the marriage relations, and which but for the confidence growing out of such relation would not have been known. Prudential Ins. Co. of America v. Pierce's Adm'r, 270 Ky. 216, 109 S.W.2d 616, 617.

As used in a statute providing that an attorney cannot, without the consent of his client, be examined as to any communication made by the client, "communication" is not restricted to mere words but includes acts as well. Ex parte McDonough, 170 Cal. 230, 149 P. 566, 567, L.R.A. 1916C, 593, Ann.Cas.1916E, 327.

French Law

The production of a merchant's books, by delivering them either to a person designated by the court, or to his adversary, to be examined in all their parts, and as shall be deemed necessary to the suit. Arg. Fr. Merc. Law, 552.

-Confidential communications. These are certain classes of communications, passing between persons who stand in a confidential or fiduciary relation to each other, (or who, on account of their relative situation, are under a special duty of secrecy and fidelity,) which the law will not permit to be divulged, or allow them to be inquired into in a court of justice, for the sake of public policy and the good order of society. Examples of such privileged relations are those of husband and wife and attorney and client. Hatton v. Robinson, 14 Pick.Mass. 416, 25 Am.Dec. 415; Parker v. Carter, 4 Munf.Va. 287, 6 Am.Dec. 513; Parkhurst v. Berdell, 110 N.Y. 386, 18 N.E. 123, 6 Am.St.Rep. 384.

-Privileged communication. In the law of evidence. A communication made to a counsel, solicitor, or attorney, in professional confidence, and which he is not permitted to divulge; otherwise called a "confidential communication." 1 Starkie, Ev. 185.

In the law of libel and slander. A defamatory statement made to another in pursuance of a duty, political, judicial, social, or personal, so that an action for libel or slander will not lie, though the statement be false, unless in the last two cases actual malice be proved in addition. Bacon v. Railroad Co., 66 Mich. 166, 33 N.W. 181; 5 E. & B. 347.

When a communication is fairly made by one in the discharge of a public or private duty, legal, moral, or social, of perfect or imperfect obligation, or in the conduct of his own affairs, to one who has a corresponding interest to receive such communication, it is "privileged," Intern. & G. N. Ry. Co. v. Edmundson, Tex.Com.App., 222 S.W. 1131, 183, if made in good faith and for a good purpose, even though local malice, Baker v. Clark, 186 Ky. 816, 218 S.W. 280, 285. A "privileged communication" is one made in good faith, upon any subject-matter in which the party communicating has an interest, or in reference to which he has, or honestly believes he has, a duty, and which contains matter which, without the occasion upon which it is made, would be defamatory and actionable. Peak v. Taubman, 251 Mo. 390, 158 S.W. 650, 663. In a "privileged communication" the words used, if defamatory and libelous, are excused, in fair comment the words are not a defamation of plaintiff and not libelous. Van Lonkhuyzen v. Daily News Co., 203 Mich. 570, 170 N.W. 93, 99.

Privileged communications are either (1) absolutely privileged, or (2) conditionally or qualifiedly privileged. Grantham v. Wilkes, 135 Miss. 777, 100 So. 673. An "absolutely privileged communication" is one made in the interest of the public service or the due administration of justice, and is practically limited to legislative and judicial proceedings and other actions of state. Grantham v. Wilkes, 135 Miss. 777, 100 So. 673. By an "absolutely privileged" publication is not to be understood a publication for which the publisher is in no wise responsible, but it means a publication in respect of which, by reason of the occasion upon which it is made, no remedy can be had in a civil action for slander or libel, Peterson v. Cleaver, 105 Neb. 438, 181 N.W. 187, 189, 15 A.L.R. 447, even though the words are published maliciously and with knowledge of their falsity, Spencer v. Cleaver, 116 Va. 767, 768 S.E. 42, 47. A "qualifiedly privileged communication" is a slanderous statement uttered in good faith upon a proper occasion and from a proper motive based upon an honest belief that it is true, but, unlike communications wholly privileged, the defendant has the burden of proving want of malice or ill will. Peak v. Taubman, 251 Mo. 390, 158 S.W. 650, 665. A communication "qualifiedly privileged" is one which is prima facie privileged only, and in which the privilege may be lost by proof of malice in the publication. Spencer v. Looney, 116 Va. 767, 768 S.E. 42, 47. A communication made in good faith upon any subject-matter in which the party communicating has an interest or in reference to which he has a duty, either legal, moral, or social, if made to a person having a corresponding interest, is "qualifiedly privileged." Peterson v. Cleaver, 105 Neb. 438, 181 N.W. 187, 189, 15 A.L.R. 447; Massee v. Williams, C.C.A.Tenn., 207 F. 222, 230; German-American Ins. Co. v. Huntley, 62 Okl. 39, 161 P. 815, 818.

COMMUNINGS. In Scotch law. The negotiations preliminary to entering into a contract.

COMMUNIO BONORUM. In the civil law. A community of goods.

COMMUNION OF GOODS. In Scotch law. The right enjoyed by married persons in the movable goods belonging to them. Bell.

COMMUNIS, COMMUNE, adj. Lat. Common.
COMMUNIS

What was at first illegal is presumed, when repeated many times, to have acquired the force of usage; and then it would be wrong to depart from it. 1 Ld.Raym. 42; 6 Cl. & F. 172; 3 M. & S. 396; Goodman v. Eastman, 4 N.H. 458; Kent v. Kent, 2 Mass. 357; Davey v. Turner, 1 Da. 15, 1 L.Ed.13. The converse of this maxim is communitas error non tacit jus. A common error does not make law. 4 Inst. 242; 3 Term 725; 6 Term 564.

COMVIUNS OPINIO. Common opinion; general professional opinion. According to Lord Coke (who places it on the footing of observance or usage), common opinion is good authority in law. Co. Litt. 186a.

COMMUNIS PARIES. In the civil law. A common or party wall. Dig. 8, 2, 8, 13.

COMMUNIS SCRIPTURA. In old English law. A common writing; a writing common to both parties; a chirograph. Glan. lib. 8, c. 1. COMMONS.

COMMUNIS STIPES. A common stock of descent; a common ancestor.

COMMUNISM. A system of social organization in which goods are held in common, the opposite of the system of private property; communalism, any theory or system of social organization involving common ownership of agents of production of industry, the latter of which theories is referred to in the popular use of the word "communism" while the scientific usage sometimes conforms to the first alone and sometimes alternates between the first and second; also the principles and theories of the Communist Party, especially in Soviet Russia. Feinglass v. Reinecke, D.C.Ill., 48 F.Supp. 438, 440. (q. v.)

Any theory or system of social organization involving common ownership of the agents of production, and some approach to equality in the distribution of the products of industry. Webster, Diet. A system by which the state supplies inhabitants with water, should be construed to include all the inhabitants of a district having a community of interest in obtaining for themselves in common a water supply for domestic use. Hamilton v. Rudeen, 112 Or. 256, 224 P. 92, 93.

In connection with the rule requiring, for purposes of impeachment, a knowledge of the character of the witness in the community or neighborhood in which he resides, the term "community" means, generally, where the person is well known and has established a reputation. Craven v. State, 22 Ala.App. 39, 111 So. 767, 769.

Civil Law

A corporation or body politic. Dig. 3, 4.

French Law

A species of partnership which a man and a woman contract when they are lawfully married to each other. See, also, Community Property, infra.

Conventional community is that which is formed by express agreement in the contract of marriage.

By this contract the legal community which would otherwise subsist may be modified as to the proportions which each shall take, and as to the things which shall compose it.

Legal community is that which takes place by virtue of the contract of marriage itself.

The French system of community property was known as the dotal system, and the Spanish as the ganancial system. The conquest of Mexico by the Spaniards and their acquisition of the Florida territory resulted in the introduction of American soil of the Spanish system, which now prevails, usually in a somewhat modified form, in Texas, California, Nevada, Arizona, Washington, Idaho, New Mexico, Porto Rico, and the Philippines. Ballinger, Com.Property, § 6; Chavez v. McKnight, 1 N.M. 147. The Louisiana Code has, with slight modifications, adopted the dotal system of the Code Napoleon as regards the separate rights of husband and wife, but as to their common property, it retained the essential features of the Spanish ganancial system.

COMMUNITY ACCOUNT. A bank account consisting of separate and community funds mingled in such manner that neither can be distinguished from the other. Smith v. Buss, 135 Tex. 566, 144 S.W.2d 529, 532.
COMMUNITY DEBT. One chargeable to the community (of husband and wife) rather than to either of the parties individually. Calhoun v. Leary, 6 Wash. 17, 32 P. 1070.

COMMUNITY HOUSE. A house occupied by two or more families. Fox v. Sumerson, 338 Pa. 545, 13 A.2d 1, 2.

COMMUNITY OF INTEREST. Term as applied to relation of joint adventure means interest common to both or all parties, that is, mixture or more families. Fox v. Sumerson, 338 Pa. 545, 13 A.2d 1, 2.

COMMUNITY OF PROFITS. This term, as used in the definition of a partnership, (to which a community of profits is essential,) means a proprietorship in them as distinguished from a personal claim upon the other associate, a property right in them from the start in one associate as much as in the other. Moore v. Williams, 26 Tex.Civ. App. 142, 62 S.W. 977.

This partnership or community consists of the profits of all the effects of which the husband has the administration and enjoyment, either of right or in fact, of the produce of the reciprocal industry and labor of both husband and wife, and of the estates which they may acquire during the marriage, either by donations made jointly to them both, or by purchase, or in any other similar way, even although the purchase be only in the name of one of the two, and not of both, because in that case the period of time when the purchase is made is alone attended to, and not the person who made the purchase. Rev.Civ.Code La. arts. 2402, 2404; Brown v. Cobb, 10 La. 172; Barnes v. Thompson, 154 La. 1036, 98 So. 657, 658.

COMMUTATION. Alteration; change; substitution; the act of substituting one thing for another. Steinacher v. Swanson, 131 Neb. 439, 268 N.W. 317, 321.

Criminal Law

The change of a punishment from a greater to a less; as from hanging to imprisonment. People v. Jenkins, 325 Ill. 372, 156 N.E. 290, 292. Fehl v. Martin, 155 Or. 455, 64 P.2d 631, 632.

Although both a pardon and a commutation are granted by the sovereign power; Goben v. State, 32 Old.Ct. 237, 240 P. 1085, 1087; a "commutation" means merely a change of punishment, while a "pardon" avoids or terminates punishment for crime; Lupo v. Zerbest, C.C.A.Ga., 92 F.2d 362, 364. A pardon bears no relation to the term of punishment, and must be accepted or it is nugatory; commutation removes no stain, restores no civil privilege, and may be rescinded without the consent and against the will of the prisoner. In re Charles, 115 Kan. 323, 222 P. 606, 608; Chapman v. Scott, D.C.Conn., 10 F.2d 156, 159.

"Commutation" is also distinguishable from a "reprieve" or "respite," meaning simply the withholding of a sentence for an interval of time, a postponement of execution, or a temporary suspension of execution. State v. District Court of Eighteenth Judicial Dist. in and for Maine County, 73 Mont. 541, 237 P. 525, 527.

Civil Law

The conversion of the right to receive a variable or periodical payment into the right to receive a fixed or gross payment; a substitution of one sort of payment for another, or of money payment in lieu of a performance of a compulsory duty or labor. Commutation may be effected by private agreement, but it is usually done under a statute. Steinacher v. Swanson, 131 Neb. 439, 268 N.W. 317, 321.

COMMUTATION OF TAXES. Payment of a designated lump sum (permanent or annual) for the privilege of exemption from taxes, or the settlement in advance of a specific sum in lieu of an ad valorem tax. Cotton Mfg. Co. v. New Orleans, 31 La.Arm. 440.

COMMUTATION OF TITHES. Signifies the conversion of tithes into a fixed payment in money.

COMMUTATION TICKET. A railroad ticket giving the holder the right to travel at a certain rate for a limited number of trips (or for an unlimited number within a certain period of time) for a less amount than would be paid in the aggregate for so many separate trips. Interstate Commerce Com’n v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., C.C.Ohio, 43 F. 56.

COMMUTATIVE CONTRACT. In civil law. One in which each of the contracting parties gives and receives an equivalent; e.g., the contract of sale. Pothisch, Obl. n. 13; State ex rel. Waterman v. J. S. Waterman and Co., 178 La. 340, 151 So. 422, 426. See Contract.

COMMUTATIVE JUSTICE, See Justice.

COMPACT, n. An agreement; a contract. Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. 1, 92, 5 L.Ed. 547. Usually applied to conventions between nations or sovereign states.

A contract between parties, which creates obligations and rights capable of being enforced, and contemplated as such between the parties, in their distinct and independent characters. Story, Const. b. 3, c. 3; Rutherf.Inst. b. 2, c. 6, § 1.

A mutual consent of parties concerned respecting some property or right that is the object of the stipulation, or something that is to be done or forborne. Chesapeake & O. Canal Co. v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., 4 Gill & J., Md., 1.

COMPACT, adj. Closely or firmly united or packed; as, the particles of solid bodies; firm; solid; dense; as a compact texture in rocks; also, lying in a narrow compass or arranged so as to economize space; having a small surface or border in proportion to contents or bulk; close; as, a compact estate; a compact order or formation of troops. Wails v. Board of Commissioners of Okmulgee County, 156 Okl. 165, 9 P.2d 946, 948. Concentrated, or near to. Webster v. Toulon Tp. High School Dist. No. 4, 313 Ill. 541, 145 N.E. 118, 121; State v. Tindell, 210 P. 619, 621, 112 Kan. 256.
COMPACT SCHOOL DISTRICT. One so closely united and so nearly adjacent to the school building that all the students residing in the district may conveniently travel from their homes to the school building and return the same day in a reasonable length of time and with a reasonable degree of comfort. People ex rel. Tudor v. Vance, 29 N.E.2d 673, 675, 374 Ill. 415; People ex rel. Frailey v. McNeely, 32 N.E.2d 680, 610, 376 Ill. 64.

COMPANAGE. All kinds of food, except bread and drink. Spelman.

COMPANIES CLAUSES CONSOLIDATION ACT. An English statute, (8 Vict. c. 16,) passed in 1845, which consolidated the clauses of previous laws still remaining in force on the subject of public companies. It is considered as incorporated into all subsequent acts authorizing the execution of undertakings of a public nature by companies, unless expressly excepted by such later acts. Its purpose is declared by the preamble to be to avoid repeating provisions as to the constitution and management of the companies, and to secure greater uniformity in such provisions. Wharton.

COMPANION OF THE GARTER. One of the knights of the Order of the Garter.

