Connivance differs from condonation, though the same legal consequences may attend it. Connivance necessarily involves criminality on the part of the individual who consents; condonation may take place without imputing the slightest blame to the party who forgives the injury. Connivance must be the act of the mind before the offense has been committed; condonation is the result of a determination to forgive an injury which was not known until after it was inflicted. Turton v. Turton, 3 Hagg.Ecll. 350.

Connivance differs, also, from collusion; the former is generally collusion for a particular purpose, while the latter may exist without connivance. 3 Hagg.Ecll. 130.

CONNIVE. To co-operate secretly with, or to have a secret or clandestine understanding with. Leavitt v. Leavitt, 229 Mass. 196, 118 N.E. 262, and 33 L.J.Mat.Cas. 161.

To take part or co-operate privily with another, to aid or abet. People v. Munday, 215 Ill.App. 356, 377. To look upon with secret favor; it implies both knowledge and assent, either active or passive. State v. Furth, 82 Wash. 665, 144 P. 907, 910.

CONNOISSEMENT. In French law. An instrument, signed by the master of a ship or his agent, containing a description of the goods loaded on a ship, the persons who have sent them, the persons to whom they were sent, and the undertaking to transport them;—similar to the English and American bill of lading. Guyot, Repert. Univ.; Ord. de la Marine, l. 3, t. 3, art. 1.

CONNUBIUM. In the civil law. Marriage. Among the Romans, a lawful marriage as distinguished from "concubinage" (q. v.), an inferior marriage.

CONOCIAMENTO. In Spanish law. A recognizance. White, New Recop. b. 3, tit. 7, c. 5, § 3.

CONCOIIMENTO. In Spanish law. A bill of lading. In the Mediterranean ports it is called "poliza de cargamento."

CONQUEREUR. In Norman and old English law. The same as "conqueror" (q. v.).

CONQUEROR. In old English and Scotch law. The first purchaser of an estate; he who first brought an estate into his family, or into the family owning it. 2 Bl.Comm. 242, 243.

CONQUEST. In feudal law. Conquest; acquisition by purchase; any method of acquiring the ownership of an estate other than by descent. Also an estate acquired otherwise than by inheritance.

In international law. The acquisition of the sovereignty of a country by force of arms, exercised by an independent power which reduces the vanquished to the submission of its empire. Castillero v. U. S., 2 Black, 109, 17 L.Ed. 360; American Ins. Co. v. Canter, 1 Pet. 511, 7 L.Ed. 242.

In Scotch law. Purchase. Bell.

CONQUESTOR. Conqueror. The title given to William of Normandy.

CONQUETS. In French law. The name given to every acquisition which the husband and wife, jointly or severally, make during the conjugal community. Thus, whatever is acquired by the husband and wife, either by his or her industry or good fortune, inures to the extent of one-half for the benefit of the other. Merl. Repert. "Conquet"; Merl. Quest., "Conquet." Picotte v. Cooley, 10 Mo. 312. In Louisiana, these gains are called acquacts.

CONSUANGINEUS. Lat. A person related by blood; a person descended from the same common stock.

CONSUANGINEUS EST QUASI EODEM SANGUINE NATUS. Co. Litt. 157. A person related by consanguinity is, as it were, sprung from the same blood.

CONSUANGINEUS FRATER. In civil and feudal law. A half-brother by the father's side, as distinguished from frater uterinus, a brother by the mother's side. 2 Bla.Comm. 231.

CONSUANGINEITY. Kinship; blood relationship; the connection or relation of persons descended from the same stock or common ancestor. 2 Bl.Comm. 202; Rector v. Drury, 3 Pin. (Wis.) 298; Sweezey v. Willis, 1 Brad.Surr.R. (N.Y.) 495.

Consanguinity is distinguished from "affinity," which is the connection existing in consequence of a marriage, between each of the married persons and the kindred of the other. Sizemore v. Commonwealth, 216 Ky. 637, 276 S.W. 524, 525.

Lineal and Collateral Consanguinity

Lineal consanguinity is that which subsists between persons of whom one is descended in a direct line from the other, as between son, father, grandfather, great-grandfather, and so upwards in the direct ascending line; or between son, grandson, great-grandson, and so downwards in the direct descending line. Collateral consanguinity is that which subsists between persons who have the same ancestors, but who do not descend (or ascend) one from the other. Thus, father and son are related by lineal consanguinity, uncle and nephew by collateral consanguinity. 2 Bl.Comm, 203; Capps v. State, 87 Fla. 388, 100 So. 172, 173.

CONSCIENCE. The moral sense; the faculty of judging the moral qualities of actions, or of discriminating between right and wrong; particularly applied to one's perception and judgment of the moral qualities of his own conduct, but in a wider sense, denoting a similar application of the standards of morality to the acts of others. The sense of right and wrong inherent in every person by virtue of his existence as a social entity; good conscience being a synonym of equity. Van Graafeiland v. Wright, 286 Mo. 414, 228 S.W. 465, 469.

In law, especially the moral rule which requires probity, justice, and honest dealing between man and man, as when we say that a bargain is "against conscience" or "unconscionable," or that the price paid for property at a forced sale was so inadequate as to "shock the conscience." This is also the meaning of the term as applied to the jurisdiction and principles of decision of courts of chancery, as in saying that such a court is a "court of conscience," that it proceeds "according to conscience," or that it has cognizance of "matters of conscience." See 3 Bl.Comm. 47-56;

As an element of equitable jurisdiction it is not the private opinion of an individual court, but is rather to be regarded as a metaphorical term, designating the common standard of civil right and expediency combined, based upon general principles and limited by established doctrines, to which the court appeals and by which it tests the conduct and rights of suitors. National City Bank of New York v. Gelfert, 284 N.Y. 13, 29 N.E.2d 449, 452.

CONSCIENCE OF THE COURT. When an issue is sent (Alt of chancery to be tried at law, to "inform the conscience of the court," the meaning is that the court is to be supplied with exact and dependable information as to the unsettled or disputed questions of fact in the case, in order that it may proceed to decide it in accordance with the principles of equity and good conscience in the light of the facts thus determined. Watt v. Starke, 101 U.S. 252, 25 L.Ed. 826.

CONSCIENCE, COURTS OF. Courts, not of record, constituted by act of parliament in the city of London, and other towns, for the recovery of small debts; otherwise and more commonly called "Courts of Requests." 3 Steph.Comm. 451.

CONSCIENCE, RIGHT OF. As used in some constitutional provisions, this phrase is equivalent to religious liberty or freedom of conscience. Com. v. Lesher, 17 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 155; State v. Cumnings, 36 Mo. 263.

CONSENTIA DICTIUR A CON ET SCIO, QUASI SCIRE CUM DEO. 1 Coke, 100. Conscience is called from con and scio, to know, as it were, with God.

CONSCIENTIA REI ALIENI. In Scotch law. Knowledge of another's property; knowledge that a thing is not one's own, but belongs to another. He who has this knowledge, and retains possession, is chargeable with "violent profits."

CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTOR. One who, by reason of religious training and belief, is conscientiously opposed to participation in war. Selective Training & Service Act of 1940, § 5(g), 50 U.S.C.A. App., § 305(g). U. S. v. Kauten, C.C.A.N.Y., 135 F.2d 703.

One conscientiously opposed on religious grounds to participation in war need not be a member of a religious sect whose creed forbids participation in war to be entitled to classification as a conscientious objector. U. S. v. Bowles, C.C.A.N.J., 131 F.2d 818. It is sufficient if he has a conscientious scruple against war in any form. U. S. ex rel. Phillips v. Downer, C.C.A.N.Y., 135 F.2d 521, 524, 525.

CONSCIENTIOUS SCRUPLE. A conscientious scruple against taking an oath, serving as a juror in a capital case, doing military duty, or the like, is an objection or repugnance growing out of the fact that the person believes the thing demanded of him to be morally wrong, his conscience being the sole guide to his decision; it is thus distinguished from an "objection on principle," which is dictated by the reason and judgment, rather than the moral sense, and may relate only to the propriety or expediency of the thing in question. People v. Stewart, 7 Cal. 143.

CONSCRIPTION. Drafting into the military service of the state; compulsory military service falling upon all male subjects evenly, within or under certain specified ages. Kneedler v. Lane, 45 Pa. 267. Certain classes, however, may be exempt, and drafted men are sometimes released upon furnishing acceptable substitutes or by the payment of a sum of money. Davis, Mil. Law 51.

CONSECRATE. In ecclesiastical law. To dedicate to sacred purposes, as a bishop by imposition of hands, or a church or churchyard by prayers, etc. Consecration is performed by a bishop or archbishop.

CONSECRATIO EST PERIODUS ELECTIONIS; ELECTIO EST PREZAMBULA CONSECRATIONIS. 2 Rolle, 102. Consecration is the termination of election; election is the preamble of consecration.

CONSEDO. Sp. A term used in conveyances under Mexican law, equivalent to the English word "grant." Mulford v. Le Franc, 26 Cal. 103.

CONSEIL D'ETAT. Council of state. One of the oldest of French institutions, its origin dating back to 1302. It decides or advises upon state questions and measures proposed for legislation, submitted to it by the President of the Republic, by the members of the Cabinet, and by Parliament. Coxe, Manual of French Law.

CONSEIL DE FAMILLE. In French law. A family council. Certain acts require the sanction of CONSEIL DE PRUDHOMMES. In French law. One of a species of trade tribunals, charged with settling differences between masters and workmen. They endeavor, in the first instance, to conciliate the parties. In default, they adjudicate upon the questions in dispute. Their decisions are final up to 200f. Beyond that amount, appeals lie to the tribunals of commerce. Arg. Fr. Merc. Law, 553.

CONSEIL JUDICIAIRE. In French law. When a person has been subjected to an interdiction on the ground of his insane extravagance, but the interdiction is not absolute, but limited only, the court of first instance, which grants the interdiction, appoints a council, called by this name, with whose assistance the party may bring or defend actions, or compromise the same, alienate his estate, make or incur loans, and the like. Brown.

CONSENSUAL CONTRACT. A term derived from the civil law, denoting a contract founded upon and completed by the mere consent of the contracting parties, without any external formal-ity or symbolic act to fix the obligation.

CONSENSUS AD IDEM. An agreement of parties to the same thing; a meeting of minds.

CONSENSUS EST VOLUNTAS PLURIORUM AD QUOS RES PERTINET, SIMUL JUNCTA. Loftt, 514. Consent is the conjoint will of several persons to whom the thing belongs.

CONSENSUS FACIT LEGEM. Consent makes the law. (A contract is law between the parties agreeing to be bound by it.) Branch, Princ.

CONSENSUS, NON CONCUBITUS, FACIT NUP- TIA S VEL MATRIMONIUM, ET CONSENTIRE NON POSSUNT ANTE ANNOS NUBILES. 6 Coke, 22. Consent, and not cohabitation (or coition), constitutes nuptials or marriage, and persons cannot consent before marriageable years. 1 Bl.Comm. 434; Co. Litt. 33a; Dig. 50, 17, 30. See 10 Cl. & F. 534; Broom, Max. 505.

CONSENSUS VOLUNTAS MULTOR UM AD QUOS RES PERTINET, SIMUL JUNCTA. Consent is the united will of several interested in one subject-matter. Davis, 48; Branch, Princ.

CONSENT. A concurrence of wills. Voluntarily yielding the will to the proposition of another; acquiescence or compliance therewith. Twin Ports Oil Co. v. Pure Oil Co., D.C.Minn., 26 F.Supp. 366, 371. Agreement; the act or result of coming into harmony or accord. Glantz v. Gabel, 66 Mont. 134, 212 P. 858, 860.

Consent is an act of reason, accompanied with deliberation, the mind weighing as in a balance the good or evil on each side. 1 Story, Eq.Jur. § 222; Lervick v. White Top Cabs, La.App., 10 So.2d 67, 73. It means voluntary agreement by a person in the possession and exercise of sufficient mentality to make an intelligent choice to do something proposed by another. People v. Kangiesser, 44 Cal. App. 2d 345, 186 P. 2d 386, 389. It supposes a physical power to act, a moral power of acting, and a serious, determined, and free use of these powers. Fonblanque, Eq. b. 1, c. 2, s. 1; New Jersey Mfrs. Casualty Ins. Co., 148 A. 790, 791, 106 N.J.L. 238. Consent is implied in every agreement. It is an act unclouded by fraud, duress, or sometimes even mistake. Heine v. Wright, 76 Cal.App. 338, 244 P. 955, 956.

There is a difference between consenting and submitting. Every consent involves a submission; but a mere submission does not necessarily involve consent. 9 Car. & P. 722.

"Consent" is sometimes synonymous merely with "waiver." Dahlquist v. Denver & R. G. R. Co., 52 Utah, 438, 174 P. 833, 844. See, also, Seegmiller v. Day, C.C.A.Ill., 249 F. 177, 178; Toledo Fence & Post Co. v. Lyons, C.C.A.Ohio, 290 F. 637, 640. As used in the law of rape "consent" means consent of the will, and submission under the influence of fear or terror cannot amount to real consent. Hallmark v. State, 22 Okl. Cr. 422, 212 P. 322, 328. There must be an exercise of intelligence based on knowledge of its significance and moral quality and there must be a choice between resistance and consent. State v. Schwab, 109 Ohio St. 532, 143 N.E. 29, 31. And if woman resists to the point where further resistance would be useless or until her resistance is overcome by force or violence, submission thereafter is not "consent." People v. McIlvain, 130 P.2d 34, 34; 55 Cal. App.2d 322.

See Assent.

Consent decree. See Decree.

Consent judgment. See Judgment.

Express Consent. That directly given, either viva voce or in writing. It is positive, direct, unequivocal consent, requiring no inference or implication to supply its meaning. Pacific Nat. Agricultural Credit Corporation v. Hagerman, 40 N.M. 116, 55 P.2d 667, 670.

Express or Implied Consent. Under motor vehicle liability insurance law providing that policy should cover any person responsible for operation of insured vehicle with insured's express or implied consent, words "express or implied consent" primarily modify not the word "operation", but the word "responsible", and imply possession of vehicle with consent of owner and responsibility to him. Hurley v. Flanagan, 313 Mass. 567, 48 N.E.2d 621, 624.

Implied Consent. That manifested by signs, actions, or facts, or by inaction or silence, which raise a presumption that the consent has been CONSERVATOR. A guardian; protector; pre-en to execute any work, every power necessary enforcement of certain statutes. See Conservators or authorities. Things which follow, usually such incapable person.” Gen.St.Conn.1875, p. 346, § 1 incapable of managing his affairs, by the court of probate to carry it on is implied. 1 Karnes, Eq. 242.

CONSEQUENTS. In Scotch law. Implied pow- See Contempt.

CONSEQUENTIAL CONTEMPT. The ancient tion of justices of the peace.” 1 Bl.Comm. 351.

CONSERVATOR TRUCIS. Lat. An official ap- pointed under an English act of 1414 passed to prevent breaches of truces made, or of safe con-ducts granted, by the king. 2 Holdsw.Hist.E.L. 392; 4 Bla.Comm. 69.

CONSERVATORS OF RIVERS. Commissioners or trustees in whom the control of a certain river is vested, in England, by act of parliament.

CONSERVATORS OF THE PEACE. Officers au-thorized to preserve and maintain the public peace. In England, these officers were locally elected by the people until the reign of Edward III, when their appointment was vested in the king. Their duties were to prevent and arrest for breaches of the peace, but they had no power to arraign and try the offender until about 1360, when this authority was given to them by act of parliament, and “then they acquired the more honorable appel-lation of justices of the peace.” 1 Bl.Comm. 351.

Even after this time, however, many public officers were styled “conservators of the peace,” not as a distinct office but by virtue of the duties and authorities pertaining to their offices. In this sense the term may include the king himself, the lord chancellor, justices of the king’s bench, master of the rolls, coroners, sheriffs, constables, etc. 1 BI.Comm. 350. See Smith v. Abbott, 17 N.J.L. 358. In Texas, the constitution provides that county judges shall be conservators of the peace. Const.Tex. art. 4, § 15; Jones v. State, Tex.Cr.App., 65 S.W. 92. The Constitution of Delaware (1831) provides that: “The members of the senate and house of representatives, the chancellor, the judges, and the attorney-general shall, by virtue of their offices, be conservators of the peace throughout the state; and the treasurer, secretary, and prothonotaries, registers, recorders, sheriffs, and coroners, shall, by virtue of their offices, be conservators thereof within the counties respectively in which they reside.”

CONSERVE. To save from loss. U. S. v. Mam-moth Oil Co., D.C.Wyo., 5 F.2d 330, 351.

CONSIDER. To fix the mind on, with a view to careful examination; to examine; to inspect. Eastman Kodak Co. v. Richards, 204 N.Y.S. 246, 248, 123 Misc. 83. To deliberate about and ponder over. People v. Tru-Sport Pub. Co., 291 N.Y.S. 449, 457, 160 Misc. 628. To entertain or give heed to. Rodolf v. Board of Com’rs of Tulsa County, 122 Okl. 120, 251 P. 740, 741. See, also, Considered.

CONSIDERABLE. Worthy of consideration; re- quired to be observed. Gougar v. Buffalo Specialty Co., 26 Colo.App. 8, 141 P. 511, 514. A "considerable" number, as of persons, does not neces-sarily mean a very great or any particular number of persons; the term “considerable” being merely relative. People v. Kings County Iron Foundry, 209 N.Y. 207, 102 N. E. 598, 599.

CONSIDERATIO CURIAE. The judgment of the court.

CONSENT RULE. An entry of record by the de-fendant, confessing the lease, entry, and ouster by the plaintiff, in an action of ejectment. A super-seded instrument, in which a defendant in an ac-tion of ejectment specified for what purpose he intended to defend, and undertook to confess not only the fictitious lease, entry, and ouster, but that he was in possession. See Ad.Eject. 233.

CONSENTIBLE LINES. See Line.

CONSENTIENTES ET AGENTES PARI PCENA PLECTENTUR. They who consent to an act, and they who do it, shall be visited with equal punish- ment. 5 Coke 80.

CONSENTIRE MATRIMONIO NON POSSUNT INFRA [ANTE] ANNOS NU'BILES. Parties cannot consent to marriage within the years of mar-riage, [before the age of consent.] 5 Coke 80; 6 Coke 22.

CONSEQUENCE. The result following in natural sequence from an event which is adapted to pro-duce, or to aid in producing, such result;—the correlative of "cause." Board of Trustees of Fire-men’s Relief and Pension Fund for City of Tulsa v. Miller, 186 Okl. 586, 99 P.2d 146, 147.

This phrase has been used as equivalent to the words, "in the event of." In re Spalding’s Estate, 84 Cal.App. 371, 258 P. 154, 155.

CONSEQUENT NON EST CONSEQUENTIA. Bac.Max. The consequence of a consequence ex-ists not.

CONSEQUENTIAL DAMAGES. See Damages.

CONSEQUENTS. In Scotch law. Implied pow-ers or authorities. Things which follow, usually by implication of law. A commission being giv-en to execute any work, every power necessary to carry it on is implied. 1 Karnes, Eq. 242.

CONSERVATOR. A guardian; protector; pre- server.

“When any person having property shall be found to be incapable of managing his affairs, by the court of probate in the district in which he resides,  it shall appoint some person to be his conservator, who, upon giving a pro-bate bond, shall have the charge of the person and estate of such incapable person.” Gen.St.Conn. 1875, p. 346, § 1 (Gen.St.1930, § 4815) ; Hutchins v. Johnson, 12 Conn. 376, 30 Am. Dec. 622.

One whose business it is to attend to the en-forcement of certain statutes. See Conservators of the Peace, infra.

One whose duty requires him to prevent and arrest for breaches of the peace in his presence, but not to arraign

Contracts

The inducement to a contract. The cause, motive, price, or impelling influence which induces a contracting party to enter into a contract. The reason or material cause of a contract. 2 Bla. Comm. 443; Cassinelli v. Stacy, 238 Ky. 827, 38 S.W.2d 980, 983.

Consideration is not to be confounded with motive. Consideration means something which is of value in the eye of the law, moving from the plaintiff, either of benefit to the plaintiff or of detriment to the defendant. Patteson, J., in Langsd. Sel. Cas. Contr. 168; s. c. 2 Q.B. 851; Miller v. Bank of Holly Springs, 131 Miss. 55, 95 So. 129, 130, 31 A.L.R. 698. "Nothing is consideration that is not regarded as such by both parties." Schlecht v. Schlecht, 168 Minn. 168, 209 N.W. 883, 887. And "price" and "consideration," though sometimes the same, are not always identical. Oregon Home Builders v. Crowley, 87 Or. 517, 170 P. 718, 721.

The "inducement" for a contract is that which influences the act, while "consideration" means the parting with something by the one from whom it moves. E. F. Spears & Sons v. Winkle, 186 Ky. 585, 217 S.W. 691, 692.

An act or forbearance, or the promise thereof, which is offered by one party to an agreement, and accepted by the other as an inducement to that other's act or promise. Poll.Contr. 91.

Any benefit conferred, or agreed to be conferred, upon the promisor, by any other person, to which the promisor is not lawfully entitled, or any prejudice suffered, or agreed to be suffered, by such person, other than such as he is at the time of consent lawfully bound to suffer, as an inducement to the promisor. Hence doing only of what one is already under obligation to do is not "consideration" for a contract. Hogan v. Supreme Camp of the American Woodmen, 146 Fla. 413, 1 So.2d 256, 258.

Any act of the plaintiff (or the promisee) from which the defendant (the promisor) or a stranger derives a benefit or advantage, or any labor, detriment, J. inconvenience sustained by the plaintiff, however small, if such act is performed or inconvenience suffered by the plaintiff by the consent, express or implied, of the defendant. 3 Scott, 250.

A benefit to the promisor, or a loss or detriment to the promisee. Harris v. Johnson, 75 Wash. 291, 134 P. 1048, 1050; Fowler v. Smith, 24 Ohio App. 324, 156 N.E. 913, 914. Or benefit to a third party. Wells remote Land Co. v. City and County of Denver, 103 Colo. 416, 87 P.2d 1. But nothing is "consideration" that is not regarded as such by both parties. Michael v. Holland, 111 Ind. App. 34, 40 N.E.2d 362, 365.

Some sort, interest, gain, advantage, benefit, or profit to one party, usually the promisor, or some forbearance, detriment, prejudice, inconvenience, disadvantage, loss, or responsibility, or service given, suffered, or undertaken by the promise. Exum v. Lynch, 125 S.E. 15, 17, 188 N. C. 392; Furman University v. Waller, 117 S.E. 356, 358, 124 S. C. 68, 33 A.L.R. 613; Robinson v. Oliver, 156 N.S. 896, 898, 171 App. Div. 349; L.R. 10 Ex. 162; Train v. Gold, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 380; Bankers Trust Co. v. Economy Coal Co., 224 Iowa 36, 276 N.W. 16, 20.

Considerations are either executed or executory; express or implied; good or valuable. See definitions infra.

Adequate Consideration. See Adequate, Concurrent Consideration. One which arises at the same time or where the promises are simultaneous.

Continuing Consideration. One consisting in acts or performances which must necessarily extend over a considerable period of time.

Equitable or Moral Considerations. Consideration which are devoid of efficacy in point of strict law, but are founded upon a moral duty, and may be made the basis of an express promise.

Executed or Executory Considerations. The former are acts done or values given before or at the time of making the contract; the latter are promises to give or do something in future.

Express or Implied Considerations. The former are those which are specifically stated in a deed, contract, or other instrument; the latter are those inferred or supposed by the law from the acts or situation of the parties.

Express consideration is a consideration which is distinctly and specifically named in the written contract or in the oral agreement of the parties.

Failure of Consideration. See Failure of Consideration.

Fair and Valuable Consideration. See Fair and Valuable Consideration.

Fair Consideration, See Fair Consideration.

Good Consideration. Such as is founded on natural duty and affection, or on a strong moral obligation. Chit.Cont. 7. A consideration for love and affection entertained by and for one within degree recognized by law. Gay v. Fricks, 211 Ala. 119, 99 So. 846, 847. See, also, Berry v. Berry, 83 W.Va. 763, 99 S.E. 79.

The term is sometimes used in the sense of a consideration valid in point of law; and it then includes a valuable or sufficient as well as a meritorious consideration. Hodgson v. Butts, 3 Cra. (U.S.) 140, 2 L. Ed. 391; Lang v. Johnson, 24 N.H. 302; Ambl. 598. Generally, however, good is used in antithesis to valuable consideration (q. v.).

Gratuitous Consideration. One which is not founded upon any such loss, injury, or inconvenience to the party to whom it moves as to make it valid in law.

Illegal Consideration. An act which if done, or a promise which if enforced, would be prejudicial to the public interest. Harriman, Cont. 101.

Implied Considerations. See Express or Implied Considerations, supra.

Impossible Consideration. One which cannot be performed.

Inadequate Consideration. See that title.

Legal Consideration. One recognized or permitted by the law as valid and lawful; as distinguished from such as are illegal or immoral. The term is also sometimes used as equivalent to "good" or "sufficient" consideration. See Sampson v. Swift, 11 Vt. 315; Albert Lea College v. Brown, 88 Minn. 524, 93 N.W. 672, 60 L.R.A. 870.

Meritorious Consideration. See Good Consideration.

Moral Considerations. See Equitable or Moral Considerations, supra.

Nominal Consideration. One bearing no relation to the real value of the contract or article, as where a parcel of land is described in a deed as being sold for "one dollar," no actual consideration passing, or the real consideration being concealed. This term is also sometimes used as descriptive of an inflated or exaggerated value placed upon property for the purpose of an exchange. Boyd v. Watson, 101 Iowa 214, 70 N.W. 123; Emmi v. Patane, 220 N.Y.S. 495, 498, 128 Misc. 901.

Past Consideration. An act done before the contract is made, which is ordinarily by itself no consideration for a promise. Anson, Cont. 82; Witt v. Wilson, Tex.Civ.App., 160 S.W. 309, 310.

As to time, considerations may be of the past, present, or future. Those which are present or future will support a contract not void for other reasons. Story, Contr. 71.

Pecuniary Consideration. A consideration for an act or forbearance which consists either in money presently passing or in money to be paid in the future, including a promise to pay a debt in full which otherwise would be released or diminished by bankruptcy or insolvency proceedings. See Phelps v. Thomas, 6 Gray (Mass.) 328; In re Ekings, D.C.N.J., 6 F. 170.

Sufficient Consideration. One deemed by the law of sufficient value to support an ordinary contract between parties, or one sufficient to support the particular transaction. Golson v. Dunlap, 73 Cal. 157, 14 P. 576.

Valuable Consideration. See Consideration.

Want of Consideration. See Want of Consideration.

CONSIDERATUM EST PER CURIAM. (It is considered by the court.) The formal and ordinary commencement of a judgment. Baker v. State, 3 Ark. 491.

CONSIDERED. Deemed; determined; adjudged; reasonably regarded. State v. District Court of Eighth Judicial Dist. in and for Cascade County, 64 Mont. 181, 208 P. 952, 955. See Consider.

Evidence may be said to have been "considered" when it has been reviewed by a court to determine whether any probative force should be given it. Taylor v. Gossett, Tex. Civ.App., 269 S.W. 230, 233.

CONSIGN. In the civil law. To deposit in the custody of a third person a thing belonging to the debtor, for the benefit of the creditor, under the authority of a court of justice. Poth.Obl. pt. 3, c. 1, art. 8.

In Commercial Law. To deliver goods to a carrier to be transmitted to a designated factor or agent. Powell v. Wallace, 44 Kan. 656, 25 P. 42; Ide Mfg. Co. v. Sager Mfg. Co., 82 Ill.App. 685. To deliver or transfer as a charge or trust; to commit, intrust, give in trust; to transfer from oneself to the care of another; to send or transmit goods to a merchant, factor, or agent for sale; to deposit with another to be sold, disposed of, or called for. Edwards v. Baldwin Piano Co., 79 Fla. 143, 83 So. 915, 918.

CONSIGNATION. In Scotch law. The payment of money into the hands of a third party, when the creditor refuses to accept of it. The person to whom the money is given is termed the "consignatory." Bell.

In French law. A deposit which a debtor makes of the thing that he owes into the hands of a third person, and under the authority of a court of justice. 1 Poth.Obl. 536; Weld v. Hadley, 1 N. H. 304.

CONSIGNEE. In mercantile law. One to whom a consignment is made. The person to whom goods are shipped for sale. Lyon v. Alvord, 18 Conn. 480; Comm'n v. Harris, 168 Pa. 619, 32 A. 92. One to whom goods are consigned, shipped, or otherwise transmitted. State v. Chadbourne, 132 Me. 5, 164 A. 630, 631. The one to whom the carrier may lawfully make delivery in accordance with its contract of carriage. Great Northern Pac. S. Co. v. Rainier Brewing Co., C.C.A.Wash., 255 F. 762, 764; One to whom merchandise has been delivered. International Trust Co. v. Webster Nat. Bank, 258 Mass. 17, 154 N.E. 330, 332, 49 A. L.R. 267; Under a statute, the person who, under circumstances in which he might be entitled to the delivery of the goods, represents that he is so entitled, tenders a bond in the statutory form, and requests delivery. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Bankers' Surety Co., 115 Ark. 58, 172 S.W. 266, 268.

CONSIGNMENT. The act or process of consigning goods; the transportation of goods consigned; an article or collection of goods sent to a factor; goods or property sent, by the aid of a common carrier, from one person in one place to another person in another place; something consigned and shipped. See Consign. In re Taylor, D.C.Mich., 46 F.2d 326, 328.

Feature which distinguishes "conditional sale" from "consignment" is that in the former the purchaser undertakes an absolute obligation to pay for the goods, whereas the latter is nothing more than a bailment for sale. In re Sachs, D.C.Md., 31 F.2d 799, 800.

In stockyard parlance, all the livestock of one species delivered in the name of one person to one market agency to be offered for sale during the trading hours of one day. Acker v. U. S., D.C.111., 12 F.Supp. 776, 780. Mutual Transfer Corporation of Galax v. Commonwealth, 172 Va. 622, 1 S.E.2d 477, 479.

CONSIGNOR. One who sends or makes a consignment; a shipper of goods.

CONSILIA MULTORUM QUÆRUNTUR IN MAGNIS. 4 Inst. 1. The counsels of many are required in great things.
CONSILIARIUS. In the civil law. A counsellor, as distinguished from a pleader or advocate. An assistant judge. One who participates in, the decisions. Du Cange.

CONSILIUUM. A day appointed to hear the counsel of both parties. A case set down for argument.

It is commonly used for the day appointed for the argument of a demurrer, or errors assigned. 1 Tidd, Pr. 438; 2 Tidd, Pr. 684, 1122; 1 Sel.Pr. 336; 1 Arch.Pr. 191, 246.

CONSIMILI CASU. In practice. A writ of entry, or of this statute; but this particular writ was known empirically by the title here defined. The writ is now practically obsolete. See 3 Bla.Comm. 51.

CONSIST. To stand together, to be composed of one mass or body, as to consolidate the forces of an army, or various funds. In parliamentary usage, to consolidate two bills is to unite them into one. In law, to consolidate benefices is to combine them into one. The term means something more than to rearrange or redivide. Fairview v. Durland, 45 Iowa 56.

To make solid or firm; to unite, compress, or pack together and form into a more compact mass, body, or system. Marfield v. Cincinnati, D. & T. Traction Co., 111 Ohio St. 139, 144 N.E. 689, 696, 40 A.L.R. 357. To cause to become united and extinguished in a superior right or estate by both becoming vested in the same person. Swaim v. Smith, 174 Tenn. 688, 130 S.W.2d 116, 120.

CONSOLIDATE. In a general sense, to unite into one mass or body, as to consolidate the forces of an army, or various funds. This compilation exercised a considerable influence in the formation of European maritime law.

CONSOLIDATE DEL MARE. The name of a code of sea-laws, said to have been compiled by order of the kings of Aragon (or, according to other authorities, at Pisa or Barcelona) in the fourteenth century, which comprised the maritime ordinances of the Roman emperors, of France and Spain, and of the Italian commercial powers. This compilation, together with the various orders which had previously been promulgated from time to time, CONSOLIDATION. Act of consolidating, or the status of being consolidated. O’Malley v. Wilson, 182 Ga. 97, 185 S.E. 109, 114.

In the civil law. The union of the usufruct with the estate out of which it issues, in the same person; which happens when the usufructuary acquires the estate, or vice versa. In either case the usufruct is extinct. Lec.El.Dr.Rom. 424.

In ecclesiastical law. The union of two or more benefices in one. Cowell.

In practice. The union of two or more actions, as in the same declaration, or for the purpose of CONSOCIATIO. Lat. An association, fellowship, or partnership. Applied by some of the older writers to a corporation, and even to a nation considered as a body politic. Thomas v. Dakin, 22 Wend. (N.Y.) 104.

CONSOLATO DEL MARE. The name of a code of sea-laws, said to have been compiled by order of the kings of Aragon (or, according to other authorities, at Pisa or Barcelona) in the fourteenth century, which comprised the maritime ordinances of the Roman emperors, of France and Spain, and of the Italian commercial powers. This compilation exercised a considerable influence in the formation of European maritime law.

In law, to consolidate benefices is to combine them into one. The term means something more than to rearrange or redivide. Fairview v. Durland, 45 Iowa 56.

To make solid or firm; to unite, compress, or pack together and form into a more compact mass, body, or system. Marfield v. Cincinnati, D. & T. Traction Co., 111 Ohio St. 139, 144 N.E. 689, 696, 40 A.L.R. 357. To cause to become united and extinguished in a superior right or estate by both becoming vested in the same person. Swaim v. Smith, 174 Tenn. 688, 130 S.W.2d 116, 120.

CONSOLIDATED FUND. In England. (Usually abbreviated to Consols.) A fund for the payment of the public debt.

CONSOLIDATED LAWS OR STATUTES. A collection or compilation into one statute or one code or volume of all the laws of the state in general, or of those relating to a particular subject; nearly the same as “compiled laws” or “compiled statutes.” See Compilation. And see Ellis v. Parsell, 100 Mich. 170, 58 N.W. 839.

CONSOLIDATED ORDERS. The orders regulating the practice of the English court of chancery, which were issued, in 1860, in substitution for the various orders which had previously been promulgated from time to time.

CONSOLIDATION. Act of consolidating, or the status of being consolidated. O’Malley v. Wilson, 182 Ga. 97, 185 S.E. 109, 114.

In the civil law. The union of the usufruct with the estate out of which it issues, in the same person; which happens when the usufructuary acquires the estate, or vice versa. In either case the usufruct is extinct. Lec.El.Dr.Rom. 424.

In ecclesiastical law. The union of two or more benefices in one. Cowell.

In practice. The union of two or more actions, as in the same declaration, or for the purpose of trial or appellate review. See Consolidation of Actions.

In Scotch law. The junction of the property and superiority of an estate, where they have been disjoined. Bell.

Consolidation of actions. The act or process of uniting several actions into one trial and judgment, by order of a court, where all the actions are between the same parties, pending in the same court, and involving substantially the same subject-matter, issues and defenses; or the court may order that one of the actions be tried, and the others decided without trial according to the judgment in the one selected. 249 N.Y.S. 33, 37, 136 Misc. 564; National Union Fire Ins. Co. v. Chesapeake and O. Ry. Co., D.C.Ky., 4 F.Supp. 25, 30.

It means the merging of two or more actions into one so that they lose their separate identity, while in trial of “several actions together” each retains its separate character and requires the entry of a separate judgment. Rambow v. Meuser, 268 Minn. 299, 274 N.W. 172; Reeves v. Philadelphia Gas Works Co., 107 Pa.Super. 422, 164 A. 132, 134, 107.

CONSOLIDATION OF BENEFICES. The act or process of uniting two or more of them into one.

CONSOLIDATIONS OF CORPORATIONS. Takes place when two or more corporations are extinguished, and by the same process a new one is created, taking over the assets and assuming the liabilities of those passing out of existence. A uniting of two or more corporations into a single new corporation having the combined capital, franchises, and powers of all its constituents. Alabama Power Co. v. McNinch, 68 App.D.C. 132, 94 F.2d 601, 611, 612. Freeman v. Hiznay, 349 Pa. 89, 36 A.2d 509; Murphy v. Niehus, 50 Ohio App. 299, 198 N.E. 197, 200.

Merger distinguished. In a “merger,” one corporation absorbs the other and remains in existence while the other is dissolved, and in a “consolidation” a new corporation is created and the consolidating corporations are extinguished. Von Weise v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A., 69 F.2d 439, 442; Alabama Power Co. v. McNinch, 94 F.2d 601, 610, 611, 612, 68 App.D.C. 132. See, also, Merger.

Consolidation rule. In practice. A rule or order of court requiring a plaintiff who has instituted separate suits upon several claims against the same defendant, to consolidate them in one action, where that can be done consistently with the rules of pleading. Brown v. Scott, 1 Dall. (Pa.) 147, 1 L.Ed. 74; Groff v. Musser, 3 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 264; 2 Archb.Pr. 180. The Federal courts are authorized to consolidate actions involving a common question of law or fact. Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 42, 28 U.S.C.A.

CONSOLS. An abbreviation of the expression “consolidated annuities,” and used in modern times as a name of various funds united in one for the payment of the British national debt. Also, a name given to certain issues of bonds of the state of South Carolina. Whaley v. Gaillard, 21 S.C. 568. See Consolidated Fund.

CONSONANT STATEMENT. A prior declaration of a witness whose testimony has been attacked and whose credibility stands impeached, which the court will allow to be proved by the person to whom the declaration was made in order to support the credibility of the witness and which but for the existence of such impeachment would ordinarily be excluded as hearsay. Commonwealth v. White, 16 A.2d 407, 409, 340 Pa. 139.

CONSORTIO MALORUM ME QUOQUE MALUM. FACIT, Moore, 817. The company of wicked men makes me also wicked.

The term includes the exclusive right to the services of the spouse, and to his or her society, companionship, and conjugal affection. Smith v. Nicholas Bldg. Co., 93 Ohio St. 101, 112 N.E. 204.

In its original application the term was not confined to society, companionship, and conjugal affection, but included service as a prominent, if not the predominant, factor in the service resulting in the performance of labor or the earning of wages as the service which contributed aid and assistance in all the relations of domestic life. Hinnant v. Tide Water Power Co., 189 N.C. 120, 126 S.E. 307, 309, 37 A.L.R. 889.

In the civil law. A union of fortunes; a lawful Roman marriage. The joining of several persons as parties to one action.

In old English law, the term signified company or society, and in the language of pleading, as in the phrase per quod consortium amisit, it has substantially the same meaning, viz., the companionship or society of a wife. 3 Bla.Comm. 140; Kelley v. Railroad Co., 168 Mass. 308, 46 N.E. 1063, 227 Wis. 435, 278 N.W. 868, 869.

CARIOA. The company of wicked men makes me also wicked.

The term includes the exclusive right to the services of the spouse, and to his or her society, companionship, and conjugal affection. Smith v. Nicholas Bldg. Co., 93 Ohio St. 101, 112 N.E. 204.

In its original application the term was not confined to society, companionship, and conjugal affection, but included service as a prominent, if not the predominant, factor in the service resulting in the performance of labor or the earning of wages as the service which contributed aid and assistance in all the relations of domestic life. Hinnant v. Tide Water Power Co., 189 N.C. 120, 126 S.E. 307, 309, 37 A.L.R. 889.

In the civil law. A union of fortunes; a lawful Roman marriage. The joining of several persons as parties to one action.

In old English law, the term signified company or society, and in the language of pleading, as in the phrase per quod consortium amisit, it has substantially the same meaning, viz., the companionship or society of a wife. 3 Bla.Comm. 140; Kelley v. CARIOA. The company of wicked men makes me also wicked.
A combination, or an agreement between two or more persons, for accomplishing an unlawful end or a lawful end by unlawful means. 4 B. & Ad. 345; Cumberland Telephone & Telegraph Co. v. Stevens, D.C.Miss., 274 F. 745, 746; Lauff v. E. G. Shinner & Co., C.C.A.Wis., 82 F.2d 68, 72; 70 Cal.App.2d 495, 464. A partnership in criminal purposes. Marino v. United States, C.C.A.Cal., 91 F.2d 691, 113 A.L.R. 975. The essence of "conspiracy" is an agreement, together with an overt act, to do an unlawful act, or to do a lawful act in an unlawful manner. Cooper v. O'Connor, 99 F.2d 135, 142, 69 App.D.C. 100, 118 A.L.R. 1440. Mere knowledge, acquiescence, attempt, or part of one to perpetrate illegal act is insufficient. People v. Link, 365 Ill. 266, 6 N.E.2d 201. A conspiracy may be a continuing one; actors may drop out, and others drop in; the details of operation may change from time to time; the members need not know each other or the part played by others; a member need not know all the details of the plan or the operations; he must, however, know the purpose of the conspiracy and agree to become a party to a plan to effectuate that purpose. Craig v. U. S., C.C.A.Cal., 81 F.2d 816, 822. A consultation or agreement between two or more persons, either falsely to accuse another of a crime punishable by law; or wrongfully to injure or prejudice a third person, or any body of men, in any manner; or to commit any offense punishable by law; or to do any act with intent to prevent the course of justice; or to effect a legal purpose with a corrupt intent, or by improper means. Hawk. P.C. c. 72; 2 Archb.Crim.P1. 390, adding also combinations by journeymen to raise wages. State v. Murphy, 6 Ala. 765, 41 Am. Dec. 79.

Civil and Criminal Conspiracies

The term "civil" is used to designate a conspiracy which will furnish ground for a civil action, as where, in carrying out the design of the conspirators, overt acts are done causing legal damage, the person injured has a right of action. It is said that the gist of civil conspiracy is the injury or damage. While criminal conspiracy does not require such overt acts, yet, so far as the rights and remedies are concerned, all criminal conspiracies are embraced within the civil conspiracies. Martha Mills v. Moseley, 50 Ga.App. 536, 179 S.E. 159. Accurately speaking, there is no such thing as a civil action for conspiracy. The better view is that the damage sustained, and not the conspiracy is the gist of the action. The combination may be of no consequence except as bearing upon rules of evidence or the persons liable. Dahlquist v. Mattson, 40 Idaho, 378, 233 P. 883, 885.

The essence of a "civil conspiracy" is a concert or combination to defraud or cause other injury to person or property, which results in damage to the person or property of plaintiff. Conner v. Bryce, Sup., 170 N.Y.S. 94, 95.

CONSPIRATORES. Persons guilty of a conspiracy. State v. Collins, 88 Mont. 514, 294 P. 957, 961, 73 A.L.R. 861. Where two or more persons enter on a common enterprise and commit an offense presumed from the facts to have been committed by the conspirators, the defendant is not entitled to be discharged on the ground that each of them shall aid the other falsely and maliciously to indict persons; or falsely to move and maintain pleas, etc. 33 Edw. 1 St. 2. Besides these, there are conspirators in treasonable purposes; as for plotting against the government. Wharton.

CONSPIRE. To engage in conspiracy. Wright v. United States, C.C.A.La., 48 C.C.A. 37, 108 F. 805, 809. It carries with it the idea of agreement, concurrence and combination, and hence is inapplicable to a single person or thing, and one cannot agree or conspire with another, who does not agree or conspire with him. Horton v. Johnson, 192 Ga. 338, 15 S.E.2d 605, 615.

CONSTALLABLE. In American law. An officer of a municipal corporation (usually elected) whose duties are similar to those of the sheriff, though his powers are less and his jurisdiction smaller. He is to preserve the public peace, execute the process of magistrates' courts, and of some other tribunals, serve writs, attend the sessions of the criminal courts, have the custody of juries, and discharge other functions sometimes assigned to him by the local law or by statute. Allor v. Wayne County, 43 Mich. 76, 4 N.W. 492.

In English law. A public civil officer, whose proper and general duty is to keep the peace within his district, though he is frequently charged with additional duties. 1 Bl. Comm. 356. There are "high," "petty," and "special" constables. See the definitions, infra.

In Medieval law. A high functionary under the French and English kings, the dignity and importance of whose office was second only to that of the monarch. He was in general the leader of the royal armies, and had cognizance of all matters pertaining to war and arms, exercising both civil and military jurisdiction. He was also charged with the conservation of the peace of the nation. Thus there was a "Constable of France" and a "Lord High Constable of England." Rich v. Industrial Commission, 80 Utah 511, 15 P.2d 641, 644.

Constable of a castle. In English law. An officer having charge of a castle; a warden, or keeper; otherwise called a "castellan." Stat. Westm. 1, c. 7 (3 Edw. 1.) ; Spelman, Gloss.

Constable of Scotland. An officer who was formerly entitled to command all the king's armies in the absence of the king, and to take cognizance of all crimes committed within four miles of the king's person or of parliament, the privy council, or any general convention of the states of the kingdom. The office was hereditary in the family of Errol, and was abolished by the 20 Geo. III, c. 43. Bell; Ersk. Inst. 1, 3, 37.

Constable of the exchequer. An officer mentioned in Fleta, lib. 2, c. 31, and in 51 Hen. III, stat. 5, cited by Cowell.

High constables. In England, officers appointed in every hundred or franchise, whose proper duty seems to be to keep the king's peace within their respective hundreds. 1 Bl.Comm. 356; 3 Steph. Comm. 47; Coke, 4th Inst. 267.

High constable of England, lord. His office has been disused (except only upon great and solemn occasions, as the coronation, or the like) since the attainder of Stafford, Duke of Buckingham, in the reign of Henry VII.

Petty constables. Inferior officers in every town and parish, subordinate to the high constable of the hundred, whose principal duty is the preservation of the peace, though they also have other particular duties assigned to them by act of parliament, particularly the service of the summonses and the execution of the warrants of justices of the peace. 1 Bl.Comm. 356; 3 Steph. Comm. 47, 48.

Special constables. Persons appointed (with or without their consent) by the magistrates to execute warrants on particular occasions, as in the case of riots, etc.

CONSTABLEWICK. In English law. The territorial jurisdiction of a constable; as bailiwick is of a bailiff or sheriff. 5 Nev. & M. 261.

CONSTABULARIUS. An officer of horse; an officer having charge of foot or horse; a naval commander; an officer having charge of military affairs generally. Spelman.

In England his power was early diminished and restricted to those duties which related to the preservation of the king's peace. The office is now abolished in England, except as a matter of ceremony, and in France. Guyot, Rip. Univ.; Cowell.

CONSTANTLY. In a constant manner; uniformly; continuously. Pfisterer v. Key, 218 Ind. 521, 33 N.E.2d 330, 335.

An instruction that a train crew knew that a railroad right of way had been "constantly," frequently, and regularly used by a considerable number of persons at a particular hour of the day was not subject to the criticism that the word "constantly" imported an uninterrupted and continuous presence of such persons on the track, so that at no moment of time it would be vacant of pedestrians. Grauer v. Alabama Great Southern R. Co., 209 Ala. 568, 96 So. 915, 919.

CONSTAT. It is clear or evident; it appears; it is certain; there is no doubt. Non constat, it does not appear.

A certificate which the clerk of the pipe and auditors of the exchequer made, at the request of any person who intended to plead or move in that court, for the discharge of anything. The effect of it was the certifying what appears (constat) upon record, touching the matter in question. Wharton.

An exemplification under the great seal of the enrolment of letters patent. Co. Litt. 225.
CONSTITUTION. In American law. The written instrument agreed upon by the people of the Union or of a particular state, as the absolute rule of action and decision for all departments and officers of the government in respect to all the points covered by it, which must control until it shall be changed by the authority which established it, and in opposition to which any act or ordi-

CONSTITUTIONAL OFFICER. One whose tenure and term of office are fixed and defined by the constitution, as distinguished from the incumbents of offices created by the legislature. Foster v. Jones, 79 Va. 642, 52 Am.Rep. 637.
CONSTRUCT

CONSTRUCTIO LEGIS NON FACIT INJURIAM. The construction of the law (a construction made by the law) works no injury. Co. Litt. 183; Broom, Max. 603. The law will make such a construction of an instrument as not to injure a party.

CONSTRUCTION. The process, or the art, of determining the sense, real meaning, or proper explanation of obscure or ambiguous terms or provisions in a statute, written instrument, or oral agreement, or the application of such subject to the case in question, by reasoning in the light derived from extraneous connected circumstances or laws or writings bearing upon the same or a connected matter, or by seeking and applying the probable aim and purpose of the provision. Koy v. Schneider, 110 Tex. 369, 221 S.W. 880, 884.

As applied to statutes, constitutions, contracts, etc., the term necessarily presupposes doubt, obscurity, or ambiguity. Cohn-Hall-Marx Co. v. Vansodall, 25 Ohio App. 360, 157 N.E. 908, 909.

Drawing conclusions respecting subjects that lie beyond the direct expression of the term. Lieber, Leg. & Pol. Herm. 20; Roberts v. Portland Water Dist., 124 Me. 63, 126 A. 162, 163.

This term is properly distinguished from interpretation, although the two are often used synonymously. In strictness, interpretation is limited to construing the written text, while construction goes beyond and may call in the aid of extrinsic considerations, as above indicated.

The process of bringing together and correlating a number of independent entities, so as to form a definite entity. The Dredge A, D.C.N.C., 217 F. 617, 631.

The creation of something new, as distinguished from the repair or improvement of something already existing. Cabell v. City of Portland, 153 Or. 528, 57 P.2d 1292, 1297. The act of fitting an object for use or occupation in the usual way, and for some distinct purpose. Paterson N. & R. R. Co. v. City of Paterson, 81 N.J.Eq. 124, 86 A. 68, 69. See Construct.
CONSTRUCTIVE ASSENT. An assent or consent imputed to a party from a construction or interpretation of his conduct; as distinguished from one which he actually expresses.

CONSTRUCTIVE AUTHORITY. Authority inferred or assumed to have been given because of the grant of some other antecedent authority. Middleton v. Parke, 3 App.D.C. 160.

CONSTRUCTIVE BREAKING INTO A HOUSE. A breaking made out by construction of law. As where a burglar gains an entry into a house by threats, fraud, or conspiracy. 2 Russ. Crimes, 9, 10; Hawkins v. Commonwealth, 284 Ky. 33, 143 S.W.2d 853, 854.

CONSTRUCTIVE CRIME. Where, by a strained construction of a penal statute, it is made to include an act not otherwise punishable, it is said to be a "constructive crime," that is, one built up by the court with the aid of inference and implication. Ex parte McNulty, 77 Cal. 164, 19 P. 237, 11 Am.St.Rep. 257.

CONSTRUCTIVE EVICTION. As the term is used with reference to breach of the covenants of warranty and of quiet enjoyment, it means the inability of the purchaser to obtain possession by reason of a paramount outstanding title. Fritz v. Pusey, 31 Minn. 368, 18 N.W. 94.

With reference to the relation of landlord and tenant, there is a "constructive eviction" when the former, without intent to oust the latter, does some act which deprives the tenant of the beneficial enjoyment of the demised premises or materially impairs such enjoyment. Santrizos v. Public Drug Co., 143 Minn. 222, 173 N.W. 563, 564. Any disturbance of the tenant's possession by the landlord whereby the premises are rendered unfit or unsuitable for occupancy in whole or in substantial part for the purposes for which they were leased amounts to a constructive eviction, if the tenant so elects and surrenders his possession. Murry v. Merchants' Southwest Transfer & Storage Co., 98 Okl. 270, 225 P. 547, 549. There must be injurious interference with tenant's possession, substantial deprivation of tenant's beneficial use of premises, and material impairment of tenant's beneficial enjoyment of premises, so that he is compelled to vacate. Ben Hur Holding Corporation v. Fox, 263 N.Y.S. 605, 147 Misc. 300.

CONSTRUCTIVE FORCE. This has been said to be an acquiescence to an act obtained through duress or fear of personal violence. Shepherd v. State, 135 Ala. 9, 12, 33 So. 266.

With regard to rape, the force necessary to constitute the offense need not be actual, but may be constructive or implied. 52 C.J. p. 1018.

As regards robbery, a taking by force is the gist of the crime, but the force may be either actual or constructive. 54 C.J. p. 1016. "'Constructive force' is anything which produces fear sufficient to suspend the power of resistance and prevent the free exercise of the will." Montsdoca v. State, 84 Fla. 82, 93 So. 157, 159, 27 A.L.R. 1291.

CONSTRUCTIVE LOSS. One resulting from such injuries to the property, without its destruction, as render it valueless to the assured or prevent its restoration to the original condition except at a cost exceeding its value.

CONSTRUCTIVE MORTGAGE. A deed absolute on its face but intended as a mortgage is sometimes referred to as a "constructive mortgage," or, more commonly perhaps, as an "equitable mortgage." See Mortgage.

CONSTRUCTIVE TAKING. A phrase used in the law to characterize an act not amounting to an actual appropriation of chattels, but which shows an intention to convert them to his use; as if a person intrusted with the possession of goods deals with them contrary to the orders of the owner.

CONSTRUCTIVE VACANCY IN PUBLIC OFFICE. When the incumbent has no legal right or claim to continue in office, but can be legally replaced by another functionary. State ex rel. Satterthwaite v. Stover, 5 W.W.Harr. 85, 159 A. 239, 241.

CONSTRUCTIVE WILLFULNESS. Intentional disregard of a known duty necessary to the safety of a person, and an entire absence of care for the life, the person, or the property of others, such as exhibits a conscious indifference to consequences. Collins v. Missouri-Illinois R. Co., 233 Ill. App. 545, 551; Hughes v. Medendorp, 294 Ill.App. 424, 13 N.E.2d 1015, 1018.

CONSTRUE. To put together; to arrange or marshal the words of an instrument. To ascertain the meaning of language by a process of arrangement and inference. See Construction.

CONSUETUDINARIUS. In ecclesiastical law. A ritual or book, containing the rites and forms of divine offices or the customs of abbeys and monasteries.

CONSUETUDINARIUS LAW. Customary law. Law derived by oral tradition from a remote antiquity. Bell.

CONSUETUDINES. In old English law. Customs. Thus, consuetudines et assissa forestae, the customs and assise of the forest.

CONSUETUDINES FEUDORUM. (Lat. feudal customs.) A compilation of the law of feuds or fiefs in Lombardy, made A.D. 1170. It is of great authority.

CONSUETUDINIBUS ET SERVICIIS. In old English law. A writ of right close, which lay against a tenant who deforced his lord of the rent or service due to him. Reg. Orig. 159; Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 151.
CONSUETUDO. Lat. A custom; an established usage or practice. Co. Litt. 58, 58b; Tolls; duties; taxes.

CONSUETUDO ANGLICANA. The custom of England; the ancient common law, as distinguished from lex, the Roman or civil law.

CONSUETUDO CONTRA RATIONEM INTRODUCTA POTIUS USURPATIO QUAM CONSUETUDO APPELLARI DEBET. A custom introduced against reason ought rather to be called a "usurpation" than a 'custom.' Co. Litt. 113.

CONSUETUDO CURIAE. The custom or practice of a court. Hardr. 141.

CONSUETUDO DEBET ESSE CERTA; NAM INCERTA PRO NULLA HABETUR. Da 33. A custom should be certain; for an uncertain custom is considered null.

CONSUETUDO EST ALTERA LEX. Custom is another law. 4 Coke, 21.

CONSUETUDO EST OPTIMUS INTERPRES LEGUM. 2 Inst. 18. Custom is the best expounder of the laws.

CONSUETUDO ET COMMUNIS ASSUETUDO VINCIT LEGEM, SI SIT SPECIALIS; ET INTERPRETATUR LEGEM SCRIPTAM, SI LEX SIT GENERALIS. Jenk. Cent. 274. Custom and common usage overcomes the unwritten law, if it be special; and interprets the written law, if the law be general.

CONSUETUDO EX CERTA CAUSA RATIONEBILI USITATA PRIVAT COMMUNEM LEGEM. A custom, grounded on a certain and reasonable cause, supersedes the common law. Litt. § 169; Co. Litt. 113; Broom, Max. 919.

CONSUETUDO, LICET SIT MAGNIE AUCTORITATIS, NUNQUAM TAMEN, PRZEJUDICAT MANIFESTIE VERITATI. A custom, though it be of great authority, should never prejudice manifest truth. 4 Coke, 18.

CONSUL.

International Law

An officer of a commercial character, appointed by the different states to watch over the mercantile interests of the appointing state and of its subjects in foreign countries. There are usually a number of consuls in every maritime country, and they are usually subject to a chief consul, who is called a "consul general." Schunior v. Russell, 18 S.W. 484, 83 Tex. 83.

CONSULAR COURTS. Courts held by the consuls of one country, within the territory of another, under authority given by treaty, for the settlement of civil cases. In some instances they have also a criminal jurisdiction, but in this respect are subject to review by the courts of the home government. See Rev.St. U.S. § 4083 (22 U.S.C.A. § 141.)

CONSULTA ECCLESIA. In ecclesiastical law. A church full or provided for. Cowell.

CONSULTARY RESPONSE. The opinion of a court of law on a special case.
CONSULTATION. A writ whereby a cause which has been wrongfully removed by prohibition out of an ecclesiastical court to a temporal court is returned to the ecclesiastical court. (Phillim. Ecc. Law, 1439. Deliberation of persons on some subject. State v. District Court of Third Judicial Dist. in and for Powell County, 85 Mont. 215, 278 P. 122, 125.

A conference between the counsel engaged in a case, to discuss its questions or arrange the method of conducting it.

In French law. The opinion of counsel upon a point of law submitted to them.

CONSULTO. Lat. In the civil law. Designedly; intentionally. Dig. 28, 41.

CONSUMER. One who uses economic goods and so diminishes or destroys their utilities; opposed to producer. Ex parte Mehman, 127 Tex.Cr.R. 257, 75 S.W.2d 689, 690.

CONSUMMATE, adj. Completed; as distinguished from initiate, or that which is merely begun. The husband of a woman seised of an estate of inheritance becomes, by the birth of a child, tenant by the curtesy initiate, and may do many acts to charge the lands, but his estate is not consummate till the death of the wife. 2 Bl. Comm. 126, 128; Co. Litt. 30a.

CONSUMMATE. v. To finish by completing what was intended; bring or carry to utmost point or degree; carry or bring to completion; finish; perfect; fulfill; achieve. American Mercantile Corporation v. Spielberg, C.C.A.N.Y., 262 F. 492, 496; Purcell v. Firth, 175 Cal. 746, 167 P. 379, 380; Oregon Home Builders v. Montgomery Inv. Co., 94 Or. 349, 184 P. 487, 492; Dahlinger v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A., 51 F.2d 662, 663.

CONSUMMATE LIEN. A term which may be used to describe the lien of a judgment when a mortgage for a new trial has been denied (the lien having theretofore been merely inchoate). Sterling v. Parker-Washington Co., 185 Mo.App. 192, 170 S.W. 1156, 1159.

CONSUMMATION. The completion of a thing; the completion of a marriage between two affianced persons by cohabitation. Sharon v. Sharon, 79 Cal. 633, 22 P. 26.

CONTANGO. A double bargain, consisting of a sale for cash of stock previously bought of which the broker does not wish to carry, and a repurchase for the re-settlement two weeks ahead of the same stock at the same price as at the sale plus interest accrued up to the date of that settlement. The rate of interest is called a "contango" and contango days are the two days during the settlement when these arrangements are in effect.

CONTEMNER. One who has committed contempt of court. Wyatt v. People, 17 Colo. 252, 28 P. 961.

CONTEMPLATE. To view or consider with continued attention; to regard thoughtfully; to have in view as contingent or probable as an end or intention. Wright v. Fuel Oil Co., Mo., 342 Mo. 173, 114 S.W.2d 959, 962. To ponder, to study, to plan, to meditate, to reflect. In re Thompson's Estate, 72 Utah, 17, 269 P. 103, 115.

CONTEMPLATION. The act of the mind in considering with attention. Continued attention of the mind to a particular subject. Consideration of an act or series of acts with the intention of doing or adopting them. The consideration of an event or state of facts with the expectation that it will transpire.

CONTEMPORARY BANKRUPTCY. Contemplation of the breaking up of one's business or an inability to continue it; knowledge of, and action with reference to, a condition of bankruptcy or ascertained insolvency, coupled with an intention to commit what the law declares to be an "act of bankruptcy," or to make provision against the consequences of insolvency, or to defeat the general distribution of assets which would take place under a proceeding in bankruptcy. Buckingham v. McLean, 13 How. 167, 14 L.Ed. 90; In re Carmichael, D.C.Iowa, 96 F. 594.

CONTEMPT OF DEATH. The apprehension or expectation of approaching dissolution; not that general expectation which every mortal entertains, but the apprehension which arises from some presently existing sickness or physical condition or from some impending danger. As applied to transfers of property, the phrase "in contemplation of death" means that thought of death is the impelling cause of transfer and that motive which induces transfer is of sort which leads to testamentary disposition and is practically equivalent to "causa mortis." In re Cornell's Estate, 73 N.Y.S. 32, 66 App.Div. 162; Nicholas v. Martin, 128 N.J.Eq. 344, 15 A.2d 235, 243; Pate v. C. I. R., C.C.A.8, 149 F.2d 669, 670.

CONTEMPORARY INSOLVENCY. Knowledge of, and action with reference to, an existing or contemplated state of insolvency, with a...
CONTEMPT. A willful disregard or disobedience of a public authority.

CONTEMPT OF COURT. Any act which is calculated to embarrass, hinder, or obstruct court in administration of justice, or which is calculated to lessen its authority or its dignity. Ex parte Hobbrook, 133 Me. 276, 177 A. 418, 420. Committed by a person who does any act in willful contravention of its authority or dignity, or tending to impede or frustrate the administration of justice, or by one who, being under the court's authority as a party to a proceeding therein, willfully disobeys its lawful orders or fails to comply with an undertaking which he has given. Snow v. Hawkes, 183 N.C. 365, 111 S.E. 621, 622, 23 A.L.R. 183.

Classification

Direct contempts are those committed in the immediate view and presence of the court (such as insulting language or acts of violence) or so near the presence of the court as to obstruct or interrupt the due and orderly course of proceedings. These are punishable summarily. They are also called "criminal" contempts, but that term is better used in contrast with "civil" contempts. See infra. State v. McClaugherty, 33 W.Va. 250, 10 S.E. 407. Pelletier v. Glacier County, Mont., 107 Mont. 221, 82 P.2d 595, 597.

Constructive (or indirect) contempts are those which arise from matters not occurring in or near the presence of the court, but which tend to obstruct or defeat the administration of justice, and the term is chiefly used with reference to the failure or refusal of a party to obey a lawful order, injunction, or decree of the court laying upon him a duty of action or forbearance. Maryott v. Maryott, 124 Neb. 274, 246 N.W. 343.

Constructive contempts were formerly called "consequent," and this term is still in occasional use.

Contempts are also classed as civil or criminal.

The former are those quasi contempts which consists in the failure to do something which the party is ordered by the court to do for the benefit or advantage of another party to the proceeding before the court, while criminal contempts are acts done in disrespect of the court or its process or which obstruct the administration of justice or tend to bring the court into disrespect. A civil contempt is not an offense against the dignity of the court, but against the party in whose behalf the mandate of the court was issued, and a fine is imposed for his indemnity. But criminal contempts are offenses or injuries offered to the court, and a fine or imprisonment is imposed upon the contemnor for the purpose of punishment. Staley v. South Jersey Realty Co., 90 A. 1042, 1043, 83 N.J.Eq. 300, L.R.A.1917B, 113, Ann.Cas.1916E, 955; Fenton v. Walling, C.C.A.Cal., 139 F.2d 608, 609.

CONTEMPT OF CONGRESS, LEGISLATURE, or PARLIAMENT. Whatever obstructs or tends to obstruct the due course of proceeding of either house, or grossly reflects on the character of a member of either house, or imputes to him what it would be a libel to impute to an ordinary person, is a contempt of the house, and thereby a breach of privilege. Sweet.

CONTEMPTIBILITER. Lat. Contemptuously.

In old English law. Contempt, contempts. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 60, § 35.

CONTEMNEMENTUM. See Wainagium; Contention.

CONTENTIOUS, CONTENTIOUSLY. Contested; adversary; litigated between adverse or contending parties; a judicial proceeding not merely ex parte in its character, but comprising attack and defense as between opposing parties, is so called. The litigious proceedings in ecclesiastical courts are sometimes said to belong to its "contentious" jurisdiction, in contradistinction to what is called its "voluntary" jurisdiction, which is exercised in the granting of licenses, probates of wills, dispensations, faculties, etc.

CONTENTIOUS JURISDICTION. In English ecclesiastical law. That branch of the jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical courts which is exercised upon adversary or contentious (opposed, litigated) proceedings.

CONTENTIOUS POSSESSION. In stating the rule that the possession of land necessary to give rise to a title by prescription must be a "contentious" one, it is meant that it must be based on opposition to the title of the rival claimant (not in recognition thereof or subordination thereto) and that the opposition must be based on good grounds, or such as might be made the subject of litigation. Railroad Co. v. McParlan, 43 N.J.L. 621.

CONTENTMENT, CONTENEMENT. A man's countenance or credit, which he has together with, and by reason of, his freehold; or that which is necessary for the support and maintenance of men, agreeably to their several qualities or states of life. Wharton; Cowell.

Comfort; consolation; ease; enjoyment; happiness; pleasure; satisfaction. National Surety Co. v. Jarrett, 95 W.Va. 420, 121 S.E. 291, 295.
CONTENTS. The contents of a promissory note or other commercial instrument or chose in action means the specific sum named therein and payable by the terms of the instrument. Trading Co. v. Morrison, 20 S.Ct. 869, 178 U.S. 262, 44 L. Ed. 1061.

CONTENTS AND NOT CONTENTS. In parliamentary law. The "contents" are those who, in the house of lords, express assent to a bill; the "not" or "non contents" dissent. May, Parl. Law, cc. 12, 357.

CONTENTS UNKNOWN. Words sometimes annexed to a bill of lading of goods in cases. Their meaning is that the master only means to acknowledge the shipment, in good order, of the cases, as to their external condition. Miller v. Railroad Co., 90 N.Y. 433, 43 Am.Rep. 179.

CONTERMINOUS. Adjacent; adjoining; having a common boundary; coterminous.

CONTEST, v. To make defense to an adverse claim in a court of law; to oppose, resist, or dispute the case made by a plaintiff. Pratt v. Breckinridge, 112 Ky. 1, 65 S.W. 136; Parks v. State, 100 Ala. 634, 13 So. 756. To strive, to win or hold; to controvert, litigate, call in question, challenge; to defend, as a suit or other proceeding. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of the United States v. First National Bank of Birmingham, C.C.A.Ala., 113 F.2d 272, 274.

CONTESTATIO LITIS. In Roman law. Contestation of suit; the framing an issue; joinder in issue. The formal act of both the parties with which the proceedings in jure were closed when they led to a judicial investigation, and by which the neighbors whom the parties brought with them were called to testify. Mackeld, Rom.Law, § 219. In old English law. Coming to an issue; the issue so produced. Crabb, Eng.Law, 216.

CONTESTATIO LITIS EGET TERMINOS CONTRADICTARIOS. An issue requires terms of contradiction. Jenks Cent. 117. To constitute an issue, there must be an affirmative on one side and a negative on the other.

CONTESTATION OF SUIT. In an ecclesiastical cause, that stage of the suit which is reached when the defendant has answered the libel by giving in an allegation.

CONTESTED ELECTION. This phrase has no technical or legally defined meaning. An election may be said to be contested whenever an objection is formally urged against it which, if found to be true in fact, would invalidate it. This is true both as to objections founded upon some constitutional provision and to such as are based on statutes. Robertson v. State, 109 Ind. 116, 10 N.E. 600.

CONTEXT. The context of a particular sentence or clause in a statute, contract, will, etc., comprises those parts of the text which immediately precede and follow it. The context may sometimes be scrutinized, to aid in the interpretation of an obscure passage.

CONTINGENCY. Quality of being contingent or casual; the possibility of coming to pass; an event which may occur; a possibility; a casualty. Vandegrift v. Riley, 30 P.2d 516, 523, 220 Cal. 340. A fortuitous event, which comes without design, foresight, or expectation. People v. Yonkers, 39 Barb. (N.Y.) 272; American Ins. Co. v. Black, 46 Ga.App. 471, 168 S.E. 85.

CONTINGENCY OF A PROCESS. In Scotch law. The circumstances of one are likely to throw light on the others, the process first enrolled is considered as the leading process, and those subsequently brought into court, if not brought in the same division, may be remitted to it, ob contingentiam, on account of their nearness or proximity in character to it. The effect of remitting processes in this manner is merely to bring them before the same division of the court or same lord ordinary. In other respects they remain distinct. Bell.

CONTINGENCY WITH DOUBLE ASPECT. A remainder is said to be "in a contingency with double aspect," when there is another remainder limited on the same estate, not in derogation of the first, but as a substitute for it in case it should fail. Fearne, Rem. 373.

CONTINGENCY. Possible, but not assured; doubtful or uncertain, conditioned upon the occurrence of some future event which is itself uncertain, or questionable. Verdiere v. Roach, 96 Cal. 467, 31 P. 554, synonymous with provisional. Robinson v. Edler, C.C.A.Nev., 78 F.2d 817, 819.

This term, when applied to a use, remainder, devise, bequest, or other legal right or interest, implies that no present interest exists, and that whether such interest or right ever will exist depends upon a future uncertain event. Jemison v. Blowers, 5 Barb. (N.Y.) 692.

CONTINGENT ESTATE, INTEREST or RIGHT. An estate, interest or right which depends for its effect upon an event which may or may not happen; as an estate limited to a person not in else, or not yet born. 2 Crabb, Real Prop. p. 4, § 946; Avery v. Curtiss, 108 Okl. 154, 235 P. 195, 197; Kahn v. Rockhill, 132 N.J.Eq. 188, 28 A.2d 34, 36.

CONTINGENT FUND. One set up by a municipality to pay expense items which will necessarily arise during the year but cannot appropriately be classified under any of the specific purposes for which other taxes are levied. First Nat. Bank of Norman v. City of Norman, 182 Okl. 7, 75 P.2d 1109, 1110.

CONTINGENT INTEREST IN PERSONAL PROPERTY. A future interest not transmissible to the representatives of the party entitled thereto, in case he dies before it vests in possession. Mozley & Whitley.

Thus, if a testator leaves the income of a fund to his wife for life, and the capital of the fund to be distributed among such of his children as shall be living at her death, the interest of each child during the widow's life-time is contingent, and in case of his death is not transmissible to his representatives. Mozley & Whitley.

CONTINGENT LIABILITY. One which is not now fixed and absolute, but which will become so in case of the occurrence of some future and uncertain event. Warren Co. v. C. I. R., C.C.A. Ga., 135 F.2d 679, 684, 685.

CONTINUAL CLAIM. In old English law. A formal claim made by a party entitled to enter upon any lands or tenements, but deferred from such entry by menaces, or bodily fear, for the purpose of preserving or keeping alive his right. It was called "continual," because it was required to be repeated once in the space of every year and day. It had to be made as near to the land as the party could approach with safety, and, when made in due form, had the same effect with, and in all respects amounted to, a legal entry. Litt. §§ 419-423; Co.Litt. 250a; 3 Bl.Comm. 175.

CONTINUANCE. The adjournment or postponement of an action pending in a court, to a subsequent day of the same or another term. Com. v. Maloney, 145 Mass. 205, 13 N.E. 482. Ferber v. Brueckl, 332 Mo. 892, 17 S.W.2d 524, 527.

Also the entry of a continuance made upon the record of the court, for the purpose of formally evidencing the postponement, or of connecting the parts of the record so as to make one continuo whole.

CONTINUANDO. In pleading. A form of allegation in which the trespass, criminal offense, or other wrongful act complained of is charged to have been committed on a specified day and to have "continued" to the present time, or is averred to have been committed at divers days and times within a given period or on a specified day and on divers other days and times between that day and another. This is called "laying the time with a continuando." State v. Brown, 10 Okl.Cr. 52, 133 P. 1143, 1144.

CONTINUING. Enduring; not terminated by a single act or fact; subsisting for a definite period or intended to cover or apply to successive similar obligations or occurrences.

CONTINUOUS. Uninterrupted; unbroken; not intermittent or occasional; so persistently repeated at short intervals as to constitute virtually an unbroken series. Ingraham v. Hough, 46 N.C. 43. Connected, extended, or prolonged without cessation or interruption of sequence. Sullivan v. John Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co. of Boston, Mo. App., 110 S.W.2d 870, 877.

As to continuous "Crime" and "Easements," see those titles.

CONTINUOUS ADVERSE USE. Is interchangeable with the term "uninterrupted adverse use." Davidson v. Nicholson, 59 Ind. 411.

CONTINUOUS INJURY. One recurring at repeated intervals, so as to be of repeated occurrence; not necessarily an injury that never ceases. Wood v. Sutcliffe, 8 Eng.Law & Eq. 217.
CONTINUOUSLY. Uninterruptedly; in unbroken sequence; without intermission or cessation; without intervening time; with continuity or continuation. U. S. v. Wooten, C.C.A.N.M., 40 F.2d 882, 887.

CONTIONES. General meetings of the Roman people. Launspach, State and Family in Early Rome 69.

CONTRA. Against, confronting, opposite to; on the other hand; on the contrary.

The word is used in many Latin phrases, as appears by the following titles. In the books of reports, contra, appended to the name of a judge or counsel, indicates that he held a view of the matter in argument contrary to that next before advanced. Also, after citation of cases in support of a position, contra is often prefixed to citations of cases opposed to it.

CONTRA BONOS MORES. Against good morals. Contracts contra bonos mores are void.

CONTRA FORMAM COLLATIONIS. In old English law. A writ that issued where lands given in perpetual alms to lay houses of religion, or to an abbot and convent, or to the warden or master of a hospital and his convent, to find certain poor men with necessaries, and do divine service, etc., were alienated, to the disherison of the house and church. By means of this writ the donor or his heirs could recover the lands. Reg.Orig. 238; Fitz. Nat.Brev. 210.

CONTRA FORMAM DONI. Against the form of the grant. See Forndon.

CONTRA FORMAM FEOFFAMENTI. In old English law. A writ that lay for the heir of a tenant, enfeoffed of certain lands or tenements, by charter of feoffment from a lord to make certain services and suits to his court, who was afterwards distrained for more services than were mentioned in the charter. Reg.Orig. 176; Old Nat.Brev. 162.

CONTRA FORMAM STATUTI. In criminal pleading. (Contrary to the form of the statute in such case made and provided.) The usual conclusion of every indictment, etc., brought for an offense created by statute.

CONTRA JUS BELLI. Lat. Against the law of war. 1 Kent.Comm. 6.

CONTRA JUS COMMUNE. Against common right or law; contrary to the rule of the common law. Bract. fol. 48b.

CONTRA LEGEM FACIT QUI ID FACIT QUOD LEX PROHIBIT; IN FRAUDEM VERO QUI, SALVIS VERBIS LEGIS, SENTENTIAM EJUS CIRCUMVENIT. He does contrary to the law who does what the law prohibits; he acts in fraud of the law who, the letter of the law being inviolate, uses the law contrary to its intention. Dig. 1, 3, 29.

CONTRA LEGEM TERRIE. Against the law of the land.

CONTRA NEGANTEM PRINCIPIA NON EST DISPUTANDUM. There is no disputing against one who denies first principles. Co.Litt. 343.

CONTRA NON VALENTEM AGERE NULLA CURRIT PRIESRIPTIO. No prescription runs against a person unable to bring an action. Broom, Max. 903.

CONTRA PACEM. Against the peace. A phrase used in the Latin forms of indictments, and also of actions for trespass, to signify that the offense alleged was committed against the public peace, i. e., involved a breach of the peace. The full formula was contra pacem domini regis, against the peace of the lord the king. In modern pleading, in this country, the phrase “against the peace of the commonwealth” or “of the people” is used.

CONTRA PROFERENTEM. Against the party who proffers or puts forward a thing. J. Zimmern’s Co. v. Granade, 212 Ala. 172, 102 So. 210, 211.

CONTRA TABULAS. In the civil law. Against the will, (testament.) Dig. 37, 4.

CONTRA VADIVM ET PLEGIUM. In old English law. Against gage and pledge. Bract. fol. 15b.

CONTRA VERITATEM LEX NUNQUAM ALIQUID PERMITTIT. The law never suffers anything contrary to truth. 2 Inst. 252.

CONTRABAND. Against law or treaty; prohibited. Goods exported from or imported into a country against its laws. Brande, Articles, the importation or exportation of which is prohibited by law. State v. Butler, 148 S.C. 495, 146 S.E. 418, 419.

CONTRABAND OF WAR. Certain classes of merchandise, such as arms and ammunition, which, by the rules of international law, cannot lawfully be furnished or carried by a neutral nation to either of two belligerents; if found in transit in neutral vessels, such goods may be seized and condemned for violation of neutrality. The Peterhoff, 5 Wall. 58, 18 L.Ed. 564; Richardson v. Insurance Co., 6 Mass. 114, 4 Am.Dec. 92.

A recent American author on international law says that, “by the term ‘contraband of war,’ we now understand a class of articles of commerce which neutrals are prohibited from furnishing to either one of the belligerents, for the reason that, by so doing, injury is done to the other belligerent;” and he treats of the subject, chiefly, in its relation to commerce upon the high seas. Hall, Int.Law, 570, 592; Elrod v. Alexander, 4 Heisk. (Tenn.) 345.

CONTRACT. A promissory agreement between two or more persons that creates, modifies, or destroys a legal relation. Buffalo Pressed Steel Co. v. Kirwan, 138 Md. 60, 113 A. 628, 630; Mexican Petroleum Corporation of Louisiana v. North German Lloyd, D.C.La., 17 F.2d 113, 114.

An agreement between two or more parties, preliminary to steps in making of which is offer by one and acceptance by other, in which minds of parties meet and concur in understanding of terms. Lee v. Travelers’ Ins. Co. of Hartford, Conn., 173 S.C. 185, 175 S.E. 429.

A deliberate engagement between competent parties, upon a legal consideration, to do, or abstain from doing, some act. Wharton; Smith v. Thornhill, Tex.Com.App. 25 S.W.2d 597, 599.

It is agreement creating obligation, in which there must be competent parties, subject-matter, legal consideration, mutuality of agreement, and mutuality of obligation, and agreement must not be so vague or uncertain that terms are not ascertainable. H. Liebes & Co. v. Klengenberg, C.A.Cal., 23 F.2d 611, 612.

A contract or agreement is either where a promise is made on one side and assented to on the other; or where two or more persons enter into engagement with each other by a promise on either side. 2 Steph.Comm. 54.

The writing which contains the agreement of parties, with the terms and conditions, and which serves as a proof of the obligation.

Certain and Hazardous

Certain contracts are those in which the thing to be done is supposed to depend on the will of the party, or when, in the usual course of events, it must happen in the manner stipulated. Hazardous contracts are those in which the performance of that which is one of its objects depends on an uncertain event. Civ.Code La. 1776.

Classification

Contracts may be classified on several different methods, according to the element in them which is brought into prominence. The usual classifications are as follows:

Commutative and Independent

Commutative contracts are those in which what is done, given, or promised by one party is considered as an equivalent to or in consideration of what is done, given, or promised by the other. Civ.Code La. 1768; Ridings v. Johnson, 9 Sup.Ct. 72, 128 U.S. 212, 32 L.Ed. 401. Independent contracts are those in which the mutual acts or promises have no relation to each other, either as equivalents or as considerations. Civ.Code La. 1769.

Conditional Contract

An executory contract the performance of which depends upon a condition. It is not simply an executory contract, since the latter may be an absolute agreement to do or not to do something, but it is a contract whose very existence and performance depend upon a contingency. Railroad Co. v. Jones, 2 Cold. (Tenn.) 584; French v. Osmer, 67 Vt. 427, 32 A. 254.

Consensual and Real

Consensual contracts are such as are founded upon and completed by the mere agreement of the contracting parties, without any external formality or symbolic act to fix the obligation. Real contracts are those in which it is necessary that there should be something more than mere consent, such as a loan of money, deposit or pledge, which, from their nature, require a delivery of the thing, (res.) Inst. 3, 14, 2; Id. 3, 15; Halifax, Civil Law, b. 2, c. 15, No. 1. In the common law a contract respecting real property (such as a lease of land for years) is, called a "real" contract. 3 Coke, 22a.

Constructive Contract

Constructive contracts are such as arise when the law prescribes the rights and liabilities of persons who have not in reality entered into a contract at all, but between whom circumstances make it just that one should have a right, and the other be subject to a liability, similar to the rights and liabilities in cases of express contract. Donovan v. Kansas City, 352 Mo. 430, 175 S.W.2d 874, 884.

Divisible and Indivisible

The effect of the breach of a contract depends in a large degree upon whether it is to be regarded as indivisible or divisible; i.e., whether it forms a whole, the performance of every part of which is a condition precedent to bind the other party, or is composed of several independent parts, the performance of any one of which will bind the other party pro tanto. The only test is whether the whole quantity of the things concerned, or the sum of the acts to be done, is of the essence of the contract. It depends, therefore, in the last resort, simply upon the intention of the parties. Integrity Flooring v. Zandon Corporation, 130 N.J.L. 244, 32 A.2d 507, 509.

When a consideration is entire and indivisible, and it is against law, the contract is void in toto. Frazier v. Thompson, 2 Watts & S. (Pa.) 235. When the consideration is divisible, and part of it is illegal, the contract is void only pro tanto. Harr.Contr. 132; Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 1 Wall. 220, 17 L.Ed. 530.

Entire and Severable

An entire contract is one the consideration of which is entire on both sides. The entire fulfillment of the promise by either is a condition precedent to the fulfillment of any part of the promise by the other. Whenever, therefore, there is a contract to pay the gross sum for a certain and definite consideration, the contract is entire. A severable contract is one the consideration of which is, by its terms, susceptible of apportionment on either side, so as to correspond to the unascertained consideration on the other side, as a contract to pay a person the worth of his services so long as he will do certain work; or to give a certain price for every bushel of so much corn as

Where a contract consists of many parts; which may be considered as parts of one whole, the contract is entire. When the parts may be considered as so many distinct contracts, entered into at one time, and expressed in the same instrument, but not thereby made one contract, the contract is a separable contract. But, if the consideration of the contract is single and entire, the contract must be held to be entire, although the subject of the contract consists of several distinct and wholly independent items. 2 Pars.Cont. 517.

Contracts are also distinguished into executed and executory; executed, where nothing remains to be done by either party, and where the transaction is completed at the moment that the arrangement is made, as where an article is sold and delivered, and payment therefor is made on the spot; executory, where some future act is to be done, as where an agreement is made to build a house in six months, or to do an act on or before some future day, or to lend money upon a certain interest, payable at a future time. Farrington v. Tennessee, 95 U.S. 683, 24 L.Ed. 558; Fox v. Kitton, 19 Ill. 532; Mather v. Mather, 25 Cal.2d 582, 154 P.2d 684, 686.

But executed contracts are not properly contracts at all, except reminiscently. The term denotes rights in property which have been acquired by means of contract; but the parties are no longer bound by a contractual tie. Mettel v. Gales, 12 S.D. 632, 82 N.W. 181.

Express and Implied

An express contract is an actual agreement of the parties, the terms of which are openly uttered or declared at the time of making it, being stated in distinct and explicit language, either orally or in writing. 2 Bl.Comm. 443; 2 Kent, Comm. 450; Linn v. Ross, 10 Ohio 414, 36 Am.Dec. 95; A. J. Yawger & Co. v. Joseph, 184 Ind. 228; 108 N.E. 774, 775; In re Pierce, Butler & Pierce Mfg. Co., D.C.N.Y., 231 F. 312, 318.

An implied contract is one not created or evidenced by the explicit agreement of the parties, but inferred by the law, as a matter of reason and justice from their acts or conduct, the circumstances surrounding the transaction making it a reasonable, or even a necessary, assumption that a contract existed between them by tacit understanding. Miller's Appeal, 100 Pa. 568, 45 Am.Rep. 394; Landon v. Kansas City Gas Co., C.C.A.Kan., 10 F.2d 263, 266; Caldwell v. Missouri State Life Ins. Co., 230 S.W. 566, 568, 148 Ark. 474; Cameron, to Use of Cameron, v. Eynon, 332 Pa. 529, 3 A.2d 423, 424; American La France Fire Engine Co., to Use of American La France & Foamite Industries, v. Borough of Shenandoah, C.C.A.Pa., 115 F.2d 806, 867.

Impaired contracts are sometimes subdivided into those "implied in fact" and those "implied in law," the former being covered by the definition just given, while the latter are obligations imposed upon a person by the law, not in pursuance of his intention and agreement, either expressed or implied, but even against his will and design, because the circumstances between the parties are such as to render it just that the one should have a right, and the other a corresponding liability, similar to those which would arise from a contract between them. This kind of obligation therefore rests on the principle that whatsoever it is certain a man ought to do that the law will suppose him to have promised to do. And hence it is said that, while the liability of a party to an express contract arises directly from the contract, it is just the reverse in the case of a contract "implied in law," the contract there being implied or arising from the liability. Bliss v. Hoyt, 70 Vt. 534, 41 A. 1026; Kelum v. Browning's Adm'r, 231 Ky. 308, 21 S.W.2d 459, 465. But obligations of this kind are not properly contracts at all, and should not be so denominated. There can be no true contract without a mutual and concurrent intention of the parties. Such obligations are more properly described as "quasi contracts." Union Life Ins. Co. v. Glasscock, 270 Ky. 750, 110 S.W.2d 681, 686, 114 A.L.R. 373.

Fair and Reasonable Contract

See Fair and Reasonable Contract.

Gratuitous and Onerous

Gratuitous contracts are those of which the object is the benefit of the person with whom it is made, without any profit or advantage received or promised as a consideration for it. It is not, however, the less gratuitous if it proceed either from gratitude for a benefit before received or from the hope of receiving one thereafter, although such benefit be of a pecuniary nature. Onerous contracts are those in which something is given or promised as a consideration for the engagement or gift, or some service, interest, or condition is imposed on what is given or promised, although unequal to it in value. Civ.Code La. 1773, 1774; Penitentiary Co. v. Nelms, 65 Ga. 505, 38 Am.Rep. 793. A gratuitous contract is sometimes called a contract of beneficence. Howe, Studies in the Civil Law 107.

Joint and Several

A joint contract is one made by two or more promisors, who are jointly bound to fulfill its obligations, or made to two or more promisees, who are jointly entitled to require performance of the same. A contract may be "several" as to any one of several promisors or promisees, if he has a legal right (either from the terms of the agreement or the nature of the undertaking) to enforce his individual interest separately from the other parties. Jens-Marie Oil Co. v. Rixse, 72 Okl. 93, 178 P. 658. Generally all contracts are joint where the interest of the parties for whose benefit they are created is joint, and separate where that interest is separate. Shurtleff v. Udall, 97 Vt. 156, 122 A. 465, 468.

Mutual Interest, Mixed, etc.

Contracts of "mutual interest" are such as are entered into for the reciprocal interest and utility of each of the parties; as sales, exchange, partnership, and the like. "Mixed" contracts are those by which one of the parties confers a benefit on the other, receiving something of inferior value in return, such as a donation subject to a charge. Contracts "of beneficence" are those by which only one of the contracting parties is benefited; as loans, deposit and mandate. Poth.Obl. 1, 1, 1, 2.

Parol

A written contract, which leaves some essential term thereof to be shown by parol, is only ‘parol contract’ not enforceable under statute of fraud. Sheidmyer v. Bias, 112 Ind.App. 522, 45 N.E.2d 347, 349.

Personal Contract

A contract relating to personal property, or one which so far involves the element of personal knowledge or skill or personal confidence that it can be performed only by the person with whom made, and therefore is not binding on his executor. See Janin v. Browne, 59 Cal. 44; Lucas v. J. H. Gross Motor Car Co., 27 Ohio App. 183, 161 N.E. 362, 363.

Pre-contract

An obligation growing out of a contract or contractual relation, of such a nature that it debars the party from legally entering into a similar contract at a later time with any other person; particularly applied to marriage.

Principal and Accessory

A principal contract is one entered into by both parties on their own account or in the several qualities they assume. It is one which stands by itself, justifies its own existence, and is not subordinate or auxiliary to any other. Accessory contracts are those made for assuring the performance of a prior contract, either by the same parties or by others, such as suretyship, mortgage, and pledge. Civ.Code La. art. 1771.

Quasi Contracts

In the civil law. A contractual relation arising out of transactions between the parties which give them mutual rights and obligations, but do not involve a specific and express convention or agreement between them. Keener, Quasi Contr. 1; Elbert County v. Brown, 16 Ga.App. 834, 86 S.E. 651, 665. The lawful and purely voluntary acts of a man, from which there results any obligation whatever to a third person, and sometimes a reciprocal obligation between the parties. Civ. Code La. art. 2293.

Persons who have not contracted with each other are often regarded by the Roman law, under a certain state of facts, as if they had actually concluded a convention between themselves. The legal relation which then takes place between these persons, which has always a similarity to a contract obligation, is therefore termed "obligatio quasi ex contractu." Such a relation arises from the conducting of affairs without authority, (negotiorum gestio,) from the payment of what was not due, (solutio indebiti,) from tutorship and curatorship, and from taking possession of an inheritance. Mackeld.Rom.Law § 491.

Legal fiction invented by common law courts to permit recovery by contractual remedy of assumpsit in cases where, in fact, there is no contract, but where circumstances are such that justice warrants a recovery as though there had been a promise. Clark v. Peoples Savings and Loan Ass’n of De Kalb County, 221 Ind. 168, 46 N.E.2d 681, 682, 144 A.L.R. 1495. It is not based on intention or consent of the parties, but is founded on considerations of justice and equity, and on doctrine of unjust enrichment. Bruggeman v. Independent School Dist., No. 4, Union Tp., Mitchell County, 227 Iowa 661, 289 N.W. 5, 8, 11.

It is not in fact a contract, but an obligation which the law creates in absence of any agreement, when and because the acts of the parties or others have placed in the possession of one person money, or its equivalent, under such circumstances that in equity and good conscience he ought not to retain it. Grossbier v. Chicago, St. P., M. & O. Ry. Co., 173 Wis. 503, 181 N.W. 764, 768; It is an implication of law. First Nat. Bank v. Matlock, 99 Okl. 150, 226 P. 328, 331, 36 A.L.R. 1088; Caldwell v. Missouri State Life Ins. Co., 148 Ark. 474, 230 S.W. 566, 568.

It is what was formerly known as the contract implied in law; it has no reference to the intentions or expressions of the parties. The obligation is imposed despite, and frequently in frustration of their intention. Town of Balken v. Village of Buhl, 158 Minn. 271, 197 N.W. 266, 35 A.L.R. 470.

Record, Specialty, Simple

Contracts of record are such as are declared and adjudicated by courts of competent jurisdiction, or entered on their records, including judgments, recognizances, and statutes staple. Harde-man v. Downer, 39 Ga. 425. These are not properly speaking contracts at all, though they may be enforced by action like contracts. Specialties, or special contracts, are contracts under seal, such as deeds and bonds. Ludwig v. Bungart, 26 Misc. Rep. 247, 56 N.Y.S. 51. All others are included in the description "simple" contracts; that is, a simple contract is one that is not a contract of record and not under seal; it may be either written or oral, in either case, it is called a "parol" contract, the distinguishing feature being the lack of a seal. Stackpole v. Arnold, 11 Mass. 30, 6 Am. Dec. 150; 4 B. & Ald. 588; 2 Bla.Comm. 472.

Special Contract

A contract under seal; a specialty; as distinguished from one merely oral or in writing not sealed. But in common usage this term is often used to denote an express or explicit contract, one which clearly defines and settles the reciprocal rights and obligations of the parties, as distinguished from one which must be made out, and its terms ascertained, by the inference of the law from the nature and circumstances of the transaction.

A special contract may rest in parol, and does not mean a contract by specialty; it is defined as one with peculiar provisions not found in the ordinary contracts relating to the same subject-matter. Midland Roofing Mfg. Co. v. Pickens, 96 S.C. 286, 80 S.E. 484, 485.

Subcontract

A contract subordinate to another contract, made or intended to be made between the contracting parties, on one part, or some of them, and a stranger. 1 H.B1. 37, 45. One made under a prior contract. Mobley v. Leeper Bros. Lumber Co., 89 Okl. 95, 214 P. 174, 175.

Where a person has contracted for the performance of certain work (e.g., to build a house,) and he in turn engages a third party to perform the whole or a part of that which is included in the original contract, (e.g., to do the carpenter work,) his agreement with such third person is called a "sub-contractor." Central Trust Co. v. Railroad Co., C.C.Ky., 54 F. 723 Lester v. Houston, 101 N.C. 605, 8 S.E. 366. The term "subcontractor" means one who has contracted with the original contractor for the performance of all or a part of the work or services which such contractor has himself contracted to perform. Republic Supply Co. v. Allen, Tex.Civ.App., 262 S.W. 113, 114.

Unconscionable Contract
One which no sensible man not under delusion, duress, or in distress would make, and such as no honest and fair man would accept. Franklin Fire Ins. Co. v. Noll, 115 Ind.App. 289, 58 N.E.2d 947, 949, 950.

Unilateral and Bilateral
A unilateral contract is one in which one party makes an express engagement or undertakes a performance, without receiving in return any express engagement or promise of performance from the other. Bilateral (or reciprocal) contracts are those by which the parties expressly enter into mutual engagements, such as sale or hire. Civ. Code La. art. 1765; Poth. Obl. 1, 1, 1, 2; Kling Bros. Engineering Works v. Whiting Corporation, 320 Ill.App. 630, 51 N.E.2d 1004, 1007. When the party to whom an engagement is made makes no express agreement on his part, the contract is called unilateral, even in cases where the law attaches certain obligations to his acceptance. La. Civ. Code, art. 1765. A contract is also said to be "unilateral" when there is a promise on one side only, the consideration on the other side being executed. McMahan v. McMahan, 122 S.C. 336, 115 S.E. 293, 294, 26 A.L.R. 1295.

Usurious Contract
See that title.

Written Contract
A "written contract" is one which in all its terms is in writing. Fey v. Loose-Wiles Biscuit Co., 147 Kan. 31, 75 P.2d 810, 813; and instrument signed by one party is orally accepted by other, Reeves Furniture Co. v. Simms, Tex.Civ.App., 59 S.W.2d 262, 263.

CONTRACT. ESTOPPEL BY. There are two sorts of "estoppel by contract," estoppel to deny truth of facts agreed on and settled by force of entering into contract, and estoppel arising from acts done under or in performance of contract. In re Schofield's Estate, 101 Colo. 443, 73 P.2d 1381. Finch v. Smith, 177 Okl. 307, 58 P.2d 850, 851.

"Estoppel by contract" is intended to embrace all cases in which there is an actual or virtual undertaking to treat a fact as settled. Jackson v. United Gas Public Service Co., 198 So. 633, 640, 196 La. 1. It means party is bound by terms of own contract until set aside or annulled for fraud, accident, or mistake. United Fidelity Life Ins. Co. v. Fowler, Tex.Civ.App., 38 S.W.2d 128, 131.

CONTRACTUS. Lat. Contract; a contract; contracts.

CONTRACTUS BONZE FIDEI. In Roman law. Contracts of good faith. Those contracts which, when brought into litigation, were not determined by the rules of the strict law alone, but allowed the judge to examine into the bona fides of the transaction, and to hear equitable considerations against their enforcement. In this they were opposed to contracts stricti juris, against which equitable defenses could not be entertained.

CONTRACTUS CIVILE. In Roman law. Civil contracts. Those contracts which were recognized as actionable by the strict civil law of Rome, or as being founded upon a particular statute, as distinguished from those which could not be enforced in the courts except by the aid of the praetor, who, through his equitable powers, gave an action upon them. The latter were called "contractus praetorii."
CONTRECTATIO. In the civil and old English law. Touching; handling; meddling. The act of removing a thing from its place in such a manner that, if the thing be not restored, it will amount to theft.

CONTRECTATIO REI ALIENZE, ANIMO FURANDI, EST FURTUM. Jenk. Cent. 132. The touching or removing of another’s property, with an intention of stealing, is theft.

CONTREFACON. In French law. The offense amount to theft.

CONTRAFACON. In French law. The act of printing or causing to be printed a book, the copyright of which is held by another, without authority from him. Merl. Repert.

CONTR-MAITRE. In French marine law. The chief officer of a vessel, who, in case of the sickness or absence of the master, commanded in his place. Literally, the countermaster.

CONTRIBUTE. To lend assistance or aid, or give something, to a common purpose; to have a share in any act or effect; to discharge a joint obligation. Christman v. Reichholdt, Mo.App., 150 S.W.2d 527, 532; James McCord Co. v. Citizens Hotel Co., Tex.Civ.App., 287 S.W. 906; Park v. Missionary Soc., 62 Vt. 19, 20 A. 107.

As applied to negligence signifies causal connection between injury and negligence, which transcends and is distinguished from negligent acts or omissions which play so minor a part in producing injuries that law does not recognize them as legal causes. Connellan v. Coffey, 122 Conn. 136, 187 A. 901, 903.

CONTRIBUTION. In the civil law. A partition by which the creditors of an insolvent debtor divide among themselves the proceeds of his property proportionately to the amount of their respective credits. Code La. art. 3556, par. 9. Division which is made among the heirs of the succession of the debts with which the succession is charged, according to the proportion which each is bound to bear. Civ.Code La. art. 1420.

In common law. The sharing of a loss or payment among several. The act of any one or several of a number of co-debtors, co-Sureties, etc., in reimbursing one of their number who has paid the whole debt or suffered the whole liability, each to the extent of his proportionate share. Canosia Tp. v. Grand Lake Tp., 80 Minn. 357, 83 N.W. 346; Ratte v. Ratte, 260 Mass. 165, 156 N.E. 870, 871. Right of one who has discharged a common liability to recover of another also liable, the aliquot portion which he ought to pay or bear. St. Lewis v. Morrison, D.C.Ky., 50 F.Supp. 570, 572, 573. Parten v. First Nat. Bank & Trust Co., 283 N.W. 408, 412, 204 Minn. 200, 120 A.L.R. 962; Chapman v. Lamar-Rankin Drug Co., 64 Ga.App. 493, 13 S.E.2d 734, 737. Fidelity & Casualty Ins. Co. of New York v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 124 Conn. 227, 199 A. 93, 94.

In maritime law. Where the property of one of several parties interested in a vessel and cargo has been voluntarily sacrificed for the common safety, (as by throwing goods overboard to lighten the vessel,) such loss must be made good by the contribution of the others, which is termed “general average,” 3 Kent, Comm. 232-244; 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 490.

CONTRIBUTION TO CAPITAL. A fund or property contributed by shareowners as financial basis for prosecution of corporation’s business, and signifies resources whose dedication to users of the corporation is made the foundation for issuance of capital stock and which became irrevocably devoted to satisfaction of all obligations of corporation. Detroit Edison Co. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.6, 131 F.2d 619, 623.

CONTRIBUTIONE FACIENDA. In old English law. A writ that lay where tenants in common were bound to do some act, and one of them was put to the whole burthen, to compel the rest to make contribution. Reg. Orig. 175; Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 162.

CONTRIBUTORY. A person liable to contribute to the assets of a company which is being wound up, as being a member or (in some cases) a past member thereof. Mozley & Whitley.

CONTRIBUTORY, adj. Joining in the promotion of a given purpose; lending assistance to the production of a given result. Armstrong v. Green, 113 Okl. 254, 241 P. 789, 791.

As to contributory “Infringement” and “Negligence,” see those titles.

CONTROL, v. To exercise restraining or directing influence over; regulate; restrain; dominate; curb; to hold from action; overpower; court; act; govern. Owen v. Trail, 302 Mo. 292, 258 S.W. 699, 702; Hopkins v. Howard’s Ex’x, 266 Ky. 685, 99 S.W.2d 810, 812.

To control a thing is to have the right to exercise a directing or governing influence over it. Trust Co. of New Jersey v. Greenwood Cemetery, 21 N.J.Misc. 169, 32 A.2d 519, 523.

CONTROL, n. Power or authority to manage, direct, superintend, restrict, regulate, direct, govern, administer, or oversee. State v. First State Bank of Jud, 52 N.D. 231, 202 N.W. 391, 402.

The “control” involved in determining whether “principal and agent relationship” or “master and servant relationship” is involved must be accompanied by power or right to order or direct. Mid-Continent Petroleum Corp. v. Vicars, 221 Ind. 387, 47 N.E.2d 972, 975.

Driver must at all times have automobile under control, means having it under such control that it can be stopped before doing injury to any person in any situation that is reasonably likely to arise under the circumstances. Kindt v. Reading Co., 352 Pa. 419, 43 A.2d 145, 147.

CONTROL OF CARBON. Such a chemical action upon the carbon in an alloy as will keep it largely in a combined graphitic state. Pittsburgh Iron, & Steel Foundries Co. v. Seaman-Sleeth Co., D.C. Pa., 236 F. 756, 760.

CONTROLLER. A comptroller, which see.

CONTROLMENT. In old English law, The controlling or checking of another officer’s account; the keeping of a counter-roll.

CONTROVER. In old English law. An inventor of false news. 2 Inst. 227.
CONTROVERSIES ARISING IN BANKRUPTCY PROCEEDINGS. Within Bankruptcy Act § 24a, 11 U.S.C.A. § 747(a), investing Circuit Courts of Appeals with appellate jurisdiction, include those matters arising in the course of a bankruptcy proceeding, which are not mere steps in the ordinary administration of the bankrupt estate, but present distinct and separable issues, between the trustee and adverse claimants concerning the right and title to the bankrupt's estate. Handlan v. Bennett, C.C.A.W.Va., 51 F.2d 21, 23.

CONTROVERSY. A litigated question; adversary proceeding in a court of law; a civil action or suit, either at law or in equity; a justiciable dispute. Barber v. Kennedy, 18 Minn. 216 (Gil. 196); State v. Guinotte, 156 Mo. 513, 57 S.W. 281, 50 L. R.A. 787.

It differs from "case," which includes all suits, criminal as well as civil; whereas "controversy" is a civil and not a criminal proceeding. Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Da11. 419, 431, 432, 1 L.Ed. 440.

CONTROVERT. To dispute; to deny; to oppose or contest; to take issue on. Reese v. Adamson, 297 Pa. 13, 146 A. 262, 263.

CONTUBERNIUM. In Roman law. The marriage of slaves; a permitted cohabitation.

CONTUMACE CAPIENDO. In English law. Excommunication in all cases of contempt in the spiritual courts is discontinued by 53 Geo. III, c. 127, § 2, and in lieu thereof, where a lawful citation or sentence has not been obeyed, the judge shall have power, after a certain period, to pronounce such person contumacious and in contempt, and to signify the same to the court of chancery, whereupon a writ of de contumace capiendo shall issue from that court, which shall have the same force and effect as formerly belonged, in case of contempt, to a writ of de excommunicato capiendo. (2 & 3 Wm. IV, c. 93; 3 & 4 Viet. c. 93.) Wharton; 1 Holdsw. Hist. Engl. Law App. XVIII. See Excommunication.

CONTUMACY. The refusal or intentional omission of a person who has been duly cited before a court to appear and defend the charge laid against him, or, if he is duly before the court, to obey some lawful order or direction made in the cause. In the former case it is called "presumed" contumacy; in the latter, "actual." The term is chiefly used in ecclesiastical law. See 3 Curt. Ecc. 1.

CONTUMAX. One accused of a crime who refuses to appear and answer to the charge. An outlaw.

CONTUMELY. Rudeness compounded of haughtiness and contempt; scornful insolence; despiteful treatment; disdain, contemptuousness in act or speech; disgrace. United States v. Strong, D. C.Wash., 263 F. 789, 796.

CONVERSE. To bruise; to injure or disorganize a part of without breaking the skin. Ansley v. Travelers Ins. Co., 27 Tenn.App. 720, 173 S.W.2d 702, 704.

CONTUSION. In medical jurisprudence. A bruise; an injury to any external part of the body by the impact of a fall or the blow of a blunt instrument, without laceration of the flesh, and either with or without a tearing of the skin, but in the former case it is more properly called a "contused wound." Gasperino v. Prudential Ins. Co. of America, Mo.App., 107 S.W. 819, 827.

CONTUTOR. Lat. In the civil law. A co-tutor, or co-guardian. Inst. 1, 24, 1.

CONUSANCE, CLAIM OF. See Cognizance.

CONUSANT. Cognizant; acquainted with; having actual knowledge; as, if a party knowing of an agreement in which he has an interest makes no objection to it, he is said to be conusant. Co. Litt. 157.

CONUSEE. See Cognizee,

CONUSOR. See Cognizor,

CONVENABLE. In old English law. Suitable; agreeable; convenient; fitting. Litt. § 103.

CONVENE. In the civil law. To bring an action.

CONVENIENCE AND NECESSITY. If there is a reasonable need apparent for use of the service, and if a common carrier is not unduly ‘interfered with, nor the public highways unduly burdened, a case of “convenience and necessity” exists with respect to an application for a license to operate as a contract motor carrier. Short Way Lines v. Black, 182 S.W.2d 17, 19, 298 Ky. 67.

CONVENIENT. Proper; just; suitable; fit; adapted; proper; becoming appropriate. Finlay v. Dickerson, 29 Ill. 20; Railway Co. v. Smith, 19 S.Ct. 565, 173 U.S. 684, 43 L.Ed. 858; Prina v. Board of Sup’rs of Graham County, 16 Ariz. 252, 143 P. 567, 568.

CONVENIT. Lat. In civil and old English law. It is agreed; it was agreed.

CONVENT. The fraternity of an abbey or priory, as societas is the number of fellows in a college. A religious house, now regarded as a merely voluntary association, not importing civil death. 33 Law J. Ch. 308.

An association or community of recluse devoted to a religious life under a superior; a body of monks, friars, or nuns, constituting one local community; now usually restricted to a convent of nuns; as, to go into a convent. Sacred Heart Academy of Galveston v. Karsh, 122 S.W.2d 416, 417, 173 Tenn. 618.

CONVENTICLE. A private assembly or meeting for the exercise of religion. The word was first an appellation of reproach to the religious asserm bies of Wycliffe in the reigns of Edward III, and Richard II., and was afterwards applied to a meeting of dissenters from the established church. As this word in strict propriety denotes an unlawful assembly, it cannot be justly applied to the assembling of persons in places of worship licensed according to the requisitions of law. Wharton.

CONVENTIO. Canon Law. The act of summoning or calling together the parties by summoning the defendant.

The Civil Law. A compact, agreement, or convention. An agreement between two or more persons respecting a legal relation between them. Mackeld. Rom. Law, §§ 385, 386.

The term is one of very wide scope, and applies to all classes of subjects in which an engagement or business relation may be founded by agreement. It is to be distinguished from the negotiations or preliminary transactions on the object of the convention and fixing its extent, which are not binding so long as the convention is not concluded.

In contracts. An agreement; a covenant. Cowell.

CONVENTIO IN UNUM. In the civil law. The agreement between the two parties to a contract upon the sense of the contract proposed. It is an essential part of the contract, following the pollicitation or proposal emanating from the one, and followed by the consension or agreement of the other.

CONVENTIO PRIVATORUM NON POTEST PUBLICO JURI DEROGARE. The agreement of private persons cannot derogate from public right, i.e., cannot prevent the application of general rules of law, or render valid any contravention of law. Co. Litt. 166a; Wing. Max. p. 746, max. 201.

CONVENTIO VINCIT LEGEM. The express agreement of parties overcomes [prevails against] the law. Story, Ag. § 368.

CONVENTION. In English law. An extraordinary assembly of the houses of lords and commons, without the assent or summons of the sovereign. It can only be justified ex necessitate rei, as the parliament which restored Charles II., and that which disposed of the crown and kingdom to William and Mary. Wharton. Also the name of an old writ that lay for the breach of a covenant.

In Roman law. An agreement between parties; a pact. A convention was a mutual engagement between two persons, possessing all the subjective requisites of a contract, but which did not give rise to an action, nor receive the sanction of the law, as bearing an "obligation," until the objective requisite of a solemn ceremonial, (such as stipulatio) was supplied. In other words, convention was the informal agreement of the parties, which formed the basis of a contract, and which became a contract when the external formalities were superimposed. See Maine, Anc. Law, 313.

"The division of conventions into contracts and pacts was important in the Roman law. The former were such conventions as already, by the older civil law, founded an obligation and action; all the other conventions were termed 'pacts.' These generally did not produce an actionable obligation. Actionability was subsequently given to several pacts, whereby they received the same power and efficacy that contracts received." Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 395.

In legislation. An assembly of delegates or representatives chosen by the people for special and extraordinary legislative purposes, such as the framing or revision of a state constitution. Also an assembly of delegates chosen by a political party, or by the party organization in a larger or smaller territory, to nominate candidates for an approaching election. In re Opinion of the Justices, 132 Me. 491, 167 A. 176, 179.

In public and international law. A pact or agreement between states or nations in the nature of a treaty; usually applied (a) to agreements or arrangements preliminary to a formal treaty or to serve as its basis, or (b) international agreements for the regulation of matters of common interest but not coming within the sphere of politics or commercial intercourse, such as international postage or the protection of submarine cables. U. S. v. Hunter, C.C.Mo., 21 F. 615.

Constitutional convention. See Constitution.

Judicial convention. See Judicial.

CONVENTIONAL. Depending on, or arising from, the mutual agreement of parties; as distinguished from legal, which means created by, or arising from, the act of the law. De Vita Nr& Pianisani, 217 N.Y.S. 438, 440, 127 Misc. 611.

CONVENTIONAL LIEN. A lien is conventional where the lien, general or particular (Cro. Car. 271; 6 Term. 14; 2 Kent 637) is raised by the express agreement and stipulation of the parties, in circumstances where the law alone would not create a lien from the mere relation of the parties or the details of their transaction.

CONVENTIONE. The name of a writ for the breach of any covenant in writing, whether real or personal. Reg.Orig. 115; Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 145.

CONVENTIONS. This name is sometimes given to compacts or treaties with foreign countries as to the apprehension and extradition of fugitive offenders. See Extradition.

CONVENTUAL CHURCH. In ecclesiastical law. That which consists of regular clerks, professing some order or religion; or of dean and chapter; or other societies of spiritual men.

CONVENTUALS. Religious men united in a convent or religious house. Cowell.

CONVENTUS. Lat. A coming together; a convention or assembly. Conventus magnatum vel procerum (the assembly of chief men or peers) was one of the names of the English parliament. 1 Bl. Comm. 148.

In the civil law. The term meant a gathering of people; a crowd assembled for any purpose; also a convention, pact, or bargain.
CONVENTUS JURIDICUS. In the Roman law. A court of sessions held in the Roman provinces, by the president of the province, assisted by a certain number of counsellors and assessors, at fixed periods, to hear and determine suits, and to provide for the civil administration of the province. Schm. Civil Law, Introd. 17.

CONVERSANT. One who is in the habit of being in a particular place is said to be conversant there. Barnes, 162. Acquainted; familiar.

CONVERSANTES. In old English law. Conversant or dwelling; commmentor.

CONVERSATION. Manner of living; habits of life; conduct; as in the phrase "chaste life and conversation." Bradshaw v. People, 153 Ill. 156, 38 N.E. 652. Criminal conversation means seduction of another man's wife, considered as an actionable injury to the husband. Prettyman v. Williamson, 1 Pennewill (Del.) 224, 39 A. 731; Crocker v. Crocker, C.C.Mass., 98 F. 702.

CONVERSE. The transposition of the subject and predicate in a proposition, as: "Everything is good in its place." Converse, "Nothing is good which is not in its place." Wharton.

CONVERSION. Equity. The exchange of property from real to personal or from personal to real, which takes place under some circumstances in the consideration of the law, such as, to give effect to directions in a will or settlement, or to stipulations in a contract, although no such change has actually taken place, 1 Bro.C.C. 497; 1 Lead.Cas.Eq. 619; 1 Lead. Cas.Eq. 872; Lawrence v. Elliott, 3 Redf.Sur. (N.Y.) 235; Dodge v. Williams, 46 Wis. 70, 1 N.W. 92, 50 N.W. 1108; Mattison v. Stone, 99 S.C. 151, 82 S.E. 1046, 1047; and by which exchange the property so dealt with becomes invested with the properties and attributes of that into which it is supposed to have been converted; Seymour v. Freer, 8 Wall. 214, 19 L.Ed. 306; Haward v. Peavey, 128 Ill. 430, 21 N.E. 503, 15 Am.St.Rep. 120.

Although it is sometimes necessary for certain purposes of devolution and transfer to regard the property in its changed condition as though the change has not absolutely taken place; Davidson v. Bright, 267 Pa. 580, 110 A. 301, 302.

A qualified conversion is one directed for some particular purpose; Harker v. Reilly, 4 Del.Ch. 72.

Law

An unauthorized assumption and exercise of the right of ownership over goods or personal chattels belonging to another, to the alteration of their condition or the exclusion of the owner's rights. Stickney v. Munroe, 44 Me. 197; Baldwin v. Cole, 6 Mod. 212; In re Di Crocco's Estate, 12 N.Y.S.2d 276, 278, 170 Misc. 826; Powell v. A. K. Brown Motor Co., 20 S.E.2d 636, 637, 200 S.C. 75. Any unauthorized act which deprives an owner of his property permanently or for an indefinite time. Forbush v. San Diego Fruit & Produce Co., 46 Idaho, 231, 266 P. 659, 663.

Also one who aids and abets another in keeping property from its rightful owner is guilty of "conversion". Edwards v. Max Thieme Chevrolet Co., La.App., 191 So. 569, 571, 572.

Direct conversion. The act of actually appropriating the property of another to his own beneficial use and enjoyment, or to that of a third person, or destroying it, or altering its nature. Ross v. Lewis, 23 N.M. 524, 169 P. 468, 469; or wrongfully assuming title in himself; Cass v. Ocean Park Bath Co., 45 Cal.App. 656, 188 P. 616, 617; there must be a positive wrong or act of malfeasance; American Surety Co. of New York v. Hill County, Tex.Civ.App., 254 S.W. 241, 245.

CONVEY. To pass or transmit the title from one to another; to transfer property or the title to property by deed or instrument under seal. Used popularly in sense of "assign," "sale," or "transfer." Crookshanks v. Ransbarger, 80 W.Va. 21, 92 S.E. 78, 82; McQuiddy Printing Co. v. Hirsig, 23 Tenn.App. 434, 134 S.W.2d 197, 205.

Convey relates properly to the disposition of real property, not to personal. Dickerman v. Abrahams, 21 Barb., N.Y., 551, 561. To convey real estate is, by an appropriate instrument, to transfer the legal title to it from the present owner to another. Abendroth v. Greenwich, 29 Conn. 356.

CONVEYANCE. In pleading. Introduction or inducement.

In real property law. In the strict legal sense, a transfer of legal title to land. In the popular sense, and as generally used by lawyers, it denotes any transfer of title, legal or equitable. Chupco v. Chapman, 76 Okl. 201, 170 P. 259, 266. The transfer of the title of land from one person or class of persons to another. Klein v. McNamara, 54 Miss. 105; Alexander v. State, 28 Tex. App. 186, 12 S.W. 595; In re Loes' Will, 55 N.Y.S. 2d 723, 726. An instrument in writing under seal, (anciently termed an "assurance," by which some estate or interest in lands is transferred from one person to another; such as a deed, mortgage, etc. 2 Bl. Comm. 293, 295, 309.

Conveyance includes every instrument in writing by which any estate or interest in real estate is created, aliened, mortgaged, or assigned, or by which the title to any real estate may be affected in law or equity, except last wills and testaments, leases for a term not exceeding three years, and executory contracts for the sale or purchase of lands. Stearns Lighting & Power Co. v. Central Trust Co., C.C.A.Mich., 223 F. 962, 966; Shraiberg v. Hanson, 138 Minn. 80, 163 N.W. 1032, 1033.

General

Absolute or conditional conveyance. An absolute conveyance is one by which the right or property in a thing is transferred, free of any condition or qualification, by which it might be defeated or changed; as an ordinary deed of lands, in contradic distinction to a mortgage, which is a conditional conveyance. Burritt; Falconer v. Buffalo, etc., R. Co., 69 N.Y. 491; Brown v. United States,
C.C.A.Pa., 95 Fed.2d 487, 489.

Fraudulent conveyance. See Fraudulent.

Mesne conveyance. An intermediate conveyance; one occupying an intermediate position in a chain of title between the first grantee and the present holder.

Primary conveyances. Those by means whereof the benefit or estate is created or first arises;
as distinguished from those whereby it may be enlarged, restrained, transferred, or extinguished.
The term includes feoffment, gift, grant, lease, exchange, and partition, and is opposed to derivative conveyances, such as release, surrender, confirmation, etc. 2 Bl. Comm. 309.

Secondary conveyances. The name given to that class of conveyances which presuppose some other conveyance precedent, and only serve to enlarge, confirm, alter, restrain, restore, or transfer the interest granted by such original conveyance.
2 Bl. Comm. 324. Otherwise termed “derivative conveyances” (q. u.).

Voluntary conveyance. A conveyance without valuable consideration; such as a deed or settlement in favor of a wife or children. Gentry v.
Field, 143 Mo. 399, 45 S.W. 286; Shannon v. Duff-field, 218 Ky. 770, 292 S.W. 322, 323; English v.

CONVEYANCER. One whose business it is to draw deeds, bonds, mortgages, wills, writs, or other legal papers, or to examine titles to real estate.
14 St. at Large, 118.

He who draws conveyances; especially a barrister who confines himself to drawing conveyances, and other cham-

CONVEYANCING. A term including both the science and art of transferring titles to real estate from one man to another.

Conveyancing is that part of the lawyer’s business which relates to the alienation and transmission of property and other rights from one person to another, and to the framing of legal documents intended to create, define, transfer, or extinguish rights. It therefore includes the investigation of the title to land, and the preparation of agreements, wills, articles of association, private statutes operating as conveyances, and many other instruments in addition to conveyances properly so called. Sweet; Livermore v. Bagley, 3 Mass. 505.

CONVEYANCING COUNSEL TO THE COURT OF CHANCERY. Certain counsel, not fewer than six in number, appointed by the lord chancellor, for the purpose of assisting the court of chancery, or any judge thereof, with their opinion in matters of title and conveyancing. Mozley & Whitley.

CONVICIA SI IRASCARIS TUA DIVULGAS; SPRETA EXOLESCUNT. 3 Inst. 198. If you be moved to anger by insults, -you publish them; if despised, they are forgotten.

CONVICT, v. To condemn after judicial investigation; to find a man guilty of a criminal charge.
The word was formerly used also in the sense of finding against the defendant in a civil case.

Formerly a man was said to be convict when he had been found guilty of treason or felony, but before judgment had been passed on him, after which he was said to be attaint, (q. u.)
Co.Lit 390b.

CONVICT, n. One who has been finally condemned by a court. One who has been adjudged guilty of a crime or misdemeanor. Usually spoken of condemned felons or the prisoners in penitentiaries. Molineux v. Collins, 177 N.Y. 395, 69 N.E. 727,

CONVICTED. Means that a judgment of final condemnation has been pronounced against the accused. Gallagher v. State, 10 Tex.App. 469; Neibling v. Terry, 177 S.W.2d 502, 504, 352 Mo.
396, 152 A.L.R. 249.

CONVICTION. In a general sense, the result of a criminal trial which ends in a judgment or sentence that the prisoner is guilty as charged.

The act of convicting a person, or state of being convicted, of a criminal offense. Hershey v. People, 91 Colo.
113, 12 P.2d 345, 347. Finding a person guilty by verdict of a jury. 1 Bish.Crim.Law, § 225; Emmertson v. State

A record of the summary proceedings upon any penal statute before one or more justices of the peace or other persons duly authorized, in a case where the offender has been convicted and sentenced. Holthouse. In respect of pardoning power, verdict of guilty. State v. Garrett, 135 Tenn.
617, 188 S.W. 58, L.R.A.1917B, 567. Contra, Ex

In ordinary phrase, the meaning of the word “conviction” is the finding by the jury of a verdict that the accused is guilty. But, in legal parlance, it often denotes the final judgment of the court. Blaufus v. People, 69 N.Y.
N.E. 369; Commonwealth v. Minnich, 250 Pa. 363, 95 A.
565, 567, L.R.A.1918B, 950.

The ordinary legal meaning of “conviction,” when used to designate a particular stage of a criminal prosecution triable by a jury, is the confession of the accused in open court or the verdict returned against him by the jury, which ascertains and publishes the fact of his guilt; while “judgment” or “sentence” is the appropriate word to denote the action of the court before which the trial is had, denoting the consequences to the convict of the fact thus ascertained. A pardon granted after verdict of guilty, but before sentence, and pending a hearing upon exceptions taken by the accused during the trial, is granted after conviction, within the meaning of a constitutional restriction upon granting pardon before conviction. When, indeed, the word “conviction” is used to describe the effect of the guilt of the accused as judicially proved in one case, when pleaded or given in evidence in another, it is sometimes used in a more comprehensive sense, including the judgement of the court upon the verdict or confession of guilt;
as, for instance, in speaking of the plea of autrefois convict, or of the effect of guilt, judicially ascertained, as a disqualification of the convict. Co. v. Lockwood, 109

Summary Conviction. The conviction of a person, (usually for a minor misdemeanor,) as the result of his trial before a magistrate or court, without the intervention of a jury, which is authorized by statute in England and in many of the states. In these proceedings there is no intervention of a jury, but the party accused is acquitted or condemned by the suffrage of such person only as the statute has appointed to be his judge. A conviction reached on such a magistrate's trial is called a "summary conviction." Brown; Blair v. Com., 25 Grat. (Va.) 853.

CONVINCING PROOF. Such as is sufficient to establish the proposition in question, beyond hesitation, ambiguity, or reasonable doubt, in an unprejudiced mind. Evans v. Rugge, 57 Wis. 623, 16 N.W. 49; French v. Day, 89 Me. 441, 36 A. 909. See Clear.

CONVIVIUM. A tenancy by which a tenant was bound to provide meat and drink for his lord at least once in the year. Cowell.

CONVOCATION. In ecclesiastical law. The general assembly of the clergy to consult upon ecclesiastical matters.

CONVOY. A naval force, under the command of an officer appointed by government, for the protection of merchant-ships and others, during the whole voyage, or such part of it as is known to require such protection. Marsh. Ins. b. 1, c. 9, § 5; Park, Ins. 388; Peake, Add. Cas. 143n; 2 H. Bl. 551.

CO-OBLIGOR. A joint obligor; one bound jointly with another or others in a bond or obligation.

COOL BLOOD. In the law of homicide. Calmness or tranquillity; the undisturbed possession of one's faculties and reason; the absence of violent passion, fury, or uncontrollable excitement.

COOLING TIME. Time to recover "cool blood" after severe excitement or provocation; time for the mind to become so calm and sedate as that it is supposed to contemplate, comprehend, and coolly act with reference to the consequences likely to ensue. May v. People, 8 Colo. 210, 6 P. 816; Keiser v. Smith, 71 Ala. 481, 46 Am.Rep. 342.

CO-OPERATE. To act jointly or concurrently toward a common end. Darnell v. Equity Life Ins. Co.'s Receivers, 179 Ky. 465, 200 S.W. 967, 970.

CO-OPERATION. In economics. The combined action of numbers. It is of two distinct kinds: (1) Such co-operation as takes place when several persons help each other in the same employment; (2) such co-operation as takes place when several persons help each other in different employments. These may be termed "simple co-operation" and "complex co-operation." Mill, Pol. Ec. 142.

CO-OPERATIVE ASSOCIATION. A union of individuals commonly laborers, farmers, or small capitalists, formed for the prosecution in common of some productive enterprise, the profits being shared in accordance with the capital or labor contributed by each. Mooney v. Farmers' Mercantile & Elevator Co. of Madison, 138 Minn. 199, 164 N.W. 804, 805.

COOPTERTIO. In old English law. The head or branches of a tree cut down; though coopertio arborum is rather the bark of timber trees felled, and the chumps and broken wood. Cowell.

COOPER TUM. In forest law. A covert; a thicket (dumetum) or shelter for wild beasts in a forest. Spelman.

COOPER TURA. In forest law. A thicket, or covert of wood.

COOPER TUS. Covert; covered.

CO-OP TION. A concurring choice; the election, by the members of a close corporation, of a person to fill a vacancy.

Co-ordinate and Subordinate are terms often applied as a test to ascertain the doubtful meaning of clauses in an act of parliament. If there be two, one of which is grammatically governed by the other, it is said to be "subordinate" to it; but, if both are equally governed by some third clause, the two are called "co-ordinate." Wharton.

CO-ORDINATE JURISDICTION. That which is possessed by courts of equal rank, degree, or authority, equally competent to deal with the matter in question, whether belonging to the same or different systems; concurrent jurisdiction.

COPAUCENARY. A species of estate, or tenancy, which exists where lands of inheritance descend from the ancestor to two or more persons. It arises in England either by common law or particular custom. By common law, as where a person, seised in fee-simple or fee-tail, dies, and his next heirs are two or more females, his daughters, sisters, aunts, cousins, or their representatives; in this case they all inherit, and these coheirs, are then called "coparceners," or, for brevity, "partceners" only. Litt. §§ 241, 242; 2 Bl.
Comm. 187. By particular custom, as where lands descend, as in gavelkind, to all the males in equal degree, as sons, brothers, uncles, etc. Litt. § 265; 1 Steph. Comm. 319. An estate which several persons hold as one heir, whether male or female.
This estate has the three unities of time, title, and possession; but the interests of the coparceners may be unequal. 1 Washb. Real Prop. 414;
2 Bl. Comm. 188; 4 Kent 366; Flynn v. Herye, 4
Mo.App. 360.

While joint tenancies refer to persons, the idea of coparcenary refers to the estate. The title to it is always by descent. The respective shares may be unequal; as, for instance, one daughter and two granddaughters, children of a deceased daughter, may take by the same act of descent. As to strangers, the tenants' seisin is a joint one, but, as between themselves, each is seised of his or her own share, on whose death it goes to the heirs, and not by survivorship. The right of possession of coparceners' s is in common, and the possession of one is, in general, the possession of the others. 1 Washb. Real Prop. 414.

COPARCIERS. Persons to whom an estate of inheritance descends jointly, and by whom it is held as an entire estate. 2 Bl. Comm. 187.

COPARTICEPS, In old English law. A copar-cener.

COPARTNER. One who is a partner with one or more other persons; a member of a partnership.

COPARTNERSHIP. A partnership.

COPARTNERY. In Scotch law. The contract of copartnership. A contract by which the several partners agree concerning the communication of loss or gain, arisin from the subject of the contract. Bell.

COPE. A custom or tribute due to the crown or lord of the soil, out of the lead mines in Derbyshire; also a hill, or the roof and covering of a house; a church vestment.

COPEMAN, or COPESMAN. A chapman, (q. v.).

COPESMATE. A merchant; a partner in merchandise.

COPIA. Lat. In civil and old English law. Opportunity or means of access.

In old English law. A copy. Copia libell, the copy of a libel. Reg. Orig. 58.

COPIA LIBELLI DELIBERANDA. The name of a writ that lay where a man could not get a copy of a libel at the hands of a spiritual judge, to have the same delivered to him. Reg. Orig. 51.

Words written at the top of copies of instruments.

COPPA. In English law. A crop or cock of grass, hay, or corn, divided into titheable portions, that it may be more fairly and justly tithed.

COPPER AND SCALES. See Mancipatio.

COPPER MATTE. A product of smelting copper ore in a furnace consisting almost entirely of a mixture of iron sulphide and copper sulphide. It requires further treatment to break up and remove iron sulphide, and then convert remaining copper sulphide which is called white metal to metallic copper. United Verde Copper Co. v.
Peirce-Smith Converter Co., C.C.A. Del., 7 F.2d
13. Also known as "regulus of copper." U. S. v.
Consolidated Kansas City Smelting & Refining Co.,

COPPICE, or COPSE. A small wood consisting of underwood, which may be cut at twelve or fiften years' growth for fuel.

COPROLALIA. In medical jurisprudence. A disposition or habit of using obscene language, developing unexpectedly in the particular individual or contrary to his previous history and habits, recognized as a sign of insanity or of aphasia.

COPULA. The corporal consummation of marriage. Copula, (in logic,) the link between subject and predicate contained in the verb.

COPULATIO VERBORUM INDICAT ACCEPTA-TIONEM IN EODEM SENSU. Coupling of words together shows that they are to be understood in the same sense. 4 Bacon's. Works, p. 26;
Broom, Max. 588.

COPULATIVE TERM. One which is placed between two or more others to join them together.

COPY. The transcript or double of an original writing; as the copy of a patent, charter, deed, etc. Nations v. Lowenstern, 27 N.M. 613, 204 P.
60, 62; State Text-Book Commission v. Weathers, 184 Ky. 748, 213 S.W. 207, 210; In re Janes' Este, 18 Cal.2d 512, 116 P.2d 438, 441.

Carbon copies. Carbon copies made at the same time and with the same device as the origi-al are not "copies" but duplicate originals. Martin 302, 108 S.E. 246, 247; Liberty Nat. Bank and Trust Co. v. Louisville Trust Co., 295 Ky. 825, 175
S.W.2d 524, 528.

Examplifications are copies verified by the great seal or by the seal of a court. West Jersey Traction Co. v. Board of Public Works, 57 N.J.Law, 313, 30 A. 581.

Examined copies are those which have been compared with the original or with an official record thereof.

Office copies are those made by officers intrusted with the originals and authorized for that pur-See, also, Office.

In the law of copyrights. A reproduction or duplication of a thing, or that which comes so near to the original as to give to every person seeing it the idea created by the original. McConnell v.

COPYHOLD. A species of estate at will, or customary estate in England, the only visible title to which consists of the copies of the court rolls, which are made out by the steward of the manor, on a tenant's being admitted to any parcel of land, or tenement belonging to the manor. It is an estate at the will of the lord, yet such a will as is agreeable to the custom of the manor, which customs are preserved and evidenced by the rolls of the several courts baron, in which they are entered. 2 Bl.Com. 95. In a larger sense, copyhold is said to import every customary tenure, that is, every tenure pending on the particular custom of a manor, as opposed to free socage, or freehold, which may now (since the abolition of knight-service) be considered as the general or common-law tenure of the country. 1 Steph. Comm. 210.

Copyhold commissioners. Commissioners appointed to carry into effect various acts of parliament, having for their principal objects the compulsory commutation of manorial burdens and restrictions, (fines, heriots, rights to timber and minerals, etc.,) and the compulsory enfranchise ment of copyhold lands. 1 Steph. Comm. 643; Elton, Copyh.

Privileged copyholds. Those copyhold estates which are said to be held according to the custom of the manor, and not at the will of the lord, as common copyholds are. They include customary freeholds and ancient demesnes. i Crabb, Real Prop. p. 709, § 919.

COPYRIGHT. The right of literary property as recognized and sanctioned by positive law. An intangible, incorporeal right granted by statute to the author or originator of certain literary or artistic productions, whereby he is invested, for a limited period, with the sole and exclusive privilege of multiplying copies of the same and publishing and selling them. In re Rider, 16 R.I. 271, 15 A. 72; Mott Iron Works v. Clow, C.C.A.III., 82 F. 316, 27 C.C.A. 250; Palmer v. De Witt, 47 N.Y. 536, 7 Am.Rep. 480; Stuff v. La Budde Feed & Grain Co., D.C.Wis., 42 F.Supp. 493, 497; Schill v. Remington Putnam Book Co., 179 Md. 83, 17 A.2d 175.

International copyright is the right of a subject of one country to protection against the republication in another country of a work which he originally published in his own country. Sweet.

CORAAGIUM, or CORAAGE. Measures of corn. An unusual and extraordinary tribute, arising only on special occasions. They are thus distinguished from services. Mentioned in connection with hidage and carvage. Cowell.

CORAM. Lat. Before; in presence of. Applied to persons only. Townsh. Pl. 22.

CORAM DOMINO REGE. Before our lord the king. Coram domino rege ubicumque tune fuerit Anglice, before our lord the king wherever he shall then be in England.

CORAM IPSO REGE. Before the king himself. The old name of the court of king's bench, which was originally held before the king in person. 3 Bl.Com. 41.

CORAM NOBIS. Before us ourselves, (the king, i. e., in the king's or queen's bench.) Applied to writs of error directed to another branch of the same court, e. g., from the full bench to the court at nisi prius. 1 Archb. Pr. K. B. 234. See Writ of Error.

CORAM NON JUDICE. In presence of a person not a judge. When a suit is brought and determined in a court which has no jurisdiction in the matter, then it is said to be coram non judice, and the judgment is void. Manufacturing Co. v. Holt, 51 W.Va. 352, 41 S.E. 351.

CORAM PARIBUS. Before the peers or freeholders. The attestation of deeds, like all other solemn transactions, was originally done only coram paribus. 2 Bl.Com. 307. Coram paribus de vicineto, before the peers or freeholders of the neighborhood. Id. 315.

CORAM SECTORIBUS. Before the suitors. Cro. Jac. 582.

CORAM VOBIS. Before you. A writ of error directed by a court of review to the court which tried the cause, to correct an error in fact. 3 Md. 325; 3 Steph.Comm. 642. See Writ of Error.

CORN. In English law, a general term for any sort of grain; but in America it is properly applied only to maize. Sullins v. State, 53 Ala. 476; Kerrick v. Van Dusen, 32 Minn. 317, 20 N.W. 228; Corn. v. Pine, 3 Pa.Law. 420.

In the memorandum clause in policies of insurance it includes pease and beans, but not rice. Park, Ins. 112; Scott v. Bourdillion, 2 Bos. & P., N. It., 213.

CORONER'S INQUEST. An inquisition or examination into the causes and circumstances of any death happening by violence or under suspicious conditions within his territory, held by the coroner with the assistance of a jury. Boisliniere v. County Com'rs, 32 Mo. 378; Ehlers v. Blood, 175 Misc. 72, 22 N.Y.S.2d 1001, 1005.

CORPORAL. Relating to the body; bodily. Should be distinguished from corporeal (q. v.)

CORPORAL IMBECILITY. Physical inability to perform completely the act of sexual intercourse; not necessarily congenital, and not invariably a permanent and incurable impotence. Griffith v. Griffith, 162 Ill. 368, 44 N.E. 820.

CORPORAL OATH. An oath, the external solemnity of which consists in laying one's hand upon the Gospels while the oath is administered to them. More generally, a solemn oath. Jackson v. State, 1 Ind. 185; State v. Norris, 9 N.H. 102; Com. v. Jarboe, 89 Ky. 143, 12 S.W. 138.

The terms "corporal oath" and "solemn oath" are, in Indiana, at least, used synonymously; and an oath taken with the uplifted hand may be properly described by either term.

CORPORAL PUNISHMENT. Physical punishment as distinguished from pecuniary punishment or a fine; any kind of punishment of or inflicted on the body, such as whipping or the pillory; the term may or may not include imprisonment, according to the context. Ritchey v. People, 22 Colo. 251, 43 P. 1026; Fowler v. American Mail Line, C. C.A Calif., 69 F.2d 905, 907.

The use of rubber hose or other weapon to suppress a threatened riot or to prevent prisoner from doing bodily harm to an officer or another inmate is not corporal punishment. O'Brien v. Olson, 42 Cal.App.2d 449, 109 P.2d 8, 16.

CORPORAL TOUCH. Bodily touch; actual physical contact; manual apprehension.

CORPORALIS INJURIA NON RECIPIT ESTIMATIIONEM DE FUTURO. A personal injury does not receive satisfaction from a future course of proceeding, [is not left for its satisfaction to a future course of proceeding.] Bac. Max. reg. 6; Broom, Max. 278.

CORPORATE ACT OR MINISTERIAL ACT OF MUNICIPAL CORPORATION. For which it can be held liable is act which is done by virtue of powers exercised for municipality's own advantage or in negligent performance of duty specifically imposed by statute. Broome v. City of Charlotte, 208 N.C. 729, 182 S.E. 325, 326.

CORPORATE ALTER EGO, DOCTRINE OF. Means that courts ignoring forms and looking to substance will regard stockholders as owners of corporation's property, or as the real parties in interest whenever it is necessary to do so to prevent fraud which might otherwise be perpetrated, to redress a wrong which might otherwise go without redress, or to do justice which might otherwise fail. Geary v. Cain, 79 Utah 268, 9 P. 2d 396, 398.

CORPORATE AUTHORITIES. The title given in statutes of several states to the aggregate body of officers of a municipal corporation, or to certain of those officers (excluding the others) who are vested with authority in regard to the particular matter spoken of in the statute, as, taxation, bonded debt, regulation of the sale of liquors, etc. See People v. Knopf, 171 Ill. 191, 49 N.E. 424; State v. Andrews, 11 Neb. 523, 10 N.W. 410; White v. Papillon Drainage Dist., 96 Neb. 241, 147 N.W. 218, 219; Schaeffer v. Bonham, 95 Ill. 382.

CORPORATE BODY. This term, or its equivalent "body corporate," is applied to private corporations aggregate; not including municipal corporations. Cedar County v. Johnson, 50 Mo. 225; East OaklandTp v. Skinner, 94 U.S. 256, 24 L.Ed. 125; County Board of Education for Houston County v. Hunt, 29 Ga.App. 665, 116 S.E. 900.

CORPORATE BONDS. A written promise by a corporation under seal to pay a fixed sum of money at some future time named, with stated interest payable at some fixed time or intervals, given in return for money or its equivalent received by the corporation, sometimes secured, and sometimes not. Hammond Lumber Co. v. Adams, 7 Cal.2d 24, 59 P.2d 1030, 1031.

CORPORATE FRANCHISE. The right to exist and do business as a corporation; the right or privilege granted by the state or government to the persons forming an aggregate private corporation, and their successors, to exist and do business as a corporation and to exercise the rights and powers incidental to that form of organiza-

CORPORATE LEGAL INDIVIDUAL. Municipal corporation was created or necessarily implied in the grant. Bank of Corporation was created or necessarily implied in the grant. Bank of CORPORATE NAME. When a corporation is erected, a name is always given to it, or, supposing none to be actually given, will attach to it by implication, and by that name alone it must sue and be sued, and do all legal acts, though a very minute variation therein is not material, and the name is capable of being changed (by competent authority) without affecting the identity or capacity of the corporation. Wharton.

CORPORATE PURPOSE. In reference to municipal corporations, and especially to their powers of taxation, a "corporate purpose" is one which shall promote the general prosperity and the welfare of the municipality. Dickinson v. Salt Lake City, 57 Utah 530, 195 P. 1110, 1111; City of Quitman v. Jelks & McLeod, 139 Ga. 238, 77 S.E. 76; People ex rel. Moshier v. City of Springfield, 370 Ill. 541, 19 N.E.2d 598, 602; or a purpose necessary or proper to carry into effect the object of the creation of the corporate body, People v. School Trustees, 78 Ill. 140; or one which is germane to the general scope of the objects for which the corporation was created or has a legitimate connection with those objects and a manifest relation thereto. Weightman v. Clark, 103 U.S. 256, 26 L.Ed. 392; Denman v. City of Tacoma, 170 Wash. 406, 16 P.2d 596, 597.

CORPORATION. An artificial person or legal entity created by or under the authority of the laws of a state or nation, composed, in some rare instances, of a single person and his successors, being the incumbents of a particular office, but ordinarily consisting of an association of numerous individuals, who subsist as a body politic under a special denomination, which is regarded in law as having a personality and existence distinct from that of its several members, and which is, by the same authority, vested with the capacity of continuous succession, irrespective of changes in its membership, either in perpetuity or for a limited term of years, and of acting as a unit or single individual in matters relating to the common purpose of the association, within the scope of the powers and authorities conferred upon such bodies by law. Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 636, 657, 4 L.Ed. 629; U. S. v. Trinidad Coal Co., 137 U.S. 160, 11 S.Ct. 57, 34 L.Ed. 640; Andrews Bros. Co. v. Youngstown Coke Co., 86 F. 585, 30 C.C.A. 293; Porter v. Railroad Co., 76 Ill. 573; Nebraska Wheat Growers' Ass'n v. Smith, 115 Neb. 177, 212 N.W. 39, 44; State v. Thistle Down Jockey Club, 114 Ohio St. 582, 151 N.E. 709, 711; Congdon v. Congdon, 160 Minn. 343, 200 N.W. 76, 87; Forest City Mfg. Co. v. International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, Local No. 104, 233 Mo.App. 935, 111 S.W.2d 934; In re Crown Heights Hospital, 183 Misc. 563, 49 N.Y.S.2d 658, 660; Froelich and Kuttner, of Manila, P. I., V. Sutherland, 57 App.D.C. 294, 22 F.2d 870, 872.

A franchise possessed by one or more individuals, who subsist as a body politic, under a special denomination, and are vested by the policy of the law with the capacity of perpetual succession, and of acting in several respects, however numerous the association may be, as a single individual. 2 Kent, Comm. 267.

An artificial person or being, endowed by law with the capacity of perpetual succession; consisting either of a single individual, (termed a "corporation sole," or of a collection of several individuals, (which is termed a "corporation aggregate.") 3 Steph.Comm. 166; 1 Bl.Comm. 467, 469. An intellectual body, created by law, composed of individuals united under a common name, the members of which succeed each other, so that the body continues always the same, notwithstanding the change of the individuals who compose it, and which, for certain purposes, is considered a natural person. Civil Code La. art. 427.

A "corporation" is more nearly a method than a thing, and the law, in dealing with a corporation, need not define it as a person or entity, or even as an embodiment of functions, rights, and duties. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Pierson, 222 N.Y.532, 543, 130 Misc. 110.

The statement that a "corporation" is an artificial person or entity, apart from its members, is merely a description, in figurative language, of a corporation viewed as a collective body. McIntosh v. Dakota Trust Co., 52 N.D. 752, 204 N.W. 818, 825, 40 A.L.R. 1021.

A corporation is a collection of natural persons, joined together by their voluntary action or by legal compulsion, by or under the authority of an act of the Legislature, consisting either of a special charter or of a general permissive statute, to accomplish some purpose, pecuniary, ideal, or governmental, authorized by the charter or governing statute. State v. Knights of Ku Klux Klan, 117 Kan. 564, 232 P. 254, 257, 37 A.L.R. 1267.

Classification

According to the accepted definitions and rules, corporations are classified as follows:

Public and private. A public corporation is one created by the state for political purposes and to act as an agency in the administration of civil government, generally within a particular territory or subdivision of the state, and usually invested, for that purpose, with subordinate and local powers of legislation; such as a county, city, town, or school district. These are also sometimes called "political corporations." Goodwin v. East Hartford, 70 Conn. 18, 38 A. 876; Dean v. Davis, 51 Cal. 409; Ten Eyck v. Canal Co., 18 N.J. Law. 200, 37 Am.Dec. 233; Murphy v. Mercer County, 37 N.J. Law. 245, 31 N.J. 229; Van Campen v. Union General Hospital, 210 App.Div. 204, 105 N.Y.S. 554, 555; Providence Engineering Corporation v. Downey Shipbuilding Corporation, C.C.A. N.Y., 294 F. 641, 646; National Bank of Commerce in New Orleans v. Board of Sup'rs of La. State University and Agricultural and Mechanical College, 206 La. 913, 20 So.2d 264, 269.

poses, as distinguished from governmental purposes, and having no political or governmental franchises or duties. Santa Clara County v. Southern Pac. R. Co., C.C.Cal., 18 F. 385, 402; People v. McAdams, 82 Ill. 361; Providence Engineering Corporation v. Downey Shipbuilding Corporation, C.C.A.N.Y., 294 F. 641, 648.

The true distinction between public and private corporations is that the former are organized for governmental purposes, the latter not. The term "public" has sometimes been applied to corporations of which the government owned the entire stock, as in the case of a state bank. But bearing in mind that "public" is here equivalent to "political," it will be apparent that this is a misnomer. Against the fact that the stock or ownership of a corporation may directly and very extensively affect the general public (as in the case of a railroad company or a bank or an insurance company) is no reason for calling it a public corporation. If organized by private persons for their own advantage,—or even if organized for the benefit of the public generally, as in the case of a free public hospital or other charitable institution,—it is none the less a private corporation, if it does not possess governmental powers or functions. The uses may in a sense be called "public," but the corporation is "private," as much so as if the franchises were vested in a single person. Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 562, 1 L.Ed. 629; Ten Eyck v. Canal Co., 18 N.J.Law, 204, 37 Am.Dec. 233. It is to be observed, however, that those corporations which serve the public or contribute to the comfort and convenience of the general public, though owned and managed by private interests, are now (and quite appropriately) denominated "public-service corporations." See infra. Another distinction between public and private corporations is that the former are not voluntary associations (as the latter are) and that there is no contractual relation between the government and a public corporation or between the individuals who compose it. Mor Priv Corp. § 3; Goodwin v. East Hartford, 70 Conn. 18, 38 A. 876.

The terms "public" and "municipal," as applied to corporations, are not convertible. All municipal corporations are public, but not vice versa. Brown v. Board of Education, 108 Ky. 783, 57 S.W. 612. But there may also be "public" corporations which are not "municipal" even in this wider sense of the latter term. Such, according to some of the authorities, are the "irrigation districts" now known in several of the western states. Irrigation Dist. v. Collins, 46 Neb. 411, 4 N.W. 1086. Compare Herring v. Modesta Irrigation Dist., C.C.Cal., 95 F. 705.

Ecclesiastical and lay. In the English law, all corporations private are divided into ecclesiastical and lay, the former being such corporations as are composed exclusively of ecclesiastics organized for spiritual purposes, or for administering property held for religious uses, such as bishoprics and certain other dignitaries of the church and (formerly) abbeys and monasteries. 1 Bl. Comm. 470. Lay corporations are those composed of laymen, and existing for secular or business purposes. This distinction is not recognized in American law. The Corporation for the purpose of maintaining or propagating religion or of supporting public religious services, according to the rites of particular denominations, and incidentally owning and administering real and personal property for religious uses, are called "religious corporations," as distinguished from business corporations; but they are "lay corporations, and not "ecclesiastical" in the sense of the English law. Robertson v. Bullions, 11 N.Y. 243.

Eelemosnary and civil. Lay corporations are classified as "elemosnary" and "civil," the former being such as are created for the distribution of alms or for the administration of charities or for purposes falling under the description of "charitable" in its widest sense, including hospitals, asylums, and colleges; the latter being organized for the facilitating of business transactions and the profit or advantage of the members. 1 Bl.Comm. 471; Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 660, 4 L.Ed. 629.

In the law of Louisiana, the term "civil" as applied to corporations, is used in a different sense, being contrasted with "religious." Civil corporations are those which relate to temporal police; such are the corporations of the cities, the companies for the advancement of commerce and agriculture, literary societies, colleges or universities founded for the instruction of youth, and the like. Religious corporations are those whose establishment relates only to religion; such are the congregations of the different religious persuasions. Civ.Code La. art. 431.

Aggregate and sole. A corporation sole is one consisting of one person only, and his successors in some particular station, who are incorporated bylaw in order to give them some legal capacities and advantages, particularly that of perpetuity, which in their natural persons they could not have had. In this sense, the sovereign in England is a sole corporation, so is a bishop, so are some deans distinct from their several chapters, and so is every parson and vicar. 3 Steph.Comm. 168, 169; First Parish v. Dunning, 7 Mass. 447; Reid v. Barry, 93 Fla. 849, 112 So. 846, 859.

A corporation aggregate is one composed of a number of individuals vested with corporate powers; and a "corporation," as the word is used in general popular and legal speech, and as defined at the head of this title, means a "corporation aggregate."

Domestic and foreign. With reference to the laws and the courts of any given state, a "domestic" corporation is one created by, or organized under, the laws of that state; a "foreign" corporation is one created by or under the laws of another state, government, or country. In re Grand Lodge, 110 Pa. 613, 1 A. 582; Fowler v. Chillingworth, 94 Fla. 1, 113 So. 667, 669; In re Ewles' Estate, 105 Utah 507, 143 P.2d 903, 905.

Close and open. A "close" corporation is one in which the directors and officers have the power to fill vacancies in their own number, without allowing to the general body of stockholders any choice or vote in their election. An "open" corporation is one in which all the members or corporators have a vote in the election of the directors and other officers. McKim v. Odom, 3 Bland, Md., 416.

A close corporation is one which fills its own vacancies or in which power of voting is held through manipulation under fixed and virtually perpetual proxies. Brooks v. Willcuts, C.C.A.Minn., 78 F.2d 270, 273.

Other Compound and Descriptive Terms

A business corporation. One formed for the purpose of transacting business in the widest sense of that term, including not only trade and commerce, but manufacturing, mining, banking, insurance, transportation, and practically every form of commercial or industrial activity where the purpose of the organization is pecuniary profit; contrasted with religious, charitable, educational, and other like organizations, which are sometimes grouped in the statutory law of a state under the general designation of “corporations not for profit.” Winter v. Railroad Co., 30 Fed.Cas. 329; McLeod v. College, 69 Neb. 550, 96 N.W. 265.

Corporation de facto. One existing under color of law and in pursuance of an effort made in good faith to organize a corporation under the statute; an association of men claiming to be a legally incorporated company, and exercising the powers and functions of a corporation, but without actual lawful authority to do so. Foster v. Hare, 26 Tex. Civ.App. 177, 62 S.W. 541; Cedar Rapids Water Co. v. Cedar Rapids, 118 Iowa, 234, 91 N.W. 1081; Townsend v. Shepard, 185 U.S. 1, 22 S.Ct. 531, 46 L.Ed. 773; Evens v. Anderson, 132 Minn. 59, 155 N.W. 1040, 1041.

Its elements are a law or charter authorizing such a corporation, an attempt in good faith to comply with law authorizing its incorporation, and unintentional omission of essential requirements of the law or charter, and exercise in good faith of corporate functions under the law or charter. Richmond v. Town of Largo, 155 Fla. 226, 19 So.2d 791, 793.

Corporation de jure. That which exists by reason of full compliance by incorporators with requirements of an existing law permitting organization of such corporation; it is impregnable to assault in the courts from any source. Henderson v. School Dist. No. 44, 75 Mont. 154, 242 P. 979, 980.

Joint-stock corporation. This differs from a joint-stock company in being regularly incorporated, instead of being a mere partnership, but resembles it in having a capital divided into shares of stock. Most business corporations (as distinguished from eleemosynary corporations) are of this character.

A “joint-stock corporation” is one organized under a general statute authorizing the creation of such corporations and providing the procedure for creating it, and is distinguished from a “corporation” created by special resolution or act of the Legislature, which resolution or act is the charter of the corporation, when accepted, and the corporation organized thereunder, and the corporation is a chartered corporation, as distinguished from a joint-stock corporation. Barber v. Morgan, 89 Conn. 583, 94 A. 984, 986, Ann.Cas.1916E, 102.

Migratory corporation. A corporation, organized under laws of another state than that of incorporators’ residence for purpose of doing all or greater part of their business in state of their residence or in other state than that of incorporation. Toklan Royalty Corporation v. Tiffany, 193 Okl. 120, 141 P.2d 571, 573.

Moneymed corporations are, properly speaking, those dealing in money or in the business of receiving deposits, loaning money, and exchange; but in a wider sense the term is applied to all business corporations having a money capital and employing it in the conduct of their business. Mutual Ins. Co. v. Erie County, 4 N.Y. 444; In re California Pac. R. Co., 4 Fed.Cas. 1,060; Hobbs v. National Bank, C.C.A.N.Y., 101 F. 75, 41 C.C.A. 205.

Municipal corporations. See that title.

Public-service corporations. Those whose operations serve the needs of the general public or conduct to the comfort and convenience of an entire community, such as railroads, gas, water, and electric light companies. The business of such companies is said to be “affected with a public interest,” and for that reason they are subject to legislative regulation and control to a greater extent than corporations not of this character. Washington & C. Ry. Co. v. Mobile & O. R. Co., C.C.A.Ala., 255 F. 12, 14.

Quasi corporations. Organizations resembling corporations; municipal societies or similar bodies which, though not true corporations in all respects, are yet recognized, by statutes or immemorial usage, as persons or aggregate corporations, with precise duties which may be enforced, and privileges which may be maintained, by suits at law. They may be considered quasi corporations, with limited powers, co-extensive with the duties imposed upon them by statute or usage, but restrained from a general use of the authority which belongs to those metaphysical persons by the common law. Scales v. King, 110 Ill. 456; Barnes v. District of Columbia, 91 U.S. 552, 23 L.Ed. 440.

This term is lacking in definiteness and precision. It appears to be applied indiscriminately (a) to all kinds of municipal corporations, the word “quasi” being introduced because it is said that these are not voluntary organizations like private corporations, but created by the legislature for its own purposes and without reference to the wishes of the people of the territory affected; (b) to all municipal corporations except cities and incorporated towns, the latter being considered the only true municipal corporations because they exist and act under charters or statutes of incorporation while counties, townships, and the like are merely created or set off under general laws; (c) to municipal corporations possessing only a low order of corporate existence or the most limited range of corporate powers, such as hundreds in England, and counties, villages, and school districts in America.

A term applied to those bodies, or municipal societies, which, though not vested with the general powers of corporations, are yet recognized, by statutes or immemorial usage, as persons, or aggregate corporations, with precise duties, which may be enforced, and privileges, which may be maintained, by suits at law. State v. Hagen, 136 La. 868, 67 So. 935, 936.

There is a well-defined and marked distinction between municipal corporations proper and political or quasi corporations. Cities, towns, and villages are municipal corporations proper, while counties, townships, school districts, road districts, and the like are quasi corporations.

City of East Cleveland v. Board of Education of City School Dist. of East Cleveland, 112 Ohio St. 607, 148 N.E. 350, 351.

“Quasi corporation” is a phrase used to designate bodies which possess a limited number of corporate powers, and which are low down in the scale or grade of corporate existence, and is generally applied to a body which exercises certain functions of a corporate character, but which has not been created a corporation by any statute, general or special. Eakle v. Board of Education of Independent School Dist. of Henry, 97 W.Va. 434, 125 S.E. 165, 167.
Quasi public corporation. This term is sometimes applied to corporations which are not strictly public, in the sense of being organized for governmental purposes, but whose operations contribute to the comfort, convenience, or welfare of the general public, such as telegraph and telephone companies, gas, water, and electric light companies, and irrigation companies. More commonly and more correctly styled "public-service corporations." Wisconsin Water Co., C.C.Ky., 130 F. 251; Campbell v. Watson, 62 N.J. Eq. 396, 50 A. 120; Burgess v. City of Brockton, 235 Mass. 95, 126 N.E. 456, 460; Van Valkenburgh v. Ford, Tex.Civ.App., 207 S.W. 405, 414; Borough of Mt. Union v. Kunz, 290 Pa. 356, 139 A. 118, 121.

There is a large class of private corporations which on account of special franchises conferred on them owe a duty to the public which they may be compelled to perform. This class of corporations is known as public service corporations, and in legal phraseology as "quasi public corporations," or corporations affected with a public interest. A "quasi public corporation" may be said to be a private corporation which has given to it certain powers of a public nature, such, for instance, as the power of eminent domain, in order to enable it to discharge its duties for the public benefit, in which respect it differs from an ordinary private corporation, the powers of which are given and exercised for the exclusive advantage of its stockholders. State ex rel.. Coco v. Riverside Irr. Co., 142 La. 10, 76 So. 216, 218.

The term is also applied to corporations of that class sometimes called "quasi municipal corporations," such as school districts; Road Improvement Dist. No. 7 of Poinsett Co., 112 N.C. 34, 17 S.E. 10, 19 L.R.A. 485. Sometimes called "quasi municipal corporations," such as school districts; Courtright v. Consolidated Independent School Dist. of Mapleton, 203 Iowa, 26, 212 N.W. 368, 369; road districts; Road Improvement Dist. No. 7 of Poinsett County, Ark., v. Guardian Savings & Trust Co., C.C.A. Ark. 598 P. 272, 274; Taylor Coal Co., v. Board of Drainage Com'r's of Ohio County, 189 Ky. 793, 225 S.W. 368, 369; irrigation districts; Bonville Irr. Dist. v. Ririe, 57 Utah, 306, 195 P. 204, 205; and counties, townships, etc. Forbes Pioneer Boat Line v. Board of Com'r's of Everglades Drainage Dist., 77 Fla. 742, 82 So. 346, 350.

Spiritual corporations. Corporations, the members of which are entirely spiritual persons, and incorporated as such, for the furtherance of religion and perpetuating the rights of the church.

Trading corporations. A commercial corporation engaged in buying and selling. The word "trading," is much narrower in scope than "business," as applied to corporations, and though a trading corporation is a business corporation, there are many business corporations which are not trading companies. Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 669, 4 L.Ed. 629; Adams v. Railroad Co., 1 Fed.Cas. 92.

Tramp corporations. Companies chartered in one state without any intention of doing business therein, but which carry on their business and operations wholly in other states. State v. Georgia Co., 112 N.C. 34, 17 S.E. 10, 19 L.R.A. 485.

Synonyms

The words "company" and "corporation" are commonly used as interchangeable terms. In strictness, however, a company is an association of persons for business or other purposes, embracing a considerable number of individuals, which may or may not be incorporated. In the former case, it is legally a partnership or a joint-stock company; in the latter case, it is properly called a "corporation." Goddard v. Railroad Co., 202 Ill. 362, 66 N.E. 1066. For the particulars in which corporations differ from "Joint-Stock Companies" and "Partnerships," see those titles.

CORPORATION ACT. In English law. The statute 13 Car. II. St. 2, c. 1; by which it was provided that no person should thereafter be elected to office in any corporate town that should not, within one year previously, have taken the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, according to the rites of the Church of England; and every person so elected was also required to take the oaths of allegiance and supremacy. 3 Steph.Comm. 103, 104; 4 Bl.Comm. 58. This statute is now repealed. 4 Steph.Comm. 511.

CORPORATION COURTS. Certain courts in Virginia described as follows: "For each city of the state, there shall be a court called a 'corporation court,' to be held by a judge possessing like qualifications and elected in the same manner as judges of the county court." Code Va.1887, § 3050, Code 1919, § 5905.

CORPORATOR. A member of a corporation aggregate. Grant, Corp. 48; Seaborn v. Wingfield, 56 Nev. 260, 48 P.2d 881, 883.

COPRORE ET ANIMO. Lat. By the body and by the mind; by the physical act and by the mental intent. Dig. 41, 2, 3.

CORPOREAL. A term descriptive of such things as have an objective, material existence; perceptible by the senses of sight and touch; possessing a real body. Opposed to incorporeal and spiritual. Sullivan v. Richardson, 33 Fla. 1, 14 So. 692; Bournland v. State, 133 Tex.Cr.R. 544, 112 S.W.2d 720, 721.

There is a distinction between "corporate" and "corporal," the former term means "possessing a body," the latter, tangible, physical, material; the latter means "relating to or affecting a body," that is, bodily, external. Corporeal denotes the nature or physical existence of a body; corporeal denotes its exterior or the co-ordination of it with some other body. Hence we speak of "corporeal hereditaments," but of "corporate punishment," "corporal touch," "corporeal oath," etc.

CORPOREAL HEREDITAMENTS. See Hereditaments.

CORPOREAL PROPERTY. Such as affects the senses, and may be seen and handled, as opposed to incorporeal property, which cannot be seen or handled, and exists only in contemplation. Mozley & Whitley.

Thus a house is corporeal, but the annual rent payable for its occupation is incorporeal. Corporeal property is, if movable, capable of manual transfer; if immovable, possession of it may be delivered up. But incorporeal property cannot be so transferred, but some other means must be adopted for its transfer, of which the most usual is an instrument in writing.

In Roman law, the distinction between things corporeal and incorporeal rested on the sense of touch; tangible objects only were considered corporeal. In modern law, all things which may be perceived by any of the bodily senses are termed corporeal, although a common definition of the word includes merely that which can be touched and seen. 14a C.J. 1424 [citing Abbott's Diet.]. Marnett Oil & Gas Co. v. Munsey, Tex.Civ.App., 232 S.W. 867, 869; Sullivan v. Richardson, 33 Fla. 1, 116, 14 So. 692.
The term "property," however, is a generic term of extensive application. 32 Cyc. 647. In its strict legal sense, "property" is nothing but the right of dominion, possession, and disposition which may be acquired over physical things. Bracewell Coal Co. v. People, 147 Ill. 66, 35 N.E. 62, 22 L.R.A. 340; Fears v. State, 102 Ga. 274, 29 S.E. 463; De Lauder v. Baltimore County, 94 Md. 1, 50 A. 427. It follows that from that point of view, there is no such thing as "tangible" property or "corporeal" property, and the only meaning which can in law be given to the expression "corporeal property" is the right to possess, use, occupy, and enjoy corporeal things and take the profits thereof. Transcontinental Oil Co. v. Emmerson, 298 Ill. 394, 131 N.E. 645, 648, 16 A.L.R. 507.

CORPS DIPLOMATIQUE. In international law. Ambassadors and diplomatic persons at any court or capital.

CORPSE. The dead body of a human being. 1 Russ. & R. 366, n.; 2 Term 733; 1 Leach 497; Com. v. Loring, 8 Pick., Mass., 370; Dig. 47. 12. 3. 7; 11. 7. 38; Code, 3. 44. 1; Co. 3d Inst. 203; 1 Russ.Cr. 629.

CORPUS. (Lat.) Body; an aggregate or mass, (of men, laws, or articles;) physical substance, as distinguished from intellectual conception; the principal sum or capital, as distinguished from interest or income. In re Barron's Will, 163 Wis. 275, 155 N.W. 1087, 1089; United States Trust Co. of New York v. Heye, 181 App.Div. 544, 168 N.Y.S. 1051, 1057; Macy v. Ladd, 128 Misc. 732, 219 N.Y.S. 449, 460; In re Schley, 181 App.Div. 931, 173 N.Y.S. 317, 319.

A substantial or positive fact, as distinguished from what is equivocal and ambiguous. The corpus delicti (body of an offense) is the fact of its having been actually committed. Best, Pres. 269-279.

A corporeal act of any kind, (as distinguished from animus or mere intention,) on the part of him who wishes to acquire a thing, whereby he obtains the physical ability to exercise his power over it whenever he pleases. The word occurs frequently in this sense in the civil law. Mackeld. Rom.Law, § 248.

Corpus comitatus. The body of a county. The whole county, as distinguished from a part of it, or any particular place in it. U. S. v. Grush, 5 Mason, 290, Fed.Cas.No.15,268.

Corpus corporatum. A corporation; a corporate body, other than municipal.

Corpus cum causa. (The body with the cause.) An English writ which issued out of chancery, to remove both the body and the record, touching the cause of any man lying in execution upon a judgment for debt, into the king's bench, there to remain until he satisfied the judgment. Cowell; Blount.

Corpus delicti. The body of a crime. The body (material substance) upon which a crime has been committed, e. g., the corpse of a murdered man, the charred remains of a house burned down. In a derivative sense, the substance or foundation of a crime; the substantial fact that a crime has been committed. People v. Dick, 37 Cal. 281; White v. State, 49 Ala. 347; Goldman v. Com., 100 Va. 865, 42 S.E. 923; State v. Schyhart, Mo. Sup., 199 S.W. 205, 211; State v. Brown, 103 S.C. 437, 88 S.E. 21, 22, L.R.A.1916D, 1295; State v. Johnson, 95 Utah 572, 83 P.2d 1010, 1014. When applied to any particular offense, the actual commission by some one of particular offense charged. Gorum v. State, 60 Okl.Cr. 248, 63 P.2d 765, 766.

Corpus pro corpore. In old records. Body for body. A phrase expressing the liability of manu- captors. 3 How.State Tr. 110.

CORPUS CHRISTI DAY. In English law. A feast instituted in 1264, in honor of the sacrament. 32 Hen. VIII. c. 21.

CORPUS HUMANUM NON RECIPIT IESTIMATIONEM. The human body does not admit of valuation. Hob. 59.

CORPUS JURIS. A body of law. A term used to signify a book comprehending several collections of law. There are two principal collections to which this name is given; the Corpus Juris Civilis, and the Corpus Juris Canonici. Also name of an encyclopaedic statement of the principles of Anglo-American law.

Corpus juris canonici. The body of the canon law. A compilation of the canon law, comprising the decrees and canons of the Roman Church, constituting the body of ecclesiastical law of that church.

Corpus juris civilis. The body of the civil law. The system of Roman jurisprudence compiled and codified under the direction of the emperor Justinian, in A.D. 528-534. This collection comprises the Institutes, Digest, (or Pandects,) Code, and Novels. The name is said to have been first applied to this collection early in the seventeenth century.

CORRECT ATTEST. These words, used before the signatures of bank directors to reports made to the commissioner of banking, mean not alone to bear witness, but to affirm to be true or genuine, and such words are appropriately used for the affirmation of persons in their official capacity to attest the truth of a writing. Eland State Bank v. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co., 165 Wis. 493, 162 N.W. 662, 663.

CORRECTION. Discipline; chastisement administered by a master or other person in authority to one who has committed an offense, for the purpose of curing his faults or bringing him into proper subjection.

CORRECTION, HOUSE OF. A prison for the reform of petty or juvenile offenders.

CORRECTOR OF THE STAPLE. In old English law. A clerk belonging to the staple, to write and record the bargains of merchants there made.
CORREGIDOR. In Spanish law. A magistrate who took cognizance of various misdemeanors, and of civil matters. 2 White, New Recop. 53.

CORREI CREDENDI. In the civil and Scotch law. Joint creditors; creditors in solido. Poth. Obl. pt. 2, c. 4, art. 3, § 11.

CORREI DEBENDI. In Scotch law. Two or more persons bound as principal debtors to another. Ersk.Inst. 3, 3, 74.

CORRELATIVE. Having a mutual or reciprocal relation, in such sense that the existence of one necessarily implies the existence of the other. Father and son are correlative terms. Claim and duty are correlative terms.

CORRESPONDENCE. Interchange of written communications. The letters written by a person and the answers written by the one to whom they are addressed.

The expression “corroborating circumstances” clearly does not mean facts which, independent of a confession, will warrant a conviction; for then the verdict would stand not on the confession, but upon those independent circumstances. To corroborate is to strengthen, to confirm by additional security, to add strength. The testimony of a witness is said to be corroborated when it is shown to correspond with some facts otherwise known or established. Corroborating circumstances, then, used in reference to a confession, are such as serve to strengthen it, to correspond with the representation of some other witness, or to comport with some facts otherwise known or established. Corroborating circumstances, then, used in reference to a confession, are such as serve to strengthen it, to render it more probable; such, in short, as may serve to impress a jury with a belief in its truth. State v. Guild, 10 N.J.Law, 163, 18 Am. Dec. 404.

CORROBORATING EVIDENCE. Evidence supplementary to that already given and tending to strengthen or confirm it; additional evidence of a different character to the same point. In re Cardoner's Estate, 27 N.M. 105, 196 P. 327, 328; State v. Smith, 75 Mont. 22, 241 P. 522, 523; People v. Follette, 74 Cal.App. 178, 240 P. 502, 519; Radcliffe v. Chavez, 15 N.M. 258, 110 P. 699, 701.

CORROBORATIVE EVIDENCE. See Corroborating Evidence.

CORRUPT. Spoiled; tainted; vitiated; deprived; debased. Webster.

CORRUPT INTENT. A "corrupt intent," as an element of usury, consists in the charging or receiving of excessive interest with knowledge that it is prohibited by law and the purpose to violate the law. Ector v. Osborne, 179 N.C. 667, 103 S.E. 388, 389, 13 A.L.R. 1207; Teshner v. Roome, 106 Or. 382, 212 P. 473, 474. But see Dege v. Produce Exchange Bank of St. Paul, 212 Minn. 44, 2 N.W. 2d 423, 425, which only requires intent to receive more than the law permits for forbearance of money, but does not require that taker knows that he is violating usury law.

CORRUPTION. Illegality; a vicious and fraudulent intention to evade the prohibitions of the law; something against or forbidden by law; moral turpitude or exactly opposite of honesty involving intentional disregard of law from improper motives. State v. Barnett, 60 Okl.Cr. 355, 69 P.2d 77, 87.

The act of an official or fiduciary person who unlawfully and wrongfully uses his station or character to procure some benefit for himself or for another person, contrary to duty and the rights of others. U. S. v. Johnson, C.C.Ga., 26 F. 682; Worsham v. Murchison, 66 Ga. 719; U. S. v. Edwards, C.C.Ala., 43 F. 67.

CORRUPTION OF BLOOD. In English law. The consequence of attainder, being that the attainted person could neither inherit lands or other hereditaments from his ancestor, nor retain those he already had, nor transmit them by descent to any heir, because his blood was considered in law to be corrupted. Avery v. Everett, 110 N.Y. 317, 18 N.E. 148, 1 L.R.A. 264; 1 Steph.Comm. 446. This was abolished by St. 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 106, and 33 & 34 Vict. c. 23, and is unknown in America. Const.U.S. art. 3, § 3.

CORRUPTLY. When used in a statute, this term generally imports a wrongful design to acquire some pecuniary or other advantage. Grebe v. State, 112 Neb. 615, 201 N.W. 143, 144; Bosselman v. U. S., C.C.A.N.Y., 239 F. 82, 86; State v. Shipman, 202 N.C. 518, 163 S.E. 657.

CORSNED. In Saxon law. The morsel of execrable and criminal practices in connection with elections, and which was repealed by the “Federal Corrupt Practices Act” of Feb. 28, 1925, c. 368, Title III, 2 U.S.C.A. § 241 et seq.

CORSNED. In Saxon law. The morsel of execrable and criminal practices in connection with elections, and which was repealed by the “Federal Corrupt Practices Act” of Feb. 28, 1925, c. 368, Title III, 2 U.S.C.A. § 241 et seq.
which the priest had pronounced a certain im-precaution. If the accused ate it freely, he was pronounced innocent; but, if it stuck in his throat, it was considered as a proof of his guilt. Crabb, 345; Spelman, Gloss. 439.

CORTES. The name of the legislative assemblies, the parliament or congress, of Spain and Portugal.

CORTEX. The bark of a tree; the outer covering of anything.

CORTEIS. A court or yard before a house. Blount.

CORTULARIUM, or CORTARIUM. In old records. A yard adjoining a country farm.

CORVEE. In French law. Gratuitous labor exacted from the villages or communities, especially for repairing roads, constructing bridges, etc.
State v. Covington, 125 N.C. 641, 34 S.E. 272.

CORVEE SEIGNEURIALE. Services due the lord

COSA JUZGADA, In Spanish law. A cause or matter adjudged, (res judicata.) White, New Recop. b. 3, tit. 8, note.

COSAS COMUNES. In Spanish law. A term corresponding to the res communes of the Roman law, and descriptive of such things as are open to the equal and common enjoyment of all persons and not to be reduced to private ownership, such as the air, the sea, and the water of running streams. Hall, Mex.Law, 447; Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 255, 10 P. 707.

COSBERING. See Coshering.

COSDUNA. In feudal law. A custom or tribute.

COSEN, COZEN. In old English law. To cheat.
"A cosening knave." 3 Leon. 171.

COSENGAGE. (Also spelled "Cosinage," "Cousin-age.") In old English law. A writ that lay for the heir where the tresail, e., the father of the besail, or great-grandfather, was seised of lands in fee at his death, and a stranger entered upon

COSENING. In old English law. An offense, mentioned in the old books, where anything was done deceitfully, whether belonging to contracts or not, which could not be properly termed by any special name. The same as the stellionatus of the civil law. Cowell; West.Symb. pt. 2, Indicment, § 68; Blount; 4 Bla.Comm. 158.

COSHERING. In old English law. A feudal prerogative or custom for lords to lie and feast themselves at their tenants' houses. Cowell.

COSS. A term used by Europeans in India to de-ote a road-measure of about two miles, but differing in different parts. Wharton.

COST. Expense. Barton v. Bowlin, 111 Ark. 123, 163 S.W. 502, 504. The price paid, as for an article purchased for exportation, with all incidental charges paid at the place of exportation. Goodwin amount originally expended in performing a particular act or operation, or for production or construction, as of a building. Kempf v. Ranger, 132 Minn. 64, 155 N.W. 1059, 1060; Hoggson Bros. v.
Cost is sometimes used as equivalent to "value." Loughney v. Klein, C.C.A.Pa., 221 F. 197, 199.

a number of adventurers who have obtained permission to work a lode, and have agreed to share the enterprise in certain proportions, enter the agreement, and from time to time the receipts and expenditures of the mine, the names of the shareholders, their respective accounts with the mine, and transfers of shares. These associations are called "Cost-Book Mining Companies," and are governed by the general law of partnership.

Cost-plus contract. One which fixes the amount to be paid the contractor on a basis, generally, of the cost of the material and labor, plus an agreed percentage thereof. The Spica, C.C.A.N.Y., 289
F. 436, 445.

Cost price. That which is actually paid for goods. Buck v. Burk, 18 N.Y. 337; Esterman*Verkamp Co. v. Rouse, 211 Ky. 791, 278 S.W. 124, 127.

Costs of collection. Strictly, expenses involved in endeavoring to make collection, as of a promissory note; but as used in or with reference to such notes, the phrase is synonymous with attorney's suit, which are recoverable by law. Cox v. Hagan, 125 Va. 656, 100 S.E. 666, 674.

CO-STIPULATOR. A joint promisor.

COSTS. A pecuniary allowance, made to the suc-scessful party, (and recoverable from the losing party,) for his expenses in prosecuting or defending a suit or a distinct proceeding within a suit.
Stevens v. Bank, 168 N.Y. 560, 61 N.E. 904; Ben-248; Pezel v. Yerex, 56 Cal.App. 304, 205 P. 475, 478; In re Leary's Estate, 172 Misc. 280, 14 N.Y.S.
2d 960, 961.

Expenses pending suit as allowed or taxed by the court.

Fees and charges required by law to be paid to the courts or some of their officers, the amount

Costs and fees were originally altogether different in their nature. The one is an allowance to a party for expenses incurred in prosecuting or defending a suit; the other, a compensation to an officer for services rendered in the progress of a cause. Therefore, while an executor or administrator was not personally liable to his adversary for costs, yet, if at his instance an officer performed services for him, he had a personal demand for his fees. Munser v. Good, 11 Serg. & R., Pa., 247. Moreover, costs are an incident to the judgment; fees are compensation to public officers for services rendered individuals not in the course of litigation. Tillman v. Wood, 58 Ala. 579.

In Georgia, however, it is held that "costs," include all charges fixed by statute as compensation for services rendered by officers of the court in the progress of the cause. Welton County v. Dean, 23 Ga.App. 97, 97 S.E. 561, 562.

There is no general or controlling provision or principle of law to the effect that attorney fees that may by statute be recovered by the winning party against the losing party in a suit or action are, or should be regarded as, costs in the case. "Costs" do not include attorney fees unless such fees are by a statute denominated costs or are by statute allowed to be recovered as costs in the case. State ex rel. Royal Ins. Co. v. Barrs, 87 Fla. 168, 99 So. 668, 669; McRostie v. City of Owatonna, 152 Minn. 63, 188 N.W. 52, 54; Littlefield v. Scott, Tex.Civ.App., 244 S.W. 824, 826; Calman v. Cox, Mo.App., 296 S.W. 845, 846; City of Los Angeles v. Abbott, 217 Cal. 184, 17 P.2d 993, 996.

In England, the term "costs" is also used to designate the charges which an attorney or solicitor is entitled to make and recover from his client, as his remuneration for professional services, such as legal advice, attendances, drafting and copying documents, conducting legal proceedings, etc.

Bill of Costs. A certified, itemized statement of the amount of costs in an action or suit.

Certificate for Costs. In England practice, a certificate or memorandum drawn up and signed by the judge before whom a case was tried, setting out certain facts, the existence of which must be thus proved before the party is entitled, under the statutes, to recover costs.

Cost Bond, or Bond for Costs. A bond given by a party to an action to secure the eventual payment of such costs as may be awarded against him.

Costs de Incremento. Increased costs, costs of increase. Costs adjudged by the court in addition to those assessed by the jury. Day v. Woodworth, 13 How. 372, 14 L.Ed. 181.

Those extra expenses incurred which do not appear on the face of the proceedings, such as witnesses' expenses, fees to counsel, attendances, court fees, etc. Wharton.

Costs of the Day. Costs which are incurred in preparing for the trial of a cause on a specified day, consisting of witnesses' fees, and other fees of attendance. Archib. N. Prac. 281; Ad.Eq. 343.

Costs to Abide Event. When an order is made by an appellate court reversing a judgment, with "costs to abide the event," the costs intended by the order include those of the appeal, so that, if the appellee is finally successful, he is entitled to tax the costs of the appeal. First Nat. Bank v. Fourth Nat. Bank, 84 N.Y. 469; Casualty Co. of America v. A. L. Swett Electric Light & Power Co., 121 Misc. 268, 200 N.Y.S. 79,6, 801.

Final Costs. Such costs as are to be paid at the end of the suit; costs, the liability for which depends upon the final result of the litigation. Goodyear v. Sawyer, C.C. Tenn., 17 F. 8.

Interlocutory Costs. In practice. Costs accruing upon proceedings in the intermediate stages of a cause, as distinguished from final costs; such as the costs of motions. 3 Chit. Gen. Pr. 597; Goodyear v. Sawyer, C.C. Tenn., 17 F. 6.

Security for Costs. In practice. A security which a defendant in an action may require of a plaintiff who does not reside within the jurisdiction of the court, for the payment of such costs as may be awarded to the defendant. 1 Tidd, Pr. 534, Ex parte Louisville & N. R. Co., 124 Ala. 547, 27 So. 239.

Treble Costs. A rate of costs given in certain actions, consisting, according to its technical import, of the common costs, half of these, and half of the latter. 2 Tidd, Pr. 988. The word "treble," in this application, is not understood in its literal sense of thrice the amount of single costs, but signifies merely the addition together of the three sums fixed as above. Id. Treble costs have been abolished in England, by St. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 97. In American law. In Pennsylvania and New Jersey the rule is different. When an act of assembly gives treble costs, the party is allowed three times the usual costs, with the exception that the fees of the officers are not to be trebled when they are not regularly or usually payable by the defendant. Shoemaker v. Nesbit, 2 Rawle, Pa., 203; Welsh v. Anthony, 16 Pa. 256; Mairs v. Sparks, 5 N.J.Law, 516.

COSTUMBRE. In Spanish law. Custom; an unwritten law established by usage, during a long space of time. Las Partidas, pt. 1, tit. 2, 1. 4.

COTS. A cot or hut. Blount.

COTAGIUM. In old English law. A cottage.

COTERELLUS. In feudal law. A cottager; a person, issue, and goods were disposable at the lord’s pleasure. A coterellus, therefore, occupied a less favorable position than a cotarius (q. v.), for the latter held by socage tenure. Cowell.

COTERELLUS. In feudal law. A cottager; a servile tenant, who held in mere villenage; his person, issue, and goods were disposable at the lord’s pleasure. A coterellus, therefore, occupied a less favorable position than a cotarius (q. v.), for the latter held by socage tenure. Cowell.

COTERIE. A fashionable association, or a knot of persons forming a particular circle. The origin of the term was purely commercial, signifying an association, in which each member furnished his part, and bore his share in the profit and loss. Wharton.

COTESWOLD. In old records. A place where wood has been gathered and before it is manufactured into some article of merchandise, whether the seed have been removed at the gin or whether it is lint cotton in the seed or in the bale. Freeman v. State, 156 Ark. 592, 247 S.W. 51.

COTTON MILL OF FACTORY. One which manufactures cotton from the raw state into a finished product. Dumas v. State, 17 Ala.App. 492, 86 So. 162, 163.

COTTON NOTES. Receipts given for each bale of cotton received on storage by a public warehouse. Fourth Nat. Bank v. St. Louis Cotton Compress Co., 11 Mo.App. 337.

COTTON SEASON. The season for buying and selling cotton between September 1 and the following May 1. Morris v. Hellums Co., 131 Ark. 585, 199 S.W. 927, 928.

COTUCA. Coat armor.

COTUCHANS. A term used in Domesday for peasants, boors, husbandmen.

COUNCIL. An assembly of persons for the purpose of concerting measures of state or municipal policy; hence called “councillors.”

In American Law. The legislative body in the government of cities or boroughs. An advisory body selected to aid the executive; particularly in the colonial period (and at present in some of the United States) a body appointed to advise and assist the governor in his executive or judicial capacities or both. Opinion of the Justices, 14 Mass. 470; Opinion of the Justices, 3 Pick., Mass., 517; In re Adams, 4 Pick., Mass., 25; Answers of the Justices, 70 Me. 570.

In American law. The lower or more numerous branch of the legislative assembly of a city. In English law. The councilors of the city of London. The parliament, also, was anciently called the “common council of the realm.” Fleta, 2, 13.

Privy Council. See that title.
Select Council. The name given, in some states, to the upper house or branch of the council of a city.

COUNCIL OF CONCILIATION. By the Act 30 & 31 Viet. c. 105, power is given for the crown to grant licenses for the formation of councils of conciliation and arbitration, consisting of a certain number of masters and workmen in any trade or employment, having power to hear and determine all questions between masters and workmen which may be submitted to them by both parties, arising out of or with respect to the particular trade or manufacture, and incapable of being otherwise settled. They have power to apply to a justice to enforce the performance of their award. The members are elected by persons engaged in the trade. Davis, Bldg.Soc. 232; Sweet.

COUNCIL OF JUDGES. Under the English judicature act, 1873, § 75, an annual council of the judges of the supreme court is to be held, for the purpose of considering the operation of the new practice, offices, etc., introduced by the act, and of reporting to a secretary of state as to any alterations which they consider should be made in the law for the administration of justice. An extraordinary council may also be convened at any time by the lord chancellor. Sweet.

COUNCIL OF THE BAR. A body composed of members of the English bar which governs the bar. It hears complaints against barristers and reports its findings with recommendations to the benchers of the Inn of Court of which the barrister is a member, who alone can act. Leaming, Phila. Lawy. in Lond. Courts 67.

COUNCIL OF THE NORTH. A court instituted by Henry VIII. in 1537, to administer justice in Yorkshire and the four other northern counties. Under the presidency of Stratford, the court showed great rigor, bordering, it is alleged, on harshness. It was abolished by 16 Car. 1., the same act which abolished the Star Chamber.

COUNSEL. 1. In practice. An advocate, counsellor, or pleader. 3 Bl.Comm. 26; 1 Kent, Comm. 307. One who assists his client with advice, and pleads for him in open court. One who has been specially retained in a cause, either for the purpose of assisting as to the points of law involved, or preparing the case on its legal side, or arguing questions of law to the court, or preparing or conducting the case on its appearance before an appellate tribunal, are said to be "of counsel."

2. Knowledge. A grand jury is sworn to keep secret "the commonwealth's counsel, their fellows', and their own."

3. Advice given by one person to another in regard to a proposed line of conduct, claim, or contention. State v. Russell, 83 Wis. 330, 53 N.W. 441.

The words "counsel" and "advise" may be, and frequently are, used in criminal law to describe the offense of a person who, not actually doing the felonious act, by his will, or knowledge, contributed to it or procured it to be done. Omer v. Corn., 95 Ky. 353, 25 S.W. 594.

Counsel's signature. This is required, in some jurisdictions, to be affixed to pleadings, etc., as affording the court a means of judging whether they are interposed in good faith and upon legal grounds. It has been held that the word "counsel" in this connection denotes a person capable of testifying, and that a certificate bearing only the firm signatures of partnerships of attorneys is insufficient. Benedict v. Seiberling, D.C., 17 F.2d 831, 838.

Junior counsel. The younger of the counsel employed on the same side of a case, or the one lower in standing or rank, or who is intrusted with the less important parts of the preparation or trial of the cause.

COUNSELLOR. An advocate or barrister. A member of the legal profession whose special function is to give counsel or advice as to the legal aspects of judicial controversies, or their preparation and management, and to appear in court for the conduct of trials, or the argument of causes, or presentation of motions, or any other legal business that takes him into the presence of the court.

In some of the states, the two words "counsellor" and "attorney" are used interchangeably to designate all lawyers. In others, the latter term alone is used, "counsellor" not being recognised as a technical name. In still others, the two are associated together as the full legal title of any person who has been admitted to practice in the courts; while in a few they denote different grades, it being prescribed that no one can become a counsellor until he has been an attorney for a specified time and has passed a second examination.

In the practice of the United States supreme court, the term denotes an officer who is employed by a party in a cause to conduct the same on its trial on his behalf. He differs from an attorney at law.

In the supreme court of the United States, the two degrees of attorney and counsel were at first kept separate, and no person was permitted to practice in both capacities, but the present practice is otherwise. Weeks, Attys. at Law, 54. It is the duty of the counsel to draft or review and correct the special pleadings, to manage the cause on trial, and, during the whole course of the suit, to apply established principles of law to the exigencies of the case. 1 Kent, Comm. 307.

COUNT, v. In pleading. To declare; to recite; to state a case; to narrate the facts constituting a plaintiff's cause of action. In a special sense, to plead orally; to plead or argue a case in court; to recite or read in court; to recite a count in court.

Count upon a statute. To make express reference to it, as the words "against the form of the statute" (or "by the force of the statute") "in such case made and provided." Richardson v. Fletcher, 74 Vt. 417, 52 A. 1064.

"Pleading the statute" is stating the facts which bring the case within it, and "counting" on it is making express reference to it by apt terms to show the source of right relied on. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. State, 73 Fla. 609, 74 So. 595, 599.
COUNT, n. In pleading. The plaintiff's statement of his cause of action. The different parts of a declaration, each of which, if it stood alone, would constitute a ground for action. Used also to signify the several parts of an indictment, each charging a distinct offense. Boren v. State, 23 Tex.App. 28, 4 S.W. 463; Bailey v. Mosher, C.A.Neb., 63 F. 490, 11 C.C.A. 304; Ryan v. Riddle, 109 Mo.App. 115, 82 S.W. 1117.

"Count" and "charge" when used relative to allegations in an indictment or information are synonymous. State v. Thornton, 142 La. 797, 77 So. 634, 636; State v. Puckett, 39 N.M. 511, 50 P.2d 964, 965.

Count sur concessit solvere. A claim based upon a promise to pay,—a count in the mayor's court of London. Under it the plaintiff can sue for any liquidated demand, but not for money due under a covenant. Particulars defining more precisely the nature of the claim must be delivered with the declaration. Odger, C.LI 1029.

Common counts. Certain general counts or forms inserted in a declaration in an action to recover a money debt, not founded on the circumstances of the individual case, but intended to guard against a possible variance, and to enable the plaintiff to take advantage of any ground of liability which the proof may disclose, within the general scope of the action. Nugent v. Teachot, 67 Mich. 571, 35 N.W. 254.

In the action of assumpsit, these counts are as follows: For goods sold and delivered, or bargained and sold; for work done; for money lent; for money paid; for money received to the use of the plaintiff; for interest; or for money due on an account stated.

Money counts. A species of common counts, so called from the subject-matter of them; embracing the indebitatus assumpsit count for money lent and advanced, for money paid and expended, and for money had and received, together with the insimul computasset count, or count for money due on an account stated. 1 Burrill, Pr. 132.

Omnibus count. A count which combines in one all the money counts with one for goods sold and delivered, work and labor, and an account stated. Webber v. Tivill, 2 Saund. 122; Griffin v. Murdock, 88 Me. 254, 34 A. 30.

Several counts. Where a plaintiff has several distinct causes of action, he is allowed to pursue them cumulatively in the same action, subject to certain rules which the law prescribes. Wharton.

Special count. As opposed to the common counts, in pleading, 'a special count is a statement of the actual facts of the particular case, or a count in which the plaintiff's claim is set forth with all needed particularity. Wertheim v. Casualty Co., 72 Vt. 326, 47 A. 1071.

COUNT. (Fr. comte; from the Latin comes.) An earl.

It gave way as a distinct title to the Saxon earl, but was retained in countess, viscount, and as the basis of county. Termes de la leey; 1 Bls.Comm. 398.

COUNT. (Fr. comte; from the Latin comes.) An earl.

It gave way as a distinct title to the Saxon earl, but was retained in countess, viscount, and as the basis of county. Termes de la leey; 1 Bls.Comm. 398.

COUNT-OUT. In English parliamentary law. Forty members form a house of commons; and, though there be ever so many at the beginning of a debate, yet, if during the course of it the house should be deserted by the members, till reduced below the number of forty, any one member may have it adjourned upon its being counted; but a debate may be continued when only one member is left in the house, provided no one choose to move an adjournment. Wharton.

The words "count and count-out" refer to the count of the house of commons by the speaker. Forty members, including the speaker, are required to constitute a quorum. Each day after parliament is opened, the speaker counts the house. If forty members are not present he waits till four o'clock, and then counts the house again. If forty members are not then present, he at once adjourns it to the following meeting day. May, Parl.Prac. 219.

COUNTEE. In old English law. The most eminent dignity of a subject before the Conquest. He was prefectus or prcepositus comitatus, and had the charge and custody of the county; but this authority is now vested in the sheriff. 9 Coke, 46.

COUNTEANCE. In old English law. Credit; estimation. Wharton. Also, encouragement; aiding and abetting. Cooper v. Johnson, 81 Mo. 487.

COUNTER, n. (Spelled, also, "Compter.") The name of two prisons formerly standing in London, but now demolished. They were the Poultry Counter and Wood Street Counter. Cowell; Whish.L.D.; Coke, 4th Inst. 248.

Counter-affidavit. An affidavit made and presented in contradiction or opposition to an affidavit which is made the basis or support of a motion or application.

Counterclaim. See that title.

Counter-deed. A secret writing, either before a notary or under a private seal, which destroys, invalidates, or alters a public one.

Counter-letter. A species of instrument of defeasance common in the civil law. It is executed by a party who has taken a deed of property, absolute on its face, but intended as security for a loan of money, and by it he agrees to reconvey the property on payment of a specified sum. The two instruments, taken together, constitute what is known in Louisiana as an "anticlirhesis," (q. v.). Karcher v. Karcher, 138 La. 288, 70 So. 228, 229; Livingston v. Story, 11 Pet. 351, 9 L.Ed. 746.

Counter-mark. A sign put upon goods already marked; also the several marks put upon goods belonging to several persons, to show that they must not be opened, but in the presence of all the owners or their agents.

Counter-plea. See Plea.
Counter-security. A security given to one who has entered into a bond or become surety for another; a countervailing bond of indemnity.

COUNTERCLAIM. A claim presented by a defendant in opposition to or deduction from the claim of the plaintiff. A species of set-off or recoupment introduced by the codes of civil procedure in many of the states, of a broad and liberal character. Quoted in Wollan v. McKay, 24 Idaho, 691, 135 P. 832, 837.

It is an offensive as well as a defensive plea, which is not necessarily confined to the justice of plaintiff's claim, and it represents the right of the defendant to have the claims of the parties counterbalanced in whole or in part, with the intention that it shall serve as security only. Standard Oil Co. of Louisiana v. Futral, 204 La. 215, 15 So.2d 65, 73.

COUNTERFEIT. In criminal law. To forge; to copy or imitate, without authority or right, and with a view to deceive or defraud, by passing the copy or thing forged for that which is original or genuine. Most commonly applied to the fraudulent and criminal imitation of money. State v. McKenzie, 42 Me. 392; U. S. v. Barrett, D.C.N.D., 111 F. 369; DeRose v. People, 64 Colo. 332, 171 P. 359, L.R.A.1918C, 1193; Metropolitan Nat. Bank v. National Surety Co., D.C.Minn., 48 F. 2d 611, 612.

COUNTERFEIT COIN. Coin not genuine, but resembling or apparently intended to resemble or pass for genuine coin, including genuine coin prepared or altered so as to resemble or pass for a coin of a higher denomination. U. S. v. Hopkins, D.C.N.C., 26 F. 443; U. S. v. Bogart, 24 Fed.Cas. 1185; U. S. v. Gellman, D.C.Minn., 44 F.Supp. 360, 363.

COUNTERFEITER. In criminal law. One who unlawfully makes base coin in imitation of the true metal, or forges false currency, or any instrument of writing, bearing a likeness and similitude to that which is lawful and genuine, with an intention of deceiving and imposing upon mankind. Thirman v. Matthews, 1 Stew., Ala., 384.

COUNTER-FESANCE. The act of forging.

COUNTER LETTER. An agreement to reconvey where property has been passed by absolute deed with the intention that it shall serve as security only. Standard Oil Co. of Louisiana v. Futral, 204 La. 215, 15 So.2d 65, 73.

COUNTERMAND. A change or revocation of orders, authority, or instructions previously issued. It may be either express or implied; the former where the order or instruction already given is explicitly annulled or recalled; the latter where the party’s conduct is incompatible with the further continuance of the order or instruction, as where a new order is given inconsistent with the former order.

COUNTERPART. In conveyancing. The corresponding part of an instrument; a duplicate or copy. Where an instrument of conveyance, as a lease, is executed in parts, that is, by having several copies or duplicates made and interchangeably executed, that which is executed by the grantor is usually called the “original,” and the rest are “counterparts”; although, where all the parties execute every part, this renders them all originals. 2 Bl. Comm. 296; Shep. Touch. 50. Roosevelt v. Smith, 17 Misc.Rep. 323, 40 N.Y.S. 381. See Duplicate.

In granting lots subject to a ground-rent reserved to the grantor, both parties execute the deeds, of which there are two copies; although both are original, one of them is sometimes called the counterpart. See- 12 Vin.Abr. 104 Dane, Abr.Index; 7 Com.Dig. 443; Merlin, Rip. Double Edrit.
COUNTERPART WRIT. A copy of the original writ, authorized to be issued to another county when the court has jurisdiction of the cause by reason of the fact that some of the defendants are residents of the county or found therein. White v. Lea, 9 Lea, Tenn., 450.

COUNTER-ROLLS. In English law. The rolls which sheriffs have with the coroners, containing particulars of their proceedings, as well as appeals as of inquests, etc. 3 Edw. I. c. 10.

COUNTERSIGN. As a noun, the signature of a secretary or other subordinate officer to any writing signed by the principal or superior to vouch for the authenticity of it. Fifth Ave. Bank v. Railroad Co., 137 N.Y. 231, 33 N.E. 378, 19 L.R.A. 331; Gurnee v. Chicago, 40 Ill. 163 A. 787, 789.

COUNTERVAIL. To counterbalance; to avail against with equal force or virtue; to compensate for, or serve as an equivalent of or substitute for.

COUNTERVAIL LIVERY. At common law, a release was a form of transfer of real estate where some right to it existed in one person but the actual possession was in another; and the possession in such case was said to "countervail livery," that is, it supplied the place of and rendered unnecessary the open and notorious delivery of possession required in other cases. Miller v. Emans, 19 N.Y. 387.

COUNTERVAILING EQUITY. See Equity.

COUNTEUR. In the time of Edward I, a pleader; also called a Nurrator, and Serjeant-Counteur. See Countors.

COUNTEZ, L. Fr. Count, or reckon. In old practice. A direction formerly given by the clerk of a court to the crier, after a jury was sworn, to number them; and which Blackstone says was given in his time, in good English, "count these." 4 Bl. Comm. 340, note (1). 1 Inst. 17.

COUNTING UPON A STATUTE, See Count Upon a Statute.

COUNTERS. Advocates, or serjeants at law, whom a man retains to defend his cause and speak for him in court, for their fees. 1 Inst. 17.

COUNTRY. The portion of the earth's surface occupied by an independent nation or people, or the inhabitants of such territory.

In its primary meaning "country" signifies "place;" and, in a larger sense, the territory or dominions occupied by a community; or even waste and unpeopled sections or regions of the earth. But its metaphorical meaning is no less definite and well understood; and in common parlance, in historical and geographical writings, in diplomacy, legislation, treaties, and international codes, the word is employed to denote the population, the nation, the state, or the government, having possession and dominion over a territory. Stairs v. Peaslee, 18 How. 521, 15 L.Ed. 474; U. S. v. Recorder, 1 Blatchf. 218, 225, 5 N.Y.Leg. Obs. 286, Fed.Cas.No.16,129.

The word "country" as used in treaties made by the United States government, in so far as it applies to the United States, means the states of such country. Pagano v. Cerri, 93 Ohio St. 345, 112 N.E. 1037, 1039, L.R.A.1917A, 486.

In pleading and practice. The inhabitants of a district from which a jury is to be summoned; pais; a jury. 3 Bl.Comm. 349; 4 Bl. Comm. 349; Steph. Pl. 73, 78, 230.

But deportation to "country whence alien came" would be complied with if the alien was returned to political dominion in exile and control of country from whence he came. Delany v. Moraitis, C.C.A.Md., 136 F.2d 129, 130, 131, 132, 133.

COUNTY. One of the civil divisions of a country for judicial and political purposes. 1 Bla. Comm. 113.

Etymologically, it denotes that portion of the country under the immediate government of a count or earl. 1 Bla. Comm. 16.

One of the principal subdivisions of the kingdom of England and of most of the states of the American Union, denoting a distinct portion of territory organized by itself for political and judicial purposes. In modern use, the word may denote either the territory marked off to form a county, or the citizens resident within such territory, taken collectively and considered as invested with political rights, municipal corporations. Miller v. Emans, 19 N.Y. 387, note (1). 1 Inst. 17.

"Vicinage," in its primary and literary meaning, denotes a neighborhood or vicinity; a "county," on the other hand, is a definitely designated territory. Commonwealth v. Collins, 268 Pa. 295, 110 A. 738, 739.

Body of the county. The county at large, as distinguished from any particular place within it; a county considered as a territorial whole. Fluke v. State, 27 Okl.Cr. 234, 226 P. 118, 120.

A constitutional officer, acting under oath, vested with authority, and it is his duty to inquire into alleged violations of law, to institute criminal proceedings, and to represent the state in matters and proceedings in his county, he signs all informations, and may make application for leave to file information before examination, commitment, or admission to bail. State ex rel. Juhi v. District Court of First Judicial Dist. in and for Jefferson County, Mont., 107 Mont. 309, 84 P.2d 979, 981, 120 A.L.R. 353.

County board of equalization. A body created for the purpose of equalizing values of property subject to taxation. Overland Co. v. Utter, 44 Idaho, 385, 257 P. 480, 482.

County board of supervisors. Is not the county, but a body of town and city officers acting for and on behalf of county in such matters as have been turned over to them by law. Cort v. Smith, 249 App.Div. 1, 291 N.Y. 738, 739.

County bonds. Broadly, any bonds issued by county officials to be paid for by a levy on a special taxing district, whether or not coextensive with the county. Forrey v. Board of Com'rs of Madison County, 189 Ind. 257, 126 N.E. 673.

County bridge. A bridge of the larger class, erected by the county, and which the county is liable to keep in repair. Boone County v. Mutchler, 137 Ind. 140, 36 N.E. 534.

County business. All business pertaining to the county as a corporate entity. City of Astoria v. Cornelius, 119 Or. 264, 240 P. 233, 235. All business of the county, and any other business of such county connected with or interrelated with the business of any other county properly within the jurisdiction of the county commissioners' court. Glenn v. Dallas County Bois d'Arc Island Levee Dist., Tex.Civ.App., 275 S.W. 137, 145.

County commissioners. Officers of a county, charged with a variety of administrative and executive duties, but principally with the management of the financial affairs of the county, its police regulations, and its corporate business. Sometimes the local laws give them limited judicial powers. In some states they are called "supervisors." Corn. v. Krickbaum, 199 Pa. 351, 49 A. 68.

In Georgia, the term is used interchangeably with "commissioners of roads and revenue." Morris v. Smith, 153 Ga. 438(2), 112 S.E. 468; Rhodes v. Jernigan, 155 Ga. 523, 117 S.E. 432, 434.

County corporate. A city or town, with more or less territory annexed, having the privilege to be a county of itself, and not to be comprised in any other county; such as London, York, Bristol, Norwich, and other cities in England. 1 Bl. Comm. 120. See State v. Finn, 4 Mo.App. 347. They differ in no material points from other counties.

County court. A court of high antiquity in England, incident to the jurisdiction of the sheriff. It is not a court of record, but may hold pleas of debt or damages, under the value of forty shillings. The freeholders of the county (anciently termed the "suitors" of the court) are the real judges in this court, and the sheriff is the ministerial officer. See 3 Bl. Comm. 35, 36; 3 Steph. Comm. 395. But in modern English law the name is appropriated to a system of tribunals established by the statute 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, having a limited jurisdiction, principally for the recovery of small debts. It is also the name of certain tribunals of limited jurisdiction in the county of Middlesex, established under the statute 22 Geo. II. c. 33. In American law. The name is used in many of the states to designate the ordinary courts of record having jurisdiction for trials at nisi prius. Their powers generally comprise ordinary civil jurisdiction, also the charge and care of persons and estates coming within legal guardianship, a limited criminal jurisdiction, appellate jurisdiction over justices of the peace, etc.

County farm bureaus. Governmental agencies intrusted with the duty of disseminating among farmers scientific knowledge of an educational nature for the improvement of agriculture. State v. Miller, 104 Neb. 838, 178 N.W. 846, 848.

County funds. This term may include township funds, the legal title of which is in the county, which holds them for disbursement in accordance for the purpose for which they are created. Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland v. Wilkinson County, 109 Miss. 879, 69 So. 865, 868. See, also, State v. McGraw, 74 Mont. 152, 240 P. 812, 817. Compare Board of Education v. Wake County, 167 N.C. 114, 83 S.E. 257, 258.

County general fund. A fund raised to meet the expenses incident to county government. County Board of Education v. Austin, 169 Ark. 436, 276 S.W. 2, 5.

County jail. A place of incarceration for the punishment of minor offenses and the custody of transient prisoners, where the ignominy of confinement is devoid of the infamous character.
which an imprisonment in the state jail or penitentiary carries with it. U. S. v. Greenwald, D.C. Cal., 64 F. 8.

County line. This term, when used in a statute providing that the trial for an offense committed on a county line may be in either county divided by such line, is not to be given the geometrical definition of a “line” as having neither breadth nor thickness, but includes all of a fenced public highway dividing two counties, so that a prosecution for robbery committed upon the highway may be maintained in either county, regardless of the side of the center line of the highway upon which the offense was committed. Stone v. People, 71 Colo. 162, 204 P. 897, 898.

County line bridge. A bridge over a stream constituting the boundary line between two counties, one end of which bridge is in one county and the other end in another county. Newberry v. Hall County, 52 Ga.App. 472, 183 S.E. 664, 665.

County officers. Those whose general authority and jurisdiction are confined within the limits of the county in which they are appointed, who are appointed in and for a particular county, and whose duties apply only to that county, and through whom the county performs its usual political functions. State v. Burns, 38 Fla. 367, 21 So. 290; State v. Glenn, 7 Heisk., Tenn., 473; In re Carpenter, 7 Barb., N.Y., 34; Hamilton v. Monroe, Tex.Civ.App., 287 S.W. 304, 306; State ex rel. Osborn v. Eddington, 208 Ind. 160, 195 N.E. 92.

Public officers who fill a position usually provided for in the organization of counties and county governments, and are selected by the county to represent it continuously and as part of the regular and permanent administration of public power in carrying out certain acts with the performance of which it is charged in behalf of the public. Coulter v. Pool, 187 Cal. 181, 201 P. 120, 123.

County palatine. A term bestowed upon certain counties in England, the lords of which in former times enjoyed special privileges. They might pardon treasons, murders, and felonies. All writs and indictments ran in their names, as in other counties in the king’s; and all offenses were said to be done against their peace, and not, as in other places, contra pacem domini regis. But these privileges have in modern times nearly disappeared. 1 Holdsw. Hist. E. L. 49; 4 Inst. 205.

County powers. Such only as are expressly provided by law or which are necessarily implied from those expressed. Hersey v. Nelson, 47 Mont. 132, 131 P. 30, 32, Ann.Cas.1914C, 963.

County property. That which a county is authorized to acquire, hold, and sell. State v. Brown, 73 Mont. 371, 236 P. 548, 549; State v. Poland, 61 Mont. 600, 203 P. 352, 353.

County purposes. Those exercised by the county acting as a municipal corporation. Conrad v. Shearer, 197 Iowa 1078, 198 N.W. 633, 634.

As regards the rate of taxation, all purposes for which county taxation may be levied. Test whether a tax is levied for county purposes is whether it is for strictly county uses, for which county or its inhabitants alone would benefit, or is it for a purpose in which entire state COUPONS. Interest and dividend certificates; also those parts of a commercial instrument which are to be cut, and which are evidence of something connected with the contract mentioned in the instrument. They are generally attached to certificates of loan, where the interest is payable at particular periods, and, when the interest is paid, they are cut off and delivered to the payer. Wharton. Toon v. Wapinitia Irr. Co., 117 Or. 374, 243 P. 554, 556.

In England, they are known as warrants or dividend warrants, and the securities to which they belong, debentures; 13 C. B. 372.

Coupone notes. Promissory notes with coupons attached, the coupons being notes for interest for payment as they mature. Williams v. Moody, U.S. 663, 5 S.Ct. 974, 29 L.Ed. 281.

COUPON BONDS. Bonds to which are attached coupons for the several successive installments of interest to maturity. Benwell v. Newark, 55 N. J. Eq. 260, 36 A. 668; Tennessee Bond Cases, 114 Tenn. 723, 153 S.E. 266, 269; In re McCrary, 109 Neb. 796, 192 N.W. 237, 239.

In order that an injury may arise out of and in the course of employment, it must occur during hours of employment, as a natural incident of the work flowing therefrom as a natural consequence and directly connected therewith. Di Salvio v. Menihan Co., 225 N.Y. 123, 127 N.E. 766, 767. "In course of employment," as used in Workmen’s Compensation Act, means in service of master, and is not synonymous with "during the period covered by his actual employment." An injury, to be within course of employment, must occur during hours of working time, which includes hours of leisure set apart in working hours for rest, recreation, or refreshment, but not time when employee is off premises, not engaged in employer’s business, or at home preparing for work, or coming or leaving work. Shofiler v. Lehigh Valley Coal Co., 290 Pa. 480, 139 A. 192, 193. An employee, even after closing time, is in the course of employment until a suitable opportunity has been given for him to leave the place of work. Field v. Charmette Knitted Fabric Co., 245 N.Y. 397, 154 N.E. 266, 269; Munn v. Industrial Commission, 323 Ill. 377, 154 N.E. 128, 129; In re Employers’ Liability Assur. Corporation, 215 Mass. 497, 102 N.E. 697, L.R.A. 1916A, 306; Conrad v. Cook-Lewis Foundry Co., 198 N.C. 723, 153 S.E. 266, 269; In re McCrary, 109 Neb. 796, 192 N.W. 237, 239.

COUR DE CASSATION. The supreme judicial tribunal of France, having appellate jurisdiction only. For an account of its composition and powers, see Jones, French Bar, 22; Guylot. Repert. Univ.

COURSE. In surveying, the direction of a line with reference to a meridian.

COURSE OF BUSINESS. What is usually done in the management of trade or business. Idom v. Weeks & Russell, 135 Miss. 65, 99 So. 761, 764; In re Maischick, D.C. Pa., 217 F. 492, 494.
COURSE OF THE VOYAGE. By this term is understood the regular and customary track, if such there be, which a ship takes in going from one port to another, and the shortest way. Marsh. Ins. 185; Phi11. Ins. 981.

COURSE OF TRADE. What is customarily or ordinarily done in the management of trade or business.

COURSE OF VEIN. In mining, the "course of the vein" appearing on the surface is the course of its apex, which is generally inclined and undulated and departs more or less materially from the strike. Stewart Mining Co. v. Bourne, C.C.A. Idaho, 218 F. 327, 329.

COURSE OF VESSEL. In navigation, the "course" of a vessel is her apparent course, and not her heading at any given moment. The Eastern Glade, C.C.A.N.Y., 101 F.2d A, 6. It is her actual course. Liverpool, Brazil & River Plate Steam NaY. Co. v. U. S., D.C.N.Y., 12 F.2d 128, 129.

COURT. A space which is uncovered, but which may be partly or wholly inclosed by buildings or walls. Smith v. Martin, 95 Okl. 271, 219 P. 312, 313. When used in connection with a street, indicates a short street, blind alley, or open space like a short street inclosed by dwellings or other buildings facing thereon. City of Miami v. Saunders, 151 Fla. 699, 10 So.2d 326, 329.

Legislation

A legislative assembly. Parliament is called In the old books a court of the king, nobility, and commons assembled. Finch, Law, b. 4, c. 1, p. 233; Fleta, lib. 2, c. 2.

The application of the term—which originally denoted the place of assembling—to denote the assemble, resembles the similar application of the Latin term curia, and is readily explained by the fact that the earlier courts were merely assemblies, in the court-yard of the baron or of the king himself, of those who were qualified and whose duty it was so to appear at stated times or upon summons. Traces of this usage and constitution of courts still remain in the courts baron, the various courts for the trial of impeachments in England and the United States, and in the control exercised by the parliament of England and the legislatures of the various states of the United States over the organization of courts of justice, as constituted in modern times. This meaning of the word has also been retained in the titles of some deliberative bodies, such as the "general court" of Massachusetts, i. e., the legislature.

International Law

The person and suite of the sovereign; the place where the sovereign sojourns with his regal retnue, wherever that may be. The English government is spoken of in diplomacy as the court of St. James, because the palace of St. James is the official palace.

Practice

An organ of the government, belonging to the judicial department, whose function is the application of the laws to controversies brought before it and the public administration of justice. White County v. Gwin, 136 Ind. 562, 36 N.E. 237, 22 L.R.A. 402; Bradley v. Town of Bloomfield, 85 N.J. Law, 506, 89 A. 1009.

The presence of a sufficient number of the members of such a body regularly convened in an authorized place at an appointed time, engaged in the full and regular performance of its functions. Brumley v. State, 20 Ark. 77; Wightman v. Karner, 20 Ala. 446.

A tribunal officially assembled under authority of law at the appropriate time and place, for the administration of justice. In re Carter's Estate, 254 Pa. 518, 99 A. 58.

An agency of the sovereign created by it directly or indirectly under its authority, consisting of one or more officers, established and maintained for the purpose of hearing and determining issues of law and fact regarding legal rights and alleged violations thereof, and of applying the sanctions of the law, authorized to exercise its powers in due course of law at times and places previously determined by lawful authority. Isbill v. Stovall, Tex.Civ.App., 92 S.W.2d 1067, 1070.

An incorporeal, political being, composed of one or more judges, who sit at fixed times and places, attended by proper officers, pursuant to lawful authority, for the administration of justice. State v. Le Blond, 108 Ohio St. 126, 140 N.E. 510, 512. An organized body with defined powers, meeting at certain times and places for the hearing and deciding of causes and other matters brought before it, and aided in this, its proper business, by its proper officers, viz., attorneys and counsel to present and manage the business, clerks to record and attest its acts and decisions, and ministerial officers to execute its commands, and secure due order in its proceedings. Ex parte Gardner, 22 Nev. 280, 39 P. 570; Hertzen v. Hertzen, 104 Or. 423, 208 P. 580, 582.

It is a passive forum for adjusting disputes and has no power to investigate facts or to initiate proceedings. Sale v. Railroad Commission, 15 Cal.2d 612, 104 P.2d 38, 41.

The judge, or the body of judges, presiding over a court.

The words "court" and "judge," or "judges," are frequently used in statutes as synonymous. When used with reference to orders made by the court or judges, they are to be so understood. State v. Caywood, 96 Iowa, 367, 65 N.W. 385; Sale v. Railroad Commission, 15 Cal.2d 612, 104 P.2d 38, 41.

The word "court" is often employed in statutes otherwise than in its strict technical sense, and is applied to various tribunals not judicial in their character, State v. Howat, 107 Kan. 423, 191 P. 585, 589; for example, in New Jersey, the "court of pardons"; In re Court of Pardons, 97 N.J.Eq. 555, 129 A. 624, 625.

Classification

Courts may be classified and divided according to several methods, the following being the more usual:

Courts of record and courts not of record. The former being those whose acts and judicial proceedings are enrolled, or recorded, for a perpetual memory and testimony, and which have power to fine or imprison for contempt. Error lies to their judgments, and they generally possess a seal. Courts not of record are those of inferior dignity, which have no power to fine or imprison, and in which the proceedings are not enrolled or recorded. 3 Bl. Comm. 24; 3 Steph. Comm. 383; The Thomas Fletcher, C.C.Ga., 24 F. 481; Ex parte Thistleton, 52 Cal. 225; Erwin v. U. S., D.C.Ga., 37 F. 488, 2 L.R.A. 229; Heininger v. Davis, 96 Ohio St. 205, 117 N.E. 229, 231.

A "court of record" is a judicial tribunal having attributes and exercising functions independently of the person of the magistrate designated generally to hold it, and proceeding according to the course of common law, its acts and proceedings being enrolled for a perpetual memorial. Jones v. Jones, 188 Mo.App. 220, 175 S.W. 227, 229; Ex parte Gladhill, 8 Metc., Mass., 171, per Shaw, C. J. See also, Ledwith v. Rosalsky, 244 N.Y. 406, 155 N.E. 688, 689.

Courts may be at the same time of record for some purposes and not of record for others. Lester v. Redmond, 6 Hill, N.Y., 590; Ex parte Gladhill, 8 Metc., Mass., 168.

Superior and inferior courts. The former being courts of general original jurisdiction in the first instance, and which exercise a control or supervision over a system of lower courts, either by appeal, error, or certiorari; the latter being courts of small or restricted jurisdiction, and subject to the review or correction of higher courts. Sometimes the former term is used to denote a particular group or system of courts of high powers, and all others are called "inferior courts."

To constitute a court a superior court as to any class of actions, within the common-law meaning of that term, its jurisdiction of such actions must be unconditional, so that the only thing requisite to enable the court to take cognizance of them is the acquisition of jurisdiction of the persons of the parties. Simons v. De Barre, 4 Bosw., N.Y., 547.

An inferior court is a court whose judgments or decrees can be reviewed, on appeal or writ of error, by a higher tribunal, whether that tribunal be the circuit or supreme court. Nugent v. State, 18 Ala. 521.

Civil and criminal courts. The former being such as are established for the adjudication of controversies between subject and subject, or the ascertainment, enforcement, and redress of private rights; the latter, such as are charged with the administration of the criminal laws, and the punishment of wrongs to the public.

Equity courts and law courts. The former being such as possess the jurisdiction of a chancellor, apply the rules and principles of chancery law, and follow the procedure in equity; the latter, such as have no equitable powers, but administer justice according to the rules and practice of the common law.

As to the division of courts according to their jurisdiction, see Jurisdiction.

As to several names or kinds of courts not specifically described in the titles immediately following, see Arches Court, Appellate, Circuit Courts, Consistory Courts, County, Customary Court-Baron, Ecclesiastical Courts, Federal Courts, Forest Courts, High Commission Court, Instance Court, Justice Court, Justiciary Court, Legislative Courts, Maritime Court, Mayor's Court, Moot Court, Municipal Court, Orphans' Court, Police Court, Prerogative Court, Prize Court, Probate Court, Superior Courts, Supreme Court, and Surrogate's Court.

As to court-hand, court-house, court-lands, court rolls, courtyard, see those titles in their alphabetical order infra.

General

Court above, court below. In appellate practice, the "court above" is the one to which a cause is removed for review, whether by appeal, writ of error, or certiorari; while the "court below" is the one from which the case is removed. Going v. Schnell, 6 Ohio Dec. 933.

Court in bank. A meeting of all the judges of a court, usually for the purpose of hearing arguments on demurrers, points reserved, motions for new trial, etc., as distinguished from sessions of the same court presided over by a single judge or justice.

Court of competent jurisdiction. One having power and authority of law at the time of acting to do the particular act. Ex parte Plaistridge, 68 Okl. 256, 173 P. 646, 647.

Court of limited jurisdiction. When a court of general jurisdiction proceeds under a special statute, it is a "court of limited jurisdiction" for the purpose of that proceeding, and its jurisdiction must affirmatively appear. Osage Oil & Refining Co. v. Interstate Pipe Co., 124 Okl. 7, 253 P. 66, 71.

De facto court. One established, organized, and exercising its judicial functions under authority of a statute apparently valid, though such statute may be in fact unconstitutional and may be afterwards so adjudged; or a court established and acting under the authority of a de facto government. 1 Bl. Judgm. § 173; In re Manning, 139 U.S. 504, 11 S.Ct. 624, 35 L.Ed. 264; Gildemeister v. Lindsay, 212 Mich, 299, 180 N.W. 633, 635.

Full court. A session of a court, which is attended by all the judges or justices composing it.

COURT-BARON. In English law. A court which, although not one of record, is incident to every manor, and cannot be severed therefrom. It was ordained for the maintenance of the services and duties stipulated for by lords of manors, and for the purpose of determining actions of a personal nature, where the debt or damage was under forty shillings. Wharton; 1 Poll. & Maitl. Hist. E. L. 580.

Customary court-baron is one appertaining entirely to copyholders. 3 Bl. Comm. 33.
Freeholders' court-baron is one held before the freeholders who owe suit and service to the manor. It is the court-baron proper.

Coke (1st Inst. 58a) speaks of the Court Baron as being of the two natures just indicated. Blackstone, 3 Comm. 33, says that, though in their nature distinct, they are frequently confounded together. Later writers doubt if there were two courts; 1 Poll. & Maitl. Hist. E. L. 580.

COURT CHRISTIAN. The ecclesiastical courts in England are often so called, as distinguished from the civil courts. 1 Bl. Comm. 83; 3 Bl. Comm. 64; 3 Steph. Comm. 430.

COURT FOR CONSIDERATION OF CROWN CASES RESERVED. A court established by St. 11 & 12 Vict. c. 78, composed of such of the judges of the superior courts of Westminster as were able to attend, for the consideration of questions of law reserved by any judge in a court of oyer and terminer, gaol delivery, or quarter sessions, before which a prisoner had been found guilty by verdict. Such question is stated in the form of a special case. Mozley & Whiteley; 4 Steph. Comm. 442. The trial judge was empowered to "state a case" for the opinion of that court. He could not be compelled to do so, and only a question of law could be raised. If the court considered that the point had been wrongly decided at the trial, the conviction would be quashed. By Act of 1907, the Court of Criminal Appeal was created and the Court for Crown Cases Reserved was abolished.

COURT FOR DIVORCE AND MATRIMONIAL CAUSES. This court was established by St. 20 & 21 Vict. c. 85, which transferred to it all jurisdiction then exercisable by any ecclesiastical court in England, in matters matrimonial, and also gave it new powers. The court consisted of the lord chancellor, the three chiefs, and three senior puisne judges of the common-law courts, and the judge ordinary, who together constituted, and still constitute, the "full court." The judge ordinary heard almost all matters in the first instance. By the judicature act, 1873, § 3, the jurisdiction of the court was transferred to the supreme court of judicature. Sweet.

COURT FOR THE CORRECTION OF ERRORS. The style of a court having jurisdiction for review, by appeal or writ of error. The name was formerly used in New York and South Carolina.

COURT FOR THE RELIEF OF INSOLVENT DEBTORS. In English law. A local court which had its sittings in London only, which received the petitions of insolvent debtors, and decided upon the question of granting a discharge. See 3 Steph. Com. 426; 4 id. 287. Abolished by the Bankruptcy Act of 1861.

COURT FOR THE TRIAL OF IMPEACHMENTS. A tribunal empowered to try any officer of government or other person brought to its bar by the process of impeachment. In England, the house of lords constitutes such a court; in the United States, the senate; and in the several states, usually the upper house of the legislative assembly.

COURT-HAND. In old English practice. The peculiar hand in which the records of courts were written from the earliest period down to the reign of George II. Its characteristics were great strength, compactness, and undeviating uniformity; and its use undoubtedly gave to the ancient record its acknowledged superiority over the modern, in the important quality of durability.

The writing of this hand, with its peculiar abbreviations and contractions, constituted, while it was in use, an art of no little importance, being an indispensable part of the profession of "clerkship," as it was called. Two sizes of it were employed, a large and a small hand; the former, called "great court-hand," being used for initial words or clauses, the placita of records, etc. Burrill.

COURT-HOUSE. The building occupied for the public sessions of a court, with its various offices. The building occupied and appropriated according to law for the holding of courts. Board of Sup'rs of Stone County v. O'Neal, 130 Miss. 57, 93 So. 483, 484. Johnson City Buick -Co. v. Johnson, 165 Tenn. 349, 54 S.W.2d 946.

The term may be used of a place temporarily occupied for the sessions of a court, though not the recourt-house. Harris v. State, 72 Miss. 960, 18 So. 387, 33 L.R.A. 85; Vigo County v. Stout, 136 Ind. 53, 35 N.E. 683, 22 L. R. A. 398.

The word may be synonymous with "county site" and signify the seat of government. Board of Revenue of Jefferson County v. Huey, 195 Ala. 83, 70 So. 744, 746.

COURT, HUNDRED. See Hundred Court.

COURT-LANDS. Domains or lands kept in the lord's hands to serve his family.

COURT-MARTIAL. A military court, convened under authority of government and the Uniform Code of Military Justice, 10 U.S.C.A. § 801 et seq., for trying and punishing offenses committed by members of the armed forces.

Such courts exist and have their jurisdiction by virtue of the military law, the court being constituted and empowered to act in each instance by authority from a commanding officer.

COURT OF ADMIRALTY

COURT OF ADMIRALTY. A court having jurisdiction of causes arising under the rules of admiralty law. See Admiralty.

High Court of Admiralty. In English law. This was a court which exercised jurisdiction in prize cases, and had general jurisdiction in maritime causes, on the instance side. Its proceedings were usually in rem, and its practice and principles derived in large measure from the civil law. The judicature acts of 1873 transferred all the powers and jurisdiction of this tribunal to the probate, divorce, and admiralty division of the high court of justice.

COURT OF ANCIENT DEMESNE. In English law. A court of peculiar constitution, held by a bailiff appointed by the king, in which alone the tenants of the king’s demesne could be impleaded. 2 Burrows, 1046; 1 Spence, Eq.Jur. 100; 2 Bl. Comm. 99; 1 Steph. Comm. 224; 1 Poll. & Maitl. 367.

COURT OF APPEAL. HIS MAJESTY’S. The chief appellate tribunal of England. It was established by the judicature acts of 1873 and 1875, and is invested with the jurisdiction formerly exercised by the court of appeal in chancery, the exchequer chamber, the judicial committee of the privy council in admiralty and lunacy appeals, and with general appellate jurisdiction from the high court of justice.

COURT OF APPEALS. In American law. An appellate tribunal which, in Kentucky, Maryland, the District of Columbia, and New York, is the court of last resort. In Virginia and West Virginia, it is known as the “supreme court of appeals”; in Connecticut, the Supreme Court of Errors; in Massachusetts and Maine, the Supreme Judicial Court. In other states the court of last resort is known as the Supreme Court. In Texas the Courts of Civil Appeals are inferior to the supreme court.

The United States is divided into eleven judicial circuits in each of which there is established a court of appeals known as the United States Court of Appeals for the circuit. 28 U.S.C.A. §§ 41, 43.

COURT OF APPEALS IN CASES OF CAPTURE. A court erected by act of congress under the articles of confederation which preceded the adoption of the constitution. It had appellate jurisdiction in prize causes.

COURT OF ARBITRATION OF THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE. A court of arbitrators, created for the convenience of merchants in the city of New York, by act of the legislature of New York. It decides disputes between members of the chamber of commerce, and between members and outside merchants who voluntarily submit themselves to the jurisdiction of the court.

COURT OF ARCHDEACON. The most inferior of the English ecclesiastical courts, from which an appeal generally lies to that of the bishop (i.e., to the Consistory Court). 3 Bl. Comm. 64; 1 Holdsw. Hist. E. L. 369.

COURT OF ASSISTANTS. A court in Massachusetts organized in 1630, consisting of the governor, deputy governor and assistants. It exercised the whole power both legislative and judicial of the colony and an extensive chancery jurisdiction as well. S. D. Wilson in 18 Am.L.Rev. 226.

COURT OF ATTACHMENTS. The lowest of the three courts held in the forests. It has fallen into total disuse.

It was held before the verderers of the forest once in every forty days, to view the attachments by the foresters for offences against the vert and the venison. It had cognizance only of small trespasses. Larger ones were enrolled and heard by the Justices in Eyre. 1 Holdsw. Hist. E. L. 343.

COURT OF AUDIENCE. An ecclesiastical court, in which the primates once exercised in person a considerable part of their jurisdiction. Such courts seem to be now obsolete, or at least to be only used on the rare occurrence of the trial of a bishop. Phillim. Ecc. Law, 1201, 1204; 1 Holdsw. Hist. E. L. 371.

COURT OF AUGMENTATION. An English court created in the time of Henry VIII (27 Hen. VIII, c. 27), with jurisdiction over the property and revenue of certain religious foundations, which had been made over to the king by act of parliament, and over suits relating to the same.

It was called “The Court of the Augmentations of the Revenues of the King’s Crown” (from the augmentation of the revenues of the crown derived from the suppression of the monasteries), and was dissolved in the reign of Queen Mary, but the Office of Augmentation remained long after; the records of the court are now at the Public Record Office. Cowell.

COURT OF BANKRUPTCY. An English court of record, having original and appellate jurisdiction in matters of bankruptcy, and invested with both legal and equitable powers for that purpose. The Bankrupt Law Consolidation Act, 1849. By the judicature acts, 1873 and 1875, the court of bankruptcy was consolidated into the supreme court of judicature.

In the United States, the Bankruptcy Act, § 1 (10), 11 U.S.C.A. § 1(10), as amended, provides that “courts of bankruptcy” shall include the district courts of the United States and of the Territories and possessions to which this title is or may hereafter be applicable, and the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.”

COURT OF BROTHERHOOD. An assembly of the mayors or other chief officers of the principal towns of the Cinque Ports in England, originally administering the chief powers of those ports, now almost extinct. Cent. Diet.

COURT OF CHANCERY. A court having the jurisdiction of a chancellor; a court administering equity and proceeding according to the forms and principles of equity. In England, prior to the judicature acts, the style of the court possessing the largest equitable powers and jurisdiction was the “high court of chancery.” In some of the United States, the title “court of chancery” is applied to

The terms "equity" and "chancery," "court of equity" and "court of chancery," are constantly used as synonymous in the United States. It is presumed that this custom arose from the circumstance that the equity jurisdiction, which is exercised by the courts of the various states is assimilated to that possessed by the English courts of chancery. Indeed, in some of the states it is made identical with the chancery. It was also styled the "Common Bench." It was one of the courts derived from the breaking up of the Exchequer. Indeed, in some of the states it is made identical with the chancery.

One of the superior courts at Westminster, consisting of a chief justice and four associates, and holds one annual session. It is located at Washington. Its jurisdiction extends to all claims against the county and expenses incurred by it, and providing for their payment by appropriations out of the county levy or annual tax. Merleweather v. Muhlenburg County Court, 120 U.S. 354, 7 S.Ct. 563, 30 L.Ed. 653.

COURT OF CLAIMS. One of the courts of the United States, established in 1855. U. S. v. Klein, 13 Wall., U.S., 128, 144, 20 L.Ed. 519. It consists of a chief justice and four associates, and holds one annual session. It is located at Washington. Its jurisdiction extends to all claims against the United States arising out of any contract with the government or based on an act of congress or regulation of the executive, and all claims referred to it by either house of congress, as well as to claims for exoneration by a disbursing officer. Its judgments are, in certain cases, reviewable by the United States supreme court. It has no equity powers. Its decisions are reported and published.

This name is also given, in some of the states, either to a special court or to the ordinary county court sitting as a court of claims, having the special duty of auditing and ascertaining the claims against the county and expenses incurred by it, and providing for their payment by appropriations out of the county levy or annual tax. Merleweather v. Muhlenburg County Court, 120 U.S. 354, 7 S.Ct. 563, 30 L.Ed. 653.

COURT OF COMMISSIONERS OF SEWERS. The name of certain English courts created by commission under the great seal pursuant to the statute of sewers (23 Hen. VIII. c. 5).

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS. In English law. One of the four superior courts at Westminster, which existed up to the passing of the judicature acts. It was also styled the "Common Bench." It was one of the courts derived from the breaking up of the aula regis, and had exclusive jurisdiction of all real actions and of communia placita, or common pleas, i.e., between subject and subject. It was presided over by a chief justice with four puisne judges (later five, by virtue of 31 & 32 Vict. c. 125, § 11, subsec. 8). Appeals lay annually to the king's bench, but afterwards to the exchequer chamber. See 3 Bl.Comm. 37, et seq. Its jurisdiction was altogether confined to civil matters, having no cognizance in criminal cases, and was concurrent with that of the queen's bench and exchequer in personal actions and ejectment. Wharton.

In American law. The name sometimes given to a court of original and general jurisdiction for the trial of issues of fact and law according to the principles of the common law. Moore v. Barry, 30 S.C. 530, 9 S.E. 589, 4 L.R.A. 294.

COURT OF CONSCIENCE. The same as courts of request, (q. v.). This name is also frequently applied to the courts of equity or of chancery, not as a name but as a description. Harper v. Clayton, 84 Md. 346, 35 A. 1083, 35 L.R.A. 211. See Conscience.

COURT OF CONVOCATION. In English ecclesiastical law. A court, or assembly, comprising all the high officials of each province and representatives of the minor clergy. It is in the nature of an ecclesiastical parliament; and, so far as its judicial functions extend, it has jurisdiction of cases of heresy, schism, and other purely ecclesiastical matters. An appeal lies to the king in council. 2 & 3 Will. IV. c. 92; Cowell; Bac. Abr. Ecclesiastical Courts, A, 1; 1 Bla. Comm. 279; 2 Steph. Com. 525, 668; 2 Burn, Eccl. Law, 18. Convocation exercises no jurisdiction at the present day. 1 Holdsw. Hist. E. L. 373.

COURT OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS. In some states, a court of record in each county. Thus, in Alabama, it is composed of the judge of probate, as principal judge, and four commissioners, who are elected at the times prescribed by law, and hold office for four years.

COURT OF CUSTOMS AND PATENT APPEALS. The title given by Act Mar. 2, 1929, c. 488, § 1, 45 Stat. 1475, to a court of the United States created by Act Aug. 5, 1909, c. 6, § 28, 36 Stat. 91, 105, and then known as the Court of Customs Appeals, consisting of a presiding judge and four associate judges. In patent and trade-mark cases it has the appellate jurisdiction which prior to April 1, 1929, was vested in the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia. Act Mar. 2, 1929, c. 488, § 2 (a, d), 45 Stat. 1476. As to its jurisdiction over appeals from the "Customs Court," see that title.

COURT OF DELEGATES. An English tribunal composed of delegates appointed by royal commission, and formerly the great court of appeal in all ecclesiastical causes. The powers of the court were, by 2 & 3 Wm. IV. c. 92, transferred to the privy council. Brown; 3 Bl. Comm. 66; 1 Holdsw. Hist. E. L. 373.

A commission of review was formerly granted, in extraordinary cases, to revise a sentence of the court of delegates, when that court had apparently been led into material error.

COURT OF EQUITY. A court which has jurisdiction in equity, which administers justice and decides controversies in accordance with the rules, principles, and precedents of equity, and which follows the forms and procedure of chancery; as distinguished from a court having the jurisdiction, rules, principles, and practice of the common law. Thomas v. Phillips, 4 Smedes & M., Miss., 423.

COURT OF ERROR. An expression applied especially to the court of exchequer chamber and the house of lords, as taking cognizance of error brought. Mozley & Whitley; 3 Steph. Comm. 333. It is applied in some of the United States to the court of last resort in the state; and in its most general sense denotes any court having power to review the decisions of lower courts on appeal, error, certiorari, or other process. See Court of Appeals.

COURT OF ERRORS AND APPEALS. The court of last resort in the state of New Jersey is so named. Formerly, the same title was given to the highest court of appeal in New York.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER. In English law. A very ancient court of record, set up by William the Conqueror as a part of the aula regis, and afterwards one of the four superior courts at Westminster. It was, however, inferior in rank to both the king's bench and the common pleas. It was presided over by a chief baron and four puisne barons. It was originally the king's treasury, and was charged with keeping the king's accounts and collecting the royal revenues. But pleas between subject and subject were anciently heard there, until this was forbidden by the Articula super Chartas, (1290,) after which its jurisdiction as a court only extended to revenue cases arising out of the non-payment or withholding of debts to the crown. But the privilege of suing and being sued in this court was extended to the king's accountants, and later, by the use of a convenient fiction to the effect that the plaintiff was the king's debtor or accountant, the court was thrown open to all suitors in personal actions. The exchequer had formerly both an equity side and a common-law side, but its equity jurisdiction was taken away by the statute 5 Vict. c. 5, (1842,) and transferred to the court of chancery. The judicature act (1873) transferred the business and jurisdiction of this court to the "Exchequer Division" of the "High Court of Justice."

In Scotch law. A court which formerly had jurisdiction of matters of revenue, and a limited jurisdiction over cases between the crown and its vassals where no questions of title were involved.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER CHAMBER. The name of a former English court of appeal, intermediate between the superior courts of common law and the house of lords. When sitting as a court of appeal from any one of the three superior courts of common law, it was composed of judges of the other two courts. 3 Bl.Comm. 56, 57; 3 Steph.Comm. 333, 356. By the judicature act (1873) the jurisdiction of this court is transferred to the court of appeal.

COURT OF FACULTIES. A tribunal of the archbishop in England.

It does not hold pleas in any suits, but creates rights to pew, monuments, and other mortuary matters. It had also various other powers under 25 Hen. VIII. c. 2L Co. 4th Inst. 337; 2 Chit.Gen.Pr. 507.

COURT OF FIRST INSTANCE. A court of primary jurisdiction. Courts of this title may be found in the jurisprudence of the Philippine Islands. 15 C.J. 688.

In English law. A court of criminal jurisdiction, in England, held in each county once in every quarter of a year, but in the county of Middlesex twice a month. 4 Steph. Comm. 317-320. When held at other times than quarterly, the sessions are called "general sessions of the peace." See 2 Odgers, C.L. 966.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS. The name given in some states to a court of general original jurisdiction in criminal cases.

COURT OF GREAT SESSIONS IN WALES. A court formerly held in Wales; abolished by 11 Geo. IV. and 1 Wm. IV. c. 70, and the Welsh judicature incorporated with that of England. 3 Steph. Comm. 317, note; 3 Bla. Comm. 77.

COURT OF GUESTLING. An assembly of the members of the Court of Brotherhood (supra) together with other representatives of the corporate members of the Cinque Ports, invited to sit with the mayors of the seven principal towns. Cent. Dict.

COURT OF HIGH COMMISSION. In English law. An ecclesiastical court of formidable jurisdiction, for the vindication of the peace and dignity of the church, by reforming, ordering, and correcting the ecclesiastical state and persons, and all manner of errors, heresies, schisms, abuses, offenses, contempt, and enormities. 3 Bl. Comm. 67. It was erected by St. 1 Eliz. c. 1, and abolished by 16 Car. I, c. 11. 1 Holdsw. Hist. E. L. 375.

COURT OF HONOR. A court having jurisdiction to hear and redress injuries or affronts to a man's honor or personal dignity, of a nature not cognizable by the ordinary courts of law, or encroachments upon his rights in respect to heraldry, coat-armor, right of precedence, and the like. It was one of the functions of the Court of Chivalry (q. v.) in England to sit and act as a court of honor. 3 Bl. Comm. 104.
The name is also given in some European countries to a tribunal of army officers (more or less distinctly recognized by law as a "court") convened for the purpose of inquiring into complaints affecting the honor of brother officers and punishing derelictions from the code of honor and deciding on the causes and occasions for fighting duels, in which officers are concerned, and the manner of conducting them.

COURT OF HUSTINGS. In English law. The county court of London, held before the mayor, recorder, and sheriff, but of which the recorder, is, in effect, the sole judge. No actions can be brought in this court that are merely personal. 3 Steph. Comm. 293, n.; 149, n.; 1 Bla. Comm. 80, n.; Madox, Hist. Exch. c. 20; Co. 2d Inst. 327. Since the abolition of all real and mixed actions except ejectment, the jurisdiction of this court has fallen into comparative desuetude.

Pulling on Cust. Lond.

COURT OF INQUIRY. In English law. A court sometimes appointed by the crown to ascertain whether it be proper to resort to extreme measures against a person charged before a court-martial. 2 Steph. Comm. 590; 1 Coler. Bla. Comm. 418, n.; 2 Brod. & B. 130. Also a court for hearing the complaints of private soldiers. Moz. & W. Diet.; Simmons, Cts. Mart. § 341.

In American law. Formerly, a court constituted by authority of the articles of war, invested with the power to examine into the nature of any transaction of, or accusation or imputation against, any officer or soldier, when demanded by him. Rev. St. § 1342, arts. 115, 116. Repealed by Act June 4, 1920, c. 227, § 4, 41 Stat. 812.

They were not strictly courts, having no power to try and determine guilt or innocence. They were rather agencies created by statute to investigate facts and report thereon. They could not compel the attendance of witnesses nor require them to testify. Davis, Mil. Law 220.

COURT OF JUSTICE SEAT. In English law. The principal of the forest courts. Called also Court of the Chief Justice in Eyre (q. v.).

COURT OF JUSTICIARY. A Scotch court of general criminal jurisdiction of all offenses committed in any part of Scotland, both to try causes and to review decisions of inferior criminal courts. It is composed of five lords of session with the lord president or justice-clerk as president. It also has appellate jurisdiction in civil causes involving small amounts. An appeal lies to the house of lords.

COURT OF KING'S BENCH. In English law. The supreme court of common law in the kingdom, now merged in the high court of justice under the judicature act of 1873, § 16.

It was one of the successors of the curia regis and received its name, it is said, because the king formerly sat in it in person. During the reign of a queen it was called the Queen's Bench, and during Cromwell's Protectorate it was called the Upper Bench.

COURT OF LAW. In a wide sense, any duly constituted tribunal administering the laws of the state or nation; in a narrower sense, a court proceeding according to the course of the common law and governed by its rules and principles, as contrasted with a "court of equity."

COURT OF LODEMANAGE. An ancient court of the Cinque Ports, having jurisdiction in maritime matters, and particularly over pilots (lode- men).

COURT OF MAGISTRATES AND FREEHOLDERS. In American law. The name of a court formerly established in South Carolina for the trial of slaves and free persons of color for criminal offenses.

COURT OF MARSHALSEA. In English law, the court or seat of the marshal. A court originally held before the steward and marshal of the king's house, instituted to administer justice between the king's domestic servants. It had jurisdiction of all trespasses committed within the verge of the king's court, where one of the parties was of the royal household; and of all debts and contracts, when both parties were of that establishment. It was abolished by 12 & 13 Viet. c. 101, § 13. Mozley & Whitley.

COURT OF NISI PRIUS. In American law. Though this term is frequently used as a general designation of any court exercising general, original jurisdiction in civil cases, (being used interchangeably with "trial-court," ) it belonged as a legal title only to a court which formerly existed in the city and county of Philadelphia, and which was presided over by one of the judges of the supreme court of Pennsylvania. This court was abolished by the constitution of 1874. See Courts of Assize and nisi prius.

COURT OF ORDINARY. In some of the United States (e. g., Georgia) the name given to the probate or surrogate's court, or the court having the usual jurisdiction in respect to the proving of wills and the administration of decedents' estates. Veach v. Rice, 131 U. S. 293, 9 S. Ct. 730, 33 L. Ed. 163. Such a court formerly existed in New Jersey, South Carolina, and Texas. 2 Kent 409.

COURT OF ORPHANS. In English law. The court of the lord mayor and aldermen of London, which has the care of those orphans whose parent died in London and was free of the city. It is now said to be fallen into disuse. 2 Steph. Comm. 313; Pull. Cust. Lond. 196, Orphans' Court.

In American law. In Pennsylvania (and perhaps some other states) the name "orphans' court" is applied to that species of tribunal which is elsewhere known as the "probate court" or "surrogate's court."

COURT OF OYER AND TERMINER. In English law. A court for the trial of cases of treason and felony. The commissioners of assise and nisi prius are judges selected by the king and appointed and authorized under the great seal, including usually two of the judges at Westminster, and sent out twice a year into most of the counties of England, for the trial (with a jury of the county) of causes then depending at Westminster, both civil and criminal. They sit by virtue of several commissions, each of which, in reality, constitutes them a separate and distinct court. The commission of oyer and terminer gives them authority for the trial of treasons and felonies; that of general gaol delivery empowers them to try every prisoner then in gaol, whatever offense; so that, altogether, they possess full criminal jurisdiction.

In American law. This name is generally used (sometimes, with additions) as the title, or part of the title, of a state court of criminal jurisdiction, or of the criminal branch of a court of general jurisdiction, being commonly applied to such courts as may try felonies, or the higher grades of crime. Such courts exist in Delaware and Pennsylvania. They were abolished in New York and New Jersey in 1895.

COURT OF OYER AND TERMINER AND GENERAL GAOL (or JAIL) DELIVERY. In American law. A court of criminal jurisdiction in the state of Pennsylvania. It is held to the same time with the court of quarter sessions, as a general rule, and by the same judges. Const. Pa. art. 5, 11; 17 P.S. §§ 371, 391, 471.

In English law. A tribunal for the examination and trial of criminals. 3 Steph. Comm. 352.

COURT OF PASSAGE. An inferior court, possessing a very ancient jurisdiction over causes of action arising within the borough of Liverpool. It appears to have been also called the "Borough Court of Liverpool." It has the same jurisdiction in admiralty matters as the Lancashire county court. Rosc. Adm. 75.

COURT OF PECULIARS. A spiritual court in England, being a branch of, and annexed to, the Court of Arches. It has a jurisdiction over all those parishes dispersed through the province of Canterbury, in the midst of other dioceses, which are exempt from the ordinary's jurisdiction, and subject to the metropolitan only. All ecclesiastical causes arising within these peculiar or exempt jurisdictions are originally cognizable by this court, from which an appeal lies to the Court of Arches. 3 Steph. Comm. 431; 4 Reeve, Eng. Law, 104. Most of such courts have been abolished by legislation. 1 Holdsw. Hist. Eng. Law 352. See also, Arches Court.

COURT OF PIEPOUDRE. (Also spelled Pipowder, Pie Powder, Py-Powder, Piedpoudre, etc.) The lowest (and most expeditious) of the courts of justice known to the older law of England. It is supposed by Cowell and Blount to have been so called from the dusty feet of the suitors. For another conjecture as to the origin of the name, see Co. 4th Inst. 472. It was a court of record incident to every fair and market, was held by the steward, and had jurisdiction to administer justice for all commercial injuries and minor offenses done in that same fair or market, (not a preceding one.) Inderwick, King’s Peace 105. An appeal lay to the courts at Westminster. This court long ago fell into disuse. 3 Bl. Comm. 32; Barrington, Stat. 337; 3 Steph. Comm. 317, n.; Skene, de verb. sig. Fede pulverosus; Bracton 334; 22 L.Q.R. 244; 1 Holdsw. Hist. E. L. 309. See, however, Odgers, C. L. 1021.

COURT OF PIEPOUDRE. See Court of Piepoudre.

COURT OF QUARTER SESSIONS OF THE PEACE. In American law. A court of criminal jurisdiction in the state of Pennsylvania, having power to try misdemeanors, and exercising certains functions of an administrative nature. There is one such court in each county of the state. Its sessions are, in general, held at the same time and by the same judges as the court of oyer and terminer and general jail delivery. Const. Pa. art. 5, § 1; 17 P.S. §§ 331, 361.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH. See Court of King's Bench.

COURT OF RECORD. See Court, supra.

COURT OF REGARD. In English law. One of the forest courts, in England, held every third year, for the lawing or expeditation of dogs, to prevent them from running after deer. It is now obsolete. 3 Steph. Comm. 440; 3 Bl. Comm. 71, 72.

COURT OF SESSION. The name of the highest court of civil jurisdiction in Scotland. It was composed of fifteen judges, now of thirteen. It sits in two divisions. The lord president and three ordinary lords form the first division; the lord justice clerk and three other ordinary lords form the second division. There are five permanent lords ordinary attached equally to both divisions; the last appointed of whom officiates on the bills, i.e., petitions preferred to the court during the session, and performs the other duties of junior lord ordinary. The chambers of the parliament house in which the first and second divisions hold their sittings are called the "inner house;" those in which the lords ordinary sit as single judges to hear motions and causes are collectively called the "outer house." The nomination and appointment of the judges is in the crown. Wharton.

COURT OF SESSIONS. Courts of criminal jurisdiction existing in California, New York, and one or two other of the United States.

COURT OF SHEPWAY. A court held before the lord warden of the Cinque Ports. A writ of error lay from the mayor and jurats of each port to the lord warden in this court, and thence to the queen's bench. The civil jurisdiction of the Cinque Ports is abolished by 18 & 19 Vict. c. 48.

COURT OF SPECIAL SESSIONS. A generic term, applicable to those courts which have no stated terms and are not continuous, but which are organized only for the trial of each particular case and become functus officio when judgment is rendered therein. People v. Wagner, 45 N.Y.S.2d 314, 316.

COURT OF STANNARIES. In English law. A court established in Devonshire and Cornwall, for the administration of justice among the miners and tinners, that they might not be drawn away from their business to attend suits in distant courts. The stannary court is a court of record, with a special jurisdiction. 3 Bl. Comm. 79.

COURT OF STAR CHAMBER. This was an English court of very ancient origin, but new-modeled by St. 3 Hen. VII. c. 1, and 21 Hen. VIII. c. 20, consisting of divers lords, spiritual and temporal, being privy councillors, together with two judges of the courts of common law, without the intervention of any jury. The jurisdiction extended legally over riots, perjury, misbehavior of sheriffs, and other misdemeanors contrary to the laws of the land; yet it was afterwards stretched to the asserting of all proclamations and orders of state, to the vindicating of illegal commissions and grants of monopolies; holding for honorable that which it pleased, and for just that which it profited, and becoming both a court of law to determine civil rights and a court of revenue to enrich the treasury. It was finally abolished by St. 16 Car. I, c. 10, to the general satisfaction of the whole nation. Brown.

COURT OF SURVEY. A court for the hearing of appeals by owners or masters of ships, from orders for the detention of unsafe ships, made by the English board of trade, under the merchant shipping act, 1876, § 6.

COURT OF SWEINMOTE (spelled, also, Swainmote, Swain-gemote; Saxon, swang, an attendant, a freeholder, and mote or gemote, a meeting). One of the old forest courts, held before the verderers, as judges, by the steward, thrice in every year,—the sweins or freeholders within the forest composing the jury. This court had jurisdiction to inquire into grievances and oppressions committed by the officers of the forest, and also to receive and try presentments certified from the court of attachments, certifying the cause, in turn, under the seals of the jury, in case of conviction, to the court of justice seat for the rendition of judgment. Cowell; 3 Bla. Corn. 71, 72; 3 Steph. Corn. 317, n. See Inderwick, King's Peace 150; Forest Laws.

COURT OF THE CHIEF JUSTICE IN EYRE. The highest of the courts of the forest, held every three years, by the chief justice, to inquire of purpurses or encroachments, assarts, or cultivation of forest land, claims to franchises, parks, warrens, and vineyards in the forest, as well as claims of the hundred, claims to the goods of felons found in the forest, and any other civil questions that might arise within the forest limits. But it had no criminal jurisdiction, except of offenses against the forest laws. It was called also the court of justice seat. Inderwick, King's Peace. Since the Restoration the forest laws have fallen into disuse. The office was abolished in 1817.

COURT OF THE CLERK OF THE MARKET. An English court of inferior jurisdiction held in every fair or market for the punishment of misdemeanors committed therein. The jurisdiction over weights and measures formerly exercised was taken away by stat. 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 637 9 M. & W. 747. 4 Steph. Comm. 323.

COURT OF THE CORONER. In English law. A court of record, to inquire, when any one dies in prison, or comes to a violent or sudden death, by what manner he came to his end. 4 Steph. Comm. 323; 4 Bl. Comm. 274. Now generally known as an inquest. See Coroner.
COURT OF THE COUNTIES PALATINE. In English law. A species of private court which formerly appertained to the counties palatine of Lancaster and Durham. 1 Holdsw. Hist. E. L. 47; 1 Steph. Hist. C. L. 138; Coke, 4 Inst. 239; 1 Harg. L. Tr. 378.

COURT OF THE DUchy OF LANCASTER. A court of special jurisdiction, held before the chancellor of the duchy or his deputy, concerning all matters of equity relating to lands helden of the king in right of the duchy of Lancaster. 3 Bl. Comm. 78.

COURT OF THE EARL MARSHAL. In the reign of William the Conqueror the marshal was next in rank to the constable, in command of the army. When the constable's office ceased, his duties devolved upon the earl marshal. The military Court of the Constable came to be known as the Marshal's Court, or, in its modern form, Court-Martial. Aside from its criminal jurisdiction, it had much to do with questions relating to fiefs and military tenures, though not to property rights involved therein. Davis, Mil. Laws of U. S. 14. See Hale, Hist. C. L. 36; Grose, Mil. Antiq. See Court of Chivalry; Courts-Martial; Constable of England.

COURT OF THE LORD HIGH ADMIRAL. In the earlier part of the 14th century, the Admiral possessed a disciplinary jurisdiction over his fleet. After 1340 it is reasonable to suppose that the Admiral could hold an independent court and administer justice in piracy and other maritime cases. There were at first several admirals and several courts. From the early 15th century there was one Lord High Admiral and one Court of Admiralty. 1 Holdsw. Hist. E. L. 313.

COURT OF THE LORD HIGH STEWARD. In English law. A court instituted for the trial, during the recess of parliament, of peers indicted for treason or felony, or for misprision of either. This court is not a permanent body, but is created in modern times, when occasion requires, and for the time being, only; and the lord high steward, so constituted, with such of the temporal lords as may take the proper oath, and act, constitute the court.

All peers who have a right to sit and vote in Parliament must be summoned. They are the sole judges of fact, and the majority, which must consist of twelve at least, decides. The Lord High Steward has a vote, and is judge of all matters of law.

COURT OF THE LORD HIGH STEWARD OF THE UNIVERSITIES. In English law. A court constituted for the trial of scholars or privileged persons connected with the university at Oxford or Cambridge who are indicted for treason, felony, or mayhem. 3 Bla. Comm. 83; 4 id. 277; 1 Steph. Comm. 67; 3 id. 341; 4 id. 261.

COURT OF THE OFFICIAL PRINCIPAL. This court, the Court of the "Official Principal" of the Archbishop of Canterbury, is more commonly called the Arches Court, or Court of the Arches. See Arches Court.

COURT OF THE STEWARD AND MARSHAL. A high court, formerly held in England by the steward and marshal of the king's household, having jurisdiction of all actions against the king's peace within the bounds of the household for twelve miles, which circuit was called the "verge." Crabb, Eng. Law, 185. It had also jurisdiction of actions of debt and covenant, where both the parties were of the household. 2 Reeve, Eng.Law, 235, 247. This court was created by Charles I. and abolished in 1849. It was held in the borough of Southwark, and was called also the "palace court," having jurisdiction of all personal actions arising within twelve miles of the royal palace of Whitehall, exclusive of London.

COURT OF THE STEWARD OF THE KING'S HOUSEHOLD. In English law. A court which had jurisdiction of all cases of treason, misprision of treason, murder, manslaughter, bloodshed, and other malicious strikings whereby blood is shed, occurring in or within the limits of any of the palaces or houses of the king, or any other house where the royal person is abiding. It was created by statute 33 Hen. VIII, c. 12, but long ago fell into disuse. 4 Bl. Comm. 276, 277, and notes.

COURT OF WARDS AND LIVERIES. A court of record, established in England in the reign of Henry VIII. For the survey and management of the valuable fruits of tenure, a court of record was created by St. 32 Hen. VIII. c. 46, called the "Court of the King's Wards." To this was annexed, by St. 33 Hen. VIII, c. 22, the "Court of Liveries." 4 Reeve, Eng. Law, 258. This court was not only for the management of "wards," properly so called, but also of idiots and natural fools in the king's custody, and for licenses to be granted to the king's widows to marry, and fines to be made for marrying without his license. Id. 259. It was abolished by St. 12 Geo. III. c. 37, but long ago fell into disuse. 3d id. 258.

COURT ROLLS. The rolls of a manor, containing all acts relating thereto. While belonging to the lord of the manor, they are not in the nature of public books for the benefit of the tenant.

COURTS OF APPEALS. A system of courts of the United States (one in each circuit) created by act of congress, composed of three or more judges (provision being made also for the allotment of the justices of the supreme court among the circuits), and having appellate jurisdiction as defined by statute. 28 U.S.C.A. §§ 41-48, 1291-1294.

COURT OF ASSIZE AND NISI PRIUS. Courts of the United States (one in each circuit) created by act of congress, composed of three or more judges (provision being made also for the allotment of the justices of the supreme court among the circuits), and having appellate jurisdiction as defined by statute. 28 U.S.C.A. §§ 41-48, 1291-1294.

COURTS OF ASSIZE AND NISI PRIUS. Courts of appeals of the United States (one in each circuit) created by act of congress, composed of three or more judges (provision being made also for the allotment of the justices of the supreme court among the circuits), and having appellate jurisdiction as defined by statute. 28 U.S.C.A. §§ 41-48, 1291-1294.

fact as are there under dispute in the courts of Westminster Hall. 3 Steph. Comm. 421, 422; 3 Bi. Comm. 57; 2 Odger, Corn. Law, 985.

COURTS OF CINQUE PORTS. In English law. Courts of limited local jurisdiction formerly held before the mayor and jurats (aldermen) of the Cinque Ports. Their jurisdiction was not affected by the Judicature Act of 1873. 1 Holdsw. Hist. E. L. 305; 3 Bla. Comm. 79; 2 Steph. Comm. 499.

COURTS OF THE FOREST. Courts held for the enforcement of the forest laws. Inderwick, King’s Peace. See Forest Courts.

COURTS OF THE FRANCHISES. Jurisdictions in the early Norman period which rested upon royal grants—often assumed. Edward I., in 1274, sent out commissioners to enquire by what warrant different landowners were exercising their Jura regalia. There were many varieties of lesser franchises. Some of these franchises were recognized as existing by the County Courts Acts, 1846–1888. 1 Holdsw. Hist. E. L. 61.

COURTS OF PRINCIPALITY OF WALES. A species of private courts of a limited though extensive jurisdiction, which, upon the thorough reduction of that principality and the settling of its polity in the reign of Henry VIII., were erected all over the country. These courts, however, have been abolished by 1 Wm. IV. c. 70; the principality being now divided into two circuits, which the judges visit in the same manner as they do the circuits in England, for the purpose of disposing of those causes which are ready for trial. Brown.

COURTS OF REQUEST. Inferior courts, in England, having local jurisdiction in claims for small debts, established in various parts of the kingdom by special acts of parliament. They were abolished in 1846, and the modern county courts (q. v.) took their place. 3 Steph. Comm. 283, 449; 1 Holdsw. H. E. L. 208; Bac. Abridg.; Select Cases in the Court of Requests (Selden Society, Publ. vol. 12).

COURTS OF THE UNITED STATES comprise the following: The senate of the United States, sitting as a court of impeachment; the supreme court; the courts of appeals; the district courts; the court of claims; the court of customs and patent appeals; the customs court; the tax court; the courts of appeals; the district courts; the supreme court of the United States; and provisional courts; courts of territories and outlying possessions.

COURTS OF THE UNIVERSITIES of Oxford and Cambridge have jurisdiction in all personal actions to which any member or servant of the respective university is a party, provided that the cause of action arose within the liberties of the university, and that the member or servant was resident in the university when it arose, and when the action was brought. 3 Steph. Comm. 299; St. 25 & 26 Vict. c. 26, § 12, St. 19 & 20 Vict. c. 17. Each university court also has a criminal jurisdiction in all offenses committed by its members. 4 Steph. Comm. 325.

COURTS OF WESTMINSTER HALL. The superior courts, both of law and equity, were for centuries fixed at Westminster, an ancient palace of the monarchs of England. Formerly, all the superior courts were held before the king’s capital justiciary of England, in the aula regis, or such of his palaces wherein his royal person resided, and removed with his household from one end of the kingdom to another. This was found to occasion great inconvenience to the suitors to remedy which it was made an article of the great charter of liberties, both of King John and King Henry III., that “common pleas should no longer follow the king’s court, but be held in some certain place,” in consequence of which they have ever since been held (a few necessary removals in times of the plague excepted) in the palace of Westminster only. The courts of equity also sit at Westminster, nominally, during term time, although, actually, only during the first day of term, for they generally sit in courts provided for the purpose in, or in the neighborhood of, Lincoln’s Inn. Brown.

COURTESY. See Curtesy.

COURTYARD. A corrupted form of “curtilage,” signifying a space of land about a dwelling house, which not only might be inclosed, but within which appurtenant buildings and structures might be erected. In re Lafayette Ave. in City of New York, 118 Misc.Rep. 161, 193 N.Y.S. 802, 804.

COUSIN. Kindred in the fourth degree, being the issue (male or female) of the brother or sister of one’s father or mother. Harris v. Harris, 97 N. J. Eq. 190, 127 A. 108, 109; In re Hering’s Estate, 137 Misc. 867, 244 N.Y.S. 138.

Those who descend from the brother or sister or the father of the person spoken of are called “paternal cousins”: “maternal cousins” are those who are descended from the brothers or sisters of the mother. Cousins-german are first cousins. Sanderson v. Bayley, 4 Myl. & C. 59.

In English writs, commissions, and other formal instruments issued by the crown, the word signifies any peer of the degree of an earl. The appellation is as ancient as the reign of Henry IV., who, being related or allied to every earl then in the kingdom, acknowledged that connection in all his letters and public acts; from which the use has descended to his successors, though the reason has long ago failed. Mozley & Whitely.

First cousins. Cousins-german; the children of, one’s uncle or aunt. Sanderson v. Bayley, 4 Mylne & C. 59.

Second cousins. Persons who are related to each other by descending from the same great-grandfather or great-grandmother. The children of one’s first cousins are his second cousins. These are sometimes called “first cousins once removed.” Slade v. Fooks, 9 Sim. 387; Corporation of Bridgnorth v. Collins, 15 Sim. 541.

Quarter cousin. Properly, a cousin in the fourth degree; but the term has come to express any remote degree of relationship, and even to bear an ironical signification in which it denotes a very trifling degree of intimacy and regard. Often corrupted into “cater” cousin.
COURTLY. A person who willingly and knowingly received an outlaw, and cherished or concealed him; for which offense he underwent the same punishment as the outlaw himself. Bract. 126b ; Spelman.

COUVERTURE. In French law. The deposit ("margin") made by the client in the hands of the broker, either of a sum of money or of securities, in order to guaranty the broker for the payment of the securities which he purchases for the client. Arg.Fr.Merc.Law, 555.

COVENABLE. A French word signifying convenient or suitable; as covenably endowed. Anciently written "convenable." Termes de la Ley.

COVENANT.

Practice

The name of a common-law form of action _ex contractu_, which lies for the recovery of damages for breach of a covenant, or contract under seal. Stickney v. Stickney, 21 N.H. 68; Utilities Production Corporation v. Southwestern Natural Gas Co., Del., 1 Terry 401, 11 A.2d 275, 276.

Law of Contracts

An agreement, convention, or promise of two or more parties, by _deed_ in writing, signed, sealed, and delivered, by which either of the parties pledges himself to the other that something is either done or shall be done, or stipulates for the truth of certain facts. Commonwealth v. Robinson, 1 Watts, Pa., 160; Kent v. Edmondston, 49 N.C. 529; Schram v. Coyne, C.C.A.Mich., 127 F.2d 205, 209; Sabin v. Hamilton, 2 Ark. 485, 490 (see, however, the later case of Dyer v. Gill, 32 Ark. 410, pointing out that by virtue of statute in Arkansas, the distinction between sealed and unsealed instruments, with reference to contracts between individuals, has been abolished).

An agreement between two or more parties, reduced to writing and executed by a sealing and delivery thereof, whereby some of the parties named therein engage, or one of them engages, with the other, or others, or some of them, therein also named, that some act hath or hath not already been done, or for the performance or non-performance of some specified duty. De Bolle v. Insurance Co., 4 Whart., Pa., 71, 33 Am.Dec. 38.

In common parlance, any agreement, whether under seal or not. 15 C.J. 1209; 7 R.C.L. 1084; Jenkins v. John Taylor Dry Goods Co., 352 Mo. 660, 179 S.W.2d 54, 58.

In effect, this has become the legal meaning in many states, in which private seals have been abolished by statute. For a number of these state statutes, see 66 L.R.A.

686, 687. In those states it is commonly held that the affixing of a seal, when unnecessary to the validity of the instrument, has no effect, and may be disregarded. 24 R.C.L. 689. "Seals are a relic of that period when men, as a rule, could not write," and a covenant may "be created in this state [Georgia] by a writing not under seal." Atlanta, K. & N. Ry. Co. v. McKinney, 124 Ga. 929, 53 S.E. 701, 703, 6 L.R.A.,N.S., 436.

Classification

Covenants may be classified according to several distinct principles of division. According as one or other of these is adopted, they are:

Express or implied. The former being those which are created by the express words of the parties to the deed declaratory of their intention, while implied covenants are those which are inferred by the law from certain words in a deed which imply (though they do not express) them. Express covenants are also called covenants "in deed," as distinguished from covenants "in law." McDonough v. Martin, 88 Ga. 675, 16 S.E. 59, 18 L.R.A. 343; Garstang v. Davenport, 90 Iowa 359, 57 N.W. 876.

Dependent, concurrent, and independent. Covenants are either dependent, concurrent, or mutual and independent. The first depends on the prior performance of some act or condition, and, until the condition is performed, the other party is not liable to an action on his covenant. In the second, mutual acts are to be performed at the same time; and if one party is ready, and offers to perform his part, and the other neglects or refuses to perform his, he who is ready and offers has fulfilled his engagement, and may maintain an action for the default of the other, though it is not certain that either is obliged to do the first act. The third sort is where either party may recover damages from the other for the injuries he may have received by a breach of the covenants in his favor; and it is no excuse for the defendant to allege a breach of the covenants on the part of the plaintiff. Bailey v. White, 3 Ala. 330; Gray v. Smith, C.C.Cal., 76 F. 534; Lowery v. May, 213 Ala. 66, 104 So. 5, 8; Roberts v. Steelman, C.C.A.N.J., 1 F.2d 180, 182.

Mutual and independent covenants are such as do not go to the whole consideration on both sides, but only to a part, and where separate actions lie for breaches on either side to recover damages for the injury sustained _by breach_. Lowery v. May, 213 Ala. 66, 104 So. 5, 8; Big Run Coal Co. v. Employers' Indemnity Co., 163 Ky. 596, 174 S.W. 25, 26.

Covenants are dependent where performance by one party is conditioned on and subject to performance by the other, and in such case the party who seeks performance must show performance or a tender or readiness to perform on his part; but covenants are independent when actual performance of one is not dependent on another, and where, in consequence, the remedy of both sides is by action. Roberts v. Steelman, C.C.A.N.J., 1 F.2d 180, 182.

Principal and auxiliary. The former being those which relate directly to the principal matter of the contract entered into between the parties; while auxiliary covenants are those which do not relate directly to the principal matter of contract between the parties, but to something connected with it.
Inherent and collateral. The former being such as immediately affect the particular property, while the latter affect some property collateral thereto or some matter collateral to the grant or lease. Shep.Touch. 161.

A covenant inherent is one which is conversant about the land, and knit to the estate in the land; as, that the thing demised shall be quietly enjoyed, shall be kept in repair, or shall not be aliened. A covenant collateral is one which is conversant about some collateral thing that doth nothing at all, or not so immediately, concern the thing granted; as to pay a sum of money in gross, etc.

Joint or several. The former bind both or all the covenantors together; the latter bind each of them separately. A covenant may be both joint and several at the same time, as regards the covenantors; but, as regards the covenantees, they cannot be joint and sever for one and the same cause, (5 Coke, 19a,) but must be either joint or several alone. Brown. See Capen v. Barrows, 1 Gray, Mass., 379; In re Slingby, 5 Coke, 18b.

Covenants are usually joint or several according as the interests of the covenantee are such; but the words of the covenant, where they are unambiguous, will decide, although, where they are ambiguous the nature of the interests as being joint or several is left to decide.

General or specific. The former relate to land generally and place the covenantee in the position of a specialty creditor only; the latter relate to particular lands and give the covenantee a lien thereon. Brown.

Executed or executory. The former being such as relate to an act already performed; while the latter are those whose performance is to be future. Shep.Touch. 161.

Affirmative or negative. The former being those in which the party binds himself to the existence of a present state of facts as represented or to the future performance of some act; while the latter are those in which the covenantor obliges himself not to do or perform some act.

Declaratory or obligatory. The former being those which serve to limit or direct uses; while the latter are those which are binding on the party himself. 1 Sid. 27; 1 Keb. 337.

Real and personal. A real covenant is one which binds the heirs of the covenantor and passes to assignees or purchasers; a covenant the obligation of which is so connected with the reality that he who has the latter is either entitled to the benefit of it or is liable to perform it; a covenant which has for its object something annexed to, or inherent in, or connected with, land or other real property, and runs with the land, so that the grantee of the land is invested with it and may sue upon it for a breach happening in his time. 4 Kent, Comm. 470; 2 Bl.Comm. 304; Chapman v. Holmes, 10 N.J.Law, 20; Skinner v. Mitchell, 5 Kan.App. 366, 48 P. 450; Oil Co. v. Hinton, 159 Ind. 398, 64 N.E. 224; Davis v. Lyman, 6 Conn. 249.

In the old books, a covenant real is also defined to be a covenant by which a man binds himself to pass a thing real, as lands or tenements. Terms de la Ley; 3 Bl. Comm. 156; Shep.Touch. 161. A personal covenant, on the other hand, is one which, instead of being a charge upon real estate of the covenantor, only binds himself and his personal representatives in respect to assets. 4 Kent, Comm. 470; Carter v. Denman, 23 N.J.Law, 270; Hadley v. Bovee, 97 Mt.App. 314, 71 S.W. 451. The phrase may also mean a covenant which is personal to the covenantor, that is, one which he must perform in person, and cannot procure another person to perform for him. De Sanno v. Earle, 273 Pa. 265, 117 A. 200, 202; Pearson v. Richards, 106 Or. 78, 211 P. 167, 171. "Real covenants" relate to realty and have for their main object some benefit thereto, inuring to benefit of and becoming binding on subsequent grantees, while "personal covenants" do not run with land. Bank of Hoxie v. Meriwether, 166 Ark. 39, 265 S.W. 642, 645. Very considerable confusion exists among the authorities in the use of the term real covenants. The definition of Blackstone which determines the character of covenants from the insertion or noninsertion of the word "heir" by the covenantor, is pretty generally rejected.

Transitive or intransitive. The former being those personal covenants the duty of performing which passes over to the representatives of the covenantor; while the latter are those the duty of performing which is limited to the covenantor himself, and does not pass over to his representative. Bac.Abr.Cov.

Disjunctive covenants. Those which are for the performance of one or more of several things at the election of the covenantor or covenantee, as the case may be. Platt, Co". 21.

Absolute or conditional. An absolute covenant is one which is not qualified or limited by any condition.

Other Compound and Descriptive Terms

Continuing covenant. One which indicates or necessarily implies the doing of stipulated acts successively or as often as the occasion may require; as, a covenant to pay rent by installments, to keep the premises in repair or insured, to cultivate land, etc. McGlynn v. Moore, 25 Cal. 395.

Full covenants. As this term is used in American law, it includes the following: The covenants for seisin, for right to convey, against incumbrances, for quiet enjoyment, sometimes for further assurance, and almost always of warranty, this last often taking the place of the covenant for quiet enjoyment, and indeed in many states being the only covenant in practical use. Rawle, Coy. for Title, § 21.

Mutual covenants. A mutual covenant is one where either party may recover damages from the other for the injury he may have received from a breach of the covenants in his favor. Bailey v. White, 3 Ala. 330.

Separate covenant. A several covenant; one which binds the several covenantors each for himself, but not jointly.

Covenant of non-claim. A covenant sometimes employed, particularly in the New England states, and in deeds of extinguishment of ground rents in Pennsylvania, that neither the vendor, nor his heirs, nor any other person, etc., shall claim any title in the premises conveyed. Rawle, Co\textsuperscript{y}. § 22.

Covenant of right to convey. An assurance by the covenantor that the grantor has sufficient capacity and title to convey the estate which he by his deed undertakes to convey.

Covenant of seizin. An assurance to the purchaser that the grantor has the very estate in quantity and quality which he purports to convey. 11 East, 641; Rawle, Co\textsuperscript{y}. § 58; Burton v. Price, 105 Fla. 544, 141 So. 728, 729.

It is said that the covenant of seizin is not now in use in England, being embraced in that of a right to convey; but it is used in several of the United States. 2 Washb. Heap. Prop. *648.

Covenant of warranty. An assurance by the grantor of an estate that the grantee shall enjoy the same without interruption by virtue of paramount title. King v. Kilbridge, 58 Conn. 109, 19 A. 519; Blair v. Morris, 212 Ala. 91, 101 So. 745, 746; Biwer v. Martin, 294 Ill. 488, 128 N.E. 518, 522.

Covenant running with land. A covenant which goes with the land, as being annexed to the estate, and which cannot be separated from the land, and transferred without it. 4 Kent, Comm. 472, note.

A covenant is said to run with the land, when not only the original parties or their representatives, but each successive owner of the land, will be entitled to its benefit, or be liable (as the case may be) to its obligation. 1 Steph. Comm. 455. Or, in other words, it is so called when either the liability to perform it or the right to take advantage of it passes to the assurance of the land. Tillotson v. Prichard, 60 Vt. 94, 14 A. 302, 6 Am.St.Rep. 95; Spencer's Case, 3 Coke, 31. One which touches and concerns the land itself, so that its benefit or obligation passes with the ownership. Local Federal Savings Loan Ass'n of Oklahoma City v. Eckroat, 186 Okl. 660, 100 P.2d 261, 262.

Covenant running with title. A covenant which goes with the title. Stipulation in a lease granting to lessee the option of renewing it for another specified period was such a covenant. Magnolia Petroleum Co. v. Carter, La.App., 2 So.2d 680, 682.

Covenant to convey. A covenant by which the covenantor agrees to convey to the covenantee a certain estate, under certain circumstances.

Covenant to renew. An executory contract, giving lessee the right to renew on compliance with the terms specified in the renewal clause, if any, or, if none, on giving notice, prior to termination of the lease, of his desire to renew, whereupon the contract becomes executed as to him. Freiheit v. Broch, 98 Conn. 166, 118 A. 828, 830.

Covenant to stand seised. A conveyance adapted to the case where a person seised of land in possession, reversion, or vested remainder, proposes to convey it to his wife, child, or kinsman. In its terms it consists of a covenant by him, in consideration of his natural love and affection, to stand seized of the land to the use of the intended transferee. Before the statute of uses this would merely have raised a use in favor of the covenantee; but by that act this use is converted into the legal estate, and the covenant therefore operates as a conveyance of the land to the covenantee. It is now almost obsolete. 1 Steph.Comm. 532; Williams, Seis. 145; French v. French, 3 N.H. 261; Jackson v. Swart, 20 Johns., N.Y., 85.

COVENANTOR. The party who makes a covenant. Shep.Touch. 160.

COVENANTS PERFORMED. In Pennsylvania practice. This is the name of a plea to the action of covenant whereby the defendant, upon informal notice to the plaintiff, may give anything in evidence which he might have pleaded. With the addition of the words "absque hoc" it amounts to a denial of the allegations of the declaration; and the further addition of "with leave," etc., imports an equitable defense, arising out of special circumstances, which the defendant means to offer in evidence. Zents v. Legnard, 70 Pa. 192; Stewart v. Bedell, 79 Pa. 336.

COVENTRY ACT. The name given to the statute 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 1, which provided for the punishment of assaults with intent to maim or disfigure a person. It was so named from its being occasioned by an assault on Sir John Coventry in the street as was supposed, for some obnoxious words uttered by him in parliament. 4 Bl.Comm. 207; State v. Cody, 18 Or. 506, 23 P. 891.

COVER INTO. The phrase "covered into the treasury," as used in acts of congress and the practice of the United States treasury department, means that money has actually been paid into the treasury in the regular manner, as distinguished from merely depositing it with the treasurer. U. S. v. Johnston, 124 U.S. 236, 8 S.Ct. 446, 31 L.Ed. 389.

COVERING DEED. A trust deed executed by a trading company to secure an issue of debentures; Simonson, Debentures, 38.

COVERT. Covered, protected, sheltered. A pound covert is one that is closed or covered over, as distinguished from pound overt, which is open overhead. Co.Litt. 47b; 3 Bl.Comm. 12. A feme covert is so called, as being under the wing, protection, or cover of her husband. 1 Bl.Comm. 442.

COVERT BARON, or COVERT DE BARON. Under the protection of a husband; married. 1 El. Comm. 442. La feme que est covert de baron, the woman which is covert of a husband. Litt. § 670.

COVERTURE. The condition or state of a married woman. Sometimes used elliptically to describe the legal disability arising from a state of coverture. Osborn v. Horine, 19 Ill. 124; Roberts v. Lund, 45 Vt. 86.

COVIN. A secret conspiracy or agreement between two or more persons to injure or defraud another. Mix v. Muzzy, 28 Conn. 191; Anderson v. Oscamp, Ind.App., 35 N.E. 707; Hyslop v. Clarke, 14 Johns., N.Y., 465; Co.Litt. 357b; Comyns, Dig. Covin, A; 1 Viner, Abr. 473.

COVINOUS. Deceitful; fraudulent; having the nature of, or tainted by covin.

COW. Female of bovine genus of animals. Strictly, one that has calved. Often loosely used to include heifer, or young female that has not calved. 2 East, Pl.Cr. 616; 1 Leach 105. See Taylor v. State, 6 Humph., Tenn., 285; Tombigbee Valley R. Co. v. Wilks, 6 Ala.App. 473, 60 So. 559; Mathis v. State, 70 Fla. 194, 69 So. 697, 698; Parsons v. Kimmel, 206 Mich. 676, 173 N.W. 539, 540.

COWARDICE. Pusillanimity; fear; misbehavior through fear in relation to some duty to be performed before an enemy. O'Brien Ct.M. 142; Coil v. State, 62 Neb. 15, 86 N.W. 925.

CRACKING. The conversion, by means of heat and usually pressure, of the complex hydrocarbon molecules of heavier oils into the molecular structure of the desired lighter oils. Universal Oil Products Co. v. Skelly Oil Co., D.C.Del., 20 F.2d 995.

CRAFT. A general term, now commonly applied to all kinds of sailing vessels, though formerly restricted to the smaller vessels. The Wenonah, 21 Grat., Va., 697; Reed v. Ingham, 3 El. & B. 898.

A trade or occupation of the sort requiring skill and training, particularly manual skill combined with a knowledge of the principles of the art; also the body of persons pursuing such a calling; a guild. Ganaih v. Shore, 24 Ga. 23, Cole v. Commonwealth, 169 Va. 868, 193 S.E. 517, 519.

Guile, artful cunning, trickiness. Not a legal term in this sense, though often used in connection with such terms as "fraud" and "artifice."

CRANAGE. A liberty to use a crane for drawing up goods and wares of burden from ships and vessels, at any creek of the sea, or wharf, unto the land, and to make a profit of doing so. It also signifies the money paid and taken for the service. Tomlins.

CRANK. A term vulgarly applied to a person of eccentric, ill-regulated, and unpractical mental habits; a person half-crazed; a monomaniac; not necessarily equivalent to "insane person," "lunatic," or any other term descriptive of complete CRATES. An iron gate before a prison. 1 Vent. 72, 37 Am.Rep. 546.

CREANCE. In French law. A claim; a debt; a creditor. Britt. cc. 28, 78.

CREANSOR. A creditor. Cowell.

CREANCER. One who trusts or gives credit; discredit, discrediting, discreditable. Wharton.

CREANT, Creant, Creans. Creating power; a creator; one who creates or causes to exist. Johnson v. Fauver, 282 Ala. 142, 211 So. 170, 171.

CRAVEN. In old English law. A word of disgrace and obloquy, pronounced on either champion, in the ancient trial by battle, provoking recreant, e., yielding. Glanville calls it "infestum et inverecundum verbum." His condemnation was amittere librum legem, e., to become infamous, and not to be accounted liber et legalis homo, being supposed by the event to have been proved forswn, and not fit to be put upon a jury or admitted as a witness. Wharton.

CREAMER. A foreign merchant, but generally taken for one who has a stall in a fair or market. Blount.

CREAMUS. Lat. We create. One of the words by which a corporation in England was formerly created by the king. 1 Bl.Comm. 473.

CREANCE. In French law. A claim; a debt; also belief, credit, faith.

CREANCER. One who trusts or gives credit; a creditor. Brit. cc. 28, 78.

CREANSON. A creditor. Cowell.

CREATE. To bring into being; to cause to exist; to produce; as, to create a trust in lands, to create a corporation. Edwards v. Bibb, 54 Ala. 481; McClellan v. McClellan, 65 Me. 500; Pickett v. Board of Com'rs of Fremont County, 24 Idaho 200, 133 P. 112, 114; People v. California Fish Co., 166 Cal. 576, 138 P. 79, 91.

To create a charter or a corporation is to make one which never existed before, while to renew one is to give vitality to one which has been forfeited or has expired; and to extend one is to give an existing charter more time than originally limited. Indianapolis v. Navin, 151 Ind. 139, 51 N.E. 80, 41 L.R.A. 344; State v. Powell, 109 Ohio St. 383, 142 N.E. 401, 403; Town of Westport v. Green, 144 Md. 85, 124 A. 403.

CREDIBLE. Worthy of belief; entitled to credit. See Competency.

CREDIBLE INFORMED. The statement in a pleading or affidavit, that one is "credibly informed and verily believes" such and such facts, means that, having no direct personal knowledge of the matter in question, he has derived his information in regard to it from authentic sources or from the statements of persons who are not only "credible," in the sense of being trustworthy, but also informed as to the particular matter or conversant with it.

CREDIBILITY. Worthiness of belief; that quality in a witness which renders his evidence worthy of belief. After the competence of a witness is allowed, the consideration of his credibility arises, and not before. 3 Bl.Comm. 369; 1 Burrows, 414, 417; Smith v. Jones, 68 Vt. 132, 34 A. 424; Loeb v. State, 133 Miss. 883, 98 So. 449, 451; DeWein v. State, 120 Ark. 302, 179 S.W. 346, 347. As to the distinction between competency and credibility, see Competency.

CREDIT. The ability of a business man to borrow money, or obtain goods on time, in consequence of the favorable opinion held by the community, or by the particular lender, as to his solvency and reliability. People v. Wasservogle, 77 Cal. 173, 19 P. 270; In re Ford, D.C.Wash., 14 F.2d 848, 849; State ex rel. Globe-Democrat Pub. Co. v. Gehner, 316 Mo. 694, 294 S.W. 1017, 1018. That influence connected with certain social positions. 2 Toullier, n. 19. Time allowed to the buyer of goods by the seller, in which to make payment for them. The correlative of a debt; that is, a debt considered from the creditor's standpoint, or that which is incoming or due to one. Mountain State Motor Car Co. v. Solof, 97 W.Va. 196, 124 S.E. 824, 825. That which is due to a person, as distinguished from debit, that which is due by him. Claim or cause of action for specific sum of money. Richard v. American Union Bank, 204 N.Y.S. 719, 722, 123 Misc.Rep. 92; Thaden v. Bagan, 139 Minn. 46, 165 N.W. 864, 865; Richard v. American Union Bank, 204 N.Y.S. 719, 722, 123 Misc.Rep. 92; New York Life Ins. Co. v. Edwards, C.C.A.N.Y., 8 F.2d 851, 856; Humphreys v. County Court, 90 W.Va. 315, 110 S.E. 701, 702, 703.

A sum credited on the books of a company to person who appears to be entitled to it. Coons v. Home Life Ins. Co. of New York, 291 Ill.App. 313, 9 N.E.2d 419, 421. The credit of an individual is the trust reposed in him by those who deal with him that he is of ability to meet his engagements; and he is trusted because through the tribunals of the country he may be made to pay. The credit of a government is founded on a belief of its ability to comply with its engagements, and a confidence in its honor, that it will do that voluntarily which it cannot be compelled to do. Owen v. Branch Bank, 3 Ala. 258.

Bill of Credit. See Bill.

Letter of Credit. An open or sealed letter, from a merchant in one place, directed to another, in another place or country, requiring him, if a person therein named, or the bearer of the letter, shall have occasion to buy commodities, or to want money to any particular or unlimited amount, either to procure the same or to pass his promise, bill, or bond for it, the writer of the letter undertaking to provide him the money for the goods, or to repay him by exchange, or to give him such satisfaction as he shall require, either for himself, or the bearer of the letter. 3 Chit.Com.Law, 336. Powerine Co. v. Russel Inc., 163 Utah 441, 135 P.2d M6, 909, 910, 912.

Line of Credit. See Line.

Personal Credit. Personal credit is that credit which a person possesses as an individual, and which is founded on the opinion entertained of his character and business standing.

The foregoing is the strict legal sense of the term: but in a wider sense it means one who has a legal right to demand and recover from another a sum of money on any account whatever, and hence may include the owner of any right of action against another, whether arising on contract, for tort, or for a penalty, or for a forfeiture. Bongard v. Block, 81 Ill. 186, 25 Am.Rep. 276; one having a claim for tort, Chalmers v. Sheehy, 132 Cal. 459, 64 P. 709, 84 Am.St. Rep. 62; an antenuptial agreement as constituting wife a “creditor” of husband’s estate. In re Wilson's Estate, 346 Pa. 562, 31 A.2d 106, 108; parties claiming as trust funds deposits in insolvent bank, Dewey v. Commercial State Bank, 141 Kan. 356, 41 P.2d 1006, 1007.

The term “creditor,” within the common-law and statutes that conveys with intent to defraud creditors shall be void, includes every one having a right to require the performance of any legal obligation, contract, or guaranty, for a legal right to damages growing out of contract or tort, Hernton v. Short, 121 Ark. 383, 181 S.W. 142, 144; and includes not merely the holder of a fixed and certain present debt, but every one having a right to require the performance of any legal obligation, contract, or guaranty, or a legal right to damages growing out of contract or tort, and includes one entitled to damages for breach of contract to convey real estate, notwithstanding the abandonment of his action for specific performance. In re Littleton’s Estate, 223 N.Y.S. 470, 479, 129 Misc.Rep. 845; Mackenzie Oil Co. v. Omar Oil & Gas Co., 14 Del.Ch. 36, 120 A. 852, 854; holders of judgment for conversion, Bays v. Brown, 160 Or. 378, 95 P.2d 951, 954; a “person having any claim, whether matured or unmatured, liquidated or unliquidated, absolute, fixed or contingent.” Richards v. Jones, 16 Del.C. 227, 142 A. 832, 833. Those having a cause of action for damages for wrongful death. Evers v. Evers, 146 Neb. 104,
CREDITOR

18 N.W.2d 673, 678; in its broad sense the word "creditor" means one who has any legal liability upon a contract, express or implied, or in tort; in its narrow sense, the term is limited to one who holds a demand which is certain and liquidated. Superior Plating Works v. Art Metal Crafts Co., 218 Ill. App. 148, 150.

Plaintiff, in action to recover damages for a tort committed against him, is a "creditor" of defendant, within meaning of that term as it is employed in Shannon's Code, § 3143, denouncing conveyances and transfers of property collusively made with intent to delay, hinder, or defraud creditors. Oliphant v. Moore, 155 Tenn, 359, 293 S. W. 541, 542.

Classification

A creditor is called a "simple contract creditor," a "specialty creditor," a "bond creditor," or otherwise, according to the nature of the obligation giving rise to the debt.

Attaching creditor,

One who has caused an attachment to be issued and levied on property of his debtor.

Catholic creditor

In Scotch law, one whose debt is secured on all or on several distinct parts of the debtor's property. The contracted term (designating one who is not so secured) is "secondary creditor."

Certificate creditor

A creditor of a municipal corporation who receives a certificate of indebtedness for the amount of his claim, there being no funds on hand to pay him. Johnson v. New Orleans, 46 La.Anno. 714, 15 So. 100.

Confidential creditor

A term sometimes applied to creditors of a failing debtor who furnished him with the means of obtaining credit to which his real circumstan-ces did not entitle him, thus involving loss to other creditors not in his confidence. Gay v. Strickland, 112 Ala. 567, 20 So. 921.

Creditor at large

One who has not established his debt by the recovery of a judgment or has not otherwise secured a lien on any of the debtor's property. U. S. v. Ingate, C.C.Ala., 48 F. 254; Wolcott v. Ashenfelter, 5 N.M. 442, 23 P. 780, 8 L.R.A. 691.

Domestic creditor

One who resides in the same state or country in which the debtor has his domicile or his property.

Double creditor

See Double Creditor.

Execution creditor

Executor creditor

In Scotch law. A creditor of a decedent who obtains a grant of administration on the estate, at least to the extent of so much of it as will be sufficient to discharge his debt, when the executor named in the will has declined to serve, as also those other persons who would be preferentially entitled to administer.

Existing creditors

See Existing Creditors.

Foreign creditor

One who resides in a state or country foreign to that where the debtor has his domicile or his property.

General creditor

A creditor at large (supra), or one who has no lien or security for the payment of his debt or claim. Wolcott v. Ashenfelter, 5 N.M. 442, 23 P. 780, 8 L.R.A. 691.

Joint creditors

Persons jointly entitled to require satisfaction. of the same debt or demand.

Judgment creditor

See Judgment Creditor.

Junior creditor

One whose claim or demand accrued at a date later than that of a claim or demand held by another creditor, who is called correlatively the "senior" creditor.

Petitioning creditors

As used in Bankruptcy Act, § 64b, 11 U.S.C.A. § 104, authorizing one reasonable attorney's fee.
All creditors petitioning for adjudication, or seeking relief consistent with original petition by supplemental or intervening petition, in view of section 59f, 11 U.S.C.A. § 95. In re Marcuse & Co., C.C.A.III., 11 F.2d 513, 516.

Principal creditor
One whose claim or demand very greatly exceeds the claims of all other creditors in amount is sometimes so called. See In re Sullivan’s Estate, 25 Wash. 430, 65 P. 793.

Secured creditor
See Secured Creditor.

Single creditor
See Single Creditor.

Subsequent creditor
One whose claim or demand accrued or came into existence after a given fact or transaction, such as the recording of a deed or mortgage or the execution of a voluntary conveyance. McGhee v. Wells, 57 S.C. 280, 35 S.E. 529, 76 Am.St.Rep. 567.

Warrant creditor
A creditor of a municipal corporation to whom is given a municipal warrant for the amount of his claim, because there are no funds in hand to pay it. Johnson v. New Orleans, 46 La.Ann. 714, 15 So. 100.

The lessor has a right of action for breach of parent lease as a "creditor beneficiary" against a sublessee or an assignee of the lease who has agreed with the original lessee to assume the parent lease. Hartman Ranch Co. v. Associated Oil Co., 10 Cal.2d 232, 73 P.2d 1163.

A term used in taxation statutes to designate certain forms of personal property. It includes every claim and demand for money and every sum of money receivable at stated periods, due or to become due, but not unaccrued rents to issue out of land. State v. Royal Mineral Ass’n, 132 Minn. 232, 156 N.W. 128, 130, Ann.Cas.1918A, 145. Legacies matured by the lapse of one year from the date of testator’s death were included in term "credits". City of Newark v. Lehman’s Estate, Tax App., 18 N.J.Misc. 510, 14 A.2d 792, 794. Shares of corporate stock were included. Holmes v. Borgen, 200 Minn. 97, 273 N.W. 623, 626.