COMPANIONS. In French law. A general term, comprehending all persons who compose the crew of a ship or vessel. Poth. Mar. Cont. no. 163.

COMPANULATE. This term, used to describe the shape of the cover of a lunch-box containing a thermos bottle, means bell-shaped. American Can Co. v. Goldee Mfg. Co., D.C.N.Y., 290 F. 523, 527.

COMPANY. A society or association of persons, in considerable number, interested in a common object, and uniting themselves for the prosecution usually of some commercial or industrial undertaking, or other legitimate business. Mills v. State, 23 Tex. 303; Smith v. Janesville, 52 Wis. 680, 9 N.W. 789.

The proper signification of the word "company," when applied to persons engaged in trade, denotes those united for the same purpose or in a joint concern. It is so commonly used in this sense, or as indicating a partnership, that few persons accustomed to purchase goods at shops, where they are sold by retail, would misapprehend that such was its meaning. Palmer v. Pinkham, 33 Me. 32.

The term is not identical with "partnership," although every unincorporated society is, in its legal relations, a partnership. In common use a distinction is made, the name "partnership" being reserved for business associations of a limited number of persons (usually not more than four or five) trading under a name composed of their individual names set out in succession; while "company" is appropriated as the designation of a society comprising a larger number of persons, with greater capital, and engaged in more extensive enterprises, and trading under a title not disclosing the names of the individuals. Attorney General v. Mercantile Marine Ins. Co., 121 Mass. 525.

Sometimes the word is used to represent those members of a partnership whose names do not appear in the name of the firm. See 12 Toullier, 97.

A number of persons united for performing or carrying on anything jointly. In re Tidewater Coal Exchange, C.C.A.N.Y., 280 F. 638, 643.

Thus, the term is not necessarily limited to a trading or commercial body, but may include an unincorporated organization to promote fraternity among its members and provide mutual aid and protection through the payment of death benefits. In re Order of Sparta, D.C.Pa., 238 F. 437.

"Company" is a generic and comprehensive word, which may include individuals, partnerships, and corporations. Ashbury v. Town of Albemarle, 162 N.C. 247, 78 S.E. 146, 148, 44 L.R.A.N.S., 1189; Ellerson v. Grove, C.C.A.N.C., 44 F.2d 493, 497. But not a municipality. City of Los Angeles, Cal., v. Eighth Judicial District Court, 58 Nev. 1, 67 P.2d 1019, 1023.

Joint Stock Company

An association of individuals for purposes of profit, possessing a common capital contributed by the members composing it, such capital being commonly divided into shares of which each member possesses one or more, and which are transferable by the owner. Shelf. Jt. St. Co. 1. One having a joint stock or capital, which is divided into numerous transferable shares, or consists of transferable stock. Lindl. Parnt. 6. A partnership whereof the capital is divided, or agreed to be divided, into shares so as to be transferable without the express consent of the co-partners. Pars. Part. § 435. A quasi partnership, invested by statutes in England and many of the states with some of the privileges of a corporation. See Pennsylvania v. Mining Co., 10 Wall. 556, 19 L. Ed. 998; L.R. 4 Eq. 695. It lies midway between a corporation and a copartnership. Rocky Mountain Stud Farm Co. v. Lunt, 46 Utah, 299, 151 P. 521, 527.

A "joint-stock company" is an entirely different organization from a "corporation," although it has many of the same characteristics and is often not improperly called a quasi corporation, especially under particular statutes, but in Kentucky it is still what it was at common law, namely, a hybrid midway between a corporation and a partnership, that is, it had directors and officers, articles of association, a common capital divided into shares which represented the interest of the members and are transferable without the consent of the other members so that the death of a member does not dissolve the company—but, on the other hand, each member was liable for the debts of the concern, so that such company had characteristics of both a corporation and a partnership. Roller v. Madison, 172 Ky. 693, 189 S.W. 914, 915.

Limited Company

A company in which the liability of each shareholder is limited by the number of shares he has taken, so that he cannot be called on to contribute beyond the amount of his shares. In England, the memorandum of association of such company may provide that the liability of the directors, manager, or managing director thereof shall be unlimited. 30 & 31 Vict. c. 131; 1 Lindl. Parnt. 383; Mozley & Whitley.

Public Company

In English law. A business corporation; a society of persons joined together for carrying on some commercial or industrial undertaking.

COMPARABLE ACCOMMODATION. Within the rule that it is the rent generally prevailing on the freeze date for comparable accommodations in a defense-rental area that determines rent that may be charged, two accommodations are "comparable" if they are sufficiently similar to be regarded by an expert as of substantially equal rental value or if they are sufficiently similar so that an expert taking as a standard the rent prevailing for one and making allowances for such differences as would be reflected in rental value would be able to determine the appropriate corresponding rent for the other. Sircianni v. Bowles, Em.App., 148 F.2d 343, 344.

COMPARATIO LITERARUM. In the civil law. Comparison of writings, or handwritings. A mode of proof allowed in certain cases. COMPARATIVE. Proceeding by the method of comparison; founded on comparison; estimated by comparison.

COMPARATIVE INTERPRETATION. That method of interpretation which seeks to arrive at the meaning of a statute or other writing by comparing its several parts and also by comparing it as a whole with other like documents proceeding from the same source and referring to the same general subject. Glenn v. York County, 6 Rich. (S.C.) 412.

COMPARATIVE JURISPRUDENCE. The study of the principles of legal science by the comparison of various systems of law. COMPARATIVE NEGLIGENCE. That doctrine in the law of negligence by which the negligence of the parties is compared, in the degrees of "slight," "ordinary," and "gross" negligence, and a recovery permitted, notwithstanding the contributory negligence of the plaintiff, when the negligence of the plaintiff is slight and the negligence of the defendant gross, but refused when the plaintiff has been guilty of a want of ordinary care, thereby contributing to his injury, or when the negligence of the defendant is not gross, but only ordinary or slight, when compared, under the circumstances of the case, with the contributory negligence of the plaintiff. 3 Amer. & Eng. Enc. Law, 367. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Elsing, 37 Okl. 333, 132 P. 483, 486. Where negligence by both parties is concurrent and contributes to injury, recovery is not barred under such doctrine, but plaintiff's damages are diminished proportionately, provided his fault is less than defendant's, and that, by exercise of ordinary care, he could not have avoided consequences of defendant's negligence after it was or should have been apparent. Rogers v. McKinley, 48 Ga.App. 262, 172 S.E. 662, 664.

COMPARISON OF HANDWRITING. A comparison by the juxtaposition of two writings, in order, by such comparison, to ascertain whether both were written by the same person. A method of proof resorted to where the genuineness of a written document is disputed; it consists in comparing the handwriting of the disputed paper with that of another instrument which is proved or admitted to be in the writing of the party sought to be charged, in order to infer, from their identity or similarity in this respect, that they are the work of the same hand. Johnson v. Insurance Co., 105 Iowa, 273, 75 N.W. 101, COMPARATIVE RECTITUDE. Doctrine wherein relief by divorce is granted to the party least in fault when both have shown grounds for divorce. Blankenship v. Blankenship, 51 Nev. 356, 276 P. 9, 10, 63 A.L.R. 1127. Doctrine does not apply in Nevada.

COMPASCUUM. Belonging to commonage Jus compascuum, the right of common of pasture.

COMPASS, THE MARINER'S. An instrument used by mariners to point out the course of a ship at sea. It consists of a magnetized steel bar called the "needle," attached to the under side of a card, upon which are drawn the points of the compass, and supported by a fine pin, upon which it turns freely in a horizontal plane.

COMPASSING. Imagining or contriving, or plotting. In English law, "compassing the king's death" is treason. 4 Bl.Comm. 76.

COMPATERNITAS. In the canon law. A kind of spiritual relationship contracted by baptism.

COMPATERNITY. Spiritual affinity, contracted by sponsorship in baptism.

COMPATIBILITY. As applied to offices, such relation and consistency between the duties of two offices that they may be held and filled by one person.

COMPPEAR. In Scotch law. To appear.

COMPEARANCE. In Scotch practice. Appearance; an appearance made for a defendant; an appearance by counsel. Bell.

In an allegation that plaintiff was compelled to pay license taxes, the word "compel" does not necessarily import elements of compulsory payment. Singer Sewing Mach. Co. v. Teasley, 198 Ala. 673, 73 So. 969, 971; Sinnott v. District Court in and for Clarke County, 201 Iowa, 292, 207 N.W. 129, 131.

COMPELLATIVUS. An adversary or accuser.

Compendia sunt dispensia. Co. Litt. 305. Abbreviations (or abridgments) are detriments.

COMPENDIUM. An abridgment, synopsis, or digest.

COMPENSABLE DEATH. Within Workmen's Compensation Acts is an injury for which compensation is payable, and date of such an injury is not time of the accident or occurrence causing injury, but the time when the right to compensation accrues. S. G. Taylor Chain Co. v. Marianowski, 182 N.E. 584, 585, 95 Ind.App. 120. Muellhausen Spring Co. v. Szewczyk, 104 Ind.App. 161, 8 N.E.2d 104, 106.

COMPENSATION. In Spanish law. Compensation; set-off. The extinction of a debt by another debt of equal dignity between persons who have mutual claims on each other.

COMPENSATIO. Lat. In the civil law. Compensation, or set-off. A proceeding resembling a set-off in the common law, being a claim on the part of the defendant to have an amount due to him from the plaintiff deducted from his demand. Dig. 16, 2; Inst. 4, 6, 30, 39; 3 Bl.Comm. 305.

COMPENSATIO CRIMINIS. (Set-off of crime or guilt.) In practice. The compensation or set-off of one crime against another; the plea of remission in a suit for a divorce; that is, that the complainant is guilty of the same kind of offense with which the respondent is charged. See 1 Hagg.Cons. 144; 1 Hagg.Eccl. 714; Wood v. Wood, 2 Paige, Ch. (N.Y.) 108, 2 D. & B. 64; Bishop, Marr. & D. §§ 393, 394.

COMPENSATION. Indemnification; payment of damages; making amends; making whole; giving an equivalent or substitute of equal value; that which is necessary to restore an injured party to his former position; consideration or price of a privilege purchased; equivalent in money for a loss sustained; equivalent given for property taken or for an injury done to another; giving back an equivalent in either money which is but the measure of value, or in actual value otherwise conferred; recompense in value; recompense or reward for some loss, injury, or service, especially when it is given by statute; remuneration for the injury directly and proximately caused by a breach of contract or duty; remuneration or satisfaction for injury or damage of every description; that return which is given for something else. An act which a court orders to be done, or money which a court or other tribunal orders to be paid, by a person whose acts or omissions have caused loss or injury to another, in order that thereby the person damned may receive equal value for his loss, or be made whole in respect of his injury. Railroad Co. v. Denman, 10 Minn. 280 (Gil. 208); Hughson Condensed Milk Co. v. State Board of Equalization, 23 Cal.App.2d 281, 73 P.2d 290, 292. For "Extra Compensation" and "Fair and Reasonable Compensation", see these titles.

"Compensation" is a misleading term, and is used merely for lack of a word more nearly expressing the thought of the law which permits recovery for an imponderable and intangible thing for which there is no money equivalent. Stutsman v. Des Moines City Ry. Co., 180 Iowa, 524, 163 N.W. 580, 585.

The word "compensation," as used in Workmen's Compensation Acts, means the money relief afforded an injured employee or his dependents according to the scale established and for the persons designated in the act, and not the compensatory damages recoverable in an action at law for a wrong done or a contract broken. Christensen v. Morse Dry Dock & Repair Co., 214 N.Y.S. 732, 740, 216 App. Div. 274.

Also that equivalent in money which is paid to the owners and occupiers of lands taken or injuriously affected by the exercise of the power of eminent domain. Louisiana and F. Plank Road Co. v. Pickett, 25 Mo. 535, 539; Oregon Short Line R. Co. v. Fox, 28 Utah 311, 78 P. 800, 801.

In the constitutional provision for "just compensation" for property taken under the power of eminent domain, this term means a payment in money. Any benefit to the remaining property of the owner, arising from public works for which a part has been taken, cannot be considered as compensation. Railroad Co. v. Burkett, 42 Ala. 83.

As compared with consideration and damages, compensation, in its most careful use, seems to be between them. Consideration is for something given by consent, or by the owner's choice. Damages is an award made by a court for a wrong-doer for a tort. Compensation is for something which was taken without the owner's choice, yet without commission of a tort. Thus, one should say, construction for land sold; compensation for land taken for a railroad; damages for a trespass. But such distinctions are not uniform. Land damages is a common expression for compensation for lands taken for public use. Abbott.

"Compensation" is distinguishable from "damages," inasmuch as the former may mean the sum which will remunerate an owner for land actually taken, while the latter signifies an allowance made for injury to the residue: but such distinction is not ordinarily observed. Faulkner v. City of Nashville, 154 Tenn. 145, 285 S.W. 39, 43.

The remuneration or wages given to an employee or, especially, to an officer. Salary, pay, or emolument. Christopherson v. Reeves, 44 S.D. 634, 184 N.W. 1015, 1019; Higgins v. Glenn, 65 Utah, 406, 237 P. 513, 515.

The ordinary meaning of the term "compensation," as applied to officers, is remuneration, in whatever form it may be given, whether it be salaries and fees, or both combined. State v. Bland, 91 Kan. 160, 136 P. 947, 949. It is broad enough to include other remuneration for official services. State ex rel. Monsons v. Farmer, 271 Mo. 306, 196 S. W. 1106, 1108; such as mileage or traveling expenses; Leckenby v. Post Printing & Publishing Co., 65 Colo. 443, 176 P. 490, 492; and also the repayment of amounts expended. Compare, however, People v. Chapman, 225 N.Y. 700, 122 N.E. 240; McCoy v. Handlin, 35 S.D. 487, 153 N.W. 361, 371, L.R.A.1915E, 858, Ann.Cas.1917A, 1046.

But the term is not necessarily synonymous with "salary." See People v. Wemple, 115 N.Y. 302, 22 N.E. 272; Com. v. Carter, 21 Ky. Rep. 1509, 55 S.W. 701; Crawford County v. Lindsay, 11 Ill.App. 261; Kilgore v. People, 76 Ill. 548.

A "reasonable compensation" is that which will fairly compensate the laborer when the character of the work and the effectiveness and ability entering into the service are considered. Chapman v. A. H. Averill Machinery Co., 28 Idaho, 121, 152 P. 573, 575.

Compensation is not synonymous with "pension," which is usually a grant of money by the government to some of its subordinate agencies in recognition of, but not in payment for, past services. Dickey v. Jackson, 181 Iowa 1155, 165 N.W. 387, 389.