CREDITRIX. A female creditor.

CREDITS. In bankrupt law. Credits which must, from their nature, terminate in debts; as where a debt is due from one party, and credit given by him to the other for a sum of money payable at a future day, and which will then become a debt., or where there is a debt on one side, and a delivery of property with directions to turn it into money on the other. 8 Taunt. 499; 2 Smith, Lead. Cas. 179. By this phrase, in the rule under which courts of equity allow set-off in cases of mutual credit, we are to understand a knowledge on both sides of an existing debt due to one party, and a credit by the other party, founded on and trusting to such debt, as a means of discharging it. King v. King, 9 N.J.Eq. 44. Credits given by two persons mutually; i.e., each giving credit to the other. It is a more extensive phrase than "mutual debts." Thus, the sum credited by one may be due at once, that by the other payable in fu-turo; yet the credits are mutual, though the transaction would not come within the meaning of "mutual debts." 1 Atk. 230; Atkinson v. Elliott, 7 Term.R. 378.

CREED. The word "creed" has been defined as "confession or articles of faith," "formal declaration of religious belief," "any formula or confession of religious faith," and "a system of religious belief." Cummings v. Weinfeld, 177 Misc. 129, 30
N.Y.S.2d 36, 38.

CREEK. In maritime law. Such little inlets of the sea, whether within the precinct or extent of a port or without, as are narrow passages, and have shore on each side of them. Call.Sew. 56.
A small stream less than a river. Baker v. City of Boston, 12 Pick. 184, 22 Am.Dec. 421. The term imports a recess, cove, bay, or inlet in the shore of a river, and not a separate or independent stream; though it is sometimes used in the latter meaning. Schermerhorn v. Railroad Co., 38 N.Y. 103.

CREMATION. The act or practice of reducing a corpse to ashes by means of fire. Act Pa. 1891,
See Dead Body.

CREMENTUM COMITATUS. The increase of a county. The sheriffs of counties anciently answered in their accounts for the improvement of the king's rents, above the viscontiel rents, under this title.

CREPARE OCULUM. In Saxon law. To put out an eye; which had a pecuniary punishment of fifty shillings annexed to it.

CREPUSCULUM. Twilight. In the law of burglary, this terms means the presence of sufficient light to discern the face of a man; such light as exists immediately before the rising of the sun or directly after its setting. 4 Bla.Com. 224; Co. 3d Inst. 63; 1 Russell, Cr. 820; 3 Greenl.Ev. § 75.

CRESCENTE MALITIA CRESCERE DEBET ET PLENA. 2 Inst. 479. Vice increasing, punishment ought also to increase.

CREST. A term used in heraldry; it signifies the devices set over a coat of arms.

CRETINISM. In medical jurisprudence. A form of imperfect or arrested mental development, which may amount to idiocy, with physical degeneracy or deformity or lack of development; endemic in Switzerland and some other parts of Europe, but the term is applied to similar states occurring elsewhere.

CRETINUS. In old records. A sudden stream or torrent; a rising or inundation.

CRETIO. Lat. In the civil law. A certain number of days allowed an heir to deliberate whether he would take the inheritance or not. Calvin.

CREW. Usually referred to and is primarily thought of as those who are on board and aiding in the navigation. Gulf Oil Corporation v. Mc-D.C.W.Va., 49 F.Supp. 75, 78; Norton
v. Warner Co., Pa., 321 U.S. 565, 64 S.Ct. 747, 751, 88 L.Ed. 931; Berwind-White Coal Mining Co. v.
Rothespies, C.C.A.Pa., 137 F.2d 60, 62. "Crew" crew of a vessel; one of a ship's papers. This instrument is required by act of congress, and sometimes by treaties. Rev.St.U.S. §§ 4374, 4375, 46 U.S.C.A. §§ 322, 323. It is necessary for the protection of the crews of every vessel, in the course of the voyage, during a war abroad. Jac.

Sea Laws, 66, 69, note.

CRIER. An officer of a court, who makes proclamations. His principal duties are to announce the opening of the court and its adjournment and the fact that certain special matters are about to be transacted, to announce the admission of persons to the bar, to call the names of jurors, witnesses, and parties, to announce that a witness has been sworn, to proclaim silence when so directed, and generally to make such proclamations of a public nature as the judges order.

CRIEZ LA PEEZ. Rehearse the concord, or peace. A phrase used in the ancient proceedings for levying fines. It was the form of words by which the justice before whom the parties ap-ppeared directed the serjeant or countor in attendance to recite or read aloud the concord or agreement between the parties, as to the lands intended to be conveyed. 2 Reeve, Eng.Law, 224, 225.

CRIM. CON. An abbreviation for "criminal conversation," of very frequent use, denoting adultury. Rash v. Pratt, 111 A. 225, 228, 1 W.W.Harr., Del., 18; Hargraves v. Ballou, 47 R.I. 186, 131 A.
547. The term in its general and comprehensive sense, is synonymous with "adultery"; but in its more limited and technical signification it may be defined as adultery in the aspect of a tort. Turner v. Haverin, 182 Ky. 65, 206 S.W.
23, 4 A.L.R. 562.

CRIME. A positive or negative act in violation of penal law; an offense against the State. Wil-"Crime" and "misdemeanor," properly speaking, are synonymous terms; though in common usage "crime" is made to denote such offenses as are of a deeper and more atrocious dye. 4 Bl.Comm. 5; People v. Schiaffino, 73. Cal.App. 357, 238 P. 725; Guetling v. State, 199 Ind. 630, 158 N.E. 593, 594; McIntyre v. Commonwealth, 154 Ky. 149, 156 S. W. 1058, 1059; Commonwealth v. Smith, 266 Pa. 116 Ohio St. 512, 157 N.E. 69, 70; An act committed or omitted in violation of a public law. City of Mobile v. McCown Oil Co., 226 Ala. 688, 148 So. 402, 405. Crimes are those wrongs which the government notices as injurious to the public, and punishes in what is called a "criminal proceeding," in its own name. 1 Bish.Crim.Law, § 43; In re Jacoby, 74 Ohio App. 147, 57 N.E.2d 932, 934, 935. A crime may be defined to be any act done in violation of those duties which an individual owes to the community, and for the breach of which the law has provided that the offender shall make satisfaction to the public. Bell. A crime or public offense is an act committed or omitted in violation of a law forbidding or commanding it, and to which is annexed, upon conviction, either of the following punishments: (1) Death; (2) imprisonment; (3) fine; (4) removal from office; or (5) disqualification to hold and enjoy any office of honor, trust, or profit in this state. Pen.Code Cal. § 15. "Crime" is strictly a violation of law either human or divine; in present usage the term is commonly applied to grave offenses against the laws of the state. Van Riper v. Constitutional Government League, 1 Wash.2d 635, 96 P.2d 588, 591, 125 A.L.R. 1100. A crime or misdemeanor shall consist in a violation of a public law, in the commission of which there shall be a union or joint operation of act and intention, or criminal negligence. Code Ga. 1882, § 4292, Pen.Code 1910, § 31.

Synonyms

According to Blackstone, the word "crime" denotes such offenses as are of a deeper and more atrocious dye, while smaller faults and omissions of less consequence are called "misdemeanors." But the better use appears to be to make crime a term of broad and general import, including both felonies and misdemeanors, and hence covering all infractions of the criminal law. In this sense it is not a technical phrase, strictly speaking, (as "felony" and "misdemeanor" are,) but a convenient general term. In this sense, also, "offense" or "public offense" should be used as synonymous with it.

The distinction between a crime and a tort or civil injury is that the former is a breach and violation of the public right and of duties due to the whole community considered as such, and in its social and aggregate capacity; whereas the latter is an infringement or privation of the civil rights of individuals merely. Brown.

A crime, as opposed to a civil injury, is the violation of a right, considered in reference to the evil tendency of such violation, as regards the community at large. 4 Steph.Comm. 4.

Varieties of Crimes

Capital crime. See Capital, adj.

Common law crimes

Such crimes as are punishable by the force of the common law, as distinguished from crimes created by statute. Wilkins v. U. S., C.C.A.Pa., 96 F. 837, 37 C.C.A. 588; In re Greene, C.C.Ohio, 52 F. 111. These decisions (and many others) hold that there are no common-law crimes against the United States.

Constructive crime

See Constructive Crime.

Continuous crime

One consisting of a continuous series of acts, which endures after the period of consummation, as, the offense of carrying concealed weapons. In the case of instantaneous crimes, the statute of limitations begins to run with the consummation, while in the case of continuous crimes it only begins with the cessation of the criminal conduct or act. U. S. v. Owen, D.C.Or., 32 F. 537.

Crime against nature

At common law the term "crime against nature" embraced both sodomy and "bestiality," defined as a connection between a human being and a brute of the opposite sex. State v. Poole, 59 Ariz. 44, 122 P.2d 415, 416. Within the statute it is the perverted act of uniting the mouth of one participant with the sexual organ of the other, with a view of gratifying the sexual desire, and a mere kiss or lick of the private organ, even though lewdly done, is not a "copulation" within the statute. People v. Angier, 44 Cal.App.2d 417, 112 P.2d 659, 660.

Crime against the other (husband or wife)

As used in 22 Okl.St.Ann. 702, providing that neither husband nor wife shall be a witness against the other except in a prosecution for a "crime committed against the other," the phrase denotes a public offense by husband or wife that is a direct violation of the rights of the other. Hunter v. State, 10 Okl.Cr. 119, 134 P. 1134, 1136, L.R.A. 1915A, 564. It does not make the wife a competent witness in a prosecution against the husband for incest. Lacey v. State, 27 Okl.Cr. 42, 224 P. 994, 995.

Crimes mala in se

"Crimes mala in se" embrace acts immoral or wrong in themselves, such as burglary, larceny,
In the course of accomplishing its ends, the public administration of justice, or the veracity of one who commits it. Common-law crimes include crimes against nature; sodomy or buggery. Crimes mala prohibitae are such as would affect civil or political rights, disfranchisement or rendering a person incompetent to testify as a witness, upon the theory that a person would not commit so heinous a crime unless he was so depraved as to be unworthy of credit. These crimes are treason, felony, and the crimen Nisi. Abbott. A crime punishable by imprisonment in the state prison or penitentiary, with or without hard labor, is an infamous crime, within the provision of the fifth amendment of the constitution that "no person shall be held to answer for a capital or otherwise infamous crime unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury." Mackin v. U. S., 117 U.S. 348, 6 S.Ct. 777, 29 L.Ed. 909; Brede v. Powers, 263 U.S. 4, 44 S.Ct. 8, 88 L.Ed. 132. It is not the character of the crime but the nature of the punishment which renders the crime "infamous." Weeks v. United States, C.C.A.N.Y., 216 F. 292, 298, L.R.A. 1915B, 651. But see Druzen v. New Haven Taxicab Co., 95 Conn. 500, 111 A. 861, 864. Whether an offense is infamous depends on the punishment which may be imposed therefor, not on the punishment which was imposed. United States v. Moreland, 258 U.S. 433, 42 S.Ct. 368, 370, 66 L.Ed. 700; DeJianne v. U.S., C.C.A.N.J., 282 F. 737, 740; Le Clair v. White, 117 Me. 335, 104 A. 516, 517. Under the constitution of Rhode Island, a crime, to be "infamous," must come within the "crimen falsi," such as forgery, perjury, subornation of perjury, offenses affecting the public administration of justice, or such as would affect civil or political rights, disqualifying or rendering a person incompetent to be a witness or juror. State v. Bussay, 38 R.I. 454, 96 A. 337, 339. By the Revised Statutes of New York the term "infamous crime," when used in any statute, is directed to be construed as including every offense punishable with death or by imprisonment in a state prison, and no other.

Crimes mala prohibitae

"Crimes mala prohibita" embrace things prohibited by statute as infringing on others' rights, though no moral turpitude may attach, and constituting crimes only because they are so prohibited. Coleman v. State ex rel. Carver, 119 Fla. 653, 161 So. 89, 90.

High crimes

High crimes and misdemeanors are such as are nearly allied and equal in guilt to felony, yet, owing to some technical circumstance, do not fall within the definition of "felony." State v. Knapp, 6 Conn. 434, 85 A. 670, 672. These crimes are treason, felony, and the crimen Nisi. Abbott. A crime punishable by imprisonment in the state prison or penitentiary, with or without hard labor, is an infamous crime, within the provision of the fifth amendment of the constitution that "no person shall be held to answer for a capital or otherwise infamous crime unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury." Mackin v. U. S., 117 U.S. 348, 6 S.Ct. 777, 29 L.Ed. 909; Brede v. Powers, 263 U.S. 4, 44 S.Ct. 8, 88 L.Ed. 132. It is not the character of the crime but the nature of the punishment which renders the crime "infamous." Weeks v. United States, C.C.A.N.Y., 216 F. 292, 298, L.R.A. 1915B, 651. But see Druzen v. New Haven Taxicab Co., 95 Conn. 500, 111 A. 861, 864. Whether an offense is infamous depends on the punishment which may be imposed therefor, not on the punishment which was imposed. United States v. Moreland, 258 U.S. 433, 42 S.Ct. 368, 370, 66 L.Ed. 700; DeJianne v. U.S., C.C.A.N.J., 282 F. 737, 740; Le Clair v. White, 117 Me. 335, 104 A. 516, 517. Under the constitution of Rhode Island, a crime, to be "infamous," must come within the "crimen falsi," such as forgery, perjury, subornation of perjury, offenses affecting the public administration of justice, or such as would affect civil or political rights, disqualifying or rendering a person incompetent to be a witness or juror. By the Revised Statutes of New York the term "infamous crime," when used in any statute, is directed to be construed as including every offense punishable with death or by imprisonment in a state prison, and no other.

Quasi crimes

This term embraces all offenses not crimes or misdemeanors, but that are in the nature of crimes,—a class of offenses against the public which have not been declared crimes, but wrongs against the general or local public which it is proper should be repressed or punished by forfeitures and penalties. This would embrace all qui tarn actions and forfeitures imposed for the neglect or violation of a public duty. A quasi crime would not embrace an indictable offense, whatever might be its grade, but simply forfeitures for a wrong done to the public, whether voluntary or involuntary, where a penalty is given, whether recoverable by criminal or civil process. Wiggins v. Chicago, 68 Ill. 375. Also, offenses for which some person other than the actual perpetrator is responsible, the perpetrator being presumed to act by command of the responsible party. Sometimes, injuries which have been unintentionally caused. Torts. McCaleb v. Fox Film Corporation, C.C.A.La., 299 F. 48, 50.

Statutory crimes

Those created by statutes, as distinguished from such as are known to, or cognizable by, the common law.

CRIMEN. Lat. Crime. Also an accusation or charge of crime.

Crimen furti. The crime of robbery.

Crimen incendii. The crime of burning, which included not only the modern crime of arson, but also the burning of a man, a beast, or other chattel. Britt. c. 9; Crabb, Eng.Law, 308.

CRIMEN FALSI. The term involves the element of falsehood, and includes everything which has a tendency to injuriously affect the administration of justice by the introduction of falsehood and fraud. Commonwealth v. Schambres, 110 Pa. Super. 61, 167 A. 645, 646; Commonwealth v. Jones, 334 Pa. 321, 5 A.2d 804, 805. A crime less than felony that by its nature tends to cast doubt on the veracity of one who commits it. Commonwealth v. Gold, 155 Pa.Super. 364, 38 A.2d 486, 489. This phrase is also used as a general designation of a class of offenses, including all such as involve deceit or falsification; e. g., forgery, counterfeiting, using false weights or measures, perjury, etc. Includes forgery, perjury, subornation of perjury, and offenses affecting the public administration of justice. Matzenbauch v. Peo-

At common law. Any crime which rendered the perpetrator incompetent to be a witness, such as forgery, perjury, subornation of perjury and other crimes affecting the administration of justice. Drazen v. New Haven Taxicab Co., 95 Conn. 500, 111 A. 861, 862; Maxey v. United States, C.C.A.Ark., 207 F. 327, 331; Webb v. State, 29 Ohio St. 351, 358.

Criminal Procedure
The method pointed out by law for the apprehension, trial, or prosecution, and fixing the punishment, of those persons who have broken or violated, or are supposed to have broken or violated, the laws prescribed for the regulation of the conduct of the people of the community, and who have thereby laid themselves liable to fine or imprisonment or other punishment. 4 Amer. & Eng. Enc. Law, 730.

Criminal Proceeding
One instituted and conducted for the purpose either of preventing the commission of crime, or for fixing the guilt of a crime already committed and punishing the offender; as distinguished from a "civil" proceeding, which is for the redress of a private injury. Mossew v. United States, C.C.A. N.Y., 266 F. 18, 22, 11 A.L.R. 1261. Strictly, a "criminal proceeding" means some step taken before a court against some person or persons charged with some violation of the criminal law. McGoldrick v. Downs, 184 Misc. 168, 53 N.Y.S.2d 333, 336.

Hennessy, 68 Fla. 136, 66 So. 729, 19 A.L.R. 1468. The malicious defamation of a person made public by any printing or writing tending to provoke him to wrath and to deprive him of the benefits of public confidence and social intercourse.

CRIMINALIST. One versed in criminal law, one addicted to criminality, and, also, a psychiatrist dealing with criminality. People v. Taylor, 312 P.2d 731, 734, 152 C.A.2d 29; Douglas v. State, 163 So.2d 477, 486, 42 Ala.App. 314.

CRIMINALITER. Lat. Criminally. This term is used, in distinction or opposition to the word "civiliter," civilly, to distinguish a criminal liability or prosecution from a civil one.

CRIMINATE. To charge one with crime; to furnish ground for a criminal prosecution; to expose a person to a criminal charge. A witness cannot be compelled to answer any question which has a tendency to criminate him. Stewart v. Johnson, 18 N.J.Law, 87; Kendrick v. Comm., 78 Va. 490.

CRIMINOLOGY. The science which treats of crimes and their prevention and punishment.

CRIMP. One who decoys and plunders sailors under cover of harboring them. Wharton.

CRIPLING. The word "crippling" is equivalent of words "physical disability" and is defined as to deprive of use of limbs, particularly of leg or foot, to deprive of strength, activity or capability for service or use and to disable. People v. Lockwood, 308 Mich. 618, 14 N.W.2d 517, 518; Baker v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 327 Mo. 986, 39 S.W.2d 535, 545.

CRITICISM. Permitted "criticism" as distinguished from "defamation" deals only with such things as invite public comment, and does not follow a public man into his private life, and pry into his domestic concerns. Devany v. Shulman, 184 Misc. 613, 53 N.Y.S.2d 401, 403.

CROCIARUS. A cross-bearer, who went before the prelate. Wharton.

CROCKERDS, CROCARDs. A foreign coin of base metal, prohibited by statute 27 Edw. I. St. 3, from being brought into the realm. 4 BL low a public man into his private life, and pry into his domestic concerns. Devany v. Shulman, 184 Misc. 613, 53 N.Y.S.2d 401, 403.

CROCTSES. Pilgrims; so called as wearing the sign of the cross on their upper garments. Britt. c. 122. The knights of the order of St. John of Jerusalem, created for the defense of the pilgrims. Cowell; Blount.

CROITEIR. A crofter; one holding a croft CROOK. A person given to crooked or fraudulent practices, a swindler, sharper, thief, forger, or the like. Rubenstein v. Lee, 56 Ga.App. 49, 192 S.E. 85, 87; Sinclair Refining Co. v. Fuller, 190 Ark. 426, 79 S.W.2d 736, 739. Term "crook" has been defined as a professional rogue; a criminal; or one consorting with criminals; a person recognized by the authorities as belonging to the criminal class; swindler; sharp; cheat. Gaare v. Melbostad, 186 Minn. 96, 242 N.W. 466, 467.

CROOKED. Deviating from rectitude or uprightness; not straightforward; dishonest; wrong; perverse. A "crook" is a dishonest person; one who is crooked in conduct; a tricky or underhand schemer; a thief or swindler. Villetmin v. Brown, 193 App.Div. 777, 184 N.Y.S. 570, 571; Pandolfo v. Bank of Benson, C.C.A.Ariz., 273 F. 48, 51.

CROP. The products of the harvest; emblements. Mutual Fire Insurance Co. v. Dehaven, Pa., 5 A. 65; Verbeck v. Peters, 170 Iowa, 610, 153 N.W. 215, 216. Such products of the soil as, are annually planted, severed, and saved by manual labor, as cereals, vegetables, grass maturing for harvest or harvested, etc., but not grass on lands used for pasturage. Moore v. Hope Natural Gas
CROP

As to cross “Appeal,” “Bill,” “Complaint,” “Remainder,” “Rules,” see those titles.

CROSS-ACTION. An action brought by one who is defendant in a suit against the party who is plaintiff in such suit, upon a cause of action growing out of the same transaction which is there in controversy, whether it be a contract or tort. An independent suit brought by defendant against plaintiff. National Stock Yards Nat. Bank v. Valentine, Tex.Civ.App., 39 S.W.2d 907, 908.

CROSS-CLAIM. A “cross-claim” is one brought by a defendant against a plaintiff in the same action or against a codefendant or both concerning matters in question in the original petition, and its purposes are to discover facts in aid of defense, to bring in new matter in aid of defense, to obtain some affirmative relief concerning matters in issue, to obtain full relief for all parties and a complete determination of all controversies arising out of matters alleged in original petition, and to have affirmative relief against either plaintiff or codefendant in the nature of an original petition. Farr v. Detroit Trust Co., C.C.A.Mich., 116 F.2d 807, 811.

CROSS-Demand. Where a person against whom a demand is made by another, in his turn makes a demand against that other, these mutual demands are called “cross-demands.” A set-off is a familiar example. Musselman v. Galligher, 32 Iowa, 383.

CROSS-ERRORS. Errors being assigned by the respondent in a writ of error, the errors assigned on both sides are called “cross-errors.”

CROSS-EXAMINATION. In practice. The examination of a witness upon a trial or hearing, or upon taking a deposition, by the party opposed to the one who produced him, upon his evidence given in chief, to test its truth, to further develop it, or for other purposes.

CROSS-LAY. The winding of the outer strands of a rope in a reverse direction to the inner strands, the “lay” of a strand of rope being the length of rope within which such strand makes one complete turn. Macomber & Whyte Rope Co. v. Hazard Mfg. Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 211 F. 976, 977.

CROSS- SALE. Where a floor broker, holding orders from different customers to buy and sell on the same terms, cries out the transaction and makes the sale and purchase to himself at the price shown by the last sale shown on the exchange, the transaction is called a “cross-sale or trade,” and is illegal under rules of exchange, requiring two brokers to every purchase or sale. Cohen v. Rothschild, 182 App.Div. 408, 169 N.Y.S. 659, 664.

CROSSED CHECK. See Check.

CROSSING. A portion of a street over which pedestrians may lawfully cross from one side to the other. Under Laws N.J. 1915, P.L. p. 285, § 1, defining crossings to be all duly indicated crossings, marked by pavement or otherwise, at intersection of streets, the most direct route across the street from curb to curb is a “crossing,” where no paved crossing is there necessary. Ferris v. McArdle, 92 N.J.Law, 580, 106 A. 460, 461.

With reference to railroads, that portion of the right of way covered by intersection with a street or highway. International-Great Northern R. Co. v. Mallard, Tex.Civ.App., 262 S.W. 789, 791. In a broader sense, the term includes embankments constructed as necessary approaches to a railroad track, St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. v. Smith, 118 Ark. 72, 175 S.W. 415, 416, and approaches or embankments reasonably necessary to enable crossings or bridges to be used, Payne v. Stockton, 147 Ark. 598, 229 S.W. 44, 47. For "Farm Crossing", see that title.

CROWD. "Crowd" is indefinite, since difference in time and place may shape its meaning, but there is always implied in the word numbers with reference to the hour and location. People, on Complaint of Liroff, v. Phillips, 245 N.Y. 401, 157 N.E. 508, 509.

CROWN. The sovereign power in a monarchy, especially in relation to the punishment of crimes. "Felony is an offense of the crown." Finch, Law, b. 1, c. 16.

An ornamental badge of regal power worn on, the head by sovereign princes. The word is frequently used when speaking of the sovereign himself, or the rights, duties, and prerogatives belonging to him. Also a silver coin of the value of five shillings. Wharton.

The facings and backings made to be sold to dentists to be set by them with appropriate fastenings in the jaws of their patients, when so in place are commonly called "crowns" or "artificial crowns." S. S. White Dental Mfg. Co. v. Dental Co. of America, D.C.Pa., 263 F. 719, 720.

Ship's crown is convex arc of vessel's deck from side to side. The Indien, C.C.A.Cal., 71 F.2d 752, 757.

CROWN CASES. In English law. Criminal prosecutions on behalf of the crown, as representing the public; causes in the criminal courts.

CROWN CASES RESERVED. In English law. Questions of law arising in criminal trials at the assizes, (otherwise than by way of demurrer,) and not decided there, but reserved for the consideration of the court of criminal appeal.

CROWN COURT. In English law. The court in which the crown cases, or criminal business, of the assizes is transacted.

CROWN DEBTS. In English law. Debts due to the crown, which are put, by various statutes, upon a different footing from those due to a subject.

CROWN LANDS. The demesne lands of the crown. In England and Canada, lands belonging to the sovereign personally or to the government or nation, as distinguished from such as have passed into private ownership.

CROWN LAW. Criminal law in England is sometimes so termed, the crown being always the prosecutor in criminal proceedings. 4 Bl.Comm. 2.

CROWN OFFICE. The criminal side of the court of king's bench. The king's attorney in this court is called "master of the crown office." 4 Bl.Comm. 308.

CROWN OFFICE IN CHANCERY. One of the offices of the English high court of chancery, now transferred to the high court of justice. The principal official, the clerk of the crown, is an officer of parliament, and of the lord chancellor, in his non-judicial capacity, rather than an officer of the courts of law.

CROWN PAPER. A paper containing the list of criminal cases, which await the hearing or decision of the court, and particularly of the court of king's bench; and it then includes all cases arising from informations quo warranto, criminal informations, criminal cases brought up from inferior courts by writ of certiorari, and cases from the sessions. Brown.

CROWN SIDE. The criminal department of the court of king's bench; the civil department or branch being called the "plea side." 4 Bl.Comm. 265.

CROWN SOLICITOR. In England, the solicitor to the treasury acts, in state prosecutions, as solicitor for the crown in preparing the prosecution. In Ireland there are officers called "crown solicitors" attached to each circuit, whose duty it is to get up every case for the crown in criminal prosecutions. They are paid by salaries. There is no such system in England, where prosecutions are conducted by solicitors appointed by the parish, or other persons bound over to prosecute by the magistrates on each committal; but in Scotland the still better plan exists of a crown prosecutor (called the "procurator-fiscal," and being a subordinate of the lord-advocate) in every county, who prepares every criminal prosecution. Wharton.

CRUCE SIGNATI. In old English law. Signed or marked with a cross. Pilgrims to the holy land, or crusaders; so called because they wore the sign of the cross upon their garments. Spelman.

CRUEL AND UNUSUAL PUNISHMENT. See Punishment.

CRUELTY. The intentional and malicious infliction of physical suffering upon living creatures, particularly human beings; or, as applied to the latter, the wanton, malicious, and unnecessary infliction of pain upon the body, or the feelings and emotions; abusive treatment; inhumanity;

For "Extreme and Repeated Cruelty," see that title.

As between husband and wife. Those acts which affect the life, the health, or even the comfort, of the party aggrieved and give a reasonable apprehension of bodily hurt, are called "cruelty." What merely wounds the feelings is seldom admitted to be cruelty, unless the act be accompanied with bodily injury, either actual or menaced. Mere austerity of temper, petulance of manners, rudeness accompanied with bodily injury, either actual or menaced. Acts merely accidental, though they in any particular track at a certain season of the year. The region in which these cruises are performed is usually termed the "rendezvous," or "cruising latitude." Bouvier.

A voyage or expedition in quest of vessels or fleets of the enemy which may be expected to sail in any particular track at a certain season of the year. The region in which these cruises are performed is usually termed the "rendezvous," or "cruising latitude." Bouvier.

CRUSH. To break by means of pressure. Yagunchok v. Rutledge, 219 Mich. 82, 188 N.W. 412, 413.

It has been defined to mean to compress or bruise between two hard bodies; to squeeze or force by pressure so as to destroy the natural condition, shape, or integrity of the parts, or to force together into a mass. Atlantic Oil Producing Co. v. Malone, 152 Okl. 68, 3 P.2d 874, 875.

CRY. To call out aloud; to proclaim; to publish; to sell at auction. "To cry a tract of land." Carr v. Gooch, 1 Wash., Va., 337, (260.) One who calls out aloud; one who publishes or proclaims. See Crier.

CRY DE PAIS, or CRI DE PAIS. The hue and cry raised by the people in ancient times, where a felony had been committed and the constable was absent.

CRYER. An auctioneer. Carr v. Gooch, 1 Wash., Va., 337, (260.) One who calls out aloud; one who publishes or proclaims. See Crier.

CRYPTA. A chapel or oratory underground, or under a church or cathedral. Du Cange.

CUCKING-STOOL. An engine of correction for common scolds, which in the Saxon language is said to signify the scolding-stool, though now it is frequently corrupted into ducking-stool, because the judgment was that, when the woman was placed therein, she should be plunged in the water for her punishment. It was also variously called a "trebucket," "tumbrel," or "castigatory." 3 Inst. 219; 4 Bl.Comm. 169; Brown. James v. Comm., 12 Serg. & R., Pa., 220.

CUCKOLD. A man whose wife is unfaithful; the husband of an adulteress. It is explained that the word alludes to the habit of the female cuckold, which lays her eggs in the nests of other birds to be hatched by them. To make a cuckold of a man is to seduce his wife. Hall v. Huffman, 159 Ky. 72, 166 S.W. 770.

CUEILLETTE. A term of French maritime law. See A Cueillette.

CUI ANTE DIVORTIUM (L. Lat. The full phrase was, Cui ipsa ante divortium contradicere non potuit, whom she before the divorce could not gainsay). A writ which anciently lay in favor of a woman who had been divorced from her husband, to recover lands and tenements which she had in fee-simple, fee-tail, or for life, from him to whom her husband had aliened them during marriage, when she could not gainsay it; Fitzh.N. B. 240; 3 Bla.Com. 183, n.; Stearns, Real Act. 143; Booth, Real Act. 188. Abolished in 1833.

CUI BONO. For whose good; for whose use or benefit. "Cui bono is ever of great weight in all agreements." Parker, C. J., 10 Mod. 135. Sometimes translated, for what good, for what useful purpose.

CUI IN VITA (L. Lat. The full phrase was, Cui in vita sua ipsa contradicere non potuit, whom in his lifetime she could not gainsay). 'A writ of entry which lay for a widow against a person to whom her husband had in his lifetime aliened her lands. Fitzh.N.B. 193. It was a method of establishing the fact of death, being a trial with witnesses, but without a jury. The object of the writ was to avoid a judgment obtained against the husband by confession or default. It is obsolete in England by force of 32 Hen. VIII, c. 28, § 6. See 6 Co. 8, 9. As to its use in Pennsylvania, see 3 Binn.Appx.; Rep.Comm. on Penn.Civ.Code, 1835, 90. Abolished in England, 1833. Blackstone is said to have shown little knowledge of its history; Thayer, Evidence.

CUT JURISDICTIO DATA EST, EA QUOQUE CONCESSA ESSE VIDENTUR, SINE QUIBUS JURISDICTIO EXPLICARI NON POTEST. To whomsoever a jurisdiction is given, those things also are supposed to be given without which the jurisdiction cannot be exercised. Dig. 2, 1, 2. The grant of jurisdiction implies the grant of all powers necessary to its exercise. 1 Kent, Comm. 339.

CUI JUS EST DONANDI, EIDEM ET VENDENDI ET CONCEDENDI JUS EST. He who has the right of giving has also the right of selling and granting. Dig. 50, 17, 163.

CULIBET IN ARTE SUA PERITO EST CREDENDUM. Any person skilled in his peculiar art or profession is to be believed, [i. e., when he speaks of matters connected with such art.] Co. Litt. 125a. Credence should be given to one skilled in his peculiar profession. Broom.Max. 932; 1 Bla.Com. 75; Phill.Ev.Cowen & H. notes, 759; 1 Hagg.Ecc. 727; 11 Cl. & F. 85.

CULIBET LICET JURI PRO SE INTRODUCTO RENUNCIARE. Any one may waive or renounce the benefit of a principle or rule of law that exists only for his protection.

CUI LICET QUOD MAJUS, NON DEBET QUOD MINUS EST NON LICERE. He who is allowed to do the greater ought not to be prohibited from doing the less. He who has authority to do the more important act ought not to be debarred from doing what is of less importance. 4 Coke 23.

CUCUNQUE ALIQUIUS QUID CONCEIT CONCEDERE VIDETUR ET ID, SINE QUO RES IPSA EST NON POTUIT. Whoever grants anything to another is supposed to grant that also without which the thing itself would be of no effect. 11 Co. 52; Broom, Max. 479; Hob. 234; Vaugh. 109; 11 Exch. 775; Shep.Touch. 89; Co.Litt. 56 a.

CUI PATER EST POPULUS NON HABET ILLE PATREM. He to whom the people is father has not a father. Co.Litt. 123.

CUIQUE IN SUA ARTE CREEDENDUM EST. Everyone is to be believed in his own art. Dickinson v. Barber, 9 Mass. 227, 6 Am.Dec. 58.

CUJUS EST COMMODUM EJUS DEBET ESSE INCOMMODUM. Whose is the advantage, his also should be the disadvantage.

CUJUS EST DARE, EJUS EST DISPONERE, Wing.Max. 53. Whose it is to give, his it is to dispose; or, as Broom says, "the bestower of a gift has a right to regulate its disposal." Broom, Max. 459, 461, 463, 464.

CUJUS EST DIVISIO, ALTERIUS EST ELECTIO. Whichever [of two parties] has the division, [of an estate,] the choice [of the shares] is the other's. Co.Litt. 166b. In partition between coparceners, where the division is made by the eldest, the rule in English law is that she shall choose her share last. Id.; 2 Bl.Comm. 189; 1 Steph. Comm. 323.

CUJUS EST DOMINIUM EJUS EST PERICULUM. The risk lies upon the owner of the subject. Tray.Lat.Max. 114.

CUJUS EST INSTITUERE, EJUS EST ABROGARE. Whose right it is to institute, his right it is to abrogate. Broom, Max. 878, note.

CUJUS EST SOLUM EJUS EST USQUE AD C4ELUM. Whose is the soil, his it is up to the sky. Co.Litt. 4a. He who owns the soil, or surface of the ground, owns, or has an exclusive right to, everything which is upon or above it to an indefinite height. 9 Coke 54; Shep.Touch. 90; 2 Bl. Comm. 18; 3 Bl.Comm. 217; Broom.Max. 395.

CUJUS EST SOLUM, EJUS EST USQUE AD CELUM ET AD INFEROS. To whomsoever the soil belongs, he owns also to the sky and to the depths. The owner of a piece of land owns everything above and below it to an indefinite extent. Co.Litt. 4; Shell Oil Co. v. Manley Oil Corporation, D.C.I11., 37 F.Supp. 289, 292.

CUJUS JURIS (i. e., JURISDICTIONIS) EST PRINCIPALE, EJUSDEM JURIS ERIT ACCESSORIUM. 2 Inst. 493. An accessory matter is subject to the same jurisdiction as its principal.

CUJUS PER ERROREM DATI REPETITIO EST, EJUS CONSULTO DATI DONATIO EST. He who gives a thing by mistake has a right to recover it back; but, if he gives designedly, it is a gift. Dig. 50, 17, 53.

CUJUSQUE REI POTISSIMA PARS EST PRINCIPALIS, EJUSQUE POTISSIMA PARS EST ACCESSORIUM. The chiefest part of everything is the beginning. Dig. 1, 2, 1; 10 Coke, 49a.

CUL DE SAC. (Fr. the bottom of a sack.) A blind alley; a street which is open at one end only. Bartlett v. Bangor, 67 Me. 467; Talbott v. Railroad Co., 31 Grat., Va., 691; Hickok v. Plattsburg, 41 Barb., N.Y., 135; Beckham v. State, 64 Cal.App.2d 487, 149 P.2d 296, 300.

CULAGIUM. In old records. The laying up a ship in a dock, in order to be repaired. Cowell; Blount.

CULPA. Lat. A term of the civil law, meaning fault, neglect, or negligence. There are three degrees of culpa,—lata culpa, gross fault or neglect; levis culpa, ordinary fault or neglect; levisissima culpa, slight fault or neglect,—and the definitions of these degrees are precisely the same as those in our law. Story, Bailm. § 18. This term is to be distinguished from dolus, which means fraud, guile, or deceit.

CULPA CARET QUI SCIT SED PROHIBERE NON POTEST. He is clear of blame who knows, but cannot prevent. Dig. 50, 17, 50.

CULPA EST IMMISCERE SE REL AD SE NON PERTINENTI. It is a fault for any one to meddle in a matter not pertaining to him.

CULPA LATA DOLO ZEQUIPARATUR. Gross negligence is held equivalent to intentional wrong.

CULPA TENET [TENEAT] SUOS AUCTORES. Misconduct binds its own authors. It is a never-failing axiom that every one is accountable only for his own delicts. Ersk.Inst. 4, 1, 14.

CULPABLE. Blamable; censurable; involving the breach of a legal duty or the commission of a fault. The term is not necessarily equivalent to "criminal," for, in present use, and notwithstanding its derivation, it implies that the act or conduct spoken of is reprehensible or wrong but not that it involves malice or a guilty purpose. "Culpable" in fact connotes fault rather than guilt. Railway Co. v. Clayberg, 107 Ill. 651; Cain v. State, 55 Ga. App. 376, 190 S.E. 371, 374.

It also means that which is deserving of moral blame. Mercury Motor Transport v. State ex rel. Motor Vehicle Com't, 197 Miss. 387, 21 So.2d 25, 28.

CULPA NENA PAR ESTO. DEENA AD MEN- SURAM DELECTI STATUENDA EST. Let the punishment be proportioned to the crime. Punishment is to be measured by the extent of the offense.

CULPRIT. A person who is indicted for a criminal offense, but not yet convicted. It is not, however, a technical term of the law; and in its vernacular usage it seems to imply only a light degree of censure or moral reprobation.

Blackstone believes it an abbreviation of the old forms of arraignment, whereby, on the prisoner’s pleading not guilty, the clerk would respond, "culpabilis, prit," e., he is guilty and the crown is ready. It was (he says) the viva voce replication, by the clerk, on behalf of the crown, to the prisoner's plea of non culpabilis; prit being a technical word, anciently in use in the formula of joining issue. 4 Bl.Comm. 339.

But a more plausible explanation is that given by Donaldson, (cited Whart.Lex.,) as follows: The clerk asks the prisoner, "Are you guilty, or not guilty?" Prisoner "Not guilty." Clerk, "Qu'il paroit, [may it prove so.] How will you be tried?" Prisoner, "By God and my country." These words being hurried over, came to sound, "culprit, how will you be tried?" The ordinary derivation is from culpa.

CURLACH. In old Scotch law. A species of pledge or cautioner, (Scotticte back borgh,) used in cases of the replevin of persons from one man's court to another's. Skene.

CULTIVATED. A field on which a crop of wheat is growing is a cultivated field, although not a stroke of labor may have been done in it since the seed was put in the ground, and it is a cultivated field after the crop is removed. It is, strictly, a cultivated piece of ground. Combs v. Rockingham County Com'rs, 170 N.C. 87, 86 S.E. 963, 964; Angus Cattle Co. v. McLeod, 98 Neb. 108, 152 N.W. 322, 323.

CULTIVATOR. A cropper, which see. Pearson v. Lafferty, 197 Mo.App. 123, 193 S.W. 40, 41.

CULTURA. A parcel of arable land. Blount.

CULVERTAGE. In old English law. A base kind of slavery. The confiscation or forfeiture which takes place when a lord seizes his tenant's estate. Blount; Du Cange.

CUM ACTIO FUERIT MERE CRIMINAL'S, IN- STITUÍ PÆTERIT AB INITIO CRIMINALITER VEL CIVILITER. When an action is merely criminal, it can be instituted from the beginning either criminally or civilly. Bract. 102.

CUM ADSUNT TESTIMONIA RERUM, QUID OPUS EST VERBIS? When the proofs of facts are present, what need is there of words? 2 Bulst. 53.

CUM ALIQUISES RENUNCIÆERIT SOCIETATI, SOLVITUR SOCIETAS. When any partner renounces the partnership, the partnership is dissolved. Tray. Lat. Max. 118.

CUM CONFITENTÉ SPONTE MITIUS EST AGENDUM. 4 Inst. 66. One confessing willingly should be dealt with more leniently.

CUM COPULA. Lat. With copulation, i. e., sexual intercourse. Used in speaking of the validity of a marriage contracted "per verba de futuro cum copula," that is, with words referring to the future (a future intention to have the marriage solemnized) and consummated by sexual connection.

CUM DE LUCRO DUORUM QUAERITUR, MELI- OR EST CAUSA POSSIDENTIS. When the question is as to the gain of two persons, the cause of him who is in possession is the better. Dig. 50, 17, 126.
CUM DUO INTER SE PUGNANTIA REPERIUNTUR IN TESTAMENTO, ULTIMUM RATUM EST. Where two things repugnant to each other are found in a will, the last shall stand. Co. Litt. 112b; Shep. Touch. 451; Broom, Max. 583.

CUM DUO JURA CONCURRUNT IN UNA PERSONA ZEQUUM EST AC SI ESSENT IN DUO-CUM DUO JURAJA CONCURRANT IN UNA PER-EST. Where two things repugnant to each other are found in a will, the last shall stand. Co. Litt.

CUM TESTAMENTO ANNEXO. With a will annexed. A term applied to administration granted where a testator makes an incomplete will, without naming any executors, or where he names incapable persons, or where the executors named refuse to act. If the executor has died, an administrator de bonis non cum testamento annexo (of the goods not [already] admin-istered upon with the will annexed) is appointed. Often abbreviated d. b. n. c. t. a. 2 Bl. Comm. 503, 504.

CUMULATIVE. Additional; heaping up; increasing; forming an aggregate. The word signifies that two things are to be added together, instead of one being a repetition or in substitution of the other. People v. Superior Court, 10 Wend., N.Y., 285; Regina v. Eastern Archipelago, Co., 18 Eng. Law & Eq. 183.

As to cumulative "Dividend," "Legacy," "Punishment" and "Sentences," see those titles.

CUMULATIVE EVIDENCE. Additional or corroborative evidence to the same point. That which goes to prove what has already been established by other evidence. Glidden v. Dunlap, 28 Me. 383; Parker v. Hardy, 24 Pick., Mass., 248; Waller v. Graves, 20 Conn. 310; Roe v. Kalb, 37 Ga. 459; Purcell Envelope Co. v. United States, 48 Ct.C1. 66, 73.

All evidence material to the issue, after any such evidence has been given, is in a certain sense cumulative; that is, is added to what has been given before. It tends to sustain the issue. But cumulative evidence, in legal phrase, means evidence from the same or a new witness, simply repeating, in substance and effect, or adding to, what has been before testified to. Parshall v. Klinck, 43 Barb., N.Y., 212. Evidence is not cumulative merely because it tends to establish the same ultimate or principally controverted fact. Cumulative evidence is additional evidence of the same kind to the same point. Able v. Frazier, 43 Iowa, 177; Harlan v. Texas Fuel & Supply Co., Tex.Civ.App., 160 S.W. 1142, 1146.

Cumulative Offense
One which can be committed only by a repetition of acts of the same kind but committed on different days. The offense of being a "common seller" of intoxicating liquors is an example. Wells v. Corn., 12 Gray., Mass., 328.

Cumulative Remedy

Cumulative Voting
A system of voting, by which the elector, having a number of votes equal to the number of officers to be chosen, is allowed to concentrate the whole number of his votes upon one person, or to distribute them as he may see fit. For example, if ten directors of a corporation are to be elected, then, under this system, the voter may cast ten votes for one person, or five votes for each of two persons, etc. It is intended to secure representation of a minority. Bridgers v. Stanton, 150 N.C. 216, 63 S.E. 892; Chicago Macaroni Mfg. Co. v. Boggiano, 202 Ill. 312, 67 N.E. 17; Attorney General v. McVichie, 138 Mich. 387, 101 N.W. 552.

CUNTEY-CUNTEY. In old English law. A kind of trial, as appears from Bract. lib. 4, tract 3, ca. 18, and tract 4, ca. 2, where it seems to mean, one by the ordinary jury.

CUR. A common abbreviation of curia.

CUBA. Lat. Care; charge; oversight; guardianship.

CURATOR. In the Civil Law. A person who is appointed to take care of anything for another. A guardian. One appointed to take care of the estate of a minor above a certain age, a lunatic, a spendthrift, or other person not regarded by the law as competent to administer it for himself. The title was also applied to a variety of public officers in Roman administrative law. Sproule v. Davies, 69 App.Div. 502, 75 N.Y.S. 229; Le Blanc v. Jackson, Tex.Civ.App., 161 S.W. 60, 66; Daniels v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 135 Pa.Super. 450, 5 A.2d 608, 611.

In Scotch Law
The term means a guardian.

In Louisiana
A person appointed to take care of the estate of an absentee.

In Missouri
The term "curator" has been adopted from the civil law, and it is applied to the guardian of the estate of the ward as distinguished from the guardian of his person. Duncan v. Crook, 49 Mo. 117.

Curator ad hoc
In the civil law. A guardian for this purpose; a special guardian.

Curator ad litem
Guardian for the suit. In English law, the corresponding phrase is "guardian ad litem."

Curator bonis
In the civil law. A guardian or trustee appointed to take care of property in certain cases; as for the benefit of creditors. Dig. 42, 7. In Scotch law. The term is applied to guardians for minors, lunatics, etc.

Curatores viarum
Surveyors of the highways.

CURATORSHIP. The office of a curator. Curatorship differs from tutorship, (q. v.) in this; that the latter is instituted for the protection of property in the first place, and, secondly, of the person; while the former is intended to protect, first, the person, and secondly, the property. 1 Lec. El. Dr. Civ. Rom. 241.

CURATRIX. A woman who has been appointed to the office of curator; a female guardian. Cross' Curatrix v. Cross' Legatees, 4 Grat., Va., 257.

CURATUS NON HABET TITULUM. A curate has no title, [to tithes.1 3 Bulst. 310.

CURE. The act of healing; restoration to health from disease, or to soundness after injury. State v. Gibson, 199' Iowa 177, 201 N.W. 590; State v. Stoddard, 215 Iowa, 534, 245 N.W. 273, 275, 86 A. L.R. 616. Under rule that a vessel and her owner must provide maintenance, and cure for seaman injured or falling ill while in service, "cure" is care, including nursing and medical attention during such period as the duty continues. Calmar S. S. Corporation v. Taylor, Pa., 303 U.S. 525, 58 S. Ct. 651, 653, 82 L.Ed. 993.

CURE BY VERDICT. The rectification or rendering nugatory of a defect in the pleadings by the rendition of a verdict; the court will presume, after a verdict, that the particular thing omitted or defectively stated in the pleadings was duly proved at the trial. State v. Keena, 63 Conn. 329, 28 A. 522; Treanor v. Houghton, 103 Cal. 53, 36 P. 1081.

CURE OF SOULS. In ecclesiastical law. The ecclesiastical or spiritual charge of a parish, including the usual and regular duties of a minister in charge. State v. Bray, 35 N.C. 290.

CURFEW. An institution supposed to have been introduced into England by order of William the Conqueror, which consisted in the ringing of a bell or bells at eight o'clock at night, at which signal the people were required to extinguish all lights in their dwellings, and to put out or rake up their fires, and retire to rest, and all companies to disperse. The word is probably derived from the French couvre feu, to cover the fire. The curfew is spoken of in 1 Social England 373, as having been ordained by William I, in order to prevent nightly gatherings of the people of England. But the custom is evidently older than the Norman; for we find an order of King Alfred that the inhabitants of Oxford should at the ringing of that bell cover up their fires and go to bed. And there is evidence that the same practice prevailed at this period in France, Normandy, Spain, and probably in most of the other countries of Europe. Henry, Hist. of Britain, vol. 3, 567. It was doubtless intended as a precaution against fires, which were very frequent and destructive when most houses were built of wood. It appears to have met with so much opposition that in 1103 we find Henry I, repealing the enactment of his father on the subject; and Blackstone says that, though it is mentioned a century afterwards, it is rather spoken of as of a time of night than as a still subsisting custom. Shakespeare frequently refers to it in the same sense.

CURIA. In old English law. A court. The palace, household, or retinue of a sovereign. A judicial tribunal or court held in the sovereign’s palace. A court of justice. The civil power, as distinguished from the ecclesiastical. A manor; a nobleman’s house; the hall of a manor. A piece of ground attached to a house; a yard or courtyard. Spelman. A lord’s court held in his manor. The tenants who did suit and service at the lord’s court. A manse. Cowell.

In Roman Law
A division of the Roman people, said to have been made by Romulus. They were divided into three tribes, and each tribe into ten curiae in all. Spelman. The place or building in which each curia assembled to offer sacred rites. The place of meeting of the Roman senate; the senate house. The senate house of a province; the place where the decuriones assembled. Cod. 10, 31, 2. See Decurio.

CURIA ADMIRALITATIS. The court of admiralty.

CURIA ADVISARI VULT. L. Lat. The court will advise; the court will consider. A phrase frequently found in the reports, signifying the resolution of the court to suspend judgment in a cause, after the argument, until they have deliberated upon the question, as where there is a new or difficult point involved. It is commonly abbreviated to cur. adv. vult, or c. a. v.

CURIA CANCELLABLE OFFICINA JUSTITLE. 2 Inst. 552. The court of chancery is the workshop of justice.

CURIA CHRISTIANITATIS. The ecclesiastical court.

CURIA CLAUDENDA. The name of a writ to compel another to make a fence or wall, which he was bound to make, between his land and the plaintiff’s. Reg. Orig. 155. Now obsolete.

CURNOCK. In old English law. A measure containing four bushels or half a quarter of corn. Cowell; Blount.

CURRENT CATALOGUES. Under contract to sell automobiles as shown in current catalogues, "current catalogues" means such catalogues as should from time to time be issued, and not merely the catalogues in existence on execution of the contract. Imperial Motorcar Co. v. Skinner, 16 Ala. App. 443, 78 So. 641, 642.

CURRENT DEBT FUND RULE. The "current debt fund rule" is that creditors who have supplied labor, materials, or equipment essential to operation of railroad before adjudication of insolvency will be entitled to lien on properties prior to lien of pre-existing mortgages, if current operating revenues have been diverted to payment of principal or interest on mortgages, or to enhancement of mortgage security before current operating expenses have been met. Village of Stillwater v. Hudson Valley Ry. Co., 255 N.Y. 144, 309, 174 N.E. 306.

CURRENT EXPENSES. Ordinary, regular, and continuing expenditures for the maintenance of property, the carrying on of an office, municipal government, etc. State v. Board of Education, 68 N.J.Law, 496, 53 A. 236; Babcock v. Goodrich, 47 Cal. 510; St. Louis-San Francisco Ry. Co. v. Forbes, 111 Oki. 48, 237 P. 596, 597.

CURRENT LIABILITIES. The phrase "current liability" carries with it the idea of a liability that is presently enforceable. Warren Co. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.Ga., 135 F.2d 679, 684, 685.

CURRENT MAINTENANCE. "Current maintenance" is defined as the expense occasioned in keeping the physical property in the condition required for continued use during its service life. Lindheimer v. Illinois Bell Telephone Co., Ill., 292 U.S. 151, 54 S.Ct. 658, 78 L.Ed. 1182.
CURRENT MONEY. The currency of the country; whatever is intended to and does actually circulate as currency; every species of coin or currency. Miller v. McKinney, 5 Lea. Tenn., 96. In this phrase the adjective "current" is not synonymous with "convertible." It is employed to describe money which passes from hand to hand, from person to person, and circulates through the community, and is generally received. Money is current which is received as money in the common business transactions, and is the common medium in barter and trade. Ferrell v. State, 68 Tex.Cr.R. 487, 152 S.W. 901, 905; Kupfer v. Marc, 28 Ill. 388; Conwell Pumphrey, 9 Ind. 135, 68 Am.Dec. 611.

CURRENT OBLIGATIONS. The word "current" means passing in time or belonging to the time actually passing, now passing, present in its course, as the current month, and as applied to current obligations it denotes the obligations then passing or present in its progress, the service rendered and the compensation therefor measured by the time of the occurrence of the event. Pecos Mercantile Co. v. Texlite, Inc., Tex.Civ.App., 65 S.W.2d 811, 812.

CURRENT RATE OF WAGES. Minimum, maximum, and intermediate amounts, indeterminately varying from time to time and dependent on the class and kind of work done, the efficiency of the workman, etc. Connally v. General Const. Co., Tex., 11 S.W. 346, 3 L.R.A. 642; Clark v. Lancaster County, 69 Neb. 717, 96 N.W. 593. Ordinarily, a calendar year in which the event under discussion took place; Buffalo County v. Bowker, 197 N.W. 620, 622, 111 Neb. 762; Clark v. Tennessee Chemical Company, 167 Ga. 248, 145 S.E. 73, 75; Empire Petroleum Co. v. Southern Pipe Line Co., 174 Ark. 33, 294 S.W. 5, 6; unless the context shows a different intention; Miller v. White, Tex.Civ.App., 264 S.W. 176, 178; People v. Central Illinois Public Service Co., 324 Ill. 85, 154 N.E. 438, 439.

CURRICULUM. The year; of the course of a year; the set of studies for a particular period, appointed by a university.

CURRIT QUATUOR PEDIBUS. L. Lat. It runs upon four feet; or, as sometimes expressed, it runs upon all fours. A phrase used in arguments to signify the entire and exact application of a case quoted. "It does not follow that they run quatuor pedibus." 1 W.Bl. 145.

CURRIT TEMPUS CONTRA DESIDES ET SUI JURIS CONTEMPLORES. Time runs against the slothful and those who neglect their rights. Bract. fols. 100b, 101.

CURSOR. An inferior officer of the papal court.

CURSUS CURIAE EST LEX CURVE. 3 Bulst. 53. The practice of the court is the law of the court.

CURTAIL. "Curtail" means to cut off the end or any part of; hence to shorten, abridge; diminish*, lessen, reduce; and has no such meaning as abolish. State v. Edwards, 207 La. 506, 21 So.2d 811, 812.

CURTESY. The estate to which by common law a man is entitled, on the death of his wife, in the lands or tenements of which she was seised in possession in fee-simple or in tail during her coverture, provided they have had lawful issue born alive which might have been capable of inheriting the estate. It is a freehold estate for the term of his natural life. 1 Washb.Real Prop. 127; 2 BL Comm. 126; Co.Litt. 30a; Dozier v. Toalson, 180 Mo. 546, 79 S.W. 420, 103 Am.St.Rep. 586;
CURTESY

Templeton v. Twitty, 88 Tenn. 595, 14 S.W. 435; Decker v. Decker, 205 Ky. 69, 265 S.W. 483, 485.

Initiate and consummate

Curtesy initiate is the interest which a husband has in his wife's estate after the birth of issue capable of inheriting, and before the death of the wife; after her death, it becomes an estate "by the curtesy consummate." Wait v. Wait, 4 Barb., N.Y. 205; Churchill v. Hudson, C.C. Mo., 34 F. 14; Pattison v. Baker, 148 Tenn. 399, 255 S.W. 710, 29 A.L.R. 1334; Bucci v. Popovich, 93 N.J. Eq. 121, 115 A. 95, 96; Hopper v. Gurtman, 126 N.J. 263, 18 A.2d 245, 246, 250, 133 A.L.R. 621.

CURTEYN. The name of King Edward the Con- fessor's sword. (Mat. Par. in Hen. III.) Wharton.

In its most comprehensive and proper legal signification, it includes all that space of ground and buildings thereon which is usually inclosed within the general fence immediately surrounding a principal messuage and outbuildings, and yard closely adjoining to a dwelling-house, but it may be large enough for cattle to be levant and couchant there-in. 1 Chit.Gen.Pr. 175.

The curtilage of a dwelling-house is a space, necessary and convenient and habitually used for the family purposes, and the carrying on of domestic employments. It includes the garden, if there be one, and it need not be separated from other lands by fence. State v. Shaw, 31 Me. 523; Derrickson v. Edwards, 29 N.J. Law, 474, 80 Am. Dec. 220; Bare v. Commonwealth, 122 Va. 783, 94 S.E. 168, 172; State v. Lee, 120 Or. 643, 710, 533, 534.

A piece of ground commonly used with the dwelling house. Fugate v. Commonwealth, 294 Ky. 410, 171 S.W.2d 1020, 1021. A small piece of land, not necessarily inclosed, around the dwelling house, and generally includes the buildings used for domestic purposes in the conduct of family affairs. Bruner v. State, 47 Okl.Cr. 241, 288 P. 369, 370; a courtyard or the space of ground adjoining the dwelling house necessary and convenient and habitually used for family purposes and the carrying on of domestic employments. Jones v. Commonwealth, 239 Ky. 110, 38 S.W.2d 971, 973. A piece of ground within the common inclosure belonging to a dwelling house, and enjoyed with it, for its more convenient occupation. Italian-American Building & Loan Ass'n of Passaic County v. Russo, 132 N.J. Eq. 319, 28 A.2d 196, 198; People v. Gedney, 10 Hun., N.Y., 154. In Michigan it has been extended to include more than an inclosure near the house. People v. Taylor, 2 Mich. 250.

CUSTODIAM LEASE. In English law. A grant from the crown under the exchequer seal, by which the custody of lands, etc., seised in the king's hands, is demised or committed to some person as custodee or lessee thereof. Wharton.

CUSTODY. The care and keeping of anything; as when an article is said to be "in the custody of the court." People v. Burr, 41 How.Prac., N.Y., 296; Emmerson v. State, 33 Tex.Cr.R. 89, 25 S.W. 290; Roe v. Irwin, 32 Ga. 39. Also the detainer of a man's person by virtue of lawful process or authority; actual imprisonment. In a sentence that the defendant "be in custody until," etc., this term imports actual imprisonment. Smith v. Com., 59 Pa. 320; Turner v. Wilson, 49 Ind. 581; Ex parte Powers, D.C. Ky., 129 F. 985. Detention; charge; control; possession. The term is very elastic and may mean actual imprisonment or physical detention or mere power, legal or physical, of imprisoning or of taking manual possess- sion. Jones v. State, 26 Ga.App. 635, 107 S.E. 166; J. O. Nessen Lumber Co. v. Ray H. Bennett Lumber Co., 223 Mich. 349, 193 N.W. 789, 790; State ex rel. Bricker v. Griffith, Ohio App., 36 N.E.2d 489, 491; Willoughby v. State, 87 Tex.Cr.R. 40, 219 S.W. 468, 470; Carpenter v. Lord, 88 Or. 128,

The word is defined as the care and possession of a thing, and means the keeping, guarding, care, watch, inspection, preservation or security of a thing, and carries with it the idea of the thing being within the immediate personal care and control of the person to whose custody it is subjected; charge; immediate charge and control, and not the final, absolute control of ownership, implying responsibility for the protection and preservation of the thing in custody. Southern Carbon Co. v. State, 171 Misc. 566, 13 N.Y.S.2d 7, 9.

"Custody" of property means such a relation towards it as would constitute possession if the person having custody had it on his own account. National Trust & Savings Bank v. Columbus State Bank, 124 Neb. 231, 246 N.W. 235, 238. "Custody" means a keeping, guardianship, the state of being held in keeping or under guard, restraint of liberty, imprisonment, and lett- letter” is a synonym. Browder v. Cook, D.C.Idaho, 59 F.Supp. 225, 231.

CUSTODY OF THE LAW. Property is in the custody of the law when it has been lawfully taken by authority of legal process, and remains in the possession of a public officer (as, a sheriff) or an officer of a court (as, a receiver) empowered by law to hold it. Gilman v. Williams, 7 Wis. 334, 76 Am.Dec. 219; McFarland Carriage Co. v. Solanes, C.C.La., 108 V. 532; Allan v. Hargadine-McKittrick Dry Goods Co., 325 Mo. 400, 28 S.W.2d 670, 673.

A "custom" is a practice or course of acting. Goslin v. Kurn, 351 Mo. 395, 173 S.W.2d 79, 86.

It results from a long series of actions, constantly repeated, which have, by such repetition and by uninterrupted acquiescence, acquired the force of a tacit and common consent. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Reverman, 243 Ky. 702, 49 S.W.2d 558, 560.

A law not written, established by long usage, and the consent of our ancestors. Terme de la Ley: Cowell. Bract. fol. 2. Portuguese Beneficial Ass'n v. Xavier, 59 R.I. 265, 195 A. 231, 233. If it be universal, it is common law; if particular to this or that place, it is then properly cus- custom. 3 Salk. I 12.

Customs result from a long series of actions constantly repeated, which have, by such repetition, and by uninterrupted acquiescence, acquired the force of a tacit and common consent. Civil Code La., art. 3.

It differs from prescription, which is personal and is annexed to the person of the owner of a particular estate; while the other is local, and relates to a particular district. An instance of the latter occurs where the question is upon the manner of conducting a particular branch of trade at a certain place; of the former, where a certain person and his ancestors, or those whose estates he has, have been entitled to a certain advantage or privilege, as to have common of pasture in a certain close, or the like. The distinction has been thus expressed: "While prescription is the making of a right, custom is the making of a law." Lawson, Usages & Cust. 15, note 2.

Classification

Customs are general, local or particular. General customs are such as prevail throughout a country and become the law of that country, and their existence is to be determined by the court. Bodfish v. Fox, 23 Me. 95, 39 Am.Dec. 611. Or as applied to usages of trade and business, a general custom is one that is followed in all cases by all persons in the same business in the same territory, and which has been so long established that persons sought to be charged thereby, and all others living in the vicinity, may be presumed to have known of it and to have acted upon it as they had occasion. Sturges v. Buckley, 32 Conn. 267; Railroad Co. v. Harrington, 192 Ill. 9, 61 N.E. 622. Local customs are such as prevail only in some particular district or locality, or in some city, county, or town. Clough v. Wing, 2 Ariz. 371, 17 P. 457. Particular customs are nearly the same, being such as affect only the inhabitants of some particular district. 1 Bl.Comm. 74.

Custom of Merchants

A system of customs or rules relative to bills of exchange, partnership, and other mercantile matters, and which, under the name of the "lex mercatoria," or "law merchant," has been ingrained into and made a part of, the common law. 1 Bl Comm. 75; 1 Steph.Comm. 54; 2 Burrows, 1226, 1228.

Custom of York

A custom of intestacy in the province of York similar to that of London. Abolished by 19 & 20 Vict. c. 94.

Customs and Services

Annexed to the tenure of lands are those which the tenants thereof owe unto their lords, and which, if withheld, the lord might anciently have resorted to "a writ of customs and services" to compel them. Cowell. But at the present day he would merely proceed to eject the tenant as upon a forfeiture, or claim damages for the subtraction. Brown.

Customs of London

Certain particular customs, peculiar to that city, with regard to trade, apprentices, widows, orphans and a variety of other matters; contrary to the general law of the land, but confirmed by act of parliament. 1 Bl.Comm. 75.

Special Custom

A particular or local custom; one which, in respect to the sphere of its observance, does not extend throughout the entire state or country, but is confined to some particular district or locality. 1 Bl.Comm. 67; Bodfish v. Fox, 23 Me. 95, 39 Am. Dec. 611.
CUSTOM

CUSTOM. DUTIES. Taxes on the importation and exportation of commodities; the tariff or tax assessed upon merchandise, imported from, or exported to a foreign country. United States v. Sischo, D.C.Wash., 262 F. 1001, 1005.

CUSTOM-HOUSE. In administrative law. The house or office where commodities are entered for importation or exportation; where the duties, bounties, or drawbacks payable or receivable upon such importation or exportation are paid or received; and where ships are cleared out, etc.

CUSTOM-HOUSE BROKER. One whose occupation is, as an agent, to arrange entries and other custom-house papers, or transact business, at any port of entry, relating to the importation or exportation of goods, wares, or merchandise. 14 St. at Large, 117. A person authorized by the commissioners of customs to act for parties, at their option, in the entry or clearance of ships and the transaction of general business. Wharton, State v. William J. Oberlé, Inc., La.App., 140 So. 239, 240.

CUSTOMARILY. Means usually, habitually, according to the customs, general practice or usual order of things, regularly. Fuller Brush Co. v. Industrial Commission of Utah, 99 Utah 97, 104 P.2d 201, 203, 129 A.L.R. 511.

CUSTOMARY. According to custom or usage; founded on, or growing out of, or dependent on, an ancient custom or tradition; ordinary; usual; common. Kent v. Town of Patterson, 80 Misc.Rep. 560, 141 N.Y.S. 932, 933; Montgomery v. O'Donnell, 178 Iowa 588, 159 N.W. 1025, 1026; Woods v. Postal Telegraph-Cable Co., 205 Ala. 236, 87 So. 681, 686, 27 A.L.R. 834.

CUSTOMARY COURT-BARON. See Court-Baron.

CUSTOMARY ESTATES. Estates which owe their origin and existence to the custom of the manor in which they are held. 2 Bl.Comm. 149.

CUSTOMARY FREEHOLD. In English law. A variety of copyhold estate, the evidences of the title to which are to be found upon the court rolls; the entries declaring the holding to be according to the custom of the manor, but it is not said to be at the will of the lord. The incidents are similar to those of common or pure copyhold. 1 Steph. Comm. 212, 213, and note.

CUSTOMARY INTERPRETATION. See Interpretation.

CUSTOMARY SERVICES. Such as are due by ancient custom or prescription only.

CUSTOMARY TENANTS. Tenants holding by custom of the manor.

CUSTOME SERRA PRISE STRICTE. Custom shall be taken [is to be construed] strictly. Jenk. Cent. 83.

CUSTOMER'S MAN. One who has duty to greet customers of broker, when they appear in office on business, to assist them in placing their orders, and generally to see that their wants are taken care of. Penner & Beane v. Lincoln, Tex.Civ.App., 101 S.W.2d 305, 308; an employee of a brokerage house who solicits from the investing public orders for the purchase and sale of commodities and securities to be executed upon various commodities and securities exchanges in the United States. Gould v. Witter, 10 Wash.2d 553, 117 P.2d 210, 211. The term includes all employees who are regularly engaged in the solicitation of marginal business or the handling of customers' accounts, or who advise with customers about the purchase and sale of securities. Clothier v. Beane, 187 Okl. 693, 105 P.2d 752, 756.

CUSTOMS. This term is usually applied to those taxes which are payable upon goods and merchandise imported or exported. Story, Const. § 949; Pollock v. Trust Co., 158 U.S. 601, 15 S.Ct. 912, 924 L.Ed. 1108; Marriott v. Brune, 9 How. 632, 13 L.Ed. 1108; Marriott v. Brune, 9 How. 632, 13 L.Ed. 1108; Marriott v. Brune, 9 How. 632, 13 L.Ed. 1108.

The duties, toll, tribute, or tariff payable upon merchandise exported or imported. These are called "customs" from having been paid from time immemorial. Expressed in law Latin by custumae, as distinguished from consuetudines, which are usages merely. 1 Bl. Comm. 314.

CUSTOMS CONSOLIDATION ACT. The statute 16 & 17 Viet. c. 107, which has been frequently amended. See 2 Steph. Comm. 563.

CUSTOMS COURT. By virtue of Act May 28, 1926, c. 411, § 1, 44 Stat. 669, 19 U.S.C.A. § 405a, the "United States Customs Court" became the title of what had theretofore been known as the "Board of General Appraisers." Ex parte Bake-CUTWAL, KATWAL. The chief officer of police or superintendent of markets in a large town or city in India.
CWT. A hundred-weight; one hundred and twelve pounds. Helm v. Bryant, 11 B. Mon. (Ky.) 64.

CY. In law French. Here. (Cy-apres, hereafter; cy-devant, heretofore.) Also as, so.

CYCLE. A measure of time; a space in which the same revolutions begin again; a periodical space of time. Enc. Lond. In electrical nomenclature is two successive reversals of directions of electromotive force or current or full period of alternative current. Chicago Pneumatic Tool Co. v. Black & Decker Mfg. Co., Cust. & Pat.App., 39 F. 2d 684, 685.

CYNE-BOT, or CYNE-GILD. The portion belonging to the nation of the mulct for slaying the king, the other portion or were being due to his family. Blount.

CYNEBOTE. A mulct anciently paid by one who killed another, to the kindred of the deceased. Spelman.

CYPHONISM. That kind of punishment used by the ancients, and still used by the Chinese, called by Staunton the "wooden collar," by which the neck of the malefactor is bent or weighed down. Enc. Lond.

CY-PRES. As near as [possible]. The rule of cy-pres is a rule for the construction of instruments in equity, by which the intention of the party is carried out as near as may be, when it would be impossible or illegal to give it literal effect. Thus, where a testator attempts to create a perpetuity, the court will endeavor, instead of making the devise entirely void, to explain the will in such a way as to carry out the testator's general intention as far as the rule against perpetuities will allow. So in the case of bequests to charitable uses; and particularly where the testator's design must be sought by construction.

CZAREVITCH. (Also spelled czarewich, tsarevitch, and, after the Polish, czarowitch, czarowitch, etc.) A son of the Russian czar and czarina. Originally a title. Webster, Dict. The word was used as a title during the time of Peter I and his son, Alexis, after whose death imperial princes were called grand dukes. 6 New Internatl. Encyc. 420.

CZAREVNA, TSAREVNA. A daughter of the Russian czar. Originally a title. Webster, Dict. 1308. A son of the Russian czar and czarina. Originally a title. Webster, Dict. 1308. A daughter of the Russian czar. Originally a title. Webster, Dict. As a title, however, the word has been superseded, since the time of Paul I (1754-1801), by that of grand duchess. New Internatl. Encyc. 420; 2 New English Diet. 1308. See Czarevitch; Cesarevna.

CZARINA. The title of former empresses of Russia.

CZARITZA, TSARITSA. The Russian title for which czarina is in ordinary English use. 2 New English Diet. 1308.
The fourth letter of the English alphabet. It is used as an abbreviation for a number of words, the more important and usual of which are as follows:

1. Digestum, or Digesta, that is, the Digest or Pandects in the Justinian collections of the civil law. Citations to this work are sometimes indicated by this abbreviation, but more commonly by "Dig."

2. Dictum. A remark or observation, as in the phrase "obiter dictum," (q. v.).

3. Demissione. "On the demise." An action of ejectment is entitled "Doe d. Stiles v. Roe;" that is, "Doe, on the demise of Stiles, against Roe."

6. "Dialogue." Used only in citations to the work called "Doctor and Student."

In the Roman system of notation, this letter stands for five hundred; and, when a horizontal dash or stroke is placed above it, it denotes five thousand.

D. B. Defined as day book, double biased, double breasted and, if capitalized, it means Doomsday Book, though there is no authoritative definition of d/b or d/b/a as a symbol or abbreviation in a legal document. City of St. Louis v. Stubley, Mo.App., 154 S.W.2d 407, 410.

D. B. E. An abbreviation for de bene esse, (q. v.).

D. B. N. An abbreviation for de bonis non; descriptive of a species of administration.

D. C. An abbreviation standing either for "District Court," or "District of Columbia."

D. E. R. I. C. An abbreviation used for De ea re ita censuere, (concerning that matter have so decreed,) in recording the decrees of the Roman senate. Tayl. Civil Law, 564, 566.

D. J. An abbreviation for "District Judge."

D. P. An abbreviation for Domus Procerum, the house of lords.

D. S. B. An abbreviation for debitum sine brevi, or debit sans breve. which could be earned by working ordinary number of hours, irrespective of enforced idleness during working hours and overtime employment. Carlson v. Condon-Kiewit Co., 135 Neb. 587, 283 N.W. 220, 221.

DAIRY. An establishment for the sale or distribution of milk or milk products. State v. Mc-Cosh, 134 Neb. 780, 279 N.W. 775, 777.

DARER, or DIKER. Ten hides. Blount.

DAMAGE. Loss, injury, or deterioration, caused by the negligence, design, or accident of one person to another, in respect of the latter's person or property. The word is to be distinguished from its plural, "damages," which means a compensation in money for a loss or damage. An injury produces a right in them who have suffered any damage by it to demand reparation of such damage from the authors of the injury. By damage, we understand every loss or diminution of what is a man's own, occasioned by the fault of another. 1 Ruth. Inst. 399.

The harm, detriment, or loss sustained by reason of an injury. Yazoo & M. V. R. Co. v. Fields, 188 Miss. 725, 195 So. 489, 490.

DAMAGE-CLEER. A fee assessed of the tenth part in the common pleas, and the twentieth part in the queen's bench and exchequer, out of all damages exceeding five marks recovered in those courts, in actions upon the case, covenant, trespass, etc., wherein the damages were uncertain, which the plaintiff was obliged to pay to the prothonotary or the officer of the court wherein he recovered, before he could have execution for the damages. This was originally a gratuity given to the prothonotaries and their clerks for drawing special writs and pleadings; but it was taken away by statute, since which, if any officer in these courts took any money in the name of damage-deer, or anything in lieu thereof, he forfeited treble the value. Wharton.

DAMAGE FEASANT or FAISANT. Doing damage. A term applied to a person's cattle or beasts found upon another's land, doing damage by treading down the grass, grain, etc. 3 Bl. Comm. 7, 211; Tomlins. This phrase seems to have been introduced in the reign of Edward III, in place of the older expression "en son damage," (in damno suo.) Crabb, Eng. Law, 292.

DAMAGE TO PERSON. Bodily or physical injury directly resulting from wrongful act, whether lying in trespass or trespass on the case, and does not include torts directly affecting the person but affecting only the feelings and reputation. Young v. Aylesworth, 35 R.I. 259, 86 A. 555, 556; Texas Employers' Ins. Ass'n v. Jimenez, Tex.Civ.App., 267 S.W. 752, 758; Howard v. Lunaburg, 192 Wis. 507, 213 N.W. 301, 303; Wilson v. Grace, 273 Mass. 146, 173 N.E. 524, 528.

DAMAGE TO TWO PERSONS. In bond for payment of damages that limited amount payable for any one accident. Where widow sued to recover damages to deceased and his estate and also her pecuniary loss, there was "damage to two persons" within the bond. Ehlers v. Gold, 169 Wis. 494, 173 N.W. 325, 327.

DAMAGED. Made less valuable, less useful, or less desirable. Cleveland, C., C. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Mumford, 208 Ind. 655, 197 N.E. 826, 835.

DAMAGED GOODS. Goods, subject to duties, which have received some injury either in the voyage home or while bonded in warehouse.

as payment for or indemnity for injuries. Sycamore Preserve Works v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 284 Ill. App. 445, 1 N.E.2d 522, 526. The pecuniary compensation, recompense, or satisfaction for an injury sustained, Fogle v. Frazel, 201 La. 10, 10 So.2d 695, 698. A sum awarded as a fair measure of compensation to plaintiff, the amount being, as near as can be estimated, that by which he is the worse for the defendant’s wrongdoing. Chafin v. Gay Coal & Coke Co., 113 W.Va. 823, 169 S.E. 485, 487. A sum of money assessed by a jury on finding for the plaintiff or successful party in an action, as a compensation for the injury done him by the opposite party. 2 Bl.Comm. 438; Co.Litt. 257a; 2 Am.Jur. 111 P.2d 612, 616. Synonymous with: “compensation”, the opposite party. 2 BI.Comm. 438; Co.Litt. 257a; 2

Contingent damages

Where a demurrer has been filed to one or more counts in a declaration, and its consideration is postponed, and meanwhile other counts in the same declaration, not demurred to, are taken as issues, and tried, and damages awarded upon them, such damages are called "contingent damages."

Continuing damages

Are such as accrue from the same injury, or from the repetition of similar acts, between two specified periods of time.

Damages ultra

Additional damages claimed by a plaintiff not satisfied with those paid into court by the defendant.

Direct damages

Direct damages are such as follow immediately upon the act done; Eaton v. Railroad Co., 51 N.H. 504, 12 Am.Rep. 147; City of Dublin v. Ogburn, 142 Ga. 840, 83 S.E. 939; McKibbin V. Pierce, Tex. Civ.App., 190 S.W. 1149, 1151; Washington & O. D. Ry. v. Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co., 120 Va. 620, 89 S.E. 131, 133.

Double damages

Twice the amount of actual damages as found by the verdict of a jury allowed by statute in some cases of injuries by negligence, fraud, or trespass. Cross v. United States, 6 Fed.Cas. 892; Daniel v. Vaccaro, 41 Ark. 329.

Excessive damages

Damages awarded by a jury which are grossly in excess of the amount warranted by law on the facts and circumstances of the case; unreasonable or outrageous damages. Taylor v. Giger, Hardin, Ky., 587; Harvesting Mach. Co. v. Gray, 114 Ind. 340, 16 N.E. 787.

Exemplary damages

Exemplary damages are damages on an increased scale, awarded to the plaintiff over and above what will barely compensate him for his property loss, where the wrong done to him was aggravated by circumstances of violence, oppression, malice, fraud, or wanton and wicked conduct on the part of the defendant, and are intended to solace the plaintiff for mental anguish, laceration of his feelings, shame, degradation, or other ag-gravations of the original wrong, or else to punish the defendant for his evil behavior or to make an example of him, for which reason they are also called "punitive" or "punitory" damages or "vindictive" damages, and (vulgarly) "smart-money." Springer v. Fuel Co., 196 Pa.St. 156, 46 A. 370; Scott v. Donald, 165 U.S. 58, 17 S.Ct. 265, 41 L.Ed. 632; Gillingham v. Railroad Co., 35 W.Va. 588, 14 S.E. 243, 14 L.R.A. 798; Murphy v. Hobbs, 7 Colo. 541, 5 P. 119, 49 Am.Rep. 366. It is said that the idea of punishment does not enter into the definition; the term being employed to mean an increased award in view of supposed aggravation of the injury to the feelings of plaintiff by the wanton or reckless act of defendant. Brause v. Brause, 190 Iowa 329, 177 N.W. 65, 70.

Fair damages
See Fair Damages.

Fee damages
Damages sustained by and awarded to an abutting owner of real property occasioned by the construction and operation of an elevated railroad in a city street, are so called, because compensation is made to the owner for the injury to, or deprivation of, his easements of light, air, and access, and these are parts of the fee. Dode v. Railway Co., 70 Hun, 374, 24 N.Y.S. 422; People v. Barker, 165 N.Y. 305, 59 N.E. 151.

General damages
General damages are such as the law itself implies or presumes to have accrued from the wrong complained of, for the reason that they are its immediate, direct, and proximate result, or such as necessarily result from the injury, or such as did in fact result from the wrong, directly and proximately, and without reference to the special character, condition, or circumstances of the plaintiff. Mood v. Telegraph Co., 40 S.C. 524, 19 S.E. 67; Hopkins v. Veo, 98 Vt. 433, 129 A. 157, 158; United States Frumentum Co. v. Lauhoff, C.C.A.Mich., 216 F. 610, 617; Kane v. New Idea Realty Co., 104 Conn. 508, 133 A. 686, 687.

Imaginary damages
This term is sometimes used as equivalent to "exemplary," "vindictive," or "punitive" damages. Murphy v. Hobbs, 7 Colo. 541, 5 P. 119, 49 Am Rep. 366.

Inadequate damages
Damages are called "inadequate," within the rule that an injunction will not be granted where adequate damages at law could be recovered for the injury sought to be prevented, when such a recovery at law would not compensate the parties and place them in the position in which they formerly stood. Insurance Co. v. Bonner, 7 Colo. App. 97, 42 P. 681.

Intervening damages

Irreparable damages

Land damages

Liquidated damages and penalties
The term is applicable when the amount of the damages has been ascertained by the judgment in the action, or when a specific sum of money has been expressly stipulated by the parties to a bond or other contract as the amount of damages to be recovered by either party for a breach of the agreement by the other. Keeble v. Keeble, 85 Ala. 552, 5 So. 149; Eakin v. Scott, 70 Tex. 442, 7 S.W. 777; Cochrane v. Forbes, 267 Mass. 417, 166 N.E. 752, 753; Varno v. Tindall, 164 Tenn. 642, 51 S.W. 2d 502, 503; Norwood Morris Plan Co. v. McCarthy, 295 Mass. 597, 4 N.E.2d 450, 454, 107 A.L.R. 1215; Factory Realty Corporation v. Corbin-Holmes Shoe Co., 312 Mass. 325, 44 N.E.2d 671, 674. The purpose of a penalty is to secure performance, while the purpose of stipulating damages is to fix the amount to be paid in lieu of performance. Christianson v. Haugland, 163 Minn. 73, 203 N.W. 433, 434; Davidson v. Wadsworth Mfg. Co., 211 Mich. 195, 175 N.W. 776, 777, 12 A.L.R. 605; Forsyth v. Central Foundry Co., 240 Ala. 277, 198 So. 706, 710. The essence of a penalty is a stipulation as in terrorem while the essence of liquidated damages is a genuine covenanted pre-estimate of such damages. Shields v. Early, 132 Miss. 282, 95 So. 839, 840. For other cases pertaining to the distinction between a penalty and liquidated damages, see Fiscal Court of Franklin County v. Kentucky Public Service Co., 181 Ky. 245, 204 S.W. 77, 79; In re Liberty Doll Co., D.C. N.Y., 242 F. 695, 701; Miller v. Blockberger, 111 Ohio St. 798, 146 N.E. 206, 209; Armstrong v. Irwin, 26 Ariz. 1, 221 P. 222, 225, 32 A.L.R. 609.

Necessary damages
A term said to be of much wider scope in the law of damages than "pecuniary." It embraces all those consequences of an injury usually designated "general" damages, as distinguished from special damages; whereas the phrase "pecuniary damages" covers a smaller class of damages within the larger class of "general" damages. Browning v. Wabash Western R. Co., Mo., 24 S. W. 746.

Nominal damages
Nominal damages are a trifling sum awarded to a plaintiff in an action, where there is no substantial loss or injury to be compensated, but still the law recognizes a technical invasion of his rights or a breach of the defendant's duty, or in cases where, although there has been a real injury, the plaintiff's evidence entirely fails to show its amount. Seeling v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co., 287 Mo. 343, 230 S.W. 94, 102; City of Rainier v. Masters, 79 Or. 534, 155 P. 1197, 1198, L.R.A. 1916E, 1175; Springer v. Fuel Co., 196 Pa. 156, 46 A. 370.

Pecuniary damages
Such as can be estimated in and compensated by money; not merely the loss of money or salable property or rights, but all such loss, deprivation, or injury as can be made the subject of calculation and of recompense in money. Walker v. McNeill, 17 Wash. 582, 50 P. 518; Davidson Benedict Co. v. Severson, 109 Tenn. 572, 72 S.W. 967.

Permanent damages
Damages awarded on theory that cause of injury is fixed and that the property will always remain subject to it. Chambers v. Spruce Lighting Co., 81 W.Va. 714, 95 S.E. 192, 194.

Presumptive damages
A term occasionally used as the equivalent of "exemplary" or "punitive" damages. Murphy v. Hobbs, 7 Colo. 541, 5 P. 119, 49 Am.Rep. 366.

Prospective damages
Damages which are expected to follow from the act or state of facts made the basis of a plaintiff's suit; damages which have not yet accrued, at the time of the trial, but which, in the nature of things, must necessarily, or most probably, result from the acts or facts complained of.

Proximate damages
Proximate damages are the immediate and direct damages and natural results of the act complained of, and such as are usual and might have been expected. Remote damages are those attributable immediately to an intervening cause, though it forms a link in an unbroken chain of causation, so that the remote damage would not have occurred if its elements had not been set in motion by the original cause or event. Pielke v. Railroad Co., 5 Dak. 444, 41 N.W. 669; Chambers v. Everding & Farrell, 71 Or. 521, 143 P. 616, 619.

Remote damages
The unusual and unexpected result, not reasonably to be anticipated from an accidental or unusual combination of circumstances—a result beyond which the negligent party has no control.

Chambers v. Everding & Farrel, 71 Or. 521, 143 P. 616, 620.

Damage is said to be too remote to be actionable when it is not the legal and natural consequence of the act complained of.

The terms "remote damages" and "consequential damages" are not synonymous nor to be used interchangeably; all remote damage is consequential, but it is by no means true that all consequential damage is remote. Eaton v. Railroad Co., 51 N.H. 311, 12 Am.Rep. 147; Chambers v. Everding & Farrell, 71 Or. 521, 143 P. 616, 620.

Special damages
Those which are the actual, but not the necessary, result of the injury complained of, and which in fact follow it as a natural and proximate consequence in the particular case, that is, by reason of special circumstances or conditions. Wallace v. Ah Sam, 71 Cal. 197, 12 P. 46, 60 Am. Rep. 534; Lawrence v. Porter, C.C.A.Mich., 63 F. 62, 11 C.C.A. 27, 26 L.R.A. 167; Huysler's v. Ritz-Carlton Restaurant & Hotel Co. of Atlantic City, D.C.Del., 6 F.2d 404, 406. Those which are the natural, but not the necessary, result of the injury. Butte Floral Co. v. Reed, 65 Mont. 325, 330; Ralph N. Blakeslee Co. v. Rigo, 94 Conn. 481, 109 A. 173, 175; Erick Bowman Remedy Co. v. Jensen Salsbury Laboratories, C.C.A.Minn., 17 F.2d 255, 259, 52 A.L.R. 1187.

Speculative damages
Prospective or anticipated damages from the same acts or facts constituting the present cause of action, but which depend upon future developments which are contingent, conjectural, or improbable.

Substantial damages
A sum, assessed by way of damages, which is worth having; opposed to nominal damages, which are assessed to satisfy a bare legal right. Wharton. Considerable in amount and intended as a real compensation for a real injury.

Temporary damages
Damages allowed for intermittent and occasional wrongs, such as injuries to real estate, where cause thereof is removable or abatable. Chambers v. Spruce Lighting Co., 81 W.Va. 714, 95 S.E. 192, 194.

Unliquidated damages
Such as are not yet reduced to a certainty in respect of amount, nothing more being established than the plaintiff's right to recover; or such as cannot be fixed by a mere mathematical calculation from ascertained data in the case. Cox v. McLaughlin, 76 Cal. 60, 18 P. 100, 9 Am. St.Rep. 164; Cool v. Pompey & Co. v. Parker, 50 W. Va. 580, 104 S.E. 51, 53; United Cigarette Mach. Co. v. Brown, 119 Va. 813, 89 S.E. 850, 855, L.R.A. 1917A, 1190; Simons v. Douglas Ex'r, 189 Ky. 644, 225 S.W. 721, 723.

DAMAIOUSE. In old English law. Causing damage or loss, as distinguished from torcenouse, wrongful. Brit. c. 61.
DAME

DAME. In English law. The legal designation of the wife of a knight or baronet.

DAMNA. Damages, both inclusive and exclusive of costs.

DAMNATUS. In old English law. Condemned; prohibited by law; unlawful. Damnatus coitus, an unlawful sexual connection.

DAMNI INJURLE ACTIO. An action given by the civil law for the damage done by one who intentionally injured the slave or beast of another. Calvin.

DAMNIFICATION. That which causes damage or loss.

DAMNIFY. To cause damage or injurious loss to a person or put him in a position where he must sustain it. A surety is "damnified" when a judgment has been obtained against him. McLean v. Bank, 16 Fed.Cas. 278.

DAMNOSA HIEREDITAS. In the civil law. A losing inheritance; an inheritance that was a charge, instead of a benefit. Dig. 50, 16, 119.

The term has also been metaphorically applied to that species of property of a bankrupt which, so far from being valuable, would be a charge to the creditors; for example, a term of years where the rent would exceed the revenue. 7 East, 342; 3 Camp. 340; 1 Esp.N.P. 234; Provident L. & Trust Co. v. Fidelity, etc., Co., 203 Pa. 82, 52 A. 34.

DAMNUM. Lat.

In the Civil Law

Damage; the loss or diminution of what is a man's own, either by fraud, carelessness, or accident.

In Pleading and Old English Law

Damage; loss.

DAMNUM FATALE. Fatal damage; damage from fate; loss happening from a cause beyond human control, (quod ex fato contingit,) or an act of God, for which bailees are not liable; such as shipwreck, lightning, and the like. Dig. 4, 9, 3, 1; Story, Bailm. § 465. The civilians included in the phrase "damnum fatale" all those accidents which are summed up in the common-law expression, "Act of God or public enemies;" though, perhaps, it embraced some which would not now be admitted as occurring from an irresistible force. Thickstun v. Howard, 8 Blackf. Ind. 535.

DAMNUM INFECTUM. In Roman law. Damage not yet committed, but threatened or impending. A preventive interdict might be obtained to prevent such damage from happening; and it was treated as a quasi-delict, because of the imminence of the danger.

DAMNUM REI AMISSAE. In the civil law. A loss arising from a payment made by a party in consequence of an error of law. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 178.

DAMNUM SINE INJURIA. ESSE POTEST. Lofft, 112. There may be damage or injury inflicted without any act of injustice.

DAN. Anciently the better sort of men in England had this title; so the Spanish Don. The old term of honor for men, as we now say Master or Mister. Wharton.

DANCEHALL. A place maintained for promiscuous and public dancing, the rules for admission to which are not based upon personal selection or invitation. State v. Loomis, 75 Mont. 88, 242 P. 344, 347; People v. Dever, 237 Ill.App. 65, 69.

DANEGELT, DANEGELD. A tribute originally of 1s. and afterwards of 2s., which came to be imposed upon every hide of land through the realm, levied by the Anglo-Saxons, for maintaining (it is supposed) such a number of forces as were thought sufficient to clear the British seas of Danish pirates, who greatly annoyed their coasts, or to buy off the ravages of Danish invaders. It continued a tax until the time of Stephen, and was one of the rights of the crown. Wharton; Webster, Dict. The Danegeld was levied as a land-tax by the Norman kings; it disappears under the name after 1163, but in fact continued under the name of tallage. 3 New English Dict. 26.

DANELAGE. A system of laws, introduced by the Danes on their invasion and conquest of England, which was principally maintained in some of the midland counties, and also on the eastern coast. 1 Bl.Comm. 65; 4 Bl.Comm. 411; 1 Steph. Comm. 42.

DANELAGE. A system of laws, introduced by the Danes on their invasion and conquest of England, which was principally maintained in some of the midland counties, and also on the eastern coast. 1 Bl.Comm. 65; 4 Bl.Comm. 411; 1 Steph. Comm. 42.

DANELAGE. A system of laws, introduced by the Danes on their invasion and conquest of England, which was principally maintained in some of the midland counties, and also on the eastern coast. 1 Bl.Comm. 65; 4 Bl.Comm. 411; 1 Steph. Comm. 42.

DANGERS. Jeopardy; exposure to loss or injury; peril. U. S. v. Mays, 1 Idaho, 770; State v. Londe, 345 Mo. 185, 132 S.W.2d 501, 506.

Dangers of Navigation

The same as "dangers of the sea" or "perils of the sea." See Dangers of the sea, infra.

Dangers of the River

This phrase, as used in bills of lading, means only the natural accidents incident to river navigation, and does not embrace such as may be avoided by the exercise of that skill, judgment, or foresight which are demanded from persons in a particular occupation. Hill v. Sturgeon, 35 Mo. 213, 86 Am.Dec. 149. It includes dangers arising from unknown reefs which have suddenly formed in the channel, and are not discoverable by care and skill. Hill v. Sturgeon, 35 Mo. 213, 86 Am. Dec. 149; Hibernia Ins. Co. v. Transp. Co., 120 U.S. 166, 7 S.Ct. 550, 30 L.Ed. 621; Johnson v. Friar, 4 Yerg. 48, 26 Am.Dec. 215.

Dangers of the Road

This phrase, in a bill of lading, when it refers to inland transportation, means such dangers as are immediately caused by roads, as the overturning of carriages in rough and precipitous places. 7 Exch. 743.

Dangers of the Sea

The expression "dangers of the sea" means those accidents peculiar to navigation that are of an extraordinary nature, or arise from irresistible force or overwhelming power, which cannot be guarded against by the ordinary exertions of human skill and prudence. The Portsmouth, 9 Wall. 682, 19 L.Ed. 754; Hibernia Ins. Co. v. Transp. Co., 120 U.S. 166, 7 S.Ct. 550, 30 L.Ed. 621; The Mau-mee, D.C.N.C., 260 F. 862, 870; equivalent to "dangers of navigation." Norris Grain Co. v. Great Lakes Transit Corporation, C.C.A.II., 70 F. 2d 32, 34.

DANGERIA. In old English law. A money payment made by forest-tenants, that they might have liberty to plow and sow in time of pannage, or mast feeding.

DANGEROUS MACHINE. A machine is "dangerous" in such sense that the employer is required to guard it, if, in the ordinary course of human affairs, danger may be reasonably anticipated from the use of it without protection. Simon v. St. Louis Brass Mfg. Co., 298 Mo. 70, 250 S.W. 74, 76.

DANGEROUS PER SE. A thing that may inflict injury without the immediate application of human aid or instrumentality. Southern Cotton Oil Co. v. Anderson, 80 Fla. 441, 86 So. 629, 632, 16 A. L.R. 255.

DANGEROUS PLACE. One where there is considerable risk, or danger, or peril, one where accidents or injuries are very apt to occur. Henrie v. Rocky Mountain Packing Corp., Utah, 196 P.2d 487, 489.

DANGEROUS WEAPON. One dangerous to life; one by the use of which a fatal wound may probably or possibly be given. As the manner of use enters into the consideration as well as other circumstances, the question is often one of fact for the jury, but not infrequently one of law for the court. U. S. v. Reeves, C.C.Tex., 38 F. 404; Parman v. Lemmon, 119 Kan. 323, 224 P. 227, 229, 44 A.L.R. 1500; State v. Penton, 157 La. 68, 102 So. 14, 15; deadly weapon distinguished State v. Walden, 41 N.M. 418, 70 P.2d 149, 150; Crawford v. State, 174 Md. 175, 197 A. 866, 867.

DANISM. The act of lending money on usury.

DANO. In Spanish law. Damage; the deterioration, injury, or destruction which a man suffers with respect to his person or his property by the fault (culpa) of another. White, New Recop. b. 2, tit. 19, c. 3, § 1.

DANS ET RETINENS, NIHL DAT. One who gives and yet retains does not give effectually. Tray. Lat. Max. 129. Or, one who gives, yet retains, [possession,) gives nothing.

DAPIFER. A steward either of a king or lord. Spelman.

DARE. Lat. In the civil law. To transfer property. When this transfer is made in order to discharge a debt, it is datio solvendi animo; when in order to receive an equivalent, to create an obligation, it is datio contrahendi animo; lastly, when made donandi animo, from mere liberality, it is a gift, dono datio.

DARE AD REMANENTIAM. To give away in fee, or forever.

DARRAIGN. To clear a legal account; to answer an accusation; to settle a controversy.

DARREIN. L. Fr. Last.

DARREIN CONTINUANCE. The last continuance.

DARREIN PRESENTMENT. In old English law. The last presentment. See Assise of darrein presentment.

DASH. The em dash (-) or the en dash (-) is often used to indicate the omission of the intermediate terms of a series which are to be supplied in reading, being thus often equivalent to  inclusive; thus Mark iv, 3-20 (that is, verses 3 to 20, inclusive; the years 1880-1888 (that is, 1880 to 1888). Booe v. Sims, 139 Ark. 595, 215 S.W. 659, 660.

DATA. In old practice and conveyancing. The date of a deed; the time when it was given; that is, executed. Grounds whereon to proceed; facts from which to draw a conclusion.

DATE. The specification or mention, in a written instrument, of the time (day, month and year) when it was made. Also the time so specified. Interior Linseed Co. v. Becker-Moore Paint Co., 273 Mo. 433, 202 S.W. 566, 569; In re Carpenter's Estate, 172 Cal. 268, 156 P. 464, 465, L.R.A.1916E, 498; State v. Beckley, 192 Wis. 367, 212 N.W. 792, 793; Heller v. Sweeney, 101 N.J.Eq. 150, 135 A. 264, 265.

The word is derived from the Latin word "datum" meaning given and is defined as the time given or specified—in some way ascertained and fixed. The time when an instrument was made, acknowledged, delivered or recorded; the clause or memorandum which specifies that fact; and the time from which its operation is to be reckoned. In re Irvine's Estate, 114 Mont. 577, 139 P.2d 489, 490, 491, 47 A.L.R. 882.

That part of a deed or writing which expresses the day of the month and year in which it was made or given. 2 Bl.Comm. 304; Tomlins.

The primary signification of date is not time in the abstract, nor time taken absolutely, but the time given or specified; time in some way ascertained and fixed. When we speak of the date of a deed, date of issue of a bond or date of a policy, we do not mean the time when it was actually executed, but the time of its execution, as given or stated in the deed itself. The date of an item, or of a charge in a book-account, is not necessarily the time when the article charged was, in fact, furnished, but rather the time given or set down in the account, in connection with such charge. And so the expression "the date of the last work done, or materials furnished," in a mechanic's lien law, may be taken, in the absence of anything in the act indicating a different intention, to mean the time when such work was done or materials furnished, as specified in the plaintiff's written claim. Bement v. Manufacturing Co., 32 N.J.Law, 513; Mutual Life Ins. Co. of New York v. Hurni Packing Co., 263 U.S. 167, 44 S.Ct. 90, 68 L.Ed. 235, 31 A.L.R. 102; Mutual Life Ins. Co. of New York v. Hurni Packing Co., C.C.A.Iowa, 280 F. 18, 20; Turner v. Roseberry Irr. Dist., 33 Idaho, 746, 198 P. 465, 467.

DATE CERTAINE. In French law. A deed is said to have a date certaine (fixed date) when it has been subjected to the formality of regis-

DAUPHIN. In French law. The title of the eldest sons of the kings of France. Disused since 1830.

DAY. 1. A period of time consisting of twenty-four hours and including the solar day and the night. Co. Litt. 135a; Fox v. Abel, 2 Conn. 541.

2. The period of time during which the earth makes one revolution on its axis. Long v. City of Wichita Falls, 142 Tex. 202, 176 S.W.2d 936, 938, 939.

4. The whole or any part of period of 24 hours from midnight to midnight. Talbott v. Caudill, 248 Ky. 146, 58 S.W.2d 385.

5. That portion of time during which the sun is above the horizon, and, in addition, that part of the morning and evening during which there is sufficient light for the features of a man to be reasonably discerned. 3 Inst. 63; Nicholls v. State, 112 N.E. 136, 112 N.E. 136, 112 N.E. 137, 112 N.E. 137, First National Bank v. Burkhardt, 100 U.S. 686, 25 L. Ed. 766.

Astronomical Day

The period of twenty-four hours beginning and ending at noon.

Artificial Day

The time between the rising and setting of the sun; that is, day or daytime as distinguished from night.

Calendar Days

See Calendar.

Civil Day

The solar day, measured by the diurnal revolution of the earth, and denoting the interval of time which elapses between the successive transits of the sun over the same hour circle, so that the "civil day" commences and ends at midnight. Pedersen v. Eugster, D.C.La., 14 F. 422.

Clear Days

See Clear.

Common Day

In old English practice. An ordinary day in court. Cowell; Termes de la Ley.

Judicial Day

Juridical Day

A day proper for the transaction of business in court; one on which the court may lawfully sit, excluding Sundays and some holidays.

Law Day

The day prescribed in a bond, mortgage, or defeasible deed for payment of the debt secured thereby, or, in default of payment, the forfeiture of the property mortgaged. But this does not now occur until foreclosure. Ward v. Lord, 100 Ga. 407, 28 S.E. 446; Kortright v. Cady, 21 N.Y. 345, 78 Am.Rep. 145.

Legal Day

Natural Day

Properly the period of twenty-four hours from midnight to midnight. Co.Litt. 135; Fox v. Abel, 2 Conn. 541; People v. Hatch, 33 Ill. 137. Though sometimes taken to mean the daytime or time between sunrise and sunset. In re Ten Hour Law, 24 R.I. 603, 54 A. 602, 61 L.R.A. 612.
DAY

Non-judicial Day

One on which process cannot ordinarily issue or be served or returned and on which the courts do not ordinarily sit. Whitney v. Blackburn, 17 Or. 564, 21 P. 874, 11 Am.St.Rep. 857. More properly "non-judicial day."

Solar Day

A term sometimes used as meaning that portion of the day when the sun is above the horizon, but properly it is the time between two complete (apparent) revolutions of the sun, or between two consecutive positions of the sun over any given terrestrial meridian, and hence, according to the usual method of reckoning, from noon to noon at any given place.

DAY-BOOK. A tradesman's account book; a book in which all the occurrences of the day are set down. It is usually a book of original entries.

DAY CERTAIN. A fixed or appointed day; a specified particular day; a day in term. Regina v. Conyers, 8 Q.B. 991.

DAY FIXED FOR TRIAL. Has been held to mean return day of summons or any later day to which trial is adjourned and on which it is actually held. Okin v. Shafman, N.J., 11 N.J.Misc. 462, 166 A. 730.

DAY IN COURT. The time appointed for one whose rights are called judicially in question, or liable to be affected by judicial action, to appear in court and be heard in his own behalf. This phrase, as generally used, means not so much the time appointed for a hearing as the opportunity to present one’s claims or rights in a proper forensic hearing before a competent tribunal. See Ferry v. Car Wheel Co., 71 Vt. 457, 45 A. 1035, 76 Am.St.Rep. 782.

A litigant has his "day in court" when he has been duly cited to appear and has been afforded an opportunity to appear and to be heard. Cohen v. City of Houston, Tex.Civ.App., 185 S.W.2d 450, 452; In re Hampton's Estate, 55 Cal.App.2d 543, 131 P.2d 565, 573; State ex rel. Allstate Ins. Co. v. Bowen, 130 Ohio St. 347, 199 N.E. 355, 363.

DAY OF ATONEMENT. See Yom Kippur.

DAYERIA. A dairy. Cowell.

DAYLIGHT. That portion of time before sunrise, and after sunset, which is accounted part of the day, (as distinguished from night,) in defining the offense of burglary. 4 Bl.Comm. 224; Cro. Jac. 106.

DAY-RULE, or DAY-WRIT. In English law. A permission granted to a prisoner to go out of prison, for the purpose of transacting his business, as to hear a case in which he is concerned at the assizes, etc. Abolished by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 22, § 12.

DAYS IN BANK. (L. Lat. dies in banco,) In practice. Certain stated days in term appointed for the appearance of parties, the return of process, etc., originally peculiar to the court of common pleas, or bench, (bank,) as it was anciently called. 3 Bl.Comm. 277.

By the common law, the defendant is allowed three full days in which to make his appearance in court, exclusive of the day of appearance or return-day named in the writ; 3 Bl.Comm. 278. Upon his appearance, time is usually granted him for pleading; and this is called giving him day, or, as it is more familiarly expressed, a continuance. 3 Bl.Comm. 316. When the suit is ended by discontinuance or by judgment for the defendant, he is discharged from further attendance, and is said to go thereof sine die, without day. See Continuance.

DAYS OF GRACE. A number of days allowed, as a matter of favor or grace, to a person who has to perform some act, or make some payment, after the time originally limited for the purpose has elapsed. In old practice. Three days allowed to persons summoned in the English courts, beyond the day named in the writ, to make their appearance; the last day being called the "quarto die post." 3 Bl.Comm. 278. In mercantile law. A certain number of days (generally three) allowed to the maker or acceptor of a bill, draft, or note, in which to make payment, after the expiration of the time expressed in the paper itself. Originally these days were granted only as a matter of grace or favor, but the allowance of them became an established custom of merchants, and was sanctioned by the courts, (and in some cases prescribed by statute,) so that they are now demandable as of right. Bell v. Bank, 115 U.S. 373, 6 S.Ct. 105, 29 L.Ed. 409; Renner v. Bank, 9 Wheat. 581, 6 L.Ed. 166.

DAYSMAN. An arbitrator, umpire, or elected judge. Cowell.

DAYTIME. The time during which there is the light of day, as distinguished from night or nighttime. That portion of the twenty-four hours during which a man's person and countenance are distinguishable. Trull v. Wilson, 9 Mass. 154; Rex v. Tandy, 1 Car. & P. 297; Linnen v. Banfield, 114 Mich. 93, 72 N.W. 1; U. S. v. Syrek, D.C.Mass., 290 F. 820, 821; Deese v. City of Lodi, 21 Cal.App. 2d 631, 69 P.2d 1005, 1008.

DAYWERE. In old English law. A term applied to land, and signifying as much arable ground as could be plowed up in one day's work. Cowell.

DE AMPLIORI GRATIA. Of more abundant or especial grace. Townsh. Pl. 18.

DE ANNUO REDITU. For a yearly rent. A writ to recover an annuity, no matter how payable, in goods or money. 2 Reeve, Eng. Law, 258.

DE ANNO BISSEXTILI. Of the bissextile or leap year. The title of a statute passed in the twenty-first year of Henry III., which in fact, however, is nothing more than a sort of writ or direction to the justices of the bench, instructing them how the extraordinary day in the leap year was to be reckoned in cases where persons had a day to appear at the distance of a year, as on the essoin de malo lecti, and the like. It was thereby directed that the additional day should, together with that which went before, be reckoned only as one, and so, of course, within the preceding year. 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, 266.

DE ANNUA PENSIONE, Breve. Writ of annual pension. An ancient writ by which the king, having a yearly pension due him out of an abbey or priory for any of his chaplains, demanded the same of the abbot or prior, for the person named in the writ. Reg. Orig. 265b, 307; Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 231 G.

DE DE AVERIS CAPTIS IN WITIERNAM. Writ for taking cattle in withernam. A writ which lay where the sheriff returned to a pluries writ of replevin that the cattle or goods, etc., were elooned, etc.; by which he was commanded to take the cattle of the defendant in withernam, (or reprisal,) and detain them until he could replevy the other cattle. Reg. Orig. 82; Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 73, E. F. See Withernam.

DE AVERUS REPLEIANDIS. A writ to replevy beasts. 3 Bl. Comm. 149.
DE AVERIIS RETORNANDIS. For returning the cattle. A term applied to pledges given in the old action of replevin. 2 Reeve, Eng.Law, 177.

DE BANCO. Of the bench. A term formerly applied in England to the justices of the court of common pleas, or "bench," as it was originally styled.

DE BENE ESSE. Conditionally; provisionally; in anticipation of future need. A phrase applied to proceedings which are taken ex parte or provisionally, and are allowed to stand as well done for the present, but which may be subject to future exception or challenge, and must then stand or fall according to their intrinsic merit and regularity.

Thus, "in certain cases, the courts will allow evidence to be taken out of the regular course, in order to prevent the evidence being lost by the death or the absence of the witness. This is called 'taking evidence de bene esse,' and is looked upon as a temporary and conditional examination, to be used only in case the witness cannot afterwards be examined in the suit in the regular way." Hunt, Eq. 75; Haynes, Eq. 183; Mitt. Eq. Pl. 52, 149; Willis v. Bank of Hardinsburg & Trust Co., 160 Ky. 808, 170 S.W. 188, 189.

Examination de bene esse

A provisional examination of a witness; an examination of a witness whose testimony is important and might otherwise be lost, held out of court and before the trial, with the proviso that the deposition so taken may be used on the trial in case the witness is unable to attend in person at that time or cannot be produced.

DE BIEN ET DE MAL. L. Fr. For good and evil. A phrase by which a party accused of a crime anciently put himself upon a jury, indicating his entire submission to their verdict; also the name of the special writ of jail delivery formerly in use in England, which issued for each party accused of a crime anciently put himself upon a jury, indicating his entire submission to their verdict; also the name of the special writ of jail delivery formerly in use in England, which issued for each particular prisoner, of course. It was superseded by the general commission of jail delivery.

DE BIENS LE MORT. L. Fr. Of the goods of the deceased. Dyer, 32.

DE BONIS NON ADMINISTRATIS. Of the goods not administered. When an administrator is appointed to succeed another, who has left the estate partially unsettled, he is said to be granted "administration de bonis non;" that is, of the goods not already administered. McNair v. Howle, 123 S.C. 252, 116 S.E. 279, 285.

DE BONIS NON AMOVENDIS. Writ for not removing goods. A writ anciently directed to the sheriffs of London, commanding them, in cases where a writ of error was brought by a defendant against whom a judgment was recovered, to see that his goods and chattels were safely kept without being removed, while the error remained undetermined, so that execution might be had of them, etc. Reg.Orig. 131b; Termes de la Ley.

DE BONIS PROPRIIS. Of his own goods. The technical name of a judgment against an administrator or executor to be satisfied from his own property, and not from the estate of the deceased, as in cases where he has been guilty of a devastavit or of a false plea of plene administravit.

DE BONIS TESTATORIS, or INTESTATI. Of the goods of the testator, or intestate. A term applied to a judgment awarding execution against the property of a testator or intestate, as distinguished from the individual property of his executor or administrator. 2 Archb.Pr.K.B. 148, 149.

DE BONIS TESTATORIS AC SL (Lat. From the goods of the testator, if he has any, and, if not, from those of the executor.) A judgment rendered where an executor falsely pleads any matter as a release, or, generally, in any case where he is to be charged in case his testator's estate is insufficient. 1 Williams' Saund. 336b; Bac. Abr. "Executor," B, 3; 2 Archb.Pr.K.B. 148.

An ancient writ directed to the judge of a spiritual court, commanding him to deliver to a defendant a copy of the libel filed against him in such court. Reg. Orig. 58. The writ in the register is directed to the Dean of the Arches, and his commissary. Id.

DE CORONATORE ELIGENDO. Writ for electing a coroner. A writ issued to the sheriff in England, commanding him to proceed to the election of a coroner, which is done in full county court, the freeholders being the electors. Sewell, Sheriffs, 372.

DE CORPORE COMITATUS. From the body of the county at large, as distinguished from a particular neighborhood, (de vicineto.) 3 Bl.Comm. 360. Used with reference to the composition of a jury. State v. Kemp, 34 Minn. 61, 24 N.W. 349.

DE CUIJUS. Lat. From whom. A term used to designate the person by, through, from, or under whom another claims. Brant v. New Orleans, 41 La.Ann. 1098, 6 So. 793.

DE CURIA CLAUDENDA. An obsolete writ, to require a defendant to fence in his court or land about his house, where it was left open to the injury of his neighbor's freehold. 1 Crabb, Real Prop. 314; Rust v. Low, 6 Mass. 90.

DE CURSU. Of course. The usual, necessary, and formal proceedings in an action are said to be de cursu; as distinguished from summary proceedings, or such as are incidental and may be taken on summons or motion. Writs de cursu are such as are issued of course, as distinguished from prerogative writs.

DE CUSTODE ADMITTENDO. Writ for admitting a guardian. Reg. Orig. 93b, 198.

DE CUSTODIA TERRIE ET HZEREDIS, Breve. L. Lat. Writ of ward, or writ of right of ward. A writ which lay for a guardian in knight's service or in socage, to recover the possession and custody of the infant, or the wardship of the land and heir. Reg. Orig. 161b; Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 139, B; 3 Bl.Comm. 141.

DE DEBITO. A writ of debt. Reg. Orig. 139.

DE DEBITORE IN PARTES SECANDO. A writ which lay for a widow where no part of her dower had been assigned to her. It is not much used; but a form closely resembling it is sometimes used in the United States. 4 Kent, Comm. 63; Stearns, Real Act. 302; 1 Washb. Real Prop. 230.

DE DONIS. Concerning gifts, (or more fully, de donis conditionalibus, concerning conditional gifts.) The name of a celebrated English statute, passed in the thirteenth year of Edw. I., and constituting the first chapter of the statute of Westm. 2, by virtue of which estates in fee-simple conditional (formerly known as "dona conditionalia") were converted into estates in fee-tail and rendered inalienable, thereby strengthening the power of the nobles. See 2 Bl.Comm. 112.

DE DOTE ASSIGNANDA. Writ for assigning dower. A writ which lay for the widow of a tenant in capite, commanding the king's escheater to cause her dower to be assigned to her. Reg. Orig. 297; Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 263, C.

DE DOTE UNDE NIHIL HABET. A writ of dower which lay for a widow where no part of her dower had been assigned to her. It is not much used; but a form closely resembling it is sometimes used in the United States. 4 Kent, Comm. 63; Stearns, Real Act. 302; 1 Washb. Real Prop. 230.

DE EJECTIONE CUSTODIÆ. A writ which lay for a guardian who had been forcibly ejected from his wardship. Reg. Orig. 162.

DE EJECTIONE FIRMÆ. A writ which lay at the suit of the tenant for years against the lessor, reversioner, remainderman, or stranger who had himself deprived the tenant of the occupation of the land during his term. 3 Bl.Comm. 199. By a gradual extension of the scope of this form of action its object was made to include not only damages for the unlawful detainer, but also the possession for the remainder of the term, and eventually the possession of land generally. And, as it turned on the right of possession, this involved a determination of the right of property, or the title, and thus arose the modern action of ejectment.

DE ESC2ETA. Writ of escheat. A writ which a lord had, where his tenant died without heir, to recover the land. Reg. Orig. 164b; Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 143, 144, E.
DE ESCAMBIO MONET/E. A writ of exchange of money. An ancient writ to authorize a merchant to make a bill of exchange, (literas committorias facere.) Reg. Orig. 194.

DE ESSENDO QUIETUM DE TOLONIO. A writ which lay for those who were by privilege free of money. An ancient writ to authorize a merchant to make a bill of exchange, (literas committorias facere.) Reg. Orig. 258b.

DE ESSENIO DE MALO LECTI. A writ which issued upon an essoin of mensa et thoro, to recover her alimony or estoovers. 1 Bl.Comm. 441; 1 Lev. 6.

DE ESTOVERIIS HABENDIS. Writ for having estovers. A writ which lay for a wife divorced a mensa et thoro, to recover her alimony or estoovers. 1 Bl.Comm. 441; 1 Lev. 6.

DE ESTREPAMENTO. A writ which lay to prevent or stay waste by a tenant, during the pendency of a suit against him to recover the lands. Reg. Orig. 76b. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 60.

DE EU ET TRENE. L. Fr. Of water and whip of three cords. A term applied to a neife, that is, a bond woman or female villein, as employed in servile work, and subject to corporal punishment. Co. Litt. 25b.

DE EVE ET DE TREVES. A law French phrase, equivalent to the Latin de avo et de tritavo, descriptive of the ancestral rights of lords in their villeins. Literally, "from grandfather and from great-grandfather's great-grandfather." It occurs in the Year Books.

DE EXCOMMUNICATU APIENDO. A writ commanding the sheriff to arrest one who was excommunicated, and imprison him till he should become reconciled to the church. 3 Bl.Comm. 102. Smith v. Nelson, 18 Vt. 511.

DE EXCOMMUNICATU DELIBERANDO. A writ to deliver an excommunicated person, who has made satisfaction to the church, from prison. 3 Bl.Comm. 102.

DE EXCOMMUNICATU RECAPIENDO. Writ for retaking an excommunicated person, where he had been liberated from prison without making satisfaction to the church, or giving security for that purpose. Reg. Orig. 67.

DE EXCUSATIONIBUS. Concerning excuses. This is the title of book 27 of the Pandects, (in the Corpus Juris Civilis.) It treats of the circumstances which excuse one from filling the office of tutor or curator. The bulk of the extracts are from Modestinus.

DE EXECUTIOE FACIENDA IN WITHERNAMUM. Writ for making execution in withernam. Reg. Orig. 82b. A species of capias in withernam.

DE EXECUTIONE JUDICII. A writ directed to a sheriff or bailiff, commanding him to do execution upon a judgment. Reg. Orig. 18; Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 20.

DE EXONERATIONE SECTIE. Writ for exoneration of suit. A writ that lay for the king's ward to be discharged of all suit to the county court, hundred, leet, or court-baron, during the time of his wardship. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 158; New Nat. Brev. 352.

DE EXPENSIS CIVIUM ET BURGENSIUM. An obsolete writ addressed to the sheriff to levy the expenses of every citizen and burgess of parliament. 4 Inst. 46.

DE EXPENSIS MILITUM LEVANDIS. Writ for levying the expenses of knights. A writ directed to the sheriff for levying the allowance for knights of the shire in parliament. Reg. Orig. 191b, 192.

DE FACTO. In fact, in deed, actually. This phrase is used to characterize an officer, a government, a past action, or a state of affairs which must be accepted for all practical purposes, but is illegal or illegitimate. In this sense it is the contrary of de jure, which means rightful, legitimate, just, or constitutional. Thus, an officer, king, or government de facto is one who is in actual possession of the office or supreme power, but by usurpation, or without lawful title; while an officer, king, or governor de jure is one who has just claim and rightful title to the office or power, but has never had plenary possession of it, or is not in actual possession. 4 Bl.Comm. 77, 78. MacLeod v. United States, 229 U.S. 416, 33 S.Ct. 955, 57 L.Ed. 1260; Wheatley v. Consolidated Lumber Co., 167 Cal. 441, 139 P. 1057, 1059. So a wife de facto is one whose marriage is voidable by decree, as distinguished from a wife de jure, or lawful wife. 4 Kent, Comm. 36. But the term is also frequently used independently of any distinction from de jure; thus a blockade de facto is a blockade which is actually maintained, as distinguished from a mere paper blockade. 1 Kent, 44. As to de facto "Corporation," "Court," "Domicile," "Government," and "Officer," see those titles. In old English law it means respecting or concerning the principal act of a murder, which was technically denominated factum. See Fleta, lib. 1, c. 27, § 18.

DE FAIRE ECHELLE. In French law. A clause commonly inserted in policies of marine insurance, equivalent to a license to touch and trade at intermediate ports. American Ins. Co. v. Griswold, 14 Wend., N.Y. 491.
DE FALSO MONETA. Of false money. The title of the statute 27 Edw. I. ordaining that persons importing certain coins, called "pollowards," and "crokards," should forfeit their lives and everything they could forfeit. 2 Reeve, Eng.Law, 228, 229.

DE FALSO JUDICIO. Writ of false judgment. An old writ which lay in cases where a person's conduct and reputation were impeached.

DE GRATIA. Of grace or favor, by favor. De speciali gratia, of special grace or favor.

DE GRATIA SPECIAL! CERTA SCIENTIA ET MERO MOTU, TALIS CLAUSULA NON VALET IN HIS IN QUIBUS PRIESUMITUR PRINCIPEM ESSE IGNORANTEM. 1 Coke, 53. The clause "of our special grace, certain knowledge, and mere motion," is of no avail in those things in which it is presumed that the prince was ignorant.

DE GROSSIS ARBORIBUS DECEIVE NON DABUNTUR SED DE SYLVIA GEDUA DECIMI MERO MOTU, TALIS CLAUSULA NON VALET. Of whole trees, tithes are not given; but of wood cut to be used, tithes are given.

DE HIERED DE RAPTO ET ABDUCTO. Writ concerning an heir ravished and carried away. A writ which anciently lay for a lord who, having by right the wardship of his tenant under age could not obtain his body, the same being carried away by another person. Reg.Orig. 163; Old Nat.Brev. 93.

DE HIEREDE DELIBERANDO ILLI QUI HABET CUSTODIAM TERRIE. Writ for delivering an heir to him who has wardship of the land. A writ directed to the sheriff, to require one that had the body of him that was ward to another to deliver him to the person whose ward he was by reason of his land. Reg.Orig. 161.

DE HIEREDE TERRIE RESPECTUANDO. A writ for resiping or postponing homage. Fitzh.Nat.Brev. 269, A.

DE HOMINE CAPTO IN WITHERNAM. (Lat. For taking a man out of prison, or out of the custody of a private person, upon giving security to the sheriff that the man shall be forthcoming to answer any charge against him. Fitzh.Nat.Brev. 269; 4 Bl.Comm. 46. See Ha retico Comburendo.

DE HOMINE CAPTO IN WITHERNAM. (Lat. For taking a man who had carried away a bondman or bondwoman into another country beyond the reach of a writ of replevin.

DE HOMINE REPLEGIANDO. (Lat. For replying to a writ of replevis; or replying to a man out of prison, or out of the custody of a private person, upon giving security to the sheriff that the man shall be forthcoming to answer any charge against him. Fitzh.Nat.Brev. 66; 3 Bl. Comm. 129. This writ has been superseded almost wholly, in modern practice, by that of habeas corpus; but it is still used, in some of the states, in an amended and altered form. See 1 Kent, Comm. 404n; 34 Me. 136.

DE IDENTITATE NOMINIS. A writ which lay for one arrested in a personal action and cornmitted to prison under a mistake as to his identity, the proper defendant bearing the same name. Reg.Orig. 194.

DE IDIOTA INQUIRENDO. An old common-law writ, long obsolete, to inquire whether a man be an idiot or not. 2 Steph.Comm. 509.

DE HS QUI PONENDI SUNT IN ASSISI. Of those who are to be put on assises. The title of a statute passed 21 Edw. I. defining the qualifications of jurors. Crabb, Eng.Law, 167, 189; 2 Reeve, Eng.Law, 184.

DE INCREMENTO. Of increase; in addition. Costs de incremento, or costs of increase, are the costs adjudged by the court in civil actions, in addition to the damages and nominal costs found by the jury. Gilb.Com.Pl. 260.

DE INFIRMITATE. Of infirmity. The principal essoin in the time of Glanville; afterwards called "de ma/4f." 1 Reeve, Eng.Law, 115. See De Malo; Essoin.

DE INGRESSO. A writ of entry. Reg.Orig. 227b, et seq.

DE INJURIA. Of [his own] wrong. In the technical language of pleading, a replication de injuria is one that may be made in an action of tort where the defendant has admitted the acts complained of, but alleges, in his plea, certain new matter by way of justification or excuse; by this replication the plaintiff avers that the defendant committed the grievances in question "of his own wrong, and without any such cause," or motive or excuse, as that alleged in the plea, (de injuria sua propria absque tali causa;) or, admitting part of the matter pleaded, "without the rest of the cause" alleged, (absque residuo causae.) In form it is a species of traverse, and it is frequently used when the pleading of the defendant, in answer to which it is directed, consists merely of matter of excuse of the alleged trespass, grievance, breach of contract, or other cause of action. Its comprehensive character in putting in issue all the material facts of the defendant's plea has also obtained for it the title of the general replication. Holthouse.

DE INOFFICIOSO TESTAMENTO. Concerning an inofficious or undutiful will. A title of the civil law. Inst. 2, 18.

DE INTEGRO. Anew; a second time. As it was before.

DE INTRUSIONE. A writ of intrusion; where a stranger entered after the death of the tenant, to the injury of the reversioner. Reg.Orig. 233b.

DE JACTURA EVITANDA. For avoiding a loss. A phrase applied to a defendant, as de lucro cap-tando is to a plaintiff. Jones v. Sevier, 1 Litt., Ky., 51, 13 Am.Dec. 218.

DE JUDAIUSMO, STATUTUM. The name of a statute passed in the reign of Edward I. which enacted severe and arbitrary penalties against the Jews.

DE JUDICATO SOLVENDO. For payment of the amount adjudged. A term applied in the Scotch law to bail to the action, or special bail.

DE JUDICIIIS. Of judicial proceedings. The title of the second part of the Digests or Pandects, including the fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth, tenth, and eleventh books. See Dig. Procem. § 3.

DE JUDICIO SISTI. For appearing in court. A term applied in the Scotch and admiralty law, to bail for a defendant's appearance.

DE JURE. Of right; legitimate; lawful; by right and just title. In this sense it is the contrary of de facto, {which see.} It may also be contrasted with de gratia, in which case it means "as a matter of right," as de gratia means "by grace or favor." Again it may be contrasted with de cequitate; here meaning "by law," as the latter means "by equity." See Government.

DE JURE DECIMARUM, ORIGINEM DUCENS DE JURE PATRONATUS, TUNC COGNITIO SPECTAT AT LEGEM CIVILEM, e., COMMUN. EM. Godb. 63. With regard to the right of tithes, deducing its origin from the right of the patron, then the cognizance of them belongs to the civil law; that is, the common law.

DE JURE JUDICIS, DE FACTO JURATORES, RESPONDENT. The judges find the law, the jury the facts. See Co.Litt. 295; Broom, Max. 99.

DE LA PLUS BEALE, or BELLE. L. Fr. Of the most fair. A term applied to a species of dower, which was assigned out of the fairest of the husband's tenements. Litt. § 48. See Dower de la Plus.Belle.

DE LATERE. From the side; on the side; collaterally; of collaterals. Cod. 5, 5, 6.

DE LEGATIS ET FIDEI COMMISSIS. Of legacies and trusts. The name of a title of the Pandects. Dig. 30.

DE MAJORI ET MINORI NON VARIANT JURA. Concerning greater and less laws do not vary. 2 Vern. 552.

DE MALO. Of illness. This phrase was frequently used to designate several species of essoin, (q. v.,) such as de malo lecti, of illness in bed; de malo veniendi, of illness (or misfortune) in coming to the place where the court sat; de malo vilece, of illness in the town where the court sat.

DE MANUCAPTIONE. Writ of manucaption, or mainprise. A writ which lay for one who, being taken and imprisoned on a charge of felony, had offered bail, which had been refused; requiring the sheriff to discharge him on his finding sufficient mainpernors or bail. Reg.Orig. 268b; Fitzh. Nat.Brev. 249, G.

DE MANUTENENDO. Writ of maintenance. A writ which lay against a person for the offense of maintenance. Reg.Orig. 189, 182b.

DE MEDIETATE LINGULE. Of the half tongue; half of one tongue and half of another. This phrase describes that species of jury which, at common law, was allowed in both civil and criminal cases where one of the parties was an alien, not speaking or understanding English. It was composed of six English denizens or natives and six of the alien’s own countrymen.

DE MEDIO. A writ in the nature of a writ of right, which lay where upon a subinfeudation the mesne (or middle) lord suffered his under-tenant or tenant paravail to be distrainted upon by the lord paramount for the rent due him from the mesne lord. Booth, Real Act, 136.

DE MELIORIBUS DAMNIS. Of or for the better damages. A term used in practice to denote the election by a plaintiff against which of several defendants (where the damages have been assessed separately) he will take judgment. 1 Arch. Pr.K.B. 219; Knickerbacker v. Colver, 8 Cow., N.Y., 111.

Judgment de melioribus damnis (of, or for, the better damages). Where, in an action against several persons for a joint tort, the jury by mistake sever the damages by giving heavier damages against one defendant than against the others, the plaintiff may cure the defect by taking judgment for the greater damages (de melioribus damnis) against that defendant, and entering a nolle prosequi (q. v.) against the others. Sweet.

DE MINIMIS NON CURAT LEX. The law does not care for, or take notice of, very small or trifling matters. The law does not concern itself about trifles. Cro.Eliz. 353. Thus, error in calculation of a fractional part of a penny will not be regarded. Hob. 88. So, the law will not, in general, notice the fraction of a day. Broom, Max. 142.

DE MINIS. Writ of threats. A writ which lay where a person was threatened with personal violence, or the destruction of his property, to compel the offender to keep the peace. Reg.Orig. 88b, 89; Fitzh.Nat.Brev. 79, G, 80.

DE MITTENDO TENOREM RECORD!. A writ to send the tenor of a record, or to exemplify it under the great seal. Reg.Orig. 220b.

DE MODERATA MISERICORDIA CAPIENDA. Writ for taking a moderate amercement. A writ, founded on Magna Charta, (c. 14,) which lay for one who was excessively amerced in a court not of record, directed to the lord of the court, or his bailiff, commanding him to take a moderate amercement of the party. Reg.Orig. 86b; Fitzh. Nat.Brev. 75, 76.

DE MODO DECIMANDI. Of a modus of tithing. A term applied in English ecclesiastical law to a prescription to have a special manner of tithing. 2 Bl.Comm. 29; 3 Steph.Comm. 130.

DE WARRANTIA CHARTIE. Writ of warranty of charter. A writ which lay for him who was enfeoffed, with clause of warranty, in the charter of feoffment, and was afterwards impailed in an assise or other action, in which he could not vouch or call to warranty; in which case he might have this writ against the feoffor, or his heir, to compel him to warrant the land unto him. Reg. Orig. 157b; Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 134, D. Abolished by St. 3 & 4 Wm. IV, c. 27.

DE WARRANTIA DIET. A writ that lay where a man had a day in any action to appear in proper person, and the king at that day, or before, employed him in some service, so that he could not appear at the day in court. It was directed to the justices, that they should not record him to be in default for his not appearing. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 17, A; Termes de la Ley.

DEACON. In ecclesiastical law. A minister or servant in the church, whose office is to assist the priest in divine service and the distribution of the sacrament. It is the lowest degree of holy orders in the Church of England. 2 Steph. Comm. 660.

DEAD-BORN. A dead-born child is to be considered as if it had never been conceived or born; in other words, it is presumed it never had life, it being a maxim of the common law that mortus exitus non est exitus (a dead birth is no birth). Co. Litt. 29 b. See Marseillis v. Thalhimer, 2 Paige, Ch., N.Y., 35, 21 Am.Dec. 66; 4 Ves. 334. This is also the doctrine of the civil law. Dig. 50. 16. 129; La.Civ.Code, art. 28; Domat, liv. prel. t. 2, s. 1, nn. 4, 6.

DEAD FREIGHT. The amount paid by a charterer for that part of the vessel's capacity which he does not occupy although he has contracted for it. Gray v. Carr, L. R. 6 Q. B. 528; Phillips v. Rodie, 15 East 547.

When the charterer of a vessel has shipped part of the goods on board, and is not ready to ship the remainder, the master, unless restrained by his special contract, may take other goods on board, and the amount which is not supplied, required to complete the cargo, is considered dead freight. The dead freight is to be calculated according to the actual capacity of the vessel. 3 Chit.Com.Law 399; 2 Stark. 450; McCull.Com.Dic.

"Dead freight" is the compensation payable to the shipowner when the charterer has failed to ship a full cargo, and "freight" is recompense the shipowner is to receive for carrying the cargo into its port of discharge. Kish v. Taylor (1912) A.C. 604, 613, citing Carver's Carriage By Sea, par. 666.

DEAD LETTER. A term sometimes applied to an act that has become obsolete by long disuse.

DEAD LETTERS. Letters which the postal department has not been able to deliver to the persons for whom they were intended. They are sent to the "dead-letter office," where they are opened, and returned to the writer if his address can be ascertained.

DEAD MAN'S PART. In English law, that portion of the effects of a deceased person which, by the custom of London and York, is allowed to the administrator; being, where the deceased leaves a widow and children, one-third; where he leaves only a widow or only children, one-half; and, where he leaves neither, the whole. This portion the administrator was wont to apply to his own use, till the statute 1 Jac. II, c. 17, declared that the same should be subject to the statute of distributions. 2 Bl. Comm. 518; 2 Steph. Comm. 254; 4 Reeve, Eng.Law, 83. A similar portion in Scotch law is called "dead's part," (q. v.)
DEAD-PLEDGE. A mortgage, mortuum vadium.

DEAD RENT, In English law. A rent payable time, sometimes for the season. Hogan v. not in use are to remain uninterruptedly for a time, sometimes for the season.

DEAD STORAGE. The storage, especially of automobiles in public garages, where automobiles not in use are to remain uninterruptedly for a time, sometimes for the season. Hogan v. O’Brien, 123 Misc. 865, 206 N.Y.S. 831.

DEAD USE. A future use.

DEAD WIRE. One which never carries electricity, or which, at some particular time, is not charged with an electric current. City of Shawnee v. Sears, 39 Okl. 789, 137 P. 107, 110, 50 L.R. A.,N.S., 885.

DEAD’S PART. In Scotch law. The part remaining over beyond the shares secured to the widow and children by law. Of this the testator had the unqualified disposal. Bell; Stair, Inst. lib. iii. tit. 4, § 24; Paterson, Comp. §§ 674, 848, 902.

DEADHEAD. A term applied to persons other than the officers, agents, or employees of a railroad company who are permitted by the company to travel on the road without paying any fare therefor. Gardner v. Hall, 61 N.C. 21.

DEADLY FEUD. In old European law. A profession of irreconcilable hatred till a person is revenged even by the death of his enemy.

DEADLY WEAPON. Such weapons or instruments as are made and designed for offensive or defensive purposes, or for the destruction of life or the infliction of injury. Commonwealth v. Branham, 8 Bush (Ky.) 387. One likely to produce death or great bodily harm. People v. Fuqua, 58 Cal. 245; State v. Hedrick, 99 W.Va. 529, 130 S.E. 295, 298.

One which, from the manner used, is calculated or likely to produce death or serious bodily injury. Harris v. State, 72 Tex.Cr.R. 491, 162 S.W. 1150, 1151; Burgess v. Commonwealth, 176 Ky. 326, 195 S.W. 445.

Any weapon dirakerious to life, or with death which may be easily and readily produced. Parram v. Lemmon, 119 Kan. 323, 244 P. 227, 229, 44 A.L.R. 1500; People v. Dwyer, 324 Ill. 363, 155 N.E. 316, 317.

The term may denote any instrument so used as to be likely to produce death or great bodily harm, and hence may include an automobile, especially within the meaning of statutes pertaining to assault. Williamson v. State, 92 Fla. 980, 111 So. 124, 125, 53 A.L.R. 250. But an automobile, when used innocently or negligently so as to be likely to produce death or bodily injury, or to actually produce them without criminal liability, has been held not to be a deadly weapon within the meaning of the criminal law. People v. Cash, 326 Ill. 104, 157 N.E. 76, 79; State v. Clark, 196 Iowa, 1134, 196 N.W. 82, 84.

DEADLY WEAPON PER SE. A weapon which of itself is deadly or one which would ordinarily result in death by its use. Baylor v. State, 151 Tex. Cr.R. 365, 208 S.W.2d 558, 561.

DEADMAN. As applied to a lifting appliance, a piece of timber placed across an opening in the ground to which a snatch hook is attached. The Teddy, D.C.N.Y., 226 F. 498, 500.

DEAF AND DUMB. A man that is born deaf, dumb, and blind is looked upon by the law as in the same state with an idiot, he being supposed incapable of any understanding. 1 Bl. Comm. 304. See, however, Alexier v. Matzke, 151 Mich. 36, 115 N.W. 251, 123 Am.St.Rep. 255. Nevertheless, a deaf and dumb person may be tried for felony if the prisoner can be made to understand by means of signs. 1 Bish. Cr. L. § 395; Commonwealth v. Hill, 14 Mass. 207; State v. Harris, 53 N.C. 136, 78 Am.Dec. 272; 1 Houst.Cr.Rep. 291; Felts v. Murphy, 201 U.S. 123, 26 S.Ct. 366, 50 L.Ed. 689.

DEAFFOREST. See Disafforest.

DEAL, n. An arrangement to attain a desired result by a combination of interested parties; Gait v. Dunlap, Tex.Civ.App., 188 S.W. 1020, 1021; Ball v. Davenport, 170 Iowa 33, 152 N.W. 69, 71; the prime object being usually the purchase, sale, exchange of property for a profit; Chambers v. Johnston, 180 Ky. 73, 201 S.W. 488, 493. Also, an act of buying and selling; a bargain. Oregon Home Builders v. Montgomery Inv. Co., 94 Or. 349, 184 P. 487, 493.

A “deal” between two parties includes any transaction of any kind between them, and when applied to a transaction concerning a house or block, the term does not necessarily signify an agreement to sell or convey, for the agreement might be to rent or lease the property. Osborne v. Moore, 112 Tex. 361, 247 S.W. 498, 499.

The term includes one who carries on the business of selling goods, wares, and merchandise, manufactured by him at a store or warehouse apart from his own shop, or by others. Atlantic Refining Co. v. Van Valkenburg, 265 Pa. 456, 109 A. 208, 209.

A “dealer,” as in narcotics, is one who sells promiscuously,—one who is ready and willing to sell to anyone applying to purchase, if unaware that they are officers or under-cover men. Taylor v. U. S., C.C.A.Mo., 19 F.2d 813, 815.

For various definitions under particular statutes, see State v. Perkins, 88 Yt. 121, 92 A. 1, 2 (dealer in evergreen DEAL, v. To traffic; to transact business; to trade. See Borg v. International Silver Co., C.C.A. N.Y., 11 F.2d 147, 150. Also, to act between two persons, to intervene, or to have to do with. State v. Morro, 313 Mo. 114, 280 S.W. 697, 699.

To “deal” in a commodity, however, such as automobiles, within the meaning of a privilege tax statute, means something more than the making of an occasional sale in a municipality where the seller has no place of business, and no stock of automobiles on hand. City of Pascagoula v. Carter, 136 Miss. 750, 101 So. 687, 688.

As to dealing in futures, see Futures.

The term includes one who carries on the business of selling goods, wares, and merchandise, manufactured by him at a store or warehouse apart from his own shop, or by others. Atlantic Refining Co. v. Van Valkenburg, 265 Pa. 456, 109 A. 208, 209.

A “dealer,” as in narcotics, is one who sells promiscuously,—one who is ready and willing to sell to anyone applying to purchase, if unaware that they are officers or under-cover men. Taylor v. U. S., C.C.A.Mo., 19 F.2d 813, 815.

For various definitions under particular statutes, see State v. Perkins, 88 Yt. 121, 92 A. 1, 2 (dealer in evergreen DEALERS' talk. That picturesque and laudatory style affected by nearly every trader in setting forth the attractive qualities of the goods he offers for sale. Prince v. Brackett, Shaw & Lunt Co., 125 Me, 31, 130 A. 509, 511. The puffing of goods to induce the sale thereof; not regarded in law as fraudulent unless accompanied by some artifice to deceive the purchaser and throw off his guard or some concealment of intrinsic defects not easily discoverable. Kimball v. Bangs, 144 Mass, 321, 11 N.E. 113; Williams v. Fouche, 164 Ga, 311, 138 S.E. 580, 581.

Real estate dealer. One who, on his own account and as a business independent of that of another real estate agent, engages for a consideration to aid others, whether the owners of the property or their agents, in selling real estate which is offered for sale. Horsley v. Woodley, 12 Ga.App. 456, 78 S.E. 260, 261.

DEALINGS. Transactions in the course of trade or business; held to include payments to a bankrupt. Moody & M. 137; 3 Car. & P. 85.

DEAN. In English ecclesiastical law. An ecclesiastical dignitary who presides over the chapter of a cathedral, and is next in rank to the bishop. So called from having been originally appointed by the council of a bishop, to assist him with their advice in the religious and also in the temporal affairs of the see. 3 Co, 75; 1 Bla. Comm. 382; Co, Litt, 95; Spelman.

There are several kinds of deans, namely: Deans of chapters; deans of peculiaris; rural deans; deans in the colleges; honorary deans; deans of provinces.

DEAN AND CHAPTER. In ecclesiastical law. The council of a bishop, to assist him with their advice in the religious and also in the temporal affairs of the see. 3 Co, 75; 1 Bla. Comm. 382; Co, Litt 103, 300; Terms de la Ley; 2 Burn, Eccl, Law 120.

DEAN OF THE ARCHES. The presiding judge of the Court of Arches. He is also an assistant judge in the court of admiralty. 1 Kent, Comm, 371; 3 Steph. Comm. 727.

DEATH. The cessation of life; the ceasing to exist; defined by physicians as a total stoppage of the circulation of the blood, and a cessation of the animal and vital functions consequent thereon, such as respiration, pulsation, etc.

This is "natural death," in contradistinction to "civil death," and also, to "violent death." See those titles, infra.

Civil death. The state of a person who, though possessing natural life, has lost all his civil rights, and as to them, is considered as dead. Quick v. Western Ry. of Alabama, 207 Ala. 376, 92 So, 608, 609. At common law, the extinction of civil rights and relations, so that the property of a person declared civilly dead passes to his heirs as if dead in fact. Holmes v. King, 216 Ala. 412, 113 So. 274, 276.

The "civil death," spoken of in the books, is of two kinds: (1) Where there is a total extinction of the civil rights and relations of the party, so that he can neither take nor hold property, and his heirs succeed to his estate in the same manner as if he were really dead, or the estate is forfeited to the crown. (2) Where there is an incapacity to hold property, or to sue in the king's courts, attended with forfeiture of the estate to the crown. Of the first kind, are the cases of monks professed, and abjuration of the realm; all the other cases are of the second kind. Strictly speaking, there but two cases of civil death; those of a monk professed, and an abjuration of the realm. In re Erskine, C.C.A.Ind., 1 F.2d 149, 152. See, generally, Co, Litt. §§ 133, 199, note; Littleton §§ 200; 1 Bl. Comm. 132; Avery v. Everett, 110 N.Y. 317, 18 N.E. 148, 1 L.R.A. 264; In re Donnelly's Estate, 125 Cal. 417, 58 P. 61, 73 Am.St.Rep. 62.

Death-deed deed. In Scotch law. A deed made by a person while laboring under a distemper of which he afterwards died. Ersk. Inst. 3, 8, 96. A deed is understood to be in death-bed, if, before signing and delivery thereof, the grantor was sick, and never convalesced thereafter. 1 Forbes, Inst. pt. 3, b. 2, c. 4, tit. 1, § 1. But it is not necessary that he should be actually confined to his bed at the time of making the deed. Bell.

Death duty. A charge or toll which the state makes upon the right to transmit or to receive property on the death of the owner. In re Heck's Estate, 120 Or, 80, 250 P. 735, 736. The usual name in England for an inheritance tax.

Death warrant. A warrant from the proper executive authority appointing the time and place for the execution of the sentence of death upon a convict judicially condemned to suffer that penalty.

Death watch. A special guard set to watch a prisoner condemned to death, for some days before the time for the execution, the special purpose being to prevent any escape or any attempt to anticipate the sentence.

Natural death. A death which occurs by the unassisted operation of natural causes, as distinguished not only from "civil death," but also from "violent death" (q. v.)

Presumptive death. That which is presumed from proof of a long continued absence unexplained, from and unexplained. The general rule, as now understood, is that the presumption of the duration of life ceases at the expiration of seven years from the time when the person was last known to be living; and after the lapse of that period there is a presumption of death. Smith v. Knowlton, 11 N.H. 197; Chamb. Best Ev. 304, note, collecting the cases; 4 U.C.Q.B. 510; 1 Greenl. Ev. § 41; 5 B. & Ad. 86; Maley v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 258 Pa. 73, 101 A. 911, L.R.A.1918A, 563. In most of the states the subject is regulated by statute.
DEBET ET DETINET. (Lat. He owes and detains.) Words anciently used in the original writ, (and now, in English, in the plaintiff's declaration,) in an action of debt, where it was brought by one of the original contracting parties who personally gave the credit, against the other who personally incurred the debt, or against his heirs, if (q. u.,) specifying the amount and time when payable. See Act Cong. March 2, 1799, § 80, 1 St. at Large 687.

An instrument in use in some government departments, particularly in England, by which the government is charged to pay to a creditor or his assigns the sum found due on auditing his accounts. Brande; Blount.

A security for a loan of money issued by a public company, usually creating a charge on the whole or a part of the company's stock and property, though not necessarily in the form of a mortgage. They are subject to certain regulations as to the mode of transfer, and ordinarily have coupons attached to facilitate the payment of interest. They are generally issued in a series, with provision that they shall rank part passe in proportion to their amounts. See Bank v. Atkins, 72 Vt. 33, 47 A. 176; Cavanagh, Mon. Sec. 267; 56 L.J.R.Ch.D. 815; Brice, Ultra Vires (2d Ed.) 279.

A charge in writing on certain property, with the repayment at a time fixed, of money lent by a person therein named at a given interest.

Any instrument (other than a covering or trust deed) which either creates or agrees to create a debt in favor of one person or corporation, or several persons or corporations, or acknowledges such debt. Simonson, Debentures, 5.

A debenture is distinguished (1) from a mortgage which is an actual transfer of property, (2) from a bond which does not directly affect property, and (3) from a mere charge on property which is individualized and does not form part of a series of similar charges; Cay.Mon.Sec. 267, citing L.R. 10 Ch.D. 530, 681; 15 Ch.D. 465; 21 Ch. D. 762; L.R. 7 App.Cas. 673; Jones, Corp. B. & M. 1 32; 10 H.L.C. 191; L.R. 2 Ch.D. 337.

DEBENTURE INDENTURE. An indenture containing obligations not secured by a mortgage or other collateral; a key instrument in the process of long term debt financing for general business corporations. Its effect is to put the debenture-holder in substantially the same practical position as a bondholder secured by a first mortgage. See "Business Lawyer" (April 1966, pp. 678, 679, 680).

A debenture is distinguished (1) from a mortgage which is an actual transfer of property, (2) from a bond which does not directly affect property, and (3) from a mere charge on property which is individualized and does not form part of a series of similar charges; Cay.Mon.Sec. 267, citing L.R. 10 Ch.D. 530, 681; 15 Ch.D. 465; 21 Ch. DEBENTURE STOCK. A stock or fund representing money borrowed by a company or public body, in England, and charged on the whole or part of its property. An issue of stock usually irredeemable and transferable in any amount, not including a fraction of a pound.

The terminability and fixity in amount of debentures being inconvenient to lenders has led to their being in many cases superseded by debenture stock. Whart. Lex.

Debet esse finis litium. There ought to be an end of suits; there should be some period put to litigation. Jenk. Cent. 61.

DEBET ET DETINET. (Lat. He owes and detains.) Words anciently used in the original writ, (and now, in English, in the plaintiff's declaration,) in an action of debt, where it was brought by one of the original contracting parties who personally gave the credit, against the other who personally incurred the debt, or against his heirs, if (q. u.,) specifying the amount and time when payable. See Act Cong. March 2, 1799, § 80, 1 St. at Large 687.

An instrument in use in some government departments, particularly in England, by which the government is charged to pay to a creditor or his assigns the sum found due on auditing his accounts. Brande; Blount.

A security for a loan of money issued by a public company, usually creating a charge on the whole or a part of the company's stock and property, though not necessarily in the form of a mortgage. They are subject to certain regulations as to the mode of transfer, and ordinarily have coupons attached to facilitate the payment of interest. They are generally issued in a series, with provision that they shall rank part passe in proportion to their amounts. See Bank v. Atkins, 72 Vt. 33, 47 A. 176; Cavanagh, Mon. Sec. 267; 56 L.J.R.Ch.D. 815; Brice, Ultra Vires (2d Ed.) 279.

A charge in writing on certain property, with the repayment at a time fixed, of money lent by a person therein named at a given interest.

Any instrument (other than a covering or trust deed) which either creates or agrees to create a debt in favor of one person or corporation, or several persons or corporations, or acknowledges such debt. Simonson, Debentures, 5.

A debenture is distinguished (1) from a mortgage which is an actual transfer of property, (2) from a bond which does not directly affect property, and (3) from a mere charge on property which is individualized and does not form part of a series of similar charges; Cay.Mon.Sec. 267, citing L.R. 10 Ch.D. 530, 681; 15 Ch.D. 465; 21 Ch. DEBIT. A sum charged as due or owing. The term is used in book-keeping to denote the left page of the ledger, or the charging of a person or an account with all that is supplied to or paid out for him or for the subject of the account. Also, the balance of an account where it is shown that something remains due to the party keeping the account.

TURUM. A debt or obligation complete when contracted, but of which the performance cannot be required till some future period.

DEBITUM SINE BREVI. L. Lat. Debt without writ; debt without a declaration. In old practice, this term denoted an action begun by original bill, instead of by writ. In modern usage, it is sometimes applies to a debt evidenced by confession of judgment. The equivalent Norman-French phrase was "debit sans breve." Both are abbreviated to d. s. b.

DEBET. A sum of money due by certain and express agreement; as by bond for a determinate sum, a bill or note, a special bargain, or a rent reserved on a lease, where the amount is fixed and specific, and does not depend upon any subsequent valuation to settle it. 3 Bl.Comm. 154;
Hagar v. Reclamation Dist., 111 U.S. 701, 4 S.Ct.

Surety Co., 101 Or. 262, 199 P. 948, 951; Shultz v.

Tyler Co. v. Deutsche Dampfschifffahrts Gesellschaft Hansa, Bremen, Germany, D.C.Ohio, 276 F.
134, 136.

The word "debt," in the definition of a mortgage as a hypothecation or pledge of property as security for a debt, means a duty or obligation to pay, for the enforcement of which an action lies. Stollenwerck v. Marks & Gayle, 188 Ala. 587, 65 So. 1024, 1027, Ann.Cas.1917C, 981; Gibson v. Hopkins, 80 W.Va. 756, 93 S.E. 826, 827.

Standing alone, the word "debt" is as applicable to a sum of money which has been promised at a future day, as to a sum of money now due and payable. To distinguish between the two, it may be said of the former that it is a debt owing, and of the latter that it is a debt due. A sum of money which is certainly and in all events payable is a debt, without regard to the fact whether it be payable now or at a future time. A sum payable upon a contingency, however, is not a debt, or does not become a debt until the contingency has happened. People v. Arguello, 37 Cal. 524.

A "debt" is a specified sum of money owing to one person from another, including not only the obligation of the debtor to pay, but the right of the creditor to receive and enforce payment. Angola Brick & Tile Co. v. Millgrove School Tp., Steuben County, 73 Ind.App. 557, 127 N.E. 855, 856; Dewey v. Denson, 31 Ga.App. 352, 120 S.E. 805, 807.

A fixed and certain obligation to pay money or some other valuable thing or things, either in the present or in the future. Burke v. Boulder Milling & Elevator Co., 77 Colo. 230, 235 P. 574, 575.

In a still more general sense, that which is due from one person to another, whether money, goods, or services. Holman v. Hollis, 94 Fla. 614, 114 So. 254, 255; State v. State Board of Examiners, 74 Mont. 1, 238 P. 316, 323.

A "debt" is an obligation arising otherwise than by sentence by a court for a breach of the public peace or for crime. Ruggles v. State, 120 Md. 553, 87 A. 1080, 1084.

In a broad sense, any duty to respond to another in money, labor, or service; it may even mean a moral or honorary obligation, unenforceable by legal action. U. S. Sugar Equalization Board v. P. De Ronde & Co., C.C.A.Del., 7 F.2d 981, 984.

Also, sometimes, an aggregate of separate debts, or the total sum of the existing claims against a person or company. Thus we speak of the "national debt," the "bonded debt" of a corporation, etc.

The word "debt" has no fixed legal meaning; Electric Reduction Co. v. Lewellyn, C.C.A.Pa., 11 F.2d 493, 494; but takes shades of meaning from the occasion of its use and color from accompanying words; Morrow v. Hayes, 226 Mich. 301, 197 N.W. 554, 555.

The word is of large import, including not only debts by specialty, and debts of record, or judgments (Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. v. Johnson Shoe Co., 238 N.Y., 312, 110 A.2d 752, 755; Schooley v. Schooley, 184 Iowa 835, 169 N. W. 56, 57, 11 A.L.R. 110; Bronson v. Syverson, 88 Wash. 264, 152 P. 1039, 1040, L.R.A.1916B, 993; Rosenberg v. Rose-enberg, 152 Md. 49, 135 A. 840), but also obligations arising under simple contract, to a very wide extent; and in its popular sense includes all that is due to a man under any form of obligation or promise. McCrea v. First Nat. Bank, 162 Minn. 455, 203 N.W.290; Etna Ins. Co. v. Rob-erton, 126 Miss. 387, 88 So. 883, 890.

Synonyms

The term "demand" is of much broader import than "debt," and embraces rights of action belonging to the debtor beyond those which could appropriately be called "debts." In this respect the term "demand" is one of very extensive import. In re Denny, 2 Hill, N.Y., 223.

The word dues is equivalent to "debts," or that which is owing and has a contractual significance. State v. Mortg- age Security Co., 154 Minn. 453, 192 N.W. 348, 350.

"Debt" is not exactly synonymous with "duty." A debt is a legal liability to pay a specific sum of money; a duty is a legal obligation to perform some act. Allen v. Dickson, Minor, Ala., 120.

The words "debt" and "liability" are not necessarily synonymous. As applied to the pecuniary relations of parties, liability is a term of a broader significance than debt. Coulter Dry Goods Co. v. Wentworth, 171 Cal. 500, 153 P. 939, 940. Liability is responsibility; the state of one who is bound in law and justice to do something which may be enforced by action. This liability may arise from contracts either express or implied, or in consequence of torts committed. McElfresh v. Kirkendall, 36 Iowa 226. "Liability" ordinarily means an obligation which may or may not ripen into a debt. Irving Bank-Columbia Trust Co. v. New York Rys. Co., D.C.N.Y., 292 F. 429, 433. Yet "debt" may sometimes include various kinds of liabilities. See Allen v. Cosmopolitan Trust Co., 247 Mass. 234, 142 N. E. 100, 103; Carroll v. Bowling, 151 Md. 59, 133 A. 851, 854.

In General

Active debt. One due to a person. Used in the civil law.

Debt by simple contract. A debt or demand founded upon a verbal or implied contract, or upon any written agreement that is not under seal.

Debt by specialty or special contract. A debt due, or acknowledged to be due, by some deed or instrument under seal; as a deed of covenant or sale, a lease reserving rent, or a bond or obligation. E. L. Comm. 465; In re Harris, 101 N.J.Eq. 137 A. 215, 216; Keel v. Snyder, 51 Ohio St. 240, 37 N.E. 267, 23 L.R.A. 842; Marriott v. Thomp-son, Willes, 189.
Debt ex mutuo. A species of debt or obligation mentioned by Glanville and Bracton, and which arose ex mutuo, out of a certain kind of loan. Glan. lib. 10, c. 3; Bract. fol. 99. See Mutuum; Ex Mutuo.

Debt of record. A debt which appears to be due by the evidence of a court of record, as by a judgment or recognizance. 2 B1.Comm. 465.

Doubtful debt. One of which the payment is uncertain. Clef des Lois Romaines.

In Practice

The name of a common-law action, which lies to recover a certain specific sum of money, or a sum that can readily be reduced to a certainty. 3 B1.Comm. 154; 3 Steph.Comm. 461; 1 Tidd, Pr. 3; Drennen Motor Car Co. v. Evans, 192 Ala. 150, 68 So. 303; Bullard v. Bell, 1 Mass. 243, Fed.Cas.No. 2,121; U. S. v. Clafin, 97 U.S. 546, 24 L.Ed. 1082; Baum v. Tonkin, 110 Pa. 569, 1 A. 535.

It is thus distinguished from assumpsit, which lies as well where the sum due is uncertain as where it is certain, and from covenant, which lies only upon contracts evidenced in a certain manner.

It is said to lie in the debit and detinet, (when it is stated that the defendant owes and detains,) or in the detinet, (when it is stated merely that he detains.) Debt in the detinet for goods differs from detinue, because it is not essential in this action, as in detinue, that the specific property in the goods should have been vested in the plaintiff at the time the action is brought. Dyer, 24b.

Existing debt. See Existing Debt.

Fraudulent debt. A debt created by fraud. Such a debt implies confidence and deception. It implies that it arose out of a contract, express or implied, and that fraudulent practices were employed by the debtor, by which the creditor was defrauded. Howland v. Carson, 28 Ohio St. 628.

Hypothecary debt. One which is a lien upon an estate.

Judgment debt. See Judgment Debt.

Legal debts. Those that are recoverable in a court of common law, as debt on a bill of exchange, a bond, or a simple contract. Rogers v. Daniell, 8 Allen, Mass., 348; Guild v. Walter, 182 Mass. 225, 65 N.E. 68.

Liquid debt. One which is immediately and unconditionally due.

Mutual debts. Money due on both sides between two persons. Such debts must be due to and from same persons in same capacity. Dole v. Chatabriga, 82 N.H. 396, 134 A. 347, 348. Cross debts in the same capacity and right, and of the same kind and quality. Lippitt v. Thames Loan & Trust Co., 88 Conn. 185, 90 A. 369, 374.

Passive debt. A debt upon which, by agreement between the debtor and creditor, no interest is payable, as distinguished from active debt; i.e., a debt upon which interest is payable. In this sense, the terms “active” and “passive” are applied to certain debts due from the Spanish government to Great Britain. Wharton. In another sense of the wards, a debt is “active” or “passive” according as the person of the creditor or debtor is regarded; a passive debt being that which a man owes; an active debt that which is owing to him. In this meaning every debt is both active and passive,—active as regards the creditor, passive as regards the debtor.

Privileged debt. One which is to be paid before others in case a debtor is insolvent.

Public debt. That which is due or owing by the government of a state or nation. The terms “public debt” and “public securities,” used in legislation, are terms generally applied to national or state obligations and dues, and would rarely, if ever, be construed to include town debts or obligations; nor would the term “public revenue” ordinarily be applied to funds arising from town taxes. Morgan v. Cree, 46 Vt. 773, 14 Am.Rep. 640.

Pure debt. In Scotch law. A debt due now and unconditionally is so called. It is thus distinguished from a future debt,—payable at a fixed day in the future,—and a contingent debt, which will only become due upon the happening of a certain contingency.

Simple contract debt. One where the contract upon which the obligation arises is neither ascertained by matter of record nor yet by deed or special instrument, but by mere oral evidence the most simple of any, or by notes unsealed, which are capable of a more easy proof, and therefore only better than a verbal promise. 2 Bl.Comm. 466.

Solvent debts. In Pennsylvania, the “solvent debts” which a city may deduct from its gross indebtedness pursuant to Act April 20, 1874, P.L. 65, in ascertaining its borrowing capacity, are debts due it directly, payment of which it can enforce as one of its quick assets for the liquidation of any of its obligations. McGuire v. City of Philadelphia, 245 Pa. 287, 91 A. 622, 623.

Specialty debt. See Debt by Specialty or Special Contract, supra.

DEBTOR. A person to whom a debt is due; a creditor. 3 Bl.Comm. 18; Plowd. 543. Not used.

DEBTOR. One who owes a debt; he who may be compelled to pay a claim or demand. Anyone liable on a claim, whether due or to become due. Cozart v. Barnes, C.C.A.S.C., 240 F. 935, 938.

The term may be used synonymously with “obligor,” “mortgagor,” and the like. McDuffie v. Faulk, 214 Ala. 221, 107 So. 61, 62.

Common Debtor

In Scotch law. A debtor whose effects have been arrested by several creditors. In regard to these creditors, he is their common debtor, and by this term is distinguished in the proceedings that take place in the competition. Bell
Debtor's Act 1869

Debtor's Summons

In English law. A summons issuing from a court having jurisdiction in bankruptcy, upon the creditor proving a liquidated debt of not less than 150, which he has failed to collect after reasonable effort, stating that if the debtor fail, within one week if a trader, and within three weeks if a non-trader, to pay or compound for the sum specified, a petition may be presented against him praying that he may be adjudged a bankrupt. Bankruptcy Act 1869, § 7; Robs.Bankr.; Mozley & Whitley.

DECALOGUE. The ten commandments which, according to Exodus XX, 1-18, were given by God to Moses. The Jews called them the "Ten Words," hence the name.

Also (and in this sense sometimes spelled Deccania, or Decana), a town or tithing, consisting originally of ten families of freeholders. Ten tithings compose a hundred. 1 Bla.Comm. 114; Medley, Orig.Illus.Eng.Const.Hist.

DECANIA. The office, jurisdiction, territory, or command of a decanus, or dean. Spelman.

DECANUS.

In Ecclesiastical and Old European Law

An officer having supervision over ten; a dean. A term applied not only to ecclesiastical, but to civil and military, officers. Decanus monasticus; a monastic dean, or dean of a monastery; an officer over ten monks. Decanus in majori ecclesie; dean of a cathedral church, presiding over ten prebendaries. Decanus episcopi; a bishop's or rural dean, presiding over ten clerks or parishes. Decanus friborgi; dean of a friborg. An officer among the Saxons who presided over a friborg, tithing, decennary, or association of ten inhabitants; otherwise called a "tithing man," or "bors-holder," his duties being those of an inferior judicial officer. Du Cange; Spelman, Gloss.; Calvinus, Lex. Decanus militaris; a military officer having command of ten soldiers. Spelman.

In Roman Law

An officer having the command of a company or "mess" of ten soldiers. Also an officer at Constantinople having charge of the burial of the dead. Nov.Jus. 43, 59; Du Cange.

DECAPITATION. The act of beheading. A mode of capital punishment by cutting off the head.

DECEASE, n. Death; not including civil death, (see Death.) In re Zeph's Estate, 50 Hun, 523, 3 N.Y.S. 460.

DECEASE, v. To die; to depart life, or from life. This has always been a common term in Scotch law. "Gif ane man deceasis." Skene.

DECEDENT. A deceased person, especially one who has lately died. Etymologically the word denotes a person who is dying, but it has come to be used in law as signifying any deceased person, testate or intestate. In re Zeph's Estate, 50 Hun, 523, 3 N.Y.S. 460.

DECEIT. A fraudulent and cheating misrepresentation, artifice, or device, used by one or more persons to deceive and trick another, who is ignorant of the true facts, to the prejudice and damage of the party imposed upon. People v. Chadwick, 143 Cal. 116, 76 P. 884; French v. Vining, 102 Mass. 132, 3 Am.Rep. 440; In re Post, 54 Hun, 634, 7 N.Y.S. 438.

A fraudulent misrepresentation or contrivance, by which one man deceives another, who has no means of detecting the fraud, to the injury and damage of the latter.

A subtle trick or device, whereunto may be referred all manner of craft and collusion used to deceive and defraud another by any means whatsoever, which hath no other or more proper name than deceit to distinguish the offense. [West Symb. § 68]; Jacob.

A "deceit" is either: (1) The suggestion, as a fact, of that which is not true, by one who does not believe it to be true; (2) the assertion, as a fact, of that which is not true, by one who has no reasonable ground for believing it to be true; (3) the suppression of a fact, by one who is bound to disclose it, or who gives information of other facts which are likely to mislead for want of communication of that fact; or (4) a promise, made without any intention of performing it. Civ.Code Cal. § 1710; Civ.Code St. § 293 (Comp.Laws Ia. § 707).

To constitute "deceit," the statement must be untrue, made with knowledge of its falsity or with reckless and conscious ignorance thereof, especially if parties are not on equal terms, made with intent that plaintiff act thereon or in a manner apparently fitted to induce him to act thereon, - and plaintiff must act in reliance on the statement in the manner contemplated, or manifestly probable, to his injury. Corley Co. v. Griggs, 192 N.C. 171, 134 S.E. 406, 407; Pain v. Kiel, C.C.A Mo., 288 F. 527, 529; See, also, Crossman v. Bacon & Robinson Co., 119 Me. 105, 109 A. 487, 489; Alpine v. Friend Bros., 244 Mass. 164, 138 N. E. 553, 554; Hood v. Wood, 61 Okl. 294, 161 P. 210, 213.

In Old English Law

The name of an original writ, and the action founded on it, which lay to recover damages for any injury committed deceitfully, either in the name of another, (as by bringing an action in another's name, and then suffering a nonsuit, whereby the plaintiff became liable to costs,) or by a fraudulent warranty of goods, or other personal injury committed contrary to good faith and honesty. Reg.Orig. 112-116; Fitzh.Nat.Brev. 95, E, 98.

Also the name of a judicial writ which formerly lay to recover lands which had been lost by default by the tenant in a real action, in consequence of his not having been summoned by the sheriff, or by the collusion of his attorney. Rosc.Real Act. 136; 3 B1.Comm. 166.

In General

Deceitful plea. A sham plea; one alleging as facts things which are obviously false on the face of the plea. Gray v. Gidiere, 4 Strob., S.C., 443.

DECEM TALES. (Ten such; or ten tales, jurors.) In practice. The name of a writ which issues in England, where, on a trial at bar, ten jurors are necessary to make up a full panel, commanding the sheriff to summon the requisite number. 3 B1.Comm. 364; Reg.Jud. 30b; 3 Steph.Comm. 602.

DECEMVIRI LITIBUS JUDICANDIS. Lat. In the Roman law. Ten persons (five senators and five equites) who acted as the council or assistants of the praetor, when he decided on matters of law. Hill Max. Civil Law, b. 3, c. 8. According to others, they were themselves judges, appointed by Augustus to act in certain cases. Calvinus, Lex.; Anthon, Rom.Ant.

DECENCY. Propriety of action, speech, dress, etc. Universal Film Mfg. Co. v. Bell, 100 Misc. 281, 167 N.Y.S. 124, 128.

DECENNA. In old English law. A tithing or decennary; the precinct of a frank-pledge; consisting of ten freeholders with their families. Spelman.

DECENNARIUS. Lat. One who held one-half a virgate of land. Du Cange. One of the ten freeholders in a decennary. Id.; Calvin. Decennier. One of the decennarii, or ten freeholders making up a tithing. Spelman; Du Cange, Decenna; 1 Bla.Comm. 114.

King Alfred, for the better preservation of the peace, divided England into counties, the counties into hundreds and the hundreds into tithings or decernaries: the inhabitants whereof, living together, were sureties or pledges for each other's good behavior.

DECEPTION. The act of deceiving; intentional misleading by falsehood spoken or acted. Smith v. State, 13 Ala.App. 399, 69 So. 402, 403.

DECEPTIONE. A writ that lieth properly against him that deceitfully doth anything in the name of another, for one that receiveth damage or hurt thereby. It is either original or judicial. Fitzh. N.B.

Decet tamen principem servare leges quibus ipse servatus est. It behooves, indeed, the prince to keep the laws by which he himself is preserved.

DECIDE. To "decide" includes the power and right to deliberate, to weigh the reasons for and against, to see which preponderate, and to be governed by that preponderance. Darden v. Lines, 2 Fla. 571; In re Milford & M. R. Co., 68 N.H. 570, 36 A. 545.

DECIES TANTUM (Ten times as much). The name of an ancient writ that was used against a juror who had taken a bribe in money for his verdict. The injured party could thus recover ten times the amount of the bribe.

DECIMZE. In ecclesiastical law. Tenths, or tithes. The tenth part of the annual profit of each living, payable formerly to the pope. There were several valuations made of these livings at different times. The decimze (tenths) were appropriated to the crown, and a new valuation established, by 26 Hen. VIII., c. 3. 1 Bl.Comm. 284. See Tithes.

Decimw debentur paroche. Tithes are due to the parish priest.

Decimce de decimatis solvi non debent. Tithes are not to be paid from that which is given for tithes.

Decimn non debent solvi, ubi non est annua renovatio; et ex annuatis renovantibus simi semei. Cro. Jac. 42. Tithes ought not to be paid where there is not an annual renovation, and from annual renovations once only.

DECIMATION. The punishing of every tenth soldier by lot, for mutiny or other failure of duty. This was termed "decimatio legionis" by the Romans. Sometimes only the twentieth man was punished, (vicesimatio,) or the hundredth, (centesimatio.)

DECIME. A French coin of the value of the tenth part of a franc, or nearly two cents.

DECINERS. Those that had the oversight and check of ten friburgs for the maintenance of the king's peace. Cunningham.

Decipi quam fallere est tutius. It is safer to be deceived than to deceive. Loft, 396.

DECISION. A popular rather than technical or legal word; a comprehensive term having no fixed, legal meaning. It may be employed as referring to ministerial acts as well as to those that are judicial or of a judicial character, Palmer Pub. Co. v. Smith, 130 Tex. 346, 109 S.W.2d 158, 159; such as decision of architects, Independent School Dist. No. 35, St. Louis County, v. A. Hedenberg & Co., 214 Minn. 82, 7 N.W.2d 511, 515; of county commissioners, Houser v. Olmstead, 57 S.D. 41,
DECISION

A decision determining the validity of a written instrument or passing on a controversy with respect to the interpretation thereof which bars subsequent suit on same cause of action. Eulenberg v. Torley's Inc., 56 Cal.App. 332, 228 P. 534, 535.

In Pleading

The first of the pleadings on the part of the plaintiff in an action at law, being a formal and methodical specification of the facts and circumstances constituting his cause of action. It commonly comprises several sections or divisions, called "counts," and its formal parts follow each other in this order: Title, venue, commencement, cause of action, counts, conclusion. The declaration, at common law, answers to the "libel" in ecclesiastical and admiralty law, the "bill" in equity, the "petition" in civil law, the "complaint" in code pleading, and the "count" in real actions. U.S. v. Ambrose, 108 U.S. 336, 2 S.Ct. 682, 27 L.Ed. 746; Railway Co. v. Nugent, 86 Md. 349, 38 A. 779, 39 L.R.A. 161; Dixon v. Sturgeon, 6 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 28; 1 Chit.Pl. 248; Co.Litt. 17 a, 303 a; Bacon, Abr. Plead. (B); Comyns, Dig. Plead. C. 7, Lawes, Pl. 35; Steph.Pl. 36; Leslie v. Mendelson, 302 Mich. 95, 4 N.W.2d 481, 484.

It may be general or special: for example, in debt on a bond, a declaration counting on the penal part only is general; one which sets out both the bond and the condition and assigns the breach is special; Gould, Pl. c. 4, § 50.

In Evidence

An unsworn statement or narration of facts made by a party to the transaction, or by one who has an interest in the existence of the facts recounted. Also, similar statements made by a person since deceased, which are admissible in evidence in some cases, contrary to the general rule, e.g., "dying declarations" (see that subtitle, infra).

In Practice

The declaration or declaratory part of a judgment, decree, or order is that part which gives the decision or opinion of the court on the question of law in the case. Thus, in an action raising a question as to the construction of a will, the judgment or order declares that, according to the true construction of the will, the plaintiff has become entitled to the residue of the testator's estate, or the like. Sweet.

In Scotch Practice

The statement of a criminal or prisoner, taken before a magistrate. 2 Alis. Crim. Pr. 555; 2 Hume 328; Arkl. Just. 70; Paterson, Comp. §1 952, 970.

In General

A "declaration" is a statement made out of court. Dawson v. Davis, 125 Conn. 330, 5 A.2d 703, 704.

Declaration against interest. Such declarations are evidence of the fact declared, and are therefore distinct from admissions, which amount to a waiver of proof. Jelser v. White, 183 N.C. 126, 110 S.E. 849, 850. They are statements which, when made, conflict with the pecuniary interest of the person making them, who need not have been a party, privy or witness to the suit in which they are offered. Elliott v. Lavier, 299 Mich. 373, 300 N.W. 116, 118.

Declaration in chief. A declaration for the principal cause of action. 1 Tidd, Pr. 419.
DECLARATION

Declaration of dividend. The act of a corporation in setting aside a portion of the net or surplus proceeds for distribution among the stockholders according to their respective interests. First Nat. Bank & Trust Co. v. Glenn, D.C.Ky., 36 F.Supp. 552, 554. See, also, Dividend.

Declaration of homestead. A creature of, and its validity depends upon, compliance with homestead statute. It is merely an act of the owner whereby he avails himself of, and secures, a right or privilege given him by statute; it is neither a conveyance nor a contract, and there is no transfer of, or change in, title, nor any agreement of transfer or change. U.S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Adloway, 173 Wash. 404, 23 P.2d 408. See, also, Homestead.

Declaration of independence. A formal declaration or announcement, promulgated July 4, 1776, by the congress of the United States of America, in the name and behalf of the people of the colonies, asserting and proclaiming their independence of the British crown, vindicating their pretensions to political autonomy, and announcing themselves to the world as a free and independent nation.

Declaration of intention. A declaration made by an alien, as a preliminary to naturalization, before a court of record, to the effect that it is his intention in good faith to become a citizen of the United States, and to renounce forever all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty whereof at the time he may be a citizen or subject. 8 U.S.C.A. § 731.

Declaration of trust. The act by which the person who holds the legal title to property or an estate acknowledges and declares that he holds the same in trust to the use of another person or for certain specified purposes. The name is also used to designate the deed or other writing embodying such a declaration. Griffith v. Maxfield, 66 Ark. 513, 51 S.W. 832. See Baker v. Baker, 123 Md. 32, 90 A. 776, 779 (bank deposit); Del Giorgio v. Powers, 27 Cal.App.2d 668, 81 P.2d 1006, 1012 (mining claim); Bingen v. First Trust Co. of St. Paul, C.C.A.Minn., 103 F.2d 260, 264 (letter).

Declaration of war. A public and formal proclamation by a nation, through its executive or legislative department, that a state of war exists between itself and another nation, and forbidding all persons to aid or assist the enemy.

Dying declarations. Statements made by a person who is lying at the point of death, and is conscious of his approaching dissolution, in reference to the manner in which he received the injuries of which he is dying, or other immediate cause of his death, and in reference to the person who inflicted such injuries or the connection with such injuries of a person who is charged or suspected of having committed them; which statements are admissible in evidence in a trial for homicide (and occasionally, at least in some jurisdictions, in other cases) where the killing of the declarant is the crime charged to the defendant. Shepard v. U.S., Kan., 290 U.S. 96, 54 S.Ct. 22, 78 L.Ed. 196; See generally Simons v. People, 150 Ill. 66, 36 N.E. 1019; Frier v. State, 92 Fla. 241, 109 So. 334, 335; Lucas v. Commonwealth, 153 Ky. 424, 155 S.W. 721, 722; Edwards v. State, 113 Neb. 698, 204 N.W. 780, 783; People v. Selknes, 309 Ill. 113, 140 N.E. 852, 854. Also Barsch v. Hammond, 110 Colo. 441, 135 P.2d 519, 521 (motorist); Waller v. Commonwealth, 178 Va. 294, 16 S.E.2d 808, 813 (shooting); State v. Brown, 209 Minn. 478, 296 N.W. 582, 586 (abortion).

Statements made by deceased while on operating table were inadmissible as "dying declarations" where there was destruction of part or document by deceased himself that a state of war was approaching. People v. Hall, 260 App.Div. 421, 22 N.Y.S.2d 973, 976.

Self-serving declaration. One made by a party in his own interest at some time and place out of court; not including testimony which he gives as witness at the trial. Brosnan v. Boggs, 101 Or. 472, 198 P. 890, 892.

DECLARATION OF LONDON. A declaration concerning the laws of naval war, agreed upon February 26, 1909, by the powers assembled at the London Naval Conference.

The preamble states that the Declaration was made in view of the desirability of an agreement upon the rules to be applied by the International Prize Court established by the Second Hague Conference. A preliminary provision states that it is agreed that the rules adopted "correspond in substance with the generally recognized principles of international law." The subjects dealt with by the Declaration include Blockade, Contraband, Unneutral Service, Enemy Character, Convoy, Search, and Compensation. Higgins, 538-613.

DECLARATION OF PARIS. The name given to an agreement announcing four important rules of international law effected between the principal European powers at the Congress of Paris in 1856. These rules are: (1) Privateering is and remains abolished; (2) the neutral flag covers enemy's goods, except contraband of war; (3) neutral goods, except contraband of war, are not liable to confiscation under a hostile flag; (4) blockades, to be binding, must be effective.

DECLARATION OF ST. PETERSBURG. A declaration made at St. Petersburg in 1868 on behalf of certain of the powers in relation to the prohibition of the use of explosive bullets in time of war.

DECLARATOR. In Scotch law. An action whereby it is sought to have some right of property, or of status, or other right judicially ascertained and declared. Bell.

DECLARATOR OF TRUST. An action resorted to against a trustee who holds property upon titles ex facie for his own benefit. Bell DECLARATORY. Explanatory; designed to fix or elucidate what before was uncertain or doubtful.

DECLARATORY ACTION. In Scotch law. An action in which the right of the pursuer (or plaintiff) is craved to be declared, but nothing claimed to be done by the defender (defendant.) Ersk. Inst. 5, 1, 46. Otherwise called an "action of declarator."

DECLARATORY JUDGMENT. One which simulates or performance from the defendant or opposing party. Brindley v. Meara, Ind., 209 Ind. 144, 198 N.E. 334, 335. It is distinguished from other actions in that it does not seek execution or performance from the defendant or opposing party.

DECLARATORY DEGREE. In practice. A binding declaration of right in equity without consequential relief.

DECLARATORY STATUTE. One enacted for the purpose of removing doubts or putting an end to conflicting decisions in regard to what the law is in relation to a particular matter. It may either be expressive of the common law, 1 Bl. Comm. 86; Gray v. Bennett, 3 Mete., Mass., 527; In re Un-garos's Will, 38 F. 497.

DECLARATION. To solemnly assert a fact before witnesses, e. g., where a testator declares a paper signed by him to be his last will and testament. Lane v. Lane, 95 N.Y. 498.

DECLARATION. To signify, to show in any manner.

DECLARATORY DECREE. In practice. A binding declaration of right in equity without consequential relief.

DECLARATORY PLEA. In English practice. The plea to the jurisdiction, on the ground that the judge is interested in the suit.

DECLINATOIRE. In French law. Pleas to the jurisdiction of the court; also of lis pendens, and of connexite, (q. v.).

DECLINATORY EXCEPTIONS are such dilatory exceptions as merely decline the jurisdiction of the judge before whom the action is brought.

DECLINATORY PLEA. In English practice. The plea of sanctuary, or of benefit of clergy, before trial or conviction. 2 Hale, P.C. 236; 4 Bl, Comm. 333. Now abolished. 6 & 7 Geo. IV, c. 28, § 6; Mozl. & W. Diet.; 4 Steph. Comm. 400, note; id. 436, note.

DECLINATURE. In Scotch practice, An objection to the jurisdiction of a judge. Bell.

DECLINE. A failing process, a tendency to a worse state; to become gradually impaired; a falling off or downward tendency. Exum v. Laub, C.C.A.Tex., 87 F.2d 73, 74; Buffalo County v. Phelps County, 129 Neb. 268, 261 N.W. 360.

DECOCTION. The act of boiling a substance in water, for extracting its virtues. The operation of boiling certain ingredients in a fluid for the purpose of extracting the parts soluble at that temperature. Also the liquor in which a substance has been boiled; water impregnated with the principles of any animal or vegetable substance boiled in it. Webster; Sykes v. Magone, C.C.N.Y., 38 F. 497.

In an indictment "decoction" and "Infusion" are ejusdem generic; and if one is alleged to have been administered, instead of the other, the variance is immaterial. 3 Camp. 74.

DECOCTOR. In the Roman law. A bankrupt; a spendthrift; a squanderer of public funds. Cal-vin.

DECOLLATIO. In old English and Scotch law. Decollation; the punishment of beheading. Fleta, lib. 1, c. 21, § 6.

DECONFES. In French law. A name formerly given to those persons who died without confession, whether they refused to confess or whether they were criminals to whom the sacrament was refused. Droit de -Canon, per M. l’Abbe Andre; Dupin, Gloss. to Loisel’s Institutes.

A decree, as distinguished from an order, is final, and is made at the hearing of the cause, whereas an order is interlocutory, and is made on motion or petition. Wherever an order may, in a certain event resulting from the direction contained in the order, lead to the termination of the suit in like manner as a decree made at the hearing, it is called a "decretal order." Brown.

A judgment at law, as distinguished from a decree in equity, was either simply for the plaintiff or for the defendant. There could be no qualifications or modifications. But such a judgment does not always touch the true justice of the cause or put the parties in the position they ought to occupy. This result was attained by the "decree" of a court of equity which could be so moulded, or the execution of which could be so controlled and suspended, that the relative duties and rights of the parties could be secured and enforced. Bisph. Eq. § 7.

The words "judgment" and "decree," however, are often used synonymously; Finnell v. Finnell, 113 Okl. 269, 230 P. 912, 913; especially now that the Codes have abolished the distinction between law and equity; Henderson v. Arkansas, 71 Okl. 253, 176 P. 751, 753. But of the two terms, "judgment" is the more comprehensive, and includes "decree." Coleman v. Los Angeles County, 180 Cal. 714, 182 P. 440, 441.

Decision of an administrative board though based on facts adduced on a hearing, Dal Maso v. Board of Com’rs of Prince George’s County, 182 Md. 200, 34 A.2d 464, 466, or rescript from reviewing court are not decrees. City of Boston v. Santosouso, 308 Mass. 189, 31 N.E.2d 564, 568.

Decrees in equity are either final or interlocutory. A final decree is one which fully and finally disposes of the whole litigation, determining all questions raised by the case, and leaving nothing that requires further judicial action. Sawyer v. White, 125 Me. 206, 132 A. 421, 422; Draper Corporation v. Stafford Co., C.C.A. Mass., 255 F. 554, 555; Burgin v. Sugg, 210 Ala. 142, 97 So. 216, 217. An interlocutory decree is a provisional or preliminary decree, which is not final and does not determine the suit, but directs some further proceedings preparatory to the final decree. It is a decree pronounced for the purpose of ascertaining matter of law or fact preparatory to a final decree. 1 Barb. Ch. Pr. 326, 327; Wooster v. Handy, C.C. N.Y., 23 F. 49, 56; Beebe v. Russell, 19 How. 283, 15 L.Ed. 668; Cornely v. Marckwald, 131 U.S. 159, 9 S.Ct. 744, 33 L.Ed. 117. Where something more than the ministerial execution of the decree as rendered is left to be clone, the decree is interlocutory, and not final, even though it settles the equities of the bill. Lodge v. Twell, 135 U.S. 232, 10 S.Ct. 745, 34 L.Ed. 153. The difficulty of exact definition is mentioned in McGourkey v. Ry. Co., 146 U.S. 536, 13 S.Ct. 170, 36 L.Ed. 1079. See, also, Keystone Manganese & Iron Co. v. Martin, 132 U. S. 91, 10 S.Ct. 32, 33 L.Ed. 275; Leyhe v. McNamara, Tex. Com. App., 243 S.W. 1074, 1076.

In French Law

Certain acts of the Legislature or of the sovereign which have the force of law are called "decrees"; as the Berlin and Milan decrees.

In Scotch Law

A final judgment or sentence of court by which the question at issue between the parties is decided.
In General

Consent decree. One entered by consent of the parties; it is not properly a judicial sentence, but is in the nature of a solemn contract or agreement of the parties, made under the sanction of the court, and in effect an admission by them that the decree is a just determination of their rights upon the real facts of the case, if such facts had been proved. Allen v. Richardson, 9 Rich.Eq., S.C., 53; Schmidt v. Mining Co., 28 Or. 9, 40 P. 1014, 52 Am. St.Rep. 759; Hodgson v. Vroom, C.C.A.N.Y., 266 F. 267, 268; Barnes v. American Fertilizer Co., 144 Va. 692, 130 S.E. 902, 911. It binds only the consenting parties; Myllius v. Smith, 53 W.Va. 173, 44 S.E. 542; and is not binding upon the parties thereto must be competent to contract. Consaer v. Wisniewski, 293 Ill.App. 251, 259. Parties thereto must be competent to contract. Consaer v. Wisniewski, 293 Ill.App. 529, 13 N.E.2d 93, 94.

Decree dative. In Scotch law. An order of a probate court appointing an administrator.

Decree nisi. A provisional decree, which will be made absolute on motion unless cause be shown against it. In English practice, it is the order made by the court for divorce, on satisfactory proof being given in support of a petition for dissolution of marriage; it remains imperfect for at least six months, (which period may be shortened by the court down to three,) and then, unless sufficient cause be shown, it is made absolute on motion, and the dissolution takes effect, subject to appeal. Wharton. It effects a conditional divorce, becoming absolute only upon the happening of a prescribed contingency. Grant v. Grant, 84 N.J.Eq. 81, 92 A. 791, 793.

Decree of constitution. In Scotch practice. A decree by which a debt is ascertained. Bell. In technical language, a decree which is requisite to found a title in the person of the creditor, whether that necessity arises from the death of the debtor or of the creditor. Id.

Decree of distribution. An instrument by which heirs receive property of a deceased; it is a final determination of the parties to a proceeding. Fischer v. Dolwig, 29 N.D. 561, 151 N.W. 431, 432; In re Bradford's Estate, 128 N.J.Eq. 372, 16 A.2d 268, 270.

Decree of forthcoming. In Scotch law. A decree made after an arrestment (q.v.) ordering the debt to be paid or the effects of the debtor to be delivered to the arresting creditor. Bell.

Decree of insolvency. One entered in a probate court, declaring the estate in question to be insolvent, that is, that the assets are not sufficient to pay the debts in full. Bush v. Coleman, 121 Ala. 548, 25 So. 569; Walker v. Newton, 85 Me. 458, 27 A. 347.

Decree of locality. In Scotch law. The decree of a teind court allocating stipend upon different heritors. It is equivalent to the apportionment of a tithe rent-charge.

Decree of modification. In Scotch law. A decree of the teind court modifying or fixing a stipend.

Decree of nullity. One entered in a suit for the annulment of a marriage, and adjudging the marriage to have been null and void ab initio. See Nullity.

Decree of registration. In Scotch law. A proceeding giving immediate execution to the creditor; similar to a warrant of attorney to confess judgment.

Deficiency decree. In a mortgage foreclosure suit, a decree for the balance of the indebtedness after applying the proceeds of a sale of the mortgaged property to such indebtedness. Commercial Bank of Ocala v. First Nat. Bank, 80 Fla. 685, 87 So. 315, 316.

For "Execution of decree," see Execution of Judgment or Decree.

DECREET. In Scotch law. The final judgment or sentence of a court.

DECREET ABSOLVITOR. A decree dismissing a claim, or acquitting a defendant. 2 Kames, Eq. 367.

DECREET ARBITRAL. An award of arbitrators. 1 Kames, Eq. 312, 313; 2 Kames, Eq. 367.

DECREET CONDEMNATOR. One where the court of sessions, (who are now in the place of the commissioners for the valuation of teinds,) determining the extent and value of the teinds. Bell.

DECREET CONDEMNATOR. One where the decision is in favor of the plaintiff. Ersk.Inst. 4, 3, 5.

DECREET OF VALUATION OF TEINDS. A sentence of the court of sessions, (who are now in the place of the commissioners for the valuation of teinds,) determining the extent and value of teinds. Bell.

DECREMENTUM MARIS. Lat. In old English law. Decrease of the sea; the receding of the sea from the land. Callis, Sewers, (53,) 65. See Reliction.

DECREPT. This term designates a person who is disabled, incapable, or incompetent, either from physical or mental weakness or defects, whether produced by age or other causes, to such an extent as to render the individual comparatively helpless in a personal conflict with one possessed of ordinary health and strength. Hall v. State, 16 Tex.App., 49 Am.Rep. 824; Lutz v. State, 147 Tex.Cr.R. 236, 170 S.W.2d 979, 980. The term includes a blind man. Lewing v. State, 135 Tex.Cr. R. 485, 121 S.W.2d 599, 600.

DECRETA. In the Roman law. Judicial sentences given by the emperor as supreme judge.

DECRETAL ORDER. A preliminary order that determines no question upon the merits and establishes no right. Electrical Research Products v. Vitaphone Corporation, 20 Del.Ch. 417, 171 A. 738.

DECRETALES BONIFACH OCTAVI. A supplemental collection of the canon law, published by Boniface VIII. in 1298, called, also, "Liber Sextus Decretalium," (Sixth Book of the Decretals.)

DECRETALES GREGORII NONI. The decretals of Gregory the Ninth. A collection of the laws of the church, published by order of Gregory IX. in 1227. It is composed of five books, subdivided into titles, and each title is divided into chapters. They are cited by using an X, (or extra;) thus "Cap. 8 X de Regulis Juris," etc.

DECRETALS. In ecclesiastical law. Letters of the pope, written at the suit or instance of one or more persons, determining some point or question in ecclesiastical law, and possessing the force of law, within the Roman Catholic Church. The decretals form the second part of the body of canon law.

This is also the title of the second of the two great divisions of the canon law, the first being called the "Decree," (decretum.)

DECRETO. In Spanish colonial law. An order emanating from some superior tribunal, promulgated in the name and by the authority of the sovereign, in relation to ecclesiastical matters. Schm.Civil Law, 93, note.

DECRETUM. In the Civil Law

A species of imperial constitution, being a judgment or sentence given by the emperor upon hearing of a cause (quod imperator cognoscens decrevit). Inst. 1, 2, 6.

In the Civil Law

A species of imperial constitution, being a judgment or sentence given by the emperor upon hearing of a cause (quod imperator cognoscens decrevit). Inst. 1, 2, 6.

In Canon Law

An ecclesiastical law, in contradistinction to a secular law, (lex.) 1 Mackeld.Civil Law, p. 81, § 93, (Kaufmann's note.)

DECRETUM GRATIANI. Gratian's decree, or decretum. A collection of ecclesiastical law in three books or parts, made in the year 1151, by Gratian, a Benedictine monk of Bologna, being the oldest as well as the first in order of the collections which together form the body of the Roman canon law. 1 Bl.Comm. 82; 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, 67.

DECROWNING. The act of depriving of a crown.

DECRY. To cry down; to deprive of credit. "The king may at any time decry or cry down any coin of the kingdom, and make it no longer current." 1 Bl.Comm. 278.

DECURIO. Lat. A decurion. In the provincial administration of the Roman empire, the decurions were the chief men or official personages of the large towns. Taken as a body, the decurions of a city were charged with the entire control and administration of its internal affairs; having powers both magisterial and legislative. See 1 Spence, Eq.Jur. 54.

DEDBANA. In Saxon law. An actual homicide or manslaughter.

DEDI. (Lat. I have given.) A word used in deeds and other instruments of conveyance when such instruments were made in Latin, and anciently held to imply a warranty of title. Deakins v. Hollis, 7 Gill & J., Md., 315.

DEDI ET CONCESSI. I have given and granted. The operative words of conveyance in ancient charters of feoffment, and deeds of gift and grant; the English "given and granted" being still the most proper, though not the essential, words by which such conveyances are made. 2 Bl.Comm. 53, 316, 317; 1 Steph.Comm. 164, 177, 473, 474.

DEDICATE. To appropriate and set apart one's private property to some public use; as to make a private way public by acts evincing an intention to do so.

DEDICATION. In real property law. An appropriation of land to some public use, made by the owner, and accepted for such use by or on behalf of the public. Harris v. City of St. Helens, 72 Or. 377, 143 P. 941, 943, Ann.Cas.1916D, 1073. A deliberate appropriation of land by its owner for any general and public uses, reserving to himself no other rights than such as are compatible with the full exercise and enjoyment of the public uses to which the property has been devoted. Longley v. City of Worcester, 304 Mass. 358, 24 N.E.2d 533, 537; Consolidated Realty Co. v. Richmond Hotel & Building Co., 253 Ky. 463, 69 S.W.2d 985. See Alden Coal Co. v. Challis, 200 Ill. 222, 65 N.E. 665 (streets in company owned village) ; Du Pont v. Miller, 310 Ill. 140, 141 N.E. 423, 425 (artificial waterway) ; Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Georgia R. & Banking Co., D.C.Ga., 227 F. 276, 285 (right of way for telegraph lines) ; Manning v. House, 211 Ala. 570, 100 So. 772, 774; Mebane v. City of Wynne, 127 Ark. 364, 192 S.W. 221,
In Copyright Law

The first publication of a work, without having secured a copyright, is a dedication of it to the public; that having been done, any one may republish it. Bartlett v. Crittenden, 5 McLean, 32, Fed.Cas.No.1,076; Deward & Rich v. Bristol Savings & Loan Corporation, C.C.A.Va., 120 F.2d 537, 540 (partial publication).

Where copyrighted lectures were not delivered to the general public, but only to paying audiences and classes, they were not abandoned or dedicated to the public. National Institute for Improvement of Memory v. Nutt, D.C. Comm., 28 F.2d 132, 134.

DEDICATION-DAY. The feast of dedication of churches, or rather the feast day of the saint and patron of a church, which was celebrated not only by the inhabitants of the place, but by those of all the neighboring villages, who usually came thither; and such assemblies were allowed as lawful. It was usual for the people to feast and to drink on those days. Cowell.

DEDIMUS ET CONCESSIMUS: (Lat. We have given and granted.) Words used by the king, or where there were more grantors than one, instead of dedi et concessi.

DEDIMUS POTESTATEM. (We have given power.) In English practice. A writ or commission issuing out of chancery, empowering the persons named therein to perform certain acts, as to administer oaths to defendants in chancery and take their answers, to administer oaths of office to justices of the peace, etc. 3 Bl.Comm. 447. It was anciently allowed for many purposes not now in use, as to make an attorney, to take the acknowledgment of a fine, etc.

In the United States, a commission to take testimony is sometimes termed a "dedimus potestatem." Budiccum v. Kirk, 3 Cranch, 293, 2 L.Ed. 444; Sergeant's Lessee v. Biddle, 4 Wheat. 508, 4 L.Ed. 627.

DEDIMUS POTESTATEM DE ATTORNO FACIENDO. In old English practice. A writ, issued by royal authority, empowering an attorney to appear for a defendant. Prior to the statute of Westminster 2, a party could not appear in court by attorney without this writ.

DEDITION. The act of yielding up anything; surrender.

DEDITTII. In Roman law. Criminals who had been marked in the face or on the body with fire or an iron, so that the mark could not be erased, and subsequently manumitted. Calvin.

DEDUCTIBLE. That which may be taken away or subtracted; an item which may be subtracted from income for tax purposes, such as a deductible debt. In re Hermann's Estate, 349 Pa. 230, 36 A.2d 804, 806; a deductible expense. Pacific Southwest Realty Co. v. McColgan, 53 Cal.App. 2d 549, 128 P.2d 85, 87; or; a deductible loss. Helvering v. Gordon, C.C.A.4, 134 F.2d 685, 689; Bicketstaff v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A. Ga., 128 F.2d 366, 367.

By Adverse User

A dedication may arise from an adverse exclusive use by the public under a claim of right with the knowledge, actual or imputed, and acquiescence of the owner. Carpenter v. City of Medina Improvement Club, 10 Wash.2d 44, 116 P.2d 272, 277, (park and recreation purposes).

Streets on platted land; Johnston v. Ruble, 211 Minn. 373, 1 N.W.2d 373, 374, 375; Clark v. State, 25 Ala.App. 467, 140 So. 178, 179.

By ordinary deeds, recorded plats not executed pursuant to statute or defectively certified so as not to constitute a statutory dedication. Board of Com'rs of Garfield County v. Anderson, 167 Okl. 253, 29 P.2d 75, 78.

Express Common-Law Dedication

An "express common-law dedication" is one where the intent is expressly manifested, such as by ordinary deeds, recorded plats not executed pursuant to statute or defectively certified so as not to constitute a statutory dedication. Board of Com'rs of Garfield County v. Anderson, 167 Okl. 253, 29 P.2d 75, 78.

Express or Implied

A dedication may be express, as where the intention to dedicate is expressly manifested by a deed or an explicit oral or written declaration of the owner, or some other explicit manifestation of his purpose to devote the land to the public use. An implied dedication may be shown by some act or course of conduct on the part of the owner from which a reasonable inference of intent may be drawn, or which is inconsistent with any other theory than that he intended a dedication. Hurley v. West St. Paul, 83 Minn. 401, 86 N.W. 427; Porter v. City of Stuttgart, 135 Ark. 48, 204 S.W. 607, 608; H. A. Hilmer Co. v. Behr, 264 Ill. 568, 106 N.E. 481, 486; Village of Bend v. Dorsey, 311 Ill. 192, 142 N.E. 563, 565; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Bennett, C.C.A.Miss., 296 F. 436, 437; City of Brownsville v. West, Tex.Civ.App., 149 S.W.2d 1034, 1037, 1038.

Common-Law or Statutory

A common-law dedication is one made as above described, and may be either express or implied. A statutory dedication is one made under and in conformity with the provisions of a statute regulating the subject, and is of course necessarily express. Poindexter v. Schaffner, Tex.Civ.App., 162 S.W. 22, 23; Kaufman v. City of Butte, 48 Mont. 400, 138 P. 770, 771; Neill v. City of Glendale, 106 Cal.App. 553, 289 P. 877, 879.

Where complete statutory dedication does not exist, sale of lots by reference to plat constitutes common-law "dedication." Byam v. Kansas City Public Service Co., 328 Mo. 813, 41 S.W.2d 945, 949.
DEDUCTION. That which is deducted; the part taken away; abatement; as a deduction from the yearly rent. Don Lee, Inc., v. United States, D.C. Cal., 42 F.Supp. 884, 885; Pittsburgh Brewing Co. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.3, 107 F.2d 155, 156.

In Probate Law

By "deduction" is understood a portion or thing which an heir has a right to take from the mass of the succession before any partition takes place. Civil Code La. art. 1358.

Taxation

As used in Internal Revenue Code, relating to tax on corporations, "deduction" refers to items which may be subtracted from a corporation's gross income in arriving at net income. McKesson & Robbins v. Walsh, 130 Conn. 460, 35 A.2d 865.

An amount refunded by corporation to federal government under Renegotiation Act as excess profits from war contracts is not a "deduction" from corporation's gross income subject to state taxation, but must be considered in determining corporation's true gross income. Southern Weaving Co. v. Query, 206 S.C. 307, 34 S.E.2d 51, 54.

Trial

Argument of counsel based on the evidence is not improper as unsworn testimony, but is warranted as a "deduction" from the testimony. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Smith, Tex.Civ.App., 115 S.W.2d 1238, 1242.

DEDUCTION FOR NEW. In marine insurance. An allowance or drawback credited to the insurers on the cost of repairing a vessel for damage arising from the perils of the sea insured against. This allowance is usually one-third, and is made on the theory that the parts restored with new materials are better, in that proportion than they were before the damage.

DEED. A conveyance of realty, a writing signed by grantor, whereby title to realty is transferred by grantor, whereby title is transferred to realty is transferred to grantee. Blair v. Blair, 111 Wash. 171; 2 Bl.Comm. 295; Shepp. Touchst. 50. A writing containing a contract sealed and delivered. 3 Washb. Real Prop. 239; Sanders v. Riedinger, 30 App.Div, 277, 284, 51 N.Y.S. 937, 942. An instrument in writing, upon paper or parchment, between parties able to contract, subscribed, sealed, and delivered. 4 Kent, Comm. 452; Interstate R. Co. v. Roberts, 127 Va. 688, 105 S.E. 463, 464. There is authority, however, that signing is unnecessary to validity of deed. Bowling v. Wilkerson, D.C.Ky., 19 F.Supp. 584, 587.

A writing under seal by which lands, tenements, or hereditaments are conveyed for an estate not less than freehold. 2 Bl.Comm, 294.

A deed implies, at common law, a sealed instrument. 2 Bl.Comm. 295; Rondot v. Rogers Tp., 39 C.C.A. 462, 99 F. 202, 209; Strain v. Fitzgerald, 128 N.C. 396, 38 S.E. 929, 930; Williams v. State, 25 Fla. 734, 6 So. 831, 832, 6 L.R.A. 821; e.g., a bond is a deed for the reason that it is sealed by the obligor. In re Contest of Election of Burns, 315 Pa. 23, 171 A. 888, 889. But the term is also applied to similar instruments, not under seal, executed in jurisdictions in which the use of seals is unknown (see Steigenberger v. Carr, 3 M. & G., 191, 199, 42 ECL 107, 133 Reprint. 1111), or in which seals have been rendered unnecessary by statute. See Henderson v. Howard, 147 Ga. 371, 94 S.E. 251; Gibbs v. McGuire, 70 Miss. 646, 12 So. 829.

Modern Rule

A written instrument, signed, sealed, and delivered, by which one person conveys land, tenements, or hereditaments to another. This is its ordinary modern meaning, at least in those jurisdictions which adhere to the common-law rule making a seal essential to the validity and operative effect of a deed of conveyance. McMee v Henry, 163 Ky. 729, 174 S.W. 746, 747; Dunham v. Marsh, 52 N.J.Eq. 256, 30 A. 473, 474; Hood v. Fletcher, 31 Ariz. 456, 254 P. 223, 224.

The term may include a mortgage of real estate. Lockridge v. McCommon, 90 Tex. 234, 38 S.W. 33, 35 (citing Hellman v. Howard, 44 Cal. 110); Daily v. Minnesota Loan & Investment Co., 43 Minn. 517, 45 N.W. 1100, 1101; Morgan v. Wickliffe, 115 Ky. 226, 72 S.W. 1122. But, contra, see Harp v. White, 179 Kan. 17, 92 P.2d 475; Columbus v. Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co., 62 Ohio St. 564, 57 N.E. 450. Similarly a lease for years under seal may be a deed. Hutchinson v. Bramhall, 42 N.J.Eq. 372, 7 A. 873, 875. And a lease exceeding twenty-one years is held to be within the term. St. Vincent's Roman Catholic Congregation of Plymouth v. Kingston Coal Co., 221 Pa. 349, 70 A. 873, 875. But a stipulation for a deed prohibiting drilling for oil or gas was held not to include a lease. Test Oil Co. v. La Tourette, 19 Old. 214, 91 P. 1025, 1029.

The essential difference between a "deed" and a "will" is that the former passes a present interest and the latter passes no interest until after the death of the maker. Willis v. Piveash, Tex.Civ.App., 297 S.W. 509, 510; Harber v. Harber, 152 Ga. 98, 108 S.E. 526; Henderson v. Henderson, 210 Ala. 73, 97 So. 353, 372; Bowdoin College v. Merritt, C.C.Cal., 75 F. 480, 483. A will is "an instrument by which a person makes a disposition of his property to take effect after his decease, which is in its own nature ambulatory and revocable thir`ing his life. It is this ambulatory quality which form's the characteristic of wills; for, though,* disposition by deed may postpone the possession or enjoyment, or even the vesting, until after the date of disposing party, yet the postponement is in such case produced by the express terms, and does not result from the nature of the instrument." In re Hall's Estate, 149 Cal. 143, 143, 84 P. 839, 840; Robb v. Washington & Jefferson College, 185 N.Y. 485, 78 N.E. 359, 361 (quoting and adopting definition in Jarvis, Will’s, p. 17). The main test, however, whether a writing is a will or deed, is the animus.
Deed, Estoppel by

A deed is distinguished from a contract in that a deed is a mere transfer of title to reality, and is the act of but one of the parties, made pursuant to a previous contract either in parol or in writing. Collins v. Lyon, Inc., 181 Va. 230, 24 S.E.2d 572, 579. Accordingly, want of consideration of itself will not warrant setting aside a deed, though want of consideration would be good defense to an executory contract. Lawson v. Boo, 227 Iowa 100, 287 N.W. 282, 284. However, a deed is a contract, for the purpose of enforcement of itself will not warrant setting aside a deed, though a will, though possession be deferred until the grantor's death. Lovenskoild v. Casas, Tex.Civ.App., 196 S.W. 629, 631.

A deed is executed or purporting to be executed in fee simple with the usual covenants. Rudd v. Savelli, 44 Ark. 152; Moody v. Spokane & U. H. St. Ry. Co., 5 Wash. 699, 32 P. 751.

Deed indented, or indenture. In conveyancing. A deed executed or purporting to be executed in parts, between two or more parties, and distinguished by having the edge of the paper or parchment on which it is written indented or cut at the top in a particular manner. This was formerly done at the top or side, in a line resembling the teeth of a saw; a formality derived from the ancient practice of dividing chirographs; but the cutting is now made either in a waving line, or more commonly by notching or nicking the paper at the edge. 2 Bl.Comm. 295, 296; Litt. § 370; Smith, Cont. 12.

Deed of covenant. Covenants are sometimes entered into by a separate deed, for title, or for the indemnity of a purchaser or mortgagee, or for the production of title-deeds. A covenant with a penalty is sometimes taken for the payment of a debt, instead of a bond with a condition, but the legal remedy is the same in either case.

Deed of gift. A deed executed and delivered without consideration.

Thus a conveyance to church mission board for which board agreed to educate a relative of grantor for the ministry should grantors die before his education was completed, was not a strict "deed of gift." Forbes v. Board of Missions of M. E. Church, South, 17 Cal.2d 332, 110 P.2d 3, 7.

Deed of release. One releasing property from the incumbrance of a mortgage or similar pledge upon payment or performance of the conditions; more specifically, where a deed of trust to one or more trustees has been executed, pledging real property for the payment of a debt or the performance of other conditions, substantially as in the case of a mortgage, a deed of release is the conveyance executed by the trustees, after payment or performance, for the purpose of divesting themselves of the legal title and revesting it in the original owner. See Swain v. McMillan, 30 Mont. 433, 76 Pac. 943.

Deed of separation. An instrument by which, through the medium of some third person acting as trustee, provision is made by a husband for separation from his wife and for her separate maintenance. Whitney v. Whitney, 15 Misc. 72, 36 N.Y.S. 891, 892.

Deed of settlement. A deed formerly used in England for the formation of joint stock companies constituting certain persons trustees of the partnership property and containing regulations for the management of its private affairs. They are now regulated by articles of association.

Deed of trust. An instrument in use in many states, taking the place and serving the uses of a common-law mortgage, by which the legal title to real property is placed in one or more trustees, to secure the repayment of a sum of money or the performance of other conditions. Bank v. Pierce, 144 Cal. 434, 77 P. 1012; In re Sherman, D.C.Va., 12 F.Supp. 297, 298, 299. Though differing in form from mortgage, it is essentially a security. Bank of America Nat. Trust & Savings Ass'n v. Bank of Amador County, 135 Cal.App. 714, 28 P.2d 86, 88. In re Title Guaranty Trust Co., Mo.App., 113 S.W.2d 1053, 1057. See Trust Deed.

Deed poll. A deed which is made by one party only. See Hawkins v. Corbit, 83 Okt. 275, 201 P. 649, 653. A deed in which only the party making it executes it or binds himself by it as a deed. 3 Washb. R. P. 311. It was originally so called because the edge of the paper or parchment was polled or cut in a straight line, wherein it was distinguished from a deed indented or indenture. As to a special use of this term in Pennsylvania in colonial times, see Herron v. Dater, 120 U.S. 464, 7 S.Ct. 620, 624, 30 L.Ed. 748 (citing Evans v. Patterson, 71 U.S. 224, 4 Wall. 224, 18 L.Ed. 393).

Deed to lead uses. A deed made before a fine or common recovery, to show the object thereof. As to "execution of deed," see Execution of Instrument.

Gratuitous deed. One made without consideration. 2 Steph.Com. 47. As to "Quitclaim" deed, "Tax" deed, "Trust" deed, and "Warranty" deed, see those titles.

A preclusion against the competent parties to a valid sealed contract and their privies to deny its force and effect by any evidence of inferior solemnity. Hart v. Anaconda Copper Mining Co., 69 Mont. 354, 222 P. 419, 421.
DEED, ESTOPPEL BY

Such an estoppel occurs where a party has executed a deed, that is, a writing under seal (as a bond) reciting a certain fact, and is thereby precluded from afterwards denying, in any action brought upon that instrument, the fact so recited. Steph.P, 197. A man shall always be estopped by his own deed, or not permitted to aver or prove anything in contradiction to what he has once so solemnly and deliberately avowed. 2 Bl.Comm. 295; Plowd. 434; Hudson v. Winslow Tp., 35 N.J.Law, 441; Taggart v. Risley, 4 Or. 242; Appeal of Waters, 35 Pa. 526, 78 Am. Dec. 354.

A warranty deed by one having only a contingent remainder passes title, by way of estoppel to grantee, as soon as remainder vests by happening of contingency. Talmey v. Howsley, Tex.Civ.App., 170 S.W.2d 240, 243. It is limited to an action founded on the deed itself. Hughes v. Cobb, 195 Ga. 213, 23 S.E.2d 701, 715. It applies to the maker of the deed, and does not ordinarily apply to the grantee. Hughes v. Cobb, 195 Ga. 213, 23 S.E.2d 701, 715. It arises only when suit is on the deed or concerning a right arising out of the deed and between parties or privies to the deed. Robert v. O'Connell, 269 Mass. 532, 169 N.E. 487, 488. It arises only where there is express representation as to ownership, title, or interest in question, or where there are express warranties thereto. Petition of Testatan, 156 Misc. 449, 281 N.Y.S. 96. It cannot be raised against one through whose imposition a statement was inserted in the deed. Capitol Nat. Bank & Trust Co. v. David B. Roberts, Inc., 129 Conn. 194, 27 A.2d 237, 488. It is limited to an action founded on the deed or concerning a right arising out of the deed and between parties or privies to the deed. Robert v. O'Connell, 269 Mass. 532, 169 N.E. 487, 488. It arises only where there is express representation as to ownership, title, or interest in question, or where there are express warranties thereto. Petition of Testatan, 156 Misc. 449, 281 N.Y.S. 96. It cannot be raised against one through whose imposition a statement was inserted in the deed. Capitol Nat. Bank & Trust Co. v. David B. Roberts, Inc., 129 Conn. 194, 27 A.2d 237, 488.

DEEM. To hold; consider; adjudge; condemn; determine; treat as if; construe. Douglas v. Pratt, 132 Mass. 247; Commonwealth v. Brue, 284 Pa. 294, 131 A. 367, 368.

DEEMSTERS. Judges in the Isle of Man, who decide all controversies without process, writings, or any charges. These judges are chosen by the people, and are said by Spelman to be two in number. Spelman.

DEER-FALD. A park or fold for deer.

DEER-HAYES. Engines or great nets made of cord to catch deer. 19 Hen. VIII, c. 11.

DEFACE. To mar or destroy the face (that is, the physical appearance of written or inscribed characters as expressive of a definite meaning) of a written instrument, signature, inscription, etc., by obliteration, erasure, cancellation, or superscription, so as to render it illegible or unrecognizable. Linney v. State, 6 Tex. 1, 55 Am.Dec. 756. See Cancel. In re Parsons' Will, 195 N.Y.S. 742, 745, 119 Misc. 26. Also used in respect of injury to monument, buildings and other structures. Saffell v. State, 113 Ark. 97, 167 S.W. 483. So, to deface the flag carries the meaning of dishonor, which imputes a lively sense of shaming or an equivalent acquisitive callousness. State v. Schlueter, 127 N.J.L. 496, 23 A.2d 249, 251.

DE FACTO GOVERNMENT. One that maintains itself by a display of force against the will of the rightful legal government and is successful, at least temporarily, in overturning the institutions of the rightful legal government by setting up its own in lieu thereof. Wortham v. Walker, 133 Tex. 255, 128 S.W.2d 1138, 1145.

DEFALCATION. The act of a defaulter; misappropriation of trust funds or money held in any fiduciary capacity; failure to properly account for such funds. Usually spoken of officers of corporations or public officials. In re Butts, D.C.N.Y., 120 F. 970; Crawford v. Burke, 201 Ill. 581, 66 N.E. 833.

Also set-off. The diminution of a debt or claim, by deducting from it a smaller claim held by the debtor or payor. Iron Works v. Cuppy, 41 Iowa, 104; Houk v. Foley, 2 Pen. & W., Pa., 250; McDonald v. Lee, 12 La. 435.

Colloquially, perhaps, the word "defalcation" ordinarily implies some moral dereliction. As used in the Bankruptcy Act, it may demand some portion of misconduct, but it is DEFALCATION. L. Fr, Infamous. Britt. c. 15.

The fundamental difference between a right to “privacy” and a right to freedom from “defamation” is that the former directly concerns one’s own peace of mind whereas the latter concerns primarily one’s reputation. Themo v. New England Newspaper Pub. Co., 306 Mass. 54, 27 N.E.2d 753, 755.

DEFAMATORY. Calumnious; containing defamation; injurious to reputation; libelous; slanderous; words which produce any perceptible injury to the reputation of another. Sheridan V. Davies, 139 Kan. 256, 31 P.2d 51, 54.

DEFAMATORY PER QUOD. In respect of words: Those which require an allegation of facts, aside from the words contained in the article, by way of innuendo, to show wherein the words used libel the plaintiff, in order to state a cause of action in a complaint. Rowan v. Gazette Printing Co., 74 Mont. 326, 239 P. 1035, 1037.

DEFAMATORY PER SE. In respect of words: Those which by themselves, and as such, without reference to extrinsic proof, injure the reputation of the person to whom they are applied. Manley v. Harer, 73 Mont. 253, 235 P. 757, 758; Conrad v. Allis-Chalmers Mfg. Co., 228 Mo.App. 817, 73 S. W.2d 438, 446.

DEFAMES. L. Fr, Infamous. Brit. c. 15.

In Practice

Omission; neglect or failure of any party to take step required of him in progress of cause. Indiana State Board of Medical Registration and Examination v. Pickard, 93 Ind.App. 171, 177 N.E. 870, 872. When a defendant in an action at law omits to plead within the time allowed him for that purpose, or fails to appear on the trial, he is said to make default, McCabe v. Tom, 35 Ohio App. 73, 171 N.E. 868, 869, and the judgment entered in the former case is technically called a “judgment by default.” 3 Bl.Comm. 396; 1 Tidd, Pr. 562.

A “default” in an action at law is somewhat similar to the entry of a decree in equity that the bill be taken for confessed, neither being a final disposition. Felton v. Felton, 128 Conn. 564, 196 A. 791, 793.

In General

Default of issue. Failure to have living children or descendants at a given time or fixed point. George v. Morgan, 16 Pa. 106; In re Van Cleef, 92 Misc. 689, 157 N.Y.S. 549, 551.

Defaulter. One who makes default. One who misappropriates money held by him in an official or fiduciary character, or fails to account for such money.

Judgment by default. See Judgment.

DEFEASANCE. An instrument which defeats the force or operation of some other deed or estate. That which is in the same deed is called a "condition"; and that which is in another deed is a "defeasance." Com. Dig. "Defeasance." Beindorf v. Thorpe, 90 Okl. 191, 203 P. 475, 477; In re A. Roth Co., C.C.A.II., 118 F.2d 156, 158.

A “defeasance” is a collateral deed made at the same time as a feoffment or other conveyance, containing certain conditions upon the performance of which the estate then created may be defeated or totally undone. Bach v. First Nat. Bank, 99 Ind.App. 590, 193 N.E. 696, 697.

In Conveyancing

A collateral deed made at the same time with a feoffment or other conveyance, containing certain conditions, upon the performance of which the estate then created may be defeated or totally undone. 2 Bl.Comm. 327; Co. Lit. 236, 237.

An instrument accompanying a bond, recognizance, or judgment, containing a condition which, when performed, defeats or undoes it. 2 Bl. Comm. 342; Miller v. Quick, 158 Mo. 495, 59 S.W. 955.

DEFEASIBLE. Subject to be defeated, annull ed, revoked, or undone upon the happening of a future event or the performance of a condition subsequent, or by a conditional limitation. Usually spoken of estates and interests in land. For instance, a mortgagee's estate is defeasible (liable to be defeated) by the mortgagor's equity of redemption. Penick v. Atkinson, 139 Ga. 649, 77 S.E. 1055, 1057, 46 L.R.A., N.S., 284; Murphy v. Murphy, 182 Ky. 731, 207 S.W. 491, 493.

DEFEASIBLE FEE. An estate in fee that is liable to be defeated by some future contingency; e.g., a vested remainder which might be defeated by the death of the remainderman before the time fixed for the taking effect of the devise. Giltner's Trustee v. Talbott, 253 Ky. 474, 69 S.W.2d 981; Daly v. Pate, 210 N.C. 222, 186 S.E. 348, 349.

DEFEASIBLE TITLE. One that is liable to be annulled or made void, but not one that is already void or an absolute nullity. Elder v. Schumacher, 18 Colo. 433, 33 P. 175.

DEFEASIVE. Describes counterclaim which, if it prevails, will defeat right of plaintiffs to recover. Hayden v. Collins, 90 Utah, 733, 188 P. 2d 523, 225.

DEFEAT. To prevent, frustrate, or circumvent; as in the phrase "hinder, delay, or defeat creditors." Coleman v. Walker, 3 Mete., Ky., 65, 77 Am.Dec. 163; Reuff-Griffin Decorating Co. v. Wilkes, 191 S.W. 443, 446, 173 Ky. 566.

To annul, undo, or terminate; as, a title or estate. See Defeasible.

DEFECT. The want or absence of some legal requisite; deficiency; imperfection; insufficiency. Sappenfield v. National Zinc Co., 94 Kan. 22, 145 P. 862, 863; Galloway v. City of Winchester, 299 Ky. 87, 184 S.W.2d 890, 892, 893. The want or absence of something necessary for completeness or perfection; a lack or absence of something essential to completeness; a deficiency in something essential to the proper use for the purpose for which a thing is to be used. Roberts v. Rogers, 129 Neb. 298, 261 N.W. 354; Terrell v. City of Orangeburg, 176 S.C. 518, 180 S.E. 670.

Thus, a bamboo vaulting pole which was not straight and was unbalanced had a "defect." McCormick v. Lowe & Campbell Athletic Goods Co., 235 Mo.App. 612, 144 S.W.2d 866, 876.

DEFECT IN HIGHWAY OR STREET. Ordinarily anything in the condition or state of highway or street that renders it unreasonably safe for travel. Payne v. State Highway Commission, 136 Kan. 561, 16 P.2d 509, 511. Thus courts have held as highway or street defects corrugations, Cheney v. State Highway Commission, 142 Kan. 149, 45 P.2d 864, 866; spike in cross walk, Fay v. City of Green Bay, 240 Wis. 36, 1 N.W.2d 767, 768, a hollow, Adams v. Town of Bolton, 297 Mass. 459, 9 N.E.2d 562, 111 A.L.R. 856, and anything that may reasonably be expected to interfere with safe use of sidewalk by pedestrian. City of Birmingham v. Wood, 240 Ala. 138, 197 So. 885, 887.

DEFECT IN MACHINERY. Under Code 1907, § 3910, subd. 1, making the master liable for injury from defects in the condition of works or machinery, it is essential that there be inherent condition of a permanent nature which unfits machine for its use, some weakness of construction with reference to the proposed uses, some misplacement of parts, or the absence of some part, some innate abnormal quality rendering its use dangerous, or some obstacle to the use or the way of use which is part of the condition of the machinery itself. Caldwell-Watson Foundry & Machine Co. v. Watson, 183 Ala. 326, 62 So. 859, 862.

DEFECT OF FORM. An imperfection in the style, manner, arrangement, or non-essential parts of a legal instrument, plea, indictment, etc., as distinguished from a "defect of substance." See infra.

DEFECT OF PARTIES. In pleading and practice. Insufficiency of the parties before a court in any given proceeding to give it jurisdiction and authority to decide the controversy, arising from the omission or failure to join plaintiffs or defendants who should have been brought in; never applied to a superfluity of parties or the improper addition of plaintiffs or defendants. Porter Const. Co. v. Berry, 136 Or. 80, 298 P. 179, 182; Salisbury v. Berry Motor Co., 122 Neb. 605, 241 N.W. 86, 87; De Pass v. City of Spartanburg, 190 S.C. 22, 1 S.E.2d 904, 908. It is not synonymous with "misjoinder of parties". Okmulgee Supply Co. v. Rotman, 144 Okl. 293, 291 P. 1, 2.

DEFECT OF SUBSTANCE. An imperfection in the body or substantive part of a legal instrument, plea, indictment, etc., consisting in the omission of something which is essential to be set forth. Sweeney v. Greenwood Index-Journal Co., D.C.S.C., 37 F.Supp. 484, 487.

DEFECTIVE. Lacking in some particular which is essential to the completeness, legal sufficiency, or security of the object spoken of; as a "defective" highway or bridge (Mennito v. Town of Wayland, Sup., 56 N.Y.S.2d 654, 664; Warren County v. Battle, 48 Ga.App. 240, 172 S.E. 673, 674); car coupler (McAllister v. St. Louis Merchants' Bridge Terminal Ry. Co., 324 Mo. 1005, 25 S.W.2d 791, 795); machinery (Riccio v. Town of Plainville, 106 Conn. 61, 136 A. 872, 873; Cheney v. Village of Riverton, 104 Neb. 189, 177 N.W. 845, 846, 10 A.L.R. 244; Bryan v. City of West Palm Beach, 75 Fla. 19, 77 So. 627); writ or recognition (State v. Lavalley, 9 Mo. 836; McArthur v. Wood, 240 Wis. 36, 1 N.W.2d 767, 768, a hollow, Adams v. Town of Bolton, 297 Mass. 459, 9 N.E.2d 562, 111 A.L.R. 856, and anything that may reasonably be expected to interfere with safe use of sidewalk by pedestrian. City of Birmingham v. Wood, 240 Ala. 138, 197 So. 885, 887.)

DEFECTIVE OR INSUFFICIENT SPECIFICATIONS BY PATENTEE. Any failure either to describe or to claim the complete invention upon which the application for patent is founded. Robert v. Kremetz, C.C.A.N.J., 243 F. 877, 881.

DEFECTIVE TITLE. With respect to negotiable paper within Negotiable Instruments Law, the title of a person who obtains instrument or any signature thereto by fraud, duress, or force and fear, or other unlawful means, or for an illegal consideration, or when he negotiates it in breach of faith or under such circumstances as amount to fraud. Stevens v. Pierce, 79 Okl. 290, 193 P. 417, 18 A.L.R. 7; (fraud) German-American Nat. Bank v. Kelley, 183 Iowa, 269, 166 N.W. 1053; Commercial Security Co. v. Jack, 29 N.D. 67, 150 N.W. 460, 461.

DEFECTUS. Lat. Defect; default; want; imperfection; disqualification.

Challenge Propter Defectum

A challenge to a juror on account of some legal disqualification, such as infancy, etc. See Challenge.

Defectus Sanguinis

Failure of the blood, i.e., failure or want of issue.

DEFEND. To prohibit or forbid. To deny. To contest and endeavor to defeat a claim or demand made against one in a court of justice. Boehmer v. Irrigation Dist., 117 Cal, 19, 48 P. 908. To oppose, repel, or resist.

To protect, to shield, to make a stand for, or uphold by force or argument, vindicate, to maintain or keep secure, to guaranty, to agree to indemnify. Powell v. U.S., D.C.Va., 60 F.Supp. 433, 439.

Although a contract between mortgagee and mortgagor's creditor who purchased mortgaged automobile that creditor will "defend" mortgagee against all suits, etc., was held to be contract to defend litigation, not to indemnify. Hall v. Cannon, 90 Colo. 465, 9 P.2d 1057.

Thus, railroads, on appeal by city to state district court from order of Minnesota Railroad and Warehouse Commission requiring grade separation, were held defendants entitled to remove cause to federal court. In re Chicago, M. St. P. & P. R. Co., D.C.Minn., 50 F.2d 430, 434.

In common usage, this term is applied to the party put upon his defense, or summoned to answer a charge or complaint, in any species of action, civil or criminal, at law or in equity. Strictly, however, it does not apply to the person against whom a real action is brought, for in that proceeding the technical usage is to call the parties respectively the "demandant" and the "tenant."

Defendant in error. The distinctive term appropriate to the party against whom a writ of error is sued out.

Principal defendant. One who has an interest in the controversy presented by the bill, and whose presence is requisite to the complete and partial adjudication of the controversy. Bird v. Sleppy, 265 Pa. 295, 108 A. 618, 619.

DEFENDARE. To answer for; to be responsible for. Medley.

DEFENDEMUS. Lat. A word used in grants and donations, which binds the donor and his heirs to defend the donee, if any one go about to lay any incumbrance on the thing given other than what is contained in the deed of donation. Bract. 1. 2, c. 16.

DEFENDER. (Fr.) To deny; to defend; to conduct a suit for a defendant; to forbid; to prevent; to protect.

In Scotch and canon law. A defendant.

DEFENDER OF THE FAITH. A peculiar title belonging to the sovereign of England, as that of "Catholic" to the king of Spain, and that of "Most Christian" to the king of France. These titles were originally given by the popes of Rome; and that of Defensor Fidei was first conferred by Pope Leo X. on King Henry VIII., as a reward for writing against Martin Luther; and the bull for it bears date quinto Idus Octob., 1521. Enc. Lond.

DEFENDERE SE PER CORPUS SUUM. To offer duel or combat as a legal trial and appeal. Abolished by 59 Geo. III. § 46. See Battel.

DEFENDERE UNICA MANU. To wage law; a denial of an accusation upon oath. See Wager of Law.

DEFENDIT VIM ET INJURIAM. He defends the force and injury. Pieta, lib. 5, c. 39, § 1.

DEFENDOUR. L. Fr. A defender or defendant; the party accused in an appeal. Brit. c. 22.

DEFENIZATION. The act of lending money on usury.

DEFENSIA. In old English law. A park or place fenced in for deer, and defended as a property and peculiar for that use and service. Cowell.

DEFENSE. That which is offered and alleged by the party proceeded against in an action or suit, as a reason in law or fact why the plaintiff should not recover or establish what he seeks; what is put forward to diminish plaintiff's cause

In a stricter sense, defense is used to denote the answer made by the defendant to the plaintiff's action, by demurrer or plea at law or answer in equity. This is the meaning of the term in Scotch law. Ersk. Inst. 4, 1, 66. However, it has been held that the filing of a demurrer is not the making of a defense within meaning of the statute providing that, if no defense be made, the plaintiff cannot have judgment for any relief not specifically demanded, but, if defense be made, he may have judgment for other relief, under a prayer therefor. Union Light, Heat & Power Co. v. City of Bellevue, 284 Ky. 405, 144 S.W.2d 1046, 1047.

Half defense was that which was made by the form "defends the force and injury, and says," (defendit vim et injuriam, et dicit.)

Full defense was that which was made by the form "defends the force and injury when and where it shall behoove him, and the damages, and whatever else he ought to defend," (defendit vim et injuriam quando et ubi curia consideravit, et damna et quicquid quod ipse defendere debet, et dicit,) commonly shortened into "defends the force and injury when," etc. Gilb.Com.P1. 188; 8 Term, 632; 3 Bos. & P. 9, note; Co.Litt. 127b.

In matrimonial suits, in England, defenses are divided into absolute, i.e., such as, being established to the satisfaction of the court, are a complete answer to the petition, so that the court can exercise no discretion, but is bound to dismiss the petition; and discretionary, or such as, being established, leave to the court a discretion whether it will pronounce a decree or dismiss the petition. Thus, in a suit for dissolution, condonation is an absolute, adultery by the petitioner a discretionary, defense. Browne, Div. 30.

Defense is not something by means of which party who interposes it can obtain relief for himself. Crisman v. Corbin, 169 Or. 332, 128 P.2d 959, 964.

Defense, as respects right to counsel to conduct defense of one charged with crime, includes every step in proceedings from time of arraignment until acquittal or conviction. State v. Hudson, 55 R.I. 141, 179 A. 130, 135, 100 A.L.R. 313.

Defense also means the forcible repelling of an attack made unlawfully with force and violence, such as the defense of the nation in time of war. United States v. 243.22 Acres of Land in Village of Farmingdale, Town of Babylon, Suffolk County, N. Y., D.C.N.Y., 43 F.Supp. 561, 567.

In old statutes and records, the term means prohibition; denial or refusal. Enconter le defense et le commandement de Toy; against the prohibition and commandment of the king. St. Westm. 1, c. 1. Also a state of severalty, or of several or exclusive occupancy; a state of inclosure.

Affidavit of Defense
See Affidavit.

Affirmative Defense
See that title.

Equitable Defense
See that title.

Frivolous Defense
One which at first glance can be seen to be merely pretensive, setting up some ground which cannot be sustained by argument. Dominion Nat. Bank v. Olympia Cotton Mills, C.C.S.C., 128 F. 182.

Legal Defense
(1) A defense which is complete and adequate in point of law. (2) A defense which may be set up in a court of law; as distinguished from an "equitable defense," which is cognizable only in a court of equity or court possessing equitable powers.

Meritorious Defense
One going to the merits, substance, or essentials of the case, as distinguished from dilatory or technical objections. Cooper v. Lumber Co., 61 Ark. 36, 31 S.W. 981.

Partial Defense
One which goes only to a part of the cause of action, or which only tends to mitigate the damages to be awarded. Carter v. Bank, 33 Misc. 128, 67 N.Y.S. 300.

Peremptory Defense
A defense which insists that the plaintiff never had the right to institute the suit, or that, if he had, the original right is extinguished or determined. 4 Bouv. Inst. No. 4206.

Personal Defense
In negotiable instruments law. A defense which, though not good as against a holder in due course, is good against certain parties, because of their participation in or knowledge of certain transactions or facts from which such defense arises. Such defenses include all defenses that are not real or absolute defenses. Bauer and Simpson, Law of Business, 2d Ed., p. 329.

Pretermitted Defense
One which was available to a party and of which he might have had the benefit if he had pleaded it in due season, but which cannot afterwards be heard as a basis for affirmative relief. Swennes v. Sprain, 120 Wis. 68, 97 N.W. 511.

Real Defense

In negotiable instruments law. A defense inherent in the res and therefore good against anyone seeking to enforce the instrument, even a holder in due course. Real defenses include illegality, incapacity, forgery, material alteration, nondelivery of an incomplete instrument, and fraud in the inception. These defenses are good even against a holder in due course because, where they exist, no contract was formed. Bauer and Simpson, Law of Business, 2d Ed., p. 330.

Sham Defense

A false or fictitious defense, interposed in bad faith, and manifestly untrue, insufficient, or irrelevant on its face.

Self Defense

See that title.

DEFENSE AU FOND EN DROIT (called, also, defense en droit). A demurrer. 2 Low. C. 278. See, also, 1 Low. C. 216.

DEFENSE AU FOND EN FAIT. The general issue. 3 Low. C. 421.

DEFENSIVA. In old English law. A lord or earl of the marches, who was the warden and defender of his country. Cowell.

DEFENSIVE ALLEGATION. In English ecclesiastical law. A species of pleading, where the defendant, instead of denying the plaintiff’s charge upon oath, has any circumstances to offer in his defense. This entitles him, in his turn, to the plaintiff’s answer upon oath, upon which he may proceed to proofs as well as his antagonist. 3 Bl. Comm. 100; 3 Steph. Comm. 720.

DEFENSIVE WAR. A war in defense of, or for the protection of, national rights. It may be defensive in its principles, though offensive in its operations. 1 Kent, Comm. 50, note.

DEFENSO. That part of any open field or place that was allotted for corn or hay, and upon which there was no common or feeding, was anciently said to be in defenso; so of any meadow ground that was laid in for hay only. The same term was applied to a wood where part was inclosed or fenced, to secure the growth of the underwood from the injury of cattle. Cowell.

In the Civil Law

A defender; one who assumed the defense of another’s case in court. Also an advocate. A tutor or curator.

In Canon Law

The advocate or patron of a church. An officer who had charge of the temporalities of the church.

In Old English Law

A guardian, defender, or protector. The defendant in an action. A person vouched in to warranty.

In General

Defensor civitatis. Defender or protector of a city or municipality. An officer under the Roman empire, whose duty it was to protect the people against the injustice of the magistrates, the insolence of the subaltern officers, and the rapacity of the money-lenders. Schm. Civil Law, Intro. 16; Cod. 1, 55, 4. He had the powers of a judge, with jurisdiction of pecuniary causes to a limited amount, and the lighter species of offenses. Cod. 1, 55, 1; Nov. 15, c. 3, § 2; Id. c. 6, § 1: He had also the care of the public records, and powers similar to those of a notary in regard to the execution of wills and conveyances.

Defensor fidei. Defender of the faith. See Defender.

DEFER. Delay; put off; remand; postpone to a future time. The term does not have, however, the meaning of abolish, Moore v. Sampson County, 220 N.C. 232, 17 S.E.2d 22, 23, or omit, United States v. Murine Co., C.C.A.Ill., 90 F.2d 549, 551.

DEFERRED LIFE ANNUITIES. In English law. Annuities for the life of the purchaser, but not commencing until a date subsequent to the date of buying them, so that, if the purchaser die before that date, the purchase money is lost. Granted by the commissioners for reduction of the national debt. See 16 & 17 Viet. c. 45, § 2. Wharton.

DEFERRED SENTENCE. A sentence, the pronouncement of which has been postponed. It does not operate as a suspension of sentence. State v. Powell, 153 Wash. 110, 279 P. 573, 574.

DEFERRED STOCK. See Stock.

DEFICIENCY. A lack, shortage or insufficiency. The amount by which the income tax imposed exceeds the amount shown as the tax by the taxpayer upon his return. American Woolen Co. v. United States, Ct.C1., 21 F.Supp. 1021, 1022.

That part of a debt secured by mortgage not realized from sale of mortgaged property. Harrow v Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 285 Mich. 349, 280 N.W. 785, 787. A judgment or decree for the amount of such deficiency is called a "deficiency judgment" or "decree." Phillips v. Union Central Life Ins. Co., C.C.A.Minn., 88 F.2d 188, 189 (judgment); Grace v. Hendricks, 103 Fla. 1158, 140 So. 790, 794 (decree).

Technically speaking, there is no such thing under our law as a "deficiency judgment" in the sense that a formal judgment of that description is rendered by the court, or entered by the clerk for the amount not made by the sale of the mortgaged property. There is only the original judgment for the full amount of the indebtedness, upon which a deficiency may exist after the issuance and return of the special execution, or even perhaps of one or more general executions in addition. It has nevertheless been customary in ordinary parlance to refer to the amount still due after the return of the special execution as a "deficiency judgment." Bank of Douglas v. Neel, 30 Ariz. 375, 247 P. 132, 134.

DEFICIENCY BILL. In parliamentary practice, an appropriation bill covering items of expense omitted from the general appropriation bill or bills, or for which insufficient appropriations were made. If intended to cover a variety of such items, it is commonly called a "general deficiency bill;" if intended to make provision for expenses which must be met immediately, or which cannot wait the ordinary course of the general appropriation bills, it is called an "urgent deficiency bill."

Deficiente uno sanguine non potest esse hares, 3 Coke, 41. One blood being wanting, he cannot be heir. But see 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 106, § 9, and 33 & 34 Viet. c. 23, § 1.

DEFICIT. Something wanting, generally in the accounts of one intrusted with money, or in the money received by him. Mutual L. & B. Ass'n v. Price, 19 Fla. 135. The term is broad enough to cover defalcation, misappropriation, shrinkage, or costs, and, in its popular meaning, signifies deficiency from any cause. Clement v. Whisnant, 208 N.C. 167, 179 S.E. 430, 433, 101 A.L.R. 698.

DEFILE. To debauch, deflower, or corrupt the chastity of a woman. The term does not necessarily imply force or ravishment, nor does it convey defalcation, misappropriation, shrinkage, or costs, and, in its popular meaning, signifies deficiency from any cause. Wakefield v. The Peggy, 1 Cranch, 103, 2 L.Ed. 49.

DEFILEMENT. Uncleanness; impurity; corruption of morals or conduct. Young v. State, 194 Ind. 221, 141 N.E. 309, 311.

DEFINE. To explain or state the exact meaning of words and phrases; to state explicitly; to limit; to determine essential qualities of; to determine the precise significance of; to settle; to establish or prescribe authoritatively; to make clear. U. S. v. Smith, 5 Wheat. 160, 5 L.Ed. 57; Walling v. Yeakley, C.C.A.Colo., 140 F.2d 830, 832; Walters v. Richardson, 93 Ky. 374, 20 S.W. 279. To declare that a certain act shall constitute an offense is defining that offense. U. S. v. Arjona, 120 U.S. 488, 7 S.Ct. 628, 30 L.Ed. 728.

To "define" with respect to space, means to set or establish its boundaries authoritatively; to mark the limits of; to determine with precision or to exhibit clearly the boundaries of; to determine the end or limit; to fix or establish the limits. It is the equivalent to declare, fix or establish. Seeking out what exists already is not "defining." Redlands Foothill Groves v. Jacobs, D.C. Cal., 30 F.Supp. 995, 1004.

A definite failure of issue occurs when a precise time is fixed by a will for a failure of issue. An indefinite failure of issue is the period when the issue of the first taker shall become extinct and when there shall no longer be any issue of the grantee, but without reference to a particular time or event; Huxford v. Milligan, 50 Ind. 546; McWilliams v. Havel, 214 Ky. 320, 283 S.W. 103, 105.

DEFINITIO. Lat. Definition, or more strictly, limiting or bounding; as in the maxim of the civil law: Omnis definitio periculosa est, parum est enim ut non subverteri possit, (Dig. 50, 17, 202;) e., the attempt to bring the law within the boundaries of precise definitions is hazardous, as there are but few cases in which such a limitation cannot be subverted.

DEFINITION. A description of a thing by its properties; an explanation of the meaning of a word or term. Webster. The process of stating the exact meaning of a word by means of other words. Worcester. See Warner v. Beers, 23 Wend., N.Y., 103; Marvin v. State, 19 Ind. 181. Such a description of the thing defined, including all essential elements and excluding all nonessential, as to distinguish it from all other things and classes. Wilson v. Else, 204 Iowa 857, 216 N.W. 33, 37.

A distinction may be taken between a final and a definitive judgment. The former term is applicable when the judgment exhausts the powers of the particular court in which it is rendered; while the latter word designates a judgment that is above any review or contingency of reversal. U. S. v. The Peggy, 1 Cranch, 103, 2 L.Ed. 49.

DEFINITIVE SENTENCE. The final judgment, decree, or sentence of an ecclesiastical court. 3 Bl.Comm. 101.

DEFLUCT. To turn aside, to deviate from a straight or horizontal line or from a proper posi-DEFLORATION. Seduction or debauching. The act by which a woman is deprived of her virginity.

DEFORCE. In English Law
To withhold wrongfully; to withhold the possession of lands from one who is lawfully entitled to them. 3 Bl.Comm. 172; Phelps v. Baldwin, 17 Conn. 212.

In Scotch Law
To resist the execution of the law; to oppose by force a public officer in the execution of his duty. Bell.

DEFORCEMENT. Deforcement is where a man wrongfully holds lands to which another person is entitled. It therefore includes disseisin, abatement, discontinuance, and intrusion. Co. Litt. 331b; Hopper v. Hopper, 21 N.J.L. 543. But it is applied especially to cases, not falling under those heads, where the person entitled to the freehold has never had possession; thus, where a lord has a seignory, and lands escheat to him propter defectum sanguinis, but the seisin is withheld from him, this is a deforcement, and the person who withholds the seisin is called a "deforceor." 3 Bl.Comm. 172.

In Scotch Law
The opposition or resistance made to messengers or other public officers while they are actually engaged in the exercise of their offices. Ersk. Inst. 4, 4, 32.

DEFORCIANT. One who wrongfully keeps the owner of lands and tenements out of the possession of them. 2 Bl.Comm. 350.

DEFORCIARE. L. Lat. To withhold lands or tenements from the rightful owner. This is a word of art which cannot be supplied by any other word. Co. Litt. 331b.

DEFORCIATIO. L. Lat. To withhold lands or tenements from the rightful owner. This is a word of art which cannot be supplied by any other word. Co. Litt. 331b.

In insurance. Representations in application for insurance that applicant never had any "infirmit" or "deformity" must be construed as meaning deformation or infirmity of substantial character apparently materially impairing applicant’s health, which, if known, probably would have deterred company from issuing policy. (Life insurance) Eastern Dist. Piece Dye Works v. Travelers’ Ins. Co., 234 N.Y. 441, 138 N.E. 401, 404, 405, 26 A.L.R. 1505; (accident insurance) Commercial Casualty Ins. Co. v. Mathews, 57 Ga.App. 446, 195 S.E. 887, 892.

DEFOSSION. The punishment of being buried alive.

DEPRAUCION. In Spanish law. The crime committed by a person who fraudulently avoids the payment of some public tax.

DEPRAUCTION. Privation by fraud.

DEFUNCT. Deceased; a deceased person. A common term in Scotch law. A corporation which has ceased to function. Tozier v. Woodworth, 135 Me. 46, 188 A. 771, 773.

The term is synonymous with "dead." Farmers Union Co-op. Brokerage v. Palisade Farmers Union Local No. 714, 69 S.D. 126, 7 N.W.2d 293, 295.

DEGASTER. L. Fr. To waste.

DEGRADATION. A deprivation of dignity; dishonorable discharge from office. An ecclesiastical censure, whereby a clergyman is divested of his holy orders. There are two sorts by the canon law, one summary, by word only; the other solemn, by stripping the party degraded of those ornaments and rights which are the ensigns of his degree. Degradation is otherwise called "deposition," but the canonists have distinguished between these two terms, deeming the former as the greater punishment of the two. There is likewise a degradation of a lord or knight at common law, and also by act of parliament. Wharton.

DEGRADATIONS. A term for waste in the French law.

DEGRADING. Reviling; holding one up to public obloquy; lowering a person in the estimation of the public.

DEGREE. In General
The state or civil condition of a person. State v. Bishop, 15 Me. 122; An honorable state or condition to which a student is advanced in testimony of proficiency in arts and sciences. Commonwealth v. New England College of Chiropractic, 221 Mass. 190, 108 N.E. 895, 896; The grade or distance one thing may be removed from another. Superior Lloyds of America v. Foxworth, Tex. Civ.App., 178 S.W.2d 724, 725.

They are of pontifical origin. See 1 Schmidt, Thesaurus, 144; Vicat, Doctores; Minshew, Diet. Bachelor; Merlin Repertoire Univ.; Van Esen. pt. 1, tit. 10; Giannone, Istoria di Napoli, lib. xi. c. 2; for a full account of this matter.
DEGREE

In the Law of Descent and Family Relations
A step or grade, i.e., the distance, or number of removes, which separates two persons who are related by consanguinity. Thus we speak of a brother as being in the second degree of kindred. Calvert v. Beck, 240 Ala. 442, 199 So. 846, 847.

In Criminal Law
The term “degree” denotes a division or classification of one specific crime into several grades or stadia of guilt, according to the circumstances attending its commission. Thus, in some states, there may be “murder in the second degree.”

DEHORS. L. Fr. Out of; without; beyond; foreign to; unconnected with. Blackford v. Anderson, 226 Iowa 1138, 286 N.W. 735, 746. Dehors the record; foreign to the record. 3 Bl.Comm. 387.

DEHYDRATE. To deprive or to be free of water or elements of water or to suffer loss of water. In re Benner, Cust. & Pat.App., 46 F.2d 383, 384.

DEI GRATIA. Lat. By the grace of God. A phrase used in the formal title of a king or queen, importing a claim of sovereignty by the favor or commission of God. In ancient times it was incorporated in the titles of inferior officers, (especially ecclesiastical,) but in later use was reserved as an assertion of “the divine right of kings.”

DEI JUDICIAM. The judgment of God. The old Saxon trial by ordeal, so called because it was thought to be an appeal to God for the justice of a cause, and it was believed that the decision was according to the will and pleasure of Divine Providence. Wharton.

DEJACION. In Spanish law. Surrender; renunciation, the act of an insolvent in surrendering his property for the benefit of his creditors, of an heir in renouncing the succession, the abandonment of insured property to the underwriters.

DEJERATION. A taking of a solemn oath.

DEL BIEN ESTRE. L. Fr. In old English practice. Of well being; of form. The same as de bene esse. Britt. c. 39.

DEL CREDERE. In mercantile law. A phrase borrowed from the Italians, equivalent to our word “guaranty” or “warranty,” or the Scotch term “warrandice;” an agreement by which a factor, when he sells goods on credit, for an additional commission, (called a “del credere commision,”) guaranties the solvency of the purchaser and his performance of the contract. Such a factor is called a “del credere agent.” He is a mere surety, liable to his principal only in case the purchaser makes default. Story, Ag. 28; Lemnos Broad Silk Works v. Spiegelberg, 217 N.Y.S. 595, 597, 127 Misc. 855; Commercial Investment Trust v. Stewart, 235 Mich. 502, 209 N.W. 660, 661; Commonwealth v. Thorne, Neale & Co., 264 Pa. 408, 10? A. 814, 815; State v. Tuffs, 54 Mont. 20, 165 P. 1107, 1108.

DELAISSEMENT. In French marine law. Abandonment. Emerig. Tr. des Ass. ch. 17.

DELEGATION. In Scotch law. To accuse. Delated, accused. Delatit off arte and parte, accused of being accessory to. 3 How. St. Tr. 425, 440.

DELATIO. In the civil law. An accusation or information.

DELATOR. An accuser; an informer; a sycophant.

DELATURA. In old English law. The reward of an informer. Whishaw.

DELAY. To retard; obstruct; put off; postpone; defer; procrastinate; prolong the time of or before; hinder; interpose obstacles; as, when it is said that a conveyance was made to “hinder and delay creditors.” Mercantile Co. v. Arnold, 108 Ga. 449, 34 S.E. 176; Ellis v. Valentine, 65 Tex. 532; Blair v. Blair, 122 Me. 500, 120 A. 902, 905. The term does not imply dishonesty or involve moral wrong. Citizens & Southern Nat. Bank v. Kontz, 185 Ga. 131, 194 S.E. 536, 544.

DELAY RENTAL. Rent, usually on oil and gas leases, paid for additional time in which to utilize land. It does not depend on oil or gas produced, does not exhaust substance of land, and resembles a bonus payment, which is an advance royalty. Commissioner of Internal Revenue v. Wilson, C. C.A. Tex., 76 F.2d 766, 769; State v. Magnolia Petroleum Co., Tex.Civ.App., 173 S.W.2d 186, 190.

DELECTUS PERSONAE. Lat. Choice of the person. Johnston v. Winn, Tex.Civ.App., 105 S.W.2d 398, 400. By this term is understood the right of a partner to exercise his choice and preference as to the admission of any new members to the firm, and as to the persons to be so admitted, if any. People v. Herbert, 162 Misc. 817, 295 N.Y.S. 251, 253. The doctrine does not apply to corporations. Adams v. St. Clair, 185 Miss. 416, 188 So. 559, 560.

In Scotch Law
The personal preference which is supposed to have been exercised by a landlord in selecting his tenant, by the members of a firm in making choice of partners, in the appointment of persons to office, and other cases. Nearly equivalent to personal trust, as a doctrine in law. Bell.

Delegata potestas non potest delegari. 2 Inst. 597. A delegated power cannot be delegated.

DELEGATE. A person who is delegated or commissioned to act in the stead of another, Landro v. Pacific Atlantic S. S. Co., D.C.Wash., 30 F.Supp. 538, 539; a person to whom affairs are committed by another; an attorney.

A person elected or appointed to be a member of a representative assembly. Usually spoken of one sent to a special or occasional assembly or convention. Manston v. McIntosh, 58 Minn. 525, 60 N.W. 672, 28 L.R.A. 605.

The representative in congress of one of the organized territories of the United States. To send as an agent or representative; to commit to the care or management of another.

DELEGATES, THE HIGH COURT OF. In English law. Formerly the court of appeal from the ecclesiastical and admiralty courts. Abolished upon the judicial committee of the privy council being constituted the court of appeal in such cases.

DELEGATION. A sending away; a putting into commission; the assignment of a debt to another; the intrusting another with a general power to act for the good of those who depute him; a body of delegates.

At Common Law

The transfer of authority by one person to another; the act of making or commissioning a delegate.

The whole body of delegates or representatives sent to a convention or assembly from one district, place, or political unit are collectively spoken of as a "delegation."

In the Civil Law

A species of novation which consists in the change of one debtor for another, when he who is indebted substitutes a third person who obligates himself in his stead to the creditor, or to the person appointed by him so that the first debtor is acquitted and his obligation extinguished, and the creditor contents himself with the obligation of the second debtor. Delegation is essentially distinguished from any other species of novation, in this: that the former demands the consent of all three parties, but the latter that only of the two parties to the new debt. 1 Domat, § 2318; Adams v. Power, 48 Miss. 454.

Delegation is novation effected by the intervention of another person whom the debtor, in order to be liberated from his creditor, gives to such creditor, or to him whom the creditor appoints; and such person so given becomes obliged to the creditor in the place of the original debtor. Burge, Sur. 173.

Perfect delegation exists when the debtor who makes the obligation is discharged by the creditor.

Imperfect delegation exists when the creditor retains his rights against the original debtor. 2 Duvergney, n. 169.

Delegatus non potest delegare. A delegate cannot delegate; an agent cannot delegate his functions to a subagent without the knowledge or consent of the principal; the person to whom an office or duty is delegated cannot lawfully devolve the duty on another, unless he be expressly authorized so to do. 9 Coke, 77; Broom, Max. 840; 2 Kent, Comm. 633; 2 Steph. Comm. 119; Blake v. Allen, 221 N.C. 445, 20 S.E.2d 552, 554.

DELESTAGE. In French marine law. A discharging of ballast (lest) from a vessel.

DELETE. In Scotch law. To erase; to strike out.

DELETERIOUS. Hurtful, morally or physically; injurious, as influence; poisonous; unwholesome. State v. Crabtree Co., 218 Minn. 36, 15 N.W.2d 98.

Thus struvite crystals which developed in jar of wet shrimp after packing, O’Hare v. Petersen, 174 Misc. 484, 21 N.Y.2d 487, 491, and bones in fish and fragments of shell in oysters constitute "deleterious substances". United States v. 1232 Cases American Beauty Brand Oysters, D.C. Mo., 43 F.Supp. 749, 751.

DELF. A quarry or mine. 31 Eliz. c. 7.

Deliberandum est diu quod statuendum est semel. 12 Coke, 74. That which is to be resolved once for all should be long deliberated upon.

DELIVERATE, v. To weigh, ponder, discuss, regard upon, consider. Cole v. List & Weatherly Const. Co., La.App., 156 So. 88, 90. To examine, to consult, in order to form an opinion. McGregor v. State, 83 Tex. Cr.R. 35, 201 S.W. 184, 186. To weigh in the mind; to consider the reasons for and against; to consider maturely; reflect upon; as to deliberate a question; to weigh the arguments for and against a proposed course of action. People v. Thomas, 25 Cal.2d 880, 156 P.2d 7, 17, 18.

DELIVERATE, adj. Well advised; carefully considered; not sudden or rash; circumspect; slow in determining. McClendon v. Louisiana Cent. Lumber Co., 17 La.App. 246, 135 So. 754, 756. Willful rather than merely intentional. Cole v. List & Weatherly Const. Co., La.App., 156 So. 88, 90. Formed, arrived at, or determined upon as a result of careful thought and weighing of considerations, as a deliberate judgment or plan; carried on coolly and steadily, especially according to a preconceived design; given to weighing facts and arguments with a view to a choice or decision; careful in considering the consequences of a step; slow in action; unhurried; characterized by reflection; dispassionate; not rash. People v. Thomas, 25 Cal.2d 880, 156 P.2d 7, 17, 18.

By the use of this word, in describing a crime, the idea is conveyed that the perpetrator weighs the motives for the act and its consequences, the nature of the crime, or other things connected with his intentions, with a view to a decision thereon; that he carefully considers all these; and that the act is not suddenly committed. It implies that the perpetrator must be capable of the exercise of such mental powers as are called into use by deliberation and the consideration and weighing of motives and consequences. In re Nunnis, 188 App.Div. 424, 176 N.Y.S. 858, 865; Jenkins v. Carman Mfg. Co., 79 Or. 448, 155 P. 703, 705.

"Deliberation" and "premeditation" are of the same character of mental operations, differing only in degree. Deliberation is but prolonged premeditation. In other words, in law, deliberation is premeditation in a cool state of the blood, or, where there has been heat of passion, it is premeditation continued beyond the period within which there has been time for the blood to cool, in the given case. Demay premeditate without deliberating. Deliberation is only exercised in a cool state of the blood, while premeditation may be either in that state of the blood or in the heat of passion. State v. Hall, 40 N.M. 128, 55 P.2d 740, 742; People v. Thomas, 25 Cal.2d 880, 156 P.2d 7, 17; State v. Payne, 213 N. C. 719, 197 S.E. 573, 579.

DELIBERATELY. Willfully; with premeditation; intentionally; purposely; in cold blood. Averheart v. State, 158 Ark. 639, 238 S.W. 620, 621; State v. Young, 314 Mo. 612, 286 S.W. 29, 34; Csanyi v. Csanyi, 93 N.J.Eq. 11, 115 A. 76, 78; State v. Johnson, 92 Kan. 441, 140 P. 839, 840.

DELIBERATION. The act or process of deliberating. The act of weighing and examining the reasons for and against a contemplated act or course of conduct or a choice of acts or means. See Deliberate.

Delics debtor est odiosus in lege. A luxurious debtor is odious in law. 2 Bulst. 148. Imprisonment for debt has now, however, been generally abolished.

DELICT. In the Roman and civil law. A wrong or injury; an offense; a violation of public or private duty.

It will be observed that this word, taken in its most general sense, is wider in both directions than our English term "tort." On the one hand, it includes those wrongful acts which, while directly affecting some individual or his property, yet extend in their injurious consequences to the peace or security of the community at large, and hence rise to the grade of crimes or misdemeanors. These acts were termed in the Roman law "public delicts;" while those for which the only penalty exacted was compensation to the person injured primarily injured were designated "private delicts." On the other hand, the term appears to have included injurious actions which transpired without any malicious intention on the part of the doer. Thus Pothier gives the name "quasi delicts" to the acts of a person who, without malignity, but by an inexcusable imprudence, causes an injury to another. Poth.Obl. 116. But the term is used in modern jurisprudence as a convenient synonym of "tort."

Quasi Delict

An act whereby a person, without malice, but by fault, negligence, or imprudence not legally excusable, causes injury to another. They were four in number, viz.: (1) Qui judex Went suam fecit, being the offense of partiality or excess in the judex, (juryman.) (2) Dejectum effusumve aliquid, being the tort committed by one's servant in emptying or throwing something out of an attic or upper story upon a person passing beneath. (3) Darmnum infecturn, being the offense of hanging dangerous articles over the heads of persons passing along the king's highway. (4) Torts committed by one's agents in the course of their employment. Brown.

DELICTUAL FAULT. An act, productive of obligations, which takes place between persons juridically strangers to each other; it supposes the absence of obligation and its result is the creation of one. Reserve Ins. Co. v. Fabre, 149 So.2d 413, 416, 243 La. 982.

DELICTUM. Lat. A delict, tort, wrong, injury, or offense. Actions ex delicto are such as are founded on a tort, as distinguished from actions on contract.

Culpability, blameworthiness, or legal delinquency. The word occurs in this sense in the maxim, "In pari delicto melior est conditio defendentis" (which see).

A challenge of a juror propter delictum is for some crime or misdemeanor that affects his credit and renders him infamous. 3 Bl.Comm. 363; 2 Kent, Comm. 241.

DELIMIT. To mark or lay out the limits or boundary line of a territory or country; to fix or to mark the limits of; to demarcate; bound. Walling v. Yeakley, C.C.A.Colo., 140 F.2d 830, 832.

DELIMITATION. The act of fixing, marking off, or describing the limits or boundary line of a territory, country, authority, right, statutory exception or the like. See Delimit.

Delinquens quia provocatus punirii debit miatus. 3 Inst. 55. A delinquent provoked by anger ought to be punished more mildly.

DELINQUENT, n. In the civil law. He who has been guilty of some crime, offense, or failure of duty.

DELINQUENT. adj. As applied to a debt or claim, it means simply due and unpaid at the time appointed by law or fixed by contract; as, a delinquent tax. Chauncey v. Wass, 35 Minn. 1, 30 N.W. 826; Gallup v. Schmidt, 154 Ind. 196, 56 N. E. 450. As applied to a person, it commonly means that he is grossly negligent or in willful default in regard to his pecuniary obligations, or even that he is dishonest and unworthy of credit. Boyce v. Ewart, Rice S. C., 140; Ferguson v. Pittsburgh, 159 Pa. 435, 28 Atl. 118; Grocers' Ass'n v. Exton, 18 Ohio Cir.Ct.R. 321.

DELINQUENT CHILD. An infant of not more than specified age, Phillips v. State, Tex.Cr.App., 20 S.W.2d 790, 791, who has violated any law or who is incorrigible; (prostitute) Bolker v. State, 134 Neb. 255, 278 N.W. 377, 379; (thief) Rose v. State, 137 Tex.Cr.R. 316, 129 S.W.2d 639, 640; (felony) State v. Connolly, 190 La. 175, 182 So. 318, 319.

Although the terms dependent child and delinquent child, as used in juvenile court law, are largely synonymous, State v. Cleveenger, 161 Wash. 306, 296 P. 1054; a neglected and dependent child is not necessarily a delinquent child. In re Santillanes, 47 N.M. 140, 138 P.2d 503, 513.

DELINQUENT JUVENILE. See Delinquent Child.
DELINQUENT TAXES. Past due and unpaid taxes. Rv. v. Roach Drug Co., 113 Okl. 130, 239 P. 912, 918; Cornell v. Maverick Loan & Trust Co., 95 Neb. 9, 144 N.W. 1072, 1074.

DELIRIUM. In medical jurisprudence. Delirium is that state of the mind in which it acts without being directed by the power of volition, which is wholly or partially suspended. This happens most perfectly in dreams. But what is commonly called "delirium" is always preceded or attended by a feverish and highly diseased state of the body. The patient in delirium is wholly unconscious of surrounding objects, or conceives them to be different from what they really are. His thoughts seem to drift about, wildering and tossing amidst distracted dreams. And his observations, when he makes any, as often happens, are wild and incoherent; or, from excess of pain, he sinks into a low muttering, or silent and death-like stupor. The law contemplates this species of mental derangement as an intellectual eclipse; as a darkness occasioned by a cloud of disease passing over the mind; and which must soon terminate in health or in death. Supreme Lodge v. Lapp, 25 Ky. Law Rep. 74, 74 S.W. 656; Sommerville v. Greenhood, 65 Mont. 101, 210 P. 1048, 1054; Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W. of Arkansas, v. Mode, 157 Ark. 62, 247 S.W. 386, 388; (distinguished from insane delusion) Schoenhoff v. Haering, 327 Mo. 837, 38 S.W.2d 1011, 1015.

DELIRIUM FEBRILE. In medical jurisprudence. A form of mental aberration incident to fevers, and sometimes to the last stages of chronic diseases.

DELIRIUM TREMENS. A disorder of the nervous system, involving the brain and setting up an attack of temporary delusional insanity, sometimes attended with violent excitement or mania, caused by excessive and long continued indulgence in alcoholic liquors, or by the abrupt cessation of such use after a protracted debauch. Horn v. Commonwealth, 292 Ky. 587, 167 S.W.2d 58, 61; Hartin v. Hysee Inghram Tire Co., 153 Pa.Super. 121, 33 A.2d 471, 473. See Insanity.

DELIVERANCE. In practice. The verdict, rendered by a jury.

Second Deliverance
In practice. A writ allowed a plaintiff in replevin, where the defendant has obtained judgment for return of the goods, by default or non-suit in order to have the same distress again delivered to him, on giving the same security as before. 3 Bl.Comm. 150; 3 Steph.Comm. 668.

DELIVERY. The act by which the res or substance thereof is placed within the actual or constructive possession or control of another. Poor v. American Locomotive Co., C.C.A.111., 67 F.2d 626, 630.

What constitutes delivery depends largely on the intent of the parties. It is not necessary that delivery should be by manual transfer. Miller v. Hospelhorn, 176 Md. 356, 4 A.2d 728, 733.

"Delivery" required in conveyance of personal chattels as against all but vendor, is delivery in its natural sense; that is, a change of possession. Goodhue v. State St. Trust Co., 267 Mass. 28, 165 N.E. 701, 705.

In General
The transfer from one person to another of the res or a right or interest therein, which means more than physical transfer of possession, Murphy v. Smith, 291 Mass. 93, 195 N.E. 912; Pure Oil Co. v. Evans, 369 Ill. 416, 17 N.E.2d 23, 24. Although in the popular sense, in the case of a contract or lease or the like, it implies a transfer of the tangible contract. Lease, Roberts v. Cyr, 136 Me. 39, 1 A.2d 281, 282; release for injury, Pevesdorf v. Union Electric Light & Power Co., 333 Mo. 1155, 64 S.W.2d 939; check, Irving Trust Co. v. Jeff, 253 N.Y. 359, 171 N.E. 569; bank passbook, Brooks v. Mitchell, 163 Md. 1, 161 A. 261, 266, 84 A.L.R. 547.

Absolute and conditional. An absolute delivery, as distinguished from conditional delivery or delivery in escrow, is one which is complete upon the actual transfer of the instrument from the possession of the grantor. Dyer v. Skadan, 128 Mich. 348, 87 N.W. 277, 278, 92 Am.St.Rep. 461. A conditional delivery is one which passes the thing subject to delivery from the possession of the grantor, but is not to be completed by possession of the grantee, or a third person as his agent, until the happening of a specified event. Silliman v. Dobner, 165 Minn. 87, 205 N.W. 696, 697.

Constructive delivery is a general term, comprehending all those acts which, although not truly conferring a real possession of the thing sold on the vendee, have been held, by construction of law, equivalent to acts of real delivery.

Constructive delivery includes symbolic or substituted delivery and all those "traditiones fictae" which have been admitted into the law as sufficient to vest the absolute property in the vendee and bar the rights of lien and stoppage in transitu, such as marking and setting apart the goods as belonging to the vendee, charging him with warehouse rent, etc. See In re Nesto, C.C.A.Pa., 270 F. 503. A constructive delivery of personality takes place when the goods are set apart and notice given to the person to whom they are to be delivered. The Titania, C.C.A., 131 F. 229, 65 C.C.A. 215, or when, without actual transfer of the goods or their symbol, the conduct of the parties is such as to be inconsistent with any other supposition than that there has been a change in the nature of the holding. Swafford v. Spratt, 93 Mo.App. 631, 67 S.W. 701.

Delivery bond. A bond given upon the seizure of goods (as under the revenue laws) conditioned for their restoration to the defendant, or the payment of their value, if so adjudged.

Delivery order. An order addressed, in England, by the owner of goods to a person holding them on his behalf, requesting him to deliver them to a person named in the order. Delivery orders are chiefly used in the case of goods held by dock companies, wharfingers, etc. National Wholesale Grocery Co. v. Mann, 251 Mass. 238, 146 N.E. 791, 793.

Failure to make delivery, see Failure to Make Delivery.

Symbolical delivery. The constructive delivery of the subject-matter of a sale, where it is cumbersome or inaccessible, by the actual delivery of some article which is conventionally accepted as the symbol or representative of it, or which renders access to it possible, or which is the evidence of the purchaser’s title to it; as the key of a warehouse, or a bill of lading of goods on shipboard. Hall v. Kansas City Terra Cotta Co., 97 Kan. 103, 154 P. 210, 212, L.R.A.1916D, 361, Ann. Cas.1918D, 605.

In Conveyancing

The final and absolute transfer of a deed, properly executed, to the grantee, or to some person for his use, in such manner that it cannot be recalled by the grantor. Gatchell v. Gatchell, 127 Me. 328, 143 A. 169, 170; Arndt v. Lapel, 214 Iowa 594, 243 N.W. 605, 610; delivery to a stranger, Hall v. Hall, 292 Ky. 772, 168 S.W.2d 10, 14; or depositary, Stalting v. Stalting, 52 S.D. 309, 217 N.W. 386, 389.

In Law of Sales

"Delivery" occurs whenever, at time and place fixed by law or agreed on by parties, seller does everything necessary to put goods completely and unconditionally at buyer’s disposal. Fox v. Young, Tex.Civ.App., 91 S.W.2d 857, 859.

In Medical Jurisprudence

The act of a woman giving birth to her offspring. Blake v. Junkins, 35 Me. 433.

DELUSION. In medical jurisprudence. An insane delusion is an unreasoning and incorrigible belief in the existence of facts which are either impossible absolutely, or, at least, impossible under the circumstances of the individual. It is never the result of reasoning and reflection; it is not generated by them, and it cannot be dispelled by them; and hence it is not to be confounded with an opinion, however fantastic .the latter may be. Guiteau’s Case, D.C.D.C., 10 Fed. 161, 170; Davidson v. Piper, 221 Iowa 171, 265 N.W. 107, 109; McKinnon v. State, 51 Ga.App. 549, 181 S.E. 91; Hallucination as a delusion, Petroleum Casualty Co. v. Kincaid, Tex.Civ.App., 93 S.W.2d 499, 501; belief in the impossible, In re Leedom’s Estate, 347 Pa. 180, 32 A.2d 3; as respects testamentary capacity, In re McDowell’s Estate, 103 N.J.Eq. 346, 143 A. 325, 326.

Systematized Delusion

One based on a false premise, pursued by a logical process of reasoning to an insane conclusion; there being one central delusion around which other aberrations of the mind converge; Taylor v. McClintock, 87 Ark. 243, 112 S.W. 405. See Insanity.

DEM. An abbreviation for "demise;" e. g., Doe dem. Smith, Doe, on the demise of Smith.

DEMAIN. See Demesne.

An imperative request preferred by one person to another, under a claim of right, requiring the latter to do or yield something or to abstain from some act. Zimmerman v. Hicks, C.C.A., 7 F.2d 443, 445; Norwood Nat. Bank v. Piedmont Pub. Co., 106 S.C. 472, 91 S.E. 866, 867; school district’s request that depositary honor checks for salaries. School District of City of Lansing v. Fidelity & Casualty Co. of New York, 266 Mich. 189, 253 N.W. 263; demand for extradition, Ex parte King, 139 Me. 203, 28 A.2d 562, 564.
The seeking after a commodity or service. It is not something static, but necessarily contains the idea of "competition" and a realization that markets are as much limited by sales efforts as by capacity to produce. Mendota Coal & Coke Co. v. Eastern Ry. & Lumber Co., C.C.A.Wash., 53 F.2d 77, 82.

—Compulsory demand. "Compulsory demand" by the true owner of an article, justifying surrender and recovery by the one who surrenders it as against his vendor, means when the true owner presents his claim and establishes his paramount title. Jordan v. Van Duzee, 139 Minn. 103, 165 N.W. 877, 879, L.R.A. 1918B, 1136.

—Cross-demand. A demand that is preferred by one party to an action in opposition to a demand already preferred against him by his adversary. Drovers' State Bank v. Elliott, 97 Kan. 64, 154 P. 255, 256.

—Demand in reconvention. A demand which the defendant institutes in consequence of that which the plaintiff has brought against him. Used in Louisiana. Equivalent to a "counterclaim" elsewhere. McLeod v. Bertschey, 33 Wis. 177, 14 Am. Rep. 755.

—Demand note. A note that is due at once; one on which suit may be brought without any formal demand. Wilson v. Stark, 146 Miss. 498, 112 So. 390, 392.

—Legal demand. A demand properly made, as to form, time, and place, by a person lawfully authorized. Foss v. Norris, 70 Me. 118.

—On demand. A promissory note payable "on demand" is a present debt, and is payable without any actual demand, or, if a demand is necessary, the bringing of a suit is enough. Appeal of Anderson, 99 Pa. 424.

—Personal demand. A demand for payment of a bill or note, made by the drawer, acceptor or maker, in person. See 1 Daniel, Neg. Inst. § 589.

—Reasonable public demand for a bank. Such a desire upon the part of the community for the bank as will make its coming welcome and insure an amount of business sufficient to promise it success. It may come from the natural desire of the community and upon its own initiative, or it may be the result of propaganda. State v. State Securities Commission, 145 Minn. 221, 176 N.W. 759, 760.

DEMAND NOTE. A note which expressly states that it is payable on demand, on presentation or at sight; a note in which no time for payment is expressed. Cassity v. Cassity, 147 Kan. 411, 76 P.2d 862, 866; Kent v. Lampman, 59 Cal.App.2d 407, 139 P.2d 57, 59; Tarlton v. Johnson, Mo.App., 138 S.W.2d 49, 52; a note issued, accepted or indorsed when overdue, as regards person so issuing, accepting or indorsing it. Nees v. Hagan, 22 Tenn.App. 28, 118 S.W.2d 566, 568; DeLoach v. Adams Loan & Investment Co., 62 Ga.App. 61, 7 S.E.2d 580, 581.

DEMANDA. In Spanish law. The petition of a plaintiff, setting forth his demand. Las Partidas, pt. 3, tit. 10, 1. 3.

DEMANDANT. The plaintiff or party suing in a real action. Co. Litt. 127.

DEMANDRESS. A female demandent.

DEMEANOR. As respects a witness or other person, relates to physical appearance. People v. Vaughan, 131 Cal.App. 265, 21 P.2d 438. It embraces such facts as the tone of voice in which a witness' statement is made, the hesitation or readiness with which his answers are given, the look of the witness, his carriage, his evidences of surprise, his gestures, his zeal, his bearing, his expression, his yawns, the use of his eyes, his furtive or meaning glances, or his shrugs, the pitch of his voice, his self-possession or embarrassment, his air of candor or seeming levity. Rains v. Rains, 17 N.J.Misc. 310, 8 A.2d 715, 717.

DEMEASE. In old English law. Death.

DEMEMBRATION. In Scotch law. Maliciously cutting off or otherwise separating one limb from another. 1 Hume, 323; Bell.

DEMENS. One whose mental faculties are enfeebled; one who has lost his mind; distinguished from amens, one totally insane. 4 Coke, 128.

DEMENTED. Of unsound mind.

DEMENTENANT EN AVANT. L. Fr. From this time forward. Kelham.

DEMENTIA. See Insanity.

DEMENTIA PRAECOX. A term used to include a wide range of mental disorders which occur in early life. It is also called adolescent insanity and schizophrenia. Dementia praecox includes three types, namely, primary dementia, catatonia, and hebephrenia. Loftin v. Yancey, 182 Okl. 313, 77 P.2d 107, 108; Honrath v. New York Life Ins. Co., 65 S.D. 480, 275 N.W. 258, 259, 112 A.L.R. 1272; Lee v. United States, C.C.A.Ga., 91 F.2d 326, 330. Also, see Insanity.

DEMESNE. Domain; dominical; held in one's own right, and not of a superior; not allotted to tenants.

DEMESNE. Domain; dominical; held in one's own right, and not of a superior; not allotted to tenants.

In the language of pleading, own; proper; original. Thus, son assault demesne, his own assault, his assault originally or in the first place.

Ancient Demesne

See Ancient.

Demesne as of Fee

A man is said to be seised in his demesne as of fee of a corporeal inheritance, because he has a property, dominicum or demesne, in the thing itself. But when he has no dominion in the thing itself, as in the case of an incorporeal hereditament, he is said to be seised as of fee, and not in his demesne as of fee. 2 Bl. Comm. 106; Littleton, § 10; Barnet v. Ihrie, 17 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 196.
Demesne Lands

In English law. Those lands of a manor not granted out in tenancy, but reserved by the lord for his own use and occupation. Lands set apart and appropriated by the lord for his own private use, as for the supply of his table, and the maintenance of his family; the opposite of tenemental lands. Tenancy and demesne, however, were not in every sense the opposites of each other; lands held for years or at will being included among demesne lands, as well as those in the lord's actual possession. Spelman; 2 Bl. Comm. 90.

Demesne Lands of the Crown

That share of lands reserved to the crown at the original distribution of landed property, or which came to it afterwards by forfeiture or otherwise. 1 Bl. Comm. 286; 2 Steph. Comm. 550.

Demesnial

Pertaining to a demesne.

DEMI. French. Half; the half. Used chiefly in composition.

As to demi "Mark," "Official," "Vill," see those titles.

DEMI-SANGUE, or DEMY-SANGUE. Half-blood.

DEMIDIEATAS. In old records. A half or moiety.

DEMIES. In some universities and colleges this term is synonymous with "scholars."

DEMINUTIO. In the civil law. A taking away; loss or deprivation. See Capitis Deminutio.

—Demise and redemise. In conveyancing. Mutual leases made from one party to another on each side, of the same land, or something out of it; as when A. grants a lease to B. at a nominal rent (as of a pepper corn), and B. redemises the same property to A. for a shorter time at a real, substantial rent. Jacob; Whishaw.

—Demise of the crown. The natural dissolution of the king is generally so called; an expression which signifies merely a transfer of property. By demise of the crown we mean only that, in consequence of the disunion of the king's natural body from his body politic, the kingdom is transferred or demised to his successor, and so the royal dignity remains perpetual. 1 Bl. Comm. 249; Plowd. 234.

—Several demises. In English practice. In the action of ejectment, it was formerly customary, in case there were any doubt as to the legal estate being in the plaintiff, to insert in the declaration several demises from as many different persons; but this was rendered unnecessary by the provisions of the common-law procedure acts.

—Single demise. A declaration in ejectment might contain either one demise or several. When it contained only one, it was called a "declaration with a single demise."

DEMISI. Lat. I have demised or leased. Demisi, concessi, et ad firmam tradidi; have demised, granted, and to farm let. The usual operative words in ancient leases, as the corresponding English words are in the modern forms. 2 Bl. Comm. 317, 318; Koch v. Hustis, 113 Wis. 599, 87 N.W. 834.

DEMISIO. L. Lat. A demise or letting. Chiefly used in the phrase ex demissione (on the demise), which formed part of the title of the cause in the old actions of ejectment, where it signified that the nominal plaintiff (a fictitious person) held the estate "on the demise" of, that is, by a lease from, the real plaintiff.

DEMobilization. In military law. The dismissal of an army or body of troops from active service.

DEMOCRACY. That form of government in which the sovereign power resides in and is exercised by the whole body of free citizens, as distinguished from a monarchy, aristocracy, or oligarchy. According to the theory of a pure democracy, every citizen should participate directly in the business of governing, and the legislative assembly should comprise the whole people. But the ultimate lodgment of the sovereignty being the distinguishing feature, the introduction of the representative system does not remove a government from this type. However, a government of the latter kind is sometimes specifically described as a "representative democracy."

Democracy is loosely used of governments in which the sovereign powers are exercised by all the people or a large number of them, or specifically, in modern use, of a representative government where there is equality of rights without hereditary or arbitrary differences in rank or privilege; and is distinguished from aristocracy. * * * In modern representative democracies, as the United States and France, though the governing body, that is, the electorate, is a minority of the total population, the principle on which the government is based is popular sovereignty, which distinguishes them from aristocracies. Webster's New Int.Dict.

DEMOCRATIC. Of or pertaining to democracy, or to a political party called "democratic," particularly, in the United States, the Democratic party, which succeeded the Anti-federalist, or Republican, party.

DEMOLISH. To throw or pull down; to raze; to destroy the fabrication of; to pull to pieces; hence to ruin; destroy. Star Mfg. Co. v. Quarries, 172 Okt. 550, 46 P.2d 497, 498. To destroy totally or to commence the work of total destruction with the purpose of completing the same. 50 L.J.M.C. 141. It is not synonymous with "remove." Durrett v. Woods, 155 La. 533, 99 So. 430, 431.

DEMONETIZATION. The disuse of a particular metal for purposes of coinage. The withdrawal of the value of a metal as money.

DEMONSTRATE. To teach by exhibition of samples; to derive from admitted premises by steps of reasoning which admit of no doubt; to prove indubitably. Espenhan v. Barker, 121 Or. 621, 256 P. 766, 768. To show or prove value or merits by operation. J. A. Fay & Egan Co. v. Mims, 151 S.C. 484, 149 S.E. 246, 248.

DEMONSTRATIO. Lat. Description; addition; denomination. Occurring often in the phrase, "Falsa demonstratio non nocet," (a false description does not harm.) 2 Bla. Comm. 382, n.; 2 P. Wms. 140; 1 Greenl. Ev. § 291; Wigr. Wills 208, 233.

DEMONSTRATION. Description; pointing out. That which is said or written to designate a thing or person.

Evidence

False Demonstration
See False Demonstration.

Demonstrative evidence of negligence has been applied to this kind of negligence which is usually expressed by res ipsa loquitur.

DEMONSTRATIVE LEGACY. See Legacy.

DEMPSTER. In Scotch law. A doomsman. One who pronounced the sentence of court. 1 How. State Tr. 937.

DEMUR. To present a demurrer; to take an exception to the sufficiency in point of law of a pleading or state of facts alleged. See Demurrer.

DEMURRABLE. Subject to a demurrer. A pleading, petition, or the like, is said to be demurrable when it does not state such facts as support the claim, prayer, or defense put forward. 5, Ch. Div. 979.

DEMURRAGE. In maritime law. The sum which is fixed by the contract of carriage, or which is allowed, as remuneration to the owner of a ship for the detention of his vessel beyond the number of days allowed by the charter-party for loading and unloading or for sailing. Also the detention of the vessel by the freighter beyond such time. See 3 Kent, Comm. 203; 2 Steph. Comm. 185. Continental Grain Co. v. Armour Fertilizer Works, D.C.N.Y. 22 F.Supp. 49, 54; Yone Suzuki v. Central Argentine Ry., C.C.A.N.Y., 27 F.2d 795, 804. The term has been adopted in railroad practice. Central R. Co. of N. J. v. Gallena-Poole, Inc., 107 N.J.Eq. 267, 152 A. 251, 252; Sibley, L. B. & S. Ry. Co. v. Braswell Sand & Gravel Co., La.App., 199 So. 427, 428.

The sum agreed to be paid to the ship for delay caused without her fault, and which ordinarily does not begin to run until the lay days have been used up. Earn Line S. S. Co. v. Manati Sugar Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 269 F. 774, 776. The amount agreed upon or allowed by law for unreasonable detention. Clyde v. Wood, 179 N.Y.S. 252, 255, 189 App. Div. 737; W. R. Grace & Co. v. Hansen, C.C.A.Wash., 273 F. 486, 496.

"Demurrage" is only an extended freight or reward to the vessel, in compensation for the earnings she is improperly caused to lose. Every improper detention of a vessel may be considered a demurrage, and compensation under that name be obtained for it. Donaldson v. McDowell, Holmes, 290, Fed.Cas.No.3,985.

"Demurrage" is a claim for damages for failure of the consignee to accept delivery of the goods. Little v. One Cargo of Lumber, D.C.Fla., 2 F.2d 608, 609.

DEMURRANT. One who demurs; the party who, in pleading, interposes a demurrer.
DEMURRER.

In Equity

An allegation of a defendant, which, admitting the matters of fact alleged by the bill to be true, shows that as they are therein set forth they are insufficient for the plaintiff to proceed upon or to oblige the defendant to answer; or that, for some reason apparent on the face of the bill, or on account of the omission of some matter which ought to be contained therein, or for want of some circumstances which ought to be attendant thereon, the defendant ought not to be compelled to answer to the whole bill, or to some certain part thereof. Mitf. Eq. Pl. 107. See, also, Goldsmith v. Mead Johnson & Co., 176 Md. 682, 7 A.2d 176, 179.

A general demurrer in equity, as a separate entity from a demurrer on specific grounds, tests the equity of a bill in the same manner as a motion to dismiss for want of equity, and, in considering the bill on such a demurrer, amendable defects are taken as amended. Johnson v. Pugh, 193 So. 317, 239 Ala. 12.

By Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, demurrers, pleas and exceptions for insufficiency of a pleading are abolished; every defence in law shall be made by motion or by answer; motions going to jurisdiction, venue, process, or failure to state a claim are to be disposed of before trial, unless the court orders otherwise.

In Pleading

The formal mode of disputing the sufficiency in law of the pleading of the other side. In effect it is an allegation that, even if the facts as stated in the pleading to which objection is taken be true, yet their legal consequences are not such as to put the demurring party to the necessity of answering them or proceeding further with the cause. Green v. Carter, 28 Ohio App. 492, 162 N. E. 814, 815; State v. Broad River Power Co., 177 S.C. 240, 181 S.E. 41; Mountain Park Institute v. Lovill, 198 N.C. 642, 153 S.E. 114, 116; State v. California Packing Corporation, 105 Utah 191, 145 P.2d 784.

A "demurrer" is not an absolute admission of any fact but simply admits those facts that are well pleaded. Commonwealth ex rel. Duff v. Keenan, 347 Pa. 574, 33 A.2d 244, 248.

An objection made by one party to his opponent’s pleading, alleging that he ought not to answer it, for some defect in law in the pleading. It admits the facts, and refers the law arising thereon to the court. R. L. Davies & Co. v. Blomberg, 185 N.C. 496, 117 S.E. 497.

It imports that the objecting party will not proceed; but will wait the judgment of the court whether he is bound so to do. Co.Litt. 71b; Step.P1. 61; Kramer v. Barth, 139 N.Y.S. 341, 344, 79 Misc. 80.

Classification and Varieties

A general demurrer is a demurrer framed in general terms, without showing specifically the nature of the objection, and which is usually referred to where the objection is to matter of substance. Step.P1. 140-142; 1 Chit.Pl. 663. See Maryland Casualty Co. v. Arnold, 51 Ga.App. 562, 180 S.E. 906, 907.

Thus, a demurrer on the ground that the complaint sets forth no cause of action, is a general demurrer, Alabama Power Co. v. Curry, 228 Ala. 444, 153 So. 634; and a motion to dismiss a bill on ground that there is no equity apparent on the face thereof or that court has no jurisdiction is treated as a general demurrer. People v. Sterling, 357 Ill. 354, 192 N.E. 229, 231.

A general demurrer to an indictment challenges only matters of form and substance appearing on its face. It is one which raises an objection that averments are insufficient in law to support the action or defense without specifying any particular cause or defect, and is sufficient only to reach matters of substance. Mountain Park Institute v. Lovill, 198 N. C. 642, 153 S.E. 114, 116.

A motion to dismiss a complaint for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted is equivalent to a general demurrer. Louisiana Farmers’ Protective Union v. Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. of America, D.C.Ark., 40 F.Supp. 897, 908.

While general demurrer on specific grounds relating to different allegations of bill may be called "special demurrer," which attacks different parts of bill specifically, such demurrer fails, if bill is good as pleading and remaining allegations are sufficient to support relief prayed. Forcum v. Symmes, 106 Fla. 510, 143 So. 630, 631.

A speaking demurrer is one which, in order to sustain itself, requires the aid of a fact not appearing on the face of the pleading objected to, or, in other words, which alleges or assumes the existence of a fact not already pleaded, and which constitutes the ground of objection and is condemned both by the common law and the code system of pleading. Ellis v. Perley, 200 N.C. 403, 157 S.E. 29, 30. Ferris v. Union Sa. Bank, 45 Ga.App. 544, 165 S.E. 450; Preston A. Blair Co. v. Rose, 56 Idaho 114, 51 P.2d 209, 212; Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Perrin, 184 Miss. 249, 183 So. 917, 920; Town of Randolph v. Lyon, 106 Vt. 495, 175 A. 1, 2; Whaley v. First Nat. Bank, 229 Ala. 153, 155 So. 574.

A speaking demurrer is one which alleges some new matter, not disclosed by the pleading against which the demurrer is aimed and not judicially known or legally presumed to be true. Blythe v. Enslen, 219 Ala. 638, 123 So. 71, 73; Kansas Life Ins. Co. v. First Bank of Truscott, Tex.Civ.App., 47 S.W.2d 675, 677; In re Ferris’ Estate, Iowa, 14 N.W.2d 889, 894.

A parol demurrer (not properly a demurrer at all) was a staying of the pleadings; a suspension of the proceedings in an action during the non-age of an infant, especially in a real action. Now abolished. 3 Bl. Comm. 300.

DEN AND STROND. In old English law. Liberty for ships or vessels to run aground, or come ashore (strand themselves). Cowell.

DENARIATE. In old English law. As much land as is worth one penny per annum.

DENARII. An ancient general term for any sort of petunia numerata, or ready money. The French use the word "denier" in the same sense, -payer de ses propres deniers.

DENARII DE CARITATE. In English law. Customary oblations made to a cathedral church at Pentecost.

DENARIUS. The chief silver coin among the Romans, worth 8d.; it was the seventh part of a Roman ounce. Also an English penny. The denarius was first coined five years before the first Punic war, B. C. 269. In later times a copper coin was called "denarius." • Smith, Dict. Antiq.

DENARIUS DEL (Lat. "God's penny.") Earnest money; money given as a token of the completion of a bargain. It differs from arrhce in this: that arrhce is a part of the consideration, while the denarius Dei is no part of it. The latter was given away in charity; whence the name. 1 Duvergny, n. 132; 3 Duvergny, n. 49; Rupt de Jur., Denier a Dieu.

DENARIUS TERTIUS COMITATUS. In old English law. A third part or penny of the county paid to its earl, the other two parts being reserved to the crown.

DENSITY SANKE, DEMY SANGUE. Half-blood. A corruption of demi-sang.

by way of a general denial is the equivalent of, and substitute for, the general issue under the common-law system of pleading. It gives to the defendant the same right to require the plaintiff to establish by proof all the material facts necessary to show his right to a recovery as was given by that plea. Kline v. Harris, 30 N.D. 421, 152 N.W. 687, 688, Ann.Cas.1917D, 1176.

DENIER. L. Fr. In old English law. Denial; refusal. Denier is when the rent (being demanded upon the land) is not paid. Finch, Law, b. 3, c. 5.

DENIER A DIEU. In French law. Earnest money; a sum of money given in token of the completion of a bargain. The phrase is a translation of the Latin Denarius Dei, (q. v.).

DENIZATION. The act of making one a denizen; the conferring of the privileges of citizenship upon an alien born. Cro. Jac. 540. See Denizen.

DENIZE. To make a man a denizen or citizen.

DENIZEN. In English law. A person who, being an alien born, has obtained, ex donatione regis, letters patent to make him an English subject,—a high and incommunicable branch of the royal prerogative. A denizen is in a kind of middle state between an alien and a natural-born subject, and partakes of the status of both of these. 1 Bl. Comm. 374; 7 Coke 6; Ex parte Gilroy, D.C. N.Y., 257 F. 110, 128.

The term is used to signify a person who, being an alien by birth, has obtained letters patent making him an English subject. The king may denize, but not naturalize, a man; the latter requiring the consent of parliament, as under the naturalization act, 1870, 33 & 34 Vict. c. 14. A denizen holds a position midway between an alien and a natural-born or naturalized subject, being able to take lands by purchase or devise, (which an alien could not until 1870 do,) but not able to take lands by descent, (which a natural-born or naturalized subject may do.) Brown.

The denizen becomes a British subject from the date of the letters while a naturalized person is placed in a position equivalent to that of a natural-born subject; Dicey, Const.Laws 164.

The word is also used in this sense in South Carolina. See McClanaghan v. McClanaghan, 1 Strob.Eq., S.C., 319, 47 Am. Dec. 532.

In American law. A dweller; a stranger admitted to certain rights in a foreign country or as one who lives habitually in a country but is not a native born citizen; one holding a middle state between an alien and a natural born subject. United States ex rel. Zdunic v. Uhl, D.C. N.Y., 46 F.Supp. 688, 691. One who has some relation to the enemy nation which is not lost by the alien's presence within the United States. United States ex rel. Zdunic v. Uhl, C.C.A.N.Y., 137 F.2d 858, 861; United States ex rel. D'Esquiva v. Uhl, C.C.A.N.Y., 137 F.2d 903, 905.

Thus, one who lived and worked in Austria in 1938 at time Germany obtained control of Austrian government, and continued to live there until leaving for the United States in 1939, at which time he was issued a German passport, was a “denizen” of Germany, within Enemy Alien Act. United States ex rel. Zdunic v. Uhl, D.C.N.Y., 47 F.Supp. 520.

A denizen, in the primary, but obsolete, sense of the word, is a natural-born subject of a country. Co. Litt. 129a; Levy v. McCartee, 6 Pet. 102, 116, 8 L.Ed. 334.

DENMAN’S (LORD) ACT. An English statute, for the amendment of the law of evidence, (6 & 7 Vict. c. 85,) which provides that no person offered as a witness shall thereafter be excluded by reason of incapacity, from crime or interest, from giving evidence.

DENMAN’S (MR.) ACT. An English statute, for the amendment of procedure in criminal trials, (28 & 29 Vict. c. 18,) allowing counsel to sum up the evidence in criminal as in civil trials, provided the prisoner be defended by counsel.

DENOMBREMENT. In French feudal law. A minute or act drawn up, on the creation of a fief, containing a description of the fief, and all the rights and incidents belonging to it. Guyot, Inst. Feud. c. 3.

DENOMINATIO FIERI DEBET A DIGNIORI-BUS. Denomination should be made from the more worthy.

DENOMINATION. The act of naming. A society of individuals known by the same name, usually a religious society.