The Civil, Scotch, and French Law

Recoupment; set-off. The meeting of two debts due by two parties, where the debtor in the one debt is the creditor in the other; that is to say, where one person is both debtor and creditor to another, and therefore, to the extent of what is due to him, claims allowance out of the sum that he is due. Bell; 1 Kames, Eq. 395, 396.

In order for “compensation” to take place, the two debts must exist simultaneously and have as their object the payment of a sum of money or a certain quantity of consumable things of one and the same kind, and the debts must be equally liquidated and demandable. Blanchard v. Bank of Morgan City & Trust Co., La.App., 185 So. 120, 122.

Compensation is of three kinds,—legal, or by operation of law; compensation by way of exception; and by recon- vention. Stewart v. Harper, 16 La.Ann. 181; Blanchard v. Cole, 8 La. 158; 8 Dig. 16, 2; Code, 4, 31; Inst. 4, 6, 30; Burge, Suret. b. 2, c. 6, p. 181; La.Civ. Code, arts. 2203-2208 (Civ.Code, arts. 2207-2211).

Criminal Law

Recrimination. See Compensatio Criminis; Recrimination.

“Commutation” and “compensation” in statutes providing for reduction of sentence for good behavior are used interchangeably. Ryan v. Lawes, 278 N.Y.S. 608, 154 Misc. 572.

COMPENSATION PERIOD. The period fixed by the Workmen’s Compensation Act during which the injured party is to receive compensation, unless the board reduces the period by correspondingly increasing the amount of weekly compensation. Southern Casualty Co. v. Boykin, Tex.Civ.App., 298 S.W. 639, 640.

COMPENSATORY DAMAGES. See Damages.

COMPERENDINATIO. In the Roman law. The adjournment of a cause, in order to hear the parties or their advocates a second time; a second hearing of the parties to a cause. Calvin.

COMPERTORIUM. In the civil law. A judicial iquest made by delegates or commissioners to find out and relate the truth of a cause. Wharton.

COMPERUIT AD DIEM. A plea in bar of an action of debt on a bail bond that the defendant appeared at the day required. For forms, see 5 Wentworth 470; Lilly, Entr. 114; 2 Chit. Pl. 527. See, generally, Comyns, Dig. Pleader (2 W. 31); 7 B. & C. 478.

COMPETE. To contend emulously, to strive for the position for which another is striving, to contend in rivalry. People v. Chew, 67 Colo. 394, 179 P. 812, 813; Commonwealth v. Shenandoah River Light & Power Corporation, 135 Va. 47, 115 S.E. 695, 698. See Competition.

COMPETENCY. In the law of evidence. The presence of those characteristics, or the absence of those disabilities, which render a witness legally fit and qualified to give testimony in a court of justice;—applied, in the same sense, to documents or other written evidence.

Competency differs from credibility. The former is a question which arises before considering the evidence given by the witness; the latter concerns the degree of credit to be given to his story. The former denotes the personal qualification of the witness; the latter his veracity. A witness may be competent, and yet give incredible testimony; he may be incompetent, and yet his evidence, if received, be perfectly credible. Competency is for the court; credibility for the jury. Yet in some cases the term “credible” is used as an equivalent for “competent.”

Thus, in a statute relating to the execution of wills, the term “credible witness” is held to mean one who is entitled to be examined and to give evidence in a court of justice; not necessarily one who is personally worthy of belief, but one who is not disqualified by imbecility, interest, crime, or other cause. 1 Jarm.Wills, 124; Smith v. Jones, 68 Vi. 132, 34 A. 424; Corn. v. Holmes, 127 Mass. 424, 34 Am.Rep. 391.

In French law. The right in a court to exercise jurisdiction in a particular case.

COMPETENT. Duly qualified; answering all requirements; having sufficient ability or authority; possessing the requisite natural or legal qualification. Adequate; suitable; sufficient; capable; legally fit. Levee Dist. v. Jamison, 176 Mo. 557, 75 S.W. 679; In re Fichter’s Estate, 279 N.Y. S. 597, 600, 155 Misc. 399. See, also, Incompetency.

A testator may be said to be “competent,” if he has mental capacity to understand the nature of his act, to understand and recollect the nature and situation of his property and his relations to persons having claims on his bounty and whose interests are affected by his will. In re Smith’s Estate, 200 Cal. 152, 252 P. 325, 328.

COMPETENT AND OMITTED. In Scotch practice. A term applied to a plea which might have been urged by a party during the dependence of a cause, but which had been omitted. Bell.

COMPETENT AUTHORITY. As applied to courts and public officers, this term imports jurisdiction and due legal authority to deal with the particular matter in question. Mitchel v. U. S., 9 Pet. 735, 9 L.Ed. 283; Charles v. Charles, 41 Minn. 201, 42 N.W. 935.

COMPETENT EVIDENCE. That which the very nature of the thing to be proven requires, as, the production of a writing where its contents are the subject of inquiry. 1 Greenl.Ev. § 2; Hill V. Hill, 216 Ala. 435, 113 So. 306, 308; Goltra v. Pen- land, 45 Or. 254, 77 P. 129, 133. Also, generally, admissible or relevant, as the opposite of “in-competent.” Ryan v. Town of Bristol, 63 Conn. 261, 27 A. 309, 312.

COMPETENT WITNESS. One who is legally qualified to be heard to testify in a cause. People v. Compton, 123 Cal. 403, 56 P. 44; Bank of Uvalde, Tex.Civ.App., 60 S.W.2d 888, 889. See Competency.

As used in the statute relating to the execution of wills, the term means a person who, at the time of making the attestation, could legally testify in court to the facts which he attests by subscribing his name to the will. In re Wiese’s Estate, 98 Neb. 463, 153 N.W. 556, L.R.A.1915E, 832.

acting independently, to secure the custom of a third party by the offer of the most favorable terms. It is the struggle between rivals for the same trade at the same time; the act of seeking or endeavoring to gain what another is endeavoring to gain at the same time. Lipson v. Socony Vacuum Corporation, C.C.A.Mass., 87 F.2d 265, 270. As used in a statute taxing moneyed capital competing with national banks, "competition" means a condition of business rivalry which arises when moneyed capital is devoted with reasonable continuity and regularity to operations having for their primary and characteristic purpose, as distinguished from some incidental operations or details, the transaction of some branch of business which may be carried on by national banks, and it is not necessary that this employment shall bring capital into competition with all of such branches. People ex rel. Pratt v. Goldfogle, 242 N.Y. 277, 151 N.E. 452, 461. The term involves the idea of struggling to obtain the same thing. First Nat. Bank v. City of Hartford, 187 Wis. 290, 203 N.W. 721, 729. See, also, First Nat. Bank v. City of Hartford, 47 S.Ct. 467, 470, 273 U.S. 548, 71 L. Ed. 67, 59 A.L.R. 1. Unity of object with diversity of method is the essence of competition. Continental Securities Co. v. Interborough Rapid Transit Co., D.C.N.Y., 207 F. 467, 470.

Scotch Practice
The contest among creditors claiming on their respective diligences, or creditors claiming on their securities. Bell.

Unfair Competition in Trade
See Unfair.

COMPETITIVE CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATION. Examination which conforms to measures or standards which are sufficiently objective to be capable of being challenged and reviewed by other examiners of equal ability and experience. Fink v. Finegan, 270 N.Y. 356, 5 N.E.2d 462, 464.

COMPETITIVE BIDDING. Requires that all bidders be placed on a plane of equality, and that they bid upon the same terms and conditions. State Highway Commission of Kentucky v. King, 259 Ky. 414, 82 S.W.2d 443.

COMPETITIVE TRAFFIC. Traffic which, as to any one carrier, originates at a point served also by another carrier, which other carrier handles the traffic at equal line-haul rates from origin to destination. Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. United States, D.C.Minn., 41 F.Supp. 439, 441.

COMPETITORS. Persons endeavoring to do the same thing and each offering to perform the act, furnish the merchandise, or render the service better or cheaper than his rival. Continental Securities Co. v. Interborough Rapid Transit Co., D.C.N.Y., 207 F. 467, 470.

COMPILATION. A literary production composed of the works of others and arranged in a methodical manner. A compilation consists of selected extracts from different authors; an abridgment is a condensation of the views of one author. Story v. Holcombe, 4 McLean 306, 314, Fed. Cas.No.13,497.

COMPILE. To copy from various authors into one work. Story v. Holcombe, 22 Fed.Cas. 171, 174. See Compilation, Such a collection of statutes differs from a code in this, that none of the laws so compiled derives any new force and undergoes any modification in its relation to other statutes in pari materia from the fact of the compilation, while a code is a re-enactment of the whole body of the positive law and is to be read and interpreted as one entire and homogeneous whole.

COMPILED STATUTES. A collection of the statutes existing and in force in a given state, all laws and parts of laws relating to each subject-matter being brought together under one head, and the whole arranged systematically in one book, either under an alphabetical arrangement or some other plan of classification. Railway Co. v. State, 31 S.E. 531, 104 Ga. 831; Black, Interp. Laws, p. 363; Fidelity and Columbia Trust Co. v. Meek, 294 Ky. 122, 171 S.W.2d 41, 44.

COMPLAINANT. In practice. One who applies to the courts for legal redress; one who exhibits a bill of complaint. This is the proper designation of one suing in equity, though "plaintiff" is often, used in equity proceedings as well as at law. Benef Ass’n v. Robinson, 147 Ill. 138, 35 N.E. 168. One who instigates prosecution or who prefers accusation against suspected person. State v. Snyder, 93 N.J.L., 18, 107 A. 167, 168.

COMPLAINT. In civil practice. In those states having a Code of Civil Procedure, the complaint is the first or initiatory pleading on the part of the plaintiff in a civil action. It corresponds to the declaration in the common-law practice. Code N.Y. § 141; McMath v. Parsons, 26 Minn. 246, 2 N.W. 703. Its purpose is to give defendant information of all material facts on which plaintiff relies to support his demand. Fox v. Cosgriff, 64 Idaho 448, 133 P.2d 930, 932.

The complaint shall contain: (1) The title of the cause, specifying the name of the court in which the action is brought, the name of the county in which the trial is required to be had, and the nature and primary object of the action, plaintiff and defendant. (2) A plain and concise statement of the facts constituting a cause of action, without unnecessary repetition; and each material allegation shall be distinctly numbered. (3) A demand of the relief to which the plaintiff supposes himself entitled. If the recovery of money be demanded, the amount thereof must be stated. Code N.C.1883, § 233 (C.S. § 506).

Cross-complaint. In code practice. Whenever the defendant seeks affirmative relief against any party, relating to or depending upon the contract or transaction upon which the action is brought, or affecting the property to which the action relates, he may, in addition to his answer, file at the same time, or by permission of the court subsequently, a cross-complaint. The cross-complaint must be served upon the parties affected thereby, and such parties may then demur or answer thereto as to the original complaint. Standley v. Insurance Co., 95 Ind. 254; Harrison v. McCormick, 69 Cal. 616, 11 P. 456; Bank v. Ridpath, 29 Wash. 687, 70 P. 139. This is allowed when a defendant has a cause of action against a co-defendant, or a person not a party to the action, and affecting the subject-matter of the action. The only real difference between a complaint and a cross-complaint is that the first is filed by the plaintiff and the second by the defendant. Both contain a statement of the facts, and each demands affirmative relief upon the facts stated. The difference between a counter-claim and a cross-claim is that in the former the defendant’s cause of action is against the plaintiff; and the latter, against a co-defendant, or one not a party to the action; White v. Reagan, 32 Ark. 290.

In criminal law. A charge, preferred before a magistrate having jurisdiction, that a person named (or an unknown person) has committed a specified offense, with an offer to prove the fact, to the end that a prosecution may be instituted. It is a technical term, descriptive of proceedings before a magistrate. Hobbs v. Hill, 157 Mass. 556, 32 N.E. 862; In some instances "complaint" is interchangeable with "information." State v. Staf- ford, 26 Idaho, 381, 143 P. 528, 530; State v. Rit- zier, 17 Ohio App. 394, 395. And is often used inter- changeably with "affidavit." Hebebrand v. Staf- ford, 26 Idaho, 381, 143 P. 528, 530; State v. Rit- zier, 17 Ohio App. 394, 395. And is often used inter- changeably with "affidavit." Hebebrand v. State, 129 Ohio St. 574, 196 N.E. 412, 415.

COMPLETE, v. To finish; accomplish that which one starts out to do. Ries v. Williams, 190 Ky. 596, 228 S.W. 40, 41.

COMPLETE, adj. Full; entire; including every item or element of the thing spoken of, without omissions or deficiencies; as, a "complete" copy, record, schedule, or transcript. Bailey v. Martin, 119 Ind. 103, 21 N.E. 346.

Perfect; consummate; not lacking in any element or particular; as in the case of a "complete legal title" to land, which includes the possession, the right of possession, and the right of property. COMPOS SUI. Having the use of one's limbs, or the power of bodily motion. Si fuit ita compos sui quod itinerare potuit de loco in locum, if he had so far the use of his limbs as to be able to travel from place to place. Bract. fol. 14b.

COMPOSITE WORK. Within Copyright Act means work to which a number of authors have contributed distinguishable parts. Copyright Act of 1909, § 24, 17 U.S.C.A. § 24. Shapiro, Bernstein & Co. v. Bryan, C.C.A.N.Y., 123 F.2d 697, 699.

COMPOSITIO MENSURARUM. The ordinance of measures. The title of an ancient ordinance, not printed, mentioned in the statute 23 Hen. VIII, c. 4; establishing a standard of measures. 1 Bl. Comm. 275.

COMPOSITIO ULNARUM ET PERTICARUM. The statute of ells and perches. The title of an English statute establishing a standard of measures. 1 Bl. Comm. 275.

COMPOSITION. An agreement, made upon a sufficient consideration, between an insolvent or embarrassed debtor and his creditors, whereby the latter, for the sake of immediate or sooner payment, agree to accept a dividend less than the whole amount of their claims, to be distributed "Composition" should be distinguished from "accord." The latter properly denotes an arrangement between a debtor and a single creditor for a discharge of the obligation by a part payment or on different terms. The former designates an arrangement between a debtor and the whole body of his creditors (or at least a considerable proportion of them) for the liquidation of their claims by the dividend offered.

Ancient Law

Among the Franks, Goths, Burgundians, and other barbarous peoples, this was the name given to a sum of money paid, as satisfaction for a wrong or personal injury, to the person harmed, or to his family if he died, by the aggressor. It was originally made by mutual agreement of the parties, but afterwards established by law, and took the place of private physical vengeance.