DENOMINATIONAL. adj. Of, or pertaining to, a denomination; sectarian. Wesley Foundation at Seattle v. King County, 185 Wash. 12, 52 P.2d 1247, 1250; Constitutional Defense League v. Waters, 308 Pa. 150, 162 A. 216, 217.

DENOUNCE. To declare (an act or thing) to be a crime and prescribe a punishment for it. State v. De Hart, 109 La. 570, 33 So. 605. The word is also used (not technically but popularly) as the equivalent of “accuse” or “inform against.”

The term is frequently used in regard to treaties, indicating the act of one nation in giving notice to another nation of its intention to terminate an existing treaty between the two nations. The French dénoncer means to declare, to lodge an information against. Bellows, Fr. Diet.

DENOUNCEMENT.

In Mexican Mining Law

Denouncement is an application to the authorities for a grant of the right to work a mine, either on the ground of new discovery, or on the ground of forfeiture of the rights of a former owner, through abandonment or contravention of the mining law. Cent. Dict. See Castillero v. U.S., 2 Black, 109, 17 L.Ed. 360; Stewart v. King, 85 Or. 14, 166 P. 55, 56.

A ”denouncement” is an application for the acquisition of land for mining purposes, under certain rules prescribed by Mexican laws. The application is called the “denouncement,” and, when approved by the Mexican government, is called “concession” or “title,” sometimes “patent.” It is then a grant given by the government to use the land applied for, for the purpose of mining, and is called the “title.” Winningham v. Dyo, Tex.Com.App., 48 S.W.2d 600, 603.
In Spanish and Mexican Law

A judicial proceeding for the forfeiture of land held by an alien.

Though real property might be acquired by an alien in fraud of the law,—that is, without observing its requirements,—he nevertheless retained his right and title to it, but was liable to be deprived of it by the proper proceeding of denouncement, which in its substantive characteristics was equivalent to the inquest of office found, at common law. De Merle v. Mathews, 26 Cal. 477.

The "denouncement of a new work" is a proceeding to obtain an order of court, in the nature of an injunction, against the construction of a new building or other work, which, if completed, would injuriously affect the plaintiff's property. Von Schmidt v. Huntington, 1 Cal. 55.

DENSHIRING OF LAND. (Otherwise called "burn-beating.") A method of improving land by casting parings of earth, turf, and stubble into heaps, which when dried are burned into ashes for a compost. Cowell.

DENTIFRICE. Any preparation used for cleansing the teeth. In re Edmand, Cust. & Pat.App., 39 F.2d 723.

DENUMERATION. The act of present payment.

DENUNCIA DE OBRA NUEVA. In Spanish law. The denouncement of a new work; being a proceeding to restrain the erection of some new work, as, for instance, a building which may, if completed, injuriously affect the property of the complainant; it is of a character similar to the interdicts of possession. Escriche; Von Schmidt v. Huntington, 1 Cal. 63.

DENUNCIATION.

In the Civil Law

The act by which an individual informs a public officer, whose duty it is to prosecute offenders, that a crime has been committed. See 1 Bro.Civ. Law 447; Ayliffe, Parerg. 210; Pothier, Proc.Cr. sect. 2, § 2.

The giving of an information in the ecclesiastical courts by one who was not the accuser.

In Scotch Practice

The act by which a person is declared to be a rebel, who has disobeyed the charge. given on letters of horning. Bell.

DEODAND. (L. Lat. Deo dandum, a thing to be given to God.) In English law. Any personal chattel which was the immediate occasion of the death of any reasonable creature, and which was forfeited to the crown to be applied to pious uses, and distributed in alms by the high almoner. 1 Hale, P.C. 419; Fleta, lib. 1, c. 25; 1 Bl.Comm. 300; 2 Steph.Comm. 365. See Parker-Harris Co. v. Tate, 135 Tenn. 509, 188 S.W. 54, L.R.A.1916F, 935.

DEOR HEDGE. In old English law. The hedge inclosing a deer park.

DEPART. To divide or separate actively. The departing of gold and silver were no more than the dividers and refiners of those metals. Cowell.

In Maritime Law

To leave a port; to be out of a port. To depart imports more than to sail, or set sail. A warranty in a policy that a vessel shall depart on or before a particular day is a warranty not only that she shall sail, but that she shall be out of the port on or before that day. 3 Maule & S. 461; 3 Kent Comm. 307, note. "To depart" does not mean merely to break ground, but fairly to set forward upon the voyage. Moir v. Assur. Co., 6 Taunt. 241; Young v. The Orpheus, 119 Mass. 185; The Helen Brown (D.C.) 28 F. 111.

In Pleading

To forsake or abandon the ground assumed in a former pleading, and assume a new one. See Departure.

DEPARTMENT. One of the territorial divisions of a country. The term is chiefly used in this sense in France, where the division of the country into departments is somewhat analogous, both territorially and for governmental purposes, to the division of an American state into counties. The United States have been divided into military de-
DEPARTMENT

DEPARTMENTS, including certain portions of the country. Parker v. U. S., 1 Pet. 293, 7 L.Ed. 150.

Generally, a branch or division of governmental administration. Glendinning v. Curry, 153 Fla. 398, 14 So.2d 794, 802.

One of the divisions of the executive branch of government. Used in this sense in the United States, where each department is charged with a specific class of duties, and comprises an organized staff of officials; e. g., the department of state, department of war, etc.

With reference to state or municipal administration, a "bureau" is merely a division of a department. In re McLaughlin, 210 N.Y.S. 68, 72, 124 Misc. 766.

DEPARTMENT STORE. Generally, a store in which a variety of merchandise is arranged in or offered for sale from several departments or sections, but the term cannot be applied with any certainty to a particular business and is too indefinite to be used as a classification for the purpose of taxation. Barker Bros. v. City of Los Angeles, 10 Cal.2d 603, 76 P.2d 97.

In Maritime Law

A deviation from the course prescribed in the policy of insurance.

In Pleading

The statement of matter in a replication, rejoinder, or subsequent pleading, as a cause of action or defense, which is not pursuant to the previous pleading of the same party, and which does not support and fortify it. 2 Williams, Saund. 84a, note 1; 2 Wils. 98; Co.Litt. 304a; Hanna v. Royce, 119 Or. 450, 249 P. 173, 175.

A departure occurs when party departs from cause or defense first made and has recourse to another. Livingston v. Malever, 103 Fla. 200, 137 So. 113, 118; Clonts v. State, 19 Ala.App. 130, 95 So. 562; Northwestern Nat. Life Ins. Co. v. Ward, 56 Okl. 188, 158 P. 524, 525; Burrell v. Masters, 65 Colo. 310, 176 P. 316, 317. Or, in other words, when the second pleading contains matter not pursuant to the former, and which does not support and fortify it. Hence a departure obviously can never take place till the replication. Steph.Pl. 410. Each subsequent pleading must pursue or support the former one; i. e., the replication must support the declaration, and the rejoinder the plea, without departing out of it. 3 Bl.Comm. 310. An amend-DEPARTURE IN DESPITE OF COURT. In old English practice. The tenant in a real action, having once appeared, was considered as constructively present in court until again called upon. Hence if, upon being demanded, he failed to appear, he was said to have "departed in despine [i. e., contempt] of the court." Co.Litt. 139a; 8 Co. 62a; 1 Rolle, Abr. 583; Metc.Yelv. 211.

DEPASTURE. In old English law. To pasture. "If a man depastures unprofitable cattle in his ground." Bunb. 1, case 1.

DEPECULATION. A robbing of the prince or commonwealth; an embezzeing of the public treasure.

DEPENDENCY. A territory distinct from the country in which the supreme sovereign power resides, but belonging rightfully to it, and subject to the laws and regulations which the sovereign may think proper to prescribe. U. S'. v. The Nanc, 3 Wash.C.C. 286, Fed.Cas.No.15,854; Posadas v. National City Bank of N. Y., Phil.Islands, 56 S.Ct. 349, 350, 296 U.S. 497, 80 L.Ed. 351.

It differs from a colony, because it is not settled by the citizens of the sovereign or mother state; and from possession, because it is held by other title than that of mere conquest.

A relation between two persons, where one is sustained by another or looks to or relies on aid of another for support or for reasonable necessities consistent with dependent's position in life. Peterson v. Industrial Commission, 331 Ill. 254, 162 N.E. 846, 847.

DEPENDENT, n. One who derives support from another; Milkovich v. Industrial Comm., 91 Utah, 498, 64 P.2d 1290, 1293; Texas Employers Ins. Ass'n v. Arnold, Tex.Civ.App., 62 S.W.2d 609, 611; not merely persons who derive a benefit from the earnings of the deceased; [1899] 1 Q.B. 1005; Havey v. Erie R. Co., 88 N.J.Law, 684, 96 A. 995, 996. One who depends on or is sustained by another, or who relies on another for support or favor. King v. Illinois Steel Corporation, 92 Ind. App. 456, 176 N.E. 161, 162.

DEPENDENT, adj. Deriving existence, support, or direction from another; conditioned, in respect to force or obligation, upon an extraneous act or fact.
DEPLETE. To reduce or lessen, as by use, exhaustion, or waste. McKnight v. U.S., C.C.A.Cal., 78 F.2d 931, 933.

DEPOLYMERIZATION. In connection with the devulcanizing of vulcanized rubber, the act of breaking into smaller aggregations the rubber molecules, which consist of hydrogen and carbon, thus rendering the waste rubber plastic. Philadelphia Rubber Works Co. v. United States Rubber Reclaiiming Works, D.C.N.Y., 225 F. 789, 791.

DEPOSE. In Scotch practice. To depose; to make oath in writing.

DEPONENT. In practice. One who deposes (that is, testifies or makes oath, now in writing) to the truth of certain facts; one who makes oath to a written statement. The party making an affidavit is generally so called, though in the United States the term "affiant" is also used with reference to one making an affidavit, and are synonymous. Walden v. Crego's Estate, 238 Mich. 564, 285 N.W. 457, 461.

DEPENDING. In practice. Pending or undetermined; in progress. See 5 Coke, 47.

Under a statute relating to dependent children, "dependent" is synonymous with "neglected," but not with "delinquent." People v. Ellis, 185 Ill.App. 417, 420; Durres v. Deckard, 105 Ind.App. 674, 17 N.E.2d 481, 484.

Dependent conditions. Mutual covenants which go to the whole consideration on both sides. Long v. Addix, 184 Ala. 236, 63 So. 982, 984; Palmer v. Fox, 274 Mich. 252, 264 N.W. 361, 104 A.L.R. 1057.

Dependent contract. One which depends or is conditional upon another. One which it is not the duty of the contractor to perform until some obligation contained in the same agreement has been performed by the other party. Ham. Parties, 17, 29, 30, 109.

Dependent covenant. See Covenant.

Dependent promise. One which it is not the duty of the promisor to perform until some obligation contained in the same agreement has been performed by the other party. Hamm. Partn. 17, 29, 30, 109; Harr. Const. 152.

DEPENDENT RELATIVE REVOCATION. The doctrine which regards as mutually dependent the acts of one destroying a will and thereupon substituting another instrument for distribution of estate, when both acts are result of one plan, so that, if second act, through incompleteness or other defect, fails to accomplish its intended purpose, and it thereby becomes evident that testator was misled when he destroyed his will, act of destruction is considered as bereft of intent of revocation and way for probate of destroyed will is opened. Flanders v. White, 142 Or. 375, 18 P.2d 823, 827; In re Nelson's Estate, 183 Minn. 295, 236 N.W. 459, 461.

DEPENSAS. In Spanish-American law. Spaces of ground in towns reserved for commons or public pasturage. 12 Pet. 443, note, 9 L.Ed. 1150.

DEPORTATION. Banishment to a foreign country, attended with confiscation of property and deprivation of civil rights. A punishment derived from the deportatio (q. v.) of the Roman law, and still in use in France.
DEPORTATION

In American Law

The removal or sending back of an alien to the country from which he came, the removal from the country of an alien considered inimical to public welfare; the removal of an alien out of the country simply because his presence is deemed inconsistent with the public welfare, and without any punishment being imposed or contemplated. Yonejiro Nakasuji v. Seager, D.C.Cal., 3 F.Supp. 410, 413.

“The removal of an alien out of the country, simply because his presence is deemed inconsistent with the public welfare, and without any punishment being imposed or contemplated, either under the laws of the country out of which he is sent, or under those of the country to which he is taken.” It differs from transportation, which is by way of punishment of one convicted of an offence against the laws of the country; and from extradition (q. v.), which is the surrender to another country of one accused of an offence against its laws, there to be tried, and, if found guilty, punished. Fong Yue Ting v. U. S., 149 U.S. 698, 13 S.Ct. 1016, 37 L. Ed. 905.

“Deportation,” as distinguished from “exclusion,” is depriving a person already in the United States of a privilege which he, at least at the time, is enjoying; whereas “exclusion” is the denial of entry, and does not deprive one of any liberties he had heretofore enjoyed. Ex parte Domingo Corypus, D.C., 6 F.2d 336.

In Roman Law

A perpetual banishment, depriving the banished of his rights as a citizen; it differed from relegation (q. v.) and exile, (q. v.) 1 Brown, Civil & Adm. Law, 125, note; Inst. 1, 12, 1, and 2; Dig. 48, 22, 14, 1.

DEPOSE. To deprive an individual of a public deposit, or to lay office against his will. Wolfillus, Inst. § 1063. The term is usually applied to the deprivation of all authority of a sovereign.

In Modern Usage

To make a deposition; to give evidence in the shape of a deposition; to make statements which are written down and sworn to; to give testimony which is reduced to writing by a duly-qualified officer and sworn to by the deponent. To say (in a deposition) under oath. Webb v. Iowa-Nebraska Coal Co., 198 Iowa 776, 200 N.W. 225, 226. To bear witness, to state of oath, or give testimony. Favello v. Bank of America Nat. T. & S. Ass’n, 24 Cal.App.2d 342, 74 P.2d 1057, 1059.

In Practice

To make a deposition; to give evidence in the shape of a deposition; to make statements which are written down and sworn to; to give testimony which is reduced to writing by a duly-qualified officer and sworn to by the deponent. To say (in a deposition) under oath. Webb v. Iowa-Nebraska Coal Co., 198 Iowa 776, 200 N.W. 225, 226. To bear witness, to state of oath, or give testimony. Favello v. Bank of America Nat. T. & S. Ass’n, 24 Cal.App.2d 342, 74 P.2d 1057, 1059.

To commit to custody, or to lay down; to place; to put; to let fall (as sediment); Jefferson County ex rel. Grauman v. Jefferson County Fiscal Court, 273 Ky. 674, 117 S.W.2d 918, 924; to lodge for safe-keeping or as a pledge, to give (a deposition) under oath. Webb v. Iowa-Nebraska Laundry Co., 168 Cal. 715, 144 P. 961, 963, L.R.A.1915C, 752.

A bailment of goods to be kept by the baillee without reward, and delivered according to the object or purpose of the original trust. Story, Bailm. § 41; Elbert Sales Co. v. Granite City Bank, 55 Ga.App. 835, 192 S.E. 66, 67.

In general, an act by which a person receives the property of another, binding himself to preserve it and return it in kind. Henry Rose Mercantile & Mfg. Co. v. Stearns, 159 La. 957, 106 So. 455, 458.

The delivery of chattels by one person to another to keep for the use of the bailor.

The giving of the possession of personal property by one person to another, with his consent, to keep for the use and benefit of the first or of a third person. Moulam v. Parkhurst, 89 Or. 248, 173 P. 669, 671.

Also, money lodged with a person as an earnest or security for the performance of some contract, to be forfeited if the depositor fails in his undertaking. It may be deemed to be part payment, and to that extent may constitute the purchaser the actual owner of the estate. Larson v. Metcalf, 201 Iowa, 1208, 207 N.W. 382, 384, 45 A.L.R. 344.

Classification

According to the classification of the civil law, deposits are of the following several sorts: (1) Necessary, made upon some sudden emergency, and from some pressing necessity; as, for instance, in case of a fire, a shipwreck, or other overwhelming calamity, when property is confirmed to any person whom the depositor may meet without public opportunity for reflection or choice, and then it is called "miserabile depositum." (2) Voluntary, which arises from the mere consent and agreement of the parties. Dig. 16, 3, 2; Story, Bailm. § 44. The common law has made no such division.

There is another class of deposits called "involuntary," which may be without the assent or even knowledge of the depositor; as lumber, etc., left upon another’s land by the subsidence of a flood. An "involuntary" deposit is one made by the accidental leaving or placing of personal property in the possession of any person without negligence on the part of the owner. Copelin v. Berlin Dyeworks Laundry Co., 168 Cal. 715, 144 P. 961, 963, L.R.A.1915C, 752.

The civilians again divide deposits into "simple deposits," made by one or more persons having a common interest, etc., and "sequestrations," made by one or more persons, each of whom has a different and adverse interest in controversy touching it; and these last are of two sorts, "conventional," or such as are made by the mere agreement of the parties without any judicial act; and "judicial," or such as are made by order of a court in the course of some proceeding. Thus, under Louisiana statutes, it is said that the difference between "sequestration" and "deposit" is that the former may have for its object both movable and immovable property, while the latter is confined to movables. Raines v. Dunson, 145 La. 1011, 83 So. 224, 226.

There is another class of deposits called "irregular," as when a person, having a sum of money which he does not think safe in his own hands, confides it to another, who is to return it to him, not the same money, but a like sum when he shall demand it. Poth. du Depot. 82, 83; Story, Bailm. § 84. A regular deposit is a strict or special deposit; a deposit which must be returned in specie; etc., the thing deposited must be returned. A quasi deposit is a kind of implied or involuntary deposit, which takes place where a party comes lawfully to the possession of another person’s property, by finding it. Story, Bailm. § 88. Particulars with reference to money, deposits are also classified as general or special. A general deposit is where the money deposited is not itself to be returned, but an equivalent in money (that is, a like sum) is to be returned. It is equivalent to a loan, and the money deposited becomes the propperty of the depositary. City of Canby v. Bank of Canby, 192 Minn. 571, 257 N.W. 520.

A special deposit is a deposit in which the identical thing deposited is to be returned to the depositor. The particular object of this kind of deposit is safekeeping. Koetting v. State, 88 Wis. 502, 60 N.W. 822. Marine Bank v. Fulton Bank, 69 U.S. 252, 2 Wall. 252, 17 L.Ed. 785. In banking law, this kind of deposit is contrasted with a "general" deposit, as above; but in the civil law it is the antithesis of an "irregular" deposit. A gratuitous or naked deposit is a bailment of goods to be kept for the depositor without hire or reward on either side, or one for which the depositary receives no consideration beyond the mere possession of the thing deposited. Properly and originally, all deposits are of this description; for according to the Roman law, a bailment of goods for which hire or a price is to be paid, is not called "depositum" but "locatio." If the owner of the property pays for its custody or care, it is a "locatio custodies"; if, on the other hand, the bailee pays for the use of it, it is "locatio rel." (See Locatio.) But in the modern law of those states which have been influenced by the Roman jurisprudence, a gratuitous or naked deposit is distinguished from a "deposit for hire," in which the bailee is to be paid for his services in keeping the article. There is also a specific deposit, which exists where money or property is given to a bank for some specific and particular purpose, as a note for collection, money to pay a particular note, or property for some other specific purpose. Officer v. Officer, 120 Iowa 389, 94 N.W. 947, 98 Am. St. 365.

In Banking Law

The act of placing or lodging money in the custody of a bank or banker, for safety or convenience, to be withdrawn at the will of the depositor or under rules and regulations agreed on. Also, the money so deposited, or the credit which the depositer receives for it. State Banking Board v. James, Tex.Civ.App., 264 S.W. 145, 149.

"Deposit," according to its commonly accepted and generally understood meaning among bankers and by the public, includes not only debts payable on demand and subject to check, but deposits not subject to check, for which certificates, whether interest-bearing or not, may be issued, payable on demand, or on certain notice, or at a fixed future time. Jones v. O'Brien, 58 S.D. 213, 255 N.W. 654, 659.

In Insurance Law

In Mining

A quantity of ore or mineral substances occurring naturally in the earth; as, a deposit of gold, oil, etc. See Colorado Gold Dredging Co. v. Stearns-Roger Mfg Co., 60 Colo. 412, 153 P. 765.

In General

Deposit account. An account of sums lodged with a bank not to be drawn upon by checks, and usually not to be withdrawn except after a fixed notice.

Deposit company. A company whose business is the safe-keeping of securities or other valuables deposited in boxes or safes in its building which are leased to the depositors.

Deposit of title-deeds. A method of pledging real property as security for a loan, by placing the title-deeds of the land in the keeping of the lender as pledgee.

Deposit slip. An acknowledgment that the amount named therein has been received by the bank; it is a receipt intended to furnish evidence as between the depositor and depositary that on a given date there was deposited the sum named therein, the time of deposit, and amount deposited, being also shown. In re Ruskay, C.C.A.N.Y., 5 F.2d 143, 147.

DEPOSITARY. The party receiving a deposit; one with whom anything is lodged in trust, as "depository" is the place where it is put. A trustee; fiduciary; one to whom goods are bailed to be held without recompense. Stand. Diet. The obligation on the part of the depositary is that he keep the thing with reasonable care, and, upon request, restore it to the depositor, or otherwise deliver it, according to the original trust. Brunner v. Edwards, 337 Pa. 513, 12 A.2d 36, 37.

DEPOSITIONATION. In Scotch law. Deposit or de positum, the species of bailment so called. Bell.

DEPOSITION. The testimony of a witness taken upon interrogatories, not in open court, but in pursuance of a commission to take testimony issued by a court, or under a general law on the subject, and reduced to writing and duly authenticated, and intended to be used upon the trial of an action in court. It is sometimes used as synonymous with "affidavit" or "oath," but its technical meaning does not include such terms. State v. Lord, 42 N.M. 638, 84 P.2d 80, 94.

A written declaration under oath, made upon notice to the adverse party for the purpose of enabling him to attend and cross-examine; or upon written interrogatories. N. S. Sherman Machine & Iron Works v. R. D. Cole Mfg. Co., 51 Okl. 353, 151 P. 1181, 1182. It is the giving of notice to the adverse party which especially distinguishes a deposition from an affidavit. Zinner v. Louis Meyers & Son, 181 Misc. 344, 43 N.Y.S.2d 319, 320.

The term sometimes is used in a special sense to denote a statement made orally by a person on oath before an examiner, commissioner, or officer of the court, (but not in open court,) and taken down in writing by the examiner or under his direction. Sweet.

In Ecclesiastical law. The act of depriving a clergyman, by a competent tribunal, of his clerical orders, to punish him for some offense and to prevent his acting in future in his clerical character. Ayl. Par. 206.

DEPOSITION DE BENE ESSE. Testimony to be taken down in writing by the examiner or under rules and regulations agreed on. Also, an action in court. It is sometimes used as synonymous with "affidavit" or "oath," but its technical meaning does not include such terms. State v. Lord, 42 N.M. 638, 84 P.2d 80, 94.

A written declaration under oath, made upon notice to the adverse party for the purpose of enabling him to attend and cross-examine; or upon written interrogatories. N. S. Sherman Machine & Iron Works v. R. D. Cole Mfg. Co., 51 Okl. 353, 151 P. 1181, 1182. It is the giving of notice to the adverse party which especially distinguishes a deposition from an affidavit. Zinner v. Louis Meyers & Son, 181 Misc. 344, 43 N.Y.S.2d 319, 320.

The term sometimes is used in a special sense to denote a statement made orally by a person on oath before an examiner, commissioner, or officer of the court, (but not in open court,) and taken down in writing by the examiner or under his direction. Sweet.

In Ecclesiastical law. The act of depriving a clergyman, by a competent tribunal, of his clerical orders, to punish him for some offense and to prevent his acting in future in his clerical character. Ayl. Par. 206.

DEPOSITION DE BENE ESSE. Testimony to be read at the trial, so far as relevant and competent, as though the witness were present in court. Milprint, Inc., v. Macleod Laboratories, 127 N.J.L. 333, 22 A.2d 566, 567.

DEPOSITO. In Spanish law. Deposit; the species of bailment so called. Schm. Civil Law, 193.

A real contract by which one person confides to the custody of another an object on the condition... that it shall be returned to him whenever he shall require it.

DEPOSITOR. One who makes a deposit.

In banking law, one who delivers and leaves money with a bank on his order or subject to check. Lummus Cotton Gin Co. v. Walker, 195 Ala. 552, 70 So. 754, 756; Austin v. Avant, Tex. Civ.App., 277 S.W. 409, 410.

DEPOSITORY. The place where a deposit (q. v.) is placed and kept.

Sometimes, also, a depository; one with whom something is deposited. Jones v. Marrs, 114 Tex. 62, 263 S.W. 570, 573.

United States depositories. Banks selected and designated to receive deposits of the public funds of the United States.

DEPOSITUM. Lat. In the civil law. One of the forms of the contract of bailment, being a naked bailment of goods to be kept for the use of the bailor without reward. Coe v. Ricker, 214 Mass. 62, 263 S.W. 570, 573.

DEPRIVATION. In English ecclesiastical law. The taking away from a clergyman of his benefice or other spiritual promotion or dignity, either by sentence declaratory in the proper court for fit and sufficient causes or in pursuance of divers penal statutes which declare the benefice void for some nonfeasance or neglect, or some malfeasance or crime. 3 Steph.Comm. 87, 88; Burn, Ecc.Law, tit. "Deprivation." See Ayliffe, Parerg. 206; 1 Bla. Comm. 393. See Degradation.

In American law. A taking away; confiscation; as the deprivation of a constitutional right. Thus DEPRECIATION RESERVE. An account kept on the books, as of a public utility, to offset the depreciation of the property due to time and use. People ex rel. Adirondack Power & Light Corporation v. Public Service Commission, 193 N.Y.S. 186, 191, 200 App.Div. 268. It does not represent the actual depreciation of its properties which is to be deducted from the reproduction cost new to ascertain the present value for rate purposes; but only what observation and experience suggest as likely to happen, with a margin over. Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Co. v. Railroad Commission of South Carolina, D.C.S.C., 5 F.2d 77, 96.

In French law. Pillage, waste, or spoliation of goods, particularly of the estate of a decedent.

A hole or hollow. Rice v. Kansas City, Mo.App., 16 S.W.2d 659, 661.

DEPRIVATION. In English ecclesiastical law. The taking away from a clergyman of his benefice or other spiritual promotion or dignity, either by sentence declaratory in the proper court for fit and sufficient causes or in pursuance of divers penal statutes which declare the benefice void for some nonfeasance or neglect, or some malfeasance or crime. 3 Steph.Comm. 87, 88; Burn, Ecc.Law, tit. "Deprivation." See Ayliffe, Parerg. 206; 1 Bla. Comm. 393. See Degradation.

In American law. A taking away; confiscation; as the deprivation of a constitutional right. Thus DEPRIVE. To take. The term has this meaning in a constitutional provision that no person shall be "deprived of his property" without due process of law, and denotes a taking altogether, a seizure, a direct appropriation, dispossession of the owner. Brown v. City of Atlanta, 167 Ga. 416, 145 S.E. 855, 857. It connotes want of consent. Sandel v. State, 104 S.E. 567, 571, 115 S.C. 168, 13 A.L.R. 1268.

DEPUTIZE. To appoint a deputy; to appoint or commission one to act as deputy to an officer. In a general sense, the term is descriptive of empowering one person to act for another in any capacity or relation, but in law it is almost always restricted to the substitution of a person appointed to act for an officer of the law.

DEPUTY. A substitute; a person duly authorized by an officer to exercise some or all of the functions pertaining to the office, in the place and stead of the latter. Byrnes v. Windels, 265 N.Y. 403, 193 N.E. 248, 249. One appointed to substitute for another with power to act for him in his name or behalf. Saxby v. Sonnemann, 149 N.E. 526, 528, 318 Ill. 600; Waggoner v. State, 183 Miss. 510, 184 So. 633, 634.

A deputy differs from an assignee, in that an assignee has an interest in the office itself, and does all things in his own name, for whom his grantor shall not answer, except in special cases; but a deputy has not any interest in the office, and is only the shadow of the officer in whose name he acts. And there is a distinction in doing an act by an agent and by a deputy. An agent can only bind his principal when he does the act in the name of the principal. But a deputy may do the act and sign his own name, for whom his grantor shall not answer, except in special cases; but a deputy has not any interest in the office, and is only the shadow of the officer in whose name he acts. And there is a distinction in doing an act by an agent and by a deputy. An agent can only bind his principal when he does the act in the name of the principal. But a deputy may do the act and sign his own name, and it binds his principal; for a deputy has, in law, the whole power of his principal. Wharton.

Deputy consul. See Consul.

Deputy lieutenant. The deputy of a lord lieutenant of a county in England.

Deputy sheriff. One appointed to act in the place and stead of the sheriff in the official business of the latter’s office. A general deputy (sometimes called “undersheriff”; see Shirran v. Dallas, 21 Cal.App. 405, 132 P. 454, 458; Delfelder v. Teton Land & Investment Co., 46 Wyo. 142, 24 P.2d 702, is one who, by virtue of his appointment, has authority to execute all the ordinary duties of the office of sheriff, and who executes process without any special authority from his principal. A special deputy, who is an officer pro hac vice, is one appointed for a special occasion or a special service, as, to serve a particular writ or to assist in keeping the peace when a riot or tumult is expected or in progress. He acts under a specific and not a general appointment and authority. Allen v. Smith, 12 N.J.Law, 162; Wilson v. Russell, 4 Dak. 376, 31 N.W. 645.

Deputy steward. A steward of a manor may be such a steward of a manor as to be entitled to a specific and not a general appointment and authority. Allen v. Smith, 12 N.J.Law, 162; Wilson v. Russell, 4 Dak. 376, 31 N.W. 645.

The acts done in a court so holden will be as legal as if the court had been held by the chief steward and in person. So an under steward or deputy may authorize another as subdeputy, pro hac vice, to hold a court for him; such limited authority not being inconsistent with the rule delegatus non potest delegare. Wharton.

Special deputy. One appointed to exercise some special function or power of the official or person for whom he is appointed. Saxby v. Sonnemann, 318 Ill. 600, 149 N.E. 526, 528.

DERAIGN, Apparently, literally, to confound, and disorder, or to turn out of course, or displace; as deraignment or departure out of religion, in St. 31 Hen. VIII. c. 6. In the common law, the word is used generally in the sense of to prove; viz., to deraign a right, deraign the warranty, etc. Glanv. lib. 2, c. 6; Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 146. Perhaps this word “deraign,” and the word “deraignment,” derived from it, may be used in the sense of to prove and a proving, by disproving of what is asserted in opposition to truth and fact. Jacob. It is used as referring to a decree “which deraigns his title from a false source.” Paxson v. Brown, 61 F. 874, 884, 10 C.C.A. 135.

DERAILER. A small but heavy iron device attached to a rail which opens and closes over the rail by a lever, so as to derail or turn off the track-cars approaching the closed derailer from the expected direction. Brady v. Southern Ry. Co., 64 S.Ct. 232, 234, 320 U.S. 476, 88 L.Ed. 239.

DERAILMENT. The act of going off or the state of being off the rails of a railroad. Graham v. Insurance Co. of North America, 220 Mass. 230, 107 N.E. 915.

DERANGEMENT. See Insanity.

DERECHO. In Spanish law. Law or right. Derecho comun, common law. The civil law is so called. A right. Derechos, rights. Also, specifically, an impost laid upon goods or provisions, or upon persons or lands, by way of tax or contribution. Noe v. Card, 14 Cal. 576, 608.

DERELICT. Forsaken; abandoned; deserted; cast away.

Personal property abandoned or thrown away by the owner in such manner as to indicate that he intends to make no further claim thereto. 2 Bl.Com. 9; 2 Reeve, Eng.Law, 9; Thompson v. One Anchor and Two Anchor Chains, D.C.Wis., 221 F. 770, 772.

Land left uncovered by the receding of water from its former bed. 2 Rolle, Abr. 170; 2 Bl, Comm. 262; 1 Crabb, Real Prop. 109.

In Maritime Law

A boat or vessel found entirely deserted or abandoned on the sea without hope or intention of recovery or return by the master or crew, whether resulting from wreck, accident, necessity, or voluntary abandonment. U. S. v. Stone, C.C.Tenn., 8 F. 232-243; Cromwell v. The Island City, 1 Black
DERELICT

121, 17 L.Ed. 70; The Hyderabad, D.C.Wis., 11 F. 749-754; The No. 105, Belcher Oil Co. v. Griffin, C.C.A.Fla., 97 F.2d 425, 426; Mengel Box Co. v. Joest, 127 Miss. 461, 90 So. 161, 163.

Quasi Derelict

When a vessel, without being abandoned, is no longer under the control or direction of those on board, (as where part of the crew are dead, and the remainder are physically and mentally incapable of providing for their own safety,) she is said to be quasi derelict. Sturtevant v. Nicholas, 1 Newb. Adm. 449, Fed.Cas.No.13,578. When the crew have left their vessel temporarily, with the intention of returning to resume possession, she is not technically a derelict, but is what may be termed a "quasi derelict." The Alcazar, D.C. N.C., 227 F. 633, 650.

DERELICTION. The gaining of land from the water, in consequence of the sea shrinking back below the usual water mark; the opposite of alluvion (q. v.) Dyer, 326b; 2 Bl.Comm. 262; 1 Steph.Comm. 419; Linthicum v. Coan, 64 Md. 439, 2 A. 826, 54 Am.Rep. 775; Also, land left dry by running water retiring imperceptibly from one of its shores and encroaching on the other. Slattery v. Arkansas Natural Gas Co., 138 La. 793, 70 So. 806. See Reliction; Accretion.

In the Civil Law

The voluntary abandonment of goods by the owner, without the hope or the purpose of retuming to the possession. Jones v. Nunn, 12 Ga. 473; Livermore v. White, 74 Me. 456, 43 Am.Rep. 600.

"Dereliction" or "renunciation" of property at sea as well as on land requires both the intention to abandon and external action. The No. 105, C.C.A.Fla., 97 F.2d 425, 426.

Derivativa potestas non potest esse major primitiva. Noy, Max.; Wing.Max. 66. The derivative power cannot be greater than the primitive. The power which is derived cannot be greater than that from which it is derived. Finch.Law, b. 1, c. 3, p. 11.

DERIVATIVE. Coming from another; taken from something preceding; secondary; that which has not its origin in itself, but owes its existence to something foregoing. Anything obtained or deduced from another. State v. Wong Fong, 75 Mont. 81, 241 P. 1072.

DERIVERAL ACTION. A suit by a shareholder to enforce a corporate cause of action. The corporation is a necessary party, and the relief which is granted is a judgment against a third person in favor of the corporation. Price v. Gurney, Ohio, 65 S.Ct. 513, 516, 324 U.S. 100, 89 L.Ed. 776.

DERIVATIVE CONVEYANCES. Conveyances which presuppose some other conveyance precedent, and only serve to enlarge, confirm, alter, restrain, restore, or transfer the interest granted by such original conveyance. They are releases, confirmations, surrenders, assignments, and defeasances. 2 Bl.Comm. 324.

DERIVE. To receive, as from a -source or origin. Crews v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C. A.10, 89 F.2d 412, 416. To proceed from property, sever from capital, however invested or employed, and to come or draw 'by taxpayer for his separate use, benefit, and disposal. Staples v. United States, D.C.Pa., 21 F.Supp. 737, 739.

DEROGATION. The partial repeal or abolishing of a law, as by a subsequent act which limits its scope or impairs its utility and force. Distinguished from abrogation, which means the entire repeal and annulment of a law. Dig. 50, 17, 102.

DEROGATORY CLAUSE. In a will, this is a sentence or secret character inserted by the testator, of which he reserves the knowledge to himself, with a condition that no will he may make thereafter should be valid, unless this clause be inserted word for word. This is done as a precaution to guard against later wills being extorted by violence, or otherwise improperly obtained. By the law of England such a clause would be void, as tending to make the will irrevocable. Wharton.

Derogatur legi, cum pars detrahiruit; abrogatur legi, cum prorsus tollitur. To derogate from a law is to take away part of it; to abrogate a law is to abolish it entirely. Dig. 50, 17, 102.

DESAFUERO. In Spanish law. An irregular action committed with violence against law, custom, or reason.

DESAMORTIZACION. In Mexican law. The desamortizacion of property is to take it out of mortmain, (dead hands;) that is, to unloose it from the grasp, as it were, of ecclesiastical or civil corporations. The term has no equivalent in English. Hall, Mex.Law, § 749.

DESCEND. To pass by succession; as when the estate vests by operation of law in the heirs immediately upon the death of the ancestor. Travern v. Woolwine, 109 W.Va. 623, 155 S.E. 909, 910. The term, as used in some statutes, includes an acquisition by devise. Cordon v. Gregg, 164 Or. 306, 101 P.2d 414, 415.

To pass down from generation to generation. Weedin v. Chin Bow, C.C.A.Wash., 7 F.2d 369.

To go;—often used as a word of transfer. Gordon v. Cadwalader, 164 Cal. 509, 130 P. 18, 20.

As used in wills, the word "descend" is often regarded as a general expression equivalent to the words "go to" or "belong to," and as indicating a passing of title by the force of the will rather than of the statute. Klingman v. Gilbert, 90 Kan. 545, 135 P. 682, 684; Carter v. Reserve Gas Co., 84 W.Va. 741, 100 S.E. 738, 742.

DESCENDANT. One who is descended from another; a person who proceeds from the body of another, such as a child, grandchild, etc., to the remotest degree. The term is the opposite of "ascendant," (q. v.) Rasmusson v. Unknown Wife of Hoge, 293 Ill. 101, 127 N.E. 356, 359; State v. Yturria, 204 S.W. 315, 316, 109 Tex. 220, L.R.A.
1918F, 1079. In the plural, the term means offspring or posterity in general; Carter Oil Co. v.
v. Burkley, 266 Pa. 338, 109 A. 687, 688; In re Tinkers Estate, 91 Okl. 21, 215 P. 779, 781. Also, all those to whom an estate descends, whether it be in a direct or collateral line from the intestate.

One on whom the law has cast the property by descent. Smith v. Thom, 158 Ky. 655, 166 S.W.
182. An heir. Lee v. Roberson, 297 Ill. 321, 130
N.E. 774, 778. In this sense, the term is frequently held to include an adopted child. In re Cad-wells Estate, 26 Wyo. 412, 186 P. 499, 501. For "Family," see that title.

Descendants is a good term of description in a will, and includes all who proceed from the body of the person named; as grandchildren and great-grandchildren. Amb.
397; 2 Hil.Real Prop. 242.

Lineal Descendant

One who is in the line of descent from the an-ccestor. Green v. Hussey, 228 Mass. 537, 117 N.E.
Co., 227 Mich. 251, 198 N.W. 989, 991. The term may include an adopted child; Denton v. Miller, 110 Kan. 292, 203 P. 693, 694; who is as lawfully in the line of descent as if placed there by birth; Contra: State v. Yturria, 109 Tex. 220, 204 S.W.
315, 316, L.R.A.1918F, 1079.

DESCENDER. Descendent; in the descent. See For-medon.

DESCENDIBLE. Capable of passing by descent, or of being inherited or transmitted by devise, (spoke of estates, titles, offices, and other prop-

DESCENT. Hereditary succession. Succession to the ownership of an estate by inheritance, or by any act of law, as distinguished from "purchase."
Title by descent is the title by which one person, upon the death of another, acquires the real estate of the latter as his heir at law. 2 Bl.Comm.
201; Adams v. Akerlund, 168 Ill. 632, 48 N.E.
454; In re Yahola's Heirship, 142 Okl. 79, 285 P.
946. The title by inheritance is in all cases called descent, although by statute law the title is sometimes made to ascend.

"Descent" in its broadest sense signifies an inheritance cast upon any one capable of receiving it, whether heir at common law or not. Kickey v. Kickey, 114 N.J.Eq. 116, 168
A. 424, 426.

The division among those legally entitled thereto of the real property of intestates.

Classification

Descents are of two sorts, lineal and collateral. Lineal descent is descent in a direct or right line, as from father or grandfather to son or grandson. In re Herricks Estate, 273 N.Y.S. 803, 152 Misc. 9. Collateral descent is descent in a collateral or oblique line, that is, up to the common ancestor and then down from him, as from brother to brother, or between cousins. Levy v. McCartie, 6 Pet. 112, 8 L.Ed. 334. They are also distinguished into mediate and immediate descend. But these terms are used in different senses. A descent may be said to be a mediate or immediate descent of the estate or right, or it may be said to be mediate or immediate, in regard to the mediateness or im-mediateness of the pedigree or consanguinity. Thus, a descent from the grandfather, who dies in possession, to the grandchild, the father being then dead, or from the uncle to the nephew, the brother being dead, is, in the former sense, in law, immediate descent, although the one is collateral and the other lineal; for the heir is in the per, and not in the mediate or cut. On the other hand, with reference to the line of pedigree or consanguinity, a descent is often said to be immediate, when the ancestor from whom the party derives his blood is immediate, and without any intervening link or degrees; and mediate, when the kindred is derived from him mediate, another ancestor intervening between them. Thus a descent in lineals from father to son is in this sense immediate;
but a descent from grandfather to grandson, the father being dead, or from uncle to nephew, the brother being dead, is deemed mediate; the father and the brother being, in these latter cases, the medium, cut, as it is called,
of the descent or consanguinity. Furenes v. Mickelson, 86
Iowa, 508, 53 N.W. 416.

Descent was denoted, in the Roman law, by the term "successio," which is also used by Bracton, from which has been derived the successio of the Scotch and French jurisprudence.

Line of Descent

The order or series of persons who have desceded one from the other or all from a common ancestor, considered as placed in a line of succession in the order of their birth, the line showing the connection of all the blood-relatives.

Collateral line. A line of descent connecting persons who are not directly related to each other as ascendants or descendants, but whose relationship consists in common descent from the same ancestor.

Direct line. A line of descent traced through those persons only who are related to each other directly as ascendants or descendants. State ex rel. Walton v. Yturria, 109 Tex. 220, 204 S.W.
315, 316, L.R.A.1918F, 1079.

Maternal line. A line of descent or relationship between two persons which is traced through the mother of the younger.

Paternal line. A similar line of descent traced through the father.

DESCENT CAST. The devolving of realty upon the heir on the death of his ancestor intestate.

Another name for what the older writers called a "descent which tolls entry." When a person had acquired land by disseisin, abatement, or intrusion, and died seised of the land, the descent of it to his heir took away or tolled the real owner's right of entry, so that he could only recover the land by an action. Co.Litt. 237 b; Rap. & L. Dict.

DESCRIBE. To narrate, express, explain. Boynton
Real Estate Co. v. WoodbridgeTp., 94 N.J.
Law, 226, 109 A. 514, 515. Of land, to give the metes and bounds. Livingston v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co., 100 S.C. 18, 84 S.E. 303.

DESCRIPTIO PERSONI. Lat. Description of the person. By this is meant a word or phrase used merely for the purpose of identifying or pointing out the person intended, and not as an intimation that the language in connection with which it occurs is to apply to him only in the official or technical character which might appear to be indicated by the word. Forrester v. Cantley, 227 Mo.App. 325, 51 S.W.2d 550, 551.

In wills, it frequently happens that the word heir is used as a descriptio personae. A legacy "to the eldest son" of A would be a designation of the person. See 1 Roper, Leg. c. 2.

A written enumeration of items composing an estate, or of its condition, or of titles or documents; like an inventory, but with more particularity, and without involving the idea of an appraisement.

An exact written account of an article, mechanical device, or process which is the subject of an application for a patent.

A method of pointing out a particular person by referring to his relationship to some other person or his character as an officer, trustee, executor, etc.

That part of a conveyance, advertisement of sale, etc., which identifies the land or premises intended to be affected. Argyle v. Bonneville Irr. Dist., 74 Utah, 480, 280 P. 722, 727.

A fair portrayal of the chief features of the proposed law in words of plain meaning, so that it can be understood by the persons entitled to vote. Sawyer Stores v. Mitchell, 103 Mont. 148, 62 P.2d 342, 348; In re Opinion of the Justices, Mass., 9 N.E.2d 189, 192.

That part of affidavit for search warrant describing the place to be searched. Turner v. State, 39 Okl.Cr. 74, 263 P. 476.

DESCRIPTIVE. Containing a description; serving or aiming to describe; having the quality of representing. Sawyer Stores v. Mitchell, 103 Mont. 148, 62 P.2d 342, 348.

DESECRATE. To violate sanctity of, to profane, or to put to unworthy use. City of Shreveport v. Harris, 178 La. 685, 152 So. 330.

The calling on householders after 10 a.m. on Sunday by members of an organized religious order for purpose of propagandizing their religious views by spoken and printed words, however unwelcome to householders, did not, in itself, constitute a desecration of the Sabbath. State v. Mead, 230 Iowa 1217, 300 N.W. 523, 524.

DESECRATION. The act by which a person abandons and forsakes, without justification, or unauthorized, a station or condition of public or social life, renouncing its responsibilities and evading its duties.

A willful abandonment of an employment or duty in violation of a legal or moral obligation. Stoneburner v. Theodoratos, Cal.App., 30 P.2d 1001, 1003.

Obstinate Desertion

See that title.

In Maritime Law

The act by which a seaman deserts and abandons a ship or vessel, in which he had engaged to perform a voyage, before the expiration of his time, and without leave. By desertion, in the maritime law, is meant, not a mere unauthorized absence from the ship without leave, but an unauthorized absence from the ship, with an intention not to return to the joint habitation to a more peaceful one. West v. West, 264 Ky. 826, 95 S.W.2d 789, 790.

DESERETION. The act by which a person abandons and forsakes, without justification, or unauthorized, a station or condition of public or social life, renouncing its responsibilities and evading its duties.

A willful abandonment of an employment or duty in violation of a legal or moral obligation. Stoneburner v. Theodoratos, Cal.App., 30 P.2d 1001, 1003.

Constructive Desertion

That arising where an existing cohabitation is put an end to by misconduct of one of the parties, provided such misconduct is itself a ground for divorce a vinculo or a mensa. Succhierelli v. Succhierelli, 101 N.J.Eq. 30, 137 A. 839. See, also, Hoffhines v. Hoffhines, 146 Md. 350, 126 A. 112, 113, 38 A.L.R. 332.

In Matrimonial and Divorce Law

An actual abandonment or breaking off of matrimonial cohabitation, by either of the parties, and a renouncing or refusal of the duties and obligations of the relation, with an intent to abandon or forsake entirely and not to return to or resume marital relations, occurring without legal justification either in the consent or the wrongful con-

In Military Law
An offense which consists in the abandonment of his post and duties by a person commissioned or enlisted in the army or navy, without leave and with the intention not to return. Hollingsworth V. Shaw, 19 Ohio St. 432, 2 Am.Rep. 411; In re Sutherland, D.C., 53 F. 551. There is a difference between desertion and simple "absence without leave;" in order to constitute the former, there must be an intention not to return to the service. Hanson v. South Scituate, 115 Mass. 336. See Deserter.

DESERVING. Worthy or meritorious, without regard to condition or circumstances. In no sense of the word is it limited to persons in need of assistance, or objects which come within the class of charitable uses. Nichols v. Allen, 130 Mass. 211, 39 Am.Rep. 445.

DESHONORA. In Spanish law. Dishonor; insubordination; injury; slander. Las Partidas, pt. 7, tit. 9, 1, 1, 6.

DESICCATE. To exhaust or remove moisture from; dry thoroughly; especially to free from moisture with view to preserving. In re Benner, Cust. & Pat. App., 46 F.2d 383, 384.

DESIGN. To form plan or scheme of, conceive and arrange in mind, originate mentally, plan out, contrive. Also, the plan or scheme conceived in mind and intended for subsequent execution, preliminary conception of idea to be carried into effect by action, contrivance in accordance with preconceived plan. State v. Pickus, 63 S.D. 209, 257 N.W. 284. A project, an idea. 3 H. & N. 301. See, also, Designed.

As a term of art, the giving of a visible form to the conceptions of the mind, or invention. Binns v. Woodruff, 4 Wash.C.C. 48, Fed. Cas. No. 1,424.

In Evidence
Purpose or intention, combined with plan, or implying a plan in the mind. Burrill, Circ. Ev. 331; State v. Grant, 86 Iowa 216, 53 N.W. 120.

In Patent Law
The drawing or depiction of an original plan or conception for a novel pattern, model, shape, or configuration, to be used in the manufacturing or textile arts or the fine arts, and chiefly of a decorative or ornamental character. "Design patents" are contrasted with "utility patents," but equally involve the exercise of the inventive or originative faculty. Gorham Co. v. White, 14 Wall. 524, 20 L.Ed. 731; Western Electric Manufacturing Co. v. Odell, D.C.I1L, 18 F. 321; Binns v. Woodruff, 3 Fed.Cas. 424; Henderson v. Tompkins, C.C.Mass., 60 F. 758.

"Design, in the view of the patent law, is that characteristic of a physical substance which, by means of lines, images, configuration, and the like, taken as a whole, makes an impression, through the eye, upon the mind of the observer. The essence of a design resides not in the elements individually, nor in their method of arrangement, but in the tout ensemble—in that indefinable whole that awakens some sensation in the observer's mind. Impressions thus imparted may be complex or simple; * * *. But whatever the impression, there is attached in the mind of the observer, to the object observed, a sense of uniqueness and character." Pelouze Scale & Mfg. Co. v. American Cutlery Co., 102 F. 916, 919, 43 C.C.A. 52; Bayley & Sons v. Braunstein Bros. Co., D.C.N.Y., 246 F. 314, 317.

Designatio justiciariorum est a rege; jurisdicte vero ordinaria a lege. 4 Inst. 74. The appointment of justices is by the king, but their ordinary jurisdiction by the law.

DESIGNATINGpetition. Means used to designate a candidate for a party nomination at a primary election or for election to party position. Potash v. Molik, 230 N.Y.S.2d 544, 548, 35 Misc.2d 1.

DESIGNATIPerson2E. The description of a person or a party to a deed or contract. See, also, Descriptio Person.

Designatio unius est exclusio alterius, et expressum facit cessare taciturn. Co. Litt. 210. The appointment or designation of one is the exclusion of the other; and that which is expressed makes that which is understood to cease. (The appointment or designation of one is the exclusion of the other; and that which is expressed prevails over that which is implied.)

DESIGNATION. An addition to a name, as of title, profession, trade, or occupation, to distinguish the person from others. Inglis v. Pontius, 102 Ohio St. 140, 131 N.E. 509, 511, 512.

A description or descriptive expression by which a person or thing is denoted in a will without using the name.

Also, an appointment or assignment, as to a particular office. Santa Barbara County v. Jansens, 177 Cal. 114, 169 P. 1025, 1027, L.R.A.1918C, 558; Cunio v. Franklin County, 315 Mo. 405, 285 S.W. 1007, 1008.

DESIGNED. Contrived or taken to be employed for a particular purpose. People v. Dorrington,

This term, used in a will in relation to the management and distribution of property, has been interpreted by the courts with different shades of meaning, varying from the mere expression of a preference to a positive command. See In re Bearinger's Estate, 336 Pa. 253, 9 A.2d 342, 343; Beaky v. Knutson, 90 Or. 574, 174 P. 1149, 1150.

The word "desire" may be as effective as if the word "devise" or "bequeath" had been used. Drinkard v. Hughes, Tex.Civ.App., 32 S.W.2d 935, 936.

The word "desire," in a will, raises a trust, where the objects of that desire are specified; Vandyck v. Van Beuren, 1 Cai. (N.Y.) 84.

MISIEMENT. The name of a doctrine under which the court, in construing a foreign will, applies the law of the forum on the theory that there is a hiatus. In re Tallmadge, 181 N.Y.S. 336, 341, 109 Misc. 696.

DESLINDE. A term used in the Spanish law, denoting the act by which the boundaries of an estate or portion of a country are determined.

DESPACHEURS. In maritime law. Persons appointed to settle cases of average.

DESPATCHES. Official communications of official persons on the affairs of government.

DESPERATE. Hopeless; worthless. This term is used in inventories and schedules of assets, particularly by executors, etc., to describe debts or claims which are considered impossible or hopeless of collection. See Schultz v. Pulver, 11 Wend. (N.Y.) 365; Darrow v. Rohrer, 71 Colo. 417, 207 P. 861; Toll. Ex. 248; 2 Wms. Ex. 644; 1 Chitt. Pr. 580.

DESPERATE DEBT. A hopeless debt; an irrecoverable obligation.

DESPITUS. Contempt. See Despite. A contemptible person. Fleta, lib. 4, c. 5.

DESPoil. This word involves, in its signification, violence or clandestine means by which one is deprived of that which he possesses. Its Spanish equivalent, despojar, is a term used in Mexican law. Sunol v. Hepburn, 1 Cal. 268.

DESPoJAR. A possessory action of the Mexican law. It is brought to recover possession of immovable property, of which one has been despoiled (despojado) by another. See, also, Despoil.

DESPONSATION. The act of betrothing persons to each other.

DESOsORIO. In Spanish law. Espousals; mutual promises of future marriage. White, New Recip. b. 1, tit. 6, c. 1, § 1.

DESPOT. This word, in its original and most simple acceptance, signifies master and supreme lord; it is synonymous with monarch; but taken in bad part, as it is usually employed, it signifies a tyrant. In some states, despot is the title given to the sovereign, as king is given in others. Enc. Lond.

DESPOTISM. That abuse of government where the sovereign power is not divided, but united in the hands of a single man, whatever may be his official title. It is not, properly, a form of government. Toullier, Dr.Civ.Fr. tit. prel. n. 32; Ruthcrf. Inst. b. 1, c. 20, § 1.

"Despotism" is not exactly synonymous with "autocracy," for the former involves the idea of tyranny or abuse of power, which is not necessarily implied by the latter. Every despotism is autocratic; but an autocracy is not necessarily despotic.

DESRenABLE. L. Fr. Unreasonable. Britt. c. 121.

DESSAISISSEMENT. In French law. When a person is declared bankrupt, he is immediately deprived of the enjoyment and administration of all his property; this deprivation, which extends to all his rights, is called "dessaisissement." Arg. Fr. Merc. Law, 556.

DESTINATION. The purpose to which it is intended an article or a fund shall be applied. A testator gives a destination to a legacy when he prescribes the specific use to which it shall be put.

The port at which a ship is to end her voyage is called her "port of destination." Pardessus, no. 600.

The phrases "port of destination" and "port of discharge" are not equivalent; U. S. v. Barker, 5 Mason 404, Fed.Cas.No.14,516. See Sheridan v. Ireland, 66 Me. 65.

DESTINATION DU PERE DE FAMILLE. A use which owner has intentionally established on one part of his property in favor of another part, and which is equal to a title with respect to perpetual and apparent servitudes thereon. Woodcock v. Baldwin, 51 La.Ann. 989, 26 So. 46.

DESTITUTE OR NECESSITOUS CIRCUMSTANCES. Circumstances in which one needs the necessaries of life, which cover not only primitive physical needs, things absolutely indispensable to human existence and decency, but those things, also, which are in fact necessary to the particular person left without support. State v. Waller, 90 Kan. 829, 136 P. 215, 217, 49 L.R.A.,N.S., 588.

A wife may be in ‘destitute or necessitous circumstances’ though she is being given shelter and food by a child or by sympathizing relatives, friends, or strangers, if she does not have property or money available for such necessities or ordinary comforts of life as her husband can reasonably furnish. State v. Sharp, 111 A. 909, 910, 1 W.W. Harr., Del., 148; Brandel v. State, 161 Wis. 532, 154 N.W. 997.

Young children, without property, are in ‘destitute or necessitous circumstances,’ within the. Delaware Nonsupport Act (Rev.Code 1915, §§ 3033-3046), when the child can, but does not, and the mother cannot out of her independent means, provide for them, though the mother and children are supported by the maternal grandmother or grandfather. State v. Nelson, 114 A. 863, 864, 1 W.W. Harr. (Del.) 436; Donaghy v. State, 100 A. 696, 710, 6 Boyce (Del.) 467.

DESTROY. As used in policies of insurance, leases, and in maritime law, and under various statutes, this term is often applied to an act which renders the subject useless for its intended purpose, though it does not literally demolish or annihilate it. Davis v. Parker, 200 Ky. 847, 255 S.W. 836 (leased buildings); Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Commonwealth, 190 Ky. 78, 226 S.W. 113, 117 (railroad station); George v. McManus, 27 Cal.App. 414, 150 P. 73, 74 (automobile).

To “destroy” a vessel within the meaning of an act of congress means to unfit the vessel for service, beyond the hope of recovery by ordinary means. U. S. v. Johns, 96 Or. 438, 189 P. 220, 221. To arrest, to check, to delay, to hinder, to hold, or keep in custody, to retard, to restrain from proceeding, to stay, to stop. People v. Smith, 17 Cal.App.2d 468, 62 P.2d 436, 438.

DETAIN. To retain as the possession of personalty. First Nat. Bank v. Yocom, 96 Or. 438, 189 P. 220, 221. To arrest, to check, to delay, to hinder, to hold, or keep in custody, to retard, to restrain from proceeding, to stay, to stop. People v. Smith, 17 Cal.App.2d 468, 62 P.2d 436, 438.

DETAIL, n. An individual part, an item, a particular. Board of Education of Prince George’s County v. County Com’rs of Prince George’s County, 131 Md. 658, 102 A. 1007, 1010.

One who belongs to the army, but is only detached, or set apart, for the time to some particular duty or service, and who is liable at any time to be recalled to his place in the ranks. In re Strawbridge, 39 Ala. 379.

DETAIN. To retain as the possession of personalty. First Nat. Bank v. Yocom, 96 Or. 438, 189 P. 220, 221. To arrest, to check, to delay, to hinder, to hold, or keep in custody, to retard, to restrain from proceeding, to stay, to stop. People v. Smith, 17 Cal.App.2d 468, 62 P.2d 436, 438.

DETAINER. The act (or the juridical fact) - of withholding from a person lawfully entitled the possession of land or goods, or the restraint of a man’s personal liberty against his will; detention.

The wrongful keeping of a person’s goods is called an “unlawful detainer” although the original taking may have been lawful. As, if one distrains another’s cattle, damage to the chattel, before they are impounded the owner tenders sufficient amends; now, though the original taking was lawful, the subsequent detention of them after tender of amends is not lawful, and the owner has an action of reprieve to recover them, in which he will recover damages. In re Strawbridge, 39 Ala. 379.

DETAINMENT. This term is used in policies of marine insurance, in the clause relating to “arrests, restraints, and detainments.” The last two words are construed as equivalents, each meaning the effect of superior force operating directly on the vessel. Schmidt v. Insurance Co., 1 Johns., N.Y., 262, 3 Am.Dec. 319.

DETAINMENT.

DETAINMENT. This term is used in policies of marine insurance, in the clause relating to “arrests, restraints, and detainments.”

DETECTION. A discovery or laying open of that which was hidden; investigation. Meunier v. Bernich, La.App., 170 So. 567, 572.

DETECTIVE. One whose business it is to watch, and furnish information concerning, alleged wrongdoers by investigating their haunts and habits. One whose business it is to detect criminals or discover matters of secret and pernicious import for the protection of the public. Smith v. S. H. Kress & Co., 210 Ala. 436, 98 So. 378, 380.

Private Detective

DETECTOR. Any device, or piece of apparatus, which, when energized, actuated, or acted upon by or by means of the so-called Hertzian waves, enable men, through the senses of hearing or sight, to understand signals based upon the intentionally regulated emission or propagation of the waves aforesaid. Marconi Wireless Telegraph Co. of America v. De Forest Radio Telephone & Telegraph Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 243 F. 560, 561. In wireless telegraphy, the “detector” or “coherer” and “wave responsive device” is a device by which the electromagnetic waves cause the indicator to respond. National Electric Signaling Co. v. Telefunken Wireless Telegraph Co. of United States, C.C.A.N.Y., 221 F. 629, 631.

DETENTIO. In the civil law. That condition of fact under which one can exercise his power over a corporeal thing at his pleasure, to the exclusion of all others. It forms the substance of possession in all its varieties. Mackeld, Rom. Law, § 238.

DETECTION. The act of keeping back or withholding, either accidentally or by design, a person or thing. State v. Crappel, 181 La. 715, 160 So. 309. See Detainer.

DETECTION IN A REFORMATORY, as a punishment or measure of prevention, is where a juvenile offender is sentenced to be there detained for a certain period of time. 1 Russ. Crimes, 82.

DETER. To discourage or stop by fear, to stop or prevent from acting or proceeding by danger, difficulty, or other consideration which disheartens or countervails the motive for the act. Haynesworth v. Hall Const. Co., 44 Ga.App. 807, 163 S.E. 273, 277.

DETEriorATION. Of a commodity, a constitutional hurt or impairment, involving some degeneration in the substance of the thing, such as that arising from decay, corrosion, or disintegration. The mere soiling of a commodity with sea water or other foreign substance, resulting in a purely superficial hurt or impairment removable by the simple process of cleansing, cannot be said to be “deterioration” within the ordinary meaning of that term. Rosen-Reichardt Brokerage Co. v. London Assur. Corporation, 214 Mo.App. 672, 264 S.W. 433, 436.

DETERMINABLE. Liable to come to an end upon the happening of a certain contingency. 2 Bl. Comm. 121.

Susceptible of being determined, found out, definitely decided upon, or settled. Utah State Nat. Bank v. Smith, 180 Cal. 1, 179 P. 160, 161.

As to determinable “Fee” and “Freehold,” see those titles.

DETERMINATE. That which is ascertained; what is particularly designated.

As used in Good Time Law covering prisoners confined for a determinate, the term, signifies a definite number of years fixed by the court. Hinkle v. Dowd, Ind., 58 N.E. 2d 342, 343.

DETERMINATE OBLIGATION. See Obligation.

DETERMINATION. The decision of a court of justice. It implies an ending or finality, the ending of a controversy or suit. People v. Jackson, 181 N.Y.S. 226, 191 App.Div. 269. The ending or expiration of an estate or interest in property, or of a right, power, or authority. The coming to an end in any way whatever. Hanchett Bond Co. v. Giore, 208 Mo.App. 169, 232 S.W. 159, 160.

DETERMINATION OF WILL. A phrase used of the putting an end to an estate at will. 2 Bl. Comm. 146.

DETERMINATION IN A REFORMATORY, as a punishment or measure of prevention, is where a juvenile offender is sentenced to be there detained for a certain period of time. 1 Russ. Crimes, 82.

DETERMINE. To come to an end. To bring to an end. 2 Bl.Comm. 121; 1 Washb. Real Prop. 380.

To decide, and analogous to “adopt,” or “accept.” Goldberger v. City of Perth Amboy, 16 N. J.Misc. 84, 197 A. 267, 269.

DETESTATIO. Lat. In the civil law. A summons made, or notice given, in the presence of witnesses, (denuntiatio facts cum testatione.) Dig. 50, 16, 40.
DETINET. Lat. He detains. In old English law. A species of action of debt, which lay for the specific recovery of goods, under a contract to deliver them. 1 Reeves, Eng. Law, 159.

In Pleading
An action of debt is said to be in the detinet when it is alleged merely that the defendant withhold[s] or unjustly detains from the plaintiff the thing or amount demanded.

An action of replevin is said to be in the detinet when the defendant retains possession of the property until after judgment in the action. Bull, N.P. 52; Chit.Pl. 145.

DETNIEUE. In practice. A form of action which lies for the recovery, in specie, of personal chattels from one who acquired possession of them lawfully, but retains it without right, together with damages for the detention. 3 Bl.Comm. 152.

The action of detinue is defined in the old books as a remedy founded upon the delivery of goods by the owner to another to keep, who afterwards refuses to redeem them to the bailor; and it is said that, to authorize the maintenance of the action, it is necessary that the defendant should have come lawfully into the possession of the chattel, either by delivery to him or by finding it. In fact, it was once understood to be the law that detinue does not lie where the property had been tortiously taken. But it is, upon principle, very unimportant in what manner the defendant's possession commenced, since the gist of the action is the wrongful detainer, and not the original taking.

It is only incumbent upon the plaintiff to prove property in himself, and possession in the defendant. At present, the action of detinue is proper in every case where the owner prefers recovering the specific property to damages for its conversion, and no regard is had to the manner in which the defendant acquired the possession. Tiefel Bros. & Winn v. Maxwell, Tex.Civ.App., 154 S.W. 319, 320.

DETNIEUE OF GOODS IN FRANK MARRIAGE. A writ formerly available to a wife after a divorce, for the recovery of the goods given with her in marriage. Mozley & Whitley.

DETNUIT. In pleading. An action of replevin is said to be in the detinuit when the plaintiff acquires possession of the property claimed by means of the writ. The right to retain is, of course, subject in such case to the judgment of the court upon his title to the property claimed. Bull, N.P. 521.

DETOUR. A temporary turning aside from usual or regular route, course or procedure or from a task or employment. Reddy-Waldhauer-Maffett Co. v. Spivey, 53 Ga.App. 117, 185 S.E. 147, 148.

A temporary road or a longer road in temporary use because of an obstruction on regularly used road.

DETOURNEMENT. The misappropriation by a servant of funds the property of his master; fraudulent abstraction of documents; or "abus de confiance" which is fraudulently misusing or spending to anybody's prejudice goods, cash, bills, documents, or contracts handed over for a special object. See Embezzlement. The Washington D.C.N.Y., 19 F.Supp. 719, 722.

DETRACTARI. To be torn in pieces by horses. Fleta, 1. 1, c. 37.

DETRACTION. The removal of property from one state to another upon a transfer of the title to it by will or inheritance. Frederickson v. Louisiana, 23 How. 445, 16 L.Ed. 577.

DETRIMENT. Any loss or harm suffered in person or property; e. g., the consideration for a contract may consist not only in a payment or other thing of value given, but also in loss or "detriment" suffered by the promisee. In that connection, "detriment" means that the promisee has, in return for the promise, forborne some legal right which he otherwise would have been entitled to exercise. Wallace v. Cook, 190 Ky. 262, 227 S.W. 279, 281; or that he has given up something which he had a right to keep, or done something which he had a right not to do. Irving v. Irwin, 133 Cal.App. 374, 24 P.2d 215.

DETUNICARI. To discover or lay open to the world, Matt. Westm. 1240.

DEUNX, pl. DEUNCES. Lat. In the Roman law. A division of the as, containing eleven unciae or duodecimal parts; the proportion of eleven-twelfths. 2 Bl.Comm. 462, note. See As.

Deus solus hmredem facere potest, non homo. God alone, and not man, can make an heir. Co. Litt. 7b; Broom. Max. 516; 5 B. & C. 440, 454.

DEUTEROGAMY. The act, or condition, of one who marries after the death of a former wife or husband.

DEVADIATUS, or DIVADIATUS. An offender without sureties or pledges. Cowell.

DEVASTATION. Wasteful use of the property of a deceased person, as for extravagant funeral or other unnecessary expenses. 2 Bl.Comm. 508.

DEVASTAVERUNT. They have wasted. A term applied in old English law to waste by executors and administrators, and to the process issued against them therefor. Cowell. See Devastavit.

DEVASTAVIT. Lat. He has wasted. The act of an executor or administrator in wasting the goods of the deceased; mismanagement of the estate by which a loss occurs; Grigg v. Hanna, 283 Mich. 443, 478 N.W. 125; a breach of trust or Misappropriation of assets held in a fiduciary character; any violation or neglect of duty by an executor or administrator, involving loss to the decedent's estate, which makes him personally responsible to heirs, creditors, or legatees. McCloughlin v. McCloughlin, 43 W.Va. 226, 27 S.E. 378.

Also, if plaintiff, in an action against an executor or administrator, has obtained judgment, the usual execution runs de bonis testatoris; but, if the sheriff returns such a writ nulla bona testatoris nec propriis, the plaintiff may, forthwith, upon this return, sue out an execution against the property or person of the executor or administrator, in as full a manner as in an action against him, sued in his own right. Such a return is called a "devastavit." Brown.

DEVELOP. To progress to a more advanced state or condition, as an injury. Rabin v. Central Business Men's Ass'n, 116 Kan. 280, 226 P. 764, 766, 38 A.L.R. 26. To bring, or attempt to bring, to a state of fruition; to continue the work in hand, as in operating under an oil and gas lease, in a manner that would discover oil, if it existed, and promote its production. Lacer v. Sumpter, 198 Ky. 752, 249 S.W. 1026, 1027. To unfold more completely; to evolve the possibilities or power of; to make active; to perfect; advance; further; to make; to increase; to promote the growth of. Leingang v. Geller, Ward & Hasner Hardware Co., 335 Mo. 549, 73 S.W.2d 256, 261.

DEVELOPED WATER. Such subterranean or underground water as is discovered and brought to the surface by the exploitation of man, and which otherwise would run to waste. Rock Creek Ditch & Flume Co. v. Miller, 17 P.2d 1074, 1077, 93 Mont. 248, 89 A.L.R. 200; Jones v. Warm Springs Irr. Dist., 162 Or. 186, 91 P.2d 542.

DEVENERUNT. A writ, now obsolete, directed to the king's escheators when any of the king's tenants in capite died, and when his son and heir dies within age and in the king's custody, commencing the escheators, that by the oaths of twelve good and lawful men they shall inquire what lands or tenements by the death of the tenant have come to the king. Dyer, 360; Termes de la Ley; Keilw. 199a; Blount; Cowell.

DEVEST. To deprive; to take away; to withdraw. Usually spoken of an authority, power, property, or title; as the estate is devested. Devest is opposite to invest. As to invest signifies to deliver the possession of anything to another, so to devest signifies to take it away. Jacob.

It is sometimes written "divest" but "devest" has the support of the best authority. Burrill.

DEVIGATION. In General

A change made in the progress of a work from the original terms or design or method agreed upon. Ward v. City of Monrovia, 16 Cal.2d 815, 108 P.2d 425, 429.

A voluntary departure by railroad carrier, without necessity or reasonable cause, from the regular or usual route or from a stipulated or customary mode of carriage. Ward v. Gulf, M. & N. R. Co., 23 Tenn.App. 533, 134 S.W.2d 917, 924.

In Insurance

Varying from the risks insured against, as described in the policy, without necessity or just cause, after the risk has begun. 1 Phil. Ins. § 977, et seq.; 1 Arn. Ins. 415, et seq. Hostetter v. Park, 137 U.S. 30, 11 Sup.Ct. 1, 34 L.Ed. 568.

Any unnecessary or unexcused departure from the usual or general mode of carrying on the voyage insured. 15 Amer. Law Rev. 108; Shackman v. Cunard White Star, D.C.N.Y., 31 F.Supp. 948, 961.

A voluntary departure without reasonable cause from the course of the voyage insured, or an unreasonable delay in pursuing the voyage, or the commencement of an entirely different voyage. The Chester Valley, C.C.A.La., 110 F.2d 592, 594; The Wildomino v. Citro Chemical Co. of America, 272 U.S. 718, 47 S.Ct. 261, 262, 71 L.Ed. 491.

In the Law of Master and Servant

A departure on the part of a servant from his master's service, for some purpose of his own. Jeffries v. Jodawelky, 304 Mich. 421, 8 N.W.2d 121, 122. The liability of the master to third persons injured by the servant depends on the degree of deviation and all the attending circumstances. Johnson v. Maryland Cass Co., C.C.A. Wis., 125 F.2d 337, 338. To exonerate the master, the deviation must be so substantial as to amount to an entire departure, and must be for purposes entirely personal to the servant. Thomas v. Lockwood Oil Co., 174 Wis. 486, 182 N.W. 841, 843. Contra, it is held that the test is whether master impliedly consented to route taken, and there can be no such thing as a slight deviation. Kalinowski v. Odlewany, 289 Mich. 684, 287 N.W. 344, 345. As to a distinction between "deviation," "temporary abandonment," and "complete abandonment," see Dockweiler v. American Piano Co., 94 Misc. 712, 160 N.Y.S. 270, 273.

DEVICE. An invention or contrivance; any result of design; as in the phrase "gambling device," which means a machine or contrivance of any kind for the playing of an unlawful game of chance or hazard. State v. Blackstone, 115 Mo. 424, 22 S.W. 370. Also, a plan or project; a scheme to trick or deceive; a stratagem or artifice; as in the laws relating to fraud and cheating. State v. Smith, 82 Minn. 342, 85 N.W. 12. Also an emblem, pictorial representation, or distinguishing mark or sign of any kind; as in the laws prohibiting the marking of ballots used in public elections with "any device." Baxter v. Ellis, 111 N.C. 124, 15 S.E. 938, 17 L.R.A. 382.

In a statute against gaming devices, this term is to be understood as meaning something formed by design, a contrivance, an invention. It is to be distinguished from "substitute," which means something put in the place of another thing, or used instead of something else. Henderson v. State, 59 Ala. 91.

In Patent Law

A plan or contrivance, or an application, adjustment, shaping, or combination of materials or members, for the purpose of accomplishing a particular result or serving a particular use, chiefly by mechanical means and usually simple in character or not highly complex, but involving the exercise of the inventive faculty.

DEVIL ON THE NECK. An instrument of torture, formerly used to extort confessions, etc. It was made of several irons, which were fastened DEVILLING. A term used in London of a barrister recently admitted to the bar, who assists a junior barrister in his professional work, without compensation and without appearing in any way in the matter.

DEVISABLE. Capable of being devised. 1 Pow. Dev. 165; 2 Bl.Comm. 373.

DEVISAVIT VEL NON. In practice. The name of an issue sent out of a court of chancery, or one which exercises chancery jurisdiction, to a court of law, to try the validity of a paper asserted and denied to be a will, to ascertain whether or not the testator did devise, or whether or not that paper was his will. 7 Brown, Parl.Cas, 437; 2 Atk. 424; Asay v. Hoover, 5 Pa. 21, 45 Am.Dec. 713.

DEVISE. A testamentary disposition of land or realty; a gift of real property by the last will and testament of the donor. Scholle v. Scholle, 113 N.Y. 261, 21 N.E. 84; Murchison v. Wallace, 156 Va, 728, 159 S.E. 106, 108.

Classification

Devises are contingent or vested; that is, after the death of the testator. Contingent, when the vesting of any estate in the devisee is made to depend upon some future event, in which case, if the event never occur, or until it does occur, no estate vests under the devise. But, when the future event is referred to merely to determine the time at which the devisee shall come into the use of the estate, this does not hinder the vesting of the estate at the death of the testator. 1 Jarm.Wills, c. 26. Devises are also classed as general or specific. A general devise is one which passes lands of the testator without a particular enumeration or description of them; as, a devise of "all my lands" or "all my other lands." In a more restricted sense, a general devise is one which grants a parcel of land without the addition of any words to show how great an estate is meant to be given, or without words indicating either a grant in perpetuity or a grant for a limited term; in this case it is construed as granting a life estate. Hitch v. Fatten, 8 Houst. (Del.) 334, 16 A. 558, 2 L.R.A. 724. Specific devises are devises of lands particularly specified in the terms of the devise, as opposed to general and residuary devises of land, in which the local or other particular description or enumeration of the realty is not expressed. For example, "I devise my Henlopen Hall estate" is a specific devise; but, "I devise all my lands," or, "all my other lands," is a general devise or a residuary devise. But all devises are (in effect) specific, even residuary devises being so. L.R. 3 Ch. 420; id. 136.

At common law, all devises of land were deemed to be "specific" whether the land was identified in the devise or passed under the residuary clause. In re Sutton's Estate, 11 Del.Ch. 460, 97 A. 624, 626. A conditional devise is one which depends upon the occurrence of some uncertain event, by which it is either to take effect or be defeated. An executory devise of lands is such a disposition of them by will that no estate vests at the death of the devisee, but only on some future contingency. It differs from a remainder in three very material points; (1) That it needs not any particular estate to support it; (2) that by it a fee-simple or other less estate may be limited after a fee-simple; (3) that by this means a remainder may be limited of a chattel interest, after a particular estate for life created in the same. 2 Bl.Comm. 172. In a stricter sense, a limitation by will of a future contingent interest in lands, contrary to the rules of the common law. 4 Kent, Comm. 263; 1 Steph.Comm. 564; Dean v. Crews, 77 Fla. 319, 81 So. 479. A limitation by will of a future estate or interest in a land, which cannot, consistently with the rules of law, take effect as a remainder. 2 Pow.Dev. (by Jarman) 237; Bean v. Atkins, 87 Vt. 376, 89 A. 643, 646. See People v. Consider, 4 Wall. 474; 18 Ed. 869; Glover v. Condell, 163 Ill. 566, 45 N.E. 173, 35 L.R.A. 360. A future interest taking effect as a fee in derogation of a defeasible fee devised or conveyed to the first taker, when created by will, is an "executory devise," and, when created by deed, is a "conditional limitation," and in either event is given effect as a shifting or springing use. McWilliams v. Have-

The estates known as a contingent remainder and an "executory devise" are both interests or estates in land to take effect in the future and depend upon a future contingency; an "executory devise" being an interest which the rules of law do not permit to be created in conveyances, but allow in case of wills. It follows a fee estate created by a will. A contingent remainder may be created by will or other conveyance and must follow a particular or temporary estate created by the same instrument of conveyance. Wilkins v. Rowan, 107 Neb. 180, 185 N.W. 437, 439. Lapsed devise. A devise which fails, or takes no effect, in consequence of the death of the devisee before the testator; the subject-matter of it being considered as not disposed of by the will. 1 Steph.Comm. 559; 4 Kent, Comm. 541. Murphy v. McKeon, 53 N.J.Eq. 406, 32 A. 374. Residuary devise. A devise of all the residue of the testator's real property, that is, all that remains over and above the other devises.

Synonyms

The term "devise" is properly restricted to real property; testamentary dispositions of personal property being properly called "bequests" or "legacies." Borgner v. Brown, 133 Ind. 391, 33 N.E. 92.

DEVISEE. The person to whom lands or other real property are devised or given by will. 1 Pow. Dev. c. 7. In re Lewis' Estate, 39 Nev, 445, 159 P. 961, 962, 4 A.L.R. 241.

Residuary Devisee

The person named in a will, who is to take all the real property remaining over and above the other devises.

DEVISOR. A giver of lands or real estate by will; the maker of a will of lands; a testator.

DEVORIR. Fr. Duty. It is used in the statute of 2 Rich. II. c. 3, in the sense of duties or customs.

DEVOLOUTION. The transfer or transition from one person to another of a right, liability, title, estate, or office. Francisco v. Aguirre, 94 Cal. 180, 29 P. 495.

In Ecclesiastical Law

The forfeiture of a right or power (as the right of presentation to a living) in consequence of its non-user by the person holding it, or of some other act or omission on his part, and its resulting transfer to the person next entitled.

In Scotch Law

The transference of the right of purchase, from the highest bidder at an auction sale, to the next highest, when the former fails to pay his bid or furnish security for its payment within the time appointed. Also, the reference of a matter in controversy to a third person (called "oversman") by two arbitrators to whom it has been submitted and who are unable to agree.

DEVOLUTIVE APPEAL. In the law of Louisiana, one which does not suspend the execution of the judgment appealed from. Brock v. Police Jury of Rapides Parish, 198 La. 787, 4 So.2d 829, 832.

DEVOLVE. To pass or be transferred from one person to another; to fall on, or accrue to, one person as the successor of another; as a title, right, office, liability. The term is said to be peculiarly appropriate to the passing of an estate from a person dying to a person living. Babcock v. Maxwell, 29 Mont. 31, 74 P. 64; Fitzpatrick v. McAlister, 121 Okl. 83, 248 P. 569, 573; People ex rel. Robin v. Hayes, 149 N.Y.S. 250, 252, 163 App. Div. 725. See Devolution.

DEVULCANIZE. Of rubber. A more or less perfect restoration of vulcanized rubber to a state in which it might be used as crude rubber. Philadelphia Rubber Works Co. v. Portage Rubber Co., D.C.Ohio, 227 F. 623, 627.

DI. ET FI. L. Lat. In old writs. An abbreviation of dilecto et fidelii, (to his beloved and faithful.)

DIACONATE. The office of a deacon.

DIACONUS. A deacon.

DIAGNOSIS. A medical term, meaning the discovery of the source of a patient’s illness or the determination of the nature of his disease from a study of its symptoms. Said to be little more than a guess enlightened by experience. Swan v. Railroad Co., 29 N.Y.S. 337, 79 Hun 612; People v. Jordan, 172 Cal. 391, 156 P. 451, 454.

The act or art of recognizing the presence of disease from its symptoms, and deciding as to its character, also the decision reached, for determination of type or condition through case or specimen study or conclusion arrived at through critical perception or scrutiny. A “clinical diagnosis” is one made from a study of the symptoms only, and a “physical diagnosis” is one made by means of physical measure, such as palpation and inspection. Williams v. Elias, 140 Neb. 656, 1 N.W.2d 121, 123.

DIAGONAL, n. A right line drawn from the one angle to another not adjacent of a figure of four or more sides and dividing it into two parts. Semerad v. Dunn County, 35 N.D. 437, 160 N.W. 855, 858.

DIAGONAL, adj. Joining two not adjacent angles of a quadrilateral or multilateral figure running across from corner to corner; crossing at an angle with one of the sides. Semerad v. Dunn County, 35 N.D. 437, 160 N.W. 855, 858.

DIALLAGG. A rhetorical figure in which arguments are placed in various points of view, and then turned to one point. Enc.Lond.

DIALOGUS DE SCACCARIO. Dialogue of or about the exchequer. An ancient treatise on the court of exchequer, attributed by some to Ger-vase of Tilbury, by others to Richard Fitz Nigel, bishop of London in the reign of Richard I. It is quoted by Lord Coke under the name of Ockham. Crabb, Eng. Law, 71.

DIANATIC. A logical reasoning in a progressive manner, proceeding from one subject to another. Enc. Lond.

DIARIUM. Daily food, or as much as will suffice for the day. Du Cange.

DIATIM. In old records. Daily; every day; from day to day. Spelman.

DICA. In old English law. A tally for accounts, by number of cuts, (taillees,) marks, or notches. Cowell. See Tallia; Tally.

DICAST. An officer in ancient Greece answering in some respects to our jurymen, but combining, on trials had before them, the functions of both judge and jury. The dicasts sat together in numbers varying, according to the importance of the case, from one to five hundred.

DICE. Small cubes of bone or ivory, marked with figures or devices on their several sides, used in playing certain games of chance. See Wetmore v. State, 55 Ala. 198.

DICTA. Opinions of a judge which do not embody the resolution or determination of the court. Deer Island Fish & Oyster Co. v. First Nat. Bank, 166 Miss. 162, 146 So. 116, 119. See Dictum.

DICTATE. To order or instruct what is to be said or written. To pronounce, word by word, what is meant to be written by another. Hamilton v. Hamilton, 6 Mart., N.S., La., 143. See Dictation.

DICTATION. In Louisiana, this term is used in a technical sense, and means to pronounce orally what is destined to be written at the same time by another. It is used in reference to nuncupative wills. Prendergast v. Prendergast, 16 La.Ann. 220, 79 Am.Dec. 575. The dictation of a will refers to the substance, and not the style, and it is sufficient if the will, as written, conveys the identity of thought expressed by the testator, though not the identity of words used by him. Succession of Beattie, 163 La. 831, 112 So. 802, 803.

DICTATOR. A magistrate invested with unlimited power, and created in times of national distress and peril. Among the Romans, he continued in office for six months only, and had unlimited power and authority over both the property and lives of the citizens. One in whom supreme authority in any line is invested, one who rules as dictator, and one who prescribes for others authoritatively. Houston Printing Co. v. Hunter, Tex.Civ.App., 105 S.W.2d 312, 317.

DICTATORSHIP OF PROLETARIAT. The class power of the revolutionary proletariat (unskilled laborers without property) arising upon destruction of the state. People v. Gitlow, 234 N.Y. 132, 136 N.E. 317, 322.

DICTORES. Arbitrators.

DICTUM. In General

A statement, remark, or observation. Gratia dictum; a gratuitous or voluntary representation; one which a party is not bound to make. 2 Kent, Comm. 486. Simplex dictum; a mere assertion; an assertion without proof. Bract. fol. 320.

The word is generally used as an abbreviated form of obiter dictum, “a remark by the way;” that is, an observation or remark made by a judge in pronouncing an opinion upon a cause, concerning some rule, principle, or application of law, or the solution of a question suggested by the case at bar, but not necessarily involved in the case or essential to its determination; any statement of the law enunciated by the court merely by way of illustration, argument, analogy, or suggestion. See Railroad Co. v. Schutte, 103 U.S. 118, 143, 26 L.Ed. 372; City of Lincoln v. Steffensmeyer, 134 Neb. 613, 279 N.W. 272, 119 A.L.R. 914; Deer Island Fish & Oyster Co. v. First Nat. Bank, 166 Miss. 162, 146 So. 110, 119.

Statements and comments in an opinion some rule of law or legal proposition not necessarily involved nor essential to determination of the case in hand are obiter dicta, and lack the force of an adjudication. Wheeler v. Wilkin, 98 Colo. 568; 58 P.2d 1223, 1226; Roquemore v. Sovereign Camp, W.O.W., 226 Ala. 279, 146 So. 619, 622.

DICTUM DE KENILWORTH. The edict or declaration of Kenilworth. An edict or award between King Henry III. and all the barons and others who had been in arms against him; and so called because it was made at Kenilworth Castle in Warwickshire, in the fifty-first year of his reign, containing a composition of five year’s rent for the lands and estates of those who had forfeited them in that rebellion. Blount; 2 Reeve, Eng.Law, 62.

DIE, v. To expire; cease to live; the equivalent to the phrase “lose his life.” Hershey v. Agnew, 83 Colo. 89, 262 P. 526, 528.

DIE WITHOUT ISSUE. See Dying Without Issue.

DIEI DICTIO. Lat. In Roman law. This name was given to a notice promulgated by a magistrate of his intention to present an impeachment against a citizen before the people, specifying the day appointed, the name of the accused, and the crime charged.

DIEM CLAUSIT EXTREMUM. (Lat. He has closed his last day,—died.) A writ which formerly lay on the death of a tenant in capite, to ascertain the lands of which he died seised, and re-claim them into the king’s hands. It was directed to the king’s escheataries. Fitzh.Nat.Brev. 251, K; 2 Reeve, Eng.Law, 327.

A writ awarded out of the exchequer after the death of a crown debtor, the sheriff being commanded by it to inquire by a jury when and where the crown debtor died, and what chattels, debts, and lands he had at the time of his decease, and to take and seize them into the king’s hands. 4 Steph.Comm. 47, 48.

DIES. Lat. A day; days. Days for appearance in court. Provisions or maintenance for a day. The king’s rents were anciently reserved by so many days’ provisions. Spelman; Cowell; Blount.

DIES A QUO. (The day from which.) In the civil law. The day from which a transaction begins; the commencement of it; the conclusion being the dies ad quem. Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 185.

DIES AMORIS. A day of favor. The name given to the appearance day of the term on the fourth day, or quarto die post. It was the day given by the favor and indulgence of the court to the defendant for his appearance, when all parties appeared in court, and had their appearance recorded by the proper officer. Wharton.

DIES CEDIT. The day begins; dies venit, the day has come. Two expressions in Roman law which signify the vesting or fixing of an interest, and the interest becoming a present one. Sandars’ Just.Inst. (5th Ed.) 225, 232.

In French Law

The report of a judgment made by one of the judges who has given it. Poth.Proc.Civil, pt. 1, c. 5, art. 2.

In German Law

The report of a judgment made by one of the judges who has given it.
DIES COMMUNES IN BANCO. Regular days for appearance in court; called, also "common return-days." 2 Reeve, Eng.Law, 57.

DIES DATUS. A day given or allowed, (to a defendant in an action; ) amounting to a continuance. But the name was appropriate only to a continuance before a declaration filed; if afterwards allowed, it was called an "imparlance."

DIES DATUS IN BANCO. A day given in the bench, (or court of common pleas.) Bract. fols. 257b, 361. A day given in bank, as distinguished from a day at nisi prius. Co.Litt. 135.

DIES DATUS PARTIBUS. A day given to the parties to an action; an adjournment or continuance. Crabb, Eng.Law, 217.

As respects contract specifications or material described therein, a state of being unlike. Mc-
DILAPIDATION

DILAPIDATION

DILAPIDATION. A species of ecclesiastical waste which occurs whenever the incumbent suffers any edifices of his ecclesiastical living to go to ruin or decay. It is either voluntary, by pulling down, or permissive, by suffering the church, parsonage-houses, and other buildings thereunto belonging, to decay. And the remedy for either lies either in the spiritual court, where the canon law prevails, or in the courts of common law. It is also held to be good cause of deprivation if the bishop, parson, or other ecclesiastical person dilapidates buildings or cuts down timber growing on the patrimony of the church, unless for necessary repairs; and that a writ of prohibition will also lie against him in the common-law courts. 3 Bl. Comm. 91.

The term is also used, in the law of landlord and tenant, to signify the neglect of necessary repairs to a building, or suffering it to fall into a DILATORY DEFENSE. In chancery practice.

DILATORY EXCEPTIONS are such as do not be removed. 3 Bl.Comm. 301, 302.

DILATORY PLEAS. A class of defenses at com-state of decay, or the pulling down of the building or any part of it. Wall Estate Co. v. Standard Box Co., 20 Cal.App. 311, 128 P. 1020, 1021.

Dilatones in lege sunt odiosae. Delays in law are odious. Branch, Princ.

DILATORY. Tending or intended to cause delay or to gain time or to put off a decision.

DILATORY DEFENSE. In chancery practice.
One the object of which is to dismiss, suspend, tend to defeat the action, but only to retard its progress.

DILATORY EXCEPTIONS are such as do not tend to defeat the action, but only to retard its progress.

DILATORY PLEAS. A class of defenses at common law, founded on some matter of fact not con-ected with the merits of the case, but such as might exist without impeaching the right of action itself. They were either pleas to the jurisdictio , showing that, by reason of some matter therein stated, the case was not within the jurisdiction of the court; or pleas in suspension, showing some matter of temporary incapacity to proceed with the suit; or pleas in abatement, showing some matter for abatement or quashing the declaration.
App. 78, 86 S.E. 95.

DILIGENCE. Prudence; vigilant activity; at-teniveness; or care, of which there are infinite shades, from the slightest momentary thought to the most vigilant anxiety. People v. Hewitt, 78
Cal.App. 426, 248 P. 1021, 1024. The law recognizes only three degrees of diligence: (1) Common or ordinary, which men, in general, exert in respect of their own concerns; the standard is necessarily variable with respect to the facts, although it may be uniform with respect to the principle. (2) High or great, which is extraordinary diligence, or that which very prudent persons take of their own concerns. (3) Low or slight, which is that which persons of less than common prudence, or indeed of no prudence at all, take of their own concerns. Brown & Flowers 366, 367.

The civil law is in perfect conformity with the common law. It lays down three degrees of diligence,—ordinary, (diligentia;) extraordinary, (exactissima diligentia;) slight, (levissima diligentia.) Story, Bailm. 19.

There may be a high degree of diligence, a common degree of diligence, and a slight degree of diligence, with their corresponding degrees of negligence, and these can be clearly enough defined for all practical purposes, and, with a view to the business of life, seem to be all that are really necessary. Common or ordinary diligence is that degree of diligence which men in general exercise in respect to their own concerns; high or great diligence is of course extraordinary diligence, or that which very prudent persons take of their own concerns; and low or slight diligence is that which persons of less than common prudence, or indeed of any prudence at all, take of their own concerns.

Ordinary negligence is the want of ordinary diligence; slight, or less than ordinary, negligence is the want of great diligence; and gross or more than ordinary negligence is the want of slight diligence. Railroad Co. v. Rollins, 5 Kan. 180.

In Scotch Law and Practice

Process of law, by which persons, lands, or effects are seized in execution or in security for enforcing the attendance of witnesses, or the production of writings. Ersk. Inst. 4, 1, 71.

Other Classifications and Compound Terms

—Due diligence. Such a measure of prudence, activity, or assiduity, as is properly to be expected from, and ordinarily exercised by, a reasonable and prudent man under the particular circumstances; not measured by any absolute standard, but depending on the relative facts of the special case. Perry v. Cedar Falls, 87 Iowa, 315, 54 N.W.
225.

—Extraordinary diligence. That extreme measure of care and caution which persons of unusual prudence and circumspection use for securing and preserving their own property or rights. Railroad Co. v. Huggins, 89 Ga. 494, 15 S.E. 848; Railroad Co. v. White, 88 Ga. 805, 15 S.E. 802.

—Great diligence. Such a measure of care, prudence, and assiduity as persons of unusual prudence and discretion exercise in regard to any and all of their own affairs, or such as persons of ordinary prudence exercise in regard to very important affairs of their own. Litchfield v. White, 7 N.Y. 438, 57 Am.Dec. 534.

—High diligence. The same as great diligence.

—Low diligence. The same as slight diligence.

—Necessary diligence. That degree of diligence which a person placed in a particular situation must exercise in order to entitle him to the protection of the law in respect to rights or claims growing out of that situation, or to avoid being left without redress on account of his own culpable carelessness or negligence. Garahy v. Bay-Me. 312.

—Ordinary diligence is that degree of care which men of common prudence generally exercise in their affairs, in the country and the age in which —Reasonable diligence. A fair, proper and due degree of care and activity, measured with refer-ce to the particular circumstances; such diligence, care, or attention as might be expected from a man of ordinary prudence and activity.

Ford v. Engleman, 118 Va. 89, 86 S.E. 852, 855.

—Special diligence. The measure of diligence and skill exercised by a good business man in his particular specialty, which must be commensurate with the duty to be performed and the individual circumstances of the case; not merely the dili-DIPLOMACY. The science which treats of the relations and interests of nations with nations.

In Spanish Law

DIOCESAN. Belonging to a diocese; a bishop, as he stands related to his own clergy or flock.

DIOCESAN COURTS. In English law. The consistorial courts of each diocese, exercising general jurisdiction of all matters arising locally within their respective limits, with the exception of places subject to peculiar jurisdiction; deciding all matters of spiritual discipline,—suspending or depriving clergymen,—and administering the other branches of the ecclesiastical law. 2 Steph.Com. 672.

DIOCESAN MISSION. A mission which does missionary work in single diocese. Domestic & Foreign Missionary Soc. v. Crippled Children's Hospital, 163 Va. 114, 176 S.E. 193.

DIOICHIA. The district over which a bishop exercised his spiritual functions.

DIP, v. To immerse for a short time in any liquid; to place in fluid and withdraw again; the act of dipping or immersing; a plunge; a brief bath, as the dip of the oars; a dip in the sea. Covington County v. Pickering, 123 Miss. 20, 85 So. 114, 115.

DIP, n. In mining law. The line of declination of strata; the angle which measures the deviation of a mineralized vein or lode from the vertical plane; the slope or slant of a vein, away from the perpendicular, as it goes downward into the earth; distinguished from the "strike" of the vein, which is its extension in the horizontal plane, or its lengthwise trend or course with reference to the points of the compass. King v. Mining Co., 9 Mont. 543, 24 P. 200.

DIP, n. In mining law. Letters dimissory or dismissory, commonly called "apostoles," (quae vulgo apostoli dicuntur.) Dig. 50, 16, 106. See Apostoli, Apostles.

DIMISSORY LETTERS. Where a candidate for holy orders has a title of ordination in one diocese in England, and is to be ordained in another, the bishop of the former diocese gives letters dimissory to the bishop of the latter to enable him to ordain the candidate. Holthouse.

DIPLOMA. In the civil law. A royal charter; letters patent granted by a prince or sovereign. Calvin.

A license granted to a physician, etc., to practice his art or profession. See Brooks v. State, 88 Ala. 122, 6 So. 902.

DIPLOMACY. The science which treats of the relations and interests of nations with nations.

In Roman Law

A civil division of the Roman empire embracing several provinces. Calvin.
Negotiation or intercourse between nations through their representatives. The rules, customs, and privileges of representatives at foreign courts.

DIPLOMATIC AGENT. In international law. A general name for all classes of persons charged with the negotiation, transaction, or superintendence of the diplomatic business of one nation at the court of another. See Rev.St.U.S. § 1674 (22 USCA §§ 40, 51).

DIPLOMATICS. The science of diplomas, or of ancient charters, public documents, diplomas, etc., and discriminating the true from the false. Webster.

DIPSOMANIA. In medical jurisprudence. A mental disease characterized by an uncontrollable desire for intoxicating drinks. An irresistible impulse to indulge in intoxication, either by alcohol or other drugs. Ballard v. State, 19 Neb. 614, 28 N.W. 271; State v. Wallace, 170 Or. 60, 131 P.2d 222, 223.

DIPTYCHA. Diptychs; tablets of wood, metal, or other substance, used among the Romans for the purpose of writing, and folded like a book of two leaves. The diptychs of antiquity were especially employed for public registers. They were used in the Greek, and afterwards in the Roman, church, as registers of the names of those for whom supplication was to be made, and are ranked among the earliest monastic records. Burill.

DIRECT, v. To point to; guide; order; command; instruct. In re Durkee’s Estate, 47 N.Y.S. 2d 721, 725, 726, 183 Misc. 382.

To advise; suggest; request. Bowden v. Cumberland County, 123 Me. 359, 123 A. 166, 168.

To assume the role of a director, one whose directions are binding. Gentle v. Frederick, 234 Ala. 184, 174 So. 606, 607.

DIRECT, adj. Immediate; proximate; by the shortest course; without circuitry; operating by an immediate connection or relation, instead of operating through a medium; the opposite of indirect. Trexler Lumber Co. v. Allemannia Fire Ins. Co. of Pittsburgh, 289 Pa. 13, 136 A. 856, 858; Western Assur. Co. v. Hann, 201 Ala. 376, 78 So. 232, 234; Carter v. Carter Coal Co., App.D.C., 298 U.S. 238, 56 S.Ct. 855, 80 L.Ed. 1160.

In the usual or natural course or line; immediately upwards or downwards; as distinguished from that which is out of the line, or on the side of it; the opposite of collateral.

In the usual or regular course or order, as distinguished from that which diverts, interrupts, or opposes; the opposite of cross or contrary.

Without any intervening medium, agency or influence; unconditional. General Finance Co. v. Powell, 118 P.2d 751, 753, 112 Mont. 535.

DIRECT ATTACK. A direct attack on a judgment or decree is an attempt, for sufficient cause, to have it annulled, reversed, vacated, corrected, declared void, or enjoined, in a proceeding instituted for that specific purpose, such as an appeal, writ of error, bill of review, or injunction to restrain its execution; distinguished from a collateral attack, which is an attempt to impeach the validity or binding force of the judgment or decree as a side issue or in a proceeding instituted for some other purpose. Morrill v. Morrill, 20 Or. 96, 25 P. 362; In re Melgaard’s Will, 200 Minn. 493, 74 N.W. 641, 649. A direct attack on a judicial proceeding is an attempt to void or correct it in some manner provided by law.

DIRECT CAUSE. The active, efficient cause that sets in motion a train of events which brings about a result without the intervention of any force started and working actively from a new and independent source. Anderson v. Steinle, 289 Ill. App. 167, 6 N.E.2d 879. See, Cause.

DIRECT EVIDENCE. Is that means of proof which tends to show the existence of a fact in question, without the intervention of the proof of another fact and is distinguished from circumstantial evidence, which is often called "indirect." See Brown; State v. Calder, 23 Mont. 504, 59 P. 903.

Direct evidence means evidence which in the first instance applies directly to the factum probandum, or which immediately points to a question at issue, or is evidence of the precise fact in question and on trial by witnesses who can testify that they saw the acts done or heard the words spoken which constituted the precise fact to be proved. Garner v. New Jersey Fidelity & Plate Glass Ins. Co., Mo. App., 200 S.W. 448, Greenl.Ev. § 13; 1 Stark, Ev. 19; Tayl., Ex. 84.

Proof of facts by witnesses who saw acts done or heard words spoken. Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Warden, 125 Tex. 193, 78 S.W.2d 164, 167, 125 Tex. 193.

DIRECT EXAMINATION. In practice. The first interrogation or examination of a witness, on the merits, by the party on whose behalf he is called.

This is to be distinguished from an examination in pais, or on the voir dire, which is merely preliminary, and is conducted for the purpose of discovering the competency of the witness is challenged; from the cross-examination, which is conducted by the adverse party; and from the redirect examination which follows the cross-examination, and is had by the party who first examined the witness.

DIRECT INJURY. A wrong which directly results in the violation of a legal right and which must exist to permit a court to determine the constitutionality of an act of Congress. Wallace v. Ganley, 95 F.2d 364, 366, 68 App.D.C. 235.

DIRECT INTEREST. A direct interest, such as would render the interested party incompetent to testify in regard to the matter, is an interest which is certain, and not contingent or doubtful. Rine
v. Rine, 100 Neb. 225, 158 N.W. 941, 943. A matter which is dependent alone on the successful prosecution of an execution cannot be considered as uncertain, or otherwise than direct, in this sense. In re Van Alstine’s Estate, 26 Utah, 193, 72 P. 942.

Direct line. See Descent.

DIRECT LOSS. One resulting immediately and proximately from the occurrence and not remotely from some of the consequences or effects thereof. Ermentrout v. Insurance Co., 63 Minn. 305, 65 N.W. 635, 30 L.R.A. 346, 56 Am.St.Rep. 481. See Loss.

DIRECT PAYMENT. One which is absolute and unconditional as to the time, amount, and the persons by whom and to whom it is to be made. People v. Boylan, C.C. Colo., 25 F. 595; Hurd v. McClellan, 14 Colo. 213, 23 P. 792.

DIRECT TAX. One that is imposed directly upon property, according to its value. It is generally spoken of as a property tax or an ad valorum tax. City of De Land v. Florida Public Service Co., 161 So. 735, 739, 119 Fla. 804.

Under federal law. One that must be apportioned among the states according to population; a capitation tax, or a tax on real estate. Commonwealth of Pennsylvania ex rel. Schnader v. Fix, D.C.Pa., 9 F.Supp. 272, 276.

DIRECTION. The act of governing; management; superintendence. Denton v. Yazoo & M. V. R. Co., Miss., 284 U.S. 305, 52 S.Ct. 141, 142, 76 L.Ed. 310. Also the body of persons (called "directors") who are charged with the management and administration of a corporation or institution.

The charge or instruction given by the court to a jury upon a point of law arising or involved in the case, to be by them applied to the facts in evidence.

The clause of a bill in equity containing the address of the bill to the court.

That which is imposed by directing; a guiding or authoritative instruction; order; command. State ex rel. Johnson v. Tilley, 137 Neb. 173, 288 N.W. 521, 524; Hughes v. Van Bruggen, 44 N.M. 534, 105 P.2d 494, 496.

The line or course upon which anything is moving or aimed to move. Ruff v. Federal Tea Co., 129 Conn. 455, 29 A.2d 441, 442.

DIRECTLY. In a direct way without anything intervening; not by secondary, but by direct, means. Clark v. Warner, 85 Okl. 153, 204 P. 929, 934; Olsen v. Standard Oil Co., 188 Cal. 20, 204 P. 393, 396.

DIRECTOR OF THE MINT. An officer having the control, management, and superintendence of the United States mint and its branches. He is appointed by the president, by and with the advice and consent of the senate.

DIRECTOR. One who, or that which directs; as one who directs or regulates, guides or orders; a manager or superintendent, or a chief administrative official. State ex inf. McKittrick v. Bode, 342 Mo. 162, 113 S.W.2d 805, 808.

DIRECTORS. Persons appointed or elected according to law, authorized to manage and direct the affairs of a corporation or company. The whole of the directors collectively form the board of directors. Jones Min. Co. v. Cardiff Min. Co., 56 Utah, 449, 191 P. 426, 428.

DIRECTORY, adj. A provision in a statute, rule of procedure, or the like, which is a mere direction or instruction of no obligatory force, and involving no invalidating consequence for its disregard, as opposed to an imperative or mandatory provision, which must be followed. In re Opinion of the Justices, 124 Me. 453, 126 A. 354, 363. The general rule is that the prescriptions of a statute relating to the performance of a public duty are so far directory that, though neglect of them may be punishable, yet it does not affect the validity of the acts done under them, as in the case of a statute requiring an officer to prepare and deliver a document to another officer on or before a certain day. And see Pears v. Morrice, 2 Adol. & El. 94; Nelms v. Vaughan, 84 Va. 696, 5 S.E. 704.

A “directory” provision in a statute is one, the observance of which is not necessary to the validity of the proceeding to which it relates; State v. Barnell, 109 Ohio St. 246, 142 N.E. 611, 613; one which leaves it optional with the department or officer to which it is addressed to obey or not as he may see fit; In re Thompson, 94 Neb. 658, 144 N.W. 243, 244.

Statutory requisitions are deemed “directory” only when they relate to some immaterial matter where a compliance is matter of convenience rather than of substance. This mode of getting rid of a statutory provision by calling it “directory” is not only unsatisfactory, on account of the vagueness of the rule itself, but it is the exercise of a dispensing power by the courts, which approaches so near legislative discretion that it ought to be resorted to with reluctance, only in extraordinary cases, where great public mischief would otherwise ensue, or important private interests demand the application of the rule. Ellis v. Tilmann, 125 Miss. 678, 88 So. 281, 283.

Directory calls. Those which merely direct the neighborhood where the different calls may be found, whereas “locative calls” are those which serve to fix boundaries. Cates v. Reynolds, 143 Tenn. 667, 228 S.W. 695, 696.

Directory statute. Under a general classification, statutes are either “mandatory” or “directory,” and, if mandatory, they prescribe, in addition to requiring the doing of the things specified, the result that will follow if they are not done; whereas, if directory, their terms are limited to what is required to be done; otherwise, when it relates to form and manner, and where an act is incident, or after jurisdiction acquired, it is directory merely. State v. Kozer, 108 Or. 550, 217 P. 827, 832.

Directory trust. Where, by the terms of a trust, the fund is directed to be vested in a particular manner till the period arrives at which it is to be appropriated, this is called a "directory trust." It is distinguished from a discretionary trust, in which the trustee has a discretion as to the management of the fund. Deaderick v. Cantrell, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 272, 31 Am.Dec. 576.

DIRECTORY, n. Book containing names, addresses, and occupations of inhabitants of city. Also any list or compilation, usually in book or pamphlet form, of persons, firms or corporations forming some class separate and distinct from others, e.g., telephone directory, hotel directory, etc. American Travel & Hotel Directory Co. v. Gehring Publishing Co., D.C., 4 F.2d 415.

DIRIBITORES. In Roman law. Officers who distributed ballots to the people, to be used in voting.

TAYL. Civil Law, 192.

DIRIMENT IMPEDIMENTS. In canon law. Absolute bars to marriage, which would make it null oh initio.

DIRT. Filth or excrement; garden loam; earth or soil, especially when loose; dust; garden earth. Highley v. Phillips, 176 Md. 463, 5 A.2d 824, 827.

At the present day, disability is generally used to indicate an incapacity for the full enjoyment of ordinary legal rights; thus married women, persons under age, insane persons, and felons convict are said to be under disability. Sometimes the term is used in a more limited sense, as when it signifies an impediment to marriage, or the restraints placed upon clergymen by reason of their spiritual avocations. Mozley & Whitley.

Classification

Disability is either general or special; the former when it incapacitates the person for the performance of all legal acts of a general class, or giving to them their ordinary legal effect; the latter when it debar him from one specific act. State ex rel. Sathre v. Moodie, 258 N.W. 558, 567, 65 N.D. 340. Disability is also either personal or absolute; the former where it attaches to the particular person, and arises out of his status, his previous act, or his natural or juridical incapacity; State ex rel. Olson v. Langer, 65 N.D. 68, 256 N.W. 377; the latter where it originates with a particular person, but extends also to his descendants or successors. Lord de le Warre's Case, 6 Coke, 1a; Avegno v. Schmidt, 5 Sup.Ct. 487, 113 U.S. 293, 28 L.Ed. 976. Considered with special reference to the capacity to contract a marriage, disability is either canonical or civil; a disability of the former class makes the marriage voidable only, while the latter, in general, avoids it entirely. However, it has been held that, in the absence of statute, a court does not have jurisdiction to annul a marriage for a canonical disability. D. v. D., 2 Terry 263, 20 A.2d 139, 141. The term civil disability is also used as equivalent to legal disability, both these expressions meaning disabilities or disqualifications created by positive law, as distinguished from physical disabilities. Stieffel v. Valentine Sugars, 188 La. 1091, 179 So. 6, 15. A physical disability is a disability for incapacity caused by physical defect or infirmity, or bodily imperfection, or mental weakness or alienation; as, distinguished from civil disability, which relates to the civil status or condition of the person, and is imposed by the law.

Absence of competent physical, intellectual, or moral powers; impairment of earning capacity; loss of physical function that reduces efficiency; inability to work. Rorabaugh v. Great Eastern Casualty Co., 117 Wash. 7, 200 P.2d 587, 590.

Temporary Disability

Temporary, as distinguished from permanent, disability is a condition that exists until the injured employee is as far restored as the permanent character of the injuries will permit. Consolidated Coal Co. of St. Louis v. Industrial Commission, 311 Ill. 61, 142 N.E. 498, 500.

Total Disability

Total disability to follow insured's usual occupation arises where he is incapacitated from performing any substantial part of his ordinary duties, though still able to perform a few minor duties and be present at his place of business. Fidelity & Casualty Co. of New York v. Bynum, 221 Ky. 450, 298 S.W. 1080, 1082. "Total disability" within an accident policy does not mean absolute physical disability to transact any business pertaining to insured's occupation, but disability from performing substantial and material duties connected with it. Jacobs v. Loyal Protective Ins. Co., 97 Vt. 516, 124 A. 848, 852; Brown v. Missouri State Life Ins. Co., 136 S.C. 90, 134 S.E. 224-225. The term may also apply to any impairment of mind or body rendering it impossible for insured to follow continuously a substantially gainful occupation without seriously impairing his health, the disability being permanent when of such nature as to render it reasonably certain to continue throughout the lifetime of insured. Starnes v. U. S., D.C.Tex., 13 F.2d 212, 213. See, also, Wholly Disabled.

DISABLE. Ordinarily, to take away the ability of, to render incapable of proper and effective action. Federal Union Life Ins. Co. of Cincinnati, Ohio v. Richey's Adm'r, 256 Ky. 262, 75 S.W.2d 767, 768.

In the old language of pleading, to disable is to take advantage of one's own or another's disability. Thus, it is "an express maxim of the common law that the party shall not disable himself;" but "this disability to disable himself * * * is personal." 4 Coke, 123b.

DISABLING STATUTES. These are acts of parliament, restraining and regulating the exercise of a right or the power of alienation; the term is specially applied to 1 Eliz. c. 19, and similar acts restraining the power of ecclesiastical corporations to make leases.

DISADVOCARE. To deny a thing.

DISAFFIRM. To repudiate; to revoke a consent once given; to recall an affirmation. To refuse one's subsequent sanction to a former act; to disclaim the intention of being bound by an antecedent transaction.

DISAFFIRMANCE. The repudiation of a former transaction. The refusal by one who has the legal power to refuse, (as in the case of a voidable contract,) to abide by his former acts, or accept the legal consequences of them. It may either be "express" (in words) or "implied" from acts inconsistent with a recognition of validity of former transaction. Ryan v. Morrison, 40 Okl. 49, 135 P. 1049, 1050.

DISAFFOREST. To restore to their former condition lands which have been turned into forests. To remove from the operation of the forest laws. DISALT. To disable a person.

DISALLOW. To refuse to allow, to deny the validity of, to disown or reject. Stewart v. Yellowtail, D.C.Mont., 35 F.Supp. 798, 799. DISBAR. In England, to deprive a barrister permanently of the privileges of his position; it is analogous to striking an attorney off the rolls. In America, the word describes the act of a court in rescinding an attorney's license to practice at its bar. Gresham v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County, 44 Cal.App.2d 664, 112 Pd 965, 967.

DISBOCATIO. In old English law. A conversion of wood grounds into arable or pasture; an assarting. Cowell. See Assart.

DISBURSEMENTS. Money paid out or expended for which one is entitled to a credit upon rendering an account of his doings. Tinkler v. Powell, 23 Wyo. 352, 151 P. 1097, 1098.

The term is also used under the codes of civil procedure, to designate the expenditures necessarily made by a party in the progress of an action, aside from the fees of officers and court costs, which are allowed, eo nomine, together with costs, Fertilizer Co. v. Glenn, 48 S. C. 494, 26 S. E. 796; Sasser v. Stuyvesant Ins. Co., 258 App.Div. 340, 16 N.Y.S.2d 401, 402, 403.

DISCARCARE. In old English law. To discharge or unload, as a vessel. Carcare et discarcare; to charge and discharge; to load and unload. Cowell.

DISCARCARE. In old English law. To discharge, to unload; as a vessel. CARCARE ET DISCARCARE; to charge and discharge; to load and unload. Cowell.

In the Law of Contracts

To cancel or unloose the obligation of a contract; to make an agreement or contract null and inoperative. As a noun, the word means the act or instrument by which the binding force of a contract is terminated, irrespective of whether the contract is carried out to the full extent contemplated (in which case the discharge is the result of performance) or is broken off before complete execution. Rivers v. Blom, 163 Mo. 442, 63 S.W. 812.

Discharge is a generic term; its principal species are rescission, release, accord and satisfaction, performance, judgment, composition, bankruptcy, merger (q. v.). Leake, Cont. 413.

As applied to demands, claims, rights of action, incumbrances, etc., to discharge the debt or claim is to extinguish it, to annul its obligatory force, to satisfy it. And here also the term is generic; thus a debt, a mortgage, a legacy, may be discharged by payment or performance, or by any act short of that, lawful in itself, which the creditor accepts as sufficient. Blackwood v. Brown, 29 Mich. 484; Rangely v. Spring, 28 Me. 151. To discharge a person is to liberate him from the binding force of an obligation, debt, or claim.

There is a distinction between a "debt discharged" and a "debt paid." When discharged the debt still exists though divested of its character as a legal obligation during the operation of the discharge. Something of the original vitality of the debt continues to exist which may be transferred, even though the transferee takes it subject to its disability incident to the discharge. The fact that it carries something which may be a consideration for a new promise to pay, so as to make an otherwise worthless promise a legal obligation, makes it the subject of transfer by assignment. Stanek v. White, 172 Minn. 390, 215 N.W. 784.

Discharge by operation of law is where the discharge takes place, whether it was intended by the parties or not; thus, if a creditor appoints his debtor his executor, the debt is discharged by operation of law, because the executor cannot have an action against himself. Co. Litt. 264b, note 1; Williams, Ex'rs, 1216; Chit. Cont. 714.

In Bankruptcy Practice

The discharge of the bankrupt is the step which regularly follows the adjudication of bankruptcy and the administration of his estate. By it he is released from the obligation of all his debts which were or might be proved in the proceedings, so that they are no longer a charge upon him, and so that he may thereafter engage in business and acquire property without its being liable for the satisfaction of such former debts. Pitcairn v. Scully, 252 Pa. 82, 97 A. 120, 121.

In Civil Practice

To discharge a rule, an order, an injunction, a certificate, process of execution, or in general any proceeding in a court, is to cancel or annul it, or to revoke it, or to refuse to confirm its original provisional force. Nichols v. Chittenden, 14 Colo. App. 49, 59 P. 954.

To discharge a jury is to relieve them from any further consideration of a cause. This is done when the continuance of the trial is, by any cause, rendered impossible; also when the jury, after deliberation, cannot agree on a verdict.

In Criminal Practice

The act by which a person in confinement, held on an accusation of some crime or misdemeanor, is set at liberty. The writing containing the order for his being so set at liberty is also called a "discharge." In re Eddinger, 236 Mich. 668, 211 N.W. 54.

In Equity Practice

In the process of accounting before a master in chancery, the discharge is a statement of expenses and counter-claims brought in and filed, by way of set-off, by the accounting defendant; which follows the charge in order.

In Maritime Law

The unloading or univery of a cargo from a vessel. The Bird of Paradise v. Heyneman, 5 Wall. 557, 18 L.Ed. 662.

In Military Law

The release or dismissal of a soldier, sailor, or marine, from further military service, either at the expiration of his term of enlistment, or previous thereto on special application therefor, or as a punishment. An "honorable" discharge is one granted at the end of an enlistment and accompanied by an official certificate of good conduct during the service. A "dishonorable" discharge is a dismissal from the service for bad conduct or as a punishment imposed by sentence of a court-martial for offenses against the military law. There is also in occasional use a form of "discharge without honor," which implies censure, but is not in itself a punishment. U. S. v. Sweet, 23 S.Ct. 638, 189 U.S. 471, 47 L.Ed. 907.

A discharge from the army is the discharge given one who was actually in military service, as distinguished from a mere discharge from draft. Patterson v. Lamb, App.D.C., 67 S.Ct. 448, 329 U.S. 539, 91 L.Ed. 485.

A discharge from draft is the discharge given selectees who reported for military service in World War I and were rejected at camp after induction for unfitness, dependency and the like. Thus a selectee who reported on November 11, 1918 but was told that draft call was cancelled because of the armistice was properly given a discharge from draft, rather than a discharge from the army and could not claim veterans' rights. Patterson v. Lamb, App.D.C., 67 S.Ct. 448, 329 U.S. 539, 91 L.Ed. 485.

DISCIPLINE. Instruction, comprehending the communication of knowledge and training to observe and act in accordance with rules and orders. In re Swenson, 183 Minn. 602, 237 N.W. 589.

DISCLAIMER. The repudiation or renunciation of a claim or power vested in a person or which he had formerly alleged to be his. The refusal, or rejection of an estate or right offered to a person. The disavowal, denial, or renunciation of an interest, right, or property imputed to a person or alleged to be his. Also the declaration, or the instrument, by which such disclaimer is published. Moores v. Clackamas County, 40 Or. 536, 67 P. 662.

Of Estate

The act by which a party refuses to accept an estate which has been conveyed to him. Thus, a trustee who releases to his fellow-trustees his estate, and relieves himself of the trust, is said to discharge. In re Swenson, 183 Minn. 602, 237 N.W. 589.

A renunciation or a denial by a tenant of his landlord's title, either by refusing to pay rent, denying any obligation to pay, or by setting up a title in himself or a third person, and this is a distinct ground of forfeiture of the lease or other tenancy, whether of land or tithe. See 16 Ch. Div. 730.

In Patent Law

When the title and specifications of a patent do not agree, or when part of that which it covers is not strictly patentable, because neither new nor useful, the patentee is empowered, with leave of the court, to enter a disclaimer of any part of either the title or the specification, and the disclaimer is then deemed to be part of the letters patent or specification, so as to render them valid for the future. Permutit Co. v. Wadham, C.C.A. Mich., 15 F.2d 20, 21.

In Pleading

A renunciation by the defendant of all claim to the subject of the demand made by the plaintiff's bill. Wilson v. McCoy, 93 W.Va. 667, 117 S.E. 473, 475.

DISCLAMATION. In Scotch law. Disavowal of tenure; denial that one holds lands of another. Bell.

DISCLOSE. To bring into view by uncovering, to lay bare, to reveal to knowledge, to free from secrecy or ignorance, or make known. State v. Krokston, 187 Mo.App. 67, 172 S.W. 1156, 1157.

DISCLOSURE. Revelation; the impartation of that which is secret. Commonwealth v. Chesapeake & O. Ry. Co., 137 Va. 526, 120 S.E. 506, 509.

That which is disclosed or revealed. Webster, Dict.

In patent law, the specification; the statement of the subject-matter of the invention, or the manner in which it operates. Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co. v. Metropolitan Electric Mfg. Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 290 F. 661, 664.

What any patentee has invented is theoretically what he discloses, and the 'disclosure' is the specification while a 'claim' is a definition of that which has been disclosed in the specification; the disclosure telling how to do that of which the claimant claims definition. Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co. v. Metropolitan Electric Mfg. Co., C.C. A.N.Y., 290 F. 661, 664.

DISCOMMON. To deprive commonable lands of their commonable quality, by inclosing and appropriating or improving them.

DISCONTINUANCE.

In Pleading

That technical interruption of the proceedings in an action which follows where a defendant does not answer the whole of the plaintiff's declaration, and the plaintiff omits to take judgment for the part unanswered. Steph. Pl. 216, 217.

In Practice

The termination of an action, in consequence of the plaintiff's omitting to continue the process or proceedings by proper entries on the record. 3 Bl.Comm. 296; 1 Tidd, Pr. 678; 2 Arch.Pr.K.B. 233; Hadvin v. Railway Co., 67 S.C. 463, 45 S.E. 1019.

In practice, a discontinuance is a chasm or gap left by neglecting to enter a continuance. By our practice, a neglect to enter a continuance, even in a defaulted action, by no means puts an end to it, and such actions may always be brought forward. Taft v. Northern Transp. Co. 56 N.H. 416; Porter v. Watkins, 196 Ala. 333, 71 So. 687, 688.

The cessation of the proceedings in an action where the plaintiff voluntarily puts an end to it, either by giving notice in writing to the defendant before any step has been taken in the action subsequent to the answer, or at any other time by order of the court or a judge; a non-suit; dismissal. Payne v. Buena Vista Extract Co., 124 Va. 296, 98 S.E. 34, 39.

In practice, discontinuance and dismissal import the same thing, viz., that the cause is sent out of court. Thurman v. James, 48 Mo. 235.

In Public Works

Refers to the termination or abandonment of a project, structure, highway, or the like. Fulton County v. Board of Hudson River Regulating Dist., 248 N.Y.S. 8, 10, 231 App.Div. 408.

In Zoning Ordinances

Synonymous with abandonment. State ex rel. Schaetz v. Mander, 206 Wis. 121, 238 N.W. 835, 837.

DISCONTINUANCE OF AN ESTATE. The termination or suspension of an estate-tail, in consequence of the cesser of a seisin under a new and necessarily wrongful title. Prest. Merg. c. ii.

Discontinuare nihil aliud significat quam intermittere, desuescere, interrupere. Co. Litt. 325.

To discontinue signifies nothing else than to interrupt, to disuse, to interrupt.

DISCONTINUANCE. Occasional; intermittent; characterized by separate repeated acts; as, discontinuous easements and servitudes. See Easement.

DISCONVENABLE. L. Fr. Improper; unfit.

Kelham.

DISCOUNT. In a general sense, an allowance or deduction made from a gross sum on any account whatever. In a more limited and technical sense, the taking of interest in advance. Cooper v. National Bank of Savannah, 21 Ga.App. 356, 94 S. E. 611, 614.

By the language of the commercial world and the settled practice of banks, a discount by a bank means a drawback or deduction made upon its advances or loans of money, upon negotiable paper or other evidences of debt payable at a future day, which are transferred to the bank. See, also, Valley Mortg. Co. v. Patterson, 30 Ala.App. 492, 8 So.2d 213, 214.

Although the discounting of notes or bills, in its most comprehensive sense, may mean lending money and taking notes in payment, yet, in its more ordinary sense, the discounting of notes or bills means advancing a consideration... for a bill or note, deducting or discounting the interest which will accrue for the time the note has to run. In re Worth Lighting & Fixture Co., D.C.N.Y., 292 F. 769, 772.

Discounting by a bank means lending money upon a note, and deducting the interest or premium in advance. Mesorole Securities Co. v. Cosman, 253 N.Y. 130, 170 N.E. 519, 521.

Discount, as we have seen, is the difference between the price and the amount of the debt, the evidence of which is transferred. That difference represents interest charged, being at the same rate, according to which the price paid, if invested until the maturity of the debt, will just produce its amount. Napier v. John V. Farwell Co., 60 Colo. 319, 153 P. 694, 695.

Commission Equivalent

Where agreement provides for underwriting shares at "discount" of certain per cent., word "discount" is equivalent to commission. Stewart v. G. L. Miller & Co., 161 Ga. 919, 132 S.E. 535, 538, 45 A.L.R. 559.

Discounting a note and buying it are not identical in meaning, the latter expression being used to denote the transaction when the seller does not indorse the note, and is not accountable for it. Bank v. Baldwin, 23 Minn. 206, 23 Am. Rep. 683.

In Practice

A set-off or defalcation in an action. Vin. Abr. "Discount." But see Trabue's Ex'r v. Harris, 1 Metc. (Ky.) 597.

DISCOUNT BROKER. A bill broker; one who discounts bills of exchange and promissory notes, and advances money on securities.

DISCOVER. To uncover that which was hidden, concealed, or unknown from every one. Stano-lind Oil & Gas Co. v. State, Tex.Civ.App., 114 S.W.2d 699, 706.

To get first sight or knowledge of; to get knowledge of what has existed but has not theretofore been known to the discoverer. Shellmar Products Co. v. Allen-Qualley Co., C.C.A.III., 87 F.2d 104, 108.

DISCOVERED PERIL, DOCTRINE OF. A name for the doctrine otherwise known as that of the "last clear chance." See that title.

DISCOVER. Not married; not subject to the disabilities of a coverture. It applies equally to a maid and a widow.

DISCOVERY. In a general sense, the ascertainment of that which was previously unknown; the disclosure or coming to light of what was previously hidden; the acquisition of notice or knowledge of given acts or facts; as, in regard to the "discovery" of fraud affecting the running of the statute of limitations, or the granting of a new trial for newly "discovered" evidence. Parker v. Kuhn, 21 Neb. 413, 32 N.W. 74, 59 Am.Rep. 852. Howton v. Roberts, 49 S.W. 340, 20 Ky.Law Rep. 1331.

In International Law

As the foundation for a claim of national ownership or sovereignty, discovery is the finding of a country, continent, or island previously unknown, or previously known only to its uncivilized inhabitants. Martin v. Waddell, 16 Pet. 409, 10 L.Ed. 997.

In Mining Law

In Patent Law

The finding out some substance, mechanical device, improvement, or application, not previously known. Dunbar v. Meyers, 94 U.S. 197, 24 L.Ed. 34. It is something less than invention, and may be the result of industry, application, or be perhaps merely fortuitous. A. O. Smith Corporation v. Petroleum Iron Works Co. of Ohio, C.C.A.Ohio, 73 F.2d 531, 538.

In Practice

The disclosure by the defendant of facts, titles, documents, or other things which are in his exclusive knowledge or possession, and which are necessary to the party seeking the discovery as a part of a cause or action pending or to be brought in another court, or as evidence of his rights or title in such proceeding. Tucker v. U. S., 151 U.S. 164, 14 S.Ct. 299, 38 L.Ed. 112; Kelley v. Boettcher, 85 F. 55, 29 C.C.A. 14.

Also used of the disclosure by a bankrupt of his property for the benefit of creditors.

DISCOVERY, BILL OF. In equity pleading. A bill for the discovery of facts resting in the knowledge of the defendant, or of deeds or writings, or other things in his custody or power; but seeking no relief in consequence of the discovery, though it may pray for a stay of proceedings at law till the discovery is made. Story, Eq. Pl. §§ 311, 312, and notes; Mitf. Eq. Pl. 53.

DISCOVERY VEIN. See Vein.

DISCREDIT. To destroy or impair the credibility of a person; to impeach; to lessen the degree of credit to be accorded to a witness or document, as by impugning the veracity of the one or the genuineness of the other; to disparage or weaken the reliance upon 'the testimony of a witness, or upon documentary evidence, by any means whatever.

DISCREETLY. Prudently; judiciously; with discernment. Parks v. City of Des Moines, 195 Iowa, 972, 191 N.W. 728, 731.

DISCREPANCY. A difference between two things which ought to be identical, as between one writing and another; a variance, (q. v.) Also discord, discordance, dissonance, disidence, unconformity, disagreement, difference. State v. Superior Court of King County, 138 Wash. 488, 244 P. 702, 703.

DISCRETELY. Separately; disjunctively. Parks v. City of Des Moines, 195 Iowa, 972, 191 N.W. 728, 731.
Discretio est discerners per legem quid sit justum. 10 Coke, 140. Discretion is to know through law what is just.

DISCRETION. Power or privilege of the court to act unhampered by legal rule. Osborn v. United States Bank, 9 Wheat. 866, 6 L.Ed. 204; Murray v. Buell, 74 Wis. 14, 41 N.W. 1010, 11 L.R.A. 446.

When applied to public functionaries, discretion means a power or right conferred upon them by law of acting officially in certain circumstances, according to the dictates of their own judgment and conscience, uncontrolled by the judgment or conscience of others. This discretion undoubtedly is to some extent regulated by usage, or, if the term is preferred, by fixed principles. But by this is to be understood nothing more than that the same court cannot, consistently with its own dignity, and with its character and duty of administering impartial justice, decide in different ways two cases in every respect exactly alike. The question of fact whether the two cases are alike in every color, circumstance, and feature is of necessity to be submitted to the judgment of some tribunal. State v. Tindell, 112 Kan. 256, 210 P. 619, 622. Board of Permanent Road Com'rs of Hunt County v. Johnson, Tex.Civ.App., 70 S.W.2d 333, 334.

Judicial Discretion, Legal Discretion

These terms are applied to the discretionary action of a judge or court, and mean discretion as above defined, that is, discretion bounded by the rules and principles of law, and not arbitrary or capricious, or unconstrained. "Judicial discretion" is substantially synonymous with judicial power. Griffin v. State, 12 Ga.App. 615, 77 S.E. 1080, 1083. It is not the indulgence of a judicial whim, but the exercise of judicial judgment, based on facts and guided by law, Smith v. Hill, C.C.A., 5 F.2d 188, or the equitable decision of what is just and proper under the circumstances, People v. Planschmidt, 262 Ill. 411, 104 N.E. 804, 816, Ann.Cas.1915A, 1171. It is simply the technical name of the decision of certain questions of fact by the court. Nawn v. Boston & M. R. R., 77 N.H. 299, 91 A. 181, 182.

Lord Coke defines judicial discretion to be "discernere per legem quid sit justum," to see what would be just according to the law in the premises. It does not mean a wild self-willfulness, which may prompt to any and every act; but this judicial discretion is guided by the law, (see what the law declares upon a certain statement of facts, and then decide in accordance with the law,) so as to do substantial equity and justice. Faber v. Bruner, 13 Mo. 543. It is a legal discretion to be exercised in discerning the course prescribed by law and is not to give effect to the will of the judge, but to that of the law. McGurty v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co., 158 N.Y.S. 285, 286, 172 App. Div. 46.

True, it is a matter of discretion; but then the discretion is not willful or arbitrary, but legal. And, although its exercise be not always a matter of law, yet it "involves a matter of law or legal inference," in the language of the Code, and an appeal will lie. Loviner v. Pearce, 70 N. C. 171.

Legal discretion, is the exercise of discretion where there are two alternative provisions of law applicable, under either of which court could proceed. Shannon v. Hendrixson, Ohio App., 32 N.E.2d 431, 432.

In criminal law and the law of torts, it means the capacity to distinguish between what is right and wrong, lawful or unlawful, wise or foolish, sufficiently to render one amenable and responsible for his acts. Towle v. State, 3 Fla. 214.

DISCRETIONARY POWER. One which is not imperative or, if imperative, the time, manner, or extent of execution of which is left to donee's discretion; the power to do or to refrain from doing a certain thing. City of San Antonio v. Zogheib, Tex.Civ.App., 70 S.W.2d 333, 334.

DISCRETIONARY Trusts. Such as are not marked out on fixed lines, but allow a certain amount of discretion in their exercise. Those which cannot be duly administered without the application of a certain degree of prudence and judgment. Greenwich Trust Co. v. Tyson, 129 Conn. 211, 27 A.2d 166, 172.

DISCRIMINATION. With reference to common carriers (especially railroads), a breach of the carrier's duty to treat all shippers alike, and afford them equal opportunities to market their product. Cox v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 240 Pa. 27, 87 A. 581, 583. A carrier's failure to treat all alike under substantially similar conditions. Kentucky Traction & Terminal Co. v. Murray, 176 Ky. 593, 195 S.W. 1119, 1120.

"Discrimination" is a term well understood in the nomenclature of transportation over railroads. It implies to charge shippers of freight, as compensation for carrying the same over railroads, unequal sums of money for the same quantity of freight for equal distances; more for shorter than a longer distance, more in proportion of distance for a shorter than a longer distance; more for freights called local freights than those designated otherwise; more for the former in proportion to distance such freights may be carried than the latter. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. State, 85 Okl. 223, 206 P. 236, 239.

In constitutional law, the effect of a statute which confers particular privileges on a class arbitrarily selected from a large number of persons, all of whom stand in the same relation to the privileges granted and between whom and those not favored no reasonable distinction can be found. Franchise Motor Freight Ass'n v. Seavey, 196 Cal. 77, 235 P. 1000, 1002.

DISCUSSION.

In the Civil Law

A proceeding, at the instance of a surety, by which the creditor is obliged to exhaust the property of the principal debtor, towards the satisfaction of the debt, before having recourse to the surety; and this right of the surety is termed the "benefit of discussion."

In Scotch Law

The ranking of the proper order in which heirs are liable to satisfy the debts of the deceased. Bell.

DISEASE. Deviation from the healthy or normal condition of any of the functions or tissues of the body; an alteration in the state of the body or of some of its organs, interrupting or disturbing the performance of the vital functions, and causing or threatening pain and weakness; illness; sickness; disorder; malady; bodily infirmity. Order of United Commercial Travelers of America v. Nicholson, C.C.A.N.Y., 9 F.2d 7, 14; Merriam v. Hamilton, 64 Or. 476, 130 P. 406, 407.

In construing a policy of life insurance, it is generally true that, before any temporary ailment can be called a "disease," it must be such as to indicate a vice in the constitution, or be so serious as to have some bearing upon general health and the continuance of life, or such as, according to common understanding, would be called a "disease." Delaney v. Modern Ace. Club, 121 Iowa 528, 97 N.W. 91, 63 L.R.A. 603; Metropolitan Casualty Ins. Co. v. Cato, 113 Miss. 303, 74 So. 118, 119.

An ulcer is a "disease" or "infection," within Workmen's Compensation Law, § 3, subd. 7, declaring that "Injury," or "personal injury," as used in the act, means only accidental injuries arising out of and in the course of employment and such disease or infection as may naturally and unavoidably result therefrom. Finto v. Chelsea Fibre Mills, 186 N.Y.S. 748, 750, 196 App.Div. 221; For "Existing Disease" see that title.

DISEASE COMMON TO BOTH SEXES. Malady, sickness, or illness that both males and females have. National Life & Accident Ins. Co. v. Weaver, Tex.Civ.App., 226 S.W. 754, 757.

DISENTAILING DEED. In English law. An enrolling assured barrang an entail, pursuant to 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 74.

DISFIGUREMENT. That which impairs or injures the beauty, symmetry, or appearance of a person or thing; that which renders unsightly, misshapen, or imperfect, or deforms in some manner. Vukelich v. Industrial Commission of Utah, 62 Utah, 486, 220 P. 1073, 1075; Lee v. Commonwealth, 135 Va. 572, 115 S.E. 671, 673.

DISFRANCHISE. To deprive of the rights and privileges of a free citizen; to deprive of charter, ed rights and immunities; to deprive of any franchise, as of the right of voting in elections, etc. Webster.

In any election where the party system furnishes the means by which the citizen's right of suffrage is made effective, denial of his party's right to participate in the election accomplishes the "disfranchisement of voters" or compels them, if they vote, to vote for representatives or political parties other than that to which they belong, and the deprivation of the right of selection is a deprivation of the right of franchise. Communist Party of United States of America v. Peek, 20 Ca1.2d 536, 127 P.2d 889, 894.

DISFRANCHISEMENT. The act of disfranchising. The act of depriving a member of a corporation of his right as such, by expulsion. 1 Bouv. Inst. no. 192. In re Koch, 257 N.Y. 318, 178 N.E. 545, 546.

It differs from amotion (q. v.) which is applicable to the removal of an officer from office, leaving him his rights as a member. Ang. & A. Corp. 237.

In a more popular sense, the taking away of the elective franchise (that is, the right of voting in public elections) from any citizen or class of citizens.

DISGAVEL. In English law. To deprive lands of that principal quality of gavelkind tenure by which they descend equally among all the sons of the tenant. 2 Wood. Lect. 76; 2 Bl. Comm. 85.

DISGRACE. Ignominy; shame; dishonor. No witness is required to disgrace himself. 13 How. State Tr. 17, 334; Bander v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 313 Mass. 337, 47 N.E.2d 595, 600.

DISGRADING. In old English law. The depriving of an order or dignity.

DISGUISE. v. To change the guise or appearance of, especially to conceal by unusual dress; to hide by a counterfeit appearance; to affect to hide by a counterfeit appearance; to affect or change by liquor; to intoxicate. Darneal v. State, 14 Okl.Cr. 540, 174 P. 290, 292, 1 A.L.R. 638.

Anything worn upon the person with the intention of so altering the wearer's appearance that he shall not be recognized by those familiar with him, or that he shall be taken for another person.

A person lying in ambush, or concealed behind bushes, is not in "disguise," within the meaning of a statute declaring the county liable in damages to the next of kin of any one murdered by persons in disguise. Dale County v. Gunter, 46 Ala. 118, 142.

DISHERITOR. One who disinherits, or puts another out of his freehold. Obsolete.

DISHONESTY. Disposition to lie, cheat or defraud; untrustworthiness; lack of integrity. Alsup v. State, 91 Tex.Cr.R. 224, 238 S.W. 667, 669.

DISHONOR. In mercantile law and usage. To refuse or decline to accept a bill of exchange, or to refuse or neglect to pay a bill or note at maturity. Shelton v. Braithwaite, 7 Mees. & W. 436; Brewster v. Arnold, 1 Wis. 276.
Notice of Dishonor

A notice given by the holder to the drawer of a bill, or to an indorser of a bill or note, that it has been dishonored by nonacceptance on presentation for acceptance, or by nonpayment at its maturity. 2 Daniel, Neg. Inst. § 970.

As respects the flag, to deface or defile, imputing a lively sense of shaming or an equivalent acquiescent callousness. State v. Schlueter, 127 N.J.L. 496, 23 A.2d 249, 251.

DISINCARCERATE. To set at liberty, to free from prison.

DISINHERISON. In the civil law. The act of depriving a forced heir of the inheritance which the law gives him.

Dishonor is a testamentary disposition and not a mere penalty for lack of filial respect, but such a testamentary disposition is not self-operative and something more than its mere appearance in a will is required to give it effect. Successions of Lissa, 198 La. 129, 3 So.2d 534, 542.

DISINHERITANCE. The act by which the owner of an estate deprives a person, who would otherwise be his heir, of the right to inherit it. Copeland v. Johnson, 101 Okl. 228, 224 P. 986, 988.

DISINTER. To exhume, unbury, take out of the grave. People v. Baumgartner, 135 Cal. 72, 66 P. 974.

DISINTERESTED. Not concerned, in respect to possible gain or loss, in the result of the pending proceedings; impartial, not biased or prejudiced. McGilvery v. Staples, 16 A. 404, 81 Me. 101; Kraft v. Tenningkeit, 204 Iowa, 15, 214 N.W. 562, 563.

DISINTERESTED WITNESS. One who has no interest in the cause or matter in issue, and who is lawfully competent to testify. Fitzhugh v. Nirschl, 77 Or. 514, 151 P. 735, 736. In re Palethorp's Estate, 249 Pa. 389, 94 A. 1060, 1065.

DISJUNCTIM. Lat. In the civil law. Separately; severally. The opposite of con junctim, (q. v.) Inst. 2, 20, 8.

DISJUNCTIVE ALLEGATION. A statement in a pleading or indictment which expresses or charges a thing alternatively, with the conjunction "or," for instance, an averment that defendant "murdered or caused to be murdered," etc., would be of this character. Hand v. Hand, 23 N. J.Misc. 118, 41 A.2d 270, 271.

DISJUNCTIVE TERM. One which is placed between two contraries, by the affirming of one of which the other is taken away; it is usually expressed by the word "or."

DISMES. Tenths; tithes, (q. v.). The original form of "dime," the name of the American coin.

DISMISS. To send away; to discharge; to cause to be removed temporarily or permanently; to relieve from duty. To dismiss an action or suit is to send it out of court without any further consideration or hearing. School District No. 1 of Jefferson County v. Parker, 82 Colo. 385, 260 P. 521, 522; People ex rel. Tims v. Bingham, Sup., 166 N.Y.S. 28, 29; Nichols v. Sunderland, 77 Cal. App. 627, 247 P. 614, 618.

DISMISSAL AGREED. A dismissal entered in accordance with the agreement of the parties, amounting to an adjudication of the matters in dispute between them or to a renunciation by the complainant of the claims asserted in his pleadings. Root v. Water Supply Co., 46 Kan. 183, 26 P. 398; Lindsay v. Allen, 112 Tenn. 637, 82 S.W. 171.

Dismissal agreed made in Supreme Court of Appeals upon a writ of error to a judgment of the Circuit Court has no reference to the controversy between the parties, but leaves the judgment standing and purges error, releases error, and bars another writ of error. Fletcher v. Parker, 53 W. Va. 422, 44 S.E. 422.

DISMISSAL WITH PREJUDICE. An adjudication on the merits, and final disposition, barring another writ of error. Fletcher v. Parker, 53 W. Va. 422, 44 S.E. 422.

DISMISSAL WITH PREJUDICE. An adjudication on the merits, and final disposition, barring another writ of error. Fletcher v. Parker, 53 W. Va. 422, 44 S.E. 422.
DISMISSAL

DISMISSAL WITHOUT PREJUDICE. Dismissal, as of a bill in equity, without prejudice to the right of the complainant to sue again on the same cause of action. The effect of the words "without prejudice" is to prevent the decree of dismissal from operating as a bar to a subsequent suit. Northrup v. Jay, 262 Mich. 463, 247 N.W. 717, 718.

DISMISSED. A judgment of "Dismissed," with- cause of action. The effect of the words "with- cause of action. The effect of the words "with- cause of action. The effect of the words "with-

DISMISSED FOR WANT OF EQUITY. A phrase used to indicate a decision on the merits, as distinguished from one based upon some formal defect. The dismissal may be because the aver- ments of complainant's bill have been found un- true in fact, or because they are insufficient to entitle complainant to the relief sought. Reine- man v. Little Rock, 35 S.Ct. 511, 513, 237 U.S. 171, 59 L.Ed. 900.

Of Goods
A statement about a competitor's goods which is untrue or misleading and is made to influence or tends to influence the public not to buy. Ed- win L. Wiegand Co. v. Harold E. Trent Co., C.C.A. Pa., 122 F.2d 920, 924.

DISPARAGIUM. In old Scotch law. Inequality in blood, honor, dignity, or otherwise. Skene de Verb. Sign.

Disparata non debent jungi. Things unlike ought not to be joined. Jenk. Cent. 24, Marg.
DISPOSABLE PORTION. That portion of a man's property which he is free to dispose of by will to beneficiaries other than his wife and children. By the ancient common law, this amounted to one-third of his estate if he was survived by both wife and children. 2 Bl. Comm. 492; Hopkins v. Wright, 17 Tex. 36. In the civil law (by the Lex Falcidia) it amounted to three-fourths. Mackeld. Rom. Law, §§708, 771.

DISPOSAL. Sale, pledge, giving away, use, consumption or any other disposition of a thing. C. B. Norton Jewelry Co. v. Maddock, 115 Kan. 108, 222 P. 113, 114. To exercise control over; to direct or assign for a use; to pass over into the control of some one else; to alienate, bestow, or part with. Popp v. Munger, 131 Okl. 282, 268 P. 1100, 1102.

DISPOSE OF. To alienate or direct the ownership of property, as disposition by will. Used also of the determination of suits. Carnagio v. State, 106 Fla. 209, 143 So. 162. Called a word of large extent.

To exercise finally, in any manner, one's power of control over; to pass into the control of someone else; to alienate, relinquish, part with, or get rid of; to put out of the way; to finish with; to bargain away. Carpenter v. Lothringer, 224 Iowa 439, 275 N.W. 98, 103; Roe v. Burt, 66 Okl. 193, 168 P. 405, 406.

DISPOSING

DISPOSING CAPACITY OR MIND. These are alternative or synonymous phrases in the law of wills for “sound mind,” and “testamentary capacity” (q. v.). Lockhart v. Ferguson, 243 Mass. 226, 137 N.E. 355, 356.

DISPOSITION. In Scotch law. A deed of alienation by which a right to property is conveyed. Bell.

An attitude; a willingness. In re Schaefer’s Estate, 207 Wis. 404, 241 N.W. 382, 386.

DISPOSITIVE FACTS. Jural facts, or those acts or events that create, modify or extinguish jural relations. Kocourek, Jural Relations (2d Ed.) p. 17.

DISPOSSESS. To oust from land by legal process; to eject, to exclude from realty. Matthews v. Deason, Tex.Civ.App., 200 S.W. 855, 856.

DISPOSSESS PROCEEDINGS. Summary process by a landlord to oust the tenant and regain possession of the premises for nonpayment of rent or other breach of the conditions of the lease. Of local origin and colloquial use in New York.

DISPOSSESSION. Ouster; a wrong that carries with it the amotion of possession. An act whereby the wrongdoer gets the actual occupation of the land or hereditament. It includes abatement, intrusion, disseisin, discontinuance, deforcement. 3 Bl. Comm. 167.

DISPROVE. To refute; to prove to be false or erroneous; not necessarily by mere denial, but by affirmative evidence to the contrary. Irsc v. Irsc, 12 N.Y.Civ.Proc.R. 182.

DISPUNISHABLE. In old English law. Not answerable. Co. Litt. 27b, 53. 1 Steph. Comm. 245. Not punishable. ”This murder is dispensishable.” 1 Leon. 270.

DISPUTATIO FORI. In the civil law. Discussion or argument before a court. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 38; Dig. 1, 2, 2, 5.

DISPUTABLE PRESUMPTION. A species of evidence that may be accepted and acted upon when there is no other evidence to uphold contention for which it stands; and when evidence is introduced supporting such contention, evidence takes place of presumption, and there is no necessity for indulging in any presumption. Noble v. Key System, 10 Cal.App.2d 132, 51 P.2d 887, 889.

A rule of law to be laid down by the court, which shifts to the party against whom it operates the burden of evidence merely. City of Montpelier v. Town of Calais, 114 Vt. 5, 39 A.2d 350, 356. See Presumptions.

DISPUTE. A conflict or controversy; a conflict of claims or rights; an assertion of a right, claim, or demand on one side, met by contrary claims or allegations on the other. Keith v. Levi, C.C.Mo., 2 F. 745; Ft. Pitt Gas Co. v. Borough of Sewickley, 198 Pa. 201, 47 A. 957.

Matter in Dispute

The subject of litigation; the matter for which a suit is brought and upon which issue is joined, and in relation to which jurors are called and witnesses examined. Lee v. Watson, I Wall. 339, 17 L.Ed. 557; Smith v. Adams, 130 U. S. 167, 9 S.Ct. 566, 32 L.Ed. 985.

DISQUALIFY. To divest or deprive of qualifications; to incapacitate; to render ineligible or unfit; as, in speaking of the “disqualification” of a judge by reason of his interest in the case, or of a juror by reason of his holding a fixed preconceived opinion, or of a candidate for public office by reason of non-residence, lack of statutory age, previous commission of crime, etc. Carroll v. Green, 148 Ind. 362, 47 N.E. 223; Coats v. Benton, 80 Okla. 93, 194 P. 198, 200, 19 A.L.R. 1038.

DISRATE. In maritime law. To deprive a seaman or petty officer of his “rating” or rank; to reduce to a lower rate or rank.

DISRATIONALRE, or DIRECTIONARE. To justify; to clear one’s self of a fault; to traverse an indictment; to disprove. Enc. Lond.

DISREGARD. To treat as unworthy of regard or notice; to take no notice of; to leave out of consideration; to ignore; to overlook; to fail to observe. Cunningham v. Fredericks, 106 Conn. 665, 138 A. 790, 793.

DISREPAIR. The state of being in need of repair or restoration after decay or injury. Wyoming Coal Mining Co. v. Stanko, 22 Wyo. 110, 138 P. 182, 183.

DISSASINA. In old Scotch law. Disseisin; dispossession. Skene.

DISSECTION. The act of cutting into pieces an animal or vegetable for the purpose of ascertaining the structure and use of its parts. The anatomical examination of a dead body by cutting into pieces or excising one or more parts or organs. Wehle v. Accident Ass’n, 31 N.Y.S. 865, 11 Misc. 36; Rhodes v. Brandt, 21 Hun (N.Y.) 3. Anatomy; the act of separating into constituent parts for the purpose of critical examination.

DISSEISE. To dispossess; to deprive.

DISSEISEE. One who is wrongfully put out of possession of his lands; one who is disseised.

DISSEISIN. Dispossession; a deprivation of possession; a privation of seisin; a usurpation. of the right of seisin and possession, and an exercise of such powers and privileges of ownership as to keep out or displace him to whom these right-

It is a wrongful putting out of him that is seised of the freehold, not, as in abatement or intrusion, a wrongful entry, where the possession was vacant, but an attack upon him who is in actual possession, and turning him out. It is an ouster from a freehold in deed, as abatement and intrusion are ousters in law. 3 Steph. Comm. 386.

When one man invades the possession of another, and by force or surprise turns him out of the occupation of his land, this is termed a "disseisin," being a deprivation of that actual seisin or corporal possession of the freehold which the tenant before enjoyed. In other words, a disseisin is said to be when one enters intending to usurp the possession, and to oust another from the freehold. To constitute an entry a disseisin, there must be an ouster of the freeholder, either by taking the profits, or by claiming the inheritance. Brown.

According to the modern authorities, there seems to be no legal difference between the words "seisin" and "possession," although there is a difference between the words "disseisin" and "dispossession." The former meaning an estate gained by wrong and injury, whereas the latter may be by right or by wrong; the former denoting an ouster of the disseisee, or some act equivalent to it, whereas the latter no such act is implied. Slater v. Rawson, 6 Metc. (Mass.) 439.

Equitable disseisin is where a person is wrongfully deprived of the equitable seisin of land, e.g., of the rents and profits. 2 Meriv. 171; 2 Jac. & W. 166.

Disseisin by election is where a person alleges or admits himself to be disseised when he has not really been so.

Disseisinam satis facit, qui uti non permittit posse ssorem, vel minus commode, licet omnino non expellat. Co. Litt. 331. He makes disseisin enough who does not permit the possessor to enjoy, or makes his enjoyment less beneficial, although he does not expel him altogether.

DISSISITRIX. A female disseisor; a disseisoress. Fleta, lib. 4, c. 12, § 4.

DISSISITUS. One who has been disseised.

DISSISORESS. A woman who unlawfully puts another out of his land.

DISSISSENSUS. Lat. In the civil law. The mutual agreement of the parties to a simple contract obligation that it shall be dissolved or annulled; technically, an undoing of the consensus which created the obligation. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 541.

DISSENT. Contrariety of opinion; refusal to agree with something already stated or adjudged to an act previously performed.

The term is most commonly used in American law to denote the explicit disagreement of one or more judges of a court with the decision passed by the majority upon a case before them. In such event, the non-concurring judge is reported as "dissenting." Mere failure of a justice to vote is not a dissent. Charles W. Sommer & Bro. v. Albert Lorsch & Co., 254 N.Y. 146, 172 N.E. 271, 272. A dissent may or may not be accompanied by an opinion.

Dissenting Opinion

The opinion in which a judge announces his dissent from the conclusions held by the majority of the court, and expounds his own views.

In Ecclesiastical Law

A refusal to conform to the rites and ceremonies of the established church. 2 Burn, Eccl. Law 165.

DISSENTER. One who refuses to conform to the rites and ceremonies of the established church; a non-conformist. 2 Burn, Eccl. Law 165.

DISSENTERS. Protestant seceders from the established church of England. They are of many denominations, principally Presbyterians, Independents, Methodists, and Baptists; but, as to church government, the Baptists are Independents.

DISSENTIENTE. (Lat. dissenting.) Used with the name or names of one or more judges, it indicates a dissenting opinion in a case. Nenim dissentiente. No one dissenting; unanimous.

DISSIGNARE. In old law. To break open a seal. Whishaw.

Dissimilium dissimilis est ratio. Co. Litt. 191. Of dissimilars the rule is dissimilar.

Dissimulatione tollitur injuria. An injury is extinguished by the forgiveness or reconcilement of the party injured. Ersk. Inst. 4, 4, 108.

DISSOLUTE. Loosed from restraint, unashamed, lawless, loose in morals and conduct, recklessly abandoned to sensual pleasures, wanton, lewd, debauched, thus, evidence that defendants danced in nude at a smoker authorized their conviction as dissolute persons. People v. Scott, 113 Cal.App. 778, 296 P. 601, 603.

DISOLUTION. In Contracts

The dissolution of a contract is the cancellation or abrogation of it by the parties themselves, with the effect of annulling the binding force of the agreement, and restoring each party to his original rights. In this sense it is frequently used in the phrase "dissolution of a partnership." Willsmon v. Camp, 9 Mont. 88, 22 P. 501.

In Practice

The act of rendering a legal proceeding null, abrogating or revoking it; unloosing its constraining force; as when an injunction is dissolved by the court. Jones v. Hill, 6 N.C. 131.
DISSOLUTION

Of Corporations

The dissolution of a corporation is the termination of its existence as a body politic. This may take place in several ways; as by act of the legislature, where that is constitutional; by surrender or forfeiture of its charter; by expiration of its charter by lapse of time; by proceedings for winding it up under the law; by loss of all its members or their reduction below the statutory limit. New York Title & Mortgage Co. v. Friedman, 276 N.Y.S. 72, 153 Misc. 697; Bruun v. Katz Drug Co., 351 Mo. 731, 173 S.W.2d 906, 909.

De Facto Dissolution

That which takes place when corporation, by reason of insolvency or for other reason, suspends all operations and goes into liquidation. Hidden v. Edwards, 313 Mo. 642, 285 S.W. 462, 468.

Of Marriage

The act of terminating a marriage; divorce; but the term does not include annulment. Dehli v. Jones, 170 Tenn. 217, 94 S.W.2d 47, 48.

DISSOLUTION OF PARLIAMENT. The crown may dissolve parliament either in person or by proclamation; the dissolution is usually by proclamation, after a prorogation. No parliament may last for a longer period than seven years. Septennial Act, 1 Geo. I. c. 38. Under 6 Anne, c. 37, upon a demise of the crown, parliament became ipso facto dissolved six months afterwards, but under the Reform Act, 1867, its continuance is now nowise affected by such demise. May, Parl. Pr. (6th Ed.) 48. Brown.

DISSOLVE. To terminate; abrogate; cancel; annul; disintegrate. To release or unloose the binding force of anything. As to "dissolve a corporation," to "dissolve an injunction." See Dissolution.

DISSOLVING BOND. A bond given to obtain the dissolution of a legal writ or process, particularly dissolution of error, referring to the return required to be made to them. Reg. Orig. 17.

DISSUAD. In criminal law. To advise and procure a person not to do an act.

To dissuade a witness from giving evidence against a person indicted is an indigent offense at common law. Hawk. P. C. b. 1, c. 21, § 15. People v. Hamm, 250 N.Y.S. 603, 605, 140 Misc. 335.

DISTANCE. A straight line along a horizontal plane from point to point and is measured from the nearest point of one place to the nearest point of another. Evans v. U. S., C.C.A.N.Y., 261 F. 902, 904.

It may however be a broken line and represented by country roads or railroad track. State v. Mostad, 34 N.D. 330, 158 I.W. 349, 350.

DISTILL. To subject to a process of distillation, i.e., vaporizing the more volatile parts of a substance and then condensing the vapor so formed. In law, the term is chiefly used in connection with the manufacture of intoxicating liquors. Williams v. State, 161 Ark. 383, 256 S.W. 354.

DISTILLED LIQUOR OR DISTILLED SPIRITS. A term which includes all potable alcoholic liquors obtained by the process of distillation (such as whisky, brandy, rum, and gin) but excludes fermented and malt liquors, such as wine and beer. Sarlis v. U. S., 14 S.Ct. 720, 152 U.S. 570, 38 L.Ed. 556; Commonwealth v. Nickerson, 236 Mass. 281, 128 N.E. 273, 283, 10 A.L.R. 1568; Maresca v. U. S., C.C.A.N.Y., 277 F. 727, 740.

DISTILLER. One who produces distilled spirits, or who brews or makes mash, wort, or wash, fit for distillation or for the production of spirits, or who, by any process of evaporation, separates alcoholic spirit from any fermented substance, or who, making or keeping mash, wort, or wash, has also in his possession or use a still. U. S. v. Ridenour, D.C.Va., 119 F. 411; Motlow v. U. S., C.C.A.Mo., 35 F.2d 90, 91.

DISTILLERY. The strict meaning of "distillery" is a place or building where alcoholic liquors are distilled or manufactured; not every building where the process of distillation is used. U. S. v. Blaisdell, 24 Fed.Cas. 1162; Atlantic Dock Co. v. Leavitt, 54 N.Y. 35, 13 Am.Rep. 556.

DISTILLING APPARATUS. Under National Prohibition Act, tit. 2, § 25 (27 USCA § 39) "distilling apparatus" is not limited to a completed still fully equipped and ready for operation, but may cover a 15-gallon pot and coil of copper tubing or worm, which, when connected by gooseneck, would produce a completed still. Rossman v. U. S., C.C.A.Ohio, 280 F. 950, 952.

DISTINCT. Clear to the senses or mind; easily perceived or understood; plain; unmistakable. Hill v. Norton, 74 W.Va. 428, 82 S.E. 363, 367, Ann. Cas. 1917D, 489.

Evidently not identical; observably or decidedly different. Bayne v. Kansas City, Mo.App., 263 S. W. 450, 451.

DISTINGUISHED by nature or station; not the same; different in the place or the like; separate; individual; that which is capable of being distinguished; actually divided or apart from other things. Gavin v. Webb, Tex.Civ.App., 99 S.W.2d 372, 379.

DISTINCTETE ET APERTE. In old English practice. Distinctly and openly. Formal words in writs of error, referring to the return required to be made to them. Reg. Orig. 17.

DISTINCTIVELY. Characteristically, or peculiarly, but not necessarily exclusively. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Green, 153 Tenn. 522, 284 S. W. 898, 899, 48 A.L.R. 313.

Distingueunata sunt tempora. The time is to be considered. 1 Cdeke, 16a; Bloss v. Tobey, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 327; Owens v. Missionary Society, 14 N.Y. 380, 393, 67 Am.Dec. 160.
Distinguenda sunt tempora; alii est facere, aliiu perfecter. Times must be distinguished; it is one thing to do, another to perfect. 3 Leon. 243; Branch. Princ.

Distinguenda sunt tempora; distinguere tempora et concordabis leges. Times are to be distinguished; distinguish times, and you will harmonize laws. 1 Coke, 24. A maxim applied to the construction of statutes.

DISTINGUISH. To point out an essential difference; to prove a case cited as applicable, inapplicable.

DISTINGUISHING MARK. Any deliberate marking of ballot by voter that is not made in attempt to indicate his choice of candidates and which is also effective as mark by which his ballot may be distinguished. Hanson v. Emanuel, 210 Minn. 271, 297 N.W. 749, 752, 753, 754.

DISTORT. To twist out of natural or regular shape, to twist aside physically, to force or put out of true posture, to twist, wrest, or deform. Grip Nut Co. v. MacLean-Fogg Lock Nut Co., D.C.I11., 34 F.2d 41, 42.

DISTRACTED PERSON. A term used in the statutes of Illinois and New Hampshire to express a state of insanity. Snyder v. Snyder, 142 Ill. 60, 31 N.E. 303.

DISTRACTIO. Lat. In the civil law. A separation or division into parts; also an alienation or sale. Sometimes applied to the act of a guardian in appropriating the property of his ward.

DISTRACTIO BONORUM. The sale at retail of the property of an insolvent estate, under the management of a curator appointed in the interest of the creditors, and for the purpose of realizing as much as possible for the satisfaction of their claim. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 524.

DISTRACTIO PIGNORIS. The sale of a thing pledged or hypothecated, by the creditor or pledgee, to obtain satisfaction of his claim on the debtor’s failure to pay or redeem. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 348.

DISTRACTION RULE. If plaintiff’s attention is diverted from known danger by a sufficient cause, under this rule the question of contributory negligence is for jury. Deane v. Johnston, Fla., 104 So.2d 3, 9.

DISTRAHERE. To sell; to draw apart; to dissolve a contract; to divorce. Calvin.

DISTRAIN. To take as a pledge property of another, and keep it until he performs his obligation or until the property is replevied by the sheriff. It was used to secure an appearance in court, payment of rent, performance of services, etc. 3 Bl. Comm. 231; Also, any detention of personal property, whether lawful or unlawful, for any purpose. Wolfe v. Montgomery, 41 S.D. 267, 170 N.W. 158. Distress is now generally used.

DISTRAIGHT. Seizure; the act of distraining or making a distress. Regional Agr. Credit Corp. v. Griggs County, 73 N.D. 1, 10 N.W.2d 861, 866.

DISTRESS. The taking a personal chattel out of the possession of a wrong-doer into the custody of the party injured, to procure a satisfaction for a wrong committed; as for non-payment of rent, or injury done by cattle. 3 Bl.Comm. 6, 7; Co. Litt. 47. The taking of beasts or other personal property by way of pledge, to enforce the performance of something due from the party distrained upon. 3 Bl.Comm. 231. Hall v. Marshall, 145 Or. 221, 27 P.2d 193. The taking of a defendant’s goods, in order to compel an appearance in court. 3 Bl.Comm. 280; 3 Steph.Comm. 361, 363.

The seizure of personal property to enforce payment of taxes, to be followed by its public sale if the taxes are not voluntarily paid. Marshall v. Wadsworth, 64 N.H. 386, 10 A. 685; also the thing taken by distraining, that which is seized to procure satisfaction. And in old Scotch law, a pledge taken by the sheriff from those attending fairs or markets, to secure their good behavior, and returnable to them at the close of the fair or market if they had been guilty of no wrong.

Distress infinite. One that has no bounds with regard to its quantity, and may be repeated from time to time, until the stubbornness of the party is conquered. Such are distresses for fealty or suit of court, and for compelling jurors to attend. 3 Bl.Comm. 231.

A power of attorney by which landlord delegates exercise of his right to his duly authorized agent. In re Koizim, D.C.N.J., 52 F.Supp. 357, 358.

Distress warrant. A writ authorizing an officer to make a distraint; particularly, a writ authorizing the levy of a distress on the chattels of a tenant for non-payment of rent. Commercial Credit Co. of Baltimore v. Vine’s, 98 N.J.Law, 376, 120 A. 417, 418.

Grand distress, writ of. A writ formerly issued in the real action of quare impedit, when no appearance had been entered after the attachment; it commanded the sheriff to distraint the defendant’s lands and chattels in order to compel appearance. It is no longer used, 23 & 24 Viet. c. 126, § 26, having abolished the action of quare impedit, and substituted for it the procedure in an ordinary action. Wharton.

Second distress. A supplementary distress for rent in arrear, allowed by law in some cases, where the goods seized under the first distress are not of sufficient value to satisfy the claim.

DISTRESS AND DANGER. The “distress” and “danger” to which a ship needs to be exposed to entitle its rescuer to salvage need not be actual or immediate, or the danger imminent and absolute. It is sufficient if at the time the assistance is rendered, the ship has encountered any damage. or misfortune which might possibly expose her to destruction if the services were not rendered, or if a vessel is in a situation of actual apprehension though not of actual danger. The Urko Mendi, D.C., 216 F. 427, 429.

DISTRIBUTE. To deal or divide out in proportion or in shares. Buchanan v. Buchanan, 177 N.Y.S. 176, 177, 108 Misc. 31; Foreman v. United States, C.C.A., 255 F. 621, 623.

DISTRIBUTEE. An heir; a person entitled to share in the distribution of an estate. This term is admissible to denote one of the persons who are entitled, under the statute of distributions, to the personal estate of one who is dead intestate. Allen v. Foth, 210 Ky. 343, 275 S.W. 804, 805.

DISTRIBUTION. In probate practice. The apportionment and division, under authority of a court, of the remainder of the estate of an intestate, after payment of the debts and charges, among those who are legally entitled to share in the same. Rogers v. Gillett, 56 Iowa, 266, 9 N.W. 204.

Statute of Distributions
A law prescribing the manner of the distribution of the estate of an intestate among his heirs or relatives. Such statutes exist in all the states.

In general. The giving out or division among a number, sharing or parceling out, allotting, dispensing, apportioning. People v. Dime Sa'y. Bank, 350 Ill. 503, 183 N.E. 604, 608.

DISTRIBUTIVE. That which exercises or accomplishes distribution; apportions, divides, and assigns in separate items or shares.

DISTRIBUTIVE FINDING OF THE ISSUE. The jury are bound to give their verdict for that party who, upon the evidence, appears to them to have succeeded in establishing his side of the issue. But there are cases in which an issue may be found distributively, i.e., in part for plaintiff, and in part for defendant. Thus, in an action for goods sold and work done, if the defendant pleaded that he never was indebted, on which issue was joined, a verdict might be found for the plaintiff as to the goods, and for the defendant as to the work. Steph. Pl. (7th Ed.) 77d.

DISTRIBUTIVE JUSTICE. See Justice.

DISTRIBUTIVE SHARE. The share or portion which a given heir receives on the legal distribution of an intestate estate; Van Buren v. Plainfield Trust Co., 130 N.J.Eq. 244, 22 A.2d 189, 191, or from a dissolved partnership. Helvering v. Enright's Estate, 61 S.Ct. 777, 781, 312 U.S. 636, 85 L.Ed. 1093. Sometimes, by an extension of meaning, the share or portion assigned to a given person on the distribution of any estate or fund, as, under an assignment for creditors or under insolvency proceedings.

DISTRICT. One of the portions into which an entire state or country, county, municipality or other political subdivision or geographical territory is divided, for judicial, political, or administrative purposes. Briggs v. Stevens, 119 Or. 138, 248 P. 169; State ex rel. Schur v. Payne, 57 Nev. 286, 63 P.2d 921, 925.

The United States are divided into judicial districts, in each of which is established a district court. They are also divided into election districts, collection districts, etc.

The circuit or territory within which a person may be compelled to appear. Cowell. Circuit of authority; province. Enc. Lond.

District attorney. The prosecuting officer of the United States government in each of the federal judicial districts. Also, under the state governments, the prosecuting officer who represents the state in each of its judicial districts. In some states, where the territory is divided, for judicial purposes, into sections called by some other name than "districts," the same officer is denominated "county attorney" or "state's attorney." Hill County v. Sheppard, 142 Tex. 358, 178 S.W.2d 261, 263; State v. Henry, 196 La. 217, 198 So. 910, 914.

District clerk. The clerk of a district court of either a state or the United States.

District courts. Courts of the United States, each having territorial jurisdiction over a district, which may include % whole state or only part of it. Each of these courts is presided over by one judge, who must reside within the district. These courts have original jurisdiction over all admiralty and maritime causes and all proceedings in bankruptcy, and over all penal and criminal matters cognizable under the laws of the United States, exclusive jurisdiction over which is not vested either in the supreme or circuit courts. Also inferior courts in Colorado, Idaho, Iowa, Kansas, Louisiana, Minnesota, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Jersey, New Mexico, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Texas, Utah, and Wyoming, are also called "district courts." Their jurisdiction is for the most part similar to that of county courts (q. v.).

District judge. The judge of a United States district court; also, in some states, the judge of a district court of the state.

District parishes. Ecclesiastical divisions of parishes in England, for all purposes of worship, and for the celebration of marriages, christenings, and burials, formed at the instance of the queen's commissioners for building new churches. See 3 Steph. Comm. 744.

District registry. By the English judicature act, 1873, § 60, it is provided that to facilitate proceedings in county districts the crown may, from time to time, by order in council, create district registries, and appoint district registrars for the purpose of issuing writs of summons, and for other purposes. Documents sealed in any such district registry shall be received in evidence without further proof, (section 61;) and the district registrars may administer oaths or do other things as provided by rules or a special order of the court, (section 62.) Power, however, is given to a judge to remove proceedings from a district registry to the office of the high court. Section 65. By order in council of 12th of August, 1875, a number of district registries have been established in the places mentioned in that order; and the prothonotaries in Liverpool, Manchester, and Preston, the district registrar of the court of admiralty at Liverpool, and the county court registrars in the other places named, have been appointed district registrars. Wharton.

As to “Fire,” “Judicial,” “Land,” “Levee,” “Mineral,” “Mining,” “Road,” “School,” and “Taxing,” districts, see those titles.

DISTRICT MESSNGER SERVICE. The service is not that of a common carrier, but the furnishing of messengers to be used by the employer in any way in which they could be properly employed, in the course of which the messenger becomes for the time the servant of the employer and the company is not liable for his dishonesty in the ordinary course of his employment unless there was failure to use proper care in his selection; Haskell v. Messenger Co., 190 Mass. 189, 76 N.E. 215, 2 L.R.A., N.S., 1091, 112 Am.St.Rep. 324, 5 Ann.Cas. 796.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA. A territory situated on the Potomac river, and being the seat of government of the United States. It was originally ten miles square, and was composed of portions of Maryland and Virginia ceded by those states to the United States; but in 1846 the tract coming from Virginia was retroceded. Legally it is neither a state nor a territory, but is made subject, by the constitution, to the exclusive jurisdiction of congress.

DISTRICTIO. Lat. A distress; a distraint. Cowell.

DISTRINGAS. In English practice. A writ directed to the sheriff of the county in which a defendant resides, or has any goods or chattels, commanding him to distrain upon the goods and chattels of the defendant for forty shillings, in order to compel his appearance. 3 Steph.Comm. 567. This writ issues in cases where it is found impracticable to get at the defendant personally, so as to serve a summons upon him. Id.

A distringas is also used in equity, as the first process to compel the appearance of a corporation aggregate. St. 11 Geo. IV. and 1 Wm. IV. c. 36.

A form of execution in the actions of detinue and assise of nuisance. Brooke, Abr. pl. 26; Barnet v. Ihrie, 1 Rawle (Pa.) 44.

DISTRINGAS JURATORES. A writ commanding the sheriff to have the bodies of the jurors, or to distrain them by their lands and goods, that they may appear upon the day appointed. 3 Bl.Comm. 354. It issues at the same time with the venire, though in theory afterwards, founded on the supposed neglect of the juror to attend. 3 Steph. Comm. 350.

DISTRINGAS NUPER VICE COMITEM. A writ to distrain the goods of one who lately filled the office of sheriff, to compel him to do some act which he ought to have done before leaving the office; as to bring in the body of a defendant, or to sell goods attached under a ft. fa.

DISTRINGAS VICE COMITEM. A writ of distringas, directed to the coroner, may be issued against a sheriff if he neglects to execute a writ of venditione exponas. Arch. Pr. 584.

DISTRINGERE. In feudal and old English law. To distress; to coerce or compel. Spelman; Calvin.

DISTURB. To throw into disorder; to move from a state of rest or regular order; to interrupt a settled state of, to throw out of course or order. Stinchcomb v. Oklahoma City, 81 Old. 250, 198 P. 508, 510.

DISTURBANCE. Any act causing annoyance, disquiet, agitation, or derangement to another, or interrupting his peace, or interfering with him in the pursuit of a lawful and appropriate occupation or contrary to the usages of a sort of meeting and class of persons assembled that interferes with its due progress or irritates the assembly in whole or in part. State v. Mancini, 91 Vt. 507, 101 A. 581, 583.

A wrong done to an incorporeal hereditament by hindering or disquieting the owner in the enjoyment of it. Finch, 187; 3 Bl. Comm.

DISTURBANCE OF COMMON. The doing any act by which the right of another to his common is incommode or diminished; as where one who has no right of common puts his cattle into the land, or where one who has a right of common puts in cattle which are not commonable, or surcharges the common; or where the owner of the land, or other person, incloses or otherwise obstructs it. 3 Bl. Comm. 237-241; 3 Steph. Comm. 511, 512.

DISTURBANCE OF FRANCHISE. The disturbing or incommoding a man in the lawful exercise of his franchise, whereby the profits arising from it are diminished. 3 Bl. Comm. 236; 3 Steph. Comm. 510; 2 Crabb, Real Prop. § 2472a.

DISTURBANCE OF PATRONAGE. The hindrance or obstruction of a patron from presenting his clerk to a benefice. 3 Bl. Comm. 242; 3 Steph. Comm. 514.

DISTURBANCE OF PUBLIC OR RELIGIOUS WORSHIP. Any acts or conduct which interfere with the peace and good order of an assembly of persons lawfully met together for religious exercises. Minter v. State, 104 Ga. 743, 30 S.E. 989, 991; Stafford v. State, 154 Ala. 71, 45 So. 673, 674.

DISTURBANCE OF TENURE. In the law of tenure, disturbance is where a stranger, by menaces, force, persuasion, or otherwise, causes a tenant to leave his tenancy; this disturbance of tenure is an injury to the lord for which an action will lie. 3 Steph. Comm. 414.

DISTURBANCE OF WAYS. This happens where a person who has a right of way over another's ground by grant or prescription is obstructed by inclosures or other obstacles, or by plowing across it: by which means he cannot enjoy his right of way, or at least in so commodious a manner as he might have done. 3 Bl. Comm. 241.

DISTURBER. If a bishop refuse or neglect to examine or admit a patron's clerk, without reason assigned or notice given, he is styled a "disturber" by the law, and shall not have any title to present by lapse; for no man shall take advantage of his own wrong. 2 Bl. Comm. 278.

DITCH. The words "ditch" and "drain" have no technical or exact meaning. They both may mean a hollow space in the ground, natural or artificial, where water is collected or passes off; also, entire irrigation project. Dickey v. Bullock, 28 Wyo. 265, 202 P. 1104, 1105.

DITCHING, DIKING, or TILING. Every kind of work necessary to convert parts of arid lands, particularly sagebrush lands, into farms and orchards,—the word "diking" as applied to arid regions implying a leveling of the land, and the term "clearing land" as applied to arid regions covered with sagebrush meaning not only the removal or the destruction of the brush but the plowing or breaking up of the roots as well. Craig v. Crystal Realty Co., 89 Or. 25, 173 P. 3227 324.

DITES OUSTER. L. Fr. Say over. The form of awarding a respondeas ouster, in the Year Books, M. 6 Edw. III. 49.

DITTAI. In Scotch law. A technical term in civil law, signifying the matter of charge or ground of indictment against a person accused of crime. Taking up dittay is obtaining informations and presentments of crime in order to trial. Skene, de Verb. Sign.; Bell.

DIVERS. Various, several, sundry; a collective term grouping a number of unspecified persons, objects, or acts. Harris v. Zanone, 93 Cal. 59, 28 P. 845; Hilton Bridge Const. Co. v. Foster, 57 N.Y. S. 140, 141, 26 Misc. 338.

DIVERSITY. In criminal pleading. A plea by the prisoner in bar of execution, alleging that he is not the same who was attainted, upon which a jury is immediately impaneled to try the collateral issue thus raised, viz., the identity of the person, and not whether he is guilty or innocent, for that has been already decided. 4 Bl. Comm. 396.

DIVERSITY OF CITIZENSHIP. A phrase used with reference to the jurisdiction of the federal courts, which, under U.S. Const. art. 3, § 2, extends to cases between citizens of different states, designating the condition existing when the party on one side of a lawsuit is a citizen of one state, and the party on the other side is a citizen of another state. When this is the basis of jurisdiction, all the persons on one side of the controversy must be citizens of different states from all the persons on the other side. Albert Pick & Co. v. Cass-putnam Hotel Co., D.C.Mich., 41 F.2d 74; Soptich v. St. Joseph Nat. Croatia Beneficiary Ass'n, D. C.Kan., 34 F.2d 566.

DIVERSO INTUITU. Lat. With a different view, purpose, or design; in a different view or point of view; by a different course or process. 1 W. Bl. 89; 4 Kent Comm. 211, note.

DIVERSORIUM. In old English law. A lodging or inn. Townsh. Pl. 38.

DIVERT. To turn aside; to turn out of the way; to alter the course of things. Usually applied to water-courses. Ang. Water-Courses, § 97 et seq. Sometimes to roads. 8 East, 394.

DIVES. In the practice of the English chancery division, "dives costs" are costs on the ordinary scale, as opposed to the costs formerly allowed to a successful pauper suing or defending in forma pauperis, which consisted only of his costs out of pocket. Daniell, Ch. Pr. 43.

DIVEST. Equivalent to devest, (q. v.).

DIVESTITIVE FACT. Any act or event that extinguishes or modifies a jural relation. Kokourek, Jural Relations (2d ed.) 17.

DIVIDE. To cut into parts, disunite, separate, keep apart. The term is synonymous with distribute. Watters v. First Nat. Bank, 233 Ala. 2275 171 So. 280, 288.
Divide et impers, cum radix et vertex imperil in obedientium consensu rata sunt. 4 Inst. 35. Divide and govern, since the foundation and crown of empire are established in the consent of the obedient.

So-called dividend paid by life insurer is not in fact a "dividend" but is the excess payment of premiums over actual cost. Scholem v. Prudential Ins. Co. of America, 15 N.Y.S.2d 947, 948, 172 Misc. 664.

Cumulative Dividend
A dividend, usually preferred, which if not earned or paid, pursuant to agreement must be paid at some subsequent date. Lockwood v. General Abrasive Co., 205 N.Y.S. 511, 513, 210 App.Div. 141.

Dividend Addition

Ex Dividend
A phrase used by stock brokers, meaning that a sale of corporate stock does not carry with it the seller's right to receive his proportionate share of a dividend already declared and shortly payable.

Extraordinary Dividends
See Extraordinary Dividends.

Liquidation Dividend
See Liquidation Dividend.

Preferred Dividend
One paid on the preferred stock of a corporation; a dividend paid to one class of shareholders in priority to that paid to another. Jefferson Banking Co. v. Trustees of Martin Institute, 146 Ga. 383, 91 S.E. 463, 468.

Scrip Dividend
One paid in scrip, or in certificates of the ownership of a corresponding amount of capital stock of the company thereafter to be issued. Bailey v. Railroad Co., 22 Wall. 604, 22 L.Ed. 840.

Stock Dividend
One paid in stock, that is, not in money, but in a proportional number of shares of the capital stock of the company, which is ordinarily increased for this purpose to a corresponding extent. Thomas v. Gregg, 78 Md. 545, 28 A. 565, 44 Am.St.Rep. 310. A stock dividend is not in the ordinary sense a dividend, which is a cash distribution to stockholders of profits on their investments, but rather it is an increase in the number of shares declared out of profits, the increased number representing exactly the same property as was represented by the smaller number of shares. Booth v. Gross, Kelley & Co., 30 N.M. 465, 238 P. 829, 831, 41 A.L.R. 868. It is really nothing more than a process in corporation bookkeeping. Hayes v. St. Louis Union Trust Co., Mo.Sup., 298 S.W. 91, 98.

In Old English Law
The term denotes one part of an indenture, (q. v.).

DIVIDENDA. In old records. An indenture; one counterpart of an indenture.

DIVINARE. Lat. To divine; to conjecture or guess; to foretell. Divinatio, a conjecturing or guessing.

Divinatio, non interpretatio est, quw omnino recedit a litera. That is guessing, not interpretation, which altogether departs from the letter. Bac. Max. 18, (in reg. 3,) citing Yearb. 3 Hen. VI. 20.

DIVINE RIGHT OF KINGS. The right of a king to rule as posited by the patriarchal theory of government, especially under the doctrine that no misconduct and no dispossession can forfeit the right of a monarch or his heirs to the throne, and to the obedience of the people. Webster, Dict. This theory "was in its origin directed, not against popular liberty, but against papal and ecclesiastical claims to supremacy in temporal as well as spiritual affairs." Figgis, "The Theory of the Divine Right of Kings."

DIVINE SERVICE. Divine service was the name of a feudal tenure, by which the tenants were obliged to do some special divine services in certain; as to sing so many masses, to distribute such a sum in alms, and the like. (2 Bl. Comm. 102; 1 Steph. Comm. 227.) It differed from tenure in frankalmoin, in this: that, in case of the tenure by divine service, the lord of whom the lands were held might distrain for its nonperformance, whereas, in case of frankalmoin, the lord has no remedy by distraint for neglect of the service, but merely a right of complaint to the visitor to correct it. Mozley & Whitley.

DIVISA. In old English law. A device, award, or decree; also a devise; also bounds or limits of times also denotes a division into two classes, one DIVISUM IMPERIUM. Lat. A divided jurisdiction. Applied, e. g., to the jurisdiction of courts of common law and equity over the same subject. 1 Kent, Comm. 366; 4 Steph. Comm. 9.

DIVORCE. The legal separation of man and wife, affected, for cause, by the judgment, of a court, and either totally dissolving the marriage relation, or suspending its effects so far as concerns the cohabitation of the parties. Atherton v. Atherton, 181 U.S. 155, 21 S.Ct. 544, 45 L.Ed. 794. Sometimes it includes "annulment." Miller v. Millar, 175 Cal. 797, 167 P. 394, 398, L.R.A. 1918B, 415, Ann.Cas.1918E, 184.

The dissolution is termed "divorce from the bond of matrimony," or, in the Latin form of the expression, "a vinculo matrimonii," the suspension, "divorce from bed and board," "a mensa et thoro." The former divorce puts an end to the marriage; the latter leaves it in full force. 2 Bish.Mar. & Div. § 225.

The term "divorce" is now applied, in England, both to decrees of nullity and decrees of dissolution of marriage, while in America it is ordinarily used only in cases of divorce a mensa or a vinculo, a decree of nullity of marriage being granted for the causes for which a divorce a vinculo was formerly obtainable in England.

Divorce a vinculo matrimonii. A divorce from the bond of marriage. A total divorce of husband and wife, dissolving the marriage tie, and releasing the parties wholly from their matrimonial obligations. 1 Bl. Comm. 440; 2 Steph. Comm. 310, 311; 2 Bish. Mar. & Div. § 225; De Roche v. De Roche, 12 N.D. 17, 94 N.W. 770.

Divorce suit. A "divorce suit" is a civil proceeding founded on a matrimonial wrong, where-in the married parties are plaintiff and defendant, and the government, or public, occupies, without being mentioned in the pleadings, the position of a third party, resulting in a triangle and otherwise sui generis action of tort. Gallemore v. Gallemore, 94 Fla. 516, 114 So. 371, 372.

Foreign divorce. A divorce obtained out of the state or country where the marriage was solemnized. 2 Kent, Comm. 106, et seq.

Limited divorce. A divorce from bed and board; or a judicial separation of husband and wife not dissolving the marriage tie. Yost v. Yost, 143 Neb. 80, 8 N.W.2d 686.

DIVORTIUM DICITUR A DIVERTENDO, QUA Vir divertitur ab uxoroe. Co. Litt. 235. Divorce is called from divertendo, because a man is diverted from his wife.
DIVULGE. To disclose or make known, as to divulge a telephone message. United States v. Gruber, C.C.A.N.Y., 123 F.2d 307, 309.

DIXikME. Fr. Tenth; the tenth part. Ord.Mar. liv. 1, tit. 1, art. 9.

In Old French Law

An income tax payable to the crown. Steph. Lect. 359.

DO. Lat. I give. The ancient and aptest word of feoffment and of gift. 2 Bl. Comm. 310, 316; Co. Litt. 9.

DO, DICO, ADDICO. Lat. I give, I say, I adjudge. Three words used in the Roman law, to express the extent of the civil jurisdiction of the praetor. Do denoted that he gave or granted actions, exceptions, and judicis; dico, that he pronounced judgment; addico, that he adjudged the controverted property, or the goods of the debtor, etc., to the plaintiff. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 39.

DO, LEGO. Lat. I give, I bequeath; or I give and bequeath. The formal words of making a bequest or legacy, in the Roman law. Titio et Seio hominem Stichum do, lego, I give and bequeath to Titius and Seius my man Stichus. Inst. 2, 20, 8, 30, 31. The expression is literally retained in modern wills.

DO UT DES. Lat. I give that you may do; give [you] that you may give [me.] A formula in the civil law, constituting a general division under which those contracts (termed "innominate") were classed in which something was given by one party as a consideration for something given by the other. Dig. 19, 4; Id. 19, 5, 5; 2 Bl. Comm. 444.

DO UT FACIAS. Lat. I give that you may do; I give [you] that you may do or make [for me.] A formula in the civil law, under which those contracts were classed in which one party gave or agreed to give money, in consideration the other party did or performed certain work. Dig. 19, 5, 5; 2 Bl. Comm. 444.

In this and the foregoing phrase, the conjunction "ut" is not to be taken as the technical means of expressing a consideration. In the Roman usage, this word imported a modus, that is, a qualification; while a consideration (causa) was more aptly expressed by the word "qua." Doctima

DOCTOR. PULMONUM. In medical jurisprudence. The hydrostatic test used chiefly in cases of alleged infanticide to determine whether the child was born alive or dead. See Hydrostatic Test.

DOCK, v. To curtail or diminish, as to dock an entail.

DOCK, n. The cage or inclosed space in a criminal court where prisoners stand when brought in for trial.

The space, in a river or harbor, inclosed between two wharves. City of Boston v. Lecraw, 17 How. 434, 15 L.Ed. 118.

A slip or waterway extending between two piers or projecting wharfs for the reception of ships, sometimes including the piers themselves. Wescott v. American Creosoting Co., 97 A. 493, 494, 86 N.J Eq. 104.

"A dock is an artificial basin in connection with a harbor, used for the reception of vessels in the taking on or discharging of their cargoes, and provided with gates for preventing the rise and fall of the waters occasioned by the tides, and keeping a uniform level within the docks." Perry v. Haines, 24 S.Ct. 8, 191 U.S. 17, 48 L.Ed. 73.

DOCK-MASTER. An officer invested with powers within the docks, and a certain distance therefrom, to direct the mooring and removing of ships, so as to prevent obstruction to the dock entrances. Mozley & Whiteley.

DOCK Warrant. In English law. A warrant given by dock-owners to the owner of merchandise imported and warehoused on the dock, upon the faith of the bills of lading, as a recognition of his title to the goods. It is a negotiable instrument. Pull. Port of London, p. 375.

In Practice

A formal record, entered in brief, of the proceedings in a court of justice. Brinn v. Wooding, 298 N.Y.S. 971, 975, 164 Misc. 850.

A book containing an entry in brief of all the important acts done in court in the conduct of each case, from its inception to its conclusion.

The name of "docket" or "trial docket" is sometimes given to the list or calendar of causes set to be tried at a specified term, prepared by the clerks for the use of the court and bar.

Kinds of Dockets

An appearance docket is one in which the appearances in actions are entered, containing also a brief abstract of the successive steps in each action. A bar docket is an unofficial paper consisting of a transcript of the docket for a term of court, printed for distribution to members of the bar. Gifford v. Cole, 57 Iowa, 272, 10 N.W. 672. An execution docket is a list of the executions sued out or pending in the sheriff's office. A judgment docket is a list or docket of the judgments entered in a given court, methodically kept by the clerk or other proper officer, open to public inspection, and intended to afford official notice to interested parties of the existence or lien of judgments.
DOCKET

In General

Docket fee. An attorney’s fee, of a fixed sum, chargeable with or as a part of the costs of the action, for the attorney of the successful party; so called because chargeable on the docket, not as a fee for making docket entries. Bank v. Neill, 13 Mont. 377, 34 Pac. 180; Goodyear v. Sawyer, C.C., 17 Fed. 2.

Docket, striking a. A phrase formerly used in English bankruptcy practice. It referred to the entry of certain papers at the bankruptcy office, preliminary to the prosecution of the fiat against a trader who had become bankrupt. These papers consisted of the affidavit, the bond, and the petition of the creditor, and their object was to obtain from the lord chancellor his fiat, authorizing the petitioner to prosecute his complaint against the bankrupt in the bankruptcy courts. Brown.

DOCTOR, v. To prescribe or treat medically or to treat as a doctor or physician. Haines v. Indiana Trust Co., 95 Ind.App. 651, 131 N.E. 89, 91.

DOCTOR, n. A learned man; one qualified to give instruction of the higher order in a science or art; particularly, one who has received the highest academical degree in his art or faculty, as, a doctor of laws, medicine, or theology. In colloquial language, however, the term is practically restricted to practitioners of medicine. Harrison v. State, 102 Ala. 170, 15 So. 563; State v. McKnight, 131 N.C. 717, 42 S.E. 580, 59 L.R.A. 187. But it is not synonymous with surgeon. State v. Miller, 59 N.D. 286, 229 N.W. 569, 574.

DOCTOR AND STUDENT. The title of a work written by St. Germain in the reign of Henry VIII, in which many principles of the common law are discussed in a popular manner. It is in the form of a dialogue between a doctor of divinity and a student in law, and has always been considered a book of merit and authority. 1 Kent, Comm. 504; Crabb, Eng. Law, 482.

DOCTORS’ COMMONS. An institution near St. Paul’s Churchyard, in London, where, for a long time previous to 1857, the ecclesiastical and admiralty courts used to be held.

DOCTRINAL INTERPRETATION. See Interpretation.

DOCTRINE. A rule, principle, theory, or tenet of the law; as, the doctrine of merger, the doctrine of relation, etc.

DOCUMENT. An instrument on which is recorded, by means of letters, figures, or marks, matter which may be evidentially used. In this sense the term “document” applies to writings; to words printed, lithographed, or photographed; to seals, plates, or stones on which inscriptions are cut or engraved; to photographs and pictures: to mans or plans. The inscription may be of stone or gems, or on wood, as well as on paper or parchment. 1 Whart. Ev. § 614; Johnson Steel Street-Rail Co. v. North Branch Steel Co., C.C.Pa., 48 F. 194; Arnold v. Water Co., 18 R.I. 189, 26 A. 55, 19 L.R.A. 602. It has various statutory meanings. Hays v. Hinkle, Tex.Civ.App., 193 S.W. 153, 155; Cohn v. U. S., C.C.A.N.Y., 258 F. 355, 361; Smith v. Lingelbach, 177 Wis. 170, 187 N.W. 1007, 1008.

In the plural, the deeds, agreements, title-papers, letters, receipts, and other written instruments used to prove a fact.

In the Civil Law

Evidence delivered in the forms established by law, of whatever nature such evidence may be. The term is, however, applied principally to the testimony of witnesses. SaV. Dr. Rom. § 165.

In General

Ancient documents. Deeds, wills, and other writings more than thirty years old are so called; they are presumed to be genuine without express proof, when coming from the proper custody.

Foreign document. One which was prepared or executed in, or which comes from, a foreign state or country.

Judicial documents. Proceedings relating to litigation. They are divided into (1) judgments, decrees, and verdicts; (2) depositions, examinations, and inquisitions taken in the course of a legal process; (3) writs, warrants, pleadings, etc., which are incident to any judicial proceedings. See 1 Starkie, Ev. 252.

DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE. Evidence supplied by writings and documents of every kind, in the widest sense of the term; evidence derived from conventional symbols (such as letters) by which ideas are represented on material substances. Such evidence as is furnished by written instruments, inscriptions, documents of all kinds, and also any inanimate objects admissible for the purpose, as distinguished from "oral" evidence, or that delivered by human beings viva voce. People v. Purcell, 22 Cal.App.2d 126, 70 P.2d 706, 709.
DODRANS. Lat. In Roman law. A subdivision of the as, containing nine unciae; the proportion of nine-twelfths, or three-fourths. 2 Bl.Comm. 462, note.

DOE, JOHN. The name of the fictitious plaintiff in the action of ejectment. 3 Steph. Comm. 618.

DOED-BANA. In Saxon law. The actual perpetrator of a homicide.

DOER. In Scotch law. An agent or attorney. 1 Latin words put together on the English grammatical system.

DOGMA. In the civil law. A word occasionally used as descriptive of an ordinance of the senate. See Nov. 2, 1, 1; Dig. 27, 1, 6.

DOGS. Steel rods with clamps or tongs thereon, for carrying heavy steel rails. Jefferson v. Denkmann Lumber Co., 148 So. 237, 239, 167 Miss. 246.

DOING. The formal word by which services were reserved and expressed in old conveyances; as "rendering" (reddendo) was expressive of rent. Perk. c. 10, §§ 625, 635, 638. As used in La.Civ. Code, art. 1931, the word signifies activity. Noel Estate v. Louisiana Oil Refining Corporation, 188 La. 45, 175 So. 744, 746.

DOING BUSINESS. Within statutes on service of process on foreign corporations, equivalent to conducting or managing business. Wichita Film & Supply Co. v. Yale, 194 Mo.App. 60, 184 S.W. 119. A foreign corporation is "doing business," making it amenable to process within state, if it does business therein in such a manner as to warrant the inference that it is present there. Cannon Mfg. Co. v. Cudahy Packing Co., D.C.N.C., 292 F. 169, 171. Or that it has subjected itself to the jurisdiction and laws in which the service is made. W. J. Armstrong Co. v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co., 129 Minn. 104, 151 N.W. 917, 919, L.R.A.1916E, 232, Ann.Cas.1916E, 335; The doing of business is the exercise in the state of some of the ordinary functions for which the corporation was organized. Davis & Worrell v. General Motors Acceptance Corporation, 153 Ark. 626, 241 S.W. 44, 46. What constitutes "doing business" depends on the facts in each particular case.

No general definition can be made of phrase "doing business" in statutes relating to foreign corporations. Each case must be determined on its own facts, by considering objective of statute in which phrase is found, its purpose and orientation to the carrying on of business, nature of activities, their magnitude, multiplicity of contracts, and possibility that incidents may occur and liabilities be created, especially where entrance into state is in ordinary operation of corporation's business. State Highway and Public Works Commission v. Diamond S. S. Transp. Corp., 225 N. C. 198, 34 S.E.2d 78, 80, 81.

Ordinarily the phrase means engaging in activities in pursuit of gain. Welch Holding Co. v. Galloway, 161 Or. 515, 89 P.2d 559; People v. Jones, 16 N.Y.S.2d 558, 559, 172 Misc. 368.

DOITKIN, or DOIT. A base coin of small value, prohibited by St. 3 Hen. V. c. 1. We still retain the phrase, in the common saying, when we would undervalue a man, that he is not worth a doit. Jacob.
DOLES, or DOOLS. Slips of pasture left between the furrows of plowed land.

DOL1ANCE. A peculiar appeal in the Channel Islands. It is a personal charge against a judicial officer, either of misconduct or of negligence.

DOLLY. A kind of handbarrow or handcart, consisting essentially of a strong, braced frame terminating in a pair of handles at one end and supported on a pair of small heavy wheels with broad rim. A small heavy rectangular frame supported on four small wheels used instead of rollers for moving heavy objects as on a floor. McGillivary v. Montgomery Ward & Co., 19 Wash. 2d 582, 143 P.2d 550, 552. See, Box Dolly.

DOLLO, In Scotch law, crim-inal intent; having sufficient discretion and intelligence to distinguish between right and wrong, and so to become amenable to the criminal laws.

DOLUS. In the civil law. Guile; deceitfulness; malicious fraud. A fraudulent address or trick used to deceive some one; a fraud. Dig. 4, 3, 1. Any subtle contrivance by words or acts with a design to circumvent. 2 Kent, Comm. 560; Code, 2, 21.

Dolorimetry is the science of measuring pain. The fraud of a predecessor prejudices not his successor.

DOLUS BONUS, DOLUS MALUS. In a wide sense, the Roman law distinguishes between "good," or rather "permissible" dolus and "bad" or fraudulent dolus. The former is justifiable or allowable deceit; it is that which a man may employ in self-defense against an unlawful attack, or for another permissible purpose, as when one dissembles the truth to prevent a lunatic from injuring himself or others. The latter exists where one intentionally misleads another or takes advantage of another's error wrongfully, by any form of deception, fraud, or cheating. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 179; Broom, Max. 349; 2 Kent, Comm. 560, note.

Dolus Capax. Capable of malice or criminal intention; having sufficient discretion and intelligence to distinguish between right and wrong, and so to become amenable to the criminal laws.

DOLUS INCAPAX. Incapable of criminal intention or malice; not of the age of discretion; not possessed of sufficient discretion and intelligence to distinguish between right and wrong to the extent of being criminally responsible for his actions.

DOLUS AUCTORIS NON NOCET SUCCESSORI. The fraud of a predecessor prejudices not his successor.

DOLUS MALUS VERSATUR IN GENERALIBUS. A person intending to deceive deals in general terms. Wing. Max. 636; 2 Coke, 34a; 6 Clark & F. 699; Broom, Max. 289.

DOLUS MALUS VERSATUR IN GENERALIBUS. A person intending to deceive deals in general terms. Wing. Max. 636; 2 Coke, 34a; 6 Clark & F. 699; Broom, Max. 289.

DOLUS MALUS VERSATUR IN GENERALIBUS. A person intending to deceive deals in general terms. Wing. Max. 636; 2 Coke, 34a; 6 Clark & F. 699; Broom, Max. 289.

DOLUS MALUS VERSATUR IN GENERALIBUS. A person intending to deceive deals in general terms. Wing. Max. 636; 2 Coke, 34a; 6 Clark & F. 699; Broom, Max. 289.
DOLUS LATET IN GENERALIBUS. Fraud lurks in generalities. Tray. Lat. Max. 162.

DOLUS VERSATUR IN GENERALIBUS. Fraud deals in generalities. 2 Coke, 34a; 3 Coke, 81a.

DOM. PROC. An abbreviation of Domus Procerum or Domo Procerum; the house of lords in England. Sometimes expressed by the letters D. P.

DOMAIN. The complete and absolute ownership of land; a paramount and individual right of property in land. People v. Shearer, 30 Cal. 658. Also the real estate so owned. The inherent sovereign power claimed by the legislature of a state, of controlling private property for public uses, is termed the "right of eminent domain." 2 Kent, Comm. 339. See Eminent Domain.

A distinction has been made between "property" and "domain." The former is said to be that quality which is conceived to be in the thing itself, considered as belonging to such or such person, exclusively of all others. By the latter is understood that right which the owner has of disposing of the thing and places it at the disposition of the owner. 3 Toullier, no. 83.

National domain is sometimes applied to the aggregate of the property owned directly by a nation. Civ. Code La. art. 486. Public domain embraces all lands, the title to which is in the United States, including as well land occupied for the purposes of federal buildings, arsenals, dock-yards, etc., as land of an agricultural or mineral character not yet granted to private owners. Day Land & Cattle Co. v. State, 68 Tex. 526, 4 S.W. 865.

DOMEBEC, DOMBOC. (Sax. From dom, judgment, and bec, boc, a book.) Dome-book or doom-book. A name given among the Saxons to a code of laws. Several of the Saxon kings published dombocs, but the most important one was that attributed to Alfred. Crabb, Com. Law, 7. This is sometimes confounded with the celebrated Domesday-Book. See Dome-Book; Domesday.

DOME-BOOK. A book or code said to have been compiled under the direction of Alfred, for the general use of the whole kingdom of England; containing, as is supposed, the principal maxims of the common law, the penalties for misdemeanors, and the forms of judicial proceedings. It is said to have been extant so late as the reign of Edward IV., but is now lost. 1 Bl.Comm. 64, 65.

DOMESDAY, DOMESDAY-BOOK. (Sax.) An ancient record made in the time of William the Conqueror, and now remaining in the English exchequer, consisting of two volumes of unequal size, containing minute and accurate surveys of the lands in England. 2 Bl.Comm. 49, 50. The work was begun by five justices in each county in 1081, and finished in 1086.

DOMESMEN. (Sax.) An inferior kind of judges. Men appointed to doom (judge) in matters in controversy. Cowell. Suitors in a court of a manor in antient demesne, who are judges there. Blount; Whishaw; Terms de la Ley.

DOMESTIC, n. A domestic, or, in full, domestic servant, is a servant who resides in the same house with the master. The term does not extend to workmen or laborers employed out of doors. Ex parte Meason, 5 Bin. (Pa.) 167; Richardson v. State, 43 Tex. 456; Anderson v. Ueland, 197 Minn. 518, 267 N.W. 517, 518.

The Louisiana Civil Code enumerates as domestics those who receive wages and stay in the house of the person paying and employing them, for his own service or that of his family; such as valets, footmen, cooks, butlers, and others who reside in the house. Persons employed in public houses are not included. Cook v. Dodge, 6 La.Ann. 276.

The term is sometimes extended, however, to include servants who do not reside in the same house as the master. Catto v. Plant, 106 Conn. 236, 137 A. 764, 766 (gardener); Douglas v. State, 88 Tex.Cr.R. 295, 225 S.W. 536, 538 (house porter).

DOMESTIC, adj. Pertaining, belonging, or relating to a home, a domicile, or to the place of birth, origin, creation, or transaction. Catto v. Plant, 106 Conn. 236, 137 A. 764, 765; In re Savin's Estate, 131 N.J.Eq. 563, 26 A.2d 270, 273.

DOMESTIC ANIMALS. Such as are habituated to live in or about the habitations of men, or such as contribute to the support of a family or the wealth of the community. This term includes horses, (State v. Gould, 26 W.Va. 264; Osborn v. Lenox, 2 Allen [Mass.] 207,) male goat, (Young v. Blaum, La.App., 146 So. 168, 169) ; cattle (Yazoo & Mississippi R. Co. v. Gordon, 184 Miss. 885, 186 So. 631, 632; parrot (K. G. O. Construction Co. v. King, N.J.Dist.Ct., 12 N.J.Misc. 291, 171 A. 164, 165.

DOMESTIC COURTS. Those existing and having jurisdiction at the place of the party's residence or domicile. Dickinson v. Railroad Co., 7 W.Va. 417.

DOMESTIC PURPOSES. As regards rights of riparian owner, extends to culinary purposes and to purposes of cleansing, washing, feeding, and supplying an ordinary quantity of cattle. Cowell v. Armstrong, 290 P. 1036, 1038, 210 Cal.App. 218. It includes consumption and sustenance of human being and does not necessarily exclude occupants of hotels, apartments, boarding houses, etc. Prather v. Hoberg, 24 Cal.2d 549, 150 P.2d 405, 412.

DOMESTIC SERVANT. See Domestic.

DOMESTICUS. In old European law. A seneschal; steward, or major domo; a judge's assistant; an assessor, (q. v.). Spelman.
DOMICELLA

DOMICELLA. In old English law. A damsel. Fleta, lib. 1, c. 20, § 80.

DOMICELLUS. In old English law. A better sort of servant in monasteries; also an appellation of a king's bastard.

DOMICILE. That place where a man has his true, fixed, and permanent home and principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent he has the intention of returning. Kurilla v. Roth, 132 N.J.L. 213, 38 A.2d 862, 864; In re Stabile, 348 Pa. 587, 36 A.2d 451, 458; Shreveport Long Leaf Lumber Co. v. Wilson, D.C.La., 38 F.Supp. 629, 631, 632. Not for a mere special or temporary purpose, but with the present intention of making a permanent home, for an unlimited or indefinite period. In re Garneau, 127 F. 677, 62 C.C.A. 403; In re Gilbert's Estate, 15 A.2d 111, 117, 118, 18 N.J. Misc. 520; In re Schultz' Estate, 316 Ill.App. 540, 45 N.E.2d 577, 582. Davis v. Davis, Ohio App., 57 N.E.2d 703, 504.

In international law, a residence at a particular place, accompanied with positive or presumptive proof of an intention to continue there for an unlimited time. State v. Collector of Bordentown, 32 N.J.Law, 192; Graham v. Graham, 81 N.W. 44, 9 N.D. 88; Phillimore, Int. Law 49.

The word “domicile” is derived from Latin “domus,” meaning home or dwelling house, and domicile is legal conception of “home.” In re Schultz' Estate, 316 Ill.App. 45 N.E.2d 703, 582, 316 Ill.App. 540.

The established, fixed, permanent, or ordinary dwelling-place or place of residence of a person, as distinguished from his temporary and transient, though actual, place of residence. It is his legal residence, as distinguished from his temporary place of abode; or his home, as distinguished from a place to which business or pleasure may temporarily call him. Towson v. Towson, 126 Va. 640, 102 S.E. 48, 52.

"Domicile" and “residence,” however, are frequently distinguished, in that domicile is the home, the fixed place of habitation; while residence is a transient place of dwelling. Fisher v. Jordan, C.C.A.Tex., 116 F.2d 183, 186; Minick v. Minick, 111 Fla. 469, 149 So. 483, 488; Hartzler v. Rateka, 265 Mich. 451, 251 N.W. 554.

Domicile may be deemed to be of three sorts,—domicile by birth, domicile by choice, and domicile by operation of law. The first is the common case of the place of birth, domicilium originis; the second is that which is voluntarily acquired by a party, proprio motu; the last is consequent, as that of the wife arising from marriage. Story, Confl., Laws, § 46. And see Railroad Co. v. Kirnbrough, 115 Ky. 512, 74 S.W. 229; Johnson v. Harvey, 261 Ky. 522, 88 S.W.2d 42, 46, 47.

Abandonment of domicile, see Abandonment.

Commercial Domicile

A domicile acquired by the maintenance of a commercial establishment; a domicile which a citizen of a foreign country may acquire by conducting business in another country. 1 Kent, 82. See Placey, Dom., 341; The Dos Hermanos, 2 Wheat. 76, 4 L.Ed. 189.

De Facto Domicile

In French law, permanent and fixed residence in France of an alien who has not acquired French citizenship nor taken steps to do so, but who intends to make his home permanently or indefinitely in that country; called domicile “de facto” because domicile in the full sense of that term, as used in France, can only be acquired by an act equivalent to naturalization. In re Cruger’s Will, 36 Misc. 477, 73 N.Y.S. 812.

Domestic Domicile

A name sometimes used for “municipal domicile” (q. v.). Hayward v. Hayward, 65 Ind.App. 440, 115 N.E. 966, 970.

Domicile of Choice

Domicile of Corporation

Place considered by law as center of corporate affairs and place where its functions are discharged. Fisher & Van Gelder v. First Trust Joint-Stock Land Bank, 210 Iowa 531, 231 N.W. 671, 672, 69 A.L.R. 1340.

Domicile of Origin

The home of the parents. Phillim. Dom. 25, 101. That which arises from a man’s birth and connections. 5 Ves. 750. The domicile of the parents at the time of birth, or what is termed the “domicile of origin,” constitutes the domicile of an infant, and continues until abandoned, or until the acquisition of a new domicile in a different place. Struble v. Struble, Tex.Civ.App., 177 S.W.2d 279, 283.

Domicile of Succession

As distinguished from a commercial, political, or forensic domicile, the actual residence of a person within some jurisdiction, of such a character as shall, according to the well-established principles of public law, give direction to the succession of his personal estate. Smith v. Croom, 7 Fla. 81.

Elected Domicile

The domicile of parties fixed in a contract between them for the purposes of such contract. Woodworth v. Bank of America, 19 Johns., N.Y., 417, 10 Am.Dec. 239.

Foreign Domicile

A domicile established by a citizen or subject of one sovereignty within the territory of another.

Matrimonial Domicile

The place where a husband and wife have established a home, in which they reside in the re-

Municipal Domicile
One which as distinguished from "national domicile" and "quasi national domicile" (see those titles, infra), has reference to residence in a county, township, or municipality. Hayward v. Hayward, 65 Ind.App. 440, 115 N.E. 966, 970.

National Domicile
The domicile of a person, considered as being within the territory of a particular nation, and not with reference to a particular locality or subdivision of a nation.

Natural Domicile
The same as domicile of origin or domicile by birth. Johnson v. Twenty-One Bales, 13 Fed.Cas. 863.

Necessary Domicile
That kind of domicile which exists by operation of law, as distinguished from voluntary domicile or domicile of choice. Phillim. Dom. 27-97.

Quasi National Domicile

DOMICILED. Established in a given domicile; belonging to a given state or jurisdiction by right of domicile.

DOMICILIARY. Pertaining to domicile; relating to one's domicile. Existing or created at, or connected with, the domicile of a suitor or of a decedent.

DOMICILIARY ADMINISTRATION. Administration in state where person was domiciled at time of death is deemed principal or primary administration and is ordinarily termed "domiciliary administration." First Nat. Bank v. Blessing, 231 Mo.App. 134, 298 N.W. 598, 600, 601, 134 A.L.R. 958.

DOMINATE. To master, to rule, or to control. Humble Oil & Refining Co. v. National Labor Relations Board, C.C.A.5, 113 F.2d 85, 88, 90.

DOMINATIO. In old English law. Lordship.

DOMINICAN NUNS. An order of nuns founded by St. Dominic under a modified form of St. Augustine's rule, chiefly employed in teaching girls. Sacred Heart Academy of Galveston v. Karsch, 173 Tenn. 618, 122 S.W.2d 416, 417.

DOMINICIDE. The act of killing one's lord or master.

DOMINICUM. Lat. Domain; demain; demesne. A lordship. That of which one has the lordship or ownership. That which remains under the lord's immediate charge and control. Spelman; Blount.

DOMINIO. Sp. In Spanish law. A term corresponding to and derived from the Latin dominium (q. v.). Dominio alto, eminent domain; dominio directo, immediate ownership; dominio utile, beneficial ownership. Hart v. Burnett, 15 Cal. 556.

DOMINION. Ownership, or right to property or perfect or complete property or ownership. Whe lan v. Henderson, Tex.Civ.App., 137 S.W 2d 150, 153. Title to an article of property which arises from the power of disposition and the right of claiming it. Baker v. Westcott, 73 Tex. 129, 11 S.W. 157, 8 East, 579. See, also, State v. Johnson, 34 S.D. 601, 149 N.W. 730, 734.

DOMINION. Ownership, or right to property or perfect or complete property or ownership. Wheeler v. Henderson, Tex.Civ.App., 137 S.W. 2d 150, 153. Title to an article of property which arises from the power of disposition and the right of claiming it. Baker v. Westcott, 73 Tex. 129, 11 S.W. 157, 8 East, 579. See, also, State v. Johnson, 34 S.D. 601, 149 N.W. 730, 734.

Sovereignty or lordship; as the dominion of the seas. Moll. de Jure Mar. 91, 92.
DOMINION

In the civil law, with reference to the title to property which is transferred by a sale of it, dominion is said to be either "proximate" or "remote," the former being the kind of title vesting in the purchaser when he has acquired both the ownership and the possession of the article, the latter describing the nature of his title when he has legitimately acquired the ownership of the property but there has been no delivery. Coles v. Perry, 7 Tex. 109.

ter-house; the chapter-house. Dyer, 26b.
DOMUS CONVERSORUM. An ancient house built or appointed by King Henry III. for such Jews as were converted to the Christian faith; but King Edward III., who expelled the Jews from the kingdom, deputed the place for the custody of the rolls and records of the chancery. Jacob.

DOMUS DEL. The house of God; a name applied to many hospitals and religious houses.

DOMUS MANSIONALIS. A mansion house. 1 Hale, P.C. 558; State v. Brooks, 4 Conn. 446; State v. Sutcliffe, 4 Strob. (S.C.) 376.

DOMUS PROCERUM. The house of lords, abbreviated into Dom. Proc., or D. P.

DOMUS SUA CUIQUE EST TUTISSIMUM REFUGIUM. To every man his own house is his safest refuge. 5 Coke, 91b; 11 Coke, 82; 3 Inst. 162. The house of every one is to him as his castle and fortress, as well for his defense against injury and violence as for his repose. 5 Coke, 91b; Say. 227; Broom, Max. 432. A man's dwelling-house is his castle, not for his own personal protection merely, but also for the protection of his family and his property therein. 19 How.St. Tr. 1030.

DOMUS TUTISSIMUM CUIQUE REFUGIUM ATQUE RECEPTACULUM SIT. A man's house should be his safest refuge and shelter. The habitation of each one is an inviolable asylum for him. A maxim of the Roman law. Dig. 2, 4, 18.

DONA CLANDESTINA SUNT SEMPER SUSPICIOSA. 3 Coke, 81. Clandestine gifts are always suspicious. Noy, Max., 9th Ed. 152; 4 B. & C. 652; 1 M. & S. 253; Broom, Max. 289, 290.

DONARI VIDETUR, QUOD NULLO JURE COGENTE CONCEDITUR. Dig. 50, 17, 82. A thing is said to be given when it is yielded otherwise than by virtue of right (that is considered to be given which is granted when no law compels).

DONATARIUS. A donee; one to whom something is given. See Donee.

DONATIO. Lat. A gift. A transfer of the title to property to one who receives it without paying for it. Vicat. The act by which the owner of a thing voluntarily transfers the title and possession of the same from himself to another person, without any consideration. See Indiana N. & S. R. W. Co. v. City of Attica, 56 Ind. 476.

Its literal translation, "gift," has acquired in real law a more limited meaning, being applied to the conveyance of estates tail. 2 Bl.Comm. 316; Littleton, § 59; West, Symb. § 254; 4 Cruise, Dig. 51.

By the civil law (adopted into the English and American law) donations are either inter vivos (between living persons) or mortis causa (in anticipation of death.) As to these forms, see infra. A donatio or gift as between living persons is called donatio mera or pura when it is a simple gift without compulsion or consideration, that is, resting solely on the generosity of the donor, as in the case of most charitable gifts. It is called donatio remuneratoria when given as a reward for past services, but still not under any legal compulsion, as in the case of pensions and land-grants. It is called donatio sub modo (or modalis) when given for the attainment of some special object or on condition that the donee shall do something not specially for the benefit of the donor, as in the case of the endowment of hospitals, colleges, etc., coupled with the condition that they shall be established and maintained. Mackeld. Rom.Law, § 466; Fisk v. Flores, 43 Tex. 340; Noe v. Card, 14 Cal. 576. The following terms are also used: Donatio conditionalis, a conditional gift; donatio relata, a gift made with reference to some service already done, (Fisk v. Flores, 43 Tex. 340;) donatio stricta et coartatrix, a restricted gift, as an estate tail.

DONATIO INOFFICIOSA. An officious (undutiful) gift; a gift of so great a part of the donor's property that the birthright portion of his heirs is diminished. Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 469.

DONATIO INTER VIVOS. A gift between the living. The ordinary kind of gift by one person to another. 2 Kent, Comm. 438; 2 Steph.Comm. 102. A term derived from the civil law. Inst. 2, 7, 2. A donation inter vivos (between living persons) is an act by which the donor divests himself at present and irrecoverably of the thing given in favor of the donee who accepts it. Succession of Brand, 162 La. 880, 111 So. 267, 268.

There are three kinds of "donations inter vivos", namely, "gratuitous donations", "onerous donations", and "remunerative donations", the first being based on mere liberality, the second being burdened with charges imposed by the donee, and the third being recompense for services rendered. White v. White, La.App., 7 So.2d 255, 257.

DONATIO MORTIS CAUSA. A gift made by a person in sickness, who, apprehending his dissolution near, delivers, or causes to be delivered, to another the possession of any personal goods, to keep as his own in case of the donor's decease. 2 Bl.Comm. 514. The civil law defines it to be a gift under apprehension of death; as when anything is given upon condition that, if the donor dies, the donee shall possess it absolutely, or return it if the donor should survive or should repent of having made the gift, or if the donee should die before the donor. Adams v. Nicholas, 1 Miles (Pa.) 109-117. A gift in view of death is one which is made in contemplation, fear, or peril of death, and with intent that it shall take effect only in case of the death of the giver. Prendergast v. Drew, 103 Conn. 88, 130 A. 75, 76. A donation mortis causa (in prospect of death) is an act to take effect when the donor shall no longer exist, by which he disposes of the whole or a part of his property, and which is revocable.

DONATIO PERFICITUR POSSESSIONE ACCIDENTIS. A gift is perfected [made complete] by the possession of the receiver. Jenk.Cent. 109, case 9. A gift is incomplete until possession is delivered. 2 Kent, Comm. 438; Ewing v. Ewing, 2 Leigh (Va.) 337.

DONATIO PRINCIPI S INTELLIGITUR SINE CONDITUR. A donation per primam causam (in anticipation of death.) As to this last kind of donation, see infra. A donatio donatio in view of death is a gift intended to be accompanied by a condition subsequent, the condition being either void when the condition is fulfilled or is null when it is not fulfilled.

DONATIO PRINCIPI S INTELLIGITUR SINE PRÆJUDICIO TERTII. Da 2d. Ir.K.B. 75. A gift of the prince is understood without prejudice to a third party.

DONATIO PROPRÆ NUGI NQs. A gift on account of marriage. In Roman law, the bridegroom's "gift to the bride in anticipation of marriage and to secure her dos was called "donatio ante nuptias; but by an ordinance of Justinian such gift might be made after as well as before marriage, and in that case it was called "donatio propter nuptias." Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 572.

As sometimes used, however, the term does not necessarily mean an absolute gift without any condition or consideration whatever. International & G. N. Ry. Co. v. Anderson County, Tex.Civ.App., 174 S.W. 305, 315.

A donation of real estate is certainly not a mortgage or privilege, but is a transfer of property of a peculiar kind, subject to revocation, sometimes without cause, and always subject to reduction at the suit of the forced heirs of the donor. Bank of Delphi v. Lea, 139 La. 730, 72 So. 187, 188.

In ecclesiastical law. A mode of acquiring a benefice by deed of gift alone, without presentation, institution, or induction. 3 Steph.Comm. 81.

DONATION LANDS. Lands granted from the public domain to an individual as a bounty, gift, or donation; particularly, in early Pennsylvania history, lands thus granted to soldiers of the revolutionary war.

DONATIONUM ALIA PERFECTA, ALIA INCEPTA ET NON PERFECTA, UT SI DONATIO LECTA FUIT ET CONCESSA, AO TRADITIO NON DUM FUERIT SUBSECUTA. Some gifts are perfect, others incipient and not perfect as if a gift were read and agreed to, but delivery had not then followed. Co.Litt. 56.

DONATIVE ADOWSON. In ecclesiastical law. A species of adowson, where the benefice is conferred on the clerk by the patron's deed of donation, without presentation, institution, or induction. 2 B1.Comm. 23; Termes de la Ley.

DONATIVE TRUST. May be created by transfer of property in trust as gift for benefit of another person or by proper declaration of legal owner of property that he will hold it in trust for another's benefit and does not require payment of any consideration by the beneficiary. Elbert v. Waples-Platter Co., Tex.Civ.App., 156 S.W.2d 146, 150, 151.

DONATOR. A donor; one who makes a gift, (donatio.)

DONATOR NUNquam DESINIT POSSIDERE, ANTEQUAM DONATORIUS INCIPIAT POSSIDERE. The donor never ceases to possess, until the donee begins to possess. Bract. fol. 41b; Dyer 281.

DONATORIUS. A donee; a person to whom a gift is made; a purchaser. Bract. fol. 13, et seq.

DONATORY. The person on whom the king bestows his right to any forfeiture that has fallen to the crown.

DONE. Distinguished from "made." "A 'deed made' may no doubt mean an 'instrument made;' but a 'deed done' is not an 'instrument done,'—it is an 'act done;' and therefore these words, 'made and done,' apply to acts, as well as deeds." Lord Brougham, 4 Bell, App.Cas. 38.

DONEC. Lat. As long as; while; until; within a certain time.

DONEE. One who is invested with a power of appointment; the party executing a power; otherwise called the "appointer." 4 Kent, Comm. 316. One to whom a gift is made or a bequest given. He to whom lands or tenements are given in tail. Litt. § 57. In old English law. He to whom lands were given; the party to whom a donatio was made.

DONIS, STATUDE DE. See De Donis, the Statute.

DONNEUR D'AVAL. In French law. Guarantor of negotiable paper other than by indorsement.

DONOR. The party conferring a power. 4 Kent, Comm. 316. One who makes a gift. One who creates a trust. Ulmer v. Fulton, 129 Ohio St. 323, 195 N.E. 557, 97 A.L.R. 1170. He who gives lands or tenements to another in tail. Litt. § 57; Termes de la Ley. In old English law. He by whom lands were given to another; the party making a donatio.

DONUM. Lat. In the civil law. A gift; a free gift. Calvin.

The difference between donum and munus is said to be that donum is more general, while munus is specific. Vit. Voc.Jur.; Calvin.

DOOM. In Scotch law. Judicial sentence, or judgment. The decision or sentence of a court orally pronounced by an officer called a "dermaster" or "deemster." In modern usage, criminal sentences still end with the words "which is pronounced for doom."

DOOMSDAY-BOOK. See Domesday-Book.

DOOR. The place of usual entrance in a house, or into a room in the house. State v. McBeth, 49 Kan. 584, 31 P. 145.

DOPE. Any thick liquid or pasty preparation, as of opium for medicinal purposes, of grease for a lubricant, etc., and in popular meaning signifies opium derivative, ranging from harmless concoction to most powerful narcotics containing opium as ingredient. Abbott v. Vinson, 230 Ky. 786, 20 S.W.2d 995, 996.

DORMANT. Literally, sleeping; hence inactive; otherwise called the "appointer." 4 Kent, Comm. 316. One who makes a gift. One who creates a trust. Ulmer v. Fulton, 129 Ohio St. 323, 195 N.E. 557, 97 A.L.R. 1170. He who gives lands or tenements to another in tail. Litt. § 57; Termes de la Ley. In old English law. He by whom lands were given to another; the party making a donatio.

DORMANT CLAIM. One which is in abeyance.

DORMANT EXECUTION. One which a creditor is not to sell, until further orders, or until a DORMANT JUDGMENT. One which has not been satisfied, nor extinguished by lapse of time, but which has remained so long unexecuted that execution cannot now be issued upon it without first reviving the judgment, or one which has lost its lien on land from the failure to issue execution on it or take other steps to enforce it within the time limited by statute. 1 Black, Judgm., 2d Ed., § 462; Draper v. Nixon, 93 Ala. 436, 8 So. 489; General Electric Co. v. Hurd, C.C., 171 F. 984; Burlington State Bank v. Marlin Nat. Bank, Tex.Civ.App., 207 S.W. 954, 956.

DORMANT PARTNER. See Partners.

DORMITORY. A sleeping room or building containing a series of sleeping rooms, a sleeping apartment capable of containing many beds, especially one connected with a college or boarding school. Russell v. Trustees of Purdue University, 201 Ind. 367, 168 N.E. 529, 534, 65 A.L.R. 1384.

DORMIUNT ALIQUANDO LEGES, NUNQUAM MORTIUNTUR. 2 Inst. 161. The laws sometimes sleep, never die.

DORSUM. Lat. The back. In dorso recordi, on the back of the record. 5 Coke, 44b.

DORTURE. (Contracted from dormitorum.) A dormitory of a convent; a place to sleep in.

DOS. In Roman law. Dowry; a wife's marriage portion; all that property which on marriage is transferred by the wife herself or by another to the husband with a view of diminishing the burden which the marriage will entail upon him. It is of three kinds. Profectitia dos is that which is derived from the property of the wife's father or paternal grandfather. That dos is termed adventitia which is not profection in respect to its source, whether it is given by the wife from her own estate or by the wife's mother or a third person. It is termed receptitia dos when accompanied by a stipulation for its reclamation by the constitutor on the termination of the marriage. See Mackeld.Rom.Law, §§ 561, 563; Vicat; Calvinus, Lex.; Du Cange; 1 Washb.R.P. 147.

In old English law. The portion given to the wife by the husband at the church door, in consideration of the marriage; dower; the wife's portion out of her deceased husband's estate in case he had not endowed her. 1 Washb.R.P. 147; 1 Cruise, Dig. 152; Park, Dower.

DOS DE DOTE, n. In Spanish law. The marriage portion. A reasonable part of her husband's estate, to which every woman is entitled, of lands of which her husband may have endowed her on the day of marriage. Co.Litt. 336. Dower, at common law. 2 Bl.Comm. 134.

DOS RATIONABILIS VEL LEGITIMA EST CUSLIBUT MULIERIS DE QUOCUNQUE TENEMENTO TERTIA PARS OMNIIUM TERRARUM ET TENEMENTORUM, QUIE VIR SUUS TENUIT IN DOMINIO SUO UT DE FEODO, ETC. Co.Litt. 336. Reasonable or legitimate dower belongs to every woman of a third part of all the lands and tenements of which her husband was seised in his demesne, as of fee, etc.

DOSSIER. Fr. A brief; a bundle of papers.

DOT. (A French word, adopted in Louisiana.) The fortune, portion, or dowry which a woman brings to her husband by the marriage. Buisson v. Thompson, 7 Mart.La., N.S., 460.

DOTAGE. That feebleness of the mental faculties which proceeds from old age. It is a diminution or decay of that intellectual power which was once possessed. It is the slow approach of death; of that irrevocable cessation, without hurt or disease, of all the functions which once belonged to the living animal. The external functions gradually cease; the senses waste away by degrees; and the mind is imperceptibly visited by decay. Owing's Case, 1 Bland (Md.) 389, 17 Am. Dec. 311.

DOTAL. Relating to the dos or portion of a woman; constituting her portion; comprised in her portion.

DOTAL PROPERTY. In the civil law, in Louisiana. Property which the wife brings to the husband to assist him in bearing the expenses of the marriage establishment. Extradotal property, otherwise called "paraphernal property," is that which forms no part of the dowry. Fleitas v. Richardson, 13 Sup.Ct. 495, 147 U.S. 550, 37 L.Ed. 276. See, also, Community.

DOTATION. The act of giving a dowry or portion; endowment in general, including the endowment of a hospital or other charitable institution.

DOTE, n. In Spanish law. The marriage portion of a wife. White, New Recop. b. 1, tit. 6, c. 1. The property which the wife gives to the husband on account of marriage, or for the purpose of supporting the matrimonial expenses. Id. b. 1, tit. 7, c. 1, § 1; Schm.Civil Law, 75; Cutter v. Waddingham, 22 Mo. 254; Hart v. Burnett, 15 Cal. 566; Las Partidas, 4. 11. 1; Escriche, Dig. Raz. Dote.

DOTE, v. To be besotted, delirious, silly, or insane. Gates v. Meredith, 7 Ind. 441.

DOTE ASSIGNANDA. A writ which lay for a widow, when it was judicially ascertained that a tenant to the king was seised of tenements in fee

Black's Law Dictionary Revised 4th Ed.-37 or fee-tail at the day of his death, and that he held of the king in chief. In such case the widow might come into chancery, and then make oath that she would not marry without the king's leave, and then she might have this writ. These widows were called the "king's widows." Jacob; Holt-house.

DOTE UNDE NIHIL HABET. A writ which lies for a widow to whom no dower has been assigned.
3 Bl.Comm. 182. By 23 & 24 Vict. c. 126, an ordinary action commenced by writ of summons has taken its place; but it remains in force in the United States, and under the designation of "dower unde nihil habet" (see that title), 'is the form in common use for the recovery of dower at law.
1 Washb.R.P. 290; 4 Kent 63.

DOTE UNDE NIHIL HABET. A writ which lies
for a widow to whom no dower has been assigned.
3 Bl.Comm. 182. By 23 & 24 Vict. c. 126, an ordi-ary action commenced by writ of summons has taken its place; but it remains in force in the United States, and under the designation of "dower unde nihil habet" (see that title), 'is the form in common use for the recovery of dower at law.
1 Washb.R.P. 290; 4 Kent 63.

DOTE LEX FAVET; PREMIUM PUDORIS EST;
IDEO PARCATUR. Co.Litt. 31; Branch, Princ.
The law favors dower; it is the reward of chastity; therefore let it be preserved.

DOTE ADMINISTRATIO. Admeasurement of dower, where the widow holds more than her share, etc.

DOTTISSA. A dowager.

DOUBLE. - Twofold; acting in two capacities or having two aspects; multiplied by two. This term has ordinarily the same meaning in law as in popular speech. The principal compound terms into which it enters are noted below.

DOUBLE ASSESSMENT. The imposition of same tax, by same taxing power, upon same subject matter. Aragon v. Empire Gold Mining & Milling Co., 47 N.M. 299, 142 P.2d 539, 541.

DOUBLE ADULTERY. Adultery committed by two persons each of whom is married to another as distinguished from "single" adultery, where one of the participants is unmarried. Hunter v. U. S., 1 Pin. (Wis.) 91, 39 Am.Dec. 277.

DOUBLE AVAIL OF MARRIAGE. In Scotch law.
Double the ordinary or single value of a marriage.
Bell. See Duplex Valor Maritagi.

DOUBLE BOND. In Scotch law. A bond with a penalty, as distinguished from a single bond. 2
Kames, Eq. 359.

DOUBLE COMPLAINT, DOUBLE QUARREL, or DUPLEX QUERELA. A grievance made known by a clerk or other person, to the archbishop of the province, against the ordinary, for delaying or refusing to do justice in some cause ecclesiastical, as to give sentence, institute a clerk, etc. It is termed a "double complaint," because it is most commonly made against both the judge and him at whose suit justice is denied or delayed; the effect whereof is that the archbishop, taking notice of the delay, directs his letters, under his au--thentical seal, to all clerks of his province, commanding them to admonish the ordinary, within a certain number of days, to do the justice required, or otherwise to appear before him or his official, and there allege the ca use of his delay; and to signify to the ordinary that if he neither perform the thing enjoined, nor appear nor show cause against it, he himself, in his court of audience, will forthwith proceed to do the justice that is due. Cowell.

DOUBLE COSTS. See Costs.

DOUBLE CREDITOR. One who has a lien on two funds. Newby v. Fox, 90 Kan. 317, 133 P. 890, 47

DOUBLE DAMAGES. See Damages.

DOUBLE EAGLE. A gold coin of the United States of the value of twenty dollars.

DOUBLE ENTRY. A system of mercantile bookkeeping, in which the entries in the day-book, etc., are posted twice into the ledger. First, to a personal account, that is, to the account of the person with whom the dealing to which any given entry refers has taken place; secondly, to an impersonal account, as "goods." Mozley & Whitley.

DOUBLE FINE. In old English law. A fine sur done grant et render was called a "double fine," because it comprehended the fine sur cognizance de droit come ceo, etc., and the fine sur concessit.

DOUBLE FLEMISH BOND. An arrangement whereby two stretchers are followed by a header throughout the entire course, while on the succeeding course the header is centered over the vertical joint between the two stretchers of the course be-2d 94, 96.

DOUBLE GLAZING. That by which two panes of glass are set in each section of the window sash instead of one. Johnson v. Olsen, 134 Minn. 53, 158 N.W. 805, 806.

DOUBLE HOUSE. A building having accommodations for two families, divided vertically instead of horizontally. Donnelly v. Spitza, 246 Mich. 284,
224 N.W. 396. Schwarzer v. Calcasieu Lumber Co.,
Tex.Civ.App., 176 S.W.2d 597, 599.

DOUBLE INSURANCE. Double insurance exists where the same person is insured by several insurers separately in respect of two families, divided vertically instead of horizontally. Donnelly v. Spitza, 246 Mich. 284,
224 N.W. 396. Schwarzer v. Calcasieu Lumber Co., Tex.Civ.App., 176 S.W.2d 597, 599.

DOUBLE INSURANCE. Double insurance is where divers insurances are made upon the same interest in the same subject against the same risks in favor of the same assured, in proportions exceeding the value. 1 Phill.Ins. §§ 359, 366. A double insurance exists where the same person is insured by several insurers separately in respect to the same subject and interest. Insurance Co.
v. Gwathmey, 1 S.E. 209, 82 Va. 923; Lowell Mfg.
Co. v. Safeguard F. Ins. Co., 88 N.Y. 597; Chere-way v. Grangers Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 181 Md. 149, 28 A.2d 824, 825; Browne v. Franklin Fire Ins. Co., 225 Mo.App. 665, 37 S.W.2d 977, 981.

DOUBLE JEOPARDY. Common-law and constitutional prohibition against "double jeopardy" refers not to the same offense eo nomine but to the same crime, transaction or omission. Driggers v.
State, 137 Fla. 182, 188 So. 118, 120. A second prosecution after a first trial for the same offense. People ex rel. Rozea v. Warden of Queens County Jail, 43 N.Y.S.2d 211, 213.

DOUBLE PATENTING. The test respecting "double patenting" is whether the claims of both patents, when properly construed in the light of the descriptions given, define essentially the same thing. Waterbury Buckle Co. v. G. E. Prentice Mfg. Co., D.C.Conn., 294 F. 930, 937. Occurs only when claims of two patents issued to one applicant are the same. Scharf v. Weinfeld & Kahn, D.C. N.Y., 31 F.Supp. 689, 692.

DOUBLE PLEA, DOUBLE PLEADING. See Duplicitly; Plea; Pleading.

DOUBLE POSSIBILITY. A possibility upon a possibility. 2 Bl.Comm. 170.

DOUBLE RECOVERY. Recovery which represents more than the total maximum which all parties have sustained. Hindmarsh v. Sulpho Saline Bath Co., 108 Neb. 168, 187 N.W. 806, 808.

DOUBLE RENT. In English law. Rent payable by a tenant who continues in possession after the time for which he has given notice to quit, until the time of his quitting possession. St. 11 Geo. II. c. 19.

DOUBLE TAX RULE. Collections made in taxable year on sales made in prior years, and which had already been taxed in prior years. Hoover-Bond Co. v. Denman, C.C.A. Ohio, 59 F.2d 909, 910.

DOUBLE TAXATION. The taxing of the same item or piece of property twice to the same person, or taxing it as the property of one person and again as the property of another; but this does not include the imposition of different taxes concurrently on the same property (e.g., a city tax and a school tax), nor the taxation of the same piece of property to different persons when they hold different interests in it or when it represents different values in their hands, as when both the mortgagor and mortgagee of property are taxed in respect to their interests in it, or if a tax is laid upon the capital or property of a corporation and also upon the value of its shares of stock in the hands of the separate stockholders. Cook v. Burlington, 59 Iowa, 251, 13 N.W. 113, 44 Am.Rep. 679. "Double taxation" means taxing twice for the same purpose in the same year some of the property in the territory in which the tax is laid without taxing all of it. Dieffenb v. Gallet, 51 Idaho 619, 10 P.2d 307, 315; Amarillo-Pecos Valley Truck Lines v. Gallegos, 44 N.M. 120, 99 P.2d 447, 451.

DOUBLE USE. In patent law. An application of a principle or process, previously known and applied, to some new use, but which does not lead to a new result or the production of a new article. De Lamar v. De Lamar Min. Co., C.C.Idaho, 110 F. 542.

DOUBLE VALUE. In English law. This is a penalty on a tenant holding over after his landlord’s notice to quit. By 4 Geo. II. c. 28, § 1, it is enacted that if any tenant for life or years hold over any lands, etc., after the determination of his estate, after demand made, and notice in writing given, for delivering the possession thereof, by the landlord, or the person having the reversion or remainder therein, or his agent thereunto lawfully authorized, such tenant so holding over shall pay to the person so kept out of possession at the rate of double the yearly value of the lands, etc., so detained, for so long a time as the same are detained. See Woodf. Landl. & Ten. (12th Ed.) 717, et seq.

DOUBLE VOUCHER. This was when a common voucher was had against another person, and the tenant in tail were vouchee, it barred every latent right and interest which he might have in the lands recovered. 2 Bl.Comm. 359.

DOUBLE WASTE. When a tenant bound to repair suffers a house to be wasted, and then unlawfully fells timber to repair it, he is said to commit double waste. Co. Litt. 53.

DOUBLE WILL. A will in which two persons join, each leaving his property and estate to the other, so that the survivor takes the whole. Evans v. Smith, 28 Ga. 98, 73 Am.Dec. 751.

DOUBT, n. Uncertainty of mind; the absence of a settled opinion or conviction; the attitude of mind towards the acceptance of or belief in a proposition, theory, or statement, in which the judgment is not at rest but inclines alternately to either side. Rowe v. Baber, 93 Ala. 422, 8 So. 865; Smith v. Railway Co., 143 Mo. 33, 44 S.W. 718; West Jersey Traction Co. v. Camden Horse R. Co., 52 N.J.Eq. 452, 29 A. 333. An equipoise of the mind arising from an equality of contrary reasons. Ayliffe, Pand. 121.

Reasonable Doubt
This is a term often used, probably pretty well understood, but not easily defined. It does not mean a mere possible doubt, because everything relating to human affairs, and depending on moral evidence, is open to some possible or imaginary doubt. It is that state of the case which, after the entire comparison and consideration of all the evidence, leaves the minds of jurors in that condition that they cannot say they feel an abiding conviction to a moral certainty of the truth of the charge. If upon proof there is reasonable doubt remaining, the accused is entitled to the benefit of it by an acquittal; for it is not sufficient to establish a probability, though a strong one, arising from the doctrine of chances, that the contrary, but the evidence must establish the truth of the fact to a reasonable and moral certainty,—a certainty that convinces and directs judgment of those who are bound to act conscientiously upon it. This is proof beyond reasonable doubt; because if the law, which mostly depends upon considerations of a moral nature, should go further than this, and require absolute certainty, it would exclude circumstantial evidence altogether. Egan v. U.S., 52 App.D.C. 384, 287 F. 958.

Proof “beyond a reasonable doubt” is not beyond all possible or imaginary doubt, but such proof as precludes every reasonable hypothesis except that which it tends to support. It is proof “to a moral certainty,”—such proof as satisfies the judgment and consciences of the jury, as reasonable men, and applying their reason to the evidence before them, that the crime charged has been committed by the defendant, and so satisfies them as to leave no other reasonable conclusion possible. State v. Koski, 100 W.Va. 98, 130 S.E. 100, 101.

The difficulty of a satisfactory definition is discussed in 57 Am.L.Reg. 419, where C. J. Shaw’s definition is criticized and that in Corn. v. Costley, 118 Mass. 1, supra, is suggested as better. And in Hopt v. Utah, 120 U.S. 430, 7 S.Ct. 614, 30 L.Ed. 708, it was approved as contrasted with C. J. Shaw’s definition.

A “reasonable doubt” is such a doubt as would cause a reasonable and prudent man in the gravest and more important affairs of life to pause and hesitate to act upon the truth of the matter charged. But a reasonable doubt is not a mere possibility of innocence, nor a caprice, shadow, or speculation as to innocence not arising out of the evidence or the want of it. State v. Perkins, 21 N.M. 135, 153 P. 258, 259.

A “reasonable doubt” is such a doubt as an upright man might entertain in an honest investigation after truth. Peterson v. State, 47 Ga. 524(5); Lochamy v. State, 152 Ga. 235, 109 S.E. 497.

The term needs no definition. People v. Rogers, 324 Ill. 224, 154 N.E. 909, 913.

DOUBTFUL TITLE. One as to the validity of which there exists some doubt, either as to matter of fact or of law; one which invites or exposes the party holding it to litigation. Barrett v. McMannis, 153 Kan. 420, 110 P.2d 774, 778; Black v. American International Corporation, 264 Pa. 260, 107 A. 737, 739. Distinguished from a “marketable” title, which is of such a character that the courts will compel its acceptance by a purchaser who has agreed to buy the property or has bid it in at public sale. Herman v. Somers, 158 Pa. 424, 27 A. 1050, 38 Am.St.Rep. 851.

DON, L. Fr. A gift. Otherwise written “don” and “done.” The thirty-fourth chapter of Britton is entitled “De Douns.”

DOVE. Doves are animals ferce naturece, and not the subject of larceny unless they are in the owner’s custody. Corn. v. Chace, 9 Pick., Mass. 15, 19 Am.Dec. 348; Ruckman v. Outwater, 28 N.J.Law 581.

DOWABLE. Subject to be charged with dower; as dowlable lands.

Entitled or entitling to dower. Thus, a dowable interest in lands is such as entitles the owner to have such lands charged with dower.

DOWAGER. A widow who is endowed, or who has a jointure in lieu of dower. In England, this is a title or addition given to the widows of princes, dukes, ears, and other noblemen, to distinguish them from the wives of the heirs, who have right to bear the title. 1 Bl.Comm. 224.

DOWAGER—QUEEN. The widow of the king. As such she enjoys most of the privileges belonging to her as queen consort. It is not treason to conspire her death or violate her chastity, because the succession to the crown is not thereby endangered. No man, however, can marry her without a special license from the sovereign, on pain of forfeiting his lands or goods. 1 Bl.Comm. 233.

DOWER. The provision which the law makes for a widow out of the lands or tenements of her husband, for her support and the nurture of her children. Co. Litt. 30a; 2 Bl.Comm. 130; In re Miller’s Estate, 44 N.M. 214, 100 P.2d 908, 911. A species of life-estate which a woman is, by law, entitled to claim on the death of her husband, in the lands and tenements of which he was seised in fee during the marriage, and which her issue, if any, might by possibility have inherited. 1 Steph.Comm. 249; 2 Bl.Comm. 129; Cruise, Dig. tit. 6; 2 Crabb, Real Prop. p. 124, § 1117; 4 Kent, Comm. 35. See Inchoate Dower.

“Dower” is the life estate to which every married woman is entitled on death of her husband, intestate, or, in case she dissents from his will, one-third in value of all lands of which husband was beneficially seized in law or in fact, at any time during coverture. McGeehe v. McGeehe, 189 N.C. 558, 127 S.E. 684, 687. McLawhorn v. Smith, 211 N.C. 513, 191 S.E. 35, 38, 110 A.L.R. 980.

The term, both technically and in popular acceptance, has reference to real estate exclusive-
Dower

Dower at the church door or porch. An ancient kind of dower in England, where a man, (being tenant in fee-simple, of full age,) openly at the church door, where all marriages were formerly celebrated, after affiance made and troth plighted between them, endowed his wife with the whole of his lands, or such quantity as he pleased, at the same time specifying and ascertaining the same. Litt. § 39; 2 Bl.Comm. 133.

Dower by common law. The ordinary kind of dower in English and American law, consisting of a life interest in one-third of the lands of which the husband was seised in fee at any time during the coverture. Litt. § 36; 2 Bl.Comm. 132; 2 Steph.Comm. 302; 4 Kent, Comm. 35.

Dower by custom. A kind of dower in England, regulated by custom, where the quantity allowed the wife differed from the proportion of the common law; as that the wife should have half the husband’s lands; or, in some places, the whole; and, in some, only a quarter. 2 Bl.Comm. 132; Litt. § 37.

Dower de la plus belle (de la plus belles) L. Fr. Dower of the fairest [part.] A species of ancient English dower, incident to the old tenures, where there was a guardian in chivalry, and the wife occupied lands of the heir as guardian in socage. If the wife brought a writ of dower against such guardian in chivalry, he might show this matter, and pray that the wife might be endowed de la plus belle of the tenement in socage. Litt. § 48. This kind of dower was abolished with the military tenures. 2 Bl.Comm. 132.

Dower ex asensus patris. Dower by the father’s assent. A species of dower ad ostium ecclesice, made when the husband’s father was alive, and the son, by his consent expressly given, endowed his wife with parcel of his father’s lands. Litt. § 40; 2 Bl.Comm. 133; Grogan v. Garrison, 27 Ohio St. 61.

Dower unde niiih habet. A writ of right which lay for a widow to whom no dower had been assigned.

Dowless. A woman entitled to dower; a tenant in dower. 2 P.Wms. 707.

Dowry. The property which a woman brings to her husband in marriage; now more commonly called a “portion.”

This word expresses the proper meaning of the “dos” of the Roman, the “dot” of the French, and the “dote” of the Spanish, law, but is a very different thing from “dower,” with which it has sometimes been confounded. See Co.Litt. 31; Dig. 23, 3, 76; Code 5, 12, 20; Buard v. De Russy, 6 Rob., La., 111; Gates v. Legendre, 10 Rob., La., 74; Cutter v. Waddingham, 22 Mo. 254.

By dowry, in the Louisiana Civil Code (see article 2337), is meant the effects which the wife brings to the husband to support the expenses of marriage. It is given to the husband, to be enjoyed by him so long as the marriage shall last, and the income of it belongs to him. He alone has the administration of it during marriage, and his wife cannot deprive him of it. The real estate settled as dowry is inalienable during marriage, unless the marriage contract contains a stipulation to the contrary. De Young v. De Young, 6 La.Ann. 786.

Doyle rule. A formula for computing the board measure from the dimensions of a log. Peter v. Owl Bayou Cyprus Co., 137 La. 1067, 69 So. 840, 841. The rule is to deduct four inches from the diameter of the log, as an allowance for slab, square one-quarter of the remainder, and multiply the result by the length of the log in feet. Morrison v. Pickrell Walnut Co., 199 Ill. App. 175, 176.

Dozein, L. Fr. Twelve; a person twelve years of age. St. 18 Edw. II.; Barring. Ob. St. 208.

Dozen peers. Twelve peers assembled at the instance of the barons, in the reign of Henry III., to be privy counselors, or rather conservators of the kingdom.

Dr. An abbreviation for “doctor;” also, in commercial usage, for “debtor,” indicating the items or particulars in a bill or in an account-book chargeable against the person to whom the bill is rendered or in whose name the account stands, as opposed to “Cr.” (“Credit” or “creditor”), which indicates the items for which he is given credit. Jaqua v. Shewalter, 10 Ind.App. 234, 37 N.E. 1072.

An Athenian silver coin, of the value of about fifteen cents.

Draco regis. The standard, ensign, or military colors borne in war by the ancient kings of England, having the figure of a dragon painted thereon.
DRACONIAN LAWS. A code of laws prepared by Draco, the celebrated lawgiver of Athens. These laws were exceedingly severe, and the term is now sometimes applied to any laws of unusual harshness.

DRAFF. Waste matter, sweepings, refuse, lees, or dregs. In weighing commodities the term signifies dust and dirt, and not what is generally meant by "draught" or "draft" (q. v.). 28 C.J.S. p. 227.

An order for the payment of money drawn by one person on another. It is said to be a non nullum generisissimum, and to include all such orders. Wilson v. Buchenau, D.C.Cal., 43 F.Supp. 272, 275.

The term includes a cashier's check, People v. Miller, 278 Ill. 490, 116 N.E. 131, 138 L.R.A.1917E, 797; Advance-Rumely Thresher Co. v. Hess, 85 Mont. 293, 279 P. 236, 237; but a draft is distinguishable from a cashier's check in, that a draft is a bill of exchange payable on demand purporting to be drawn on deposit while a cashier's check is a primary obligation of a bank which issues it and constitutes its written promise to pay it on demand. In re Bank of U. S., 277 N.Y.S. 96, 243 App.Div. 287. It is distinguished from "check" by the fact that in a draft the drawer is a bank, while in the ordinary check the drawer is an individual. Leach v. Mechanics' Sa'. Bank, 202 Iowa, 882, 211 N.W. 306, 308, 50 A.L.R. 385.

A tentative, provisional, or preparatory writing out of any document (as a will, contract, lease, etc.) for purposes of discussion and correction, which is afterwards to be copied out in its final shape.

A draft in stockyard parlance is all those animals in one consignment weighed as a single sales or purchase classification. Acker v. U. S., D.C.Ill., 12 F.Supp. 776, 780.

DRAFTSMAN. Any one who draws or frames a legal document, e. g., a will, conveyance, pleading, etc.

DRAGO DOCTRINE. The principle asserted by Luis Drago, Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Argentine Republic, in a letter to the Argentine Minister at Washington, December 29, 1902, that the forcible intervention of states to secure the payment of public debts due to their citizens from foreign states is unjustifiable and dangerous to the security and peace of the nations of South America. The subject was brought before the Conference by the United States and a Convention was adopted in which the contracting powers agreed, with some restrictive conditions, not to have recourse to armed force for the recovery of contract debts claimed by their nationals against a foreign state. Higgins, 184-197. See Calvo Doctrine.

DRAGOMAN. An interpreter employed in the east, and particularly at the Turkish court.

DRAIN, v. To conduct water from one place to another, for the purpose of drying the former. To make dry; to draw off water; to rid land of its superfluous moisture by adapting or improving natural water courses and supplementing them, when necessary, by artificial ditches. People v. Parks, 58 Cal. 639.

To "drain," in its larger sense, includes not only the supplying of outlets and channels to relieve the land from water, but also the provision of ditches, drains, and embankments to prevent water from accumulating. Holt v. State, Tex.Civ.App., 176 S.W. 743, 746; In re Mississippi and Fox River Drainage Dist., 270 Mo. 157, 192 S.W. 727, 731; Pioneer Real Estate Co. v. City of Portland, 119 Or. 1, 247 P. 319, 323.

DRAIN, n. A trench or ditch to convey water from wet land; a channel through which water may flow off.

The word has no technical legal meaning. Any hollow space in the ground, natural or artificial, where water is collected and passes off, is a ditch or drain. Sherrod v. Battle, 154 N.C. 345, 70 S.E. 834, 836.

The term may be synonymous with "water course." Green v. County Comrs of Harbince, 74 Ohio St. 318, 78 N.E. 521, 522.

"Sewers" differ from "drains" only in that the former are in cities, and generally covered over, while the latter are in rural communities, and open. Barton v. Drainage Dist., 179 Ark. 173, 34 S.W. 418, 419. But "drains" may sometimes include sewers. City of Charleston, 170 Ill. 336, 48 N.E. 985, 986. See, generally, Mound City Land & Stock Co. v. Miller, 170 Mo. 240, 70 S.W. 721, 724, 6 L.R.A. 190, 94 Am.St.Rep. 727.

Also, sometimes, the easement or servitude (acquired by grant or prescription) which consists in the right to drain water through another's land. See 3 Kent, Comm. 436; 7 M. & G. 354.

DRAINAGE DISTRICT. A political subdivision of the state, created for the purpose of draining and reclaiming wet and overflowed land, as well as to preserve the public health and convenience. Commander v. Board of Com'rs of Buras Levee Dist., 202 La. 325, 11 So.2d 605, 607.

DRAM. In common parlance, a drink of some substance containing alcohol; something which can produce intoxication. Lacy v. State, 32 Tex. 228. See Wright v. People, 101 Ill. 134.

DRAM-SHOP. A drinking saloon, where liquors are sold to be drunk on the premises. Com. v. Marzynski, 21 N.E. 228, 149 Mass. 68. A place where spirituous liquors are sold by the dram or DRAM SHOP ACT. A civil damage statute directed at the operators of dram shops and at owners of buildings and premises wherein the operators are tenants. It permits an action to be brought by a person injured by an intoxicated person against one who contributed to the intoxication. See 1958 Univ. of Ill.Law Forum, No. 2 "Actions under the Illinois Dram Shop Act," and John A. Appleman, "Civil liability under the Illinois Dram Shop Act," 34 Ill.L.Rev. 30 (1939), Wanna v. Miller (N.Dak.) 136 N.W.2d 563 (1965).

DRAMATIC COMPOSITION. In copyright law. A literary work setting forth a story, incident, or scene from life, in which, however, the narrative is not related, but is represented by a dialogue and action; may include a descriptive poem set to music, or a pantomime, but not a composition for musical instruments alone, nor a mere spectacular exhibition or stage dance. Martinetti v. McGuire, 16 Fed.Cas. 920; Fuller v. Bemis, C. C.N.Y., 50 Fed. 926.

DRAUGHT. Act of drawing, or the thing drawn; act of moving loads by drawing as by beasts of burden, and the like; and the term may be used in the sense of pull. Jackson Floor Covering v. Maryland Casualty Co. of Baltimore, 117 N.J.L. 401, 189 A. 84, 85.

DRAW, n. A movable section of a bridge, which may be raised up or turned to one side, so as to admit the passage of vessels. Gildersleeve v. Railroad Co., D.C.N.Y., 82 Fed. 766; A depression in the surface of the earth, in the nature of a shallow ravine or gulch, sometimes many miles in length, forming a channel for the escape of rain and melting snow draining into it from either side. Railroad Co. v. Sutherland, 44 Neb. 526. 62 N.W. 859.

DRAW, v. To draw a firearm or deadly weapon is to point it intentionally. State v. Boyles, 24 N. M. 464, 174 P. 423. To draw a bead on; to bring into line with the bead or fore sight of a rifle and the hind sight; to aim at. Hatfield v. Commonwealth, 200 Ky. 243, 254 S.W. 748, 749.

To prepare a draft; to compose and write out in due form, as, a deed, complaint, petition, memorial, etc. Winnebago County State Bank v. Hustel, 119 Iowa 115, 93 N.W. 70.

To draw a jury is to select the persons who are to compose it, either by taking their names successively, but at hazard, from the jury box, or by summoning them individually to attend the court. Smith v. State, 34 So. 168, 136 Ala. 1.

In old criminal practice. To drag (on a hurdle) to the place of execution. Anciently no hurdle was allowed, but the criminal was actually dragged along the road to the place of execution. A part of the ancient punishment of traitors was to be thus drawn. 4 Bl.Comm. 92, 377.

In mercantile law. To draw a bill of exchange is to write (or cause it to be written) and sign it; to make, as a note. Knox v. Rivers Bros., 17 Ala.App. 630, 88 So. 33, 34.

In fiscal law and administration. To take out money from a bank, treasury, or other depository in the exercise of a lawful right and in a lawful manner. But to "draw a warrant" is not to draw the money; it is to make or execute the instrument which authorizes the drawing of the money. Brown v. Fleischner, 4 Or. 149.

DRAWBACK. In the customs laws, an allowance made by the government upon the duties due on imported merchandise when the importer, instead of selling it here, re-exports it; or the refunding of such duties if already paid. This allowance amounts, in some cases, to the whole of the original duties; in others, to a part only. See 19 U.S.C.A. § 1313.

DRAWEE. A person to whom a bill of exchange is addressed, and who is requested to pay the amount of money therein mentioned.

DRAWING. In patent law. A representation of the appearance of material objects by means of lines and marks upon paper, cardboard, or other substance. Ampt v. Cincinnati, 8 Ohio Dec. 628; 35 U.S.C.A. § 34.

DRENCHES, or DRENGES. In Saxon law. Tenants in capite. They are said to be such as, at the coming of William the Conqueror, being put out of their estates, were afterwards restored to them, on their making it appear that they were the true owners thereof, and neither in auxilio or consilio against him. Spelman.

DRENGAGE. The tenure by which the drenches, or drens, held their lands. A variety of feudal tenure by serjeancy (q. v.), often occurring in the northern counties of England, involving a kind of general service. Vinogradoff, Engl.Soc. in Eleventh Cent. 62. Little is known of it; 3 Holdsw.Hist.E.L. 132.

DRESSING. In the meat packing industry. The freeing of the carcass of hair, scurf, toenails, evisceration of the carcass, the cleaning and separation of the warm fancy meats, and the placing of these in the coolers. Likewise, all the operations performed upon the carcasses after slaughtering and until they go to the coolers, are included. The cleaning of casings is considered as “dressing”, as is the grading of casings, if the grading takes place prior to salting. The removal of hides, pelts, bones, fats, blood and other materials from the dressing floor is also considered as “dressing” in the meat packing industry. Fleming v. Swift & Co., D.C.I11., 41 F.Supp. 825, 828. Freeing of body from feathers and matters not suitable for consumption. Shain v. Armour & Co., D.C.Ky., 50 F.Supp. 907, 911.

DRIFT, n. In mining law. An underground passage driven horizontally along the course of a mineralized vein or approximately so. Distinguished from “shaft,” which is an opening made at the surface and extending downward into the earth vertically, or nearly so, upon the vein or intended to reach it; and from “tunnel,” which is a lateral or horizontal passage underground intended to reach the vein or mineral deposit, where drifting may begin. Jurgenson v. Diller, 114 Cal. 491, 46 P. 610, 55 Am.St.Rep. 83; Empire Star Mines Co. v. Butler, 62 Cal.App.2d 49, 145 P.2d 49, 63.

In old English law. A driving, especially of cattle.

DRIFT NET. A net with both ends free to drift with the current;—distinguished from a “set net,” which is one fastened at one or both ends, so the whole net cannot drift with the current. State v. Blanchard, 96 Or. 79, 189 P. 421, 427.

DRIFT-STUFF. This term signifies, not goods which are the subject of salvage, but matters floating at random, without any known or discoverable ownership, which, if cast ashore, will probably never be reclaimed, but will, as a matter of course, accrue to the riparian proprietor. Watson v. Knowles, 13 R.I. 641.

DRIFTS OF THE FOREST. A view or examination of what cattle are in a forest, chase, etc., that it may be known whether it be surcharged or not; and whose the beasts are, and whether they are comonable. These drifts are made at certain times in the year by the officers of the forest, when all cattle are driven into some pound or place inclosed, for the before-mentioned purposes, and also to discover whether any cattle of strangers be there, which ought not to common. Manwood, p. 2, c. 15.

DROFLAND. Sax. A quit rent, or yearly payment, formerly made by some tenants to the king, or their landlords, for driving their cattle through a manor to fairs or markets. Cowell; Blount.

DROIT. In French law. Right, justice, equity, law, the whole body of law; also a right. Toullier, n. 96; Pothier, Droit.

This term exhibits the same ambiguity which is discoverable in the German equivalent, “recht” and the English word “right.” On the one hand, these terms answer to the Roman “ius,” and thus indicate law in the abstract, considered as the foundation of all rights, or the complex of underlying moral principles which impart the character of justice to all positive law, or give it an ethical content. Taken in this abstract sense, the terms may be adjectives, in which case they are equivalent to “just,” or nouns, in which case they may be paraphrased by the expressions “justice,” “morality,” or “equity.” On the other hand, they serve to point out a right; that is, a power, privilege, faculty, or demand, inherent in one person, and incident upon another. In the latter signification, droit (or recht or right) is the correlative of “duty” or “obligation.” In the former sense, it may be considered as opposed to wrong, injustice, or the absence of law. Droit has the further ambiguity that it is sometimes used to denote the existing body of law considered as one whole, or the sum total of a number of individual laws taken together. See Jus; Recht; Right.

A person was said to have droit droit, plurium June, and plurium possessions, when he had the freehold, the fee, and the property in him. Crabb, Hist.E.L. 406.

—Autre droit. The right of another.

DROITS CIVILS. This phrase in French law denotes private rights, the exercise of which is independent of the status (qualite) of citizen. Foreigners enjoy them; and the extent of that enjoyment is determined by the principle of reciprocity. Conversely, foreigners may be sued on contracts made by them in France. Brown.

DROIT—CLOSE. An ancient writ, directed to the lord of ancient demesne on behalf of those of his tenants who held their lands and tenements by charter in fee-simple, in fee-tail, for life, or in dower. Fitzh.Nat.Brev. 23.

DROIT COMMON. The common law. Lift. § 213; Co.Litt. 142a.

DROIT COUTUMIER. Common law.

DROIT D’ACCESSION. That property which is acquired by making a new species out of the material of another. It is equivalent to the Roman “specificatio.” This subject is treated of in the Code Civil de Napoleon, arts. 565, 577; Merlin, Repert. Accession; Malleville’s Discussion, art. 565.

DROIT D’ACCROISSEMENT. The right which an heir or legatee has of combining with his own interest in a succession the interest of a coheir or colligatee who either refuses to or cannot accept his interest. Houghton v. Brantingham, 86 Conn. 630, 86 A. 664, 667.

DROIT D’ACQUISITION. The right which an heir or legatee has of combining with his own interest in a succession the interest of a coheir or colligatee who either refuses to or cannot accept his interest. Houghton v. Brantingham, 86 Conn. 630, 86 A. 664, 667.

DROIT D’AUBAINE. A rule by which all the property of a deceased foreigner, whether movable or immovable, was confiscated to the use of the state, to the exclusion of his heirs, whether claiming ab intestato or under a will of the deceased. Finally abolished in 1819. Opel v. Shoup, 100 Iowa 407, 69 N.W. 560, 37 L.R.A. 583.

DROIT D’EXECUTION. The right of a stockbroker to sell the securities bought by him for account of a client, if the latter does not accept delivery thereof. The same expression is also applied to the sale by a stockbroker of securities deposited with him by his client, in order to guaranty the payment of operations for which the latter has given instructions. Arg.Fr.Merc.Law, 557.
DROIT

DROIT DE BRIS. A right formerly claimed by the lords of the roasts of certain parts of France, to shipwrecks, by which not only the property, but the persons of those who were cast away, were confiscated for the prince who was lord of the coast. Otherwise called "droit de bris sur le naufrage." This right prevailed chiefly in Bretagne, and was solemnly abrogated by Henry III. as duke of Normandy, Aquitaine, and Guienne, in a charter granted A. D. 1226, preserved among the rolls at Bordeaux.

DROIT DE DETRACTION. A tax upon the removal from one state or country to another of property acquired by succession or testamentary disposition; it does not cover a tax upon the successions or transfer of property. Moody v. Hagen, 162 N.W. 704, 708, 36 N.D. 471, L.R.A.1918F, 947, Ann.Cas.1918A, 933. Cf. Duties of Detraction.

DROIT DE GARDE. In French feudal law. Right of ward. The guardianship of the estate and person of a noble vassal, to which the king, during his minority, was entitled. Steph.Lect. 250.

DROIT DE GITE. In French feudal law. The duty incumbent on a roturier, holding lands within the royal domain, of supplying board and lodging to the king and to his suite while on a royal progress. Steph.Lect. 351.

DROIT DE GREFFE. In old French law. The right of selling various offices connected with the custody of judicial records or notarial acts. Steph.Lect. 354. A privilege of the French kings.

DROIT DE NAUFRAGE. The right of a seigneur, who owns the seashore, or the king, when a vessel is wrecked, to take possession of the wreck-age and to kill the crew or sell them as slaves. 14 Yale L.Jour. 129.

DROIT DE PRISE. In French feudal law. The duty (incumbent on a roturier) of supplying to the king on credit, during a certain period, such articles of domestic consumption as might be required for the royal household. Steph.Lect. 351.

DROIT DE QUINT. In French feudal law. A relief payable by a noble vassal to the king as his seigneur, on every change in the ownership of his fief. Steph.Lect. 350.

DROIT DE SUITE. The right of a creditor to pursue the debtor's property into the hands of third persons for the enforcement of his claim.

DROIT-DROIT. A double right; that is, the right of possession and the right of property. These two rights were, by the theory of our ancient law, distinct; and the above phrase was used to indicate the concurrence of both in one person, which concurrence was necessary to constitute a complete title to land. Mozley & Whitley.

DROIT ECRT. In French law. (The written law.) The Roman civil law, or Corpus Juris Civiliis. Steph.Lect. 130.

DROIT INTERNATIONAL. International law.

DROIT MARITIME. Maritime law.

DROITS OF ADMIRALT. Rights or perquisites of the admiralty. A term applied to goods found derelict at sea. Applied also to property captured in time of war by non-commissioned vessels of a belligerent nation. 1 Kent, Comm. 96; 2 Sel.Essays in Anglo-Amer.Leg.Hist. 318; 15 L.Q.R. 359; Marsden, Admiralty, Droits and Salvage; 1 W. Rob. 423. In England, it has been usual in maritime wars for the government to seize and condemn, as droits of admiralty, the property of an enemy found in her ports at the breaking out of hostilities. 1 C.Rob. 196; 13 Ves. 71; 1 Edw. 60; 3 Bos. & P. 191. The power to exercise such a right has not been delegated to, nor has it ever been claimed by, the United States government. Benefict, Adm. § 33; Brown v. U. S., 8 Cranch, 110, 3 L.Ed. 504.

DROITURAL. What belongs of right; relating to right; as real actions are either droitural or possessory,—droitural when the plaintiff seeks to recover the property. Finch, Law, 257.

DROMONES, DROMOS, DROMUNDA. These were at first high ships of great burden, but afterwards those which we now call "men-of-war." Jacob.

DROP. In English practice. When the members of a court are equally divided on the argument showing cause against a rule nisi, no order is made, i.e., the rule is neither discharged nor made absolute, and the rule is said to drop. In practice, there being a right to appeal, it has been usual to make an order in one way, the junior judge withdrawing his judgment. Wharton.

DROP-LETTER. A letter addressed for delivery in the same city or district in which it is posted.

DROP SHIPMENT DELIVERY. In mercantile usage, this phrase refers to ordinary freight unloaded from railroad cars;—distinguished from carload shipments, known as "track delivery shipments." Boshell v. Receivers of St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 200 Ala. 366, 76 So. 282, 284.

DROPPING GROUND. In the logging industry, a place on the bank of a stream to store sawlogs, railroad ties, staves, and the products of the forest, while waiting for a rise of the stream that will enable the owner to float his timbered products down the river to a market. Lexington & E. Ry. Co. v. Grigsby, 176 Ky. 727, 197 S.W. 408.

DROVE. A number of animals collected and driven together in a body; a flock or herd of cattle in process of being driven; indefinite as to number, but including at least several. McConville v. Jersey City, 39 N.J.Law, 43.

DROVE-ROAD. In Scotch law. A road for driving cattle. 7 Bell, App.Cas. 43, 53, 57. A drift-road. Lord Brougham, Id.

DROVE-STANCE. In Scotch law. A place adjoining a drove-road, for resting and refreshing sheep and cattle on their journey. 7 Bell, App.Cas. 53, 57.

DROVER’S PASS. A free pass given by a railroad company, accepting a drove of cattle for transportation, to the drver who accompanies and cares for the cattle on the train. Railway Co. v. Ivy, 71 Tex. 409, 9 S.W. 346, 1 L.R.A. 500, 10 Am.St.Rep. 758.

DROWN. To merge or sink. "In some cases a right of freehold shall drown in a chattel." Co. Litt. 266a, 321a.

DRU. A thicket of wood in a valley. Domesday.

DRUG STORE. A place where drugs are sold. Department of State v. Kroger Grocery & Baking Co., Ind.App., 40 N.E.2d 375, 378; Carroll Perfumers v. State, 212 Ind. 455, 7 N.E.2d 970, 972.

DRUGGIST. A dealer in drugs; one whose business is to sell drugs and medicines. In strict usage, this term is to be distinguished from "apothecary." A druggist deals in the uncompounded medicinal substances; the business of an apothecary is to mix and compound them. But in America the two words are used interchangeably, as the same persons usually discharge both functions. State v. Donaldson, 41 Minn. 74, 42 N.W. 781.

DRUGLESS PRACTITIONER. Any person who practises or holds himself out in any way as practicing the treatment of any ailment, disease, defect, or disability of the human body by manipulation, adjustment, manual or electrotherapy, or by any similar method. State v. Houck, Wash., 203 P.2d 693, 699.

DRUMMER. A term applied to commercial agents who travel for wholesale merchants and • supply the retail trade with goods or take orders for goods to be shipped to the retail dealer. Thomas v. Hot Springs, 34 Ark. 557, 36 Am.Rep. 24.

DRUNGARIUS. In old European law. The commander of a drungus, or band of soldiers. Applied also to a naval commander. Spelman.

DRUNGUS. In old European law. A band of soldiers. (globus militum.) Spelman.

DRUNK. A person is "drunk" when he is so far under the influence of liquor that his passions are visibly excited or his judgment impaired, or wren his brain is so far affected by potations of liquor that his intelligence, sense-perceptions, judgment, continuity of thought or of ideas, speech, and coordination of volition with muscular action (or some of these faculties or processes) are impaired or not under normal control. Wilson V. Inter-Ocean Casualty Co., 210 N.C. 585, 188 S.E. 102, 106. It is a synonym of intoxicated. Gault v. State, 42 Okl.Cr. 89, 274 P. 687, 688.

DRUNKARD. He is a drunkard whose habit it is to get drunk; whose ebriety has become habitual. The terms "drunkard" and "habitual drunkard" mean the same thing. Gourlay v. Gourlay, 16 R.I. 705, 19 A. 142. Pollon v. State, 218 Wis. 466, 261 N.W. 224, 225.

A "common" drunkard is defined by statute in some states as a person who has been convicted of drunkenness (or proved to have been drunk) a certain number of times within a limited period. State v. Flynn, 16 R.I. 10, 11 A. 170. Elsewhere the word "common" in this connection is understood as being equivalent to "habitual," Com. v. McNamee, 112 Mass. 286; or perhaps as synonymous with "public," Com. v. Whitney, 5 Gray, Mass., 86.

DRUNKENNESS. In medical jurisprudence. The condition of a man whose mind is affected by the immediate use of intoxicating drinks; the state of one who is "drunk." Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Johnson, 64 Okl. 222, 166 P. 1074, 1076. The effect produced upon the mind or body by drinking intoxicating liquors to such an extent that the normal condition of the subject is changed and his capacity for rational action and conduct is substantially lessened. Lecates v. Lecates, Del.Super., 190 A. 294, 296. See Drunk.

DRY, adj. In the vernacular, this term means desiccated or free from moisture; but, In legal use, it signifies formal or nominal, without imposing any duty or responsibility, or unfruitful, without bringing any profit or advantage.

DRY. n. Term used to designate a person who is opposed to allowing the sale of intoxicating liquors; a prohibitionist; in contradistinction to a "wet," or antiprohibitionist. State v. Shumaker, 200 Ind. 623, 157 N.E. 769, 778, 58 A.L.R. 954.

DRY DOCK. Watertight oasis, which allows examination and work on bottom of vessel after pumping out. Maryland Casualty Co. v. Law"son, DRY

C.C.A.Fla., 101 F.2d 732, 733. Whatever may have been the definition of a “dry dock” in the past, the definition must be enlarged to include modern facilities for repairing boats out of the water, as the meaning of the term, used in its common, ordinary sense, is a dry place to work in. Continental Casualty Co. v. Lawson, D.C.Fla., 2 F. Supp. 459, 460.

DRY EXCHANGE. In English law. A term formerly in use, said to have been invented for the purpose of disguising and covering usury; something being pretended to pass on both sides, whereas, in truth, nothing passed but on one side, in which respect it was called “dry.” Cowell; Blount.

DRY MORTGAGE. One which creates a lien on land for the payment of money, but does not impose any personal liability upon the mortgagor, collateral to or over and above the value of the premises. Frowenfeld v. Hastings, 134 Cal. 128, 66 P. 178.

DRY-MULTURES. In Scotch law. Corn paid to the owner of a mill, whether the payers grind or not.

DRY NATURAL GAS. Natural gas that does not contain an appreciable amount of readily condensible gasoline. When natural gas contains readily condensible gasoline it is called “wet natural gas.” Mussellem v. Magnolia Petroleum Co., 107 Oki. 183, 231 P. 526, 530.

DRY OIL. A petroleum liquid carrying in cohesion with it less than 3 per cent. by volume of water and sediment. Alamitos Land Co. v. Shell Oil Co., 3 Cal.2d 396, 44 P.2d 573, 575.

DRY RECEIVERSHIP. Receivership wherein there is no equity to be administered for general creditors, even if action is in statutory form. Maxwell Lumber Co. v. Connelly, 34 N.M. 562, 287 P. 64, 67.

DRY RENT. Rent seck; a rent reserved without a clause of distress.

DRY TRUST. A passive trust; one which requires no action on the part of the trustee beyond turning over money or property to the cestui que trust. Trautz v. Lemp, 329 Mo. 580, 46 S.W.2d 135, 142.

DRY WEIGHT. In tariff laws, this term does not mean the weight of an article after desiccation in a kiln, but its air-dry weight as understood in commerce. U. S. v. Perkins, 66 F. 50, 13 C.C.A. 324.

DUAL BUSINESS. Must show units of substantial separateness and completeness, such as might be maintained as an independent business and capable of producing profit in and of themselves. Maxwell v. Kent-Coffey Mfg. Co., 204 N.C. 365, 168 S.E. 397, 399, 90 A.L.R. 476.

DUARCHY. A form of government where two reign jointly.

DUAS UXORES EOUEM TEMPORE HABERE NON LICET. It is not lawful to have two wives at the same time. Inst. 1, 10, 6; 1 Bl.Comm. 436.

DUBITANS. Doubting. Dobbin, J., dubitans. 1 Show. 364.

DUBITATE. Doubting. Is affixed to the name of a judge, in the reports, to signify that he doubted the decision rendered.

DUBITATUR. It is doubted. A word frequently used in the reports to indicate that a point is considered doubtful.

DUCAT. A foreign coin, varying in value in different countries, but usually worth about $2.26 of our money.

DUCATUS. In feudal and old English law. A duchy, the dignity or territory of a duke.

DUCES TECUM. (Lat. Bring with you.) The name of certain species of %Writs, of which the subpoena ducum tecum is the most usual, requiring a party who is summoned to appear in court to bring with him some document, piece of evidence, or other thing to be used or inspected by the court.

DUCES TECUM LICET Languidus. (Bring with you, although sick.) In practice. An ancient writ, now obsolete, directed to the sheriff, upon a return that he could not bring his prisoner without danger of death, he being adeo languidus, (so sick;) whereupon the court granted a habeas corpus in the nature of a ducum tecum licet languidus. Cowell; Blount.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER. Those lands which formerly belonged to the dukes of Lancaster, and now belong to the crown in right of the duchy. The duchy is distinct from the county palatine of Lancaster, and includes not only the county, but also much territory at a distance from it, especially the Savoy in London and some land near Westminster. 3 Bl.Comm. 78.

DUCHY COURT OF LANCASTER. A tribunal of special jurisdiction, held before the chancellor of the duchy, or his deputy, concerning all matters of equity relating to lands helden of the crown in right of the duchy of Lancaster; which is a thing very distinct from the county palatine, (which has also its separate chancery, for sealing of writs, and the like,) and comprises much territory which lies at a vast distance from it; as particularly a very large district surrounded by the city of Westminster. The proceedings in this court are the same as were those on the equity side of the court of chancery, so that it seems not to be a court of record; and, indeed, it has been held that the court of chancery has a concurrent jurisdiction with the duchy court, and may take cognizance of the same cases. Jud.Act 1873, § 18; 3 Bl.Comm. 78.

DUCROIRE. In French law. Guaranty; equivalent to del credere, (which see.)

DUE. Just; proper; regular; lawful; sufficient; remaining unpaid; reasonable; as in the phrases "due care," "due process of law," "due notice."

Owing; payable; justly owed. That which one contracts to pay or perform to another; that which law or justice requires to be paid or done.

Owed, or owing, as distinguished from payable. A debt is often said to be due from a person where he is the party owing it, or primarily bound to pay, whether the time for payment has or has not arrived. The same thing is true of the phrase "due and owing."

Payable. A bill or note is commonly said to be due when the time for payment of it has arrived.

Final is not synonymous with due. Twine v. Locke, D.C.N.Y., 3 F.Supp. 1012, 1013.

The word "due" always imports a fixed and settled obligation or liability, but with reference to its payment there is considerable ambiguity in the use of the term, as will appear from the foregoing definitions, the precise signification being determined in each case from the context. It may mean that the debt or claim in question is now (presently or immediately) matured and enforceable, or that it matured at some time in the past and yet remains unsatisfied, or that it is fixed and certain but the day appointed for its payment has not yet arrived. But commonly, and in the absence of any qualifying expressions, the word "due" is restricted to the first of these meanings, the second being expressed by the term "overdue," and the third by the word "payable." See Feeser v. Feeser, 93 Md. 716, 50 A. 406.

DUE AND PROPER CARE. That degree of care which is required of one for prevention of the accident. Ogders v. Clark, Del.Super., 19 A.2d 724, 726, 2 Terry 232.

DUE CARE. Just, proper, and sufficient care, so far as the circumstances demand it; the absence of negligence. That care which an ordinarily prudent person would have exercised under the circumstances. "Due care" is care proportioned to any given situation, its surroundings, peculiarities, and hazards. It may and often does require extraordinary care. Tower v. Camp, 103 Conn. 41, 130 A. 86, 89. "Due care," "reasonable care," and "ordinary care" are convertible terms. Corthell v. Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., 291 Mass. 242, 196 N.E. 850, 851; Sweeney v. Blue Anchor Beverage Co., 325 Pa. 216, 189 A. 231, 234.

This term, as usually understood in cases where the gist of the action is the defendant's negligence, implies not only that a party has not been negligent or careless, but that he has been guilty of no violation of law in relation to the subject-matter or transaction which constitutes the cause of action.

DUE CONSIDERATION. To give such weight or significance to a particular factor as under the circumstances it seems to merit, and this involves discretion. United States ex rel. Maine Potato Growers & Shippers Ass'n v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 88 F.2d 780, 783, 66 App.D.C. 398.

DUE COMPENSATION. For condemned land is the value of land taken and the damages, if any, which result to him as a consequence of the taking without considering either general benefits or injuries. Mississippi State Highway Commission v. Hillman, 189 Misc. 850, 198 So. 565, 569.

DUE COURSE HOLDER. See "Holder in Due Course."

DUE COURSE OF LAW. This phrase is synonymous with "due process of law," or "the law of the land," and the general definition thereof is "law in its regular course of administration through courts of justice;" and, while not always necessarily confined to judicial proceedings, yet these words have such a signification, when used to designate the kind of an eviction, or ouster, from real estate by which a party is dispossessed, as to preclude thereunder proof of a constructive eviction resulting from the purchase of a paramount title when hostilely asserted by the party holding it. Direct Plumbing Supply Co. v. City of Dayton, 138 Ohio St. 540, 38 N.E.2d 70, 72, 137 A.L.R. 1058.

DUE DATE. Time appointed or required for filing a tax return and, in the event of an extension of time to file return, is the date to which period for filing is extended. Langer v. Gray, N.D., 15 N.W.2d 732, 735. Under federal Revenue Act, "due date," is the date fixed for payment of tax, or several installments thereof. American Exchange Irving Trust Co. v. U. S., Ct.C1., 52 F.2d 1027, 1028.

Within Texas inheritance tax law due date is not date of assessment, but last day on which taxes could be paid without incurring penalty. Half v. U. S., Ct.C1., 5 F.Supp. 132, 135.

DUE DILIGENCE. See Diligence.

DUE INFLUENCE. Influence obtained by persuasion and argument or by appeals to the affections. In re Chamberlain’s Estate, Cal.App., 109 P.2d 449, 452.

DUE NOTICE. No fixed rule can be established as to what shall constitute "due notice." "Due" is a relative term, and must be applied to each case in the exercise of the discretion of the court in view of the particular circumstances. Slattery v. Doyle, 61 N.E. 264, 180 Mass. 27; Shellenberger v. Warburton, 124 A. 189, 190, 279 Pa. 577; Carson v. Kalisch, 99 A. 199, 202, 89 N.J.Law, 458; Franklin Brass Foundry Co. v. Shapiro & Aronson, C.C.A.Pa., 278 F. 435, 436; City of Sebree v. Powell, 298 S.W. 1103, 1104, 221 Ky. 478.
DUE

DUE PROCESS OF LAW. Law in its regular course of administration through courts of justice. 3 Story, Const. 264, 661. "Due process of law in each particular case means such an exercise of the powers of the government as the settled maxims of law permit and sanction, and under such safeguards for the protection of individual rights as those maxims prescribe for the class of cases to which the one in question belongs." Cooley, Const. Lim. 441. Whatever difficulty may be experienced in giving to those terms a definition which will embrace every permissible exertion of power affecting private rights, and exclude such as is forbidden, there can be no doubt of their meaning when applied to judicial proceedings. They then mean a course of legal proceedings according to those rules and principles which have been established in our systems of jurisprudence for the enforcement and protection of private rights. To give such proceedings any validity, there must be a tribunal competent by its constitution—that is, by the law of its creation—to pass upon the subject-matter of the suit; and, if that involves merely a determination of the personal liability of the defendant, he must be brought within its jurisdiction by service of process within the state, or his voluntary appearance. Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U.S. 733, 24 L.Ed. 565. Due process of law implies the right of the person affected thereby to be present before the tribunal which pronounces judgment upon the question of life, liberty, or property, in its most comprehensive sense; to be heard, by testimony or otherwise, and to have the right of controverting, by proof, every material fact which bears on the question of right in the matter involved. If any question of fact or liability be conclusively presumed against him, this is not due process of law. Zeigler v. Railroad Co., 58 Ala. 599. These phrases in the constitution do not mean the general body of the law, common and statute, as it was at the time the constitution took effect; for that would seem to deny the right of the legislature to amend or repeal the law. Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U.S. 733, 24 L.Ed. 565. Due process of law means a law which hears before it condemns, which provides adequate evidence. Lando v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of U.S., D.C.Cal., 11 F.Supp. 729, 732.

DUE REGARD. Consideration in a degree appropriate to demands of the particular case. Willis v. Jonson, 279 Ky. 416, 130 S.W.2d 828, 832.

DUE TO. Expressions "sustained by," "due to," "resulting from," "sustained by means of," "sustained in consequence 4" and "sustained through" have been held to be synonymous. Federal Life Ins. Co. v. White, Tex., 23 S.W.2d 832, 834. Also, synonymous with "caused by." American Stores Co. v. Herman, 166 Md. 312, 171 A. 54, 58.

DUE-BILL. A brief written acknowledgment of a debt. It is not made payable to order, like a promissory note. See Feeser v. Feeser, 93 Md. 716, 50 Atl. 406; Lee v. Balcom, 9 Colo. 216, 11 Pac. 74. See I. 0. U.

DUEL. A duel is any combat with deadly weapons, fought between two or more persons, by previous agreement or upon a previous quarrel. Baker v. Supreme Lodge K. P., 103 Miss. 374, 60 So. 333, Ann.Cas.1915B, 547.

DUELLING. The fighting of two persons, one against the other, at an appointed time and place, upon a precedent quarrel. It differs from an affray in this, that the latter occurs on a sudden quarrel, while the former is always the result of design.

DUELLUM. The trial by battel or judicial combat. See Battel.

And covers only fixed and definite charges applicable to all club members. Hardt v. McLaughlin, D.C.Pa., 25 F.Supp. 684, 685.

DUKE, in English law, is a title of nobility, ranking immediately next to the Prince of Wales. It is only a title of dignity. Conferring it does not give any domain, territory, or jurisdiction over the place whence the title is taken. Duchess, the consort of a duke. Wharton.

DUKE OF EXETER’S DAUGHTER. The name of a rack in the Tower, so called after a minister of Henry VI, who sought to introduce it into England.

DUKE OF YORK’S LAWS. A body of laws compiled in 1665 for the government of the colony of New York.

DULOCRACY. A government where servants and slaves have so much license and privilege that they dominate. Wharton.

DUALLY QUALIFIED. Being “duly qualified” to fill an office, in the constitutional sense and in the ordinary acceptance of the words, means that the officer shall possess every qualification; that he shall in all respects comply with every requisite before entering on duties of the office; that, in addition to being elected by the qualified electors, he shall be commissioned by the governor, give bond as required by law; and that he shall be bound by oath or affirmation to support the Constitution of the commonwealth, and to perform the duties of the office with fidelity. Commonwealth v. Lomas, 302 Pa. 97, 153 A. 124, 126, 74 A.L.R. 481; State ex rel. Landis v. Bird, 120 Fla. 780, 163 So. 248.

DUM. Lat. While; as long as; until; upon condition that; provided that.

DUM BENE SE GESSERIT. While he shall conduct himself well; during good behavior. Expressive of a tenure of office not dependent upon the pleasure of the appointing power, nor for a limited period, but terminable only upon the death or misconduct of the incumbent.

DUM FERVET OPUS. While the work glows; in the heat of action. 1 Kent, Comm. 120.

DUM FUIT IN PRISONA. In English law. A writ which lay for a man who had aliened lands under duress by imprisonment, to restore to him his proper estates. 2 Inst. 482. Abolished by St. 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 27.

DUM FUIT INFRA ETATEM. (While he was within age.) In old English practice. A writ of entry which formerly lay for an infant after he had attained his full age, to recover lands which he had aliened in fee, in tail, or for life, during his infancy; and, after his death, his heir had the same remedy. Reg.Orig. 228b; Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 192, G; Litt. § 406; Co.Litt. 247b.

DUM NON FUIT COMPOS MENTIS. The name of a writ which the heirs of a person who was non compos mentis, and who aliened his lands, might have sued out to restore him to his rights. Abolished by 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 27.

DUMB. One who cannot speak; a person who is mute.

DUMB-BIDDING. In sales at auction, when the minimum amount which the owner will take for the article is written on a piece of paper, and placed by the owner under a candlestick, or other thing, and it is agreed that no bidding shall avail unless equal to that, this is called “dumb-bidding.” Bab. Auct. 44.

DUMMODO. Provided; provided that. A word of limitation in the Latin forms of conveyances, of frequent use in introducing a reservation; as in reserving a rent.

DUMMY DIRECTOR. One to whom (usually) a single share of stock in a corporation is transferred for the purpose of qualifying him as a director of the corporation, in which he has no real or active interest. Ashby v. Peters, 128 Neb. 338, 258 N.W. 639, 99 A.L.R. 843. One who is a mere figurehead and in effect discharges no duties. Golden Rod Mining Co. v. Bukvich, 108 Mont. 569, 92 P.2d 316, 319.

DUMP. To put or throw down with more or less violence; to unload. Baney v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 116 Neb. 615, 218 N.W. 424, 428. To drop down; to deposit something in a heap or unshapely mass. Lambert v. City of Port Arthur, Tex., 22 S.W.2d 320, 321.

DUMP CARS. A cart or car having a body that can be tilted or a bottom opening downwards for emptying. Baney v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 116 Neb. 615, 218 N.W. 424, 428.

DUMPING. In commercial usage, the act of selling in quantity at a very low price or practically regardless of the price; also, selling (surplus goods) abroad at less than the market price at home. Webster, Dict. The act of forcing a product such as cotton on the market during the short gathering season. Arkansas Cotton Growers' Co-op. Ass'n v. Brown, 270 S.W. 946, 953, 168 Ark. 504.

DUMPING BOARD. An elevated structure of timber, which, in part overlaps the water, to enable a scow to go under it for the purpose of taking off a load. Healey v. Moran Towing & Transportation Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 253 F. 334, 337.

DUN. One who duns or urges for payment; a troublesome creditor. A demand for payment whether oral or written. Stand. Dict.

DUNA. In old records. A bank of earth cast up; the side of a ditch. Cowell.

DUNGEON. Such an underground prison or cell as was formerly placed in the strongest part of a fortress; a dark or subterraneous prison.

DUNIO. A double; a kind of base coin less than a farthing.

DUNNAGE. Pieces of wood placed against the sides and bottom of the hold of a vessel, to preserve the cargo from the effect of leakage, according to its nature and quality. Abb.Shipp. 227.

There is considerable resemblance between dunnage and ballast. The latter is used for trimming the ship, and bringing it down to a draft of water proper, and safe for sailing. Dunnage is placed under the cargo to keep it from being wetted by water getting into the hold, or between the different parcels to keep them from bruising and injuring each other. Great Western Ins. Co. v. Thwing, 13 Wall. 674, 20 L.Ed. 607; Richards v. Hansen, C.C.Mass., 1 F. 56.

"Dunnage" belongs to the category of crating and boxing employed to protect more valuable ar-titles in shipment, the weight of which, unless some provision to the contrary appears in a tariff classification, naturally takes the rate applicable to the contents. "Dunnage" used in blocking and securing automobiles was held subject to the automobile rate and not to the lumber rate, under tariff classification providing charges shall be computed on gross weights. Butler Motor Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co., C.C.A.Mo., 272 F. 683, 684.

DUNSETS. People that dwell on hilly places or mountains. Jacob.

DUO NON POSSUNT IN SOLIDO UNAM REM POSSIDERERE. Two cannot possess one thing in entirety. Co.Litt. 368.

DUO SUNT INSTRUMENTA AD OMNES RES AUT CONFIRMANDAS AUT IMPUGNANDAS, RATIO ET AUTHORITAS. There are two instruments for confirming or impugning all things,—reason and authority. 8 Coke, 16.

DUODECEMVIRALE JUDICIUM. The trial by twelve men, or by jury. Applied to juries de meditata linguce. Mol. de Jure Mar. 448.

DUODECIMA MANUS. Twelve hands. The oaths of twelve men, including himself, by whom the defendant was allowed to make his law. 3 Bl. Comm. 343.

DUODENA MANU. A dozen hands, is e., twelve witnesses to purge a criminal of an offense.

DUORUM IN SOLIDUM DOMINIUM VEL POSSESSIO ESSE NON POTEST. Ownership or possession in entirety cannot be in two persons of the same thing. Dig. 13, 6, 5, 15; Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 245. Bract. fol. 28b.

DUPLA. In the civil law. Double the price of a thing. Dig. 21, 2, 2.