COMPOSITION CHIPS. In the metal trade, "composition chips" or "turnings" are chips without aluminum. Ehrlich v. United Smelting & Aluminum Co., 252 Mass. 12, 147 N.E. 20.

COMPOSITION DEED. An agreement embodying the terms of a composition between a debtor and his creditors.

COMPOSITION IN BANKRUPTCY. An arrangement between a bankrupt and his creditors, whereby the amount he can be expected to pay is liquidated, and he is allowed to retain his assets, upon condition of his making the payments agreed upon. Fisher Supply Co. v. Northwestern Gravel Co., 216 Iowa 909, 249 N.W. 664, 666, 667.

The difference between a common-law "composition with creditors" and a "composition in bankruptcy" is that in a composition with creditors the creditors voluntarily release the principal debtor and therefore release co-debtors, while in the case of a bankruptcy composition the discharge is by operation of law and not by act of the creditors who assent to the composition. Barker v. Ackers, 29 Cal.App.2d 162, 84 P.2d 264, 271.

COMPOSITION OF MATTER. In patent law, a substance composed of two or more different substances, without regard to form. A mixture or chemical combination of materials. Jacobs v. Baker, 7 Wall. 295, 19 L.Ed. 200.

COMPOSITION OF TITHES, OR REAL COMPOSITION. This arises in English ecclesiastical law, when an agreement is made between the owner of lands and the incumbent of a benefice, with the consent of the ordinary and the patron, that the lands shall, for the future, be discharged from payment of tithes, by reason of some land or other real recompense given in lieu and satisfaction thereof. 2 Bl.Comm. 28; 3 Steph.Comm. 129.

CONCEAL. To hide; secrete; withhold from the knowledge of others; to withdraw from observation; to withhold from utterance or declaration; to cover or keep from sight. Hopper v. Hopkins, 162 Md. 448, 160 A. 166, 167.

The synonyms of conceal are "to hide; disguise, dissemble; secrete." To hide is generic; "conceal" is simply not to make known what we wish to secrete; disguise or dissemble is to conceal by assuming some false appearance; to secrete is to hide in some place of secrecy. A man may conceal facts, disguise his sentiments, dissemble his feelings, or secrete stolen goods. Darnell v. State, 14 Okr.Cr. 540, 174 P. 290, 292, 1 A.L.R. 638.

The word "conceal," according to the best lexicographers, signifies to withhold or keep secret mental facts from another's knowledge, as well as to hide or secrete physical objects from sight or observation. Gerry v. Dunham, 57 Me. 339.

CONCEALED. Not synonymous with "lying in wait." If a person conceals himself for the purpose of shooting another unawares, he is lying in wait; but a person may, when concealed, shoot another with a deadly weapon without committing the crime of murder. People v. Miles, 55 Cal. 207.

The term "concealed weapons" means weapons willfully or knowingly covered or kept from sight. Owen v. State, 31 Ala. 387.

CONCEALERS. In old English law. Such as find out concealed lands; that is, lands privily kept from the knowledge of common persons having nothing to show for them. They are called "a troublesome, disturbant sort of men; turbulent persons." Cowell.

The terms "misrepresentation" and "concealment" have a known and definite meaning in the law of insurance. Misrepresentation is the statement of something as fact which is untrue in fact, and which knowing it, the underwriter, or which he states positively as true, without knowing it to be not true, with an intent to deceive the underwriter, or which he states positively as true, without knowing it to be true, and which has a tendency to mislead, such fact in either case being material to the risk. Concealment is the designed and intentional withholding of any fact material to the risk, which the assured, in honesty and good faith, ought to communicate to the underwriter, or which he states positively as true, without knowing it to be true, and which has a tendency to mislead, such fact in either case being material to the risk. The knowledge or ignorance of it would not naturally influence the judgment of the underwriter in making the contract, or in estimating the degree and character of the risk, or in fixing the rate of the premium, it is not a "misrepresentation" or "concealment," within the clause of the conditions annexed to policies. Daniels v. Insurance Co., 12 Cush. (Mass.), 416, 59 Am.Dec. 192; Sun Ins. Office, Limited, of London v. Mallick, 160 Md. 71, 153 A. 35, 43.

CONCEALMENT MAY BE BASIS OF ESTOPPEL. Lo Bue v. Porazzo, 48 Cal.App.2d 82, 119 P.2d 346, 348. Elements of such estoppel are concealment of material facts with knowledge thereof, ignorance thereof on part of person to whom representations are made, or from whom facts are concealed, intention that such person shall act thereon, and action induced thereby on his part. Rhoads v. Rhoads, Mo., 119 S.W.2d 247, 152; Rosser v. Texas Co., 173 Okl. 309, 48 P. 2d 327, 330.

The doctrine of "estoppel by concealment and suppression" applies only where there has been reduction to practice of invention. Bogoslovsky v. Huse, 142 F.2d 75, 76, 31 C.C.P.A. (Patents) 1034.

CONCEALMENT OF CAUSE OF ACTION. To constitute it so as to prevent running of limitations, some trick or artifice must be employed to prevent inquiry or elude investigation, or to mislead and hinder party who has a cause of action from obtaining information, and acts relied on must be of an affirmative character and fraudulent. Middleton v. Pruden, 57 Ga.App. 555, 196 S.E. 259, 262.

CONCILIATION. In French law. The formality to which intending litigants are subjected in cases brought before the juge de paix. The judge convenes the parties and endeavors to reconcile them. Should he not succeed, the case proceeds. In criminal and commercial cases, the preliminary of conciliation does not take place. Arg. Fr. Mere. Law, 552.

CONCILIUM. Lat. A council.

Roman Law

A meeting of a section of the people to consider and decide matters especially affecting itself. Launsphach, State and Family in Early Rome 70. Also argument in a cause, or the sitting of the court to hear argument; a motion for a day for the argument of a cause; a day allowed to a de-

CONCLUSION OF LAW. Within the rule that pleadings should contain only facts, and not conclusions of law, this means a proposition not arrived at by any process of natural reasoning from a fact or combination of facts stated, but by the application of the artificial rules of law to the facts pleaded. Levins v. Rovegno, 71 Cal. 273, 12 P. 161.

CONCLUSION OF LAW. Within the rule that pleadings should contain only facts, and not conclusions of law, this means a proposition not arrived at by any process of natural reasoning from a fact or combination of facts stated, but by the application of the artificial rules of law to the facts pleaded. Levins v. Rovegno, 71 Cal. 273, 12 P. 161.

CONCLUSION OF LAW. Within the rule that pleadings should contain only facts, and not conclusions of law, this means a proposition not arrived at by any process of natural reasoning from a fact or combination of facts stated, but by the application of the artificial rules of law to the facts pleaded. Levins v. Rovegno, 71 Cal. 273, 12 P. 161.

CONCLUSION AGAINST THE FORM OF THE STATUTE. The proper form for the conclusion of an indictment for an offense created by statute is the technical phrase “against the form of the statute in such case made and provided;” or, in Latin, contra formam statuti.

CONCLUSION OF LAW. Within the rule that pleadings should contain only facts, and not conclusions of law, this means a proposition not arrived at by any process of natural reasoning from a fact or combination of facts stated, but by the application of the artificial rules of law to the facts pleaded. Levins v. Rovegno, 71 Cal. 273, 12 P. 161.

CONCLUSION TO THE COUNTRY. In pleading. The tender of an issue to be tried by jury. Co. Litt. 126 a; 1 Saund. 103; 1 Chit. Pl. 592; Com. Dig. Pleader, E, 32.

CONCLUSIVE. Shutting up a matter; shutting out all further evidence; not admitting of explanation or contradiction; putting an end to inquiry; final; irrefutable; decisive. Edwards v. Shreveport Creosoting Co., 207 La. 699, 21 So.2d 878. Beyond question or beyond dispute; manifest; plain; clear; obvious; visible; apparent; indubitable; palpable; and "notorious." Covington County v. Fite, 120 Miss. 421, 82 So. 308, 309.

As to conclusive "Presumption," and "Proof," see those titles.

CONCLUSIVE EVIDENCE. That which is incontrovertible, either because the law does not permit it to be contradicted, or because it is so strong and convincing as to overbear all proof to the contrary and establish the proposition in question beyond any reasonable doubt. Thompson Lumber Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission (Com.Ct.) 193 F. 648, 682.

CONCORD. In the old process of levying a fine of lands, the concord was an agreement between the parties (real or feigned) in which the deforciant (or he who keeps the other out of possession) acknowledges that the lands in question are the right of complainant; and, from the acknowledgment or admission of right thus made, the party who levies the fine is called the "cognizor," and the person to whom it is levied the "cognizee." 2 Bl.Comm. 350.

The term also denotes an agreement between two persons, one of whom has a right of action against the other, settling what amends shall be made for the breach or wrong; a compromise or an accord.

Old Practice

An agreement between two or more, upon a trespass committed, by way of amends or satisfaction for it. Plowd. 5, 6, 8.

CONCORDARE LEGES LEGIBUS EST OPTIMUM INTERPRETANDI MOMS. To make laws agree with laws is the best mode of interpreting them. Halk. Max. 70.

CONCORDAT. In public law. A compact or convention between two or more independent governments.

An agreement made by a temporal sovereign with the pope, relative to ecclesiastical matters.

In French law. A compromise effected by a bankruptcy with his creditors, by virtue of which he engages to pay within a certain time a certain proportion of his debts, and by which the creditors agree to discharge the whole of their claims in consideration of the same. Arg. Fr. Merc. Law, 553.

CONCORDIA. Lat. In old English law. An agreement, or concord. Fleta, lib. 5, c. 3, § 5. The agreement or unanimity of a jury. Compellere ad concordiam. Fleta, lib. 4, c. 9, § 2.

CONCORDIA PARVIE RES CRESCUNT ET OPULENTIA LITES. 4 Inst. 74. Small means increase by concord and litigations by opulence.

CONCUBARIA. A fold, pen, or place where cattle lie. Cowell.

CONCUBINAGE. A species of loose or informal marriage which took place among the ancients, and is yet in use in some countries. See Concubinatus.

The act or practice of cohabiting, in sexual commerce, without the authority of law or a legal marriage. Succession of Lannes, 187 La. 17, 174 So. 94, 98.

The words concubinage and prostitution have no common law meaning, but in their popular sense cover all cases of lewd intercourse; People v. Cummons, 56 Mich. 544, 23 N.W. 215.

An exception against a woman suing for dower, on the ground that she was the concubine, and not the wife, of the man of whose land she seeks to be endowed. Britt. c. 107.

CONCUBINATUS. In Roman law. An informal, unsanctioned, or "natural" marriage, as contra-distinguished from the justice nuptice, or justum matrimonium, the civil marriage.

CONCUBINE. (1) A woman who cohabits with a man to whom she is not married. State v. Dusin, 125 Kan. 400, 264 P. 1043, 1044. (2) A sort of inferior wife, among the Romans, upon whom the husband did not confer his rank or quality.

CONCUR. To agree; accord; act together; consent. In the practice of appellate courts, a "concurring opinion" is one filed by one of the judges or justices, in which he agrees with the conclusions or the result of another opinion filed in the case (which may be either the opinion of the court or a dissenting opinion) though he states separately his views of the case or his reasons for so concurring. State v. Pierce, 175 Wash. 461, 27 P.2d 1083.

In Louisiana law. To join with other claimants in presenting a demand against an insolvent estate.

CONCURATOR. In the civil law. A joint or co-curator, or guardian.

CONCURRENCE. In French law. The possession, by two or more persons, of equal rights or privileges over the same subject-matter.

CONCURRENCE DELOYALE. A term of the French law nearly equivalent to "unfair trade competition;" and used in relation to the infringement of rights secured by trade-marks, etc. It signifies a dishonest, pernicious, or treacherous rivalry in trade, or any manoeuvre calculated to prejudice the good will of a business or the value of the name of a property or its credit or renown with the public, to the injury of a business competitor. Simmons Medicine Co. v. Mansfield Drug Co., 93 Tenn. 84, 23 S.W. 165.

CONCURRENT. Running together; having the same authority; acting in conjunction; agreeing in the same act or opinion; pursuit of same course; contributing to the same event; contemporaneous. Brinkman v. Morgan, C.C.A.Kan., 253 F. 553, 554. Co-operating, accompanying, joined, associated, concomitant, joint and equal, existing together, and operating on the same subject. Rose v. Sprague, 248 Ky. 635, 59 S.W.2d 554, 556. United in agreement. State ex rel. School Dist. No. 8, v. Lensman, 108 Mont. 118, 88 P.2d 63, 68.

CONCURRENT JURISDICTION. The jurisdiction of several different tribunals, each authorized to deal with the same subject-matter at the choice of the suitor. Cashman v. Vickers, 69 Mont. 516, 223 P. 897, 898.

CONCURRENT LIENS. Maritime liens are concurrent when they are of the same rank, and for supplies or materials or services in preparation for the same voyage, or if they arise on different bottomry bonds to different holders for advances at the same time for the same repairs, The J. W. Tucker, D.C.N.Y., 20 F. 132.

CONCURRENT POWER. Political powers exercised independently in the same field of legislation by both federal and state governments. State ex rel. School Dist. No. 8, v. Lensman, 108 Mont. 118, 88 P.2d 63, 68.

CONCURSO. In the law of Louisiana, the name of a suit or remedy to enable creditors to enforce their claims against an insolvent or failing debtor. Schroeder v. Nicholson, 2 La. 355. Litigation or opportunity of litigation between various creditors, each claiming adversely to one another to share in a fund or an estate, object being to assemble in one accounting all claimants on the fund. Seal v. Gano, 160 La. 636, 107 So. 475, 474.

CONCURSUS. In the civil law. (1) A running together; a collision, as concursus creditorum, a conflict among creditors. Graphic Arts Bldg. Co. v. Union Indemnity Co., 163 La. 1, 111 So. 470, 471; Miller v. Bonner, 163 La. 332, 111 So. 776, 778; (2) A concurrence, or meeting, as concursus dictionum, concurrence of actions.

A proceeding in Louisiana similar to interpleader. See Louisiana Molasses Co. v. Le Sassier, 52 La.Ann. 2070, 28 So. 217.

CONCUSS. In Scotch law. To coerce.

CONCUSSIO. In the civil law. The offense of extortion by threats of violence. Dig. 47, 13.

CONCUSSION. In the civil law. The unlawful forcing of another by threats of violence to give something of value. It differs from robbery, in this: That in robbery the thing is taken by force, while in concussion it is obtained by threatened violence. Hein. Hist. § 1071.

In medical jurisprudence. Concussion of the brain is a jarring of the brain substance, by a fall, blow, or other external injury, without laceration of its tissue, or with only microscopical laceration. Mathews v. Hayne, 188 So. 462, 468.

CONDEMN. To find or adjudge guilty. 3 Leon. 68. To adjudge or sentence. 3 Bl. Comm. 291. To adjudge (as an admiralty court) that a vessel is a prize, or that she is unfit for service. 1 Kent, Comm. 102; 5 Esp. 65. To set apart or expropriate property for public use, in the exercise of the power of eminent domain. State v. Sayer, 43 S.D. 45, 177 N.W. 807, 809.

CONDEMNATION. In admiralty law. The judgment or sentence of a court having jurisdiction and acting in rem, by which (1) it is declared that a vessel which has been captured at sea as a prize was lawfully so seized and is liable to be treated as prize; or (2) "that property which has been seized for an alleged violation of the revenue laws, neutrality laws, navigation laws, etc., was lawfully so seized, and is, for such cause, forfeited to the government; or (3) that the vessel which is the subject of inquiry is unfit and unsafe for navigation. Gallagher v. Murray, 9 Fed.Cas. 1087.

In the civil law. A sentence or judgment which condemns some one to do, to give, or to pay something, or which declares that his claim or pretensions are unfounded. Lockwood v. Saffold, 1 Ga. 72; State v. Harr, 24 Tenn.App. 298, 143 S.W.2d 893, 895.

In real property law. The process by which property of a private owner is taken for public use, without his consent, but upon the award made by a jury, which is the subject of the suit, and that he was of sound mind. 2 Eng. Eec. R. 438; 6 Eng. Eec. R. 431.

CONDEMN. To find or adjudge guilty. 3 Leon. 68. To adjudge or sentence. 3 Bl. Comm. 291. To adjudge (as an admiralty court) that a vessel is a prize, or that she is unfit for service. 1 Kent, Comm. 102; 5 Esp. 65. To set apart or expropriate property for public use, in the exercise of the power of eminent domain. State v. Sayer, 43 S.D. 45, 177 N.W. 807, 809.

CONDEMNATION. In admiralty law. In real property law. The process by which property of a private owner is taken for public use, without his consent, but upon the award made by a jury, which is the subject of the suit, and that he was of sound mind. 2 Eng. Eec. R. 438; 6 Eng. Eec. R. 431.

As used in an appeal bond, this phrase means the damages which should be awarded against the appellant by the judgment of the court. It does not embrace damages not included in the judgment. Thomas v. Gethman, 91 Old. 42, 215 P. 731, 732.

CONDESCENDENCE. In the Scotch law. A part of the proceedings in a cause, setting forth the facts of the case on the part of the pursuer or plaintiff.

CONDUCT. In Roman law. A general term for actions of a personal nature, founded upon an obligation to give or do a certain and defined thing or service. It is distinguished from vindicatio rei, which is an action to vindicate one's right of property in a thing by regaining (or retaining) possession of it against the adverse claim of the other party.

CONDUCTIO CERTI. An action which lies upon a promise to do a thing, where such promise or stipulation is certain, (si certa sit stipulatio.) Inst. 3, 16, pr.; Id. 3, 15, pr.; Dig. 12, 1; Bract. fol. 103b.

CONDUCTIO EX LEGE. An action arising where the law gave a remedy, but provided no appropriate form of action. Calvin.

CONDUCTIO INDEBITATI. An action which lay to recover anything which the plaintiff had given or paid to the defendant, by mistake, and which he was not bound to give or pay, either in fact or in law.

CONDUCTIO REI FURTI. An action which lay to recover a thing stolen, against the thief himself, or his heir. Inst. 4, 1, 19.

CONDUCTIO SINE CAUSA. An action which lay in favor of a person who had given or promised a thing without consideration, (causa.) Dig. 12, 7; Cod. 4, 9.

CONDITIO. Lat. A condition.

CONDITIO BENEFICIALIS, QUIE STATUM CONSTRUIT, BENIGNE SECUNDUM VERBORUM INTENTIONEM EST INTERPRETANDA; ODIOSA AUTEM, QUIE STATUM DESTRUIT, STRICTE SECUNDUM BERBORUM PROPRIE(TATEM ACCIPienda. 8 Coke, 90. A beneficial condition, which creates an estate, ought to be construed favorably, according to the intention of the words; but a condition which destroys an estate is odious, and ought to be construed strictly according to the letter of the words.

CONDITIO DICITUR, CUM QUID IN CASUM IN(DENTIA. An action arising where the law gave a remedy, but provided no appropriate form of action. Calvin.

CONDITIO INDEBITATI. An action which lay to recover anything which the plaintiff had given or paid to the defendant, by mistake, and which he was not bound to give or pay, either in fact or in law.

CONDITIO REI FURTIVIE. An action which lay to recover a thing stolen, against the thief himself, or his heir. Inst. 4, 1, 19.

CONDITIO SINE CAUSA. An action which lay in favor of a person who had given or promised a thing without consideration, (causa.) Dig. 12, 7; Cod. 4, 9.

CONDITIO. Lat. A condition.

CONDITIO BENEFICIALIS, QUIE STATUM CONSTRUIT, BENIGNE SECUNDUM VERBORUM INTENTIONEM EST INTERPRETANDA; ODIOSA AUTEM, QUIE STATUM DESTRUIT, STRICTE SECUNDUM BERBORUM PROPRIE(TATEM ACCIPienda. 8 Coke, 90. A beneficial condition, which creates an estate, ought to be construed favorably, according to the intention of the words; but a condition which destroys an estate is odious, and ought to be construed strictly according to the letter of the words.

CONDITIO DICITUR, CUM QUID IN CASUM IN- CERTUM QUI POTEST TENDERE AD ESSE EX CESSUS. Co. Litt. 201. It is called a "condition," when something is given on an uncertain event, which may or may not come into existence.

CONDITIO ILLICITA HABETUR PRO NON ADJEXTA. An unlawful condition is deemed as not annexed.
CONDITION

The rank, situation, or degree of a particular person in some one of the different orders of society; or his status or situation, considered as a juridical person, arising from positive law or the institutions of society. Thill v. Pohlman, 76 Iowa, 638, 41 N.W. 385.

A clause in a contract or agreement which has for its object to suspend, rescind, or modify the principal obligation, or, in case of a will, to suspend, revoke, or modify the devise or bequest; a qualification, restriction, or limitation modifying or destroying the original act with which it is connected; an event, fact, or the like that is necessary to the occurrence of some other, though not its cause; a prerequisite. Towle v. Remsen, 70 N.Y. 303.

A modus or quality annexed by him that hath an estate, or interest or right to the same, whereby an estate, etc., may either be defeated, enlarged, or created upon an uncertain event. Co.Litt. 201a.

A qualification or restriction annexed to a conveyance of lands, whereby it is provided that in case a particular event does or does not happen, or in case the grantor or grantee does or omits to do a particular act, an estate shall commence, be enlarged, or be defeated. Anderson v. Palladine, 39 Cal.App. 256, 178 P. 553, 554.

An "estate on condition" arises where an estate is granted, either in fee simple or otherwise, with an express qualification annexed, whereby the estate granted shall either commence, be enlarged, or be defeated, upon performance or breach of such qualification or condition. Hall v. Quinn, 190 N.C. 326, 130 S.E. 18, 20. Moe v. Gier, 116 Cal.App. 403, 2 P.2d 852, 855.

In insurance parlance, the printed conditions on the inside of the policy which serve generally as a limitation of risk or of liability or impose various conditions requiring compliance by the insured. Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Baltimore v. Globe & Rutgers Fire Ins. Co., D.C. Md., 7 F.Supp. 56, 68.

Mode or state of being; state or situation; essential quality; property; attribute. Consolidated Arizona Smelting Co. v. Egich, 22 Ariz. 543, 199 P. 132, 134.

Classification. The different kinds of conditions known to the common law may be arranged and described as follows:

Express and implied conditions are also called by the older writers, respectively, conditions in deed (or in fact, the Law French term being conditions en fait) and conditions in law. Co. Litt. 201a.

They are either express or implied, the former when incorporated in express terms in the deed, contract, lease, or grant; the latter, when inferred or presumed by law, from the nature of the transaction or the conduct of the parties, to have been tacitly understood between them as a part of the agreement, though not expressly mentioned. 2 Crabb, Real Prop. p. 792; Bract. fol. 47; Civ.Code La. art. 2026; Raley v. Umatilla County, 15 Or. 172, 13 P. 890, 3 Am.St.Rep. 142.

They are possible or impossible; the former when they admit of performance in the ordinary course of events; the latter when it is contrary to

Civil Law

The rank, situation, or degree of a particular person in some one of the different orders of society.

An agreement or stipulation in regard to some uncertain future event, not of the essential nature of the transaction, but annexed to it by the parties, providing for a change or modification of their legal relations upon its occurrence. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 184.

Classification. Conditions are of the following several kinds:

The casual condition is that which depends on chance, and is in no way in the power either of the creditor or of the debtor. Civ.Code La. art. 2023.

A mixed condition is one that depends at the same time on the will of one of the parties and on the will of a third person, or on the will of one of the parties and also on a casual event. Civ.Code La. art. 2025.

The potestative condition is that which makes the execution of the agreement depend on an event which it is in the power of the one or the other of the contracting parties to bring about or to hinder. Civ.Code La. art. 2024.

A resolutive or dissolving condition is that which, when accomplished, operates the revocation of the obligation, placing matters in the same state as though the obligation had not existed. It does not suspend the execution of the obligation. It only obliges the creditor to restore what he has received in case the event provided for in the condition takes place. Civ.Code La. art. 2045; Moss v. Smoker, 2 La.Ann. 991.

A suspensive condition is that which depends, either on a future and uncertain event, or on an event which has actually taken place, without its being yet known to the parties. In the former case, the obligation cannot be executed till after the event; in the latter, the obligation has its effect from the day on which it was contracted, but it cannot be enforced until the event be known. Civ.Code La. art. 2043; New Orleans v. Railroad Co., 18 S.Ct. 875, 171 U.S. 312, 43 L.Ed. 178; Moss v. Smoker, 2 La.Ann. 991. A condition which prevents a contract from going into operation until it has been fulfilled.

CONDITION PRÆCEDENS ADIMPLERI DEBET PRIUS QUAM SEQUATUR EFFECTUS. Co. Litt. 201. A condition precedent must be fulfilled before the effect can follow.

CONDITION. A future and uncertain event upon the happening of which is made to depend the existence of an obligation, or that which subordinates the existence of liability under a contract to a certain future event. Standard Surety & Casualty Co. v. Wynn, Tex.Civ.App., 172 S.W.2d 789, 792; Barber Asphalt Paving Co. v. St. Louis Cypress Co., 121 La. 152, 46 So. 193, 197.

They are possible or impossible; the former when they admit of performance in the ordinary course of events; the latter when it is contrary to to the course of nature or human limitations that they should ever be performed.

They are lawful or unlawful; the former when their character is not in violation of any rule, principle, or policy of law; the latter when they are such as the law will not allow to be made.

They are consistent or repugnant; the former when they are in harmony and concur with the other parts of the transaction; the latter when they contradict, annul, or neutralize the main purpose of the contract. Repugnant conditions are also called "insensible."

They are affirmative or negative; the former being a condition which consists in doing a thing;
as provided that the lessee shall pay rent, etc., and the latter being a condition which consists in not doing a thing; as provided that the lessee shall not alien, etc. Shep. Touch. 118.

They are precedent or subsequent. A condition precedent is one which must happen or be performed before the estate to which it is annexed can vest or be enlarged; or it is one which is to be performed before some right dependent thereon accrues, or some act dependent thereon is performed. Federal Land Bank of Louisville v. Luck-enbill, 213 Ind. 616, 13 N.E.2d 531, 533. A "condition precedent" is one that is to be performed before the agreement becomes effective, and which calls for the happening of some event or the performance of some act after the terms of the contract have been agreed on, before the contract shall be binding on the parties. Rogers v. Maloney, 85 Or. 61, 165 P. 357, 358; Mercer-Lincoln Pine Knob Oil Co. v. Pruitt, 191 Ky. 207, 229 S.W. 374.
A condition subsequent is one annexed to an estate already vested, by the performance of which such estate is kept and continued, and by the failure or non-performance of which it is defeated; or it is a condition referring to a future event, upon the happening of which the obligation becomes no longer binding upon the other party, if he chooses to avail himself of the condition. Co.
Litt. 201; Carroll v. Carroll’s Ex’r, 248 Ky. 386,
58 S.W.2d 670, 672.

Conditions may also be positive (requiring that a specified event shall happen or an act be done) and restrictive or negative, the latter being such as impose an obligation not to do a particular thing, as, that a lessee shall not alien or sub-let or commit waste, or the like. Shep. Touch. 118.

They may be single, copulative, or disjunctive.
Those of the first kind require the performance of one specified thing only; those of the second kind require the performance of divers acts or things; those of the third kind require the performance of one of several things. Shep. Touch. 118.

Conditions may also be independent, dependent, or mutual. They belong to the first class when each of the two conditions must be performed without any reference to the other; to the second class when the performance of one condition is not obligatory until the actual performance of the other; and to the third class when neither party need perform his condition unless the other is ready and willing to perform his, or, in other words, when the mutual covenants go to the whole consideration on both sides and each is precedent to the other. Huggins v. Daley, W.Va., 99
F. 609, 40 C.C.A. 12, 48 L.R.A. 320.

The following varieties may also be noted: A condition collateral is one requiring the performance of a collateral act having no necessary relation to the main subject of the agreement. A compulsory condition is one which expressly requires a thing to be done, as, that a lessee shall pay a specified sum of money on a certain day or his lease shall be void. Shep. Touch. 118. Concurrent conditions are those which are mutually dependent and are to be performed at the same time. Milwaukee Land Co. v. Ruesink, 50 Mont.
489, 148 P. 396, 401. A condition inherent is one annexed to the rent reserved out of the land whereof the estate is made, or rather, to the estate in the land, in respect of rent. Shep. Touch.
118.

French Law

The following peculiar distinctions are made:
(1) A condition is easuelle when it depends on a chance or hazard; (2) a condition is potestative when it depends on the accomplishment of something which is in the power of the party to accomplish; (3) a condition is mixte when it depends partly on the will of the party and partly on the will of others; (4) a condition is suspensive when it is a future and uncertain event, or present but unknown event, upon which an obligation takes or fails to take effect; (5) a condition is resolutoire when it is the event which undoes an obligation which has already had ef-fact as such. Brown.