DUPLEX HOUSE. A house which has accommodations for two families on two or more floors, without regard to whether such accommodations are identical or not. Donnelly v. Spitza, 246 Mich. 284, 224 N.W. 396, 397.

DUPLEX QUERELA. A double complaint. An ecclesiastical proceeding, which is in the nature of an appeal. Phillim.Ecc.Law, 440. See Double Complaint.

DULPEX VALOR MARITAGII. In old English law. Double the value of the marriage. While an infant was in ward, the guardian had the power of tendering him or her a suitable match, without disparagement, which if the infants refused, they forfeited the value of the marriage to their guardian, that is, so much as a jury would assess.
or any one would give to the guardian for such an alliance; and, if the infants married themselves without the guardian’s consent, they forfeited double the value of the marriage. 2 Bl.Comm. 70; Litt. § 110; Co.Litt. 82b.

DUPLICATE, v. To double, repeat, make, or add a thing exactly like a preceding one; reproduce exactly. State v. Ogden, 20 N.M. 636, 151 P. 758, 760.

DUPLICATE, n. When two written documents are substantially alike, so that each might be a copy or transcript from the other, while both stand on the same footing as original instruments, they are called “duplicates.” Agreements, deeds, and other documents are frequently executed in duplicate, in order that each party may have an original in his possession. Lorch v. Page, 97 Conn. 66, 115 A. 681, 682, 24 A.L.R. 1204.

A duplicate is sometimes defined to be the “copy” of a thing; but, though generally a copy, a duplicate differs from a mere copy, in having all the validity of an original. Nor, it seems need it be an exact copy. Defined also to be the “counterpart” of an instrument; but in indentures there is a distinction between counterparts executed by the several parties respectively, each party affixing his or her seal to only one counterpart, and duplicate originals, each executed by all the parties. Maston v. Glen Lumber Co., 65 Okl. 80, 163 P. 128, 129. The old indentures, charters, or chirographs seem to have had the character of duplicates. Burill.

That which exactly resembles or corresponds to something else; another, correspondent to the first; hence, a copy; transcript; counterpart; an original instrument repeated; a document the same as another in essential particulars; differing from a copy as being valid as an original. Baker v. Sovereign Camp, W. 0. W., Mo.App., 593.

The term is also frequently used to signify a new original, made to take the place of an instrument that has been lost or destroyed, and to have the same force and effect. Benton v. Martin, 40 N.Y. 347.

In English law. The certificate of discharge given to an insolvent debtor who takes the benefit of the act for the relief of insolvent debtors. The ticket given by a pawnbroker to the pawn-er of a chattel.

DUPLICATE TAXATION. The same as “double taxation.” See that title.

DUPLICATE WILL. A term used in England, where a testator executes two copies of his will, one to keep himself, and the other to be deposited with another person. Upon application for probate of a duplicate will, both copies must be deposited in the registry of the court of probate.

DUPLICATIO. In the civil law. The defendant’s answer to the plaintiff’s replication; corresponding to the rejoinder of the common law.

DUPLICATIONEM POSSIBILITATIS LEX NON PATITUR. The law does not allow the doubling of a possibility. 1 Rolle, 321.

DUPLICATUM JUS. Double right. Bract. fol. 283b. See Droit-Droit.

DUPLICITY. The technical fault, in pleading, of uniting two or more causes of action in one count in a writ, or two or more grounds of defense in one plea, or two or more breaches in a replication, or two or more offenses in the same count of an indictment, or two or more incongruous subjects in one legislative act, or two or more controverted ultimate issues submitted in a single special issue. Empire Oil & Gas Corporation v. U. S., C.C.A.Cal., 136 F.2d 868, 872; People v. Link, 365 Ill. 266, 6 N.E.2d 201, 207; Clay Drilling Co. v. Furman, Tex.Civ.App., 150 S.W.2d 869, 871; Hartley v. Hartley, 198 Ga. 294, 31 S.E.2d 655.

DUPLY, n. (From Lat. duplicatio, q. v.) In Scotch pleading. The defendant’s answer to the plaintiff’s replication.

DUPLY, v. In Scotch pleading. To rejoin. “It is duplyed by the panel.” 3 State Trials, 471.

DURABLE LEASES. Leases reserving a rent payable annually, with right of re-entry for nonpayment of the same, and for the term “as long as grass grows or water runs,” or equivalent terms. University of Vermont and State Agr. College v. Ward, Vt., 158 A. 773, 778.

DURANTE ABSENTIA. During absence. In some jurisdictions, administration of a decedent’s estate is said to be granted durante absentia in cases where the absence of the proper proponents of the will, or of an executor, delays or imperils the settlement of the estate.

DURANTE BENE PLACITO. During good pleasure. The ancient tenure of English judges was durante bene placito. 1 Bl.Comm. 267, 342.

DURANTE MINORE IETATE. During minority. 2 Bl.Comm. 503; 5 Coke, 29, 30. Words taken from the old form of letters of administration. 5 Coke, ubi supra.

DURANTE VIRGINITATE. During virginity, (so long as she remains unmarried.)

DURANTE VITA. During life.

DURBAR. In India. A court, audience, or levee.

DURESS OF IMPRISONMENT. The wrongful legal imprisonment used for an illegal purpose, by threats, or restraint exercised upon the person entitled to it, and requires some act as a condition for its surrender, the act is "duress of imprisonment," where the person is deprived of his liberty in order to force him to compliance, or by violence, beating, or other actual injury, or duress per minas, consisting in threats of imprisonment or great physical injury or death. Duress may also include the same injuries, threats, or restraint exercised upon the man's wife, child, or parent. Coughlin v. City of Milwaukee, 227 Wis. 357, 279 N.W. 62, 67, 119 A. L.R. 990; Radich v. Hutchins, 95 U.S. 213, 24 L. Ed. 409.

Duress consists in any illegal imprisonment, or legal imprisonment used for an illegal purpose, or threats of bodily or other harm, or other means amounting to or tending to coerce the will of another, and actually inducing him to do an act contrary to his free will. Heider v. Unicume, 142 Or. 410, 20 P.2d 384, 385; Shlensky v. Shlensky, 369 Ill. 179, 15 N.E.2d 694, 698. And it is never "duress" to threaten to do that which a party has a legal right to do. Doernbecher v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. of New York, 16 Wash.2d 64, 132 P.2d 751, 755, 756; Miller v. Walden, 53 Cal.App.2d 353, 127 P.2d 952, 956, 957. Such as, instituting or threatening to institute civil actions. Standard Radio Corporation v. Triangle Radio Tubes, 125 N.J.L. 131, 14 A.2d 763, 765; Shipman v. Moseley, 319 Ill.App. 443, 49 N.E.2d 662, 666.

DURESS OF GOODS. Where the act consists of a tortious seizure or detention of property from the person entitled to it, and requires some act as a condition for its surrender, the act is "duress of goods". Sistrom v. Anderson, 51 Cal.App.2d 213, 124 P.2d 372, 376.

DURESS OF IMPRISONMENT. The wrongful imprisonment of a person, or the illegal restraint of his liberty, in order to compel him to do some act. 1 Bl.Comm. 130, 131, 136, 137; 1 Steph.Comm. 137; 2 Kent, Comm. 453.

DURESS PER MINAS. Duress by threats. The use of threats and menaces to compel a person, by the fear of death, or grievous bodily harm, as mayhem or loss of limb, to do some lawful act, or to commit a misdemeanor. 1 Bl.Comm. 130; 4 Bl.Comm. 30; 4 Steph.Comm. 83; In re Nightingale's Estate, 182 S.C. 527, 189 S.E. 890, 898. See Metus.

DURESSOR. One who subjects another to duress; one who compels another to do a thing, as by menace. Bac.Max. 90, reg. 22.

DURHAM. A county palatine in England, the jurisdiction of which was vested in the Bishop of Durham until the statute 6 & 7 Wm. IV. c. 19, vested it as a separate franchise and royalty in the crown. The jurisdiction of the Durham court of pleas was transferred to the supreme court of judicature by the judicature act of 1873.

DURHAM RULE. The irresistible impulse test of criminal responsibility. The rule states that when there is some evidence that the accused suffered from a diseased or defective mental condition at the time the unlawful act was committed the accused is not criminally responsible if it is found beyond a reasonable doubt that the act was the product of such mental abnormality. Durham v. United States, C.A.D.C., 214 F.2d 862, 875.

DURING. Throughout the course of; throughout the continuance of; in the time of; after the commencement and before the expiration of. Continental Bank & Trust Co. of N. Y. v. Chemical Bank & Trust Co., 51 N.Y.S.2d 903, 909:

During GOOD BEHAVIOR. While defendant whose sentence had been suspended, was obedient to the state law. State v. Hardin, 183 N.C. 815, 112 S.E. 593, 595.

DURSLEY. In old. English law. Blows without wounding or bloodshed; dry blows. Blount.

DUSTUCK. A term used in Hindostan for a pass-port, permit, or order from the English East Indian Company. It generally meant a permit under their seal exempting goods from the payment of duties. Enc.Lond.

DUTCH AUCTION. See Auction. 594
DUTCH LOTTERY. Also known as the "class lottery." As distinguished from the "Genoese lottery" (q. v.), it is a scheme in which the number and value of the prizes are regularly estimated, all the ticket holders are interested in once in the play, and chance determines whether a prize or a blank falls to a given number. Fleming v. Bills, 3 Or. 286.

DUTCH NET. A kind of fishing net commonly known as a "pound net" (q. v.).

DUTIES. In its most usual signification this word is the synonym of imposts or duties; but it is sometimes used in a broader sense, as including all manner of taxes, charges, or governmental impositions. Cooley v. Board of Wardens, 12 How. 299, 13 L.Ed. 996.

DUTIES ON IMPORTS. This term signifies not merely a duty on the act of importation, but a duty on the thing imported. It is not confined to a duty levied while the article is entering the country, but extends to a duty levied after it has entered the country. Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 437, 6 L.Ed. 678.

DUTY. A human action which is exactly conformable to the laws which require us to obey them. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Filson, 35 Oki. 89, 91, 128 P. 298.

The words, "it shall be the duty," in ordinary legislation, imply the assertion of the power to command and to coerce obedience. Kentucky v. Dennison, 24 How. 66, 107, 16 L.Ed. 717.

In its usage in jurisprudence, this word is the correlative of right. Thus, wherever there exists a right in any person, there also rests a corresponding duty upon some other person or upon all persons generally. But it is also used, in a wider sense, to designate that class of moral obligations which lie outside the jural sphere; such, namely, as rest upon an imperative ethical basis, but have not been recognized by the law as within its proper province for purposes of enforcement or redress. Thus, gratitude towards a benefactor is a duty, but its refusal will not ground an action. In this meaning "duty" is the equivalent of "moral obligation," as distinguished from a "legal obligation." Harrison v. Bush, 5 El. & Bl. 349.

Duty is considered by some modern ethicists to be the fundamental conception of ethics and to be subject to intuitive knowledge; by others it is conceived as that which is ethically valid because sanctioned by law, society, or religion. Webster, Dict.

As a technical term of the law, "duty" signifies a thing due; that which is due from a person; that which a person owes to another. An obligation to do a thing. A word of more extensive signification than "debt," although both are expressed by the same Latin word "debitum." Bankers' Deposit Guaranty & Surety Co. v. Barnes, 81 Kan. 422, 105 P. 697, 698. Sometimes, however, the term is used synonymously with debt. Fox v. Hills, 1 Conn. 295, 303.

But in practice it is commonly reserved as the designation of those obligations of performance, care, or observance which rest upon a person in an official or fiduciary capacity; as the duty of an executor, trustee, manager, etc. Goodwine v. Vermilion County, 271 Ill. 126, 110 N.E. 890, 892.

It also denotes a tax or impost due to the government upon the importation or exportation of goods.

Judicial Duty. See Judicial.

Legal Duty. See Legal Duty.

DUTY OF TONNAGE. A charge upon a vessel as an instrument of commerce for entering, lying in or leaving a port, and includes all taxes and duties, regardless of name or form. In re Los Angeles Lumber Products Co., D.C.Cal., 45 F.Supp. 77, 81; Marine Lighterage Corporation v. Luckenbach S. S. Co., 139 Misc. 612, 248 N.Y.S. 71, 72.

DUTY OF WATER. Such a quantity of water necessary when economically conducted and applied to land without unnecessary loss as will result in the successful growing of crops. Enterprise Irr. Dist. v. Willis, 135 Neb. 827, 284 N.W. 326, 329.

DUUMVIRI. (From duo, two, and viri, men.) A general appellation among the ancient Romans, given to any magistrates elected in pairs to fill any office, or perform any function. Brande.

Duumviri municipales were two annual magistrates in the towns and colonies, having judicial powers. Calvin.

Duumviri navales were officers appointed to man, equip, and refit the navy. Calvin.

DUX. A military governor of a province. See Cod. 1, 27, 2. A military officer having charge of the borders or frontiers of the empire, called "dux limitis." Cod. 1, 49, 1, pr. At this period, the word began to be used as a title of honor or dignity.

In Roman law. A leader or military commander. The commander of an army. Dig. 3, 2, 2, pr.

In feudal and old European law. Duke; a title of honor, or order of nobility. 1 Bl.Comm. 397; Crabb, Eng.Law, 236.

To delay, to pause or linger, to abide as a permanent residence or for a time; to live in a place, to have one's residence or domicile, to reside. It is synonymous with inhabit, live, sojourn, stay, rest. MacLeod v. Stelle, 43 Idaho, 64, 249 P. 254, 256.

DWELLING HOUSE. The house in which a man lives with his family; a residence; abode; habitation; the apartment or building, or group of buildings, occupied by a family as a place of residence.

"Dwelling house" is a very flexible term. Its meaning depends not only on context, but on the determination of the courts not to permit public policy or justice to be defeated by a word. "Dwelling house" often means any building within the curtilage. Daniels v. Commonwealth, 172 Va. 583, 1 S.E.2d 333, 335. It may mean a single house used by one family exclusively as a home. It may include an apartment building, or any structure used by human beings, partly for business and partly for residential purposes, or a building regardless of habitation. Gerstell v. Knight, 345 Pa. 83, 26 A.2d 329, 330.

In conveyancing. Includes all buildings attached to or connected with the house. 2 Hil.Real Prop. 338, and note. In the law of burglary. A house in which the occupier and his family usually reside, or, in other words, dwell and lie in. Whart. Crim.Law, 357. Temporary absence will not destroy character as "dwelling house." Haynes v. State, 180 Miss. 291, 177 So. 360; State v. Bair, 112 W.Va. 655, 166 S.E. 369, 370, 85 A.L.R. 424.

Private Dwelling

Within a restrictive covenant, a place or house in which a person or family lives in an individual or private state, the covenant being violated by the conversion of a house theretofore used as a residence for a single family into a residence for two families, even though the outward appearance of the house was not materially affected. Paine v. Bergrose Development Corp., 198 N.Y.S. 311, 312, 119 Misc. 796. The distinction between a boarding house and a "private dwelling house" is whether the house is occupied as a home for the occupant and his wife and child, or whether he occupied it as a place for carrying on the business of keeping boarders, although while prosecuting the business and as a means of prosecuting it, he and his wife and children live in the house also. Trainor v. Le Beck, 101 N.J.Eq. 823, 139 A. 16, 17.

DWELLING-PLACE, or home, is some permanent abode or residence, in which one has the intention of remaining; it is not synonymous with "domicile," as used in international law, but has a more limited and restricted meaning. Nor is it synonymous with a "place of pauper settlement." Lisbon v. Lyman, 49 N.H. 553.

DYED HANGING PAPER. See Hanging Paper.

DYING DECLARATION. See Declaration.

DYING WITHOUT ISSUE. At common law this phrase imports an indefinite failure of issue, and not a dying without issue surviving at the time of the death of the first taker. But this rule has been changed in some of the states, by statute or decisions, and in England by St. 7 Wm. IV, and 1 Vict. c. 26, § 29.

The words "die without issue," and "die without leaving issue," in a devise of real estate, import an indefinite failure of issue, and not the failure of issue at the death of the first taker. And no distinction is to be made between the words "without issue" and "without leaving issue." Harwell v. Harwell, 151 Tenn. 587, 271 S.W. 353, 355.

In Connecticut and other states it has been repeatedly held that the expression "dying without issue," and like expressions, have reference to the time of the death of the party, and not to an indefinite failure of issue. Phelps v. Phelps, 55 Conn. 359, 11 A. 596; Briggs v. Hopkins, 103 Ohio St. 321, 132 N.E. 843.

Dying without children imports not a failure of issue at any indefinite future period, but a leaving no children at the death of the legatee. Condit v. King, 13 N.J.Eq. 375. The law favors vesting of estates, and limitation such as "dying without issue," refers to a definite period, fixed in will, rather than to an indefinite failure of issue. Howard v. Howard's Trustee, 212 Ky. 847, 280 S.W. 156, 157. Where context is such as to show clearly that testator intended the phrase "die without issue" to mean that, if first taker die without issue during life of testator, the second taker shall stand in his place and prevent a lapse, the words "die without issue" are taken to mean death during life of testator. Martin v. Raff, 114 Ind.App. 507, 52 N.E.2d 839, 845.

DYKE-REED, or DYKE-REEVE. An officer who has the care and oversight of the dykes and drains in fenny counties.

DYSpareunia. In medical jurisprudence. Incapacity of a woman to sustain the act of sexual intercourse except with great difficulty and pain; anaphrodisia (which see).

Dyspepsia. A state of the stomach in which its functions are disturbed, without the presence of other diseases, or when, if other diseases are present, they are of minor importance. Dungl.Med. Dict.

DYVOUR. In Scotch law. A bankrupt.

DYVOUR'S HABIT. In Scotch law. A habit which debtors who are set free on a cessio bonorum are obliged to wear, unless in the summons and process of cessio it be libeled, sustained, and proved that the bankruptcy proceeds from misfortune. And bankrupts are condemned to submit to the habit, even where no suspicion of fraud lies against them, if they have been dealers in an illicit trade. Ersk.Prin. 4, 3, 13.
E. As an abbreviation, this letter may stand for "Exchequer," "English," "Edward," "Equity," "East," "Eastern," "Easter," or "Ecclesiastical." A Latin preposition, meaning from, out of, after, or according. It occurs in many Latin phrases; but (in this form) only before a consonant.

E. G. An abbreviation of exempli gratia. For the sake of an example.

E. CONTRA. From the opposite; on the contrary.

E. CONVERSO. Conversely. On the other hand; on the contrary. Equivalent to e contra.

EA. Sax. The water or river; also the mouth of a river on the shore between high and low water-mark.

EA EST ACCIPienda INTERPRETATIO, QUIE VITIO CARET. That interpretation is to be received [or adopted] which is free from fault [or wrong.] The law will not intend a wrong. Bac. Max. 17, (in reg. 3.)

EA INTENTIONE. With that intent. Held not to make a condition, but a confidence and trust. Dyer, 138b.

EA QUIE, COMMENDANDI CAUSA, IN VENDITIONIBUS DICUNTUR, SI PALAM APPARENT, VENDITOREM NON OBLIGANT. Those things which are said on sales, in the way of commendation, if [the qualities of the thing sold] appear openly, do not bind the seller. Dig. 18, 1, 43, pr.

EA QUIE DART IMPOSSIBILIA SUNT, VEL QUIE IN ,RERUM NATURA NON SUNT, PRO NON ADJECTIS HABENTUR. Those things which are impossible to be given, or which are not in the nature of things, are regarded as not added, [as no part of an agreement.] Dig. 50, 17, 135.

EA QUIE IN CURIA NOSTRA RITE ACTA SUNT DEBITIE EXECUTIONI DEMANDANDI DEBENT. Co.Litt. 289. Those things which are properly transacted in our court ought to be committed to a due execution.

EA QUIE RARO ACCID'UNT NON TEMERE IN AGENDIS NEGOTII COMPUTANTUR. Those things which rarely happen are not to be taken into account in the transaction of business without sufficient reason. Dig. 50, 17, 64. -

EACH. A distributive adjective pronoun, which denotes or refers to every one of the persons or things mentioned; every one of two or more persons or things, composing the whole, separately considered. The effect of this word, used in the covenants of a bond, is to create a several obligation. Seiler v. State, 160 Ind. 605, 67 N.E. 448; Knickerbocker v. People, 102 Ill. 233; Costigan v. Lunt, 104 Mass. 219; State v. Monfred, 183 Md. 303, 37 A.2d 912, 914. The word "any" is equivalent to "each." Conerty v. Richtsteig, 308 Ill.App. 321, 31 N.E.2d 351.

EADMEN CAUSA DIVERSIS RATIONIBUS COR- AM JUDICIBUS ECCLESIASTIC'S ET SECUL- ARIBUS VENTILATOR. 2 Inst. 622. The same cause is argued upon different principles before ecclesiastical and secular judges.

EADERMEN, or EALDERMAN. The name of a Saxon magistrate; alderman; analogous to earl among the Danes, and senator among the Romans. See Alderman.

The name of Ealdorman is one of a large class; among a primitive people age implies command and command implies age; hence, in a somewhat later stage of language, the elders are simply the rulers. 1 Freeman, Norman Conquest, 51, quoted in Cent.Dict.

EALDOR-BISCOP. An archbishop.

EALDOR-BURG. Sax. The metropolis; the chief city. Obsolete.

EALEHUS. (Fr. eale, Sax., ale, and hus, house.) An ale-house.

EALHORDA. Sax. The privilege of assising and selling beer. Obsolete.

ELE GRASS. In English law. Such grass which is upon the land after the mowing, until the feast of the Annunciation after. 3 Leon. 213.

EAL-MARK. A mark put upon a thing to distinguish it from another. Originally and literally, a mark upon the ear; a mode of marking sheep and other animals.
EAR

Property is said to be ear-marked when it can be identified or distinguished from other property of the same nature.

Money has no ear-mark, but it is an ordinary term for a privy mark made by any one on a coin.

EAR-MARK RULE. Rule that through the process of commingling money or deposit with the funds of a bank it loses its identity, with the resultant effect of defeating the right of preference over general creditors. Hitt Fireworks Co. v. Scandinavian American Bank of Tacoma, 121 Wash. 261, 209 P. 680, 682.

EAR-WITNESS. In the law of evidence. One who attests or can attest anything as heard by himself.

EARL. A title of nobility, formerly the highest in England, now the third, ranking between a marquis and a viscount, and corresponding with the French "comte" and the German "graf." The title originated with the Saxons, and is the most ancient of the English peerage. William the Conqueror first made this title hereditary, giving it in fee to his nobles; and allotting them for the support of their state the third penny out of the sheriff's court, issuing out of all pleas of the shire, whence they had their ancient title "shiremen." At present the title is accompanied by no territory, private or judicial rights, but merely confers nobility and an hereditary seat in the house of lords. Wharton.

EARL MARSHAL OF ENGLAND. A great officer of state who had anciently several courts under his jurisdiction, as the court of chivalry and the court of honor. Under him was the herald's officer, or college of arms. He was also a judge of the Marshalsea court, now abolished. This office is of great antiquity, and has been for several ages hereditary in the family of the Howards. 3 Bl.Comm. 68, 103; 3 Steph.Comm. 335, note.

EARLDOM. The dignity or jurisdiction of an earl. The dignity only remains now, as the jurisdiction has been given over to the sheriff. 1 Bl.Comm. 339.

EARLES-PENNY, or EARL'S PENNY. Money given in part payment. See Earnest; Arles.

EARLIER MATURITY RULE. The rule under which bonds first maturing are entitled to priority when sale of security is not sufficient to satisfy all obligations. Scherk v. Newton, C.C.A.Colo., 152 F.2d 747, 749.

EARN. To acquire by labor, service or performance. Hartford Electric Light Co. v. McLaughlin, 37 A.2d 361, 363, 131 Conn. 1.

EARNER. One whose personal efforts produces income, or who owns property which produces it, or combination of both. Van Meter v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A., 61 F.2d 817, 818; Wells v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A., 63 F.2d 425, 430.

EARNEST. The payment of a part of the price of goods sold, or the delivery of part of such goods, for the purpose of binding the contract. Weidner v. Hyland, 216 Wis. 12, 255 N.W. 134.

A token or pledge passing between the parties, by way of evidence, or ratification of the sale. 2 Kent, Comm. 495, note.

EARNING CAPACITY. "Earning capacity" does not necessarily mean the actual earnings that one who suffers an injury was making at the time the injuries were sustained, but refers to that which, by virtue of the training, the experience, and the business acumen possessed, an individual is capable of earning. Texas Electric Ry. v. Worthy, Tex.Civ.App., 250 S.W. 710, 711. Not saving ability, but capacity to acquire money, less the necessary expense of his own living. Pitman v. Merriam, 80 N.H. 295, 117 A. 18, 19, 26 A.L.R. 589. Fitness, readiness and willingness to work, considered in connection with opportunity to work. Hartford Accident & Indemnity Co. v. Hoage, 85 F.2d 411, 416, 66 App.D.C. 154.

EARNINGS. That which is earned; money earned; the price of services performed; reward; the reward of labor or the price of personal service performed, the reward for personal services, whether in money or chattels, the fruit or reward of labor; the fruits of the proper skill, experience, and industry; the gains of a person derived from his services or labor without the aid of capital; money or property gained or merited by labor, service, or the performance of something; that which is gained or merited by labor, services, or performances. Saltzman v. City of Council Bluffs, 214 Iowa 1033, 243 N.W. 161, 162. "Income" is synonymous with "earnings." State ex rel. Froedert Grain and Malting Co. v. Tax Commission of Wisconsin, 221 Wis. 225, 265 N.W. 672, 673, 104 A.L.R. 1478.

This term is used to denote a larger class of credits than would be included in the term "wages." Somers v. Keilher, 115 Mass. 165; Jenks v. Dyer, 102 Mass. 235.

Gross Earnings and Net Earnings

The gross earnings of a business or company are the total receipts before deducting expenditures. Net earnings are the excess of the gross earnings over the expenditures defrayed in producing them, and aside from and exclusive of capital laid out in constructing and equipping the works or plant. State v. Railroad Co., 30 Minn. 311, 15 N.W. 307. "Gross earnings" means all receipts from the employment of capital, without deduction for expenses incurred. People ex rel. Genesee Light & Power Co. v. Saxe, 165 N.Y.S. 938, 939, 179 App.Div. 486.

Net Earnings Rule

The net earnings rule for assessing a special franchise for taxation starts with the gross earnings for the year ending with the commencement of the year for which the valuation is made from which is deducted operating expenses and a fair and reasonable return on that portion of the corporation's capital invested in tangible property, the balance being deemed to give the net earnings attributable to the special franchise, the value of which is then found by capitalizing such balance at a rate 1 per cent. higher than that found as a matter of fact to be a fair and reasonable return on the tangible property. People ex rel. Third Ave. R. Co. v. State Board of Tax Com'rs, 142 N.Y.S. 986, 997, 157 App.Div. 731.

Surplus Earnings

Amount owned by company over and above its capital and actual liabilities. People v. Com'r's of Taxes, 76 N.Y. 74.

EARTH. Soil of all kinds, including gravel, clay, loam, and the like, in distinction from the firm rock. Dickinson v. Poughkeepsie, 75 N.Y. 76; Davis v. Commissioners of Sewerage of City of Louisville, D.C.Ky., 13 F.Supp. 672, 680.

EASEMENT. A right in the owner of one parcel of land, by reason of such ownership, to use the land of another for a special purpose not inconsistent with a general property in the owner. Hollomon v. Board of Education of Stewart County, 168 Ga. 359, 147 S.E. 882, 884; Frye v. Seb-bit, 145 Neb. 600, 17 N.W.2d 617, 621.

A privilege which the owner of one adjacent tenement hath of another, existing in respect of their several tenements, by which that owner against whose tenement the privilege exists is obliged to suffer or not to do something on or in regard to his own land for the advantage of him in whose land the privilege exists. Termes de la Ley, Easements.

A privilege, service, or convenience which one neighbor has of another, by prescription, grant, or necessary implication, and without profit; as a way over his land, a gate-way, water-course, and the like. Kitch. 105; 3 Cruise, Dig. 484. And see Harrison v. Boring, 44 Tex. 267.

A liberty, privilege, or advantage without profit, which the owner of one parcel of land may have in the lands of another. Magnolia Petroleum Co. v. Caswell, Tex., 1 S.W.2d 597, 600; Hasselbring v. Koepke, 263 Mich. 466, 248 N.W. 869, 873, 93 A. L.R. 1170.

The land against which the easement or privilege exists is called the "servient" tenement, and the estate for which it is annexed the "dominant" tenement; and their owners are called respectively the "servient" and "dominant" owner. These terms are taken from the civil law. Saratoga State Waters Corporation v. Pratt, 227 N.Y. 429, 125 N.E. 834, 838; Joachim v. Belfus, 108 N.J.Eq. 622, 156 A. 121, 122; Brasavolton v. Williams, 143 S.C. 223, 141 S.E. 375, 382.

Affirmative Easement

One where the servient estate must permit something to be done thereon, as to pass over it, or to discharge water on it. Miller v. Babbs, Tex. Com.App., 263 S.W. 253, 254.

Apparent Easement

One the existence of which appears from the construction or condition of one of the tenements, so as to be capable of being seen or known on inspection. Miller v. Skagg's, 79 W.Va. 645, 91 S.E. 536, 537, Ann.Cas.1918D, 929.

Appurtenant Easement

An "incorporeal right" which is attached to and belongs with some greater and superior right or something annexed to another thing more worthy and which passes as incident to it and is incapable of existence separate and apart from the particular land to which it is annexed. Union Falls Power Co. v. Marinette County, 238 Wis. 134, 298 N.W. 598, 600, 601, 134 A.L.R. 958. One which is attached to and passes with the dominant tenement as an appurtenance thereof. Cadwalader v. Bailey, 17 R.I. 495, 23 A. 20, 14 L.R.A. 300; Wal-ler v. Hildebrecht, 295 Ill. 116, 128 N.E. 807, 809; Safety Building & Loan v. Lyles, 131 S.C. 540, 128 S.E. 724, 725.

Continuing Easement

One that is self-perpetuating, independent of human intervention, as, the flow of a stream, or one which may be enjoyed without any act on the part of the person entitled thereto, such as a spout which discharges the water whenever it rains, a drain by which surface water is carried off, windows which admit light and air, and the like. Starrett v. Baudler, 181 Iowa, 965, 165 N.W. 216, 219, L.R.A.1918B, 528. Also, it is sometimes termed an "apparent" easement, and defined as one depending on some artificial structure upon, or natural conformation of, the servient tenement, obvious and permanent, which constitutes the easement or is the means of enjoying it. Feters v. Humphreys, 18 N.J.Eq. 260; Larsen v. Peterson, 53 N.J.Eq. 88, 30 A. 1094. See, also, Apparent Easement.
EASEMENT

Discontinuous Easement

Discontinuous, non-continuous, or non-apparent easements are those the enjoyment of which can be had only by the interference of man, as, a right of way or a right to draw water. Outerbridge v. Phelps, 45 N.Y.Super.Ct. 570.

Easement by Prescription

A mode of acquiring title to property by Immemorial or long-continued enjoyment, and refers to personal usage restricted to claimant and his ancestors or grantors. J. C. Vereen & Sons, Inc. v. Houser, 123 Fla. 641, 167 So. 45.

Easement in Gross

Easement in gross is not appurtenant to any estate in land (or not belonging to any person by virtue of his ownership of an estate in land) but a mere personal interest in, or right to use, the land of another. Weigold v. Bates, 258 N.Y.S. 695, 144 Misc. 395; Joachim v. Belfus, 108 N.J.Eq. 622, 156 A. 121, 122.

Easement of Access

Right of ingress and egress to and from the premises of a lot owner to a street appurtenant to the land of the lot owner. Lang v. Smith, 113 Pa. Super. 559, 173 A. 682, 683.

Easement of Convenience

One which increases the facility, comfort, or convenience of the enjoyment of the dominant estate, or of some right connected with it.

Easement of Necessity

One in which the easement is indispensable to the enjoyment of the dominant estate. Richards v. Trezvant, 185 S.C. 489, 194 S.E. 326, 329.

Equitable Easements

The special easements created by derivation of ownership of adjacent proprietors from a common source, with specific intentions as to buildings for certain purposes, or with implied privileges in regard to certain uses, are sometimes so called. A name frequently applied to building restrictions in a deed. Werner v. Graham, 181 Cal. 174, 183 P. 945, 947.

Implied Easement

An easement resting upon the principle that, where the owner of two or more adjacent lots sells a part thereof, he grants by implication to the grantee all those apparent and visible easements which are necessary for the reasonable use of the property granted, which at the time of the grant are used by the owner of the entirety for the benefit of the part granted. Farley v. Howard, 68 N. Y.S. 159, 33 Misc. 57.

Intermittent Easement

One which is usable only at times, and not continuously. Eaton v. Railroad Co., 51 N.H. 504, 12 Am.Rep. 147.

Negative Easement

Those where the owner of the servient estate is prohibited from doing something otherwise lawful upon his estate, because it will affect the dominant estate, (as interrupting the light and air from the latter by building on the former.) South Buffalo Stores v. W. T. Grant Co., 274 N.Y.S. 549, 153 Misc. 76; Pierce v. Keator, 70 N.Y. 447, 26 Am. Rep. 612; Miller v. Babb, Tex.Com.App., 263 S.W. 253, 254. As to "reciprocal negative easement," see that title, infra.

Private or Public Easements

A private easement is one in which the enjoyment is restricted to one or a few individuals, while a public easement is one the right to the enjoyment of which is vested in the public generally or in an entire community; such as an easement of passage on the public streets and highways or of navigation on a stream. Kennelly v. Jersey City, 57 N.J.Law, 293, 30 A. 531, 26 L.R.A. 281.

Quasi Easement

An "easement," in the proper sense of the word, can only exist in respect of two adjoining pieces of land occupied by different persons, and can only impose a negative duty on the owner of the servient tenement. Hence an obligation on the owner of land to repair the fence between his and his neighbor's land is not a true easement, but is sometimes called a "quasi easement." Gale, Easem. 516; Sweet.

Reciprocal Negative Easement

If the owner of two or more lots, so situated as to bear the relation, sells one with restrictions of benefit to the land retained, the servitude becomes mutual, and, during the period of restraint, the owner of the lot or lots retained can do nothing forbidden to the owner of the lot sold; this being known as the doctrine of "reciprocal negative easement." Sanborn v. McLean, 233 Mich. 227, 206 N.W. 496, 497.

Secondary Easement

One which is appurtenant to the primary or actual easement; every easement includes such "secondary easements," that is, the right to do such things as are necessary for the full enjoyment of the easement itself. Toote v. Bryce, 50 N.J.Eq. 589, 25 A. 182.
EAST. In the absence of other words qualifying its meaning, the word "east" describing boundaries means due east. Anaheim Sugar Co. v. Orange County, 181 Cal. 212, 183 P. 809, 813; Livingston Oil & Gas Co. v. Shasta Oil Co., Tex.Civ.App., 114 S.W.2d 378, 381. See, also, Easterly.

In the customs laws of the United States, the words "countries east of the Cape of Good Hope" mean countries with which, formerly, the United States ordinarily carried on commercial intercourse by passing around that cape. Powers v. Conley, 101 U.S. 790, 25 L.Ed. 805.

EAST GREENWICH. The name of a royal manor in the county of Kent, England; mentioned in royal grants or patents, as descriptive of the tenure of free socage.

EAST INDIA COMPANY. Originally established for prosecuting the trade between England and India, which they acquired a right to carry on exclusively. Since the middle of the last century, however, the company's political affairs had become of more importance than their commerce. In 1858, by 21 & 22 Vict. c. 106, the government of the territories of the company was transferred to the crown. Wharton.

In 1858, by 21 & 22 Vict. c. 106, the government of the territories of the company was transferred to the crown. Wharton.

EASTER. A feast of the Christian church held in memory of the Saviour's resurrection. The Greeks and Latins call it "pascha," (passover,) to which Jewish feast our Easter answers. This feast has been annually celebrated since the time of the apostles, and is one of the most important festivals in the Christian calendar, being that which regulates and determines the times of all the other movable feasts. Enc. Lond.

EASTER-OFFERINGS, or EASTER-DUES. English law. Small sums of money paid to the parochial clergy by the parishioners at Easter as a compensation for personal tithes, or the tithe for personal labor; recoverable under 7 & 8 Wm. III. c. 6, before justices of the peace.

EASTER TERM. In English law. Formerly one of the four movable terms of the courts, but afterwards a fixed term, beginning on the 15th of April and ending on the 8th of May in every year, though sometimes prolonged so late as the 13th of May, under St. 11 Geo. IV. and I Wm. IV. c. 70. From November 2, 1875, the division of the legal year into terms is abolished so far as concerns the administration of justice. 3 Steph.Comm. 482-486; Mozley & Whiteley.

EASTERLING. A coin struck by Richard II. which is supposed by some to have given rise to the name of "sterling," as applied to English money.

EASTERLY. This word, when used alone, will be construed to mean "due east." But that is a rule of necessity growing out of the indefinite- ness of the term, and has no application where other words are used for the purpose of qualifying its meaning. Where such is the case, it means precisely what the qualifying word makes it mean. Walker v. City of Los Angeles, 23 Cal.App. 634, 139 R 89, 90. See East.

EASTINUS. An easterly coast or country.

EASTMAN FORMULA. In determining fixed charges under railroad reorganization plan, the "Eastman Formula" is that such charges should not exceed 80 per cent. of the net available for interest in the three worst years of the last ten. In re Denver & R. G. W. R. Co., D.C.Colo., 38 F. Supp. 106, 110.

EAT INDE SINE DIE. In criminal practice. Words used on the acquittal of a defendant, or when a prisoner is to be discharged, that he may go thence without a day, i. e., be dismissed without any further continuance or adjournment. Dane, Abr. Index.

EATING-HOUSE. Any place where food or refreshments of any kind, not including spirits, wines, ale, beer, or other malt liquors, are provided for casual visitors, and for personal labor; recoverable under 7 & 8 Wm. IV. c. 6, before justices of the peace.

EAVES. The edge of a roof, built so as to project over the walls of a house, in order that the rain may drop therefrom to the ground instead of running down the wall. Center St. Church v. Machias Hotel Co., 51 Me. 413.

EAVES-DRIP. The drip or dripping of water from the eaves of a house on the land of an adjacent owner; the easement of having the water so drip, or the servitude of submitting to such drip; the same as the stillicidium of the Roman law. See Stillicidium.

EAVESDROPPING. In English criminal law. The offense of listening under walls or windows, or the eaves of a house, to hearken after discourse, and thereupon to frame slanderous and mischievous tales. 4 Bl.Comm. 168. It is a misdemeanor at common law, indictable at sessions, and punishable by fine and finding sureties for good behavior. Id.; Steph.Crim.Law, 109. Selden v. State, 74 Wis. 271, 42 N.W. 218, 17 Am.St. Rep. 144.

EBBA. In old English law. Ebb. Ebba et fluctus; ebb and flow of tide; ebb and flood. Bract. fol. 325, 338. The time occupied by one ebb and flood was anciently granted to persons essoined as being beyond sea, in addition to the period of forty days. See Fleta, lib. 6, c. 8, § 2.

EBDOMADARIUS. In ecclesiastical law. An officer in cathedral churches who supervised the regular performance of divine service, and prescribed the particular duties of each person in the choir.

EBEREMORTH, EBEREMORS, EBEREMUR-
DER. See Aberemurder.

EBRIETY. In criminal law and medical jurisprudence. Drunkenness; alcoholic intoxication.

ECCE MODO MIRUM, QUOD FEMINA FERT
EBRIETY. In criminal law and medical jurisprudence. Drunkenness; alcoholic intoxication.

ECCHYMOSIS. In medical jurisprudence. Localized discoloration in and under the skin; a livid or black and blue spot; blackness. An extravasation of blood by rupture of capillary vessels, and hence it follows contusion; but it may exist, as in cases of scurvy, asphyxiation, and other morbid conditions, without the latter. Ryan Med.Jur. 172. Ecchymoses produced by blows upon a body but a few hours dead cannot be distinguished from those produced during life. 1
It is generally attended by swelling. People v.
McC racken, 11 Phila. (Pa.) 535.

ECCLESIA. Lat. An assembly. A Christian assembly; a church. A place of religious worship.
In the law, generally, the word is used to denote a place of religious worship, and sometimes a parsonage. Spelman.

ECCLESIA ECCLESIA DECIMAS SOLVERE
NON DEBET. Cro.Eliz. 479. A church ought not to pay tithes to a church.

ECCLESIA EST DOMUS MANSIONALIS OMNI-POTENTIS DEL 2 Inst. 164. The church is the mansionhouse of the Omnipotent God.

ECCLESIA EST INFRA ZETATEM ET IN CUS-TODIA DOMINI REGIS, QUI TENETUR JURA
ET ILEREDITATES EJUSDEME MANU TENERE ET DEFENDERE. 11 Coke, 49. The church is under age, and in the custody of the king, who is bound to uphold and defend its rights and inhertances.

ECCLESIA FUNGITUR VICE MINORIS; MELI-
OREM CONDITIONEM SUAM FACERE PO-TEST, DETERIOREM NEQUAQUAM. Co.Litt.
341. The church enjoys the privilege of a minor; it can make its own condition better, but not worse.

ECCLESIA NON MORITUR. 2 Inst. 3. The church does not die.

ECCLESLE MAGIS FAVENDUM EST QUAM
PERSON,E. Godol. Ecc. Law, 172. The church is to be more favored than the parson (or an individual).

ECCLESLE SCULPTURA. The image or sculpture of a church in ancient times was often cut out or cast in plate or other metal, and preserved as a religious treasure or relic, and to perpetuate the memory of some famous churches. Jacob.

ECCLESIIARCH. The ruler of a church.

ECCLESIASTIC. A clergyman; a priest; a man consecrated to the service of the church; as, a bishop, a priest, a deacon.

ECCLESIASTICAL. Pertaining to anything belonging to or set apart for the church, as distinguished from "civil" or "secular," with regard to the world. Wharton.

ECCLESIASTICAL AUTHORITIES. In England, the clergy, under the sovereign, as temporal head of the church, set apart from the rest of the people or laity, in order to superintend the public worship of God and the other ceremonies of religion, and to administer spiritual counsel and instruction. The several orders of the clergy are:
(1) Archbishops and bishops; (2) deans and chapi-ters; (3) archdeacons; (4) rural deans; (5) parsons (under whom are included appropriators) and vicars; (6) curates. Church-wardens or sides-men, and parish clerks and sextons, inasmuch as their duties are connected with the church, may be considered to be a species of ecclesiastical authorities. Wharton.

ECCLESIASTICAL COMMISSIONERS. In English law. A body corporate, erected by St. 6 & 7 Wm. IV, c. 77, empowered to suggest measures conducive to the efficiency of the established church, to be ratified by orders in council. Whar-

ECCLESIASTICAL CORPORATION. See Corporation.

ECCLESIASTICAL COUNCIL. In New England.
A church court or tribunal, having functions partly judicial and partly advisory, appointed to determine questions relating to church discipline, ortho doxy, standing of ministers, controversies.
between ministers and their churches, differences and divisions in churches, and the like. Stearns

ECCLESIASTICAL COURTS (called, also, "Courts Christian"). A generic name for certain courts having cognizance mainly of spiritual matters. D.
v. D., Del.Super., 20 A.2d 139, 140. A system of courts in England, held by authority of the sov-eign, and having jurisdiction over matters pertaining to the religion and ritual of the established church, and the rights, duties, and discipline of ecclesiastical persons as such. They are as follows: The archdeacon’s court, arches court, consistory court, court of archdeacon, court of pe-culiars, prerogative court, court of delegates, court of convocation, court of audience, and court of faculties. 3 Bl.Comm. 64-68. Equitable Life As-of convocation, court of audience, and court of faculties. 3 Bl.Comm. 64-68.

ECCLESIASTICAL DIVISION OF ENGLAND.
This is a division into provinces, dioceses, archdeaconries, rural deaneries, and parishes.

ECCLESIASTICAL JURISDICTION. Jurisdiction over ecclesiastical cases and controversies; such as appertains to the ecclesiastical courts. Short v. Stotts, 58 Ind. 35.

ECCLESIASTICAL LAW. The body of jurisprudence administered by the ecclesiastical courts of England; derived, in large measure, from the canon and civil law. As now restricted, it applies mainly to the affairs, and the doctrine, discipline, and worship, of the established church. De Witt v. De Witt, 67 Ohio St. 340, 66 N.E. 136.

ECCLESIASTICAL MATTER. One that concerns doctrine, creed, or form of worship of the church, or the adoption and enforcement within a religious association of needful laws and regulations for the government of the membership, and the power of excluding from such associations those deemed unworthy of membership. Olear v. Haniak, 235 Mo. App. 249, 131 S.W.2d 375, 380.

ECCLESIASTICAL THINGS. This term, as used in the canon law, includes church buildings, church property, cemeteries, and property given to the church for the support of the poor or for any other pious use. Smith v. Bonhoof, 2 Mich. 115.

ECDICUS. The attorney, proctor, or advocate of a corporation. 1 Reeve, Eng.Law, 65.

ECHANTillon. In French law. One of the two parts or pieces of a wooden tally. That in possess-sion of the debtor is properly called the "tally," the other "echantillon." Poth.Obl. pt. 4, c. 1, art. 2, § 8.

ECHEVIN. In French law. A municipal officer corresponding with alderman or burgess, and having in some instances a civil jurisdiction in certain causes of trifling importance.

ECHOLALIA. In medical jurisprudence. The constant and senseless repetition of particular words or phrases, recognized as a sign or symptom of insanity or of aphasia.

ECHOUEMENT. In French marine law. Stranding. Emerig.Tr. des Ass. c. 12, s. 13, no. 1.

ECLAMPSIA PARTURIENTIUM. In medical jurisprudence. Puerperal convulsions; a convulsive seizure which sometimes suddenly attacks a woman in labor or directly after, generally attended by unconsciousness and occasionally by mental aberration, which may be permanent. The attack closely resembles the convulsions of epilepsy, and is often fatal.

ECLECTIC PRACTICE. In medicine. That system followed by physicians who select their modes of practice and medicines from various schools. Webster.

"Without professing to understand much of medical phraseology, we suppose that the terms 'allopathic practice' and 'legitimate business' mean the ordinary method commonly adopted by the great body of learned and eminitent physicians, which is taught in their institutions, established by their highest authorities, and accepted by the larger and more respectable portion of the community. By 'eclectic practice,' without imputing to it, as the counsel for the plaintiff seem inclined to, an odor of illegality, we presume is intended another and different system, unusual and eccentric, not countenanced by the classes before referred to, but characterized by them as spurious and denounced as dangerous. It is sufficient to say that the two modes of treating human maladies are essentially dist-tinct, and based upon different views of the nature and causes of diseases, their appropriate remedies, and the modes of applying them." Bradbury v. Bardin, 34 Conn. 453.

ECONOMIZER. As applied to boiler construction, a contrivance or device in which water is heated preliminary to entering the boiler proper. Ithaca Traction Corporation v. Travelers' Indemnity Co., Sup., 177 N.Y.S. 753, 754.

ECONOMY. Frugality; prudent economy. Not synonymous with "parsimony." Includes that which pertains to the satisfaction of man's needs. D'Arcy v. Snell, 162 Or. 351, 91 P.2d 537, 540, 122 A.L.R. 928.

ECRIVAIN. In French marine law. The clerk of a ship. Emerig.Tr. des Ass. c. 11, s. 3, no. 2.

ECUMENICAL. General; universal; as an ecu-EDDERBRECHE. In Saxon law. The offense of hedge-breaking. Obsolete.

EDESTIA. In old records. Buildings.

EDGE. A line where two surfaces meet. I. T. S.

EDICT. A positive law promulgated by the sov-eign of a country, and having reference either to the whole land or some of its divisions, but usually relating to affairs of state. It differs from a "public proclamation," in that it enacts a new statute, and carries with it the authority of law, whereas the latter is, at most, a declaration of a law before enacted. In Roman law. Sometimes, a citation to appear before a judge. A "special edict" was a judgment in a case; a "general edict" was in effect a statute. See Edictum.

EDICTAL CITATION. In Scotch law. A citation published at the market-cross of Edinburgh, and pier and shore of Leith. Used against foreigners not within the kingdom, but having a landed estate there, and against natives out of the king-edom. Bell.
EDICTS OF JUSTINIAN. Thirteen constitutions or laws of this prince, found in most editions of the Corpus Juris Civilis, after the Novels. Being confined to matters of police in the provinces of the empire, they are of little use.

EDICTUM. In the Roman law. An edict; a mandate, or ordinance. An ordinance, or law, enacted by the emperor without the senate; belonging to the class of constitutiones principis. Inst. 1, 2, 6. An edict was a mere voluntary constitution of the emperor; differing from a rescript, in not being returned in the way of answer; and from a decree, in not being given in judgment; and from both, in not being founded upon solicitation. Tayl. Civil Law, 233.

A general order published by the praetor, on entering upon his office, containing the system of rules by which he would administer justice during the year of his office. Dig. 1, 2, 10; Mackeld. Rom.Law, § 35; Tayl.Civil Law, 214. See Calvin.

EDICTUM ANNUUM. The annual edict or system of rules promulgated by a Roman praetor immediately upon assuming his office, setting forth the principles by which he would be guided in determining causes during his term of office. Mackeld. Rom.Law, § 36.

EDICTUM PERPETUUM. The perpetual edict. A compilation or system of law in fifty books, digested by Julian, from the praetor's edicts and other parts of the Jus Honorarium. All the remains of it which have come down to us are the extracts of it in the Digests. Butl.Hor.Jur. 52.

EDICTUM PROVINCIALE. An edict or system of rules for the administration of justice, similar to the edict of the praetor, put forth by the proconsuls and proprætors in the provinces of the Roman Empire. Mackeld. Rom.Law, § 36.

EDICTUM THEODORICI. This is the first collection of law that was made after the downfall of the Roman power in Italy. It was promulgated by Theodoric, king of the Ostrogoths, at Rome in A.D. 500. It consists of 154 chapters, in which we recognize parts taken from the Code and Codex of Theodosius, from the Codices Gregorianus and Hermogenianus, and the Sententiae of Paulus. The edict was doubtless drawn up by Roman writers, but the original sources are more disfigured and altered than in any other compilation. This collection of law was intended to apply both to the Goths and the Romans, so far as its provisions went; but, when it made no alteration in the Gothic law, that law was still to be in force. Savigny, Geschichte des R. R.

EDICTUM TRALATITIUM. Where a Roman praetor, upon assuming office, did not publish a wholly new edict, but retained the whole or a principal part of the edict of his predecessor (as was usually the case) only adding to it such rules as appeared to be necessary to adapt it to changing social conditions or juristic ideas, it was called "edictum tralatitium." Mackeld. Rom.Law, § 36.

EDITION. Any quantity of books put forth to the book-selling trade at one time by the publisher. 4 K. & J. 656. A new edition is published whenever, having in his warehouse a certain number of copies, the publisher issues a fresh batch of them to the public.

EDITOR. One who directs or supervises the policies and contributions of a newspaper, magazine, work of reference, or the like. Brokaw v. Cottrell, 211 N.W. 184, 187, 114 Neb. 858. The term is held to include not only the person who writes or selects the articles for publication, but he who publishes a paper and puts it in circulation. PENNOYER v. NEFF, 95 U.S. 721, 24 L.Ed. 565.

EDITUS. In old English law. Put forth or promulgated, when speaking of the passage of a statute; and brought forth, or born, when speaking of the birth of a child.

EDUCATE. To give proper moral, as well as intellectual and physical, instruction. See Williams v. MacDougall, 39 Cal. 80; Peck v. Claflin, 105 Mass. 420. To prepare and fit oneself for any calling or business, or for activity and usefulness in life. In re Wolfe's Estate, 299 N.Y.S. 99, 102, 164 Misc. 504.

EDUCATION. Comprehends not merely the instruction received at school or college, but the whole course of training, moral, intellectual, and physical. Education may be particularly directed to either the mental, moral, physical powers and faculties, but in its broadest and best sense it relates to them all. Barbers' Commission of Mobile County v. Hardeman, 21 So.2d 118, 120, 31 Ala.App. 626. Acquisition of all knowledge tending to train and develop the individual. Mitchell v. Reeves, 123 Conn. 549, 196 A. 785, 788, 15 A.L.R. 1114.

EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTION. A school, seminary, college, or educational establishment, not necessarily a chartered institution. Ward Seminary for Young Ladies v. City of Nashville, 129 Tenn. 412, 167 S.W. 113. As used in a zoning ordinance, the term may include not only buildings, but also all grounds necessary for the accomplishment of the whole scope of educational instruction, including those things essential to mental, moral, and physical development. Commissioners of District of Columbia v. Shannon & Luchs Const. Co., 57 App.D.C. 67, 17 F.2d 219, 220.

EDUCATIONAL PURPOSES. Synonymous with an educational undertaking, and whatever educates is within the meaning of an "educational undertaking." Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of Freemasonry v. Board of County Com'rs, 122 Neb. 586, 241 N.W. 93, 95.
EDUCATIONAL TRAINING. Acquisition of information or inspirational suggestions which cause the individual to think and act along proper lines.

EFFECT, v. To do; to produce; to make; to bring to pass; to execute; enforce; accomplish.

Vailsburg Motor Corporation v. Fidelity & Casualty Co., 110 N.J.L. 209, 164 A. 408, 409. A belief that a mortgage would "effect" a preference under the bankruptcy act is equivalent to a belief that it would "operate as" a preference. Ogden v. Reddish, D.C.Ky., 200 F. 977, 979.

EFFECT, n. Result. Western Indemnity Co. v. MacKechnie, Tex.Civ.App., 214 S.W. 456, 460; Beeler v. People, 58 Colo. 451, 146 P. 762, 764. The result which an instrument between parties will produce in their relative rights, or which a statute will produce upon the existing law, as discovered from the language used, the forms employed, or other materials for construing it. The operation of a law, of an agreement, or an act. Maize v. State, 4 Ind. 342.

The phrases "take effect," "be in force," "go into operation," etc., are used interchangeably. Maize v. State, 4 Ind. 342.

With Effect

EFFECTING LOAN. Renewal of original note without lending of new money held not "effecting of loan," within statute prohibiting officers or employees of banking department from effecting loans from state bank. To effect a loan within such statute means to bring about a loan, to accomplish, fulfill, or produce or make a loan. It means the result or consequence, the bringing into operation of a loan; while "renewal" is not a loan, but an extension of the time of payment. State v. Love, 150 So. 196, 199, 170 Miss. 666, 90 A.L.R. 506.

EFFECTIVE PROCURING CAUSE. The "effective procuring cause," of sale of realty is ordinarily the broker who first secures the serious attention of the customer and is instrumental in bringing the parties together. In re Cowan's Estate, 13 N.Y.S.2d 374, 377.

EFFECTS. Personal estate or property. See

In Will

Personal property; goods; worldly substance. If the term is used simpliciter, as in a gift of "all my effects," it will carry the whole personal estate, unless an intention appears to the contrary. Schouler, Wills, § 509. In re Mitchell's Will, 38 N.Y.S.2d 673, 674, 675. The meaning of the term is determined by the context and surrounding circumstances; Coffman's Adm'r v. Coffman, 131 Va. 456, 109 S.E. 454, 459; and is broad enough to include property of any kind. In re Lafferty's Estate, 311 Pa. 469, 167 A. 49, 50.

The words "real and personal effects" will embrace the whole estate. Hogan v. Jackson, Cwop. 304; The Alpena, D.C., 7 F. 361; 15 M. & W. 450; Foxall v. McKenney, 3 Cranch C.C. 206, Fed.Cas. No.5,016.

EFFECTUS SEQUITUR CAUSAM. Wing. 226. The effect follows the cause.

EFFENDI. Turkish. Master; a title of respect.

EFFET. In France an "effet" is a bill of exchange; "effets" means goods, movables, chattels. In re Steimes' Estate, 270 N.Y.S. 339, 150 Misc. 279.

EFFETS MOBILIERS. Funds or stocks. In re Steimes' Estate, 270 N.Y.S. 339, 150 Misc. 279.

EFFICIENT. Causing an effect;—particularly the result or results contemplated. Tate-Jones & Co. v. Union Electric Steel Co., 281 Pa. 448, 126 A. 813, 816. The term is not an antonym of "defective." Adequate in performance or producing properly a desired effect. Spotts v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., C.C.A. Ind., 102 F.2d 160, 162.

EFFICIENT CAUSE. The working cause; that cause which produces effects or results; an intervening cause, which produces results which would not have come to pass except for its interposition, and for which, therefore, the person who set in motion the original chain of causes is not responsible. Southland-Greyhound Lines v. Cotten, Tex. Civ.App., 55 S.W.2d 1066, 1069; The cause which originates and sets in motion the dominating agency that necessarily proceeds through other causes as mere instruments or vehicles in a natural line of causation to the result. That cause of an injury to which legal liability attaches. Bole v. Pittsburgh Athletic Club, C.C.A., 205 F. 468, 471, 46 L.R.A.,N.S., 602. The "proximate cause." Munger v. Hancock, Tex.Civ.App., 271 S.W. 228, 231. Hilles v. Home Owners' Loan Corporation, 348 Mo. 601, 154 S.W.2d 761, 764. The phrase is practically synonymous with "procuring cause." Buhrmester v. Independent Plumbing & Heating Supply Co., Mo.App., 151 S.W.2d 509, 513.

EFFICIENT INTERVENING CAUSE. One not produced by a wrongful act or omission but independent of it, and adequate to bring the injurious results. State v. Des Champs, 126 S.C. 416, 120 S. E. 491, 493. A new and independent force which breaks casual connection between original wrong

EFFIGY. The figure or corporeal representation of a person.

EFFLUX. The running, as of a prescribed period of time to its end; expiration by lapse of time. Particularly applied to the termination of a lease by the expiration of the term for which it was made.

EFFLUXION OF TIME. When this phrase is used in leases, conveyances, and other like deeds, or in agreements expressed in simple writing, it indicates the conclusion or expiration of an agreed term of years specified in the deed or writing, such conclusion or expiration arising in the natural course of events, in contradistinction to the determination of the term by the acts of the parties or by some unexpected or unusual incident or other sudden event. Brown.

EFFORCIALITER. Forcibly; applied to military force.

EFFORT. An attempt; an endeavor; a struggle directed to the accomplishment of an object. Dunlany v. Burns, 218 Ala. 493, 119 So. 21, 24.

EFFRACTION. A breach made by the use of force.

EFFRACTOR. One who breaks through; one who commits a burglary.

EFFUSIO SANGUINIS. In old English law. The shedding of blood; the mulct, fine, wite, or penalty imposed for the shedding of blood, which the king granted to many lords of manors. Cowell; Tomlins. See Bloodwit.

EFTERS. In Saxon law. Ways, walks, or hedges. Blount.

EGALITY. Owelty, (q. v.) Co. Litt. 169a.

EGLISE. A church.

EGO. I; myself. This term is used in forming genealogical tables, to represent the person who is the object of inquiry.

EGO, TALIS. I, such a one. Words used in describing the forms of old deeds. Fleta, lib. 3, c. 14, § 5.

EGREDIENS ET EXEUNS. In old pleading. Going forth and issuing out of (land.) Townsh. Pl. 17.

EGRESS. Often used interchangeably with the word "access." C. Hacker Co. v. City of Joliet, 196 Ill.App. 415, 423.

EGYPTIANS, commonly called "Gypsies" (in old English statutes.) are counterfeit rogues, Welsh or English, that disguise themselves in speech and apparel, and wander up and down the country, pretending to have skill in telling fortunes, and to deceive the common people, but live chiefly by filching or stealing, and, therefore, the statutes of 1 & 2 Mar. c. 4, and 5 Eliz. c. 20, were made to punish such as felons if they departed not the realm or continued to a month. Termes de la Ley.

EI INCUMBIT PROBATIO, QUI DICIT, NON QUI NEGAT; CUM PER RERUM NATURAM FACTUM NEGANTIS PROBATIO NULLA SIT. The proof lies upon him who affirms, not upon him who denies; since, by the nature of things, he who denies a fact cannot produce any proof. Dig. 22, 3, 2; 1 Phill. Ev. 194; 1 Greenl. Ev. § 74; Dran-guet v. Prudhomme, 3 La. 83; 2 Dan.Ch.Pr. 408.

EI NIHIL TURPE, CUI NIHIL SATIS. To him to whom nothing is enough, nothing is base. 4 Inst. 53.

EIA, or EY. An island. Cowell.

EIGNESSE. See Esnecy.

EICHI.. A name formerly given to a justice of the peace. In the Digests, the word is written "irenarcha."

EISDEM MODIS DISSOLVITUR OBLIGATIO QUIE NASCITUR EX CONTRACTU, VEL QUASI, QUIBUS CONTRAHITUR. An obligation which arises from contract, or quasi contract, is dissolved in the same ways in which it is contracted. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 60, § 19.

EISNE. The senior; the oldest son. Spelled, also, "eigne," "einsne," "aisne," "eign." Termes de la Ley; Kelham.

EISNETIA, EINETIA. The share of the oldest son. The portion acquired by primogeniture. Termes de la Ley; Co.Litt. 166b; Cowell.
EJECTMENT. At common law, this was the Latin equivalent for the French interest. The latter's title, however, must be EJECTIONE CUSTODIÆ. In old English law, Ejectment of ward. This phrase, which is the years, and brought by a purely fictitious person, as in theory only for the recovery of a term for EJECTIONE FIRMÆ. Ejection, or ejectment of wards the lessor, reversioner, remainder-man, or guardian when turned out of any land of his EJECT. To cast, or throw out; to oust, or dispossess; to put or turn out of possession. 3 Bl. Comm. 198, 199, 200. See Bohannon v. Southern Ry. Co., 112 Ky. 106, 65 S.W. 169. To expel or thrust forcibly, as passengers from a train. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Ogles, 142 Ga. 720, 83 S.E. 681, 683.

EJECTA. In old English law. A woman ravished or deflowered, or cast forth from the virtuous. Blount.

EJECTION. A turning out of possession. 3 Bl. Comm. 199.

EJECTIONE CUSTODIÆ. In old English law. Ejectment of ward. This phrase, which is the Latin equivalent for the French "ejecţment de garde," was the title of a writ which lay for a guardian when turned out of any land of his ward during the minority of the latter. Brown. It lay to recover the land or person of his ward, or both. Fitzh. N.B. 139, L.; Co.Litt. 199.

EJECTIONE FIRMÆ. Ejection, or ejectment of farm. The name of a writ or action of trespass, which lay at common law where lands or tenements were let for a term of years, and afterwards the lessor, reversioner, remainder-man, or any stranger ejected or ousted the lessee of his term, ferme, or farm, (ipsis a firma ejectit.) In this case the latter might have his writ of ejecttion, by which he recovered at first damages for the trespass only, but it was afterwards made a remedy to recover back the term itself, or the remainder of it, with damages. Reg.Orig. 227b; Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 220, F, G; 3 Bl.Comm. 199; Litt. § 322; Crabb, Eng.Law, 290, 448. It is the foundation of the modern action of ejectment.

EJECTMENT. At common law, this was the name of a mixed action (springing from the earlier personal action of ejctione firmce) which lay for the recovery of the possession of land, and for damages for the unlawful detention of its possession. The action was highly fictitious, being in theory only for the recovery of a term for years, and brought by a purely fictitious person, as lessee in a supposed lease from the real party in interest. The latter's title, however, must be established in order to warrant a recovery, and the establishment of such title, though nominally a mere incident, is in reality the object of the action. Hence this convenient form of suit came to be adopted as the usual method of trying titles to land. See 3 Bl.Comm. 199. French v. Robb, 67 N.J.Law, 260, 51 A. 509, 57 L.R.A. 956, 91 Am.St. Rep. 433. In England, since the Judicature Act, ejectment has given place to a new action for the recovery of land. Ejectment has been materially modified in many of the states, though still retaining the name. For the history of ejectment, see 3 Sel.Essays in Anglo-Amer. L. Hist. 611.

It was the only mixed action at common law, the whole method of proceeding in which was anomalous, and depended on fictions invented and upheld by the court for the convenience of justice, in order to escape from the inconveniences which were found to attend the ancient forms of real and mixed actions.

It is also a form of action by which possessory titles to corporeal hereditaments may be tried and possession obtained.

Ejectment Bill

A bill in equity brought merely for the recovery of real property, together with an account of the rents and profits, without setting out any distinct ground of equity jurisdiction; hence demariable. Crane v. Conklin, 1 N.J.Eq. 353, 22 Am.Dec. 519.

Equitable Ejectment

A proceeding in use in Pennsylvania, brought to enforce specific performance of a contract for the sale of land, and for some other purposes, which is in form an action of ejectment, but is in reality a substitute for a bill in equity. Riel v. Gannon, 161 Pa. 289, 29 A. 55.

Justice Ejectment

A statutory proceeding in Vermont, for the eviction of a tenant holding over after termination of the lease or breach of its conditions. Foss v._ Stanton, 76 Vt. 365, 57 A. 942.

EJECTOR. One who ejects, puts out, or disposesses another.

Casual Ejector

The nominal defendant in an action of ejectment; so called because, by a fiction of law peculiar to that action, he is supposed to come casually or by accident upon the premises and to eject the lawful possessor. 3 Bl.Comm. 203.

EJECTUM. That which is thrown up by the sea.. Also jetsam, wreck, etc. Warder v. La Belle Creole, 1 Pet.Adm.Dec. 43, Fed.Cas.No.17,165.

EJERCITORIA. In Spanish law. The name of an action lying against a ship's owner, upon the contracts or obligations made by the master for repairs or supplies. It corresponds to the actio exercitoria of the Roman law. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 512.

EJIDOS. In Spanish law. Commons; lands used in common by the inhabitants of a city, pueblo, or town, for pasture, wood, threshing-ground, etc.. Hart v. Burnett, 15 Cal. 554.
ELDEST. He or she who has the greatest age. The eldest son is the first-born, the primo-genitus; L.R. 2 App.Cas. 698; L.R. 12 Ch.Div. 171; Anderson v. Anderson, C.C.A.S.C., 221 F. 871, 874. If there is only one son, he may still be described as the "eldest." L.R. 7 H.L. 644.

ELECTA UNA VIA, NON DATUR RECURSUS AD ALTERAM. He who has chosen one way cannot have recourse to another. 10 Toull. no. 170.

ELECTED. The word "elected," in its ordinary signification, carries with it the idea of a vote, generally popular, sometimes more restricted, and cannot be held the synonym of any other mode of filling a position. Kimberlin v. State, 130 Ind. 120, 29 N.E. 773, 14 L.R.A. 858, 30 Am.St.Rep. 208.

ELECTIO EST INTERNA LIBERA ET SPONTANEA SEPARATIO UNIUS REI AB ALIA, SINE COMPULSIONE, CONSISTENS IN ANIMO ET VOLUNTATE. Dyer, 281. Election is an internal, free, and spontaneous separation of one thing from another, without compulsion, consisting in intention and will.

ELECTIO SEMEL FACTA, ET PLACITUM TEMENTO NON PATITUR REGRESSUM. Co.Litt. 146. Election once made, and plea witnessed (or intent shown), suffers not a recall.

ELECTION. The act of choosing or selecting one or more from a greater number of persons, things, courses, or rights. The choice of an alternative. State v. Tucker, 54 Ala. 210.

The internal, free, and spontaneous separation of one thing from another, without compulsion, consisting in intention and will. Dyer, 281.

The selection of one person from a specified class to discharge certain duties in a state, corporation, or society. Smith v. McQueen, 232 Ala. 90, 166 So. 788, 791.

With respect to the choice of persons to fill public office or the decision of a particular public question or public policy the term means in ordinary usage the expression by vote of the will of the people or of a somewhat numerous body of electors. State v. State Board of Canvassers, 78 S.C. 461, 59 S.E. 145. But this is not necessarily so, for the term may apply to the selection by a city council of one of their number as mayor.

"Election" ordinarily has reference to a choice or selection by electors, while "appointment" refers to a choice or selection by an individual, as the Governor, or an official body. Board of Education of Boyle County v. McChesney, 235 Ky. 692, 32 S.W.2d 26, 27. But the terms are sometimes used interchangeably. Van Cleve v. Wallace, 216 Minn. 500, 13 N.W.2d 467, 469.

The choice which is open to a debtor who is bound in an alternative obligation to select either one of the alternatives.

Equitable Election

See Equitable Election.

EJJURATUM. Renouncing or resigning one's place.

EJUS EST INTERPRETARI CUJUS EST CONDERE. It is his to interpret whose it is to enact. Tayl. Civil Law, 96.

EJUS EST NOLLE, QUI POTEST VELLE. He who can will, [exercise volition,] has a right to refuse to will, [to withhold consent.] Dig. 50, 7, 3. This maxim is sometimes written, Ejus est non nolle qui potest velle, and is translated, "He may consent tacitly who may consent expressly."

EJUS EST PERICULUM CUJUS EST DOMINII AUT COMMODUM. He who has the dominion or advantage has the risk. Bart.Max. 33.

EJUS NULLA CULPA EST, CUI PARARE NECESSE SIT. No guilt attaches to him who is compelled to obey. Dig. 50, 17, 169, pr. Obedience to existing laws is a sufficient extenuation of guilt before a civil tribunal. Broom, Max. 12, note.

EJUSDEM GENERIS. Of the same kind, class, or nature.

In the construction of laws, wills, and other instruments, the "ejusdem generis rule" is, that where general words follow an enumeration of persons or things, by words of a particular and specific meaning, such general words are not to be construed in their widest extent, but are to be held as applying only to persons or things of the same general kind or class as those specifically mentioned. Black, Interp. of Laws, 141; Goldsmith v. U. S., C.C.A.N.Y., 42 F.2d 133, 137; Aleksich v. Industrial Accident Fund, 116 Mont. 69, 151 F.2d 1016, 1021. The rule, however, does not necessarily require that the general provision be limited in its scope to the identical things specifically named. Nor does it apply when the context manifests a contrary intention.

The maxim "ejusdem generis," is only an illustration of the broader maxim, "noscitur a sod's." State v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 196 Ala. 570, 72 So. 99, 100.

ELABORARE. In old European law. To gain, acquire, or purchase, a skilled labor.

ELABORATUS. Property which is the acquisition of labor. Spelman.

ELASTIC. Pertaining to a substance having the property of returning or springing back to its original form after being disarranged by pressure or applied force,—to be distinguished from "plastic," which applies to a substance capable of being molded and pressed into form. Diamond Patent Co. v. Webster Bros., C.C.A.Cal., 249 F. 155, 157; Kitson Co. v. Lattimer-Stevens Co., C.C.A.Pa., 37 F.2d 562, 563.

ELDER BRETHREN. A distinguished body of men, elected as masters of Trinity House, an institution incorporated in the reign of Henry VIII., charged with numerous important duties relating to the marine, such as the superintendence of lighthouses. Mozley & Whitley; 2 Steph.Comm. 502. The full title of the corporation is Elder Brethren of the Holy and Undivided Trinity.

ELDER TITLE. A title of earlier date, but coming simultaneously into operation with a title of younger origin, is called the "elder title," and prevails.
General Election

One at which the officers to be elected are such as belong to the general government,—that is, the general and central political organization of the whole state; as distinguished from an election of officers for a particular locality only. Also, one held for the selection of an officer after the expiration of the full term of the former officer; thus distinguished from a special election, which is one held to supply a vacancy in office occurring before the expiration of the full term for which the incumbent was elected. Downs v. State, 78 Md. 128, 26 A. 1005. One that regularly recurs in each election precinct of the state on a day designated by law for the selection of officers, or is held in such entire territory pursuant to an enactment specifying a single day for the ratification or rejection of one or more measures submitted to the people by the Legislative Assembly, and not for the election of any officer. Bethune v. Funk, 166 P. 931, 932, 85 Or. 246. One that is held throughout the entire state or territory. Territory v. Ricordati, 18 N.M. 10, 132 P. 1139, 1140. An election for the choice of a national, state, judicial, district, municipal, county, or township official, required by law to be held regularly at a designated time, to fill a new office or a vacancy in an office at the expiration of the full term thereof. Eakle v. Board of Education of Independent School Dist. of Henry, 97 W.Va. 434, 125 S.E. 165, 168. In statutes, the term may include a primary election. Kelso v. Cook, 184 Ind. 173, 110 N.E. 987, 993, Ann.Cas.1918E, 68. Contra, under a municipal charter, City Council of San Jose v. Goodwin, 196 Cal. 274, 237 P. 548, 549. In Vermont, the term is used throughout the Public Statutes to designate what before had commonly been known as "freeman's meeting." Martin v. Fullam, 97 A. 442, 445, 90 Vt. 163.

In Criminal Law

The choice, by the prosecution, upon which of several counts in an indictment (charging distinct offenses of the same degree, but not parts of a continuous series of acts) it will proceed. Jackson v. State, 95 Ala. 17, 10 So. 657.

In Practice

The liberty of choosing (or the act of choosing) one out of several means afforded by law for the redress of an injury, or one out of several available forms of action.

An "election of remedies" arises when one having two coexistent but inconsistent remedies chooses to exercise one, in which event he loses the right to thereafter exercise the other. Mosher Mfg. Co. v. Eastland W. F. & G. R. Co., Tex.Civ.App., 259 S.W. 253, 255.

An "election of remedies" is choosing between two or more different and coexisting modes of procedure and relief allowed by law on the same state of facts. Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. of California v. Rhamo, D.C.S.C., 32 F.Sup. 59, 63; Doggett Lumber Co. v. Perry, 212 N.C. 713, 194 S.E. 475, 478.

In the Law of Wills

A widow's election is her choice whether she will take under the will or under the statute; that is, whether she will accept the provision made for her in the will, and acquiesce in her husband's disposition of his property, or disregard it and claim what the law allows her. Logan v. Logan, Tex.Civ.App., 112 S.W.2d 515, 518; Schlimme v. Schlimme, 364 Ill. 303, 4 N.E.2d 369, 370.

An "election under the will" means that a legatee or devisee under a will is put to the choice of accepting the beneficial interest offered by the donor in lieu of some estate which he is entitled to, but which is taken from him by the terms of the will. McDermid v. Bourhill, 101 Or. 305, 199 P. 610, 612, 22 A.L.R. 428.

Primary Election

An election by the voters of a ward, precinct, or other small district, belonging to a particular party, of representatives or delegates to a convention, which is to meet and nominate the candidates of their party to stand at an approaching municipal or general election. State v. Woodruff, 68 N.J.Law, 89, 52 A. 294. Also, an' election to select candidates for office by a political organization, the voters being restricted to the members or supporters of such organization. Kelso v. Cook, 184 Ind. 173, 110 N.E. 987, Ann.Cas.1918E, 68. They are not in reality elections but are merely nominating devices. Van Dyke v. Thompson, 136 Tenn. 136, 189 S.W. 62, 66.

Regular Election

One recurring at stated times fixed by law. State v. Andresen, 110 Or. 1, 222 P. 585, 587. A general, usual, or stated election. When applied to elections, the terms "regular" and "general" are used interchangeably and synonymous. The word "regular" is used in reference to a general election occurring throughout the state. State v. Conrades, 45 Mo. 47; Ward v. Clark, 35 Kan. 315, 10 P. 827.

Result of Election

Usually, the expression of the will of the voters as determined by a count of the ballots. Cipowski v. Calumet City, 322 Ill. 575, 153 N.E. 613, 614.

Special Election

An election for a particular emergency; out of the regular course; as one held to fill a vacancy arising by death of the incumbent of the office. State v. Andresen, 110 Or. 1, 222 P. 585, 587. In a statute, any election at which officers are not chosen. Hutchins v. City of Des Moines, 176 Iowa 189, 157 N.W. 881, 883. In determining whether an election is special or general, regard must be had to the subject-matter as well as date of the election, and, if an election occurs throughout state uniformly by direct operation of law, it is a "general election," but, if it depends on employment of special preliminary proceeding peculiar to process which may or may not occur, and the election is applicable only to a restricted area less than whole state, it is a "special election." Hill v. Hartzell, 121 Or. 4, 252 P. 552, 555.

ELECTION AUDITORS. In English law. Officials annually appointed, to whom was committed the duty of taking and publishing the account of all expenses incurred at parliamentary elections. See 17 & 18 Vict. c. 102, §§ 18, 26-28. But these sections have been repealed by 26 Vict. c. 29, which throws the duty of preparing the accounts on the declared agent of the candidate, and the duty of publishing an abstract of it on the returning officer. Wharton.

ELECTION CONTEST. A contest in behalf of one who has failed of success in election against right of one who has been declared or determined by proper authority to have been successful. State ex rel. Ingles v. Circuit Court of Spink County, 63 S.D. 313, 258 N.W. 278.

ELECTION DISTRICT. A subdivision of territory, whether of state, county, or city, the boundaries of which are fixed by law, for convenience in local or general elections. Lane v. Otis, 68 N.J. Law, 656, 54 A. 442.

The term has been held not to refer to senatorial district. Appeal of Phillips, 262 Pa. 396, 105 A. 547, 548.

ELECTION DOWER. A name sometimes given to the provision which a law or statute makes for a widow in case she “elects” to reject the provision made for her in the will and take what the statute accords. Stanton v. Leonard, 344 Mo. 998, 130 S.W.2d 487, 489.

An estoppel predicated on a voluntary and intelligent action or choice of one of several things which is inconsistent with another, the effect of the estoppel being to prevent the party so choosing from afterwards reversing his election or disputing the state of affairs or rights of others resulting from his original choice. Yates v. Hurd, 8 Colo. 343, 8 Pac. 575.

The doctrine of “estoppel by election” against beneficiary who has elected to take favorable provisions of will from objecting to other provisions of will applies only where will undertakes to bestow a gift and also deprive donee of a prior existing right, thus confronting devisee with alternative of accepting devise and renouncing prior right or of retaining latter and renouncing devise. Mason & Mason v. Brown, Tex.Civ.App., 182 S.W.2d 729, 733.

ELECTION JUDGES. In English law. Judges of the high court selected in pursuance of 31 & 32 Vict. c. 125, § 11, and Jud. Act 1873, § 38, for the trial of election petitions.

ELECTION PETITIONS. Petitions for inquiry into the validity of elections of members of parliament when it is alleged that the return of a member is invalid for bribery or any other reason.

ELECTION RETURNS. The report made to the board of canvassers of the number of votes cast for each candidate, or proposition voted upon by those charged by law with the duty of counting or tallying the votes for or against the respective candidates or propositions. Spear v. Marshall, 95 Utah 62, 79 P.2d 15, 16.

ELECTIONES FIANT RITE ET LIBERE SINE INTERRUPTIONE ALIQUA. Elections should be made in due form, and freely, without any interruption. 2 Inst. 169.

ELECTIVE. Dependent upon choice; bestowed or passing by election. Also pertaining or relating to elections; conferring the right or power to vote at elections.

ELECTIVE FRANCHISE. The right of voting at public elections; the privilege of qualified voters to cast their ballots for the candidates they favor at elections authorized by law. People v. Barber, 48 Hun, N.Y. 198; State v. Staten, 6 Cold. Tenn. 255; Xippas v. Commonwealth, 141 Va. 497, 126 S.E. 207, 209.

ELECTIVE OFFICE. One which is to be filled by popular election. One filled by the direct exercise of the voters’ franchise. In re Opinion of the Justices, 83 N.H. 589, 139 A. 180, 183.

ELECTOR. A duly qualified voter; one who has a vote in the choice of any officer; a constituent. DeBauche v. City of Green Bay, 227 Wis. 148, 277 N.W. 147, 148. One who elects or has the right of choice, or who has the right to vote for any functionary, or for the adoption of any measure. Aczel v. United States, C.C.A.Ind., 232 F. 652, 657. In a narrower sense, one who has the general right to vote, and the right to vote for public officers. One authorized to exercise the elective franchise. McEvoy v. Christensen, 178 Iowa, 1180, 159 N.W. 179, 181. But a woman citizen, though having such general right and authority to vote, may nevertheless not be an “elector” entitled to have her name put on a jury list, in view of a state constitution and statute. People v. Barnett, 319 Ill. 403, 150 N.E. 290, 291.

While the terms “electors” and “voters” are sometimes used interchangeably, their meaning is not precisely the same, “electors” being properly applied to all those entitled to vote, whereas “voters” appropriately designates only those actually voting. State ex rel. Chaney v. Grinstead, 314 Mo. 55, 282 S.W. 715, 719. A fortiori, “electors” is a broader term than “registered voters.” City of Dayton, Ohio, v. City Ry. Co., C.C.A. Ohio, 16 F.2d 401, 405.

One of the persons chosen to comprise the “electoral college” (q. v.).

Also, the title of certain German princes who had a voice in the election of the Holy Roman Emperors. The office of elector in some instances became hereditary and was connected with territorial possessions.

Sometimes, one who exercises the right of election in equity. Brett, L. Cas. Mod. Eq. 257.

Registered Qualified Elector

One possessing the constitutional qualifications, and registered under the registration statute. Minges v. Board of Trustees of City of Merced, 27 Cal.App. 15, 148 P. 816, 817.
ELECTORAL. Pertaining to electors or elections; composed or consisting of electors.

ELECTORAL COLLEGE. A name sometimes given, in the United States, to the college or body of electors of a state charged to elect the president and vice-president; also, the whole body of such electors, composed of the electoral colleges of the several states. Webster; Cent. Dict.; 2 Sto. Const. § 1463; 1 Hare, Am.Const.L. 219; Stevens, Sources of the Constitution of the U. S. 153, note; Black, Const.L. 86; 1 Calhoun’s Works, 175.

ELECTORAL COMMISSION. A commission created by an act of congress of January 29, 1877, to decide certain questions arising out of the presidential election of November, 1876, in which Hayes and Wheeler had been candidates of the Republican party and Tilden and Hendricks of the Democratic party.

ELECTROCUTE. To put (a criminal) to death by passing through the body a current of electricity of high power; also, by extension, to kill by an electric current. Ferguson v. State, 90 Fla. 105, 105 So. 840.

The word is a hybrid, and has met with the disapproval of some for that reason. This barbarism jars the unhappy listener’s nerves much more cruelly than the operation denoted jars those of its victim.” Fowler, Dict. of Mod. English Usage (1926), p. 130. “To one having even an elementary knowledge of Latin grammar this word is no less than disgusting, and the thing meant by it is felt to be altogether too good for the word’s inventor.” Bierce, Write it Right (1909), p. 24. It is not included in the New English Dict. (Oxford, 1897), but is listed without comment in the New Cent. Dict. (1927) and also in Funk & Wagnalls’ New Standard Dict. (1925), which spells it “electrocute.” It is considered by many to be inelegant, but is widely used and has no accepted equivalent.” Webster, New Internatl. Dict. (1927). The word is “in established use, though formerly much criticized from the learned point of view because of the manner of its formation.” Kraus, Comprehensive Guide to Good English (1927), p. 218.

ELECTROLYSIS. The decomposition of a metal solution in water, liquid ammonia, etc., accompanied by decomposition of the water into oxygen and hydrogen or of a mass of molten metal by having an electric current passed through it, Peoria Waterworks Co. v. Peoria Ry. Co., C.C.Ill., 181 F. 990.

As applied to water pipes electrolysis is the stripping off of small particles of the iron when a suitable electrolytic solution is present leaving the carbon of which the pipe is partly composed intact. Peoria Waterworks Co. v. Peoria R. Co., C.C.Ill., 181 F. 990.

ELEEMOSYNA REGIS, and ELEEMOSYNA AR-ATRI, or CARUCARUM. A penny which King Ethelred ordered to be paid for every plow in England towards the support of the poor. Leg. Ethel. c. 1.

ELEEMOSYNIA. Possessions belonging to the church. Blount.

ELEEMOSYNARIA. The place in a religious house where the common alms were deposited, and thence by the almoner distributed to the poor. In old English law, the ‘aumere, aumbr, or ambry; words still used in common speech in the north of England, to denote a pantry or cupboard. Cowell. The office of almoner. Cowell.

ELEEMOSYNARIUS. In old English law. An almoner, or chief officer, who received the eleemosynary rents and gifts, and in due method distributed them to pious and charitable uses. Cowell.

ELEEMOSYNARIUS. In old English law. An almoner, or chief officer, who received the eleemosynary rents and gifts, and in due method distributed them to pious and charitable uses. Cowell; Wharton.

The name of an officer (lord almoner) of the English kings, in former times, who distributed the royal alms or bounty. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 23.

ELEGANTER. In the civil law. Accurately; with discrimination. Veazie v. Williams, 3 Story, 611, 636, Fed.Cas.No.16,907.

ELEGIT. (Lat. He has chosen.) This is the name, in English practice, of a writ of execution first given by the statute of Westm. 2 (13 Edw. I. c. 18) either upon a judgment for a debt or dam- ages or upon the forfeiture of a recognizance Taken in the king’s court. It is so called because it is in the choice or election of the plaintiff whether he will sue out this writ or a fi. fa. By it the de- fendant’s goods and chattells are appraised and all of them (except oxen and beasts of the plow) are delivered to the plaintiff, at such reasonable appraisement and price, in part satisfaction of his debt. If the goods are not sufficient, then the moiety of his freehold lands, which he had at the time of the judgment given, are also to be deliv- ered to the plaintiff, to hold till out of the rents and profits thereof the debt be levied, or till the defendant’s interest be expired. During this per- iod the plaintiff is called "tenant by elegit," and his estate, an "estate by elegit." This writ, or its analogue, is in use in some of the United States, as Virginia and Kentucky. See 3 Bl. Comm. 418; North American F. Ins. Co. v. Gra- ham, 5 Sandf. (N.Y.) 197.

Also, one of the simple substances or principles of which, according to early natural philoso- phers, the physical universe is composed, the four elements pointed out by Empedocles being air, water, earth, and fire. Webster. See Elements.

ELEMENTS. The forces of nature. The ultimate undecomposable parts which unite to form anything. Leahy v. Wenonah Theater Co., 251 Mich. 594, 232 N.W. 184, 185. Popularly, fire, air, earth, and water, anciently supposed to be the four simple bodies of which the world was com- posed. Encyc. Dict. Often applied in a particu- lar sense to wind and water, as "the fury of the elements." Cent. Dict. Fire is one of the ele- ments included in the expression "damages by the elements" as used in a lease of a building. O'Neal v. Bainbridge, 94 Kan. 518, 146 P. 1165, 1167, Ann. Cas.1917B, 293. The same is true of water. Mills v. United States, 52 Ct.Cl. 452, 458. It has also been said that "damages by the elements" means the same thing as "damages by the act of God." Van Wormer v. Crane, 51 Mich. 363, 16 N.W. 686, 47 Am.Rep. 582.

ELEVATOR. A building containing one or more mechanical elevators, especially a warehouse for conveying passengers, though also used for conveying freight, and though not of any parti- cular form laid in any particular way or with any particular kind of gates or safety contrivances. Wilmarth v. Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. of Cali- fornia, 168 Cal. 536, 143 P. 780, 782, Ann.Cas.1915B, 1120.

ELIGIBILITY. Proper to be chosen; qualified to be elected; legally qualified. Rainey v. Taylor, 166 Ga. 476, 143 S.E. 383; State ex rel. Evans v. Wheatley, 197 Ark. 997, 125 S.W.2d 101, 103. A. word which, when used in connection with an office, where there are no explanatory words indic- ating that it is used with reference to the time of election, may be deemed to refer to the qualifica- tion to hold the office rather than to be elected. Bradfield v. Avery, 16 Idaho, 769, 102 P. 687, 23 L. R.A.,N.S., 1228. See Eligible.

ELIMINATION. In old English law. The act of banishing or turning out of doors; rejection.

ELINGUATION. The punishment of cutting out the tongue.

ELISORS. In practice. Electors or choosers. Persons appointed by the court to execute writs of venire, in cases where both the sheriff and coroner are disqualified from acting, and whose duty is to choose—that is, name and return—the jury. 3 Bl.Comm. 355; Doherty v. Kalmbach, 87 F.2d 539, 541, 66 App.D.C. 322.

Persons appointed to execute any writ, In de- fault of the sheriff and coroner, are also called "elisors." See Bruner v. Superior Court, 92 Cal. 239, 28 Pac. 341. An elisor may be appointed to take charge of a jury retiring to deliberate upon a verdict, when both sheriff and coroner are dis- qualified or unable to act. People v. Fellows, 122 Cal. 233, 54 Pac. 830.

ELL. A measure of length, answering to the modern yard. 1 Bl.Comm, 275.

ELLENBOROUGH’S ACT. An English statute (43 Geo. III. c. 58) punishing offenses against the person.
ELLIPSIS. Omission of words or clauses necessary to complete the construction, but not necessary to convey the meaning. State v. Staub, 182 La. 1040, 162 So. 766.

ELOGIUM. In the civil law. A will or testament.

ELOATNE. (Fr. eloir, to remove to a distance; to remove afar off.) In practice. A return to a writ of replevin, when the chattels have been removed out of the way of the sheriff.

ELOIGNMENT. The getting a thing or person out of the way; or removing it to a distance, so as to be out of reach. Garneau v. Mill Co., 8 Wash. 467, 36 P. 463.

ELONGATA. In practice. Eloigned; carried away to a distance. The old form of the return made by a sheriff to a writ of replevin, stating that the goods or beasts had been eloigned; that is, carried to a distance, to places to him unknown. 3 Bl.Comm. 148; 3 Steph.Comm. 522; Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 73, 74; Archb. N. Pract. 552. The word eloigne is sometimes used as synonymous with elongata.

ELONGATUS. Eloigned. A return made by a sheriff to a writ de homine repiegando, stating that the party to be repleved has been eloigned, or conveyed out of his jurisdiction. 3 Bl.Comm. 129.

ELONGAVIT. In England, where in a proceeding by foreign attachment the plaintiff has obtained judgment of appraisement, but by reason of some act of the garnishee the goods cannot be appraised, (as where he has removed them from the city, or has sold them, etc.,) the serjeant-at-mace returns that the garnishee has eloigned them, i. e., removed them out of the jurisdiction, and on this return (called an "elongavit") judgment is given for the plaintiff that an inquiry be made of the goods eloigned. This inquiry is set down for trial, and the assessment is made by a jury after the manner of ordinary issues. Sweet.

ELOPEMENT. The act of a wife who voluntarily deserts her husband to go away with and cohabit with another man. 2 Bl.Comm. 130; State v. O'Higgins, 178 N.C. 708, 100 S.E. 438. The departure of a married woman from her husband and dwelling with an adulterer. Cowell; Tomlin. Also, the act of a man in going away with a woman who has voluntarily left her husband, to indulge in sexual intercourse with her. State v. Hopp, 186 N.C. 405, 119 S.E. 769, 773.

To constitute an elopement, the wife must not only leave the husband, but go beyond his actual control; for if she abandons the husband, and goes and lives in adultery in a house belonging to him, it is said not to be an elopement. Cogswell v. Fibbetts, 3 N.H. 42.

In a popular sense, also, the act of an unmarried woman in secretly leaving her home with a man, especially with a view to marriage without her parents' consent.

ELSEWHERE. In another place; in any other place. See 1 Vern. 4, and note; 3 P.Wms. 56; Azbill v. State, 19 Ariz. 499, 172 P. 658, 659; Su-

In shipping articles, this term, following the designation of the port of destination, must be construed either as void for uncertainty or as subordinate to the principal voyage stated in the preceding words. Brown v. Jones, 2 Gall. 477, Fed. Cas. No. 2,017.

ELUVIONES. In old pleading. Spring tides.

EMANCIPATION. The act by which one who was unfree, or under the power and control of another, is rendered free, or set at liberty and made his own master. Town of Plainville v. Town of Milford, 119 Conn. 380, 177 A. 138, 140.

The term is principally used with reference to the emancipation of a minor child by its parents, which involves an entire surrender of the right to the care, custody, and earnings of such child as well as a renunciation of parental duties. Delaware L. & W. R. Co. v. Petrowsky, C.C.A., 250 F. 554, 559; Public Service Co. of Indiana v. Tackett, 113 Ind.App. 307, 47 N.E.2d 851, 853. The emancipation may be express, as by voluntary agreement of parent and child, or implied from such acts and conduct as import consent, and it may be conditional or absolute, complete or partial. Wallace v. Cox, 136 Tenn. 69, 188 S.W. 611, 612, L.R.A.1917B, 690.

Complete emancipation is entire surrender of care, custody, and earnings of child, as well as renunciation of parental duties. Beebe v. Kansas City, 223 Mo.App. 642, 17 S.W.2d 608, 612. And a "partial emancipation" frees a child for only a part of the period of minority, or from only a part of the parent's rights, or for some purposes, and not for others. Memphis Steel Const. Co. v. Lister, 138 Tenn. 307, 197 S.W. 902, 903, L.R.A.1918B, 406.

Express Emancipation

That which results when parent and child voluntarily agree that the child, able to take care of himself, may go out from his home and make his own living, receive his own wages, and spend them as he pleases. Nichols v. Harvey & Hancock, 206 Ky. 112, 266 S.W. 870, 871.

In England

The term "emancipation" has been borrowed from the Roman law, and is constantly used in the law of parochial settlements. 7 Adol. & E., N.S., 574, note.

In Roman Law

The enfranchisement of a son by his father, which was ancienly done by the formality of an imaginary sale. This was abolished by Justinian, who substituted the simpler proceeding of a manumission before a magistrate. Inst. 1, 12, 6.

Embezzlement is common-law larceny extended by statute to cover cases where the stolen property comes originally into the possession of the defendant without a trespass. Moody v. People, 65 Colo. 339, 176 P. 476.

Embezzlement is a species of larceny, and the term is applicable to cases of furtive and fraudulent appropriation by clerks, servants, or carriers of property coming into their possession by virtue of their employment. It is distinguished from "larceny," properly so called, as being committed in respect of property which is not at the time in the actual or legal possession of the owner. Thus it must be said, that in embezzlement the original taking of the property was lawful or with the consent of the owner, while in larceny the felonious intent must have existed at the time of the taking. Tredwell v. U. S., C.C.A.Va., 266 F. 350, 352. Both words, however, may be used, as in a bond, as generic terms to indicate the dishonest and fraudulent breach of any duty or obligation upon the part of an employee to pay over to his employer, or account to him for any money, securities, or other personal property, title to which is in the employer, but which may come into the possession of the employee. EMBLERS DE GENTZ. L. Fr. A stealing from the people. The phrase occurs in the old rolls of parliament: “Whereas divers murders, embiers de gentz, and robberies are committed,” etc.

EMBOLISM. In medical jurisprudence. The mechanical obstruction of an artery or capillary by some body traveling in the blood current, as, a blood-clot (embolus), a globule of fat or an air-bubble.

Embolism is to be distinguished from “thrombosis,” a thrombus being a clot of blood formed in the heart or a blood vessel in consequence of some impediment of the circulation from pathological causes, as distinguished from mechanical causes, for example, an alteration of the blood or walls of the blood vessels. When embolism occurs in the brain (called “cerebral embolism”) there is more or less coagulation of the blood in the surrounding parts, and there may be apoplectic shock or paralysis of the brain, and its functional activity may be so far disturbed as to cause entire or partial insanity. See Cundall v. Haswell, 23 R.I. 508, 51 A. 426.

EMBOLUS. In case of wounds is a product of coagulation of the blood or blood clot. Berryhill v. Nichols, 171 Miss. 769, 158 So. 470. A plug which floats along until it becomes lodged so as to obstruct the passage of the blood. It consists usually of a clot or fibrin, a shred from a morbid growth, a globule of fat, air bubbles, or a micro-organism. An embolus or floating particle by attaching itself or becoming wedged may form a thrombosis or occlusion. Norris v. Industrial Commission, 90 Utah 256, 61 P.2d 413, 414.

EMBRACEOR. A person guilty of the offense of embracery (q. v.). See Co. Litt. 369.

EMBRACERY. In criminal law. This offense consists in the attempt to influence a jury corruptly to one side or the other, by promises, persuasions, entreaties, entertainments, douceurs, and the like. The person guilty of it is called an “embraceor.” Moss v. Arnold, 63 Okla.Cr. 343, 75 P.2d 491, 503; Commonwealth v. Fahey, 113 Pa.Super. 598, 173 A. 854, 856.

Embracery being but an attempt corruptly to influence juror, there is no such crime as attempt to commit embracery. Wiseman v. Commonwealth, 143 Va. 631, 130 S.E. 249, 251.

EMENDA. Amends; something given in reparation for a trespass; or, in old Saxon times, in compensation for an injury or crime. Spelman.

EMENDALS. An old word still made use of in the accounts of the society of the Inner Temple, where so much in emendals at the foot of an account on the balance thereof signifies so much money in the bank or stock of the houses, for reparation of losses, or other emergent occasions. Spelman.

EIVICENDARE. In Saxon law. To make amends or satisfaction for any crime or trespass committed; to pay a fine; to be fined. Spelman. Emen- dare se, to redeem, or ransom one’s life, by payment of a werigeld.

EMENDATIO. In old English law. Amendment, or correction. The power of amending and correcting abuses, according to certain rules and measures. Cowell.

In Saxon law. A pecuniary satisfaction for an injury; the same as emenda (q. v.). Spelman.

EMENDATIO PANIS ET CEREVISUE. In old English law. The power of supervising and correcting the weights and measures of bread and ale, (assisting bread and beer.) Cowell.

EMERGE. To arise; to come to light. “Unless a matter happen to emerge after issue joined.” Hale, Anal. § 1.

EMERGENCY. A sudden unexpected happening; an unforeseen occurrence or condition; specifically, perplexing contingency or complication of circumstances; a sudden or unexpected occasion for action; exigency; pressing necessity.

EMERGENCY EMPLOYMENT DOCTRINE. A regularly employed servant possessives implied authority to engage an assistant to aid in performing a task, within scope of servant’s duties in case of emergency rendering it absolutely necessary to obtain such assistance, and without which emergency conditions could not be overcome by servant or any of his coemployees in regular service of their common master. Hall v. O. C. Whitaker Co., 143 Tex. 397, 185 S.W.2d 720, 722, 723.

EMERGENCY LANDING AREA. Any area that a plane could possibly be landed into with or without motor. It should be from five hundred to a thousand feet in length, depending on obstructions around it, and width is not so important, although it should be at least two or three times that of plane. Shaw v. Carson, 218 Iowa 1251, 257 N.W. 194.

EMERGENT YEAR. The epoch or date whence any people begin to compute their time.

EMIGRANT. One who quits his country for any lawful reason, with a design to settle elsewhere, and takes his family and property, if he has any, with him. Vattel, b. 1, c. 19, § 224. Benson v. State, 36 Ga.App. 87, 135 S.E. 514.

EMIGRATION. The act of removing from one country or state to another.

It is to be distinguished from “expatriation.” The latter means the abandonment of one’s country and renunciation of one's citizenship in it, while emigration denotes merely the removal of person and property to another country. The former is usually the consequence of the latter. Emigration is also used of the removal from one section to another of the same country.

EMINENCE. An honorary title given to cardinals. They were called "illustriissimi" and "reverendissimi" until the pontificate of Urban VIII.

EMINENT DOMAIN. The power to take private property for public use. MacVeagh v. Multon-omah County, 126 Or. 417, 270 P. 502, 507.

The right of eminent domain is the right of the state, through its regular organization, to reassert, either temporarily or permanently, its dominion over any portion of the soil of the state on account of public exigency and for the public good. In time of war or insurrection, the proper authorities may possess and hold any part of the territory of the state for the common safety; and in time of peace the legislature may authorize the appropriation of the same to public purposes, such as the opening of roads, construction of defenses, or providing channels for trade or travel.

The right of society, or of the sovereign, to dispose, in case of necessity, and for the public safety, of all the wealth contained in the state, is called "eminent domain." Jones v. Walker, 2 Paine, 688, Fed.Cas.No.7,507.

Eminent domain is the highest and most exact idea of property remaining in the government, or in the aggregate body of the people in their sovereign capacity. It gives a right to resume the possession of the property in the manner directed by the constitution and the laws of the state, whenever the public interest requires it. Beekman v. Saratoga & S. R. Co., 3 Paige, N.Y., 45, 73, 22 Am. Dec. 679.

"The exaction of money from individuals under the right of taxation, and the appropriation of private property for public use by virtue of the power of eminent domain, must not be taxed. In paying taxes the citizen contributes his just and ascertained share to the expenses of the government under which he lives. But when his property is taken under the power of eminent domain, he is compelled to surrender to the public something above and beyond his due proportion for the public benefit. The matter is special. It is in the nature of a compulsory sale to the state." Black, Tax-Titles, § 3; Beeland Wholesale Co. v. Kaufman, 234 Ala. 249, 174 So. 516, 520.

The term "eminent domain" is sometimes (but inaccurately) applied to the land, buildings, etc., owned directly by the government, and which have not yet passed into any private ownership. This species of property is much better designated as the "public domain," or "national domain."

EMISSARY. A person sent upon a mission as the agent of another; also a secret agent sent to ascertain the sentiments and designs of others, and to propagate opinions favorable to his employer.

EMISSION. In medical jurisprudence. The ejection or throwing out of any secretion or other matter from the body; the expulsion of urine, semen, etc.

EMIT. To put forth or send out; to issue. "No state shall emit bills of credit." Const. U. S. art. 1, § 10.

To issue; to give forth with authority; to put into circulation. See Bill of Credit.

The word "emit" is never employed in describing those contracts by which a state binds itself to pay money at a future day for services actually received, or for money borrowed for present use. Nor are instruments executed for such purposes, in common language, denominated "bills of credit." "To emit bills of credit" conveys to the mind the idea of issuing paper intended to circulate through the community, for its ordinary purposes, as money, which paper is redeemable at a future day. Briscoe v. Bank of Kentucky, 11 Pet. 316, 9 L.Ed. 709.

To throw off; give out; discharge. Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. Stewart, 15 Ala.App. 466, 73 So. 827, 828.

In Scotch practice. To speak out; to state in words. A prisoner is said to emit a declaration. 2 Alis.Crim.Pr. 560.

EMMENAGOGUES. In medical jurisprudence. The name of a class of medicines supposed to have the property of promoting the menstrual discharge, and sometimes used for the purpose of procuring abortion.

EMOLUMENT. The profit arising from office or employment; that which is received as a compensation for services, or which is annexed to the possession of office as salary, fees, and perquisites; advantage; gain, public or private. Webster. Any perquisite, advantage, profit, or gain arising from the possession of an office. Apple v. Crawford County, 105 Pa. 303, 51 Am.Rep. 205; United States v. MacMillan, D.C.111., 209 F. 266, 272; McLean v. United States, 3 S.Ct. 122, 124, 226 U.S. 374, 57 L.Ed. 260; State ex rel. Todd v. Reeves, 196 Wash. 145, 82 P.2d 173, 175, 118 A.L.R. 177.

EMOTIONAL INSANITY. The species of mental aberration produced by a violent excitement of the emotions or passions, though the reasoning faculties may remain unimpaired. A passion, effecting for a space of time complete derangement of accused's intellect, or an impulse, which his mind is not able to resist, to do the act. Fanmon v. Commonwealth, 295 Ky. 817, 175 S.W.2d 531, 533. See Insanity.

EMPALEMENT. In ancient law. A mode of incurring the emotions or passions, though the reasoning faculties may remain unimpaired. A passion, effecting for a space of time complete derangement of accused's intellect, or an impulse, which his mind is not able to resist, to do the act. Fanmon v. Commonwealth, 295 Ky. 817, 175 S.W.2d 531, 533. See Insanity.

EMPALEMENT. In ancient law. A mode of inflicting punishment, by thrusting a sharp pole up the fundament. Enc. Lond.

EMPANNEL. See Impanel.

EMPARLANCE. See Imparlance.

EMPEROR. The title of the sovereign ruler of an empire. This designation was adopted by the rulers of the Roman world after the decay of the republic, and was assumed by those who claimed to be their successors in the "Holy Roman Empire," as also by Napoleon. The sovereigns of Japan and Morocco are often, though with little propriety, called emperors." 10 Encyc. Amer. (1929), p. 300. In western speech the former sovereigns of Turkey and China were called emperors. Cent. Diet.

The title "emperor" seems to denote a power and dignity superior to that of a "king." It ap-OMPED. To indict; to prefer a charge against; to accuse.

EMPLOY. To engage in one’s service; to use as an agent or substitute in transacting business; to commission and intrust with the management of one’s affairs; and, when used in respect to a servant or hired laborer, the term is equivalent to hiring, which implies a request and a contract for a compensation, and has but this one meaning when used in the ordinary affairs and business of life. Tennessee Coal, Iron & R. Co. v. Muscoda Local No. 123, Ala., 64 S.Ct. 698, 703, 705, 321 U.S. 590, 88 L.Ed. 949; Slocum Straw Works v. Industrial Commission, 232 Wis. 71, 286 N.W. 593, 598; It is a synonym of “appoint”. Morris v. Parks, 145 Or. 481, 28 P.2d 215, 216; Board of Com’rs of Colfax County v. Department of Public Health, 44 N.M. 189, 100 P.2d 222, 223, It is also synonymous with “hire.” Nat. Wooden Box Ass’n v. U. S., Ct.C1., 103 Ct.C1. 595, 59 F.Supp. 118, 119.

EMPLOYED. This signifies both the act of doing a thing and the being under contract or orders to do it. To give employment to; to have employment. State v. Birmingham Beauty Shop, Ala., 198 So. 435, 436.

EMPLOYEE. This word "is from the French, but has become somewhat naturalized in our language. Strictly and etymologically, it means 'a person employed,' but, in practice in the French language, it ordinarily is used to signify a person in some official employment, and as generally used with us, though perhaps not confined to any official employment, it is understood to mean some permanent employment or position." The word may be more extensive than "clerk" or "officer," and may signify any one in place, or having charge or using a function, as well as one in office. Hopkins v. Cromwell, 89 App.Div. 481, 85 N.Y.S. 839.

One who works for an employer; a person working for salary or wages; applied to anyone so working, but usually only to clerks, workmen, laborers, etc., and but rarely to the higher officers of a corporation or government or to domestic servants. Keeve v. City of Monroe, 120 So. 106, 9 La.App. 545; State ex rel. Gorczyca v. City of Minneapolis, 174 Minn. 594, 219 N.W. 924.

Generally, when person for whom services are performed has right to control and direct individual who performs services not only as to result to be accomplished by work but also as to details and means by which result is accomplished, individual subject to direction is an "employee". Young v. Demos, 70 Ga.App. 577, 28 S.E.2d 891, 893.

For "Executive Employee", see that title.

EMPLOYER. One who employs the services of others; one for whom employees work and who pays their wages or salaries. The correlative of employee." Angell v. White Eagle Oil & Refining Co., 169 Minn. 183, 210 N.W. 1004, 1005. "Master" is a synonymous term. Tennessee Valley Appliances v. Rowden, 24 Tenn.App. 487, 146 S.W.2d 845, 846; Gooden v. Mitchell, 2 Terry 301, 21 A.2d 197, 200.

The following are examples of persons who have been or have not been classified as "employers" within various statutes: Carriers' Taxing Act. Interstate Transit Lines v. U. S., D.C.Neb., 56 F.Supp. 357, 359, 182 Misc. 641. National Labor Relations Act. National Labor Relations Board v. Cond. Corporation of America, 341 F.2d 69, 63, (quoting and adopting decision in State v. Foster, 37 Iowa, 404; Mccluskey v. Cromwell, N.Y. 593). It does not necessarily import an engagement or rendering services for another. A person may as well be "employed" about his own business as in the transaction of the same for a principal. State v. Canton, 43 Mo. 51.

Act of employing or state of being employed; that which engages or occupies; that which consumes time or attention; also an occupation, profession, trade, post or business. Hinton v. Columbia River Packers' Ass'n, C.C.A.Or., 117 F.2d 310; Davis v. Lincoln County, 117 Neb. 148, 219 N.W. 899, 900.

Includes the doing of the work and a reasonable margin of time and space required in passing to and from the place where the work is to be done. California Casualty Indemnity Exchange v. Industrial Accident Commission, 21 Cal. 2d 751, 135 P.2d 158, 161; Park Utah Consol. Mines Co. v. Industrial Commission, 103 Utah 64, 133 P.2d 314, 317.

The term "office" implies a delegation of a portion of the sovereign power to, and the possession of it by, the person filling the office, while an "employment" does not comprehend a delegation of any part of the sovereign authority. Dade County v. State, 95 Fla. 465, 116 So. 72, 76.

EMPLOYMENT AGENCY. Business operated by a person, firm or corporation engaged in procuring, for a fee, employment for others and employees for employers. McMillan v. City of Knoxville, 139 Tenn. 319, 202 S.W. 65, 66.

EMPORIUM. A place for wholesale trade in commodities carried by sea. The name is sometimes applied to a seaport town, but it properly signifies only a particular place in such a town. Smith, Dict. Antiq.

EMPRESARIOS. In Mexican law. Undertakers or promoters of extensive enterprises, aided by concessions or monopolistic grants from government; particularly, persons receiving extensive land grants in consideration of their bringing emigrants into the country and settling them on the lands, with a view of increasing the population and developing the resources of the country. U. S. v. Maxwell Land-Grant Co., 7 S.Ct. 1015, 121 U.S. 325, 30 L.Ed. 949.

EMPRESTIO. In Spanish law. A loan. Something lent to the borrower at his request. Las Partidas, pt. 3, tit. 18, 1. 70.

EMPTIO. In the Roman and civil law. The act of buying; a purchase.

EMPTIO BONORUM. A species of forced assignment for the benefit of creditors; being a public sale of an insolvent debtor's estate whereby the purchaser succeeded to all his property, rights, and claims, and became responsible for his debts. and liabilities to the extent of a quota fixed before the transfer. See Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 521.

EMPTIO ET VENDITIO. Purchase and sale; sometimes translated "emption and vendition." The name of the contract of sale in the Roman law. Inst. 3, 23; Bract. fol. 61b. Sometimes made a compound word, empto-venditio.

EMPTIO REI SPERATIE. A purchase in the hope of an uncertain future profit; the purchase of a thing not yet in existence or not yet in the possession of the seller, as, the cast of a net or a crop to be grown, and the price of which is to depend on the actual gain. On the other hand, if the price is fixed and not subject to fluctuation, but is to be paid whether the gain be greater or less, it is called empto spei. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 400.

EMPTOR. Lat. A buyer or purchaser. Used in the maxim "caveat emptor," let the buyer beware; i.e., the buyer of an article must be on his guard and take the risks of his purchase.

EMPTOR EMIT QUAM MINIMO POTEST, VEN- DITOR VENDIT QUAM MAXIMO POTEST. The buyer purchases for the lowest price he can; the seller sells for the highest price he can. 2 Kent, Comm. 486.

EMTIO. In the civil law. Purchase. This form of the word is used in the Digests and Code. Dig. 18, 1; Cod. 4, 49. See Emptio.

EMTOR. In the civil law. A buyer or purchaser; the buyer. Dig. 18, 1; Cod. 4, 49.

EMTRIX. In the civil law. A female purchaser; the purchaser. Cod. 4, 54, 1.

EN ARERE. L. Fr. In time past. 2 Inst. 506.

EN AUTRE DROIT. In the right of another. See Autre Droit.

EN BANC. L. Fr. In the bench. 1 Anders. 51.

EN BREVET. In French law. An acte is said to be en brevet when a copy of it has not been recorded by the notary who drew it.

EN DECLARATION DE SIMULATION. A form of action used in Louisiana. Its object is to have a contract declared judicially a simulation and a nullity, to remove a cloud from the title, and to bring back, for any legal purpose, the thing sold to the estate of the true owner. Edwards v. Ballard, 20 La. Ann. 169.

EN DEMEURER. In default. Used in Louisiana of a debtor who fails to pay on demand according to the terms of his obligation. See Bryan v. Cox, 3 Mart. (La. N. S.) 574.

EN ESCHANGE IL COVIENT QUE LES EST- TATES SOIENT EGALES. Co. Litt. 50. In an exchange it is desirable that the estates be equal.

EN FAIT. Fr. In tact; in deed; actually.

EN GROS. Fr. In gross. Total; by wholesale.

EN JUICIO. Span. Judicially; in a court of law; in a suit at law. White, New Recop. b. 2, tit. 8, c. 1.

EN MASSE. Fr. In a mass; in a lump; at wholesale.

EN MORT MAYNE. L. Fr. In a dead hand; in mortmain. Britt. c. 43.

EN OWEL MAIN. L. Fr. In equal hand. The word "owel" occurs also in the phrase "owelty of partition."

EN RECOUVREMENT. Fr. In French law. An express employed to denote that an indorsement made in favor of a person does not transfer to him the property in the bill of exchange, but merely constitutes an authority to such person to recover the amount of the bill. Arg. Fr. Mere. Law, 558.

EN ROUTE. Fr. On the way; in the course of a voyage or journey; in course of transportation. McLean v. U. S., 17 Ct.C1. 90.

EN VENTRE SA MERE. L. Fr. In its mother's womb. A term descriptive of an unborn child. For some purposes the law regards an infant en ventre as in being. It may take a legacy; have a guardian; an estate may be limited to its use, etc. 1 Bl. Comm. 130.

EN VIE. L. Fr. In life; alive. Britt. c. 50.

ENABLE. To give power to do something. In the case of a person under disability as to dealing with another, "enable" has the primary meaning of removing that disability; not of conferring a compulsory power as against that other; 66 L. J. Ch. 208; [1897] A. C. 647. To make able. Summers v. Chicago Title & Trust Co., 335 Ill. 564, 167 N.E. 777, 779.

ENABLING POWER. When the donor of a power, who is the owner of the estate, confers upon persons not seised of the fee the right of creating interests to take effect out of it, which could not be done by the donee of the power unless by such authority, this is called an "enabling power." 2 Bouv. Inst. no. 1928.

ENABLING STATUTE. The act of 32 Henry VIII. c. 28, by which tenants in tail, husbands seised in right of their wives, and others were empowered to make leases for their lives or for twenty-one years, which they could not do before. 2 Bl. Comm. 319; Co. Litt. 44a. The phrase is also applied to any statute enabling persons or corporations to do what before they could not. It is applied to statutes which confer new powers.

ENACH. In Saxon law. The satisfaction for a crime; the recompense for a fault. Skene.

ENACT. To establish by law; to perform or effect; to decree. The usual introductory formula in making laws is, "Be it enacted." In re Senate File, 25 Neb. 864, 41 N.W. 981.
ENACTING CLAUSE. That part of a statute which declares its enactment and serves to identify it as an act of legislation proceeding from the proper legislative authority. Various formulas are used for this clause, such as "Be it enacted by the people of the state of Illinois represented in general assembly," "Be it enacted by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled," "The general assembly do enact," etc. A section of a statute of America in congress assembled," "The general assembly," "Be it enacted by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America represented in general assembly," "The general assembly do enact," etc. A section of a statute denouncing an offense is sometimes spoken of as the "enacting clause." City of Astoria v. Malone, 169 P. 749, 750, 87 Or. 88. See United States v. Mendelsohn, D.C.N.J., 32 F.Supp. 622, 623, questioning this definition.

ENAJENACION. In Spanish and Mexican law. Alienation; transfer of property. The act by which the property in a thing, by lucrative title, is transferred, as a donation; or by onerous title, as by sale or barter. In a more extended sense, the term comprises also the contracts of emphyteusis, pledge, and mortgage, and even the creation of a servitude upon an estate. Escriche; Mulford v. Le Franc, 26 Cal. 88.

ENBREVER. L. Fr. To write down in short; to abbreviate, or, in old language, imbreviare; to put into a schedule. Britt. c. 1.

ENCAUSTUM. In the civil law. A kind of ink or writing fluid appropriate to the use of the emperor. Cod. 1, 23, 6.

ENCEINTE. Pregnant. See Pregnancy.

ENCHESON. The occasion, cause, or reason for which anything is done. Termes de la Ley.

ENCLOSE. See Inclose.

ENCLOSURE. See Inclosure.

ENCOMIENDA. In Spanish law. A grant from the crown to a private person of a certain portion of territory in the Spanish colonies, together with the concession of a certain number of the native inhabitants, on the feudal principle of commenda. 161, 162. Also a royal grant of privileges to the military orders of Spain.

ENCOURAGE. In criminal law. To instigate; to incite to action; to give courage to; to inspirit; to embolden; to raise confidence; to make confident; to help; to forward; to advise. Comitez v. Parkerson, C.C.La., 50 F. 170.

ENCROACH. To enter by gradual steps or stealth into the possessions or rights of another; to trespass; intrude. Miami Corporation v. State, 186 La. 784, 173 So. 315, 318. To gain unlawfully upon the lands, property, or authority of another; as if one man presses upon the grounds of another too far, or if a tenant owe two shillings rent-service, and the lord exact three. So, too, the Spencers were said to encroach the king’s authority. Blount; Plowd. 94a.

ENCROACHMENT. An encroachment upon a street or highway is a fixture, such as a wall or fence, which illegally intrudes into or invades the highway or incloses a portion of it, diminishing its width or area, but without closing it to public travel. State v. Scott, 82 N.H. 278, 132 A. 685, 686.

In the law of easements. Where the owner of an easement alters the dominant tenement, so as to impose an additional restriction or burden on the servient tenement, he is said to commit an encroachment. Sweet.

ENCUMBER. See Incumber.

ENCUMBRANCE. See Incumbrance.

END. Object; intent. Things are construed according to the end. Finch, Law, b. 1, c. 3, no. 10.

END LINES. In mining law, the end lines of a claim, as platted or laid down on the ground, are those which mark its boundaries on the shorter dimension, where it crosses the vein, while the "side lines" are those which mark its longer dimension, where it follows the course of the vein. But with reference to extra-lateral rights, if the claim as a whole crosses the vein, instead of following its course, the end lines will become side lines and vice versa. Consolidated Wyoming Gold Min. Co. v. Champion Min. Co., C.C.Cal., 63 F. 549.

END OR NEARLY SO. Approaching vessels whose courses diverge not more than one or two points are meeting “end on or nearly so,” within article 18 of the Inland Rules (33 USCA § 203), and are required to pass port to port. The Amolco, C.C.A.Mass., 283 F. 890, 893.

END SILLS. The sill of a car is one of the main longitudinal timbers which are connected transversely by the end sills, bolsters, and cross-ties. Sills are divided into side sills, intermediate sills, and center sills. The end sill is the transverse member of the under frame of a car framed across the ends of all the longitudinal sills. In passenger cars the end sill comes directly under the end door; the platform with its various parts usually being a separate construction. The platform end sill is the transverse end piece of the platform frame, and is also called the “end timber” and buffer beam on passenger equipment cars. Hill v. Minneapolis, St. P. & S. S. M. Ry. Co., 160 Minn. 484, 200 N.W. 485, 486.

END TO END. The expression “end to end,” used in a patent claim in describing the relative position of rollers, does not necessarily require that there shall be no longitudinal space between the ends of the rollers, nor impose a limitation which will enable another to avoid infringement by leaving a space between them, where it does not change their function or mode of operation. Stebler v. Riverside Heights Orange Growers’ Ass’n, C.C.A.Cal., 205 F. 735, 740.
ENDEAVOR. To exert physical and intellectual strength toward the attainment of an object; a systematic or continuous effort. Thompson v. Corbin, Tex.Civ.App., 137 S.W.2d 157, 159.

ENDENZIE, or ENDENIZEN. To make free; to enfranchise.

ENDOW. To give a dower; to bestow upon; to make pecuniary provision for. Fish v. Fish, 184 Ky. 700, 212 S.W. 586, 587.

ENDOWED SCHOOLS. In England, certain schools having endowments are distinctively known as "endowed schools;" and a series of acts of parliament regulating them are known as the "endowed schools acts." Mozley & Whitley.

ENDOWMENT. The assignment of dower; the setting off of a woman's dower. 2 Bl. Comm. 135.

In appropriations of churches (in English law,) the setting off a sufficient maintenance for the vicar in perpetuity. 1 Bl. Comm. 387.

The act of settling a fund, or permanent pecuniary provision, for the maintenance of a public institution, charity, college, etc.

A fund settled upon a public institution, etc., for its maintenance or use.

The words "endowment" and "fund," in a statute exempting from taxation the real estate, the furniture and personal property, and the "endowment or fund" of religious and educational corporations, are ejusdem generic, and intended to comprehend a class of property different from the other two, not real estate or chattels. The difference between the words is that "fund" is a general term, including the endowment, while "endowment" means that particular fund, or part of the fund, of the institution, bestowed for its more permanent uses, and usually kept sacred for the purposes intended. The word "endowment" does not, in such an enactment, include real estate. See First Reformed Dutch Church v. Lyon, 32 N.J.Law, 360; Appeal of Wagner Institute, 116 Pa. 555, 11 A. 402.

ENDOWMENT POLICY. In life insurance. A policy which is payable when the insured reaches a given age, or upon his decease, if that occurs earlier. Central States Life Ins. Co. v. Morris, 202 Ark. 969, 155 S.W.2d 333, 336, 202 Ark. 969.

ENDURANCE. State or capability of lasting; continuance; or act or instance of bearing or suffering; a continuing or the power of continuing under pain, hardship, or distress without being overcome; sufferance; as beyond endurance. State ex rel. Adams v. Crowder, 46 N.M. 20, 120 P.2d 428, 431.

ENEMY, in public law, signifies either the state which is at war with another, or a citizen or subject of such state, or a person, partnership, or corporation doing business within the territory of an enemy state or an ally thereof. United States v. Fricke, D.C.N.Y., 259 F. 673, 675; Rossie v. Garvan, D.C.Conn., 274 F. 447, 453.

Alien Enemy
An alien, that is, a citizen or subject of a foreign state or power, residing within a given country, is called an "alien ami" if the country where he lives is at peace with the country of which he is a citizen or subject; but if a state of war exists between the two countries, he is called an "alien enemy," and in that character is denied access to the courts or aid from any of the departments of government.

Enemy Belligerent
Citizens who associate themselves with the military arm of an enemy government and enter the United States bent on hostile acts. Ex parte Quirin, App.D.C., 63 S.Ct. 2, 15, 317 U.S. 1, 87 L.Ed. 3.

Enemy’s Property
In international law, and particularly in the usage of prize courts, this term designates any property which is engaged or used in illegal intercourse with the public enemy, whether belonging to an ally or a citizen, as the illegal traffic stamps it with the hostile character and attaches to it all the penal consequences. Prize Cases, 2 Black, 674, 17 L.Ed. 459.

Public Enemy
A nation at war with the United States; also every citizen or subject of such nation. Not including robbers, thieves, private depredators, or riotous mobs. State v. Moore, 74 Mo. 417, 41 Am. Rep. 322.

The term has latterly acquired, in the vocabulary of journalism and civic indignation, a more extended meaning, denoting a particularly notorious offender against the criminal laws, especially one who seems more or less immune from successful prosecution.

ENFEOFF. To invest with an estate by feoffment. To make a gift of any corporeal hereditaments to another. See Feoffment.

ENFEOFFMENT. The act of investing with any dignity or possession; also the instrument or deed by which a person is invested with possessions.

ENFITEUSIS. In Spanish law. Emphyteusis, (q. v.). See Mulford v. Le Franc, 26 Cal. 103.
The terms "obligation" and "engagement" are synonymous, (17 Toullier, no. 1;) but the Code seems specially to apply the term "enfranchise" to those obligations which the law im"participate" means simply to take or have a part or share in, and may apply equally to a single act or many acts. Lawyers Lloyds of Texas v. Webb, Tex.Civ.App., 150 S.W.2d 181, 184.
ENGINE. This is said to be a word of very general signification; and, when used in an act, its meaning must be sought out from the act itself, and the language which surrounds it, and also from other acts in pari materia, in which it occurs. Abbott, J., 6 Maule & S. 192. In a large sense, it applies to all utensils and tools which afford the means of carrying on a trade. But in a more limited sense it means a thing of considerable dimensions, of a fixed or permanent nature, analogous to an erection or building. Id. 182. And see Lefler v. Forsberg, 1 App.D.C. 41; Brown v. Benson, 101 Ga. 753, 29 S.E. 215.
Within Employers' Liability Law, § 1, par. 2, subd. (a), an "engine" is an ingenious or skillful contrivance used to effect a purpose, and is often synonymous with the word "machine"; machinery being any combination of mechanical means designed to work together so as to effect a given end. Haddad v. Commercial Motor Truck Co., 146 La. 897, 84 So. 197, 198, 9 A.L.R. 1380.
Machine by which power is applied to the doing of work, particularly one that converts some motive energy, especially heat, into mechanical power. Chrysler Corporation v. Trott, Cust. & Pat.App., 83 F.2d 302, 310.

Compound Compressed Air Engine
An engine in which the compressed air is first used in a high pressure cylinder, that is, in a cylinder of relatively small diameter, and after driving the piston connected therewith, instead of being permitted to escape, is conveyed to a low pressure cylinder, that is, to a cylinder of larger diameter, where it still has sufficient expansive force to drive another piston. This operation may again be repeated in a third cylinder or the air contract, either on the part of the obligor or the obligee, (article 1370.) An engagement to do or omit to do something amounts to a promise. Rue v. Rue, 21 N.J.Law, 369.
In English practice. The term has been appropriated to denote a contract entered into by a married woman with the intention of binding or charging her separate estate, or, with stricter accuracy, a promise which in the case of a person sui juris would be a contract, but in the case of a married woman is not a contract, because she cannot bind herself personally, even in equity. Her engagements, therefor, merely operate as dispositions or appointments pro tanto of her separate estate. Sweet.
Under statute rendering national bank stockholders liable to assessment in order to discharge an "engagement" of the bank, the quoted word includes all pecuniary liabilities and obligations of the bank. Oppenheimer v. Harriman Nat. Bank & Trust Co. of City of New York, N.Y., 57 S.Ct. 719, 723, 301 U.S. 206, 81 L.Ed. 1042.
ENGENDER. To cause, to bring about, to excite, to occasion, to call forth. Lacy v. State, 30 Okl. Cr. 273, 236 P. 53, 54.

ENGINEERING. The art and science by which mechanical properties of matter are made useful to man in structures and machines. Employers' Liability Assur. Corporation v. Accident & Casualty Ins. Co. of Winterthur, Switzerland, C.C.A. Ohio, 134 F.2d 566, 569, 146 A.L.R. 1186.

ENGLESHERE. A law was made by Canute, for the preservation of his Danes, that, when a man was killed, the hundred or town should be liable to be amerced, unless it could be proved that the person killed was an Englishman. This proof was called "Engleshire." 1 Hale, P. C. 447; 4 Bl. Comm. 195; Spelman.

ENGLETERRE. L. Fr. England.

ENGLISH INFORMATION. In English law. A proceeding in the court of exchequer in matters of revenue.

ENGLISH MARRIAGE. This phrase may refer to the place where the marriage is solemnized, or it may refer to the nationality and domicile of the parties between whom it is solemnized, the place where the union so created is to be enjoyed. 6 Prob. Div. 51.

ENGRAVING. The art of producing on hard material incised or raised patterns, lines, and the like, from which an impression or print is taken. The term may apply to a text or script, but is generally restricted to pictorial illustrations or works connected with the fine arts, not including the reproduction of pictures by means of photography. American Historical Co. v. Clark, 316 Ill.App. 309, 44 N.E.2d 761.

ENGROSS. To copy the rude draft of an instrument in a fair, large hand. To write out, in a large, fair hand, on parchment.

In old criminal law. To buy up so much of a commodity on the market as to obtain a monopoly and sell again at a forced price.

ENGROSSER. One who engrosses or writes on parchment in a large, fair hand.

One who purchases large quantities of any commodity in order to acquire a monopoly, and to sell them again at high prices.

ENGROSSING. In English law. The getting into one's possession, or buying up, large quantities of corn, or other dead victuals, with intent to sell them again. The total engrossing of any other commodity, with intent to sell it at an unreason-ENLARGING. Extending, or making more comprehensive; as an enlarging statute, which is a remedial statute enlarging or extending the common law. 1 Bl.Comm. 86, 87.

The words "enlist" and "enlistment," in law, as in common usage, may signify either the complete fact of entering into the military service, or the first step taken by the recruit towards the end. When used in the former sense, as in statutes conferring a right to compel the military service of enlisted men, the enlistment is not deemed completed until the man has been mustered into the service. Tyler v. Pomeroy, 8 Allen, Mass., 480.

Enlistment does not include the entry of a person into the military service under a commission as an officer. Hilliard v. Stewartstown, 48 N.H. 280.

Enlisted applies to a drafted man as well as a volunteer, whose name is duly entered on the military rolls. Sheffield v. Otis, 107 Mass. 282.

ENORMIA. In old practice and pleading, Unlawful or wrongful acts; wrongs. Et alia enormia, and other wrongs. This phrase constantly occurs in the old writs and declarations of trespass.

ENORMOUS. Aggravated. "So enormous a trespass." Vaughan, 115. Written "enormous," in some of the old books. Enormious is where a thing is made without a rule or against law. Brownl. pt. 2, p. 19.

ENPLEET. Anciently used for implead. Cowell.

ENQUtte, or ENQUEST. In canon law. An examination of witnesses, taken down in writing, by or before an authorized judge, for the purpose of gathering testimony to be used on a trial.

ENREGISTREMENT. In French law. Registration. A formality which consists in inscribing on a register, specially kept for the purpose by the government, a summary analysis of certain deeds and documents. At the same time that such analysis is inscribed upon the register, the clerk places upon the deed a memorandum indicating the date upon which it was registered, and at the side of such memorandum an impression is made with a stamp. Arg.Fr.Merc.Law, 558.

ENROLL. To register; to make a record; to enter on the rolls of a court; to transcribe. Ream v. Corn., 3 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 209; Anderson v. Commonwealth, 275 Ky. 232, 121 S.W.2d 46, 47.

ENROLLED BILL. In legislative practice, a bill which has been duly introduced, finally passed by both houses, signed by the proper officers of each, approved by the governor (or president) and filed by the secretary of state. Sedgwick County Com'r v. Bailey, 13 Kan. 608.

ENROLLMENT. The act of putting upon a roll. A record made. Anderson v. Commonwealth, 275 Ky. 232, 121 S.W.2d 46, 47.

In English law. The registering or entering on the rolls of chancery, king's bench, common pleas, or exchequer, or by the clerk of the peace in the records of the quarter sessions, of any lawful act; as a recognizance, a deed of bargain and sale, and the like. Jacob.

ENROLLMENT OF VESSELS. In the laws of the United States on the subject of merchant shipping, the recording and certification of vessels employed in coastwise or inland navigation; as distinguished from the "registration" of vessels employed in foreign commerce. U. S. V. Leetzel, 3 Wall. 566, 18 L.Ed. 67.

ENROLLMENT RECORDS. All the testimony and exhibits tending to establish age that were in evidence before the Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes and the conclusions of the Commission based thereon from the date of the application for enrollment of any particular individual up to the date of the ascertainment by the Commission as to whether the name of such person was intended to be included upon the final roll of the nation in which he claimed citizenship. Duncan v. Byars, 44 Okl. 538, 144 P. 1053, 1054.

ENS LEGIS. L. Lat. A creature of the law; an artificial being, as contrasted with a natural person. Applied to corporations, considered as deriving their existence entirely from the law.

ENSCHEDULE. To insert in a list, account, or writing.

ENSEAL. To seal. Ensealing is still used as a formal word in conveyancing.

ENSERVER. L. Fr. To make subject to a servitude. Britt. c. 54.

ENSUE. To follow after; to follow in order or train of events. Agricultural Publishers' Ass'n v. Homestead Co., 197 Iowa, 380, 197 N.W. 314.

ENTAIL, v. To settle or limit the succession to real property; to create an estate tail.

ENTAIL, n. A fee abridged or limited to the issue, or certain classes of issue, instead of descending to all the heirs. 1 Washb. Real Prop. 66; Cowell; 2 Bl.Comm. 112, note.

Entail, in legal treatises, is used to signify an estate tail, especially with reference to the restraint which such an estate imposes upon its owner, or, in other words, the points wherein such an estate differs from an estate in fee simple. And this is often its popular sense; but sometimes it is, in popular language, used differently, so as to signify a succession of life estates, as when it is said that "an entail ends with A.," meaning that A. is the first person who is entitled to bar or cut off the entail, being in law the first tenant in tail. Mozley & Whiteley. Break or Bar an Entail

To free an estate from the limitations imposed by an entail, and permit its free disposition, anciently by means of a fine or common recovery, but now by deed in which the tenant and next heir join.
Quasi Entail

An estate pur autre vie may be granted, not only to a man and his heirs, but to a man and the heirs of his body, which is termed a quasi entail; the interest so granted not being properly an estate-tail, (for the statute De Donis applies only where the subject of the entail is an estate of inheritance,) but yet so far in the nature of an estate-tail that it will go to the heir of the body as special occupant during the life of the cestui que vie, in the same manner as an estate of inheritance would descend, if limited to the grantee and the heirs of his body. Wharton.

ENTALLED. Settled or limited to specified heirs, or in tail.

ENTALLED MONEY. Money directed to be invested in reality to be entailed. 3 & 4 Wm. IV, c. 74, §§ 70, 71, 72.

ENTAILMENT. An interference with and curtailment of the ordinary rules pertaining to deviation by inheritance; a limitation and direction by which property is to descend different from the course which it would take if the creator of the entailment, grantor or testator, had been content that the estate should devolve in regular and general succession to heirs at law in the statutory order of precedence and sequence. Gardner v. Anderson, 114 Kan. 778, 227 P. 743, 748.

ENTRY. To form a constituent part, to become a part or partaker; to impenetrate; share; with into; as, tin enters into the composition of pewter. Bedford v. Colorado Fuel & Iron Corporation, 102 Colo. 538, 81 P.2d 752, 755.

In the law of real property. To go upon land for the purpose of taking possession of it. In strict usage, the entering is preliminary to the taking possession but in common parlance the entry is now merged in the taking possession. See Entry.

In practice. To place anything before a court, or upon or among the records, in a formal and regular manner, and usually in writing; as to "enter an appearance," to "enter a judgment." In this sense the word is nearly equivalent to setting down formally in writing, in either a full or abridged form.

ENTERCEUR. L. Fr. A party challenging (claiming) goods; he who has placed them in the hands of a third person. Kelham.

ENTERING JUDGMENTS. The formal entry of the judgment on the rolls of the court, which is necessary before bringing an appeal or an action on the judgment. Blatchford v. Newberry, 100 Ill. 491. The entering of judgment is a ministerial act performed by the clerk of court by means of which permanent evidence of judicial act in rendering judgment is made a record of the court. Jones v. Sun Oil Co., Tex.Civ.App., 145 S.W.2d 615, 619. Under some statutes, the entering consists merely in the filing of a judgment with the clerk; Mathison v. Anderson, 107 Wash. 617, 182 P. 622. But under other acts, the entry of a judgment consists in the recording of it in the judgment book. Wilson v. Durkee, 20 Cal.App. 492, 129 P. 617, 618.

Entry of judgment differs from rendition of judgment. "Rendition" of a judgment is the judicial act of the court in pronouncing the sentence of the law upon the facts in controversy. The "entry" is a ministerial act, which consists in spreading upon the record a statement of the final conclusion reached by the court in the matter, thus furnishing external and incontestable evidence of the sentence given, and designed to stand as a perpetual memorial of its action. Jaqua v. Harkens, 40 Ind.App. 639, 82 N.E. 920, 922; Beetchenow v. Bartholet, 162 Wash. 119, 298 P. 335, 336.

ENTERING SHORT. When bills not due are paid into a bank by a customer, it is the custom of some bankers not to carry the amount of the bills directly to his credit, but to "enter them short," as it is called, i. e., to note down the receipt of the bills, their amounts, and the times when they become due in a previous column of the page, and the amounts when received are carried forward into the usual cash column. Sometimes, instead of entering such bills short, bankers credit the customer directly with the amount of the bills as cash, charging interest on any advances they may make on their account, and allow him at once to draw upon them to that amount. If the banker becomes bankrupt, the property in bills entered short does not pass to his assignees, but the customer is entitled to them if they remain in his hands, or to their proceeds, if received, subject to any lien the banker may have upon them. Wharton.

ENTERTAINMENT. This word is synonymous with "board," and includes the ordinary necessaries of life. See Lasar v. Johnson, 125 Cal. 549, 58 P. 161. Hospitable provision for the wants of a guest, especially a provision for the table. That which serves as amusement. Young v. Board of Trustees of Broadwater County High School, 90 Mont. 576, 4 P.2d 725, 726.
ENTHUSIASTS. Those who believe far more than they can prove and can prove far more than any one else can believe. Peskind v. State, 115 Ohio St. 279, 152 N.E. 670.

ENTIRE. Whole; without division, separation, or diminution; unmingled; complete in all its parts; not participated in by others. 15 Cyc. 1054; 11 Amer. & Eng. Enc. Law, 48; People v. Tahaueres Purchase, 26 N.Y.S.2d 795, 813.

ENTIRE ACT. The words "entire Act" as used in the rule of statutory construction that it is the duty of the court to examine the entire act means the caption, the body of the act, and the emergency clause. Anderson v. Penix, 138 Tex. 596, 161 S.W.2d 455, 459.

ENTIRE BLOOD. Relations of the "entire blood" are those derived not only from the same ancestor, but from the same couple of ancestors. In re Skidmore's Estate, 266 N.Y.S. 312, 148 Misc. 569.

ENTIRE CONTRACT. See Contract.

ENTIRE DAY. This phrase signifies an undivided day, not parts of two days. An entire day must have a legal, fixed, precise time to begin, and a fixed, precise time to end. A day, in contemplation of law, comprises all the twenty-four hours, beginning and ending at twelve o'clock at night. Robertson v. State, 43 Ala. 325. In a statute requiring the closing of all liquor saloons during "the entire day of any election," etc., this phrase means the natural day of twenty-four hours, commencing and terminating at midnight. Haines v. State, 7 Tex.App. 30.

ENTIRE STRUCTURE. Under lien statute. Not a completed, as distinguished from an uncompleted, building, but a new structure, not before existing, as distinguished from betterments and repairs on previously constructed improvements. Atkinson v. Colorado Title & Trust Co., 59 Colo. 528, 151 P. 457, 461.

ENTIRE TENANCY. A sole possession by one person, called "severalty," which is contrary to several tenancy, where a joint or common possession is in one or more.

ENTIRE USE, BENEFIT, etc. These words in the habendum of a trust-deed for the benefit of a married woman are equivalent to the words "sole use," or "sole and separate use," and consequently her husband takes nothing under such deed. Heathman v. Hall, 38 N.C. 414.

ENTIRELY WITHOUT UNDERSTANDING. Inability to comprehend nature and effect of transaction involved, not necessarily absolute imbecility, idiocy or mental incapacity. Barlow v. Strange, 120 Ga. 1015, 1018, 48 S.E. 344.

ENTRETY. The whole, in contradistinction to a moiety or part only. When land is conveyed to husband and wife, they do not take by moieties, but both are seised of the entirety. 2 Kent, Comm. 132; 4 Kent, Comm. 362. Parceners, on the other hand, have not an entirety of interest, but each is properly entitled to the whole of a distinct moiety. 2 Bl.Comm. 188. See Estate by the Entirety.

The word is also used to designate that which the law considers as one whole, and not capable of being divided into parts. Thus, a judgment, it is held, is an entirety, and, if void as to one of the two defendants, cannot be valid as to the other. So, if a contract is an entirety, no part of the consideration is due until the whole has been performed.

ENTITLE. In its usual sense, to entitle is to give a right or title. Felter v. McClure, 135 Wash. 410, 237 P. 1010, 1011. To qualify for; to furnish with proper grounds for seeking or claiming. Fitts v. Terminal Warehousing Corporation, 170 Tenn. 198, 93 S.W.2d 1265, 1267. In re Graves, 325 Mo. 888, 30 S.W.2d 149, 151. In ecclesiastical law. To entitle is to give a title or ordination as a minister.

ENTRANCE. A door or gate for entering; a gate; an opening, and perhaps a passage. Weatherby v. Travelers Indemnity Co., Tex.Civ.App., 171 S.W.2d 540, 541.
ENTRAP. To catch, to entrap, to ensnare; hence, to catch by artifice; to involve in difficulties or distresses; to catch or involve in contradictions.

ENTRAPMENT. The act of officers or agents of the government in inducing a person to commit a crime not contemplated by him, for the purpose of instituting a criminal prosecution against him.

Falden v. Commonwealth, 167 Va. 549, 189 S.E. 329, 332. Lee v. State, 66 Okl.Cr. 399, 92 P.2d 621, 623. But the mere act of an officer in furnishing the accused an opportunity to commit the crime, where the criminal intent was already present in the accused’s mind, is not ordinarily entrapment.

State v. Cowling, 161 Wash. 519, 297 P. 172, 174.

ENTREATY. Beseeching, or suppliant, or prayerful in nature. In re Sloan’s Estate, 7 Cal.App.2d 319, 46 P.2d 1007, 1018.

ENTREBAT. L. Fr. An intruder or interloper.

Passage leading into a house or other building or to a room; a vestibule. Weatherby v. Travelers Indemnity Co., Tex.Civ.App., 171 S.W.2d 540, 541.

In commercial law. Entry denotes the act of a merchant, trader, or other business man in recording in his account-books the facts and circumstances of a sale, loan, or other transaction. Also the note or record so made. Bissell v. Beckwith, 32 Conn. 517; U. S. v. Crecelius, D.C.Mo., 34 F. 30. The books in which such memoranda are first (or originally) inscribed are called "books of original entry," and are prima facie evidence for certain purposes.

In copyright law. Depositing with the register of copyrights the printed title of a book, pamphlet, etc., for the purpose of securing copyright on the same. The old formula for giving notice of copyright was, "Entered according to act of congress," etc.

In criminal law. Entry is the unlawful making one’s way into a dwelling or other house, for the purpose of committing a crime therein.

In cases of burglary, the least entry with the whole or any part of the body, hand, or foot, or with any instrument or weapon, introduced for the purpose of committing a felony, is sufficient to complete the offense. 3 Inst. 64. And see Walker v. State, 63 Ala. 49, 35 Am.Rep. 1. State v. Chappell, 185 S.C. 111, 193 S.E. 924, 925.

In customs law. The entry of imported goods at the custom house consists in submitting them to the inspection of the revenue officers, together with a statement or description of s’ich goods, and the original invoices of the same, for the purpose of estimating the duties to be paid thereon. U. S. v. Legg, 105 F. 930, 45 C.C.A. 134.

In mining law. A place in coal mines used by the miners and other workmen generally in going to and from their work, through which coal is hauled from the necks of the rooms to the foot of the shaft; a "room" being the place in which a miner works and from which he mines coal. Ricardo v. Central Coal & Coke Co., 100 Kan. 95, 163 P. 641, 643.

In parliamentary law. The "entry" of a proposed constitutional amendment or of any other document or transaction in the journal of a house of the legislature consists in recording it in writing in such journal, and (according to most of the authorities) at length. See Koehler v. Hill, 60 Iowa, 543, 15 N.W. 609.

In practice. Entry denotes the formal inscription upon the rolls or records of a court of a note or minute of any of the proceedings in an action; and it is frequently applied to the filing of a proceeding in writing, such as a notice of appearance by a defendant, and, very generally, to the filing of the judgment roll as a record in the office of the court. Thomason v. Ruggles, 69 Cal. 465, 11 P. 20.

In public land laws. Under the provisions of the land laws of the United States, the term "entry" denotes the filing at the land-office, or inscription upon its records, of the documents required to found a claim for a homestead or pre-emption right, and as preliminary to the issuing of a patent for the land. Chotard v. Pope, 12 Wheat. 588, 6 L.Ed. 737; Stephens v. Terry, 178 Ky. 129, 198 S.W. 768, 771.

The word "entry," as used in the public land laws, covers all methods by which a right to acquire title to public lands may be initiated. United States v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co., C.C.Mont., 204 F. 485, 487.