Synonyms Distinguished

A "condition" is to be distinguished from a limitation, in that the latter may be to or for the benefit of a stranger, who may then take advantage of its determination, while only the grantor, or those who stand in his place, can take advan-
Mo. 182, 65 S.W. 1005; and in that a limitation ends the estate without entry or claim, which is not true of a condition. It also differs from a conditional limitation. In determining whether, in the case of estates greater than estates for years, the language constitutes a "condition" or a "conditional limitation," the rule applied is that, where an estate is so expressly limited by the words of its creation that it cannot endure for any longer time than until the condition happens on which the estate is to fail, this is limitation, but when the estate is expressly granted on condition in deed, the law permits it to endure beyond the time of the contingency happening, unless the grantor takes advantage of the breach of condition, by making entry. Lonas v. Silver, 195 N.Y.
S. 214, 215, 201 App.Div. 383; Yarbrough v. Yarbrough, 151 Tenn. 221, 269 S.W. 36, 38. It differs also from a covenant, which can be made by either grantor or grantee, while only the grantor can make a condition (Co. Litt. 70); De Grasse v. Verona Mining Co., 185 Mich. 514, 152 N.W. 242, 246;
The chief distinction between a condition subsequent in a deed and a covenant pertains to the remedy in event of breach, which, in the former case, subjects the estate to a forfeiture, and in the latter is merely a ground for recovery of damages. Bartell v. Senger, 160 Md. 685, 155 A. 174, 176. A charge is a devise of land with a bequest out of the subject-matter, and a charge upon the devisee personally, in respect of the estate devised, gives him an estate on condition. A condition also differs from a remainder; for, while the former may operate to defeat the estate before its natural termination, the latter cannot take effect until the completion of the preceding estate.

CONDITIONAL. That which is dependent upon or granted subject to a condition.

CONDITIONAL CREDITOR. In the civil law. A creditor having a future right of action, or having a right of action in expectancy. Dig. 50, 16, 54.

CONDITIONAL INDORSEMENT. See Indorsement.

CONDITIONAL STIPULATION. In the civil law. A stipulation to do a thing upon condition, as the happening of any event.

CONDITIONALLY PRIVILEGED COMMUNICATION. One made in good faith on any subject matter in which the person publishing has an interest, or in reference to which he has a duty, even though it contains matter which otherwise would be actionable. Cook v. East Shore Newspapers, 327 Ill.App. 559, 64 N.E.2d 751, 760.

The essential elements of a "conditionally privileged communication" are good faith, an interest to be upheld, a statement limited in its scope to such purpose, a proper occasion, and publication in a proper manner to proper persons. Cook v. East Shore Newspaper, 327 Ill.App. 559, 64 N.E. 2d 751.

CONDITIONES QUIELIBET ODIOSIE; MAX-DIE AUTEM CONTRA MATRIMONIUM ET COMMERCIIUM. Any conditions are odious, but especially those which are against in restraint of marriage and commerce. Lofft, Appendix, 644.

CONDUCT. To manage; direct; lead; have direction; carry on; regulate; do business. Wichita Film & Supply Co. v. Yale, 194 Mo.App. 60, 184 S.W. 119, 121; State v. Mahfouz, 181 La. 23, 158 So. 609; Scholz v. Leuer, 7 Wash.2d 76, 109 P.2d 294, 301.

CONDUCT, ESTOPPEL BY. An estoppel exists where a man by his own acts or acceptance is concluded from saying the truth. Menzenberger v. American State Bank, 101 Ind.App. 600, 198 N.E. 819. See, also, Equitable Estoppel.

The doctrine does not apply to an agreement which is illegal. Miller v. California Roofing Co., 55 Cal.App.2d 136, 130 P.2d 740, 745.

Elements or essentials of estoppel are acts done which cannot be contravened without fraud or gross misconduct, Tradesmens Nat. Bank of New Haven v. Minor, 190 A. 270, 272, 122 Conn. 419; change of position to injury of party claiming benefit of estoppel. Mundt v. Mallon, 106 Mont. 244, 76 P.2d 326, 329; Thompson v. Hudgens, 159 S.E. 807, 811, 161 S.C. 450; false representation or concealment, Marshall v. Wilson, 175 Or. 506, 154 P.2d 547, 553; Hamilton v. Northeast Mut. Ins. Ass'n, Mo.App., 116 S.W.2d 159, 163; ignorance of facts of one claiming right of estoppel, McCarthy v. Union Pac. Ry. Co., 58 Wyo. 308, 131 P.2d 326, 330, 332; inducement to do or forbear doing, something which one would, or would not, otherwise have done, O'Brien v. U. S., C.C.A.Ind., 51 F.2d 674, 678; intent to have other party act or conduct calculated to mislead, Woodmen of the World Life Ins. Soc. v. Greathouse, 242 Ala. 532, 7 So.2d 89, 91; Marshall v. Wilson, 175 Or. 306.

CONDOMINIUM. System of separate ownership of individual units in multiple-unit building. Susskind v. 1136 Tenants Corp., 251 N.Y.S.2d 321, 327, 43 Misc.2d 588.

CONDONACION. In Spanish law. The remission of a debt, either expressly or tacitly.

CONDONATION. The conditional remission or forgiveness, by means of continuance or resumption of marital cohabitation, by one of the married parties, of a known matrimonial offense committed by the other, that would constitute a cause of divorce; the condition being that the offense shall not be repeated. Pain v. Pain, 37 Mo.App. 115., Betz v. Betz, 25 N.Y.Super.Ct. 696; State v. Mansos, 204 N.C. 52, 167 S.E. 493; Thum v. Thum, 105 Colo. 352, 98 P.2d 279, 280.

"Condonation," to constitute valid defense in divorce action, must be free, voluntary, and not induced by duress or fraud; "condonation" means pardon of offense, voluntary overlooking or implied forgiveness by treating offender as if offense had not been committed. Panther v. Panther, 147 Okl. 131, 295 P. 219, 221. The term is also sometimes applied to forgiveness of a past wrong, fault, injury, or breach of duty in other relations, as, for example, in that of master and servant. Leatherberry v. Odell, C.C. N.C., 7 F. 648. Also, antemortem unchastity is capable of "condonation." Wesley v. Wesley, 181 Ky. 135, 204 S.W. 165, 166.

CONDONE. To make condonation of.

CONDUCE. To contribute to as a result. Board of Com‘rs of Mercer County v. Deitsch, 94 Ohio St. 1, 113 N.E. 745, 747.

CONDUCT, v. To manage; direct; lead; have direction; carry on; regulate; do business. Elements or essentials of estoppel are acts done which cannot be contravened without fraud or gross misconduct, Tradesmens Nat. Bank of New Haven v. Minor, 190 A. 270, 272, 122 Conn. 419; change of position to injury of party claiming benefit of estoppel. Mundt v. Mallon, 106 Mont. 244, 76 P.2d 326, 329; Thompson v. Hudgens, 159 S.E. 807, 811, 161 S.C. 450; false representation or concealment, Marshall v. Wilson, 175 Or. 506, 154 P.2d 547, 553; Hamilton v. Northeast Mut. Ins. Ass'n, Mo.App., 116 S.W.2d 159, 163; ignorance of facts of one claiming right of estoppel, McCarthy v. Union Pac. Ry. Co., 58 Wyo. 308, 131 P.2d 326, 330, 332; inducement to do or forbear doing, something which one would, or would not, otherwise have done, O'Brien v. U. S., C.C.A.Ind., 51 F.2d 674, 678; intent to have other party act or conduct calculated to mislead, Woodmen of the World Life Ins. Soc. v. Greathouse, 242 Ala. 532, 7 So.2d 89, 91; Marshall v. Wilson, 175 Or. 306.
CONDUCT

154 P.2d 547, 553; knowledge of party sought to be es-topped, McLean v. Hill, 276 Mass. 519, 177 N.E. 617, 619, 77 A.L.R. 1039; misleading of person claiming estoppel, Dodd v. Roterman, 161 N.E. 756, 761, 330 Ill. 362; State v.
Abernathy, 159 Tenn. 175, 17 S.W.2d 17, 19; prejudice to party claiming estoppel, Combs v. Salyer, 165 S.W.2d 40, 43, 291 Ky. 592; Burlington Sa’, tank of Burlington, Vt.
v. Rockwell, C.C.A.Idaho, 31 P.2d 27, 29; reliance upon conduct of one sought to be estopped, Wiedersum v. At-305, State v. Smith, 135 Neb. 423, 281 N.W. 851, 856; representation or concealment of material facts, City Dairy Co.

CONDUCT MONEY. In English practice. Money paid to a witness who has been subpoenaed on a trial, sufficient to defray the reasonable expenses of going to, staying at, and returning from the place of trial. Lush, Pr. 460; Archb. New Pr. 639.

CONDUCT! ACTIO. In the civil law. An action which the hirer (conductor) of a thing might have against the letter, (locator.) Inst. 3, 25, pr. 2.

CONDUCTIO. In the civil law. A hiring. Used generally in connection with the term locatio, a letting. Locatio et conductio, (sometimes united as a compound word, "locatio-conductio," a letting and hiring. Inst. 3, 25; Bract. fol. 62, c. 28;
Story, Bailm. §§ 8, 368.

CONDUCTOR. In the civil law. A hirer.

CONDUCTOR OPERARUM. In the civil law. A person who engages to perform a piece of work for another, at a stated price.

CONDUCTUS. A thing hired.

CONE. In geology. Area built up by a stream, near the mouth of a canyon of boulders, small stones, gravel, sand and other detritus. Haack v.
San Fernando Mission Land Co., 177 Cal. 140, 169
P. 1021, 1022.

CONE AND KEY. In old English law. A woman at fourteen or fifteen years of age may take charge of her house and receive cone and key;
that is, keep the accounts and keys. Cowell.
Said by Lord Coke to be cover and keye, meaning that at that age a woman knew what in her house should be kept under lock and key. 2 Inst. 203.

CONFARREATIO. In Roman law. A sacrificial rite resorted to by marrying persons of high pat-rician or priestly degree, for the purpose of clothing the husband with the manus over his wife;
the civil modes of effecting the same thing being coemptio, (formal,) and usus mulieris, (informal.) Brown.

CONFECTION. The making and completion of a written instrument. 5 Coke, 1.

CONFEDERACY.

Criminal Law

The association or banding together of two or more persons for the purpose of committing an act or furthering an enterprise which is forbidden by law, or which, though lawful in itself, becomes unlawful when made the object of the confederacy.
State v. Crowley, 41 Wis. 284, 22 Am.Rep. 719; 353. Conspiracy is a more technical term for this offense. The act of two or more who combine together to do any damage or injury to another, or to do any unlawful act. Jacob. State v. Crowley, 41 Wis. 284, 22 Am.Rep. 719.

Equity Pleading

An improper combination alleged to have been entered into between the defendants to a bill in equity.

International Law

A league or agreement between two or more independent states whereby they unite for their mutual welfare and the furtherance of their common aims. The term may apply to a union so formed for a temporary or limited purpose, as in the case of an offensive and defensive alliance; but it is more commonly used to denote that species of political connection between two or more independent states by which a central government is created, invested with certain powers of sovereignty, (mostly external,) and acting upon the several component states as its units, which, however, retain their sovereign powers for domestic purposes and some others. See Federal Government.

CONFEDERATION. A league or compact for mutual support, particularly of princes, nations, or states. Such was the colonial government during the Revolution.

CONFERENCE. A meeting of several persons for deliberation, for the interchange of opinion, or for the removal of differences or disputes. Thus, a meeting between a counsel and solicitor to advise on the cause of their client.

In the practice of legislative bodies, when the two houses cannot agree upon a pending measure, each appoints a committee of "conference," and the committees meet and consult together for the purpose of removing differences, harmonizing conflicting views, and arranging a compromise which will be accepted by both houses.

French Law

A concordance or identity between two laws or two systems of laws.

International Law

A personal meeting between the diplomatic agents of two or more powers, for the purpose of making statements and explanations that will obviate the delay and difficulty attending the more formal conduct of negotiations.

CONFESS. To admit as true; to assent to; to concede. Guydon v. Taylor, 115 Ind.App. 685, 60 N.E.2d 750, 751. To admit the truth of a charge or accusation. Usually spoken of charges of tortious or criminal conduct.

CONFESSING ERROR. A plea to an assignment of error, admitting the same.

CONFESSIO. Lat. A confession. Confessio judicio, a confession made in or before a court.

368
CONFESSIO FACTA IN JUDICIO OMNI PROBATIONE MAJOR EST. A confession made in court is of greater effect than any proof. Jenk. Cent. 102.

CONFESSIO. In criminal law. A voluntary statement made by a person charged with the commission of a crime or misdemeanor, communicated to another person, wherein he acknowledges himself to be guilty of the offense charged, and discloses the circumstances of the act or the share and participation which he had in it. Spicer v. Com., 21 Ky.L.Rep. 528, 51 S.W. 802. State v. Gibson, 69 N.D. 70. 284 N.W. 209, 214, 215, 219; Sango v. State, 52 Okl.Cr. 359, 5 P.2d 400, 401; Edwards v. State, Okl.Cr.App., 288 P. 359, 361. Also the act of a prisoner, when arraigned for a crime or misdemeanor, in acknowledging and avowing that he is guilty of the offense charged.

"Confession" comprises whole criminal charge; whereas, "admission" relates only to particular fact or circumstance covered thereby. State v. Davis, 212 Iowa 131, 235 N.W. 759, 761.

Classification

Confessions are divided into judicial and extrajudicial. The former are such as are made before a magistrate or court in the due course of legal proceedings; they include confessions made in preliminary examinations before magistrates. Mularkey v. State, 199 Wis. 269, 225 N.W. 933, 934. The latter are such as are made by a party elsewhere than in court or before a magistrate, 1 Greenl. Ev. § 216, State v. Corey, 182 Minn. 48, 233 N.W. 590, 591; Foster v. State, 79 Okl.Cr. 183, 152 P.2d 929, 932; Louette v. State, 152 Fla. 495, 12 So.2d 168, 172; whether to an official or nonofficial person, Prather v. State, 76 Okl.Cr. 385, 137 P.2d 249, 252. One made by the party out of court, or to any person, official or otherwise, when made not in the course of a judicial examination or investigation. State v. Stevenson, 98 Or. 285, 193 P. 1030, 1032.

An implied confession is where the defendant, in a case not capital, does not plead guilty but indirectly admits his guilt by placing himself at the mercy of the court and asking for a light sentence. 2 Hawk. P. C. p. 469; State v. Conway, 20 R.I. 270, 38 A. 656. An indirect confession is one inferred from the conduct of the defendant. An involuntary confession is one induced by hope, promise, fear, violence, torture, or threat. Lyons v. State, 77 Okl.Cr. 197, 138 P.2d 142, 148; Lyons v. State, 140 P.2d 248. People v. Tielke, 259 Ill. 88, 102 N.E. 229, 231. A naked confession is an admission of the guilt of the party, but which is not supported by any evidence of the commission of the crime. A relative confession, in the older criminal law of England, "is where the accused confesseth and appealeth others thereof, to become an approver," (2 Hale, P. C. c. 29,) or in other words to "turn king's evidence." This is now obsolete, but something like it is practiced in modern law, where one of the persons accused or supposed to be involved in a crime is put on the witness stand under an implied promise of pardon. State v. Willis, 71 Conn. 293, 41 A. 820. A simple confession is merely a plea of guilty.

State v. Willis, 71 Conn. 293, 41 A. 820. A voluntary confession is one made spontaneously by a person accused of crime, free from the influence of any extraneous disturbing cause, and in particular, not influenced, or extorted by violence, threats, or promises. State v. Clifford, 86 Iowa, 550, 53 N.W. 299, 41 Am.St.Rep. 518. No confession induced by official threat of prosecution is voluntary. Cannan v. U. S., C.C.A.Tex., 19 F.2d 823, 824; State v. Dolan, 86 N.J.L. 192, 90 A. 1034, 1035. It need not be spontaneous nor proceed wholly at maker's suggestion, but may be set in motion by external causes, so long as such influences are not what the law deems improper. People v. Vinci, 295 111. 419, 129 N.E. 193, 195.

For extrajudicial confession, see, also, the title Extrajudicial.

CONFESSIO AND AVOIDANCE. A plea in confession and avoidance is one which avows and confesses the truth of the averments of fact in the declaration, either expressly or by implication, but then proceeds to allege new matter which tends to deprive the facts admitted of their ordinary legal effect, or to obviate, neutralize, or avoid them. Bavarian Brewing Co. v. Retkowski, 113 A. 903, 907, 1 W.W.Flarr. (Del.) 225; Brown v. Jones, 137 Or. 520, 3 P.2d 768, 769.

CONFESION OF DEFENSE. In English practice. Where defendant alleges a ground of defense arising since the commencement of the action, the plaintiff may deliver confession of such defense and sign judgment for his costs up to the time of such pleading, unless it be otherwise ordered. Jud. Act 1875, Ord. XX, r. 3.

CONFESION OF JUDGMENT. See Judgment.

CONFESO, BILL TAKEN PRO. In equity practice. An order which the court of chancery makes when the defendant does not file an answer, that the plaintiff may take such a decree as the case made by his bill warrants.

CONFESSOR. An ecclesiastic who receives aural confessions of sins from persons under his spiritual charge, and pronounces absolution upon them. The secrets of the confessional are not privileged communications at common law, but this has been changed by statute in some states. See 1 Greenl. Ev. §§ 247, 248.

CONFESSUS IN JUDICIO PRO JUDICATO HABETUR, ET QUODAMMODO SUA SENTEN TIA 11 Coke, 30. A person confessing his guilt when arraigned is deemed to have been found guilty, and is, as it were, condemned by his own sentence.

CONFIDE. A synonym of the word "trust," and means to put into one's trust or keeping. Burch v. McMillin, Tex., 15 S.W.2d 86, 90.

CONFIDENCE. Trust; reliance; ground of trust. In the construction of wills, this word is considered peculiarly appropriate to create a trust.
"It is as applicable to the subject of a trust, as nearly a synonym, as the English language is capable of. Trust is a confidence which one man reposes in another, and confidence is a trust." Appeal of Coates, 2 Pa. 133.

CONFIDENCE GAME. Obtaining of money or property by means of some trick, device, or swindling operation in which advantage is taken of the confidence which the victim reposes in the swindler. People v. Mutchler, 309 Ill. 207, 140 N.E. 820, 822, 35 A.L.R. 339; Roll v. People, 243 P. 641, 643, 78 Colo. 589; People v. Epstein, 338 Ill. 631, 170 N.E. 678, 679. For distinction between false pretenses and confidence game, see False Pretenses.

One obtaining property by unlawful means, other than by fraudulently obtaining and then abusing victim's confidence, is not guilty of obtaining property by means of "confidence game." Bomareto v. People, 111 Colo. 99, 137 P.2d 402, 404.

CONFIDENTIAL. Intrusted with the confidence of another or with his secret affairs or purposes; intended to be held in confidence or kept secret.

CONFIDENTIAL COMMUNICATIONS. See Communication.

CONFIDENTIAL CREDITOR. This term has been applied to the creditors of a failing debtor who furnished him with the means of obtaining credit to which he was not entitled, involving in loss the unsuspecting and fair-dealing creditors. Gay v. Strickland, 112 Ala. 567, 20 So. 921.

CONFIDENTIAL RELATION. A fiduciary relation. These phrases are used as convertible terms. It is a peculiar relation which exists between client and attorney, principal and agent, principal and surety, landlord and tenant, parent and child, guardian and ward, ancestor and heir, husband and wife, trustee and cestui que trust, executors or administrators and creditors, legatees, or distributees, appointer and appointee under powers, and partners and part owners. In these and like cases, the law, in order to prevent undue advantage from the unlimited confidence or sense of duty which the relation naturally creates, requires the utmost degree of good faith in all transactions between the parties. Shell Petroleum Corporation v. Pratt, D.C.Kan., 22 F.Supp. 304, 305, 306. It is not confined to any specific association of parties. It appears when the circumstances make it certain that the parties do not deal on equal terms, but on the one side there is an overwhelming influence, or, on the other, weakness, dependence, or trust, justifiably reposed. The mere existence of kinship does not, of itself, give rise to such relation. In re Null's Estate, 302 Pa. 64, 153 A. 137. It covers every form of relation between parties wherein confidence is reposed by one in another, and former relies and acts upon representations of the other and is guilty of no derelictions on his own part. Peckham v. Johnson, Tex.Civ.App., 98 S.W.2d 408, 416.

The term "confidential relations," within the exception to the rule that misrepresentations of law will not work an estoppel, is not confined to the strict fiduciary relationship existing between those having definite, well-recognized legal relations of trust and confidence, but extends to every possible case in which a fiduciary relation exists as a fact, though it may be a moral, social, domestic, or merely personal relation, and need not be a legal one. Robbins v. Law, 48 Cal.App. 555, 192 P. 118, 120; Hitchcock v. Tackett, 208 Ky. 803, 272 S.W. 52, 54.

CONFINEMENT. Confinement may be either a moral or a physical restraint, by threats of violence with a present force, or by physical restraint of the person. Ex parte Snodgrass, 43 Tex. Cr.R. 359, 65 S.W. 1061.

Restraint by sickness in childbirth; lying-in for delivery of child, or possibly because of advanced pregnancy. Rose v. Commonwealth Beneficial Ass'n, 86 A. 673, 674, 4 Boyce (Del.) 144.

Solitary Confinement
See Solitary Confinement.

CONFIRM. To complete or establish that which was imperfect or uncertain; to ratify what has been done without authority or insufficiently. Railway Co. v. Ransom, 15 Tex.Civ.App. 689, 41 S.W. 826. Vermont Shade Roller Co. v. Burlington Traction Co., 102 Vt. 489, 150 A. 138, 142. To make firm or certain; to give new assurance of truth or certainty; to put past doubt. State ex rel. Sherrill v. Milam, 113 Fla. 491, 153 So. 100.

CONFIRMARE EST ID FIRMUM FACERE QUOD PRIUS INFIRMUM FUIT. Co. Litt. 295. To confirm is to make firm that which was before infirm.

CONFIRMARE NEMO POTEST PRIUS QUAM JUS EI ACCIDERIT. No one can confirm before the right accrues to him. 10 Coke, 48.

CONFIRMAT USUM QUI TOLLIT ABUSUM. He confirms the use [of a thing] who removes the abuse [of it]. Moore, 764.

CONFIRMATIO. The conveyance of an estate, or the communication of a right that one hath in or unto lands or tenements, to another that hath the possession thereof, or somo other estate therein, whereby a voidable estate is made sure and unavoidable, or whereby a particular estate is increased or enlarged. Shep. Touch. 311; 2 Bl. Comm. 325.

CONFIRMATIO CHARTARUM. Lat. Confirmation of the charters. A statute passed in the 25 Edw. I., whereby the Great Charter is declared to be allowed as the common law; all judgments contrary to it are declared void; copies of it are ordered to be sent to all cathedral churches and read twice a year to the people; and sentence of excommunication is directed to be as constantly denounced against all those that, by word or deed or counsel, act contrary thereto or in any degree infringe it. 1 Bl.Comm. 128.

CONFIRMATIO CRESCENS. An enlarging confirmation; one which enlarges a rightful estate. Shep. Touch. 311.

CONFIRMATIO DIMINUENS. A diminishing confirmation. A confirmation which tends and serves to diminish and abridge the services whereby a tenant doth hold, operating as a release of part of the services. Shep. Touch. 311.

CONFIRMATIO PERFICIENS. A confirmation which makes valid a wrongful and defeasible title, or makes a conditional estate absolute. Shep. Touch. 311.

CONFIRMATIO EST NULLA UBI DONUM PRIE-CEDENS EST INVALIDUM. Moore, 764; Co. Litt. 295. Confirmation is void where the preceding gift is invalid.

CONFIRMATIO OMNES SUPPLET DEFECTUS, LICET ID QUOD ACTUM EST AB INITIO NON VALUIT. Co. Litt. 295b. Confirmation supplies all defects, though that which had been done was not valid at the beginning.

CONFIRMATION. A contract or written memorandum, by which that which was in effect, difficult of proof, void, imperfect, or subject to be avoided is ratified, rendered valid and binding, made firm and unavoidable. Schifferdecker v. Busch, 225 N.Y. 106, 111, 130 Misc, 625.

It implies a deliberate act, intended to renew and ratify a transaction known to be voidable. Bauer v. Dotterer, 202 Ark. 1055, 155 S.W.2d 54, 57.

A conveyance of an estate or right in esse, whereby a voidable estate is made sure and unavoidable, or whereby a particular estate is increased. Co. Litt. 295b. Betem v. Garrison, 129 Md. 664, 99 A. 897, 900.

English Ecclesiastical Law

The ratification by the archbishop of the election of a bishop by dean and chapter under the king's letter missive prior to the investment and consecration of the bishop by the archbishop. 25 Hen. VIII. c. 20.

CONFIRMATION OF SALE. The confirmation of a judicial sale by the court which ordered it is a signification in some way (usually by the entry of an order) of the court's approval of the terms, price, and conditions of the sale. Johnson v. Cooper, 56 Miss. 618; Hyman v. Smith, 13 W.Va. 765.

CONFIRMAVI. Lat. I have confirmed. The emphatic word in the ancient deeds of confirmation. Fleta, lib. 3, c. 14, § 5.

CONFIRMEE. The grantee in a deed of confirmation.

CONFIRMOR. The grantor in a deed of confirmation.

CONFISCABLE. Capable of being confiscated or suitable for confiscation; liable to forfeiture. Camp v. Lockwood, 1 Dall. (Pa.) 393, 1 L.Ed. 194.

CONFISCARE. In civil and old English law. To confiscate; to claim for or bring into the fist, or treasury. Bract. fol. 150.

CONFISCATE. To appropriate property to the use of the state. To adjudge property to be forfeited to the public treasury; to seize and con-demn private forfeited property to public use. City of Portsmouth v. Public Utilities Commission, 108 Ohio St. 272, 140 N.E. 604, 606; Moscow Fire Ins. Co. of Moscow, Russia, v. Bank of New York & Trust Co., 294 N.Y.S. 648, 663, 161 Misc. 903.

Formerly, it appears, this term was used as synonymous with "forfeit," but at present the distinction between the two terms is well marked. Confiscation supervenes upon forfeiture. The person, by his act, forfeits his property; the state thereupon appropriates it, that is, confiscates it. Hence, to confiscate property implies that it has first been forfeited; but to forfeit property does not necessarily imply that it will be confiscated.

CONFISCATEE. One whose property has been seized and sold under a confiscation act, e.g., for unpaid taxes. See Brent v. New Orleans, 41. La. Ann. 1098, 6 So. 793.

CONFISCATION, The act of confiscating; or of condemning and adjudging to the public treasury. “Confiscation” is to be distinguished from “condemnation” as prize. The former is the act of the sovereign against a rebellious subject; the latter is the act of a belligerent against another belligerent. Confiscation may be effected by such means, summary or arbitrary, as the sovereign, expressing its will through lawful channels, may please to adopt. Condemnation as prize can only be made in accordance with principles of law recognized in the common jurisprudence of the world. Both are proceedings in rem, but confiscation recognizes the title of the original owner to the property, while in prize the tenure of the property is qualified, provisional, and destitute of absolute ownership. Winchester v. U. S., 14 Ct.C1. 48.

CONFISCATORY RATES. For utility are rates which do not afford net return sufficient to preserve utility's property and to attract capital necessary to enable utility to discharge its public duties. Wichita Gas Co. v. Public Service Commission of Kansas, D.C.Kan., 2 F.Supp. 792, 799.

Rates which do not afford a reasonable return on value of property at time it is used in public service. State v. Tri-State Telephone and Telegraph Co., 204 Minn. 516, 284 N.W. 294, 305.

CONFISCATION ACTS. Certain acts of congress, enacted during the progress of the civil war (1861 and 1862) in the exercise of the war powers of the government and meant to strengthen its hands and aid in suppressing the rebellion, which authorized the seizure, condemnation, and forfeiture of "property used for insurrectionary purposes." Semmes v. U. S., 91 U.S. 27, 23 L.Ed. 193.

CONFISCATION CASES. The name given to a group of fifteen cases decided by the United States supreme court in 1868, on the validity and construction of the confiscation acts of congress. Reported in 7 Wall. 454, 19 L.Ed. 196.

CONFISK. An old form of confiscate.

CONFITENS REUS. An accused person who admits his guilt.

CONFLICT OF LAWS. Inconsistency or difference between the municipal laws of different states or countries, arising in the case of persons who have acquired rights or a status, or made contracts, or incurred obligations, within the territory of two or more jurisdictions. Hence, that branch of jurisprudence, arising from the diversity of the laws of different nations, states or jurisdictions, in their application to rights and remedies, which reconciles the inconsistency, or decides which law or system is to govern in the particular case, or settles the degree of force to be accorded to the law of another jurisdiction, (the acts or rights in question having arisen under it,) either where it varies from the domestic law, or where the domestic law is silent or not exclusively applicable to the case in point. In this sense it is often called "private international law," a term adopted by Westlake, by Woolsey, Internat'l. Law (5th Ed.) § 73, and others, and characterized as "handy and manageable," but at bottom inaccurate, by Dicey, Conflict of Laws, Moore's Ed. 12, who points out that the defect of the name "Conflict of Laws" is that the supposed conflict is fictitious and never really takes place, and that the expression has the further radical defect of concealing from view the circumstance that the question by the law of what country a given transaction shall be governed is often too plain to admit of doubt. If, he says, the term applies to the conflict in the mind of a judge as to which of two systems of law should govern a given case, this amounts simply to saying that the term "conflict of laws" may be used as an inaccurate equivalent for the less objectionable phrase "choice of laws." Taylor, Jurisprudence, 611, after considering the opinion of many writers, concludes that the term "private international law" is subject to many objections. Holland, Jurisprudence, 410, considers it "wholly indefensible," as does Gray, Nature, etc., of the Law, 124. Pollock, First Book of Jurispr. 99, prefers the German term—Internationales Privatrecht.

CONFLICT OF PRESUMPTIONS. In this conflict certain rules are applicable, viz.: (1) Special take precedence of general presumptions; (2) constant of casual ones; (3) presume in favor of innocence; (4) of legality; (5) of validity; and, when these rules fail, the matter is said to be at large. Brown.

CONFLICTING EVIDENCE. It has been said that there is not, in a legal sense, a conflict of evidence unless there is a possibility that men of ordinary reason and fairness would feel justified in drawing different conclusions from the evidence before them. Seeley v. Osborne, 220 N.Y. 416, 116 N.E. 97.

CONFORMITY. Correspondence in form, manner, or use; agreement; harmony; congruity. Reasonover v. Reasonover, 122 Tex. 512, 58 S.W. 2d 817, 819.

English Ecclesiastical Law
Adherence to the doctrines and usages of the Church of England.

CONFORMITY ACT, or STATUTE. A term used to designate Act June 1, 1872, c. 255, § 5, 17 Stat. 197, whence was derived Rev. St. U. S. § 914 providing that the practice, pleadings, and forms and modes of proceeding in civil causes, other than equity and admiralty causes, in the federal districts courts shall conform, as near as may be, to those existing in like causes in the courts of the state within which such district courts are held. Since the adoption of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, 28 U.S.C.A., the Conformity Act is no longer effective. De Rosmo v. Feeny, 1941, 38 F. Supp. 834; Hydraulic Press Mfg. Co. v. Williams, White & Co., C.C.A.111.1947, 165 F.2d 489.

CONFORMITY, BILL OF. See Bill of Conformity.

CONFRAIRIE. Fr. In old English law. A fraternity, brotherhood, or society. Cowell.

CONFRERES. Brethren in a religious house; fellows of one and the same society. Cowell.

CONFRONTATION. In criminal law, the act of setting a witness face to face with the prisoner, in order that the latter may make any objection he has to the witness, or that the witness may identify the accused. State v. Behrman, 114 N.C. 797, 19 S.E. 220, 25 L.R.A. 449.

The constitutional right of confrontation does not mean merely that witnesses are to be made visible to the accused, but imports the constitutional privilege to cross-examine them. State v. Crooker, 123 Me. 310, 122 A. 865, 866, 33 A.L.R. 821.

CONFUSIO. In the civil law. The inseparable intermixture of property belonging to different owners; it is properly confined to the pouring together of fluids, but is sometimes also used of a melting together of metals or any compound formed by the irrecoverable commixture of different substances.

It is distinguished from commixtion by the fact that in the latter case a separation may be made, while in a case of confusio there cannot be. 2 Bl.Com. 405.

CONFUSION. This term, as used in the civil law and in compound terms derived from that source, means a blending or intermingling, and is equivalent to the term "merger" as used at common law. Palmer v. Burnside, 1 Woods, 182 Fed. Cas. No. 33 A.L.R. 685.

CONFUSION OF BOUNDARIES. The title of that branch of equity jurisdiction which relates to the discovery and settlement of conflicting, disputed, or uncertain boundaries.

CONFUSION OF DEBTS. A mode of extinguishing a debt, by the concurrence in the same person of two qualities or adverse rights to the same thing which mutually destroy each other. This may occur in several ways, as where the creditor becomes the heir of the debtor, or the debtor the heir of the creditor, or either accedes to the title of the other by any other mode of transfer. Woods v. Ridley, 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 198.

CONFUSION OF GOODS. The inseparable intermixture of property belonging to different owners; properly confined to the pouring together of fluids, but used in a wider sense to designate any indistinguishable compound of elements belonging to different owners. The term "confusion" is applicable to a mixing of chattels of one and the same general description, differing thus from "accession," which takes place where various materials are united in one product. Confusion of goods arises wherever the goods of two or more persons are so blended as to have become undistinguishable. 1 Schouler, Pers. Prop. 41. Barker v. Stearns Coal & Lumber Co., 291 Ky. 184, 163 S.W.2d 466, 471.

CONFUSION OF RIGHTS. A union of the qualities of debtor and creditor in the same person. The effect of such a union is, generally, to extinguish the debt. 1 Salk. 306; Cro. Car. 551; 1 Ld. Raym. 515. 5 Term 381; Comyns, Dig. Baron et Feme (D) ; Baylor University v. Bradshaw, Tex. Civ.App., 52 S.W.2d 1094, 1101.

CONFUSION OF TITLES. A civil-law expression, synonymous with "merger," as used in the common law, applying where two titles to the same property unite in the same person. Palmer v. Burnside, 1 Woods, 179, Fed. Cas., No. 10,685.

CONFUTE. To prove to be false, defective, or invalid. Wiley v. Baker, 219 Mich. 629, 190 N.W. 273, 278.

CONGA. Fr. In French law. Permission, leave; a passport or clearance to a vessel; a permission to arm, equip, or navigate a vessel.

CONGA D'ACCORDER. Leave to accord. A permission granted by the court, in the old process of levying a fine, to the defendant to agree with the plaintiff. Termes de la Ley; Cowell. See Licentia Concordanandi; 2 Bla.Comm. 350.

CONGA D'EMPARLER. Leave to imparl. The privilege of an imparlance, (licentia loquendi.) 3 Bl.Comm. 299.

CONGA D'ESLIRE. Also spelled conge d’élire, conge délire. Cowell; Termes de la Ley; 1 Bla. Comm. 379, 382. A permission or license from the British sovereign to a dean and chapter to elect a bishop, in time of vacation; or to an abbey or priory which is of royal foundation, to elect an abbot or prior.

CONGEABLE. L. Fr. Lawful; permissible; allowable. "Disseisin is properly where a man entereth into any lands or tenements where his entry is not congeable, and putteth out him that hath the freehold." Litt. § 279. See Ricard v. Williams, 7 Wheat. 107, 5 L.Ed. 398.

CONGILDONES. In Saxon law. Fellow-members of a guild.

CONGIUS. An ancient measure containing about a gallon and a pint. Cowell.

CONGREGATE. To come together; to assemble; to meet. Board of Health of City of Paterson v. Clayton, 93 N.J.L. 64, 106 A. 813, 814.

CONGREGATION. An assembly or gathering; specifically, an assembly or society of persons who together constitute the principal supporters of a particular parish, or habitually meet at the same church for religious exercises. Laird v. State, 69 Tex.Cr.R. 553, 155 S.W. 260, 262.

Ecclesiastical Law

Certain bureaus at Rome, where ecclesiastical matters are attended to.

CONGREGATIONAL SYSTEM OF CHURCH ORGANIZATION. Where the local organization is the governing body and is sufficient unto itself. Doughty v. Herr, 97 Ind.App. 427, 185 N.E. 657, 658.

CONGRESS. In International Law. An assembly of envoys, commissioners, deputies, etc., from different sovereignties who meet to concert measures for their common good, or to adjust their mutual concerns.

In American Law. The legislative assembly of the United States, composed of the senate and house of representatives (q. v.). U. S. Const. art. 1, § 1.

CONGRESSMAN. Strictly, a member of the Congress of the United States. But there is a strong tendency in popular usage to apply this term only to a member of the House of Representatives, as distinguished from a senator. State v. Kopriva, 49 N.D. 1040, 194 N.W. 704, 705.

CONGRESSUS. The extreme practical test of the truth of a charge of impotence brought against a husband by a wife. It is now disused. Causes Célèbres, 6, 183.

CONJECTIO. In the civil law of evidence. A throwing together. Presumption; the putting of things together, with the inference drawn therefrom.

CONJECTIO CAUSE. In the civil law. A statement of the case. A brief synopsis of the case given by the advocate to the judge in opening the trial. Calvin.

CONJECTURAL CHOICE, RULE OF. Where all theories of causation rest only on conjecture, no jury question is presented. Cummings v. Grand Trunk Western R. Co., 127 N.W.2d 842, 844, 372 Mich. 695.

CONJECTURE. A slight degree of credence, arising from evidence too weak or too remote to cause belief. Weed v. Scofield, 73 Conn. 670, 49 A. 22-, 1 Mascalus, De Prob. qust. 14, n. 14. Supposition or surprize. The idea of a fact, suggested by another fact; as a possible cause, concomitant, or result. Burrill, Circ. Ev. 27. An idea or notion founded on a probability without any demonstration of its truth; an idea or surprize inducing a slight degree of belief founded upon some possible, or perhaps probable fact of which there is no positive evidence. Oklahoma City v. Wilcoxson, 173 Okl. 433, 48 P.2d 1039, 1043. An explanation consistent with but not deducible as a reasonable inference from known facts or conditions. Southern Ry. Co. v. Dickson, 211 Ala. 481, 100 So. 665, 669. In popular use, synonymous with "guess." Fedorawicz v. Citizens' Electric Illuminating Co., 246 Pa. 141, 92 A. 124, 125.

Also, the bringing together of the circumstanc-CONJOINT

CONJOINT ROBBERY. Where the act is committed by two or more persons. Patterson V. State, 78 Okl.Cr. 244, 147 P.2d 179, 184.

CONJOINTS. Persons married to each other. Story, Confl. Laws, § 71; Wolffius, Droit de la Nat. § 858.

CONJUDENT. In old English law. An associate judge. Bract. 403.

CONJUGAL. Of or belonging to marriage or the married state; suitable or appropriate to the married state or to married persons; matrimonial; connubial. Swanson v. Swanson, 20 A.2d 617, 618, 128 Conn. 128, 135 A.L.R. 849.

CONJUGAL RIGHTS. Matrimonial rights; the right which husband and wife have to each other's society, comfort, and affection.

CONJUGIUM. One of the names of marriage, among the Romans. Tayl. Civil Law, 284.

CONJUNCT. In Scotch law. Joint.

CONJUNCTA. In the civil law. Things joined together or united; as distinguished from disjuncta, things disjoined or separated. Dig. 50, 16, 53.

CONJUNCTIO. In the civil law. Conjunction; connection of words in a sentence. See Dig. 50, 16, 29, 142.

CONJUNCTIO MARITI ET FEMINÆ EST DE JURE NATURÆ. The union of husband and wife is of the law of nature.

CONJUNCTIVE. Connecting in a manner denoting union.

A grammatical term for particles which serve for joining or connecting together. Thus, the word "and" is called a "conjunctive," and "or" a "disjunctive," conjunction.

CONJUNCTIVE DENIAL. Where several material facts are stated conjunctively in the complaint, an answer which undertakes to deny their averments as a whole, conjunctively stated, is called a "conjunctive denial." Doll v. Good, 38 Cal. 287.

CONJUNCTIVE OBLIGATION. See Obligation.

CONJURATIO. In Old English Law. A swearing together; an oath administered to several together; a combination or confederacy under oath. Cowell.

In Old European Law. A compact of the inhabitants of a commune, or municipality, confirmed by their oaths to each other and which was the basis of the commune. Steph. Lect. 119.

CONJURATION. In old English law. A plot or compact made by persons combining by oath to do any public harm. Cowell.

The offense of having conference or commerce with evil spirits, in order to discover some secret, or effect some purpose. Cowell.

CONJURATOR. In old English law. One who swears or is sworn with others; one bound by oath with others; a compurgator; a conspirator.

CONNECT. To join or fasten together as by something intervening; to associate as in occurrence or in idea; to combine; to unite or link together, as in an electrical circuit; to establish a bond or relation between; to meet or make connections for transference of passengers or change of means of communication. City of Independence v. Board of Com'rs of Montgomery County, 140 Kan. 661, 38 P.2d 105.

CONNECTED. Joined; united by junction, by an intervening substance or medium, by dependence or relation, or by order in a series. State v. Patterson, 95 S.C. 463, 79 S.E. 309, 310.

With reference to buildings, the term does not generally denote such a close union as is implied by the word "attached" or "annexed," but rather signifies the connection effected by a flume; Plattsburg Gas & Electric Co. v. Miller, 206 N.Y.S. 42, 45, 123 Misc. 651; or by piping or telephone connections; Williams Mfg. Co. v. Insurance Co. of North America, 93 Vt. 161, 106 A. 657, 659.

A counterclaim, to be "connected" with the subject of the action, must be directly connected, so that the parties could be supposed to have foreseen and contemplated it in their mutual acts. Haborl-Crystal Spring Brewing Co. v. Handrahan, 165 N.Y.S. 251, 255, 100 Misc. 163; Placerville Gold Mining Co. v. Beal, 168 Cal. 682, 144 P. 748, 749.

CONNECTION. The state of being connected or joined; union by junction, by an intervening substance or medium, by dependence or relation, or by order in a series. State v. Patterson, 95 S.C. 463, 79 S.E. 309, 310. Annenren v. Penn, Cust. & Pat.App., 69 F.2d 653, 654.

A contract for a connection between railroads means a physical joining of the rails so as to permit trains to pass from one set of rails to the other. Philip A. Ryan Lumber Co. v. Ball, Tex.Civ.App., 197 S.W. 1037, 1038. See, also, State v. Babcock, 161 Minn. 80, 200 N.W. 843, 844; Raynor v. New York & L. I. Traction Co., 149 N.Y.S. 151, 155, 86 Misc. 201.

CONNECTIONS. Relations by blood or marriage, but more commonly the relations of a person with whom one is connected by marriage. In this sense, the relations of a wife are "connections" of her husband. The term is vague and indefinite. See Storer v. Wheatley, 1 Pa. 507.

CONNEXITE. In French law. This exists when two actions are pending which, although not identical as in lis pendens, are so nearly similar in object that it is expedient to have them both adjudicated upon by the same judges. Arg. Fr. Merc. Law, 553.
CONVIENCE. The secret or indirect consent or permission of one person to the commission of an unlawful or criminal act by another. State v. Gesell, 124 Mo. 531, 27 S.W. 1101.