Homestead Entry

An entry under the United States land laws for the purpose of acquiring title to a portion of the public domain under the homestead laws, consisting of an affidavit of the claimant’s right to enter, a formal application for the land, and payment of the money required. Whitmire v. Spears, 212 Ala. 583, 103 So. 668, 669.

Mineral Land Entry

Filing a claim to hold or purchase lands belonging to the public domain and valuable for the minerals they contain, implying a prior discovery of ore and the opening of a mine. U. S. v. Four Bottles Sour Mash Whisky, D.C.Wash., 90 F. 720.

Pre-emption Entry

An entry of public lands for purchase under the pre-emption laws, giving the entryman a pre-

Timber Culture Entry

In real property law. Entry is the act of going peaceably upon a piece of land which is claimed as one's own, but is held by another person, with the intention and for the purpose of taking possession of it.

Entry is a remedy which the law affords to an injured party ousted of his lands by another person who has taken possession thereof without right. This remedy (which must in all cases be pursued peaceably) takes place in three only out of the five species of ouster, viz., abatement, intrusion, and disseisin; for, as in these three cases the original entry of the wrong-doer is unlawful, the wrong may be remedied by the mere entry of the former possessor. But it is otherwise upon a discontinuance or deforce, for in these latter two cases the former possessor cannot remedy the wrong by entry, but must do so by action, inasmuch as the original entry being in these cases lawful, and therefore conferring an apparent right of possession, the law will not suffer such apparent right to be overthrown by the mere act or entry of the claimant. Brown v. Cobb, 29 S.C. 372, 7 S.E. 601.

Forcible Entry

See that title.

Open Entry

An entry upon real estate, for the purpose of taking possession, which is not clandestine nor effected by secret artifice or stratagem, and (in some states by statute) one which is accomplished in the presence of two witnesses. Thompson v. Kenyon, 100 Mass. 108.

Re-Entry

The resumption of the possession of leased premises by the landlord on the tenant's failure to pay the stipulated rent or otherwise to keep the conditions of the lease.

In Scotch law. The term refers to the acknowledgment of the title of the heir, etc., o be admitted by the superior.

ENTRY AD COMMUNEM LEGEM. Entry at common law. The name of a writ of entry which lay for a reversioner after the alienation and death of the particular tenant for life, against him who was in possession of the land. Brown.

ENTRY AD TERMINUM QUI PRZETERIIIT. The writ of entry ad terminum qui prcterit lies where a man leases land to another for a term of years, and the tenant holds over his term. And if lands be leased to a man for the term of another's life, and he for whose life the lands are leased dies, and the lessee holds over, then the lessor shall have this writ. Termes de la Ley.

ENTRY BY COURT. Acts 1923, c. 6, amending Acts 1921, c. 112, § 138, provides that county court may enter upon lands and build roads and within 60 days after such entry shall petition for assessment of compensation. An "entry" within statute means the establishing of the road on, and appropriation of, the land, by a proper order of the county court. To effect an entry under the statute it is not necessary that the county court go upon the lands and begin the work of construction. McGibson v. Roane County Court, 95 W.Va. 338, 121 S.E. 99, 104.

ENTRY FOR MARRIAGE IN SPEECH. A writ of entry causa matrimonii prceloquuti lies where lands or tenements are given to a man upon condition that he shall take the donor to be his wife within a certain time, and he does not espouse her within the said term, or espouses another woman, or makes himself priest. Termes de la Ley.

ENTRY IN CASU CONSIMILI. A writ of entry in casu consimili lies where a tenant for life or by the curtesy aliens in fee. Termes de la Ley.

ENTRY IN REGULAR COURSE OF BUSINESS. A record setting forth a fact or transaction made by one in the ordinary and usual course of one's business, employment, office or profession, which it was the duty of the enterer in such manner to make, or which was commonly and regularly made, or which it was convenient to make, in the conduct of the business to which such entry pertains. Leonard v. State, 100 Ohio St. 456, 127 N.E. 464, 468.

ENTRY IN THE CASE PROVIDED. A writ of entry in casu proviso lies if a tenant in dower alien in fee, or for life, or for another's life, living the tenant in dower. Termes de la Ley.

ENTRY OF CAUSE FOR TRIAL. In English practice. The proceeding by a plaintiff in an action who had given notice of trial, depositing with the proper officer of the court the nisi prius record, with the panel of jurors annexed, and thus bringing the issue before the court for trial.

ENTRY OF JUDGMENT. See Entering Judgment.

ENTRY ON THE ROLL. In former times, the parties to an action, personally or by their counsel, used to appear in open court and make their mutual statements viva voce, instead of as at the present day delivering their mutual pleadings, until they arrived at the issue or precise point in dispute between them. During the progress of this oral statement, a minute of the various proceedings was made on parchment by an officer of the court appointed for that purpose. The parchment then became the record; in other words, the official history of the suit. Long after the practice of oral pleading had fallen into disuse, it continued necessary to enter the proceedings in like manner upon the parchment roll, and this was called "entry on the roll," or making up the "issue roll." But by a rule of H. T. 4 Wm. IV. the practice of making up the issue roll was abolished; and it was only necessary to make up the issue in the form prescribed for the purpose by a rule of H. T. 1853. and to deliver the same to the court and to the opposite party. The issue which was delivered to the court was called the "nisi prius record;" and that was regarded as the official history of the suit, in like manner as the issue roll formerly was. Under the present practice, the issue roll or nisi prius record consists of the papers delivered to the court, to facilitate the trial of the action, these papers consisting of the pleadings simply, with the notice of trial. Brown.

ENTRY WITHOUT ASSENT OF THE CHAPTER. A writ of entry sine assensu capituli lies where an abbot, prior, or such as hath covent or common seal, aliens lands or tenements of the right of his church, without the assent of the convent or chapter, and dies. Terms de la Ley.

ENTRY, WRIT OF. In old English practice. This was a writ made use of in a form of real action brought to recover the possession of lands from one who wrongfully withheld the same from the demandant.

Its object was to regain the possession of lands of which the demandant, or his ancestors, had been unjustly deprived by the tenant of the freehold, or those under whom he claimed, and hence it belonged to the possessory division of real actions. It decided nothing with respect to the right of property, but only restored the demandant to that situation in which he was (or by law ought to have been) before the dispossession committed. 3 Bl.Comm. 180.

It was usual to specify in such writs the degree or degrees within which the writ was brought, and it was said to be "in the per" or "in the per and cut," according as there had been one or two descents or alienations from the original wrongdoer. If more than two such transfers had intervened, the writ was said to be "in the post." See 3 Bl.Comm. 181. See, further, Writ of Entry.

ENUMERATED. This term is often used in law as equivalent to "mentioned specifically," "designated," or "expressly named or granted;" as in speaking of "enumerated" governmental powers, items of property, or articles in a tariff schedule. See Bloomer v. Todd, 3 Wash.T. 599, 19 P. 135, 1 L.R.A. 111.

ENUMERATIO INFIRMAT REGULAM IN CASIBUS NON ENUMERATIS. Enumeration disaffirms the rule in cases not enumerated. Bac.Aph. 17.

ENUMERATIO UNIUS EST EXCLUSIO ALTERIUS. The specification of one thing is the exclusion of a different thing. A maxim more generally expressed in the form "expressio unius est exclusio alterius," (q. v.).

ENUMERATORS. Persons appointed to collect census papers or schedules. 33 & 34 Viet. c. 108, § 4.

ENURE. To operate or take effect. To serve to the use, benefit, or advantage of a person. A re, lease to the tenant for life enures to him in reversion; that is, it has the same effect for him as for the tenant for life. Often written "inure."

ENVELOPE. That which envelops; a wrapper; an inclosing cover; especially, the cover or wrapper of a document, as of a letter. In re Eastman Kodak Co., Cust. & Pat.App., 80 F.2d 270, 271, 272.

ENVOY. In international law. A public minister of the second class, ranking next after an ambassadour.

Envoys are either ordinary or extraordinary; by custom the latter is held in greater consideration.

ENZYME. Any one of a series of catalytic agents, animal or vegetable, produced by living cells, effecting chemical change in absorbed or surrounding substances so as to render them fit for the requirements of the cells. In re Reese, Cust. & Pat.App., 143 F.2d 1021.

EO DIE. Lat. On that day; on the same day.

EO INSTANTI!. Lat. At that instant; at the very or same instant; immediately. 1 Bl.Comm. 196, 249; 2 Bl.Comm. 168; Co.Litt. 298a; 1 Coke 138. Also written eo instanti.

EO INTUITU. Lat. With or in that view; with that intent or object. Hale, Anal. § 2.

EO LOCI. Lat. In the civil law. In that state or condition; in that place, (eo loco.) Calvin.

EO NOMINE. Lat. Under that name; by that appellation. Perinde ac si eo nomine tibi tradita fuisse, just as if it had been delivered to you by that name. Inst. 2, 1, 43. A common phrase in the books.

EODEM LIGAMINE QUO LIGATUM EST DIS-SOLVITUR. A bond is released by the same formalities with which it is contracted. Co.Litt. 212b; Broom, Max. 891.

EODEM MODO QUO QUID CONSTITUITUR, DIS-SOLVITUR. In the manner in which [by the same means by which] a thing is constituted, is. it dissolved. 6 Coke, 53b.

EORLE. In Saxon law. An earl.

EOTH. In Saxon law. An oath.

EPICYCLOIDAL CURVE. A curve generated by the motion of a point on the circumference of a circle which rolls upon the convex side of a fixed circle. Hill v. Hill, Cust. & Pat.App., 54 F.2d 950, 952.

EPIDEMIC. This term, in its ordinary and popular meaning, applies to any disease which is widely spread or generally prevailing at a given place and time. Bethlehem Steel Co. v. Industrial Accident Commission, 21 Cal.2d 742, 135 P.2d 153, 157; Martin v. Springfield City Water Co., Mo.App., 128 S.W.2d 674, 679.

EPILEPSY. In medical jurisprudence. A disease of the brain, which occurs in paroxysms with un-

The disease is generally organic, though it may be functional and symptomatic of irritation in other parts of the body. The attack is characterized by loss of consciousness, sudden falling down, distortion of the eyes and face, grinding or gnashing of the teeth, stertorous respiration, and more or less severe muscular spasms or convulsions. Epilepsy, though a disease of the brain, is not to be regarded as a form of insanity, in the sense that a person thus afflicted can be said to be permanently insane, for there may be little or no mental aberration in the intervals between the attacks. But the paroxysm is frequently followed by a temporary insanity, varying in particular instances from slight alienation to the most violent mania. In the latter form the affection is known as "epileptic fury." But this generally passes off within a few days. But the course of the principal disease is generally one of deterioration, the brain being gradually more and more deranged in its functions in the intervals of attack, and the memory and intellectual powers in general becoming enfeebled, leading to a greatly impaired state of mental efficiency, or to dementia, or a condition bordering on insanity. See Am. v. Anderson, 3 Pittsb.R., Pa., 310; Lawton v. Sun Mutual Ins. Co., 2 Cush., Mass., 517.

Hystero-epilepsy. A condition initiated by an apparently mild attack of convulsive hysteria, followed by an epileptiform convulsion, and succeeded by a period of "clownism" (Osler) in which the patient assumes a remarkable series of droll contortions or cataleptic poses, sometimes simulating attitudes expressive of various passions, as, fear, joy, erotism, etc. The final stage is one of delirium with unusual hallucinations. The attack differs from true epilepsy in that the convulsions may continue without serious result for several successive days, while true epilepsy, if persistent, is always serious, associated with fever, and frequently fatal.

EPIMENIA. Expenses or gifts. Blount.

EPIPHANY. A Christian festival, otherwise called the "Manifestation of Christ to the Gentiles," observed on the 6th of January, in honor of the appearance of the star to the three magi, or wise men, who came to adore the Messiah, and bring him presents. It is commonly called "Twelfth Day." Enc.Lond.

EPIPHYSEAL SEPARATION. Not a bone fracture in true sense, but a separation of the fibers and cartilaginous tissues which attach the epiphysis to the femur. Eisen v. State Farmers Mut. Ins. Co., 219 Minn. 315, 17 N.W.2d 652, 655.

EPIPHYSIS. Part or process of a bone which ossifies separately and subsequently becomes ankylosed (to grow together into one) into the main part of the bone. Eisen v. State Farmers Mut. Ins. Co., 219 Minn. 315, 17 N.W.2d 652, 655.

EPIQUEYA. In Spanish law. A term synonymous with "equity" in one of its senses, and defined as "the benign and prudent interpretation of the law according to the circumstances of the time, place, and person."

EPISCOPACY. The office of overlooking or overseeing; the office of a bishop, who is to overlook and oversee the concerns of the church. A form of church government by diocesan bishops. Trustees of Diocese of Central New York v. Colgrove, 4 Hun (N.Y.) 366.

EPISCOPALIA. In ecclesiastical law. Synodals, pentecostals, and other customary payments from the clergy to their diocesan bishop, formerly collected by the rural deans. Cowell.

EPISCOPALIAN. Of or pertaining to episcopacy, or to the Episcopal Church.

EPISCOPATE. A bishopric. The dignity or office of a bishop.

EPISCOPORUM ECDICUS. Bishop’s proctors; church lawyers. 1 Reeve, Eng.Law, 65.

EPICOPUS. In the civil law. An overseer; an inspector. A municipal officer who had the charge and oversight of the bread and other provisions which served the citizens for their daily food. Vicat. In medieval history. A bishop; a bishop of the Christian church.

EPICOPUS ALTERIUS MANDATO QUAM REGIS NON TENETUR OBTEMPERARE. Co.Litt. 134. A bishop needs not obey any mandate save the king’s.

EPICOPUS Puerorum. It was an old custom that upon certain feasts some lay person should plait his hair, and put on the garments of a bishop, and in them pretend to exercise episcopal jurisdiction, and do several ludicrous actions, for which reason he was called “bishop of the boys;” and this custom obtained in England long after several constitutions were made to abolish it. Blount.

EPICOPUS TENEAT PLACITUM, IN CURIA CHRISTIANITATIS, DE IIS QUA MERE SUNT SPIRITUALIA. 12 Coke, 44. A bishop may hold plea in a Court Christian of things merely spiritual.

EPISCOLIA. A letter; a charter; an instrument in writing for conveyance of lands or assurance of contracts. Calvin.; Spelman.

EPISTOLA. A letter; a charter; an instrument in writing for conveyance of lands or assurance of contracts. Calvin.; Spelman.

EPISTOLIE. In the civil law. Rescripts; opinions given by the emperors in cases submitted to them for decision.

The answers of the emperors to petitions. The answers of counsellors, (juris-consulti,) as Ulpian and others, to questions of law proposed to them, were also called "epistolce." Opinions written out. The term originally signified the same as litterce. Vicat.

EPOCH. The time at which a new computation is begun; the time whence dates are numbered. Enc. Lond.
EQUAL. Alike; uniform; on the same plane or level with respect to efficiency, worth, value, amount, or rights. People v. Hoffman, 116 Ill. 587, 5 N.E. 600, 56 Am.Rep. 793.

EQUAL AND UNIFORM TAXATION. Taxes are said to be "equal and uniform" when no person or class of persons in the taxing district, whether it be a state, county, or city, is taxed at a different rate than are other persons in the same district upon the same value or the same thing, and where the objects of taxation are the same, by whomsoever owned or whatsoever they may be. Weatherly Independent School Dist. v. Hughes, Tex.Civ.App., 41 S.W.2d 445, 447.

EQUAL DEGREE. Persons are said to be related to a decedent "in equal degree" when they are all removed by an equal number of steps or degrees, from the common ancestor. Fidler v. Higgins, 21 N.J.Eq. 162; Helmes v. Elliott, 14 S.W. 930, 89 Tenn. 446, 10 L.R.A. 535.

EQUAL ELECTION. Elections are "equafl," when vote of each voter is equal in its influence upon result to vote of every other elector. Blue v. State ex rel. Brown, 206 Ind. 98, 188 N.E. 583, 589, 91 A.L.R. 334.

EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS. The equal protection of the laws of a state is extended to persons within its jurisdiction, within the meaning of the constitutional requirement, when its courts are open to them on the same conditions as to others, with like rules of evidence and modes of procedure, for the security of their persons and property, the prevention and redress of wrongs, and the enforcement of contracts; when they are subjected to no restrictions in the acquisition of property, the enjoyment of personal liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, which do not generally affect others; when they are liable to no other or greater burdens and charges than such as are laid upon others; and when no different or greater punishment is enforced against them for a violation of the laws. State v. Montgomery, 94 Me. 192, 47 A. 165.

"Equal protection of the law" means that equal protection and security shall be given to all under like circumstances in his life, his liberty, and his property, and in the pursuit of happiness, and in the exemption from any greater burdens and charges than are equally imposed upon all others under like circumstances. Sovereign Camp, W. D. W., v. Casados, D.C.N.M., 21 F. Supp. 989, 994.

EQUAL WATCHES. Under statute requiring division of sailors at sea into equal watches, "equal watches" means successive and continuous watches to be constituted in numbers as nearly equal as the sum of the whole number will permit. New York & Cuba Mail S. Co. v. Continental Ins. Co. of City of New York, C.C.A.N.Y., 117 F.2d 404, 409.

EQUALITY. The condition of possessing substantially the same rights, privileges, and immunities, and being liable to substantially the same duties. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Commonwealth, 160 Ky. 769, 170 S.W. 162, Ann.Cas.1916A, 405.

EQUALIZATION. The act or process of making equal or bringing about conformity to a common Standard. The process of equalizing assessments or taxes, as performed by "boards of equalization" in various states, consists in comparing the assessments made by the local officers of the various counties or other taxing districts within the jurisdiction of the board and reducing them to a common and uniform basis, increasing or diminishing by such percentage as may be necessary, so as to bring about, within the entire territory affected, a uniform and equal ratio between the assessed value and the actual cash value of property. The term is also applied to a similar process of leveling or adjusting the assessments of individual taxpayers, so that the property of one shall not be assessed at a higher (or lower) percentage of its market value than the property of another. See Harney v. Mitchell County, 44 Iowa 203.

EQUALIZE. To make equal, to cause to correspond, or be like in amount or degree, as compared with something. Los Angeles County v. Ranshoff, 24 Cal.App.2d 238, 74 P.2d 828, 830; De Mille v. Los Angeles County, Cal.App., 77 P.2d 905, 906.

EQUALLY DIVIDED. Provision in will that property shall be "equally divided," or divided "share and share alike" means that the property shall be divided per capita and not per stirpes. However, these phrases may be so modified by other parts of the will as to require distribution per stirpes. In re Mays' Estate, 197 Mo.App. 555, 196 S.W. 1039, 1040.

EQUERRY. An officer of state under the master of the horse.

EWES. Lat. In Roman and old English law. A knight.

EQUILIBRIUM. As applied in chemistry, the balanced state reached when the action apparently stops in a chemical reaction, that is, the concentration between reaction products and the original reacting substances has become such that decomposition and recombination proceeds with equal speed. In re Sussman, 141 F.2d 267, 271, 31 C.C.P.A.(Patents) 921.

EQUILOCUS. An equal. It is mentioned in Simon Dunelm, A.D. 882. Jacob.

EQUINOXES. The two periods of the year (vernal equinox about March 21st, and autumnal equinox about September 22d) when the time from the rising of the sun to its setting is equal to the time from its setting to its rising. See Dig. 43, 13, 1, 8.

EQUIP. To furnish for service or against a need or exigency; to fit out; to supply with whatever is necessary to efficient action in any way. Synonymous with furnish. State ex rel. Davis v. Barber, 139 Fla. 706, 190 So. 809.

EQUIPMENT. Furnishings, or outfit for the required purposes. An exceedingly elastic term, the meaning of which depends on context. Elliott v. Payne, 293 Mo. 581, 239 S.W. 851, 852, 23 A.L.R. 706; Midland Special School Dist. of Sebastian...
EQUIPMENT

County, Ark., v. Central Trust Co. of Illinois, C.C. A.Ark., 1 F.2d 124, 126.

EQUITABLE. Just; conformable to the principles of justice and right.

Just, fair, and right, in consideration of the facts and circumstances of the individual case.

Existing in equity; available or sustainable only in equity, or only upon the rules and principles of equity.

EQUITABLE ACTION. One founded on an equity or cognizable in a court of equity; or, more specifically, an action arising, not immediately from the contract in suit, but from an equity in favor of a third person, not a party to it, but for whose benefit certain stipulations or promises were made. Wenzel & Henoch Const. Co. v. Metropolitan Water Dist. of Southern California, D.C.Cal., 18 F.Supp. 616, 620.

EQUITABLE ASSIGNMENT. An assignment which, though invalid at law, will be recognized and enforced in equity; e. g., an assignment of a chose in action, or of future acquisitions of the assignor. Lewis v. Braun, 356 Ill. 467, 191 N.E. 56, 60; Stewart v. Kane, Mo.App., 111 S.W.2d 971, 974.

In order to work an "equitable assignment", there must be an absolute appropriation by the assignor of the debt or fund sought to be assigned. Blount v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 192 Ga. 325, 15 S.E.2d 413, 415; Snesby v. Livingston, 182 Wash. 229, 46 P.2d 733, 735.

EQUITABLE DEFENSE. A defense to an action on grounds which, prior to the passing of the Common Law Procedure Act (17 and 18 Vict. c. 125), would have been cognizable only in a court of equity. Moz. & W. In American practice, a defense which is cognizable in a court of equity, but which is available there only, and not in an action at law, except under the reformed codes of practice. Kelly v. Hurt, 74 Mo. 561-570; City of New York v. Holzderber, 90 N.Y.S. 63, 44 Misc. 509. The codes of procedure and the practice in some of the states likewise permit both a legal and equitable defense to the same action. Susquehanna S. S. Co. v. A. O. Andersen & Co., 239 N.Y. 285, 146 N.E. 381, 383. It has also been construed to mean a defense which a court of equity would recognize, or one founded on some distinct ground of equitable jurisdiction. City of New York v. Holzderber, 44 Misc. 509, 90 N.Y.S. 63, 64.

EQUITABLE DOCTRINE OF APPROXIMATION. This doctrine differs from "Cy pres doctrine" in purpose and application. The last mentioned doctrine applies where an apparent charitable intention has failed, whether by an incomplete disposition at the outset or by subsequent inadequacy of the original object, and its purpose is to give a cy pres or proximate application to testator's intention, whereas the "equitable doctrine of approximation" merely authorizes a court of chancery to vary the details of administration, in order to preserve the trust, and carry out the general purpose of the donor. National Bank of Greece v. Savarika, 167 Miss. 571, 148 So. 649, 654.

EQUITABLE ELECTION. The choice to be made by a person who may, under a will or other instrument, have either one of two alternative rights or benefits, but not both. Peters v. Bain, 133 U.S. 670, 10 S.Ct. 354, 33 L.Ed. 696.

The obligation imposed upon a party to choose between two inconsistent or alternative rights or claims, in cases where there is clear intention of the person from whom he derives one that he should not enjoy both. 2 Story, Eq.Jur. § 1075; Dakan v. Dakan, 83 S.W.2d 620, 624, 125 Tex. 305.

EQUITABLE ESTOPPEL is that condition in which justice forbids one to gainsay his own acts or assertions. Goodwin Tile & Brick Co. v. DeVries, Iowa, 13 N.W.2d 310, 312, 155 A.L.R. 346. The preclusion of person by his act or conduct or silence from asserting rights which otherwise have existed. Marshall v. Wilson, Or., 154 P.2d 547, 551. The species of estoppel which equity puts upon a person who has made a false representation or a concealment of material facts, with knowledge of the facts, to a party ignorant of the truth of the matter, with the intention that the other party should act upon it, and with the result that such party is actually induced to act upon it, to his damage. Bigelow, Estop. 484. See, also, In Pais, Estoppel In.
Elements or essentials of such estoppel include change of position for the worse by party asserting estoppel, Maloney v. Republic Nat. Bank & Trust Co., Tex.Civ.App., 70 S.W.2d 809, 812; Clover v. Peterson, 253 Minn. 337, 281 N.W.2d 661; be contrary to equity and good conscience for him to al- leged and prove the truth, Rody v. Doyle, 181 Md. 195, 29 A.2d 290, 293; false representation or concealment of facts, State v. Friedlander’s Estate, 32 N.Y.S.2d 991, 992; be contradictory to equity and good conscience for him to al- leged and prove the truth, Rody v. Doyle, 181 Md. 195, 29 A.2d 290, 293; false representation or concealment of facts, State v. Friedlander’s Estate, 32 N.Y.S.2d 991, 992; a mere floating and ineffective equity until such time as a mere floating and ineffective equity until such time as EQUITABLE LIENS are such as exist in equity. It is right by which a creditor is entitled to obtain satisfaction of his debt by resort to specified property belonging to his debtor, Pincus v. Collins, 198 Miss. 283, 22 So.2d 361, 362; right of a special nature over property constituting a charge or incumbrance thereon. Miller v. Heisler, Mo.App., 187 S.W.2d 485, 491; Gables Racing Assoc. v. Persky, 148 Fla. 627, 6 So.2d 257, 262, 263; right, not recognized in law, to have a fund or specific property, or the proceeds, applied in whole or in part to payment of a particular debt or class of debts or obligation, Bank of Aurora v. Aurora Co-Op. Fruit Growing & Marketing Ass’n, Mo.App., 91 S.W.2d 177; Jamison Coal & Coke Co. v. Goltra, C.C.A.Mo., 143 F.2d 889, 893, 154 A.L.R. 1191; Shipley v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 25 Tenn.App. 452, 158 S.W.2d 739, 741; right of a party, be it vendor or obligee, to have his rights enforced by a court of equity out of general considerations of right and justice as applied to relations of the parties and circumstances of their dealings, Owensboro Banking Co. v. Leonard, 183 Ind. 106, 1006 S.W.2d 1066, 1068; Clark v. Strong & Murphy, 180 Okl. 514, 72 P.2d 362, 365, 366; It is a mere floating and ineffective equity until such time as a mere floating and ineffective equity until such time as over a legal rate of interest, charged against a trustee or executor improperly or unnecessarily keeping balances or portion of trust moneys in his hands. In re Ricker’s Estate, 14 Mont. 153, 35 P. 960, 968, 29 L.R.A. 622.

EQUITABLE RECOUPMENT. Rule of the law which diminishes the right of a party invoking legal process to recover a debt, to the extent that he holds money or property of his debtor, to which he has no moral or statutory right as security, creates an equitable lien upon the property so indicated, which is enforceable against the property. Knott v. Mfg. Co., 30 W.Va. 790, 5 S.E. 266; Geddes v. Reeves Coal & Dock C.C.A.Minn., 203 Minn. 130, 50, 54 A.L.R. 622; Root Mfg. Co. v. Johnson, C.C.A.Ind., 219 F. 397, 406.

EQUITABLE RESCISSION. Rescission decreed by court of equity, as distinguished from “legal rescission” which is effected by restoration or offer to restore. Mueller v. Michaels, 184 Wis. 324, 199 N.W. 380, 382.

EQUITABLE RULE. In broad sense in which term is sometimes used, signifies natural justice. In re New Jersey State Bar Ass’n, 111 N.J. Eq. 234, 162 A. 99, 101.

In respect of this maxim it has been said: "Operative only within a very narrow range." 1 Pom.Eq.Jur. § 427. The reverse is quite as sound a maxim; 9 Harv.L.Rev. 18. "The main business of equity is avowedly to correct and supplement the law." Phelps, Jurid.Eq. § 237. The English Judicature Act, 1873, provides that when law and equity conflict equity shall prevail. See Equity Follows the Law.

EQUITATURA. In old English law. Traveling furniture, or riding equipments, including horses, horse harness, etc. Reg.Orig. 100b; St.Westm. 2, c. 39.

EQUITY. In its broadest and most general signification, this term denotes the spirit and the habit of fairness, justness, and right dealing which would regulate the intercourse of men with men,—the rule of doing to all others as we desire them to do to us; or, as it is expressed by Justinian, "to live honestly, to harm nobody, to render to every man his due." Inst. 1, 1, 3. It is therefore the synonym of natural right or justice. But in this sense its obligation is ethical rather than juridical, and its discussion belongs to the sphere of morals. It is grounded in the precepts of the conscience, not in any sanction of positive law.

In a restricted sense, the word denotes equal and impartial justice as between two persons whose rights or claims are in conflict; justice, that is, as ascertained by natural reason or ethical insight, but independent of the formulated body of law. This is not a technical meaning of the term, except in so far as courts which administer equity seek to discover it by the agencies above mentioned, or apply it beyond the strict lines of positive law. See Miller v. Kenniston, 86 Me. 550, 30 A. 114.

In a still more restricted sense, it is a system of jurisprudence, or branch of remedial justice, administered by certain tribunals, distinct from the common-law courts and empowered to decree "equity" in the sense last above given. Here it becomes a complex of well-settled and well-understood rules, principles, and precedents. Isabelle Properties v. Edelman, 297 N.Y.S. 572, 574, 164 Misc. 192.

"The meaning of the word 'equity,' as used in its technical sense in English jurisprudence, comes back to this: that it is simply a term descriptive of a certain field of jurisdiction exercised, in the English system, by certain courts, and of which the extent and boundaries are not marked by lines founded upon principle so much as by the features of the original constitution of the English scheme of remedial law, and the accidents of its development." Bisp.Eq. § 11.

A system of jurisprudence collateral to, and in some respects independent of, "law" properly so called; the object of which is to render the administration of justice more complete, by affording relief where the courts of law are incompetent to give it, or to give it with effect, or by exercising certain branches of jurisdiction independently of them. This is equity in its proper modern sense; an elaborate system of rules and process, administered in many cases by distinct tribunals, termed "courts of chancery," and with exclusive jurisdiction over certain subjects. It is "still distinguished by Its original and animating principle that no right should be without an adequate remedy," and its doctrines are founded upon the same basis of natural justice; but its action has become systematized, deprived of any loose and arbitrary character which might once have belonged to it, and as carefully regulated by fixed rules and precedents as the law itself. Burrill.

Equity, in its technical and scientific legal use, means neither natural justice nor even all that portion of natural justice which is susceptible of being judicially enforced. It has a precise, limited, and definite signification, and is used to denote a system of justice which was administered in a particular court,—the English high court of chancery,—which system can only be understood and explained by studying the history of that court, and how it came to exist in what is known as its extraordinary jurisdiction. Bisp.Eq. § 1.

That part of the law which, having power to enforce discovery, (1) administers trusts, mortgages, and other fiduciary obligations; (2) administers and adjusts common-law rights where the courts of common law have no machinery; (3) supplies a specific and preventive remedy for common-law wrongs where courts of common law only give subsequent damages. Chute, Eq. 4.

Equity is a body of jurisprudence, or field of jurisdiction, differing in its origin, theory, and methods from the common law. Laird v. Union Traction Co., 208 Pa. 574, 57 A. 987.

It is a body of rules existing by the side of the original civil law, founded on distinct principles, and claiming incidentally to supersede the civil law in virtue of a superior sanctity inherent in itself. 15 Bisp.Eq. § 11.

"As old rules become too narrow, or are felt to be out of harmony with advancing civilization, a machinery is needed for their gradual enlargement and adaption to new views of society. One mode of accomplishing this object on a large scale, without appearing to disregard existing law, is the introduction, by the prerogative of some high functionary, of a more perfect body of rules, discoverable in his judicial conscience, which is to stand side by side with the law of the land, overriding it in case of conflict, as on some title of inherent superiority, but not purporting to repeal it. Such a body of rules has been called 'Equity.'" Holl.Jur. 59.

"Equity," in its technical sense, contradistinguished from natural, and universal equity or justice, may well be described as a "portion of justice" or natural equity, not embodied in legislative enactments, or in the rules of common law, yet modified by a due regard thereto and to the complex relations and conveniences of an artificial state of society, and administered in regard to cases where the particular rights, in respect of which relief is sought come within some general class of rights enforced at law, or may be infringed without injury or inconvenience to the community; but where, as to such particular rights, the ordinary courts of law cannot, or originally did not, clearly afford relief. Rob. Eq.

The remaining interest belonging to one who has pledged or mortgaged his property, or the surplus of value which may remain after the property has been disposed of for the satisfaction of liens. The amount or value of a property above the amount of holders. Des Moines Joint Stock Land Bank of Des Moines v. Allen, 220 Iowa 448, 261 N.W. 912.

"Chancery" is synonymous and interchangeable with "equity." Const. art. 4, § 6. Ireland v. Cheney, 129 Ohio St. 527, 196 N.E. 267, 270.

Equitable Right

Equity also signifies an equitable right, i.e., a right enforceable in a court of equity; hence, a bill of complaint which did not show that the plaintiff had a right entitling him to relief was said to be demurrable for want of equity; and certain rights now recognized in all the courts are still known as "equities," from having been originally recognized only in the court of chancery. Sweet.

Better Equity

The right which, in a court of equity, a second incumbrancer has who has taken securities against subsequent dealings to his prejudice, which a prior incumbrancer neglected to take although he had an opportunity. 1 Ch.Prec. 470, note. See 3 Bouv.Inst. note 2462.

Countervailing Equity

A contrary and balancing equity; an equity or right opposed to that which is sought to be enforced or recognized, and which ought not to be sacrificed or subordinated to the latter, because it is of equal strength and justice, and equally deserving of consideration.

Existing Equity

See Existing Equity.

Latent or Secret Equity

An equitable claim or right, the knowledge of which has been confined to the parties for and against whom it exists, or which has been concealed from one or several persons interested in the subject-matter.

Natural Equity

A term sometimes employed in works on jurisprudence, possessing no very precise meaning, but used as equivalent to justice, honesty, or morality in business relations, or man's innate sense of right dealing and fair play. Inasmuch as equity, as now administered, is a complex system of rules, doctrines, and precedents, and possesses, within the range of its own fixed principles, but little more elasticity than the law, the term "natural equity" may be understood to denote, in a general way, that which strikes the ordinary conscience and sense of justice as being fair, right, and equitable, in advance of the question whether the technical jurisprudence of the chancery courts would so regard it.

Perfect Equity

An equitable title or right which lacks nothing to its completeness as a legal title or right except the formal conveyance or other investiture which would make it cognizable at law; particularly, the equity or interest of a purchaser of real estate who has paid the purchase price in full and fulfilled all conditions resting on him, but has not yet received a deed or patent. See Shaw v. Lindsey, 60 Ala. 344; Smith v. Cockrell, 66 Ala. 75.

EQUITY, COURTS OF. Courts which administer justice according to the system of equity, and according to a peculiar course of procedure or practice. Frequently termed "courts of chancery."
admits within the operation of a statute a class of cases which are neither expressly named nor excluded, but which, from their analogy to the cases that are named, are clearly and justly within the spirit and general meaning of the law; such cases are said to be "within the equity of the statute."

EQUIVOCAL. Having a double or several meanings or senses. Synonymous with "ambiguous". Fleck v. Baldwin, 141 Tex. 340, 172 S.W.2d 975, 979. See Ambiguity.

EQUULEUS. A kind of rack for extorting confessions.

EQUUS COOPERTUS. A horse equipped with saddle and furniture.

ERABILIS. A maple tree. Not to be confounded with arabilis, (arable land.)

ERASTIANS. The followers of Erastus. The sect obtained much influence in England, particularly among common lawyers in the time of Selden. They held that offenses against religion and morality should be punished by the civil power, and not by the censures of the church or by excommunication. Wharton.

ERASURE. The obliteration of words or marks from a written instrument by rubbing, scraping, or scratching them out. Also the place in a document where a word or words have been so removed. The term is sometimes used for the removal of parts of a writing by any means whatever, as by cancellation; but this is not an accurate use. Cloud v. Hewitt, 5 Fed.Cas. 1,085; In re Ferguson, 126 Misc. 286, 213 N.Y.S. 656, 658; Murray v. Floyd, 216 Minn. 69, 11 N.W.2d 780, 783.

ERCISCUNDUS. In the civil law. To be divided. Judicium familice erciscunde, a suit for the partition of an inheritance. Inst. 4, 17, 4. An ancient phrase derived from the Twelve Tables. Calvin.

ERECT. One of the formal words of incorporation in royal charters. "We do, incorporate, erect, ordain, name, constitute, and establish." "Construct" is synonymous with "erect". State ex rel. Davis v. Barber, 139 Fla. 706, 190 So. 809.

EQUITY OF PARTNERS. A term used to designate the right of each of them to have the firm's property applied to the payment of the firm's debts. Colwell v. Bank, 16 R.I. 288, 17 A. 913.

EQUITY OF REDEMPTION. The right of the mortgager of an estate to redeem the same after it has been forfeited, at law, by a breach of the condition of the mortgage, upon paying the amount of debt, interest and costs. Riddick v. Chubb, C.C.A.Utah, 93 F.2d 127, 132; Nahas v. Superior Skylight Co. v. August Kuhnla, D.C.N.Y., 265 F. 282, 284.

An "equivalent," in patent law, is not the same as a "substitute." McCaskey Register Co. v. Mantz, D.C.N.Y., 217 F. 415, 419.

"Equivalents" in an art or process are such acts as, in accordance with preceding rules, are interchangeable with those which the inventor has himself employed. Superior Skylight Co. v. August Kuhnla, D.C.N.Y., 265 F. 282, 284.

An "equivalent," in patent law, is not the same as a "substitute." McCaskey Register Co. v. Mantz, D.C.N.Y., 217 F. 415, 419.

ERECTOR SPINIE MUSCLES. A group of muscles on each side of the spine running all the way up from the sacrum to the skull. Biener v. St. Louis Public Service Co., Mo...kpp., 160 S.W.2d 780, 788.

ERGO. Lat. Therefore; hence; because.

ERMINE. By metonymy, this term is used to describe the office or functions of a judge, whose state robe, lined with ermine, is emblematical of purity and honor without stain. Webster.

ERNES. In old English law. The loose scattered ears of corn that are left on the ground after the binding.

EROSION. The gradual eating away of the soil by the operation of currents or tides. Distinguished from submergence, which is the disappearance of the soil under the water and the formation of a navigable body over it. Mulry v. Norton, 100 N.Y. 433, 3 N.E. 584, 53 Am.Rep. 206; State of Arkansas v. State of Tennessee, 246 U.S. 158, 38 S. Ct. 301, 304, 62 L.Ed. 638, L.R.A.1918D, 258.

EROTOMANIA. See Insanity.

ERROR. A mistaken judgment or incorrect belief as to the existence or effect of matters of fact, or a false or mistaken conception or application of the law.

ERRONEOUS. Involving error; deviating from the law. This term is never used by courts or law-writers as designating a corrupt or evil act.

ERRONEOUS ASSESSMENT. Refers to an assessment that deviates from the law and is therefore invalid, and is a defect that is jurisdictional in its nature, and does not refer to the judgment of the assessing officer in fixing the amount of valuation of the property. In re Blatt, 41 N.M. 269, 67 P.2d 293, 301, 110 A.R.R. 656; Ritchie Grocer Co. v. City of Texarkana, 182 Ark. 137, 30 S.W. 2d 213, 214; Flourney v. First Nat. Bank of Shreveport, 197 La. 1067, 3 So.2d 244, 252.

ERRONEOUS JUDGMENT. One rendered according to course and practice of court, but contrary to law, upon mistaken view of law, or upon erroneous application of legal principles. Herbert B. Newton & Co. v. Wilson Furniture Mfg. Co., 206 N.C. 533, 174 S.E. 449, 450.

ERRONEOUS OR ILLEGAL TAX. One levied without statutory authority, or upon property not subject to taxation, or by some officer having no authority to levy the tax, or one which in some other similar respect is illegal. Jewett Realty Co. v. Board of Sup'rs of Polk County, 239 Iowa 988, 33 N.W.2d 377.

ERRONICE. Lat. Erroneously; through error or mistake.

ERROR. A mistaken judgment or incorrect belief as to the existence or effect of matters of fact, or a false or mistaken conception or application of the law.

ERRANT. Wandering; itinerant; applied to justice on circuit, and bailiffs at large, etc.

ERRANT WATER. Stream water, which does not have channel of navigable river or which returns to stream after overflowing its banks, is not "errant water" in which riparian owner can acquire no vested rights. Tallassee Power Co. v. Clark, C.C.A.Tenn., 77 F.2d 601, 603.

ERRATICUM. In old law. A waif or stray; a wandering beast. Cowell.

ERRATUM. Lat. Error. Used in the Latin formula for assigning errors, and in the reply therefore, "in nullo est erratum," i.e., there was no error, no error was committed.

ERRONEOUS. Involving error; deviating from the law. This term is never used by courts or law-writers as designating a corrupt or evil act.

Squires v. Foorman, 10 Cal. 298; Streeter v. State, 89 Fla. 400, 104 So. 858, 859; Largent v. Etheridge, Tex. Civ.App., 13 S.W.2d 974, 976; Helms v. Cook, 62
ERROR

The office of an assignment of error, which is in the nature of a pleading by the plaintiff in error or appellant, is not only to inform the appellate court of the exact complaint against rulings, whereby, if the complaint be sustained, a judgment or decree may be changed or reversed, but is to inform the defendant in error or appellee of the precise errors relied upon, in order that such defendant in error or appellee may take proper steps, or give proper directions in his own behalf, for making up a sufficient transcript of the record to exhibit to the court what might otherwise be insufficiently shown. Davidson v. Bezant, 101 Fla. 1296, 132 So. 488, 489.

"Assignment of error" is formal complaint of some action of trial court, as distinguished from "proposition," which merely sets forth reasons why such action is erroneous. Standard v. Texas Pacific Coal & Oil Co., Tex.Civ.App., 47 S.W.2d 443, 449.

Clerical Error

See Clerical.

Common Error

(Lat. communis error, q. v.) An error for which there are many precedents. "Common error goeth for a law." Finch, Law, b. 1, c. 3, no. 54. "Common errors" are that the declaration is insufficient in law to maintain the action, and that judgment was given for plaintiff instead of defendant, or vice versa. Margolies v. Goldberg, 101 N.J.L. 75, 127 A. 271, 272.

Cross-Errors

Errors assigned by the respondent in a writ of error, or appellee. Error Apparent of Record

Fundamental Error

Harmful Error

Error which more probably than improbably affected the verdict or judgment prejudicially to the party complaining. Ashby v. Virginia Ry. & Power Co., 138 Va. 310, 122 S.E. 104, 110.

Harmless Error

In appellate practice. An error committed in the progress of the trial below, but which was not prejudicial to the rights of the party assigning it, and for which, therefore, the court will not reverse the judgment, as, where the error was neutralized or corrected by subsequent proceedings in the case, or where, notwithstanding the error, the particular issue was found in that party's favor, or where, even if the error had not been committed, he could not have been legally entitled to prevail.

Invited Error

In appellate practice. The principle of "invited error" is that if, during the progress of a cause, a party requests or moves the court to make a ruling which is actually erroneous, and the court does so, that party cannot take advantage of the error on appeal or review. Gresham v. Harcourt, 93 Tex. 149, 53 S.W. 1019.

Judicial Errors

Errors into which the court itself falls. State v. District Court of Second Judicial District in and for Silver Bow County, 55 Mont. 324, 176 P. 608, 609.

Reversible Error

In appellate practice. Such an error as warrants the appellate court in reversing the judgment before it; substantial error, that which reasonably might have prejudiced the party complaining. Shinn v. United Rys. Co. of St. Louis, 248 Mo. 173, 154 S.W. 103, 105; New Mexican R. Co. v. Hendricks, 6 N.M. 611, 30 Pac. 901.

Technical Error

In appellate practice. A merely abstract or theoretical error, which is practically not injurious to the party assigning it. Eppts v. State, 102 Ind. 539, 1 N.E. 491.

ERROR CASE. An appeal on questions of law. In re Green's Estate, Ohio App., 41 N.E.2d 586.

ERROR CORAM NOBIS. Error committed in the proceedings "before us;" e., error assigned as a ground for reviewing, modifying, or vacating a judgment in the same court in which it was rendered. A writ to bring before the court that pronounced judgment errors in matters of fact which had not been put in issue or passed on and were material to validity and regularity of legal proceeding itself. Hiawassee Lumber Co. v. United States, C.C.A.N.C., 64 F.2d 417, 418.

ERROR CORAM VOBIS. Error in the proceedings "before you;" words used in a writ of error directed by a court of review to the court which tried the cause.

ERROR FUCATUS NUDA VERITATE IN MULTIS . EST PROBABLIO ET SAZEPENUMERO RATIONIBUS VINCENT VERITATEM ERROR. Error artfully disguised [or colored] is, in many instances, more probable than naked truth; and frequently error overwhelms truth by [its show] of reasons. 2 Coke, 73.

ERROR IN EXERCISE OF JURISDICTION. Error in determination of questions of law or fact on which the court’s jurisdiction in particular case depends. Burgess v. Nail, C.C.A.Okl., 103 F.2d 37, 43.

ERROR IN FACT. In judicial proceedings, error in fact occurs when, by reason of some fact which is unknown to the court and not apparent on the record (e. g., the coverture, infancy, or death of one of the parties), it renders a judgment which is void or voidable. Cruger v. McCracken, 87
Tex. 584, 30 S.W. 537; Kihlholz v. Wolff, 8 Ill.
App. 371.

ERROR IN LAW. An error of the court in applying the law to the case on trial, e. g., in ruling on the admission of evidence, or in charging the jury. McKenzie v. Bismarck Water Co., 6 N.D.
361, 71 N.W. 608; Scherrer v. Hale, 9 Mont. 63, 22
Pac. 151.

ERROR IN VACUO. Error in adverse ruling without adverse effect is "error in vacuo" which may subject the erring judge to criticism but not the case to re-trial. United States v. A Certain Tract or Parcel of Land in Chatham County, Ga.,

ERROR JURIS NOCET. An error of law injures.
A mistake of the law has an injurious effect; that is, the party committing it must suffer the consequences. Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 178; 1 Story, Eq.
Jur. § 139, note.

ERROR NOMINIS. Error of name. A mistake of detail in the name of a person; used in contra.
distinction to error de persona, a mistake as to identity.

ERROR NOMINIS NUNQUAM NOCET, SI DE IDENTITATE REI CONSTAT. A mistake in the name of a thing is never prejudicial, if it be clear as to the identity of the thing itself, [where the thing intended is certainly known.] 1 Duer, Ins.
171. This maxim is applicable only where the means of correcting the mistake are apparent on the face of the instrument to be construed. Id.

ERROR OF FACT. That is called "error of fact" which proceeds either from ignorance of that which really exists or from a mistaken belief in the existence of that which has none. See Norton
v. Marden, 15 Me. 45, 32 Am.Dec. 132. Finding of fact contrary to the weight of the evidence is an error of fact. Wear v. Imperial Window Glass Co., C.C.A.Mo., 224 F. 60, 62. Cf. Error in Fact, supra.

ERROR OF LAW. He is under an error of law who is truly informed of the existence of facts, but who draws from them erroneous conclusions
Wright, 1 Wend., N.Y., 360, 19 Am.Dec. 508.

ERROR QUI NON RESISTITTUR APPROBATUR.
An error which is not resisted or opposed is ERROR, WRIT OF. See Writ of Error.

ERRORES AD SUA PRINCIPIA REFERRE, EST

ERRORS EXCEPTED. A phrase appended to an account stated, in order to excuse slight mistakes or oversights.

ERTHMIOTUM. In old English law. A meeting of the neighborhood to compromise differences among themselves; a court held on the boundary of two lands.

ERUBESCIT LEX FILIOS CASTIGARE PARENTES. 8 Cpke., 116. The law blushes when children correct their parents.

ESBRANCATURA. In old law. A cutting off the branches or boughs of trees. Cowell; Spelman.

ESCALATOR CLAUSE. A clause usually found in leases or contracts executed subject to price control regulations. Under this clause, in the case of a lease, the landlord is authorized to collect the maximum rent permissible under rent regulations in force at time of execution of the lease. The escalator part of the clause of the lease consists in the provision that in the event that the rent regulations are modified during the term of the lease, the tenant will pay the increased rental following the allowance thereof. Wasservogel v. Meyerowitz, 191 Misc. 594, 79 N.Y.S.2d 256; and 89 N.Y.S.
2d 290, 275 App.Div. 387. In the case of a sales contract, the escalator clause usually provides in effect that should the maximum prices promulgated be increased or decreased during the life of the contract, payment will be made by the purchaser at a rate of increase or decrease not to exceed the same ratio that the prices quoted bear to the maximum prices authorized. Simpson 858, and 179 F.2d 430. Pfotzer et al. v. United States, 176 F.2d 675; Record & Tribune Co. v.
Brandtjen & Kluge, Inc., Iowa, 39 N.W.2d 288.
Escalator clauses authorizing the contractor to increase the contract price should the prices of labor or material advance also appear in other contracts, such as a contract to furnish steam.
Lincoln Rug Co. v. East Newark Realty Corp., 142 N.J.Eq. 743, 61 A.2d 448.

ESCALDARE. To scald. It is said that to scald hogs was one of the ancient tenures in serjeanty.
Wharton.

ESCAMBIO. In old English law. A writ of exchange. A license in the shape of a writ, former-lv granted to an English merchant to draw a bill of exchange on another in foreign parts. Reg.
Orig. 194.

ESCAMBIUM. An old English law term, signif-ing exchange.

ESCAPE. The departure or deliverance out of custody of a person who was lawfully imprison ESCAPE

ed, before he is entitled to his liberty by the process of law.

The voluntarily or negligently allowing any person lawfully in confinement to leave the place. 2 Bish.Crim.Law, § 917.

Escapes are either voluntary or negligent. The former is the case when the keeper voluntarily concedes to the prisoner any liberty not authorized by law. The latter is the case when the prisoner contrives to leave his prison by forcing his way out, or any other means, without the knowledge or against the will of the keeper, but through the latter’s carelessness or the insecurity of the building. Cortis v. Dailey, 21 App.Div. 1, 47 N.Y. S. 454; U. S. v. Hoffman, D.C.I11., 13 F.2d 269, 270; Whitaker v. Commonwealth, 188 Ky. 95, 221 S.W. 215, 216, 10 A.L.R. 145; State v. Pace, 192 N.C. 780, 136 S.E. 11, 12.

To flee from; to a void; to get out of the way, as to flee to avoid arrest. Life & Casualty Ins. Co. sr. Hargraves, 169 Tenn. 388, 88 S.W.2d 451, 452; State v. Dreiling, 136 Kan, 78, 12 P.2d 735, 736.

—Constructive escape. This takes place when a prisoner obtains more liberty than the law allows, although he still remains in custody. 21 C.J. p. 827. An example is the unauthorized production of a prisoner in court by his custodian. In re Rigg, 123 A. 243, 95 N.J.Eq. 341.

ESCAPE FROM PRISON. A prisoner serving a sentence of imprisonment in a state prison is, in contemplation of law, a prisoner therein, as well when at work outside under the surveillance of prison guards as when confined within its walls, so that if he escapes when outside he escapes from a prison within Pen.Code, §§ 106, 787. People v. Vanderburg, 67 Cal.App. 217, 227 P. 621.

ESCAPE WARRANT. In English practice. This was a warrant granted to retake a prisoner committed to the custody of the king’s prisoner who had escaped therefrom. It was obtained on affidavit from the judge of the court in which the action had been brought, and was directed to all the sheriffs throughout England, commanding them to retake the prisoner and commit him to gaol when and where taken, there to remain until the debt was satisfied. Jacob; Brown.

ESCAPE WAY. Passageway leading from the inside to the outside of the mine. Roberts v. Tennessee Coal, Iron & R. Co., C.C.A.Al., 255 P. 469, 471; Robinson v. Maryland Coal & Coke Co., 196 Ala. 604, 72 So. 161, 162.

ESCAPPIO QUIETUS. In old English law. Delivered from that punishment which by the laws of the forest lay upon those whose beasts were found upon forbidden land. Jacob.

ESCAPIUM. That which comes by chance or accident. Cowell.

ESCEPPA. A measure of corn. Cowell.

ESCHIETA DERIVATUR A VERBO GALLIC() ESCHOIR, QUOD EST ACCIDERE, QUIA ACCIDIT DOMINO EX EVENTU ET EX INSPERATIO. Co.Litt. 93. Escheat is derived from the French word "eschoir," which signifies to happen, because it falls to the lord from an event and from an unforeseen circumstance.

ESCHIETIE VULGO DICUNTUR QUIE DECIDENTIBUS IIS QUIE DE REGE TENENT, CUM NON EXISTIT RATIONE SANGUINIS HIERES, AD FISICUM RELABUNTUR. Those things are commonly called "escheats" which revert to the exchequer from a failure of issue in those who hold of the king, when there does not exist any heir by consanguinity.

It is the casual descent, in the nature of forfeiture, of lands and tenements within his manor, to a lord, either on failure of issue of the tenant dying seised or on account of the felony of such tenant. Jacob.

Also the land or fee itself, which thus fell back to the lord. Such lands were called "excadentice," or "terre excadentiales." Fleta, lib. 6, c. 1; Co. Litt. 13a.

In American law. Escheat signifies a reversion of property to the state in consequence of a want of any individual competent to inherit. The state is deemed to occupy the place and hold the rights of the feudal lord. See 4 Kent, Comm. 423, 424. Center v. Kramer, 112 Ohio St. 269, 147 N.E. 602, 604; In re O’Connor’s Estate, 126 Neb. 182, 252 N.W. 826; Braun v. McPherson, 277 Mich. 396, 269 N.W. 211, 212.

"Escheat at feudal law was the right of the lord of a fee to re-enter upon the same when it became vacant by the extinction of the blood of the tenant. This extinction might either be per clef ectum sanguinis or else per delictum tenentis, where the course of descent was broken by the corruption of the blood of the tenant. As a fee might be held either of the crown or from some inferior lord, the escheat was not always to the crown. The word ‘escheat,’ in this country, at the present time, merely indicates the preferable right of the state to an estate left vacant, and without there being any one in existence able to make claim thereto." 29 Am. Dec. 232, note.

Single Escheat

When all a person’s movables fall to the crown, as a casualty, because of his being declared rebel. Wharton.

ESCHEATOR. In English law. The name of an officer who was appointed in every county to look after the escheats which fell due to the king in that particular county, and to certify the same into the exchequer. An escheator could continue in office for one year only, and was not re-eligible until three years. There does not appear to exist any such officer at the present day. Brown. See 10 Vin.Abbr. 158; Co.Litt. 13b.

ESCHECCUM. In old English law. A jury or inquisition.

ESCHIPARE. To build or equip. Du Cange.

ESCOBEDO RULE. Where police investigation begins to focus on a particular suspect, the suspect is in custody, the suspect requests and is denied counsel, and the police have not warned him of his right to remain silent, the accused has been denied assistance of counsel and no statement elicited during such interrogation may be used in a criminal trial. Escobedo v. State of Illinois, 378 U.S. 478, 490, 491, 84 S.Ct. 1758, 12 L.Ed.2d 977.

ESCOT. A tax formerly paid in boroughs and corporations towards the support of the community, which is called "scot and lot."

ESCRIBANO. In Spanish law. An officer, resembling a notary in French law, who has authority to set down in writing, and verify by his attestation, transactions and contracts between private persons, and also judicial acts and proceedings.

ESCRITURA. In Spanish law. A written instrument. Every deed that is made by the hand of a public escribano, or notary of a corporation or council (concejo,) or sealed with the seal of the king or other authorized persons. White, New Recop. b. 3, tit. 7, c. 5.

ESCROQUERIE. Fr. Fraud, swindling, cheating.

ESCROW. A scroll, writing, or deed, delivered by the grantor, promisor or obligor into the hands of a third person, to be held by the latter until the happening of a contingency or performance of a condition, and then by him delivered to the grantee, promisee or obligee. Minnesota & Oregon Land & Timber Co. v. Hewitt Inv. Co., D.C.Or., 201 F. 752, 759.

The state or condition of a deed which is conditionally held by a third person, or the possession and retention of a deed by a third person pending a condition; as when an instrument is said to be delivered "in escrow." This use of the term, however, is a perversion of its meaning.

ESCROWL. In old English law. An escrow; a scroll. "And deliver the deed to a stranger, as an escrowl." Perk. c. 1, § 9; Id. c. 2, §§ 137, 138.

ESCUAGE. Service of the shield. One of the varieties of tenure, in knight's service, the duty imposed being that of accompanying the king to the wars for forty days, at the tenant's own charge, or sending a substitute. In later times, this service was commuted for a certain payment in money, which was then called "escuage certain." See 2 Bl.Comm. 74, 75.

ESCURARE. To scour or cleanse. Cowell.

ESGLISE, or EGLISE. A church. Jacob.

ESKETORES. Robbers, or destroyers of other men's lands and fortunes. Cowell.

ESKIPPAMENTUM. Tackle or furniture; outfit. Certain towns in England were bound to furnish certain ships at their own expense and with double skippage or tackle. Cowell.

ESKIPPER, ESKIPPARE. To ship.

ESKIPPESON. Shippage, or passage by sea. Spelled, also, "skippeson." Cowell.

ESLISORS. See Elisors.

ESNE. In old law. A hireling of servile condition.

ESNECY. Seniority; the condition or right of the eldest; the privilege of the eldest-born. Particularly used of the privilege of the eldest among coparceners to make a first choice of purparts upon a voluntary partition.

ESPEDRONT. In Spanish law. A junction of all the separate papers made in the course of any one proceeding and which remains in the office at the close of it. Castillero v. U. S., 2 Black 109, 17 L. Ed. 360.

ESPERA. A period of time fixed by law or by a court within which certain acts are to be performed. e., the production of papers, payment of debts, etc.

ESPERONS. L. Fr. Spurs.

ESPLEES. An old term for the products which the ground or land yields; as the hay of the meadows, the herbage of the pasture, corn of arable fields, rent and services, etc. The word has been anciently applied to the land itself. Jacob; Fosgate v. Hydraulic Co., 9 Barb., N.Y., 293.

ESPOUSALS. A mutual promise between a man and a woman to marry each other at some other time. It differs from a marriage, because then the contract is completed. Wood, Inst. 57.

ESPURIO. Span. In Spanish law. A spurious child; one begotten on a woman who has promised intercourse with many men. White, New Recop. b. 1, tit. 5, c. 2, § 1.

ESQUIRE. In English law. A title of dignity next above gentleman, and below knight. Also a title of офис given to sheriffs, serjeants, and baristers at law, justices of the peace, and others. 1 Bl.Comm. 406; 3 Steph.Comm. 15, note; Tomlins. On the use of this term in American law, particularly as applied to justices of the peace and other inferior judicial officers, see Christian v. Ashley County, 24 Ark. 151; Corn. v. Vance, 15 Serg. & R., Pa., 37.
ESSARTER. L. Fr. To cut down woods; to clear land of trees and underwood; properly to thin woods, by cutting trees, etc., at intervals. Spelman. See Assart.

ESSARTUM. Woodlands turned into tillage by uprooting the trees and removing the underwood.

ESSENCE. That which is indispensable. Pittsburgh Iron & Steel Foundries Co. v. Seaman-Sleeth Co., D.C.Pa., 236 F. 756, 757. The gist or substance of any act; the vital constituent of a thing; that without which a thing cannot be itself. Norman v. Department of Labor and Industries, 10 Wash.2d 180, 116 P.2d 360, 362.

ESSENCE OF THE CONTRACT. Any condition or stipulation in a contract which is mutually understood and agreed by the parties to be of such vital importance that a sufficient performance of the contract cannot be had without exact compliance with it is said to be "of the essence of the contract." Flatow, Riley & Co. v. Roy Campbell Co., Tex.Com.App., 280 S.W. 517, 520; Dayvault & Newsome v. Townsend, Tex.Civ.App., 244 S.W. 1108, 1110.

ESSENDI QUIETUM DE TOLONIO. A writ to be quit of toll; it lies for citizens and burgesses of any city or town who, by charter or prescription, ought to be exempted from toll, where the same is exacted of them. Reg.Orig. 258.

ESSENTIAL GOVERNMENTAL DUTIES. Those duties which framers of Constitution intended each member of union would assume in functioning under form of government guaranteed by Constitution. Commissioner of Internal Revenue v. Stillwell, C.C.A.7, 101 F.2d 588, 591.

ESSENTIAL OIL. A group of volatile oils having marked characteristic odors, occurring in fruits, flowers, leaves, stems, etc. In re Johnston, Cust. & Pat.App., 132 F.2d 136, 139.

ESSENTIALLY. "Substantially" is not necessarily synonymous. Robins v. Wettlaufer, Cust. & Pat.App., 81 F.2d 882, 893.

ESSOIN, v. In old English practice. To present or offer an excuse for not appearing in court on an appointed day in obedience to a summons; to cast an essoin. Spelman. This was anciently done by a person whom the party sent for that purpose, called an "essoiner."

ESSOIN, n. In old English law. An excuse for not appearing in court at the return of the process. Presentation of such excuse. Spelman; 1 Sel.Pr. 4; Com.Dig. "Exoine," B 1. Essoin is not now allowed at all in personal actions. 2 Term, 16; 16 East, 7a; 3 Bl.Comm. 278, note.

ESSOIN DAY. Formerly the first general return-day of the term, on which the courts sat to receive essoins, e., excuses for parties who did not appear in court, according to the summons of writs. 3 Bl.Comm. 278; Boote, Suit at Law, 130; Gilb. Com.Pl. 13; 1 Tidd, Pr. 107. But, by St. 11 Geo. IV. and 1 Wm. IV. c. 70, § 6, these days were done away with, as a part of the term.

ESSOIN DE MALO VILLIE. When the defendant is in court the first day; but gone without pleading, and being afterwards surprised by sickness, etc., cannot attend, but sends two essoiners, who openly protest in court that he is detained by sickness in such a village, that he cannot come pro lucrari and pro perdere; and this will be admitted, for it lieth on the plaintiff to prove whether the essoin is true or not. Jacob.

ESSOIN ROLL. A roll upon which essoins were formerly entered, together with the day to which they were adjourned. Boote, Suit at Law, 130; Rosc.Real Act. 162, 163; Gilb.Com.Pl. 13.

ESSOINATOR. A person who made an essoin.

EST ALIQUID QUOD NON OPORTET ETIAM SI LICET; QUICQUID VERO NON LICET CERTE NON OPORTET. Hob. 159. There is that which is not proper, even though permitted; but whatever is not permitted is certainly not proper.

EST ASCAVIOR. It is to be understood or known; "it is to-wit." Litt. §§ 9, 45, 46, 57, 59. A very common expression in Littleton, especially at the commencement of a section; and, according to Lord Coke, "it ever teacheth us some rule of law, or general or sure leading point." Co.Litt. 16.

EST AUTEM JUS PUBLICUM ET PRIVATUM, QUOD EX NATURALIBUS PRJECEPTIS AUT GENTIUM, AUT CIVILIBUS EST COLLECTUM; ET QUOD IN JURE SCRIPT() JUS APPELLA- TUR, ID IN LE GE ANGLIZE RECTUM ESSE DICITUR. Public and private law is that which is collected from natural precepts, on the one hand of nations, on the other of citizens; and that which in the civil law is called "jus," that, in the law of England, is said to be right. Co.Litt. 558.

EST AUTEM VIS LEGEM SIMULANS. Violence may also put on the mask of law.

EST IPSORUM LEGISLATORUM TANQUAM TIS. There is something more perfect in things like ordinary spoken language. 10 Coke, 101b.

EST QUIDDAM PERFECTIUS IN REBUS LICI- TIS. There is something more perfect in things allowed.

ESTABLISH. This word occurs frequently in the constitution of the United States, and it is there used in different meanings: (1) To settle firmly, to fix unalterably; as to establish justice, which is the avowed object of the constitution. (2) To make or form; as to establish a uniform rule of naturalization, and uniform laws on the subject of bankruptcies, which evidently does not mean that these laws shall be unalterably established as jus-
(3) To found, to create, to regulate; as: "Congress shall have power to establish post-roads and post-offices." (4) To found, recognize, confirm, or admit; as: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion." (5) To create, to ratify, or confirm; as: "We, the people," etc., "do ordain and establish this constitution." 1 Story, Const. § 454. And see Ware v. U. S., 4 Wall. 632, 18 L.Ed. 389; U. S. v. Smith, 4 N.J. L. 33.

To bring into being; to build; to constitute; to create; to erect; to form, to found; to found and regulate, to institute, to locate; to make; to model; to organize; to originate; to prepare; to set up. Georgia Public Service Commission v. Georgia Power Co., 182 Ga. 706, 186 S.E. 839, 844; Muscatine Lighting Co. v. City of Muscatine, 205 Iowa 82, 217 N.W. 468, 470; Ronnow v. City of Las Vegas, 57 Nev. 332, 65 P.2d 133, 140.

ESTABLISHMENT. In Spanish law. In Spanish America, a measure of land of sixteen square varas, or yards. 2 White, Recop. 139.

ESTADAL. In Spanish law. In Spanish America, a measure of land of sixteen square varas, or yards. 2 White, Recop. 139.

ESTADIA (or Sobrestadia). In Spanish law. Delay in a voyage, or in the delivery of cargo, caused by the charterer or consignee, for which demurrage is payable. The time for which the party who has chartered a vessel, or is bound to receive the cargo, has to pay demurrage on account of his delay in the execution of the contract.

ESTANDAR. L. Fr. A standard (of weights and measures.) So called because it stands constant and immovable, and hath all other measures coming towards it for their conformity. Termes de la Ley.

ESTANQUES. Wears (weirs) or kiddies in rivers.

ESTATE. The interest which any one has in lands, or in any other subject of property. 1 Prest.Est. 20. And see Mulford v. Le Franc, 26 Cal. 103; Robertson v. VanCleave, 129 Ind. 217, 29 N.E. 781, 15 L.R.A. 68; Ball v. Chadwick, 46 Ill. 31. An estate in lands, tenements, and hereditaments signifies such interest as the tenant has therein. 2 Bl.Comm. 103. The condition or circumstance in which the owner stands with regard to his property. 2 Crabb, Real Prop. p. 2, § 942; Boyd v. Sibold, 7 Wash.2d 279, 109 P.2d 535, 539. In this sense, "estate" is constantly used in conveyances in connection with the words "right," "title," and "interest," and is, in a great degree, synonymous with all of them. See Co.Litt. 345.

The degree, quantity, nature, and extent of interest which a person has in real property is usually referred to as an estate, and it varies from absolute ownership down to fractional possession.Nicholson Corporation v. Ferguson, 114 Okl. 10, 243 P. 195, 200; Washington Ins. Co. v. Pass, for Use of Nalley, 64 Ga.App. 221, 12 S.E.2d 460, 461; Gibbs v. Lester, Tex.Com.App., 41 S.W.2d 28, 29, 80 A.L.R. 431.

In another sense, "estate" designates the property (real or personal) in which one has a right or interest; the subject-matter of ownership; the corpus of property. Thus, we speak of a "valuable estate," "all my estate," "separate estate," "trust estate," etc. This, also, is its meaning in the classification of property into "real estate" and "personal estate." Conrerrin v. Concannon, 122 Or. 387, 259 P. 290, 292; Bates v. Sparrell, 10 Mass. 323; Archer v. Deneale, 1 Pet. 585, 7 L.Ed. 272; Den v. Snitcher, 14 N.J.L. 53.

There is no such legal entity as an "estate." Hansen v. Slaton, 177 Wash. 257, 31 P.2d 903, 904, 92 A.L.R. 1037. It is a convenient phrase, to identify the subject of litigation in the orphans' court, and in proceedings in rem it may be treated as harmless superfluity, but as a designation of a party to be served with a writ it is unknown to the law. If cannot be made the plaintiff in an action, as it is not a person and cannot sue or be sued. In re Harrisburg Trust Co., 80 Pa.Super.Ct. 585.

The word "estate" is a word of the greatest extension, and comprehends every species of property, real and personal. It describes both the corpus and the extent of interest. Deering v. Tucker, 55 Me. 284; Frazer v. First Nat. Bank of Mobile, 235 Ala. 252, 178 So. 441, 444; When used in some connections, it signifies everything of which riches or fortune may consist. Williams v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 155 S.W.64, 65, 169 Mo.App. 468.

"Estate" comprehends everything a man owns, real and personal, and ought riot to be limited in its construction, unless connected with some other word which must necessarily have that effect. Weber v. Bardon, 92 N.J.Eq. 190, 111 A. 649, 650; Black v. Sylvania Producing Co., 105 Ohio St. 346, 137 N.E. 904, 905.

A man's "estate" is that which he can sell or dispose of at his pleasure or what he can pass on to another. Howard v. Mitchell, 268 Ky. 429, 105 S.W.2d 128, 133.

Estates may be either absolute or conditional. An absolute estate is a full and complete estate, Cooper v. Cooper, 56 N.J. Eq. 48, 38 A. 198, or an estate which is not subject to any condition. In this phrase the word "absolute" is not used legally to distinguish a fee from a life-estate, but a qualified or conditional fee from a fee simple. Greenawalt v. Greenawalt, 71 Pa. 483. A conditional estate is one, the existence of which depends upon the happening or not happening of some uncertain event, whereby the estate may be either originally created, or enlarged, or finally defeated. 2 Bl.Comm. 151. Estates are also classified as executed or executory. The former is an estate whereby a present interest passes to and resides in the tenant, not dependent upon any subsequent circumstance or contingency. • They are more commonly called "estates in possession." 2 Bl.Comm. 162. An estate where there is vested in the grantee a present and immediate right of present or future enjoyment. An executory estate is an estate or interest in lands, the vesting or enjoyment of which depends upon some future contingency. Such estate may be an executory devise, or an executory remainder, which is the same as a contingent remainder, because no present interest passes. Further, estates may be legal or equitable. The former is that kind of estate which is properly cognizable in the courts of common law, though not noticed, also, in the courts of equity. 1 Steph.Comm. 217. And see Sayre v. Mohney, 30 Or. 238, 47 P. 197; In re Qualifications of Electors, 19 R.I. 387, 35 A. 213. An equitable estate is an estate an interest in which can only be enforced in a court of chancery. Avery v. Dufrees, 9 Ohio 145. That is properly an equitable estate or interest for which a court of equity affords the only remedy; and of this nature, especially, is the benefit of every trust, express or implied, which is not converted into a legal estate by the statute of uses. The rest are equities of redemption, constructive trusts, and all equitable charges. Burt. Comp. c. 8. Brown v. Freed, 43 Ind. 253; In re Qualifications of Electors, 19 R.I. 387, 35 A. 213. "Equitable estates" are in equity what legal estates are in law; the ownership of the equitable estate is regarded by equity as the real ownership, and the legal estate is, as has been said, no more than the shadow always following the "equitable estate," which is the substance. Town of Cascade v. Cascade County, 75 Mont. 304, 243 P. 806, 808.

A contingent estate is one which depends for its effect upon an event which may or may not happen, as, where an estate is limited to a person not yet born. Conventional estates are those freeholds not of inheritance or estates for life, which are created by the express acts of the parties, in contradistinction to those which are legal and arise from the operation of law. A dominant estate, in the law of easements, is the estate for the benefit of which the easement exists, or the tenement whose owner, as such, enjoys an easement over an adjoining estate. An expectant estate is one which is not yet in possession, but the enjoyment of which is to begin at a future time; a present or vested contingent right of future enjoyment. Examples are remainders and reversions. A future estate is an estate which is not now vested in the grantee, but is to commence in possession at some future time. It includes remainders, reversions, and estates limited to commence in futuro without a particular estate to support them, which last are not good at common law, except in the case of chattel interests. See 2 Bl. Comm. 165. An estate limited to commence in possession at a future day, either without the intervention of a precedent estate, or on the determination by lapse of time, or otherwise, of a precedent estate created at the same time. Griffin v. Shepard, 124 N.Y. 70, 26 N.E. 339; Sabledowsky v. Armbucke, 50 Minn. 475, 52 N.W. 920; A particular estate is a limited estate which is taken out of the fee, and which precedes a remainder; as an estate for years to A., remainder to B. for life; or an estate for life to A., remainder to B. in tail. That precedent estate is called the "particular estate," and the tenant of such estate is called the "particular tenant." 2 Bl.Comm. 165; Bunting v. Speek, 41 Kan. 424, 21 P. 288, 3 L.R.A. 690. A servient estate, in the law of easements, is the estate upon which the easement is imposed or against which it is enjoyed; an estate subjected to a burden or servitude for the benefit of another estate. Walker v. Clifford, 128 Ala. 67, 29 So. 588, 86 Am.St.Rep. 74; Dillman v. Hoffman, 38 Wis. 572. A settled estate, in English law, is one created or limited under a settlement; that is, one in which the powers of alienation, devising, and transmission according to the ordinary rules of descent are restrained by the limitations of the settlement. Micklethwait v. Micklethwait, 4 C.B., N.S., 858. A vested estate is one in which there is an immediate right of present enjoyment or a present fixed right of future enjoyment; an estate as to which there is a person in being who would have an immediate right to the possession upon the ceasing of some intermediate or precedent estate. Flanner v. Fellows, 206 Ill. 136, 68 N.E. 1057.

Original and derivative estates. An original is the first of several estates, bearing to each other the relation of a particular estate and a reversion. An original estate is contrasted with a derivative estate; and a derivative estate is a particular interest carved out of another estate of larger extent. Prest.Est. 125.

For the names and definitions of the various kinds of estates in land, see the different titles below.

"Estate" and "heirs" are not equivalent terms, Martin v. Hale, 167 Tenn. 438, 71 S.W.2d 211, 214; Abraham v. Abraham, 245 App.Div. 302, 280 N.Y.S. 825.

"Estate" and "property" may be used synonymously, McVicar v. McVicar, 128 Kan. 394, 278 P. 36, 38; Ponsoby v. Sacramento Suburban Fruit Lands Co., 210 Cal. 229, 291 P. 167, 168.

Estate by the Entirety

An estate in fee simple for life or for years to come, and which cannot be divided, but which vests a right of survivorship, and is extinguished by the death of the survivor. The estate arises where lands or tenements are expressively demised by one person to another to be held during the joint life or lives, and whether such lands be of freehold or copyhold tenure. Whitman v. Bowes, 38 N.J. Eq. 71. See, also, Fee Simple.
latter may be invested in any number of natural persons each of whom is seized of an undivided moiety of the whole, whereas a "tenancy by entirety" is vested in one person only, who, in law are regarded as one, and each of whom becomes seized of the estate as a whole. Hefner v. White, 113 Ind.App. 296, 45 N.E.2d 342, 346; Carlisle v. Parker, 8 W.W.Harr. 83,188 A. 67.

ESTATE DUTY. A duty imposed in England (act of 1894) superseding probate duty, taxing not the interest to which some person succeeds on a death, but the interest which ceased by reason of the death. Hansen, Death Duties 63. It is leviable on property which was left untouched by probate duty, such as real estate, yet it is in substance of the same nature as the old probate duty.

ESTATE FOR LIFE. See Life Estate.

ESTATE FOR YEARS. A species of estate less than freehold, where a man has an interest in lands and tenements, and a possession thereof, by virtue of such interest, for a fixed and determinate period of time; as in the case where lands are let for the term of a certain number of years, agreed upon between the lessor and the lessee, and the lessee enters thereon. 1 Steph.Comm. 263, 264. Blackstone calls this estate a "contract" for the possession of lands or tenements for some determinate period. 2 Bl.Comm. 140. See Hutcheson v. Hodnett, 115 Ga. 990, 42 S.E. 422; Harbottle v. Central Coal & Coke Co., 134 Ark. 254, 203 S.W. 1044, 1046; 2 Crabb, R.P. § 1267; Bac.Abr. Leases; Wms.R.P. 195. Such estates are frequently called terms.

"Estates for years" embrace all terms limited to endure for a definite and ascertained period, however short or long the period may be; they embrace terms for a fixed number of weeks or months or for a single year, as well as for any definite number of years, however great. Guy v. Brennan, 60 Cal.App. 452, 213 P. 265, 267. Compare Metcalf Auto Co. v. Norton, 119 Me. 103, 109 A. 384.

ESTATE FROM PERIOD TO PERIOD. An estate continuing for successive periods of a year, or successive periods of a fraction of a year, unless it is terminated. Pitney-Bowes Postage Meter Co. v. United States, D.C.Conn., 57 F.Supp. 365, 366.

ESTATE FROM YEAR TO YEAR. An example of an estate for years. It is of later origin and is not found in Littleton (see § 381). It exists in cases where the parties stipulate for it, and also where the parties by their conduct have placed themselves in the relation of landlord and tenant without adopting any other term. If a tenar4 has been allowed to hold over after the expiration of his term in such a way as to preclude the possibility of his becoming a tenant on sufferance, it is a tenancy from year to year. Jenks, Mod.Land Law 88. See, also, Odger, C.L. 869; 7 Q.B. 958. It was originally a development of a tenancy at will, by which the tenancy was terminable only at the time of the year at which it began, and on notice.

ESTATE IN COMMON. An estate in lands held by two or more persons, with interests accruing under different titles; or accruing under the same title, but at different periods; or conferred by words of limitation importing that the grantees are to take in distinct shares. 1 Steph.Comm. 323.

See Tenancy in common. An estate held in joint possession by two or more persons at the same time by several and distinct titles. 1 Washb.R.P. 415; 2 Bla.Comm. 191; 1 Pres.Est. 139.

ESTATE IN COPARCEERY. See Coparcenary.

ESTATE IN DOWER. See Dower.

ESTATE IN EXPECTANCY. One which is not yet in possession, but the enjoyment of which is to begin at a future time; an estate giving a present or vested contingent right of future enjoyment. One in which the right to pernancy of the profits is postponed to some future period. Such are estates in remainder and reversion. Underhill v. R. Co., 20 Barb. 455; Fenton v. Miller, 108 1Vrich. 246, 65 N.W. 966; Ayers v. Trust Co., 187 Ill. 42, 58 N.E. 318.

ESTATE IN FEE SIMPLE. See Fee Simple.

ESTATE IN FEE-TAIL. See Fee Simple.

ESTATE IN JOINT TENANCY. See Tenancy.

ESTATE IN LANDS. Property one has in lands, tenements or hereditaments, or conditions or circumstances in which tenant stands as to his property. Tallman v. Eastern Illinois & Peoria R. Co., 379 Ill. 441, 41 N.E.2d 537, 540.

ESTATE IN REMAINDER. See Remainder.

ESTATE IN REVERSION. See Reversion.

ESTATE IN SEVERALTY. An estate held by a person in his own right only, without any other person being joined or connected with him in point of interest, during his estate. This is the most common and usual way of holding an estate. 2 Bl. Comm. 179; Cruise, Dig. tit. 18, c. 1, § 1.

ESTATE LESS THAN FREEHOLD. An estate for years, estate at will, or estate at sufferance. Fowler v. Marion & Pittsburg Coal Co., 315 Ill. 312, 146 N.E. 318, 319. See Estate of Freehold.

ESTATE OF FREEHOLD. See Freehold.

ESTATE OF INHERITANCE. An estate which may descend to heirs. 1 Washb.R.P. 51; Administration & Trust Co v. Catron, 171 Tenn. 268, 102 S.W.2d 59, 60. A species of freehold estate in lands, otherwise called a "fee," where the tenant is not only entitled to enjoy the land for his own life, but where, after his death, it is cast by the law upon the persons who successively represent him in perpetuum, in right of blood, according to a certain established order of descent. 1 Steph. Comfn. 218; Litt. § 1; Nellis v. Munson, 108 N.Y. 453, 15 N.E. 739; Roulston v. Hall, 66 Ark. 305, 50 S.W. 690, 74 Am.St.Rep. 97; George v. George, 51 Ohio App. 169, 200 N.E. 142, 143.

Estates of freehold are divided into those of inheritance and those not of inheritance. All estates of inheritance in tenements are freehold; but, since freeholds embrace estates for life and those of indefinite duration which may endure for life, all freeholds are not "estates of inheritance." Beirl v. Columbia County, 73 Or. 107, 144 P. 457, 460; Crabb, R.P. § 945.

ESTATE ON CONDITIONAL LIMITATION. An estate conveyed to one person so that, upon occurrence or failure of occurrence of some contintent for life, cannot grant tail, cannot do so, because the grantor, being only

An estate conveyed to one person so that, upon occurrence or failure of occurrence of some contintent, whether conditional or limitative, the estate shall depart from original grantee and pass to another. Carpender v. City of New Brunswick, 135 N.J.Eq. 397, 39 A.2d 40, 43.

ESTATE ON LIMITATION. An estate originated by the use of words denoting duration of time, such as while, during, so long as, and the like and when designated limitative event happens, such estate ends naturally without any re-entry and property reverts to grantor. Carpender v. City of New Brunswick, 135 N.J.Eq. 397, 39 A.2d 40, 43. Sometimes referred to as "base fee", "qualified fee", "determinable fee", or "fee simple defensible". Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. Chapman, 171
A.2d 653, 657, 35 N.J. 177.

ESTATE PUR AUTRE VIE. See Pur Autre Vie.

ESTATE SUBJECT TO A CONDITIONAL LIMI-TATION. The distinction between an estate upon condition subsequent and an "estate subject to a conditional limitation" is that in former words creating condition do not originally limit term, but merely permit its termination upon happening of contingency, while in latter words creating it limit continuation of estate to time preceding happening of contingency. Johnson v. Lane, 199 Ark. 740, 135 S.W.2d 853, 866.

ESTATE TAIL. See Tail, Estate in.

ESTATE TAIL, QUASI. When a tenant for life grants his estate to a man and his heirs, as these words, though apt and proper to create an estate tail, cannot do so, because the grantor, being only tenant for life, cannot grant in perpetuum, therefore they are said to create an estate tail quasi, or improper. Brown.

ESTATE TAX. An excise tax upon privilege of transferring or transmitting property by reason of death and is not tax on property itself. Friend
v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.7, 119
F.2d 959, 960; In re Vanderbilt's Estate, 281 N.Y.
297, 22 N.E.2d 379, 390. An "estate tax" taxes, not the interest to which some person succeeds on a death, but the interest which ceases by reason of the death; while the "inheritance tax" is based on the interest to which the living person succeeds.
In re Ogden's Estate, 209 Wis. 162, 244 N.W. 571, 573.

It is an "estate tax" when the tax is required to be paid on the entire net estate before it is divided into its several parts to be distributed. State Tax Commission v. Back-

ESTATE UPON CONDITION. An estate in lands, the existence of which depends upon the happening or not happening of some uncertain event, whereby the estate may be either originally created, or enlarged, or finally defeated. 2 Bl.Comm.
151; 1 Steph.Comm. 276; Co. Litt. 201a. An estate having a qualification annexed to it, by which it may, upon the happening of a particular event, be created, or enlarged, or destroyed. 4, Kent, Comm. 121. Uri' red States v. 1,010.8 Acres, More or Less, Situate in Sussex County, Del., D.C.Del., 56 F.Supp. 120, 127.

ESTIMATE. A valuing or rating by the mind, without actually measuring, weighing, or the like.
City of Tulsa v. Weston, 102 Okl. 222, 229 P. 108, 122. A rough or approximate calculation only.
Bair v. Montros, 58 Utah 398, 199 P. 667, 669;
United States v. Foster, C.C.A.Iowa, 131 F.2d 57;
P. M. Hennessy Const. Co. v. Hart, 141 Minn. 449, 170 N.W. 579, 598. Thus, a census is a finding of the population, not an "estimate." State ex rel.
Reynolds v. Jost, 265 Mo. 51, 175 S.W. 591, 597, Ann.Cas.1917D, 1102.

This word is used to express the mind or judgment of the speaker or writer on the particular subject under consideration. It implies a calculation or computation, as to estimate the gain or loss of an enterprise. People v. Clark, 37 Hun., N.Y., 203; New Orleans Terminal Co. v. Dixie Rendering, La.App., 179 So. 98, 100.

As used in a contract for the sale of an estimated quantity of goods, "estimated" may mean practically the same as 'more or less.' Robbins v. Hill, Tex.Civ.App., 259 S.W.
1112, 1115. Generally, the word "estimated" indicates that a statement of quantity is a matter of description, and not of the essence of the contract. Bigione v. Bronge, 192 Cal. 157, 219 P. 69, 70.

ESTIMATED COST. The "estimated cost" of a building means the reasonable cost of a building erected in accordance with the plans and specifications referred to, and not necessarily the amount of some actual estimate made by a builder, nor an estimate agreed upon by the parties, nor yet an estimate or bid accepted by the defendant. New Orleans Terminal Co. v. Dixie Rendering, La. App., 179 So. 98, 100.

ESTOP. To stop, bar, or impede; to prevent; to act as a bar or impediment which precludes allegations or denial of a certain fact or state of facts, in consequence of a final adjudication of the matter in a court of law, Lewis v. King, 157 La. 718, 103 So. 19, 22; Agoodash Achim of Ithaca v. Temple Beth -V. Shane, 216 Iowa 768, 249 N.W. 661; Lebold v. Inland Steel Co., C.C.A.111, 125 F.2d 369, 375; Garmon v. Fitzgerald, 168 Miss. 532, 151 So. 726, 728; circumstances such that a knowledge of truth is necessarily implied to party estopped, Conner v. Sonju, 209 Minn. 522, 297 N.W. 1, 3, 4; misleading of one party by another party, Williams v. Middle-West Road Co., 295 Ky. 648, 179 S.W.2d 136, 138; United States, to Use of Noland Co. v. Marland Gas Public Service Co., La., 196 La. 1, 198 So. 633, 640; Finch v. Gulf, 177 Okl. 269, 56 P.2d 329, 330; false preclusion, for Use and Benefit of Mountain States Supply Co., v. Weber v. Cockburn, Tex.Civ.App., 147 S.W.2d 872, 875; Weber v. Fohn, 111 Ind.App., 388, 41 N.E.2d 648, 650, 651; Van Anwerp v. United States, C.C.A.9, 92 F.2d 871, 875; intending to deceive or of such nature that reasonably prudent person would have been deceived, Cellized App., 137 S.W.2d 93, 96.

Estoppel

Fraud

Estoppel is a penalty paid by perpetrator of wrong by affirmative act which, though without fraudulent intent, may result in legal fraud on another. Harris v. Prince, Tex.Civ.App., 98 S.W. 2d 1022, 1026.

A judgment procured by fraud may not be used as the basis of an "estoppel." Seubert v. Seubert, 68 S.D. 195, 200 N.W. 873, 875; Actual or intended fraud is not an essential element of estoppel, but estoppel arises when omission to speak is an actual or constructive fraud. Kellogg-Springfield Tire Co. v. Stein, 163 Misc. 393, 297 N.Y.S. 22, 26. An act done which cannot be contravened without fraud may be basis of estoppel, Tradesmens Nat. Bank of New Haven v. Minor, 122 Conn. 419, 190 A. 270, 272. An estoppel by acts and declarations includes estoppel by record, Morrell v. Towle, 141 Neb. 370, 3 N.W.2d 892, 229, 215, 140 A.L.R. 901.

Intent

"Estoppel" in its broadest sense is penalty paid by one perpetrating wrong by known fraud or by affirmative act which, though without fraudulent intent, may result in legal fraud on another. Harris v. Prince, Tex.Civ.App., 98 S.W. 2d 1022, 1026.

Acts and Declarations

An "estoppel by acts and declarations" is such as arises from the acts and declarations of a person by which he designedly induces another to alter his position injuriously to himself. Brauch v. Peking, 219 Iowa 556, 258 N.W. 892.

Adjudication Distinguished

"Adjudication" and an "estoppel" from relitigating things are different in that there is an adjudication when a suit is repeated, but that there may be an estoppel because some fact which is controlling in both actions was distinguished from the last kind, known as equitable estoppels.

Estoppels are sometimes said to be of three kinds: (1) by deed; (2) by matter of record; (3) by matter of choice. The first two are also called legal estoppels, as distinguished from the last kind, known as equitable estoppels.

The facts are as follows: In wife's divorce suit, evidence showed that wife in procuring void Nevada divorce decree was under husband's duress, domination, and compulsion, and hence there arose an estoppel against estoppel destroying each other, and wife was barred from setting up invalidity of Nevada decree. Lippincott v. Lippincott, 141 Neb. 186, 3 N.W.2d 207, 215, 140 A.L.R. 901.

Legal Title to Land

Estoppel affecting legal title to land requires conduct amounting to knowing representation or concealment relied on by other party changing his position for the worse. Crane v. Esmond, 214 Wis. 571, 253 N.W. 780.

It requires conduct amounting to representation or concealment of material facts known to party estopped at time of giving knowledge thereof, and truth concerning such facts must be unknown to other party claiming benefit of estoppel, with further requirement that conduct was done with intention or expectation that it would be acted on, and other party led to act thereon in reliance on conduct as to change his position for the worse. Jacksonville Public Service Corporation v. Calhoun Water Co., 219 Ala. 616, 123 So. 79, 81, 64 A.L.R. 1550.
ESTOPPEL

Misrepresentation
See Representation, Estoppel By.

Pleading
Pleader must allege and prove not only that person sought to be estopped made misleading statements and representations but that pleader actually believed and relied on them and was misled to his injury thereby. Stanolind Oil & Gas Co. v. Midas Oil Co., Tex.Civ.App., 173 S.W.2d 342, 345.

A plea, replication, or other pleading, which, without confessing or denying the matter of fact adversely alleged, relies merely on some matter of estoppel as a ground for excluding the opposite party from the allegation of the fact. Steph.P.1. 219; 3 Bl.Comm. 308.

A plea which neither admits nor denies the facts alleged by the plaintiff, but denies his right to allege them. Gould, Pl. c. 2, § 39.

A special plea in bar, which happens where a man has done some act or executed some deed which precludes him from averring anything to the contrary. 3 Bl.Comm. 308.

A plea is not "estopped" by judicial allegations which have neither deceived nor damaged anyone. Thomas v. Leonand Truck Lines, La.App., 7 So.2d 753, 756; Hearon v. Davis, La.App., 8 So.2d 787, 791.

Person pleading estoppel must have been misled to his injury by acts of omission or commission of him who is sought to be estopped. Selber Bros. v. Newstadt's Shoe Stores, 203 La. 316, 14 So.2d 10; 13.

Plea of estoppel lacks merit unless it appears that opposing litigant has been misled, deceived or has suffered damage from the allegations of pleader. Mounger v. Ferril, La.App., 11 So.2d 56, 60.

Plea of "estoppel" was fatally defective where there was no statement that defendant relied on course alleged to have been taken by plaintiff. Sertic v. Roberts, 171 Or. 121, 136 P.2d 248, 251.

Statements in pleading in former action which are merely assertions of conclusion of law do not constitute "estoppel by pleading." Smith v. Saulsberry, 157 Wash. 270, 288 P. 927, 930.

Ratification Distinguished
The substance of "estoppel" is the inducement of another to act to his prejudice. The substance of "ratification" is confirmation after conduct. Citizens State Bank of Thedford v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. of Baltimore, Md., 130 Neb. 603, 266 N.W. 81, 84, 103 A.L.R. 1401; Cudahy Bros. Co. v. West Michigan Dock & Market Corporation, 285 Mich. 18, 280 N.W. 93, 95; Gillihan v. Morguelan, 299 Ky. 671, 186 S.W.2d 807, 809.

By ratification party is bound because he intended to be, while under "estoppel" he is bound because other party will be prejudiced unless the law treats him as legally bound. Carlile v. Harris, Tex.Civ.App., 38 S.W.2d 622, 624; doctrine of ratification is based on fact of intention to carry out terms of certain agreement, while doctrine of estoppel is based on right of party to deny existence of agreement by reason of misleading acts. B. F. C. Morris Co. v. Mason, 171 Okl. 589, 39 P.2d 1; 3; Ratification requires no change of position or prejudice. Texas & Pacific Coal & Oil Co. v. Kirtley, Tex.Civ.App., 288 S.W. 619, 622. Ratification is retroactive and validates all of the act involved, while estoppel extends only so much of the act as is affected by the conduct working the estoppel. Woodworth v. School Dist. No. 2, Stevens County, 92 Wash. 456, 1.39 P. 757, 760. Generally speaking, "ratification" applies to a formal declaration of the approval of another's act, whereas "estoppel" is where the party is bound by his own act, but the legal effect is the same. Zenos v. Britten-Connell & Live Stock Co., 75 Cal.App. 299, 242 P. 914, 917; Marian Sa. Bank v. Leahy, 200 Iowa 220, 204 N.W. 156, 458.

Recital
The theory of "estoppel by recital" is that holder of instrument is entitled to rely upon facts recited therein. Bloomfield Village Drain Dist. v. Keefe, C.C.A.Mich., 119 F.2d 157, 163, 165.

Res Judicata Distinguished
A prior judgment between same parties, which is not strictly res judicata because based upon different cause of action, operates as an "estoppel" only as to matters actually in issue or points controverted. JEtta Life Ins. Co. of Hartford, Conn., v. Martin, C.C.A.Ark., 108 F.2d 824, 827; Cunningham v. Oklahoma City, 188 Okd. 466, 110 P.2d 1102, 1104.

Doctrine that issues decided may not be drawn in question in any future action between same parties or their privies, whether cause of action in the two actions be identical or different, is based on "estoppel" rather than upon "res judicata". Norwood v. McDonald, 142 Ohio St. 299, 52 N.E.2d 67, 71, 74; In a later action upon a different cause of action a judgment operates as an "estoppel" only as to such issues in second action as were actually determined in the first action. Lorber v. Vista Irr. Dist., C. C.A.Cal., 127 F.2d 628, 634. The doctrine of "res judicata" is a branch of law of "estoppel". Krisher v. McAllister, 71 Ohio App. 58, 47 N.E.2d 817, 819; The plea of "res judicata" is in its nature an "estoppel" against the losing party from again litigating matters involved in previous action, but the plea does not have that effect as to matters transpiring subsequently. Fort Worth Stockyards Co. v. Brown, Tex.Civ.App., 161 S.W.2d 549, 555. Where a second action between same parties involves different cause of action, under doctrine of "res judicata", judgment in first action operates as an "estoppel" only as to those matters which were in issue and actually litigated. International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers v. Bridgeman, 179 Va. 533, 19 S. E.2d 663, 670.

Stare Decisis
The doctrine of "stare decisis" is but an application of the doctrine of "estoppel." Brown v. Rosenbaum, 175 Misc. 295, 23 N.Y.S.2d 161, 171; The doctrine of "stare decisis" involves no element of "estoppel". Joslin v. State, Tex.Civ.App., 146 S.W.2d 208, 212.

Suppression
The doctrine of "estoppel by concealment and suppression" applies only where there has been reduction to practice of invention. Bogoslawsky v. Huse, 142 F.2d 75, 76, 31 C.C.P.A. (Patents) 1034.

Waiver Distinguished

Implied waiver is kin to estoppel and rests on course of conduct evidencing intention not to insist on some performance due. Kansas City Life Ins. Co. v. Davis, C.C.A.Cal., 95 F.2d 952, 957. It does not necessarily include all elements of estoppel. Smith v. Coutant, 232 Iowa 887, 6 N.W. 2d 421, 425.

Legal waiver of estoppel and estoppel is the same. Woodmen of the World Life Ins. Soc. v. Greathouse, 242 Ala. 532, 7 So.2d 89, 91.

"Technically, a distinction exists between 'waiver' and 'estoppel' but under insurance law, terms are used interchangeably. Boyle Road & Bridge Co. v. American Employers' Ins. Co. of Boston, Mass., 195 S.C. 397, 11 S.E.2d 438, 440, 441; The doctrine of waiver, as asserted against insurance companies to avoid the strict enforcement of conditions contained in their policies, is only another name for the doctrine of estoppel." Rushville Nat. Bank of Rushville v. State Life Ins. Co., 210 Ind. 492, 1 N.E.2d 445, 448. When the doctrine of this distinction is used between 'waiver' and 'estoppel,' waiver belongs to family of estoppel and rests on course of conduct, dealings or acquiescences or admissions or acquiescences or representations, or conduct of party which misled, and an innocent and prudent man should act on it and suffer the consequences. Smith v. Coutant, 232 Iowa 887, 6 N.W. 2d 421, 425.

"Technically, a distinction exists between 'waiver' and 'estoppel' but under insurance law, terms are used interchangeably. Boyle Road & Bridge Co. v. American Employers' Ins. Co. of Boston, Mass., 195 S.C. 397, 11 S.E.2d 438, 440, 441; The doctrine of waiver, as asserted against insurance companies to avoid the strict enforcement of conditions contained in their policies, is only another name for the doctrine of estoppel." Rushville Nat. Bank of Rushville v. State Life Ins. Co., 210 Ind. 492, 1 N.E.2d 445, 448. When the doctrine of this distinction is used between 'waiver' and 'estoppel,' waiver belongs to family of estoppel and the terms are frequently used as meaning the same thing in law of insurance contracts. Ellis v. Metropolitan Casualty Ins. Co. of New York, 14 Wash. 2d 771, 126 P.2d 421, 425.

Warranty
An estoppel based on principle of giving effect to manifest intent of grantor and of preventing grantor from derogating or destroying his own grant by subsequent act. Lewis v. King, 157 La. 718, 103 So. 19, 22; Jordan v. Marks, D.C.La., 55 F.Supp. 204, 209. See, also, Deed, Estoppel By.

ESTOVERIA SUNT ARANDI, ARANDI, CONSTRUENDI ET CLAUDENDI. 13 Coke, 68. Estates are of fire-bote, plowbote, house-bote, and hedge-bote.

ESTOVERHS HABENDIS. A writ for a wife judicially separated to recover her alimony or estovers. Obsolete.

ESTOVERS. The right to use, - during lease, whatever timber there may be on leased premises necessary to promote good husbandry. Hood v. Foster, 194 Miss. 812, 13 So.2d 652, 653.

An allowance made to a person out of an estate or other thing for his or her support, as for food and raiment.

An allowance (more commonly called "alimony") granted to a woman divorced a mensa et thoro, for her support out of her husband's estate. 1 Bl.Comm. 441.

The right or privilege which a tenant has to furnish himself with so much wood from the demised premises as may be sufficient or necessary for his fuel, fences, and other agricultural operations. 2 Bl.Comm. 35; Woodf.Landl. & Ten. 232; Zimmerman v. Shreeve, 59 Md. 363; Van Rosselvaer v. Radcliff, 10 W. N.Y.) 639, 25 Am. Dec. 582.

There is much learning in the old books relative to the creation, apportionment, suspension, and extinguishment of these rights, very little of which, however, is applicable to the condition of things in this country, except perhaps as in New York, where the grants of the manor-lands have led to some litigation on the subject. Taylor Landl. & T. § 220. See 4 Wash.R.P. 99; 7 Bing. 640; Richardson v. York, 14 Me. 221; Dalton v. Dalton, 42 N.C. 197; Loomis v. Wilbur, 5 Mas. 13, Fed.Cas.No.8,498.

Common of estovers, see Common.

ESTRAY. Cattle whose owner is unknown. 2 Kent, Comm. 359; Spelman. Any beast, not wild, found within any lordship, and not owned by any man. Cowell; 1 Bl.Comm. 297. These belonged to the lord of the soil. Britt. c. 17. An animal that has strayed away and lost itself; a wandering beast which no one seeks, follows, or claims. Campbell v. Hamilton, 42 N.D. 216, 172 N.W. 810.

Estray must be understood as denoting a wandering beast whose owner is unknown to the person who takes it up. Estray is an animal that has escaped from its owner, and wanders or strays by itself; a wandering beast which no one seeks, follows, or claims. Campbell v. Hamilton, 42 N.D. 216, 172 N.W. 810.

Estray must be understood as denoting a wandering beast whose owner is unknown to the person who takes it up. Estray is an animal that has escaped from its owner, and wanders or strays by itself; a wandering beast which no one seeks, follows, or claims. Campbell v. Hamilton, 42 N.D. 216, 172 N.W. 810.
ESTREPEMENT. A species of aggravated trespass upon adjoining land, and as equity afforded the same relief by injunction in particular respect of damage or injury to the land committed by the latter.

As it was only auxiliary to a real action for recovery of the land, and as equity afforded the same relief by injunction, the writ fell into disuse in England, and was abolished by 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 27. In Pennsylvania, by statute, the remedy by estrement is extended for the benefit of the reversioner against the tenant for life, in suit for possession.

ET CETERA (or ET CETERA). And others; and other things or the rest; and so forth; etc. is added, as an abbreviation, for the sake of brevity. In its abbreviated form (etc.) this phrase is frequently affixed to one of a series of articles or names to show that others are intended to follow or understood to be included. So, after reciting the initiatory words of a set formula, or a clause already given in full, et cetera, et sic ad patriam: and others, it contra, and so on; and so forth.

ET CETERA (or ET CETERA). And others; and other things or the rest; and so forth; etc. is added, as an abbreviation, for the sake of brevity. And other things of like kind or purpose as compared with those immediately theretofore mentioned. Hisaw v. Ellison Ridge Consolidated School Dist., 118 Miss. 664, 198 So. 557, 558.

In its abbreviated form (etc.) this phrase means and other like purposes. Anderson & Kerr Drilling Co. v. Brulhmeier, Tex.Civ.App., 115 S.W.2d 1212, 1214; other things of like character. Lewis v. White, 81 Miss. 168, 38 So. 431, 282, other things or the rest; and so forth; used to indicate others of a kind specified, Potter v. Borough of Metuchen, 108 N.J.L. 447, 155 A. 369, 370; others of the like kind; and the rest; and so on; and so forth.

ESTRECIATUS. Straightened, as applied to a river channel toward its mouth in which the movement of the tide is very prominent. Alameda County v. Garrison, 108 Cal.App. 122, 291 P. 464, 466.

ET. And. The introductory word of several Latin and law French phrases formerly in common use.

ET ADJOINNATUR. And it is adjourned. A phrase used in the old reports, where the argument of a cause was adjourned to another day, or where a second argument was had.

ET AL. An abbreviation for et alii, "and others." Mitchell v. Mason, 90 Fla. 192, 105 So. 404, 405. The singular is "et alius" (q. v.). It may also mean "and another" in the singular. Babbs v. Cowdow, 229 Ky. 767, 17 S.W.2d 1014, 1016; Glen Falls Indemnity Co. v. Manning, La.App., 168 So. 787, 788.

Where the words "et al." are used in a judgment against defendants, the quoted words include all defendants. Williams v. Williams, 25 Tenn.App. 290, 156 S.W.2d 363, 369.

ET ALIT IT CONTRA. And others on the other side.

A phrase constantly used in the Year Books, in describing a joinder in issue. P. 1 Edw. II. Prist; et alii 6 contra, et sic ad patriam: ready; and others, it contra, and so to the country. T. 3 Edw. Ill. 4.

ET ALIUS. And another.

The abbreviation et al. (sometimes in the plural written et alii) is often affixed to the name of the person first mentioned, where there are several plaintiffs, grantors, persons addressed, etc. See In re Govern's Estate, 77 Mont. 182, 250 P. 812, 815; Anderson v. Haas, 160 Ga. 420, 128 S.E. 178, 179; Conery v. Webb, 12 La.An. 282; Lyman v. Milton, 44 Cal. 630.

ET ALLOCATUR. And it is allowed.

ET CETERA (or ET CETERA). And others; and other things; and others of like character; and others of the like kind; and the rest; and so on; and so forth. Muir v. Kay, 66 Utah, 550, 244 P. 901, 904; Osterberg v. Section 30 Development Co., 160 Minn. 497, 200 N.W. 738, 739; State on Inf. Haw v. Three States Lumber Co., 274 Mo. 361, 202 S.W. 1083, 1084; Wagner v. Brady, 130 Tenn. 554, 171 S.W. 1179; Fleck v. Harmstad, 304 Pa. 302, 155 A. 875, 877, 77 A.L.R. 874. In its abbreviated form (etc.) this phrase is frequently affixed to one of a series of articles or names to show that others are intended to follow or understood to be included.

So, after reciting the initiatory words of a set formula, or a clause already given in full, etc. is added, as an abbreviation, for the sake of brevity. And other things of like kind or purpose as compared with those immediately theretofore mentioned. Hisaw v. Ellison Ridge Consolidated School Dist., 189 Miss. 664, 198 So. 557, 558.

In its abbreviated form (etc.) this phrase means and other like purposes. Anderson & Kerr Drilling Co. v. Brulhmeier, Tex.Civ.App., 115 S.W.2d 1212, 1214; other things of like character. Lewis v. Ladner, 177 Miss. 473, 155 A. 369, 370; others of the like kind; and the rest; and so on; and so forth.
ETHICS

α series of articles or names to show that others are intended to follow or understood to be included so, after citing the initiatory words of a set formula, or a clause already given in full, etc. is added, as an abbreviation, for the sake of convenience. See Lathers v. Keogh, 39 Hun, N.Y., 579; Morton v. Young, 173 Ky. 301, 190 S.W. 1090; Becker v. Hopper, 22 Wyo. 237, 138 P. 179, 180, Ann.Cas. 1916D, 1041.

ET DE CEO SE METTENT EN LE PAYS. L. Fr. And of this they put themselves upon the country.

ET DE HOC PONIT SE SUPER PATRIAM. And of this he puts himself upon the country. The formal conclusion of a common-law plea in bar by way of traverse. See 3 Bl.Comm. 313. The literal translation is retained in the modern form.

ET EI LEGITUR IN ILEC VERBA. L. Lat. And it is read to him in these words. Words formerly used in entering the prayer of oyer on record.

ET HABEAS IBI TUNC HOC BREVE. And have you then there this writ. The formal words directing the return of a writ. The literal translation is retained in the modern form of a considerable number of writs.

ET HABUIT. And he had it.

A common phrase in the Year Books, expressive of the allowance of an application or demand by a party. Parn. demands la vueu. Et habuit, etc. M. 6 Edw. III. 49.

ET HOC PARATUS EST VERIFICARE. And this he is prepared to verify.

The Latin form of concluding a plea in confession and avoidance; that is, where the defendant has confessed all that the plaintiff has set forth, and has pleaded new matter in avoidance. 1 Salk. 2.

These words were used, when the pleadings were in Latin, at the conclusion of any pleading which contained new affirmative matter. They expressed the willingness or readiness of the party so pleading to establish by proof the matter alleged in his pleading. A pleading which concluded in that manner was technically said to "conclude with a verification," in contradistinction to a pleading which simply denied matter alleged by the opposite party, and which for that reason was said to "conclude to the country," because the party merely put himself upon the country, or left the matter to the jury. Brown.

ET HOC PETIT QUOD INQUIRATUR PER PATRIAM. And this he prays may be inquired of by the country. The conclusion of a plaintiff’s pleading, tendering an issue to the country. 1 Salk. 6. Literally translated in the modern forms.

ET INDE PETIT JUDICIAM. And thereupon [or thereof] he prays judgment. A clause at the end of pleadings, praying the judgment of the court in favor of the party pleading. It occurs as early as the time of Bracton, and is literally translated in the modern forms. Bract. fol. 57b; Crabb, Eng. Law, 217.

ET INDE PRODUCIT SECTAM. And thereupon he brings suit. The Latin conclusion of a declaration, except against attorneys and other officers of the court. 3 Bl.Comm. 295.

ET MODO AD HUNG DIEM. Lat. And now at this day. This phrase was the formal beginning of an entry of appearance or of a continuance. The equivalent English words are still used in this connection.
ETHICS

ETIQUETTE, LEGAL. See Legal Ethics.

ETIQUETTE OF THE PROFESSION. The code of honor agreed on by mutual understanding and tacitly accepted by members of the legal profession, especially by the bar. Wharton.

EUM QUI NOCENTEM INFAMAT, NON EST IEOOUM OB EAM REM CONDEMNH; DELICTA ENIM NOCENTIUM NOTA

EVASION. An act of eluding or avoiding, or IEQUUM ET BONUM OB EAM REM CONDEMN-EUM QUI NOCENTEM INFAMAT, NON EST avoidance by artifice. City of Wink v. Griffith

EVASIO. Lat. In old practice. An escape from EVASION, especially by the bar. Wharton.

EUNDO, MORANDO, ET REDEUNDO. Lat. Going, remaining, and returning.

A person who is privileged from arrest (as a witness, legislator, etc.) is generally so privileged eundo, morando, at redeundo; that is, on his way to the place where his duties are to be performed, while he remains there, and on his return journey.

EUNOMY. Equal laws and a well-adjusted constitution of government.

EUNUCH. A male of the human species who has been castrated. See Domat. liv. prel. tit. 2, § 1, n. 10. Eckert v. Van Pelt, 69 Kan. 357, 76 P. 909, 66 L.R.A. 266.

EUTHANASIA. The act or practice of painlessly putting to death persons suffering from incurable and distressing disease. An easy or agreeable death.

EVASION. An act of eluding or avoiding, or avoidance by artifice. City of Wink v. Griffith Amusement Co., 129 Tex. 40, 100 S.W.2d 695, 701.

A subtle endeavoring to set aside truth or to escape the punishment of the law.

Thus, If one person says to another that he will not strike him, but will give him a pot of ale to strike first, and, accordingly, the latter strikes, the returning the blow is punishable; and, if the person first striking is killed, it is murder, for no man shall evade the justice of the law by such a pretense. 1 Hawk.P.C. 81; Bac.Abr. Fraud, A. So no one may plead ignorance of the law to evade it. Jacob.

Artifice or cunning is implicit in the term as applied to contest between citizen and government over taxation. Clapp v. Heiner, C.C.A.Pa., 51 F.2d 224, 225.

In a general way the words "suppression," "evasion," and "concealment" mean to avoid by some device or strategy or the concealment or intentional withholding some fact which ought in good faith to be communicated. Murray v. Brotherhood of American Yeomen, 180 Iowa, 626, 163 N.W. 421, 428.

EVASIVE. Tending or seeking to evade; elusive; shifting; as an evasive argument or plea.

Deprivation of lessee of free enjoyment of premises, and, if it does so, deprivation need not be permanent. Title & Trust Co. v. Durkheimer Inv. Co., 155 Or. 427, 63 P.2d 909.

EVASIVE ANSWER. One which consists in refusing either to admit or to deny a matter as to which the defendant is necessarily presumed to have knowledge.

Hence, where a defendant is alleged to be a corporation, an answer declining, for want of sufficient information, either to admit or to deny such an averment would be evasive. Raleigh & Gaston Ry. Co. v. Pullman Co., 122 Ga. 700, 50 S.E. 1008. But an answer distinctly denying an allegation that the defendant is a corporation, although it may be false, is not evasive. Gaynor v. Travelers' Ins. Co., 12 Ga.App. 601, 77 S.E. 1072, 1073.

EVE. The period immediately preceding an important event. Jarvis v. Jarvis, 286 Ill. 478, 122 N.E. 121, 123.

EVEN. Although; if. May v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 143 Ark. 75, 219 S.W. 756, 757.

EVENING. The closing part of the day and beginning of the night; in a strict sense, from sunset till dark; in common speech, the latter part of the day and the earlier part of the night, until bedtime. Golay v. Stoddard, 60 Idaho 168, 89 P. 2d 1002, 1005. The period between sunset or the evening meal and ordinary bedtime. City of Albany v. Black, 216 Ala. 4, 112 So. 433; State v. Foley, 89 Vt. 193, 94 A. 841, 842.

EVENINGS. In old English law. The delivery at even or night of a certain portion of grass, or corn, etc., to a customary tenant, who performs the service of cutting, mowing, or reaping for his lord, given him as a gratuity or encouragement, Ken nett, Gloss.

EVENT. The consequence of anything, the issue, conclusion, end; that in which an action, operation, or series of operations, terminates. Geis v. Geis, 125 Neb. 394, 250 N.W. 252; Brewer v. Ash Grove Lime & Portland Cement Co., 223 Mo.App. 983, 25 S.W.2d 1086, 1088.

Anything that happens or comes to pass as distinguished from a thing that exists. Quinn v. Streeter, Sup., 175 Misc. 932, 24 N.Y.S.2d 916, 920. That which comes, arrives, or happens, especially an incident which is important or remarkable, Schulz v. Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., 331 Mo. 616, 56 S.W.2d 126; the consequence, outcome, sequel, or end effected by prior operation of medium or contributing force or agency referred to as the "means" or "cause", Chaps., Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co., D.C.La., 49 F.Supp. 348, 349; the culmination or end that means may have produced or brought about. Whatcott v. Continental Casualty Co., 85 Utah 406, 39 P.2d 733, 736; Sentinel Life Ins. Co. v. Blackmer, C.C.A.Colo., 77 F.2d 347, 350.

An event may be injury itself rather than means producing it. Juhl v. Hussman-Ligonier Co., Mo.App., 146 S.W.2d 106, 108. An event need not necessarily be a cause, but may be and generally is a result. Guilloyd v. Kansas City Power & Light Co., 224 Mo.App. 392, 18 S.W.2d 97, 100.

The word includes all of steps or connected incidents from first cause to final result, and may include both cause and effect. Rinehart v. F. M. Stamper Co., 227 Mo.App. 653, 35 S.W.2d 729. The word is broad enough to include an omission. Texas Cities Gas Co. v. Dickens, Tex.Civ. App., 156 S.W.2d 1010, 1016.
The "making of a contract" is an "event". Brown v. Oneida Knitting Mills, 226 Wis. 662, 277 N.W. 653, 655.

In reference to judicial and quasi judicial proceedings, "event" means the conclusion, end, or final outcome or result of a litigation; as, in the phrase "abide the event," speaking of costs or of an agreement that one suit shall be governed by the determination in another. Reeves v. Mcgregor, 9 Adol. & El. 576; Benjamin v. Ver Nooy, 168 N.Y. 578, 61 N.E. 971; Gordon v. Krellman, 217 App.Div. 477, 216 N.Y.S. 778, 779.

Where costs are awarded to an appellant to abide the event, the "event" which determines whether the appellant is entitled to a award of costs of appeal is his success in obtaining a judgment on the merits on the retrial. Commercial Seal Leaf Co. v. Purepac Corporation, 169 Misc. 133, 7 N.Y.S.2d 146, 148.

EVENTUS EST QUI EX CAUSA SEQUITUR; ET DICTITUR EVENTUS QUIA EX CAUSIS EVENT. 9 Coke, 81. An event is that which follows from the cause, and is called an "event" because it eventuates from causes.

EVENTUS VARIOS RES NOVA SEMPER HABET. Co. Litt. 379. A new matter always produces various events.

EVERY. Each one of all; all the separate individuals who constitute the whole, regarded one by one. Smith v. Hall, 217 Ky. 615, 290 S.W. 480, 482; Salo v. Pacific Coast Casualty Co., 95 Wash. 109, 163 P. 384, 385, L.R.A.1917D, 613. The term is sometimes equivalent to "all"; Erskine v. Pyle, 51 S.D. 262, 213 N.W. 500, 502; and sometimes to "each"; Miller v. Rodd, 285 Pa. 16, 131 A. 482, 483.

EVERY CORPORATION. Statute providing that books of "every corporation" shall be open to inspection of shareholders, held applicable to foreign corporation doing business within state. Getridge v. State Capital Co., 129 Cal.App. 86, 18 P.2d 375, 376.

EVERY MAN MUST BE TAKEN TO CONTEMPLATE THE PROBABLE CONSEQUENCES OF THE ACT HE DOES. Lord Ellenborough, 9 East, 277. A fundamental maxim in the law of evidence. Best, Pres. § 16; 1 Phil.Ev. 444. (Every man is presumed to intend the natural and probable consequences of his own voluntary acts. 1 Greenl.Evid. § 18; 9 B. & C. 643; 3 Maule & S. 11; Webb, Poll.Torts 35.)

EVERY OTHER THING. This phrase, as used in requiring employer to furnish safe place of employment and to do "every other thing" reasonably necessary to protect employees, relates to things of same kind that employer must necessarily do in making place safe. Northwestern Casualty & Surety Co. v. Industrial Commission, 194 Wis. 337, 216 N.W. 485, 486.

EVERY OWNER. As used in law making "every owner" of a motor vehicle liable for personal injuries in certain circumstances include a municipality. Kelly v. City of Niagara Falls, 131 Misc. 934, 229 N.Y.S. 328, 331.

EVERY PART. As used in charge on caveat to probate of will, the signature is included in "every part" of will. Dulin v. Dulin, 197 N.C. 215, 148 S.E. 175, 178.

EVERY PERSON. Statute making it misdemeanor or for "every person" to sell appointments to public office applies to all persons whether public officials or not. Smalley v. State, 75 Okl.Cr. 10, 127 P.2d 869, 870.

Statute making it duty of "every person" to pay taxes without demand includes receivers. Hood v. Bond, 42 N.M. 295, 77 P.2d 180, 188.

Statute providing for arrest of every person in city engaged in violating law or ordinance includes female offenders. City of Janesville v. Tweedell, 217 Wis. 395, 258 N.W. 437.

Where a law specifically excludes any person engaged in certain transportation from definition of "contract hauler" and defines "for hire carrier" to include "every person," except "certified operator" and "contract hauler," "every person" includes those engaged in such transportation. State ex rel. Scott v. Superior Court for Thurston County, 173 Wash. 547, 24 P.2d 87.

EVERY PERSON, FIRM OR CORPORATION. City ordinance providing "every person, firm or corporation" should pay gasoline tax held to include receivers. Kansas City, Mo. v. Johnson, C. A.Mo., 70 F.2d 360, 361.

EVERY RESIDENT OF THIS STATE, As used in constitutional provision partially exempting from taxation those honorably discharged from military service applies to every person who fulfills requirements of provision regardless of sex. Lockhart v. Wolden, 17 Cal.2d 628, 111 P.2d 319, 320.

EVERY RIGHT, TITLE, INTEREST OR THING. Tender of "every right, title, interest or thing" received is tender of everything received in action to rescind land contract. Mathews v. Tannenbaum, 139 Cal.App. 500, 34 P.2d 233, 235.

EVERY STOCK CORPORATION. Statute making stockholders of "every stock corporation" liable for employees' services refers to domestic stock corporations only. Bogardus v. Fitzpatrick, 139 Misc. 533, 247 N.Y.S. 692, 693.

EVERY SUCH PROVISION. In statute providing that devise for jointure of wife shall bar her dower and that every such provision by will shall be taken as intended in lieu of dower, "every such provision" means devise for jointure of wife. Shackelford v. Shackelford, 181 Va. 869, 27 S.E.2d 354, 359.

EVERES-DROPPERS. See Eaves-Droppers.

EVICT. Civil law. To recover anything from a person by virtue of the judgment of a court or judicial sentence.
Common law. To dispossess, or turn out of the possession of lands by process of law. Also to recover land by judgment at law. "If the land is evicted, no rent shall be paid." 10 Coke, 128a.

The term "evicted," means deprivation by one of office, or of salary attached thereto, to which another is, or may be entitled. The term "evicted" properly applies only to realty and has been used to describe inability to get possession, and also, deprivation of the possession of lands and tenements. Hawkins v. Voisine, 292 Mich. 357, 290 N.W. 827, 828.

To "evict" a tenant is to deprive him of possession of the leased premises or disturb him in their beneficial enjoyment so as to cause tenant to abandon the premises. Estes v. Gatilff, 291 Ky. 93, 163 S.W.2d 273, 276.

EVICT. Dispossession by process of law; the act of depriving a person of the possession of lands which he has held, in pursuance of the judgment of a court. Reasoner v. Edmundson, 5 Ind. 395; Cowdrey v. Coit, 44 N.Y. 392, 4 Am.Rep. 690; Home Life Ins. Co. v. Sherman, 46 N.Y. 372.

Originally and technically, the dispossession must be by judgment of law; if otherwise, it was an ouster; Webb v. Alexander, 7 Wend.N.Y. 285; but the necessity of legal process was long ago abandoned in England; 4 Term 617; and in this country also it is settled that there need not be legal process; Green v. Irving, 54 Miss. 450, 28 Am.Rep. 360; Thomas v. Becker, 190 Iowa 237, 180 N.W. 285, 286. Any actual entry and dispossession, adversely and lawfully made under paramount title, will be an eviction. Rawle, Co. § 133; Gallison v. Downing, 244 Mass. 33, 138 N.E. 315, 318.

In a more popular sense, the term denotes turning a tenant of land out of possession, either by re-entry or by legal proceedings, such as an action of ejectment. Sweet.

By a loose extension, the term is sometimes applied to the ousting of a person from the possession of chattels; but, properly, it applies only to realty.

A wrongful act upon the part of the landlord is involved in eviction. Cerruti v. Burdick, 130 Conn. 284, 33 A.2d 333, 335.

An entry under paramount title, so as to interfere with the rights of the grantee, is implied in eviction. The object of the party making the entry is immaterial, whether it be to take all or a part of the land itself or merely an incorporeal right. Phrases equivalent in meaning are "ouster by paramount title," "entry and disturbance," "possession under an elder title," and the like. Mitchell v. Warner, 5 Conn. 361.

Any wrong of lessor which results in substantial interference with lessee's rights. Harrison v. Fregger, 88 Mont. 448, 294 P. 372, 373.

Deprivation of lessee of possession of premises or disturbance of lessee in beneficial enjoyment so as to cause tenant to abandon the premises. Estes v. Gatilff, 291 Ky. 93, 163 S.W.2d 273, 276.

Dispossession under judgment, though it need not be by force of process under judgment. Edgemont Coal Co. v. Asher, D.C.Ky., 298 F. 1000; Walker v. Robinson, 163 Ky. 618, 174 S. W. 503, 505.

Formerly the word was used to denote an expulsion by the assertion of a paramount title or by process of law. Port Utilities Commission v. Marine Oil Co., 173 S.C. 345, 175 S.E. 818.

Manual or physical expulsion or exclusion from demised premises or part thereof is not necessary to constitute eviction. Kennerly v. B. F. Avery & Sons Plow Co., Tex.Civ.App., 300 S.W. 159, 161.

Originally an eviction was understood to be a dispossession of the tenant by some act of his landlord or the failure of his title. Of late years it has come to include any wrongful act of the landlord which may result in an interference with the tenant's possession in whole or in part. The act may be one of omission as well as one of commission. Holden v. Tidwell, 37 Old. 553, 133 P. F. 54, 56, 49 L.R.A.N.S., 369.

When it would be useless for covenantee to attempt to maintain his title, as where holder of superior title has taken actual possession or threatens suit, an eviction occurs in legal contemplation. Love v. Minerva Petroleum Corporation, Tex.Civ.App., 105 S.W.2d 892, 894.

When tenant's possession or enjoyment of premises is interfered with by a third person not acting by landlord's authority, or consent, there is no "eviction." Smith v. Nortz Lumber Co., N.D., 72 N.D. 353, 7 N.W.2d 435, 437; Prospect Point Land Improvement Co. v. Jackson, 109 N.J.L. 385, 162 A. 576, 577.

Civil Law

The abandonment which one is obliged to make of a thing, in pursuance of a sentence by which he is condemned to do so. Poth.Contr.Sale, pt. 2, c. 1, § 2, art. 1, no. 83. The abandonment which a buyer is compelled to make of a thing purchased, in pursuance of a judicial sentence.

Eviction is the loss suffered by the buyer of the totality of the thing sold, or of a part thereof, occasioned by the right or claim of a third person. Civil Code La. art. 2500.

EVIDENCE. Any species of proof, or probative matter, legally presented at the trial of an issue, by the act of the parties and through the medium of witnesses, records, documents, concrete objects, etc., for the purpose of inducing belief in the minds of the court or jury as to their contention. Hotchkiss v. Newton, 10 Ga. 567; O'Brien v. State, 69 Neb. 691, 96 N.W. 650; Hubbell v. U. S., 15 Ct.C1. 606; McWilliams v. Rodgers, 56 Ala. 93.
All circumstances in case, including opportunity of witnesses for observation, interest in case, demeanor on stand, 346 Ill. 190, 178 N.E. 403, 410; all kinds of proof. Kneezle
v. Scott County Milling Co., Mo.App., 113 S.W.2d 817, 822.

All the means by which any alleged matter of fact, the truth of which is submitted to investigation, is established or disproved. Evans v. Davenport, Ev. c. 1, § 1; Bednarik v. Bed-narik, 18 N.J.Misc. 633, 16 A.2d 80, 89; Latikos v. State, 17 Ala.App. 592, 88 So. 45, 47.

Any matter of fact, the effect, tendency, or design of which is to produce in the mind a persuasion of the existence or nonexistence of some matter of fact. State v.
Heavenier, 146 S.C. 138, 143 S.E. 674, 676.

Anything perceptible to the five senses constituting "evidence," when submitted to court or jury, if competent. In re Fisher's Estate, 47 Idaho 668, 279 P. 291, 293.

As a part of procedure "evidence" signifies those rules of law whereby it is determined what testimony should be admitted and what should be rejected in each case, and what is the weight to be given to the testimony admitted.

Competent evidence is meant by statute requiring trial court to hear evidence on controverted applications for what transpires in jury's presence and what is necessarily obvious to them is 'evidence' if relevant and unprejudicial. Williamson v. Derry Electric Co., 89 N.H.
216, 196 A. 265 266.

Whatever is received to establish or disprove an alleged fact. In re Seigle's Estate, 26 N.Y.S.2d 410, 413, 176
Misc. 15.

Whatever may be given to the jury as tending to prove a case; includes testimony of witnesses, documents, admissions of parties, etc. Harris v. Tomlinson, 130 Ind. 426, 30

Whatever may properly be submitted to a court or jury to establish an issue or prove a case. Superior Meat Prod-

Within prohibition against requiring an accused to give evidence against himself, "evidence" means evidence by accused out of court as well as in court. State v. Bates, 187 Miss. 172, 192 So. 832, 835.

Evidence may be false and of no probative value and so it differs from proof. State v. Howard, 162 La. 719, 111 So.
72, 75.

To "evidence" means to attest, prove, show clearly, make plain. Indiana Harbor Belt R. Co. v. Jacob Stern & Sons, D.C.Ill., 37 F.Sup. 690, 691.

That which tends to prove or disprove any matter in question, or to influence the belief respecting it. Belief is produced by the consideration of something presented to the mind. The matter thus presented, in whatever shape it may come, and through whatever material organ it is delivered, is evidence. Parker, Lectures on Medical Jurisprudence, in Dartmouth College.

The word signifies, in its original sense, the state of being evident, i. e., plain, apparent or notorious. But by an almost peculiar inflection of our language, it is applied to that which tends to render evident or to generate proof.
Best, Ev. §§ 10, 11; Dupont v. Petellet, 120 Me. 114, 113 is such evidence as is addressed directly to the senses without intervention of testimony. Kabase v. State, 31 Ala. App. 77, 12 So.2d 758, 764.
A. 11, 12.

EVIDENCE COMPLETED. Means that both sides have offered testimony and rested, or that plaintiff has rested and defendant has made motion for finding on plaintiff's case and stands on motion and declines to offer evidence. Merriam v. Sugrue, D.C. Mun. App., 41 A.2d 166, 167.

EVIDENCE; LAW OF. The aggregate of rules and principles regulating the admissibility, relevancy, and weight and sufficiency of evidence in legal proceedings. See Ballinger's Ann. Codes & St. Or. 1901, § 678, Code 1930, § 9-102.

EVIDENCE OF DEBT. A term applied to written instruments or securities for the payment of money, importing on their face the existence of a debt. 1 Rev. St. N. Y. p. 599, § 55.

EVIDENCE OF INSURABILITY SATISFACTORY TO COMPANY. Means evidence which would satisfy a reasonable person experienced in the life insurance business that insured was in an insurable condition. Bowie v. Bankers Life Co., C.C.A. Colo., 105 F.2d 806, 808.

EVIDENCE OF TITLE. A deed or other document establishing the title to property, especially real estate.

EVIDENCE PROPER is something capable of being weighed in scales of reason and compared and estimated with other matter of the probative sort. Neely v. Provident Life & Accident Ins. Co. of Chattanooga, Tenn., 322 Pa. 417, 185 A. 784, 788.

EVIDENCE REASONABLY TENDING TO SUPPORT VERDICT. Means evidence that is competent, relevant, and material, and which to rational and impartial mind naturally leads, or involuntarily tends to lead, to conclusion for which there is valid, just, and substantial reason. Kelly v. Oliver Farm Equipment Sales Co., 169 Okl. 269, 36 P.2d 888, 891.

EVIDENCE SUFFICIENT IN LAW. Substantial evidence. Almon v. Morgan County, 245 Ala. 241, 16 So.2d 511, 516.

EVIDENCE TO SUPPORT FINDINGS. In action to review an order of the Unemployment Compensation Commission "evidence" to support findings meant substantial evidence or such relevant evidence as a reasonable mind might accept as adequate to support a conclusion and enough to justify, if the trial were to a jury, a refusal to direct a verdict when the conclusion sought to be drawn from it is one of fact for jury. Jordan v. Craighead, 114 Mont. 337, 136 P.2d 526, 528.

EVIDENCE TO SUPPORT THE VERDICT. Means some legal evidence tending to prove every material fact in issue as to which the party in whose favor the verdict was rendered had the burden of proof. Nicolai-Neppech Co. v. Smith, 154 Or. 450, 58 P.2d 1016, 1024, 107 A.L.R. 1124.

EVIDENT. Clear to the understanding and satisfactory to the judgment; manifest; plain; obvious; conclusive. Russell v. State, 71 Fla. 236, 71 So. 27, 28. Noticeable; apparent to observation. Hamill v. Joseph Schlitz Brewing Co., 165 Iowa 266, 143 N.W. 99, 107. That is "evident" that suggests more than a mental process, but no difficulty in seeing that the thing is true. Bremner v. Marc Eidlitz & Son, 118 Conn. 666, 174 A. 172, 174.

A constitutional provision forbidding bail in capital cases when the proof is "evident", means that, if the evidence is such as to lead a dispassionate mind to the conclusion that the accused is guilty, and that if the law is properly administered a conviction would be had of a capital offense, bail should be denied. Ex parte Vermillion, 102 Tex. Cr.R. 590, 280 S.W. 771; Ex parte Bates, 90 Tex.Cr.R. 406, 235 S.W. 879, 880; Ex parte Dumas, 110 Tex.Cr.R. 1, 7 S.W.2d 90, 9L

Under constitutional provision that all prisoners shall be bailable unless for capital offenses when the proof is evident, the word "evident" means that the accused, with a cool and deliberate mind and formed design, did maliciously kill another, and that a dispassionate jury would, not only convict him, but would also assess the death penalty. Ex parte Redding, 147 Tex.Cr.R. 434, 180 S.W.2d 951, 952; Ex parte Shults, 127 Tex.Cr.R. 484, 77 S.W.2d 877.

—Proof Evident. See Proof.

EVIDENTIA, L. Evidence. See Preuve.

EVIDENTIARY. Having the quality of evidence; constituting evidence; evidencing. A term introduced by Bentham, and, from its convenience, adopted by other writers.

Those which have a legitimate bearing on the matter or question in issue and which are directly (not inferentially) established by the evidence in the case. Woodhill v. Patton, 76 Ind. 579, 40 Am.Rep. 269. Facts which can be directly established by testimony or evidence—distinguished from "ultimate facts." Real Estate Title, Ins. & Trust Co. v. Lederer, D.C. Pa., 229 F. 799, 804.

EVIDENTLY. Means in an evident manner, perceptibly, clearly, obviously, plainly. It is employed to express the idea of full-proof conviction. Tennes v. Tennes, 320 Ill.App. 19, 50 N.E.2d 132, 139.

EVIL. It is an "evil" within rule that either means or end of conspiracy must be evil, to frustrate or impede a government function, whether that function is performed under a constitutional or an unconstitutional law. U. S. v. Rhoads, D.C. D. C., 48 F.Supp. 175, 176.

EVIL REPUTATION. Character imputed to person in community is generally bad. People v. Pieri, 269 N.Y. 315, 199 N.E. 495, 497.

EVOCATION. In French law. The withdrawal of a cause from the cognizance of an inferior court, and bringing it before another court or judge. In some respects this process resembles the proceedings upon certiorari.

EVOLUTION. Every useful art has its technique which is practiced by those who are skilled in it, and which is broadened in its usefulness thereto from precedent to precedent. This is the process of "evolution"—a phenomenon in which the expectable follows the expectable. Less Car Load Lots Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., D.C.N.Y., 10 F. Supp. 642, 648.

EVOLVED. Means "developed" and may apply to any person attaining highly developed mental training and experience in arts and sciences and profession of teaching, medicine, or law. In re Carpenter’s Estate, 163 Misc. 474, 297 N.Y.S. 649, 654.

EWAGE. (L. Fr. Ewe, water.) In old English law. Toll paid for water passage. Cowell. The same as aquage or aquagium. Tomlins.

EWBRICE. Adultery; spouse-breach; marriage-breath. Cowell; Tomlins.

EWRY. An office in the royal household where the table linen, etc., is taken care of. Wharton.

EX. A latin preposition meaning from, out of, by, on, on account of, or according to.

A prefix, denoting removal, cessation or former. Prefixed to the name of an office, relation, status, etc., it denotes that the person spoken of once occupied that office or relation, but does so no longer, or that he is now out of it. Thus, ex-mayor, ex-partner, ex-judge.

A prefix which is equivalent to "without," "reserving," or "excepting." In this use, probably an abbreviation of "except." Thus, ex-interest, ex-coupons.

A sale of bonds ‘ex. July coupons’ means a sale reserving the coupons; that is, a sale in which the seller receives, in addition to the purchase price, the benefit of the coupons, which benefit he may realize either by detaching them or receiving from the buyer an equivalent consideration. Porter v. Wormser, 94 N.Y. 445.

Also used as an abbreviation for "exhibit." See Dugan v. Trisler, 69 Ind. 555.

EX ABUNDANTLY. Out of abundance; abundantly; superfluously; more than sufficient. Calvin.

EX ABUNDANTI CAUTELA. Lat. Out of abundant caution. "The practice has arisen abundanti cautela." 8 East, 326; Lord Ellenborough, 4 Maule & S. 544.

EX ADVERS0. On the other side. 2 Show. 461. Applied to counsel.

EX ZEQUITATE. According to equity; in equity. Fleta, lib. 3, c. 10, § 3.

EX ./.EQUO ET BONO. A phrase derived from the civil law, meaning, in justice and fairness; according to what is just and good; according to equity and conscience. 3 Bl. Comm. 163.

EX ALTERA PARTE. Of the other part.
EX CONTINENTL Immediately; without any interval or delay; incontinent. A term of the civil law. Calvin.

EX CONTRACTU. From or out of a contract.

In both the civil and the common law; rights and causes of action are divided into two classes,—those arising "ex contractu," (from a contract,) and those arising "ex delicto," (from a delict or tort.) See 3 Bl. Comm. 117; Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 384. See Scharf v. People, 134 Ill. 240, 24 N.E. 761; Federal Life Ins. Co. v. Maxam, 70 Ind.App. 266, 117 N.E. 801, 807.

If cause of action declared in pleading arises from breach of promise, the action is "ex contractu." Chambers v. Birmingham Trust & Savings Co., 232 Ala. 609, 168 So. 893.

EX CURIA. Out of court; away from the court.

EX DEBITO JUSTITIZE. From or as a debt of justice; in accordance with the requirement of justice; of right; as a matter of right. The opposite of "ex gratia, (q.v.)." 3 Bl. Comm. 48, 67.

EX DEFECTU SANGUINIS. From failure of blood; for want of issue.

EX DELICTO. From a delict, tort, fault, crime, or malfeasance.

In both the civil and the common law, obligations and causes of action are divided into two great classes,—those arising "ex contractu," (out of a contract,) and those arising "ex delicto." The latter are such as grow out of or are founded upon a wrong or tort, e.g., trespass, trover, replevin. These terms were known in English law at a very early period. See Inst. 4, 1, pr.; Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 384; 3 Bl. Comm. 117; Bract. fol. 101b; King v. New Orleans Ry. & Light Co., 140 La. 843, 74 So. 168, 169; Lamb v. McHan, 17 Ga.App. 5, 86 S.E. 252, 253; Seney v. Knight, 292 Ill. 206, 126 N.E. 761, 763.

An action "ex delicto" is an action of tort; an action arising out of fault, misconduct, or malfeasance. Sayers & Muir Service Station v. Indian Refining Co., 266 Ky. 779; 100 S.W.2d 687, 689. If cause of action declared in pleading arises from breach of duty growing out of contract, it is in form "ex delicto" and case. Chambers v. Birmingham Trust & Savings Co., 232 Ala. 609, 168 So. 893.

EX DELICTO NON EX SUPPLICIO EMERGIT INFAMIA. Infamy arises from the crime, not from the punishment.

EX DEMISSEIO (commonly abbreviated "ex dem."). Upon the demise. A phrase forming part of the title of the old action of ejectment.

EX DIRECTO. Directly; immediately. Story, Bills, § 199.

EX DIUTURNITATE TEMPORIS, OMNIA PILE-SUMUNTUR SOLEMNITER ESSE ACTA. From length of time [after lapse of time] all things are presumed to have been done in due form. Co. Litt. 6b; Best, Ev. Intro. § 43; 1 Greenl. Ev. § 20.

EX DOLO MALO. Out of fraud; out of deceitful or tortuous conduct. A phrase applied to obligations and causes of action vitiated by fraud or deceit.

EX DOLO MALO NON ORITUR ACTIO. Out of fraud no action arises; fraud never gives a right of action. No court will lend its aid to a man who founds his cause of action upon an immoral or illegal act. Cowp. 343; Broom, Max. 729.

EX DONATIONIBUS AUTEM FEODA MILITAR-IA MAGNUM SERJEANTIAM NON CON-TINENTIBUS ORITUR NOBIS QUODDAM NOMEN GENERALE, QUOD EST SOCAGIUM. Co. Litt. 86. From grants not containing military fees or grand serjeanty, a kind of general name is used by us, which is "socage."

EX EMPTO. Out of purchase; founded on purchase. A term of the civil law, adopted by Bracton. Inst. 4, 6, 28; Bract. fol. 102. See Actio ex Empto.

EX FACIE. From the face; apparently; evidently. A term applied to what appears on the face of a writing.

EX FACTO. From’ or in consequence of a fact or action; actually. Usually applied to an unlawful or tortious act as the foundation of a title, etc. Sometimes used as equivalent to "de facto." Bract. fol. 172.

EX FACTO JUS ORITUR. The law arises out of the fact. Broom, Max. 102. A rule of law continues in abstraction and theory, until an act is done on which it can attach and assume as it were a body and shape. Best, Ev. Introd. § 1.

EX FICTIONE JURIS. By a fiction of law.

EX FREQUENTI DELICTO AUGETUR PCENA. 2 Inst. 479. Punishment increases with increasing crime.

EX GRATIA. Out of grace; as a matter of grace, favor, or indulgence; gratuitous. A term applied to anything accorded as a favor; as distinguished from that which may be demanded "ex debito, as a matter of right."

EX GRAVI QUERELA. (From or on the grievous complaint.) In old English practice. The name of a writ (so called from its initial words) which lay for a person to whom any lands or tenements in fee were devised by will, (within any city, town, or borough wherein lands were devisable by custom,) and the heir of the devisor entered and detained them from him. Fitzh. Nat. Breve. 198, L, et seq.; 3 Reeve, Eng. Law, 49. Abolished by St. 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 27, § 36.

EX HYPOTHESI. By the hypothesis; upon the supposition; upon the theory or facts assumed.

EX INDUSTRIA. With contrivance or deliberation; designedly; on purpose. See 1 Kent, Comm. 318; Martin v. Hunter, 1 Wheat 334, 4 L.Ed. 97.

EX INTEGRO. Anew; afresh.

EX JUSTA CAUSA. From a just or lawful cause; by a just or legal title.

EX LEGE. By the law; by force of law; as a matter of law.

EX LEGIBUS. According to the laws. A phrase of the civil law, which means according to the intent or spirit of the law, as well as according to the words or letter. Dig. 50, 16, 6. See Calvin.
EX LICENTIA REGIS. By the king's license. 1 Bl. Comm. 168, note.

EX LOCATO. From or out of lease or letting. A term of the civil law, applied to actions or rights of action arising out of the contract of locatum, (q.v.) Inst. 4, 6, 28. Adopted at an early period in the law of England. Bract. fol. 102; 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, 168.

EX MALEFICIO. Has been defined variously as from or growing out of wrongdoing; tortious; tortiously; growing out of, or founded on, misdoing or tort; on account of misconduct; by virtue of or out of an illegal act. "Ex maleficio" is probably synonymous with "malfeasance". Lucas v. Central Missouri Trust Co., 350 Mo. 593, 166 S.W.2d 1053, 1056.

This term is frequently used in the civil law as the synonym of "ex delicto," (q.v.) and is thus contrasted with "ex contractu." In this sense it is of more rare occurrence in the common law, though found in Bracton (fols. 99, 101, 102).

EX MALEFICIO NON ORITUR CONTRACTUS. A contract cannot arise out of an act radically vicious and illegal. 1 Term, 734; 3 Term, 422; Broom, Max. 734.

EX MALLS MORIBUS BONZE LEGES NAIVE SUNT. 2 Inst. 161. Good laws arise from evil morals, i.e., are necessitated by the evil behavior of men.

EX MERO MOTU. Of his own mere motion; of his own accord; voluntarily and without prompting or request.

Royal letters patent which are granted at the crown's own instance, and without request made, are said to be granted ex mero motu. When a court interferes, of its own motion, to object to an irregularity, or to do something which the parties are not strictly entitled to, but which will prevent injustice, it is said to act ex mero motu, or ex proprio motu, or sua sponte, all these terms being here equivalent.

EX MORA. From or in consequence of delay. Interest is allowed ex mora; that is, where there has been delay in returning a sum borrowed. A term of the civil law. Story, Bailm. § 84.

EX MORE. According to custom. Calvin.

EX MULTITUDINE SIGNORUM, COLLIGITUR IDENTITAS VERA. From a great number of signs or marks, true identity is gathered or made known, though, as to some, the description may not be strictly correct. Id.

EX MUTUO. From or out of loan. In the old law of England, a debt was said to arise ex mutuo when one lent another anything which consisted in number, weight, or measure. 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, 159; Bract. fol. 99.

EX NECESSITATE. Of necessity. 3 Rep. Ch. 123.

EX NECESSITATE LEGIS. From or by necessity of law. 4 Bl. Comm. 394.

EX NECESSITATE RELI. From the necessity or urgency of • the thing or case. 2 Pow. Dev. (by Jarman,) 308.

EX NUDO PACTO NON ORITUR [NASCITUR] ACTIO. Out of a nude or naked pact [that is, a bare parol agreement without consideration] no action arises. Bract. fol. 99; Fleta, lib. 2, c. 56, § 3; Plowd. 305. Out of a promise neither attended with particular solemnity (such as belongs to a specialty) nor with any consideration no legal liability can arise. 2 Steph. Comm. 113. A parol agreement, without a valid consideration, cannot be made the foundation of an action. A leading maxim both of the civil and common law. Cod. 2, 3, 10; Id. 5, 14, 1; 2 Bl. Comm. 445; Smith, Cont. 85, 86.

EX OFFICIO. From office; by virtue of the office; without any other warrant or appointment than that resulting from the holding of a particular office.

Powers may be exercised by an officer which are not specifically conferred upon him, but are necessarily implied in his office; these are ex officio. Thus, a judge has ex officio the powers of a conservator of the peace. Courts are bound to notice public statutes judicially and ex officio. King v. Physicians' Casualty Ass'n of America, 97 Neb. 637, 150 N.W. 1010, 1011; Lobrano v. Police Jury of Parish of Plaquemines, 150 La. 14, 90 So. 423, 424; Allin v. Mercer County, 174 Ky. 566, 192 S.W. 638, 640.

EX OFFICIO INFORMATION. In English law. A criminal information filed by the attorney general ex officio on behalf of the crown, in the court of king's bench, for offenses more immediately affecting the government, and to be distinguished from informations in which the crown is the nominal prosecutor. Mozley & Whitley; 4 Steph. Comm. 372-378.

EX OFFICIO OATH. An oath taken by offending priests; abolished by 13 Car. II. St. 1, c. 12.

EX OFFICIO SERVICES. Services which the law annexes to a particular office and requires the incumbent to perform. City of Birmingham v. Hawkins, 208 Ala. 79, 94 So. 62, 64; Nichols v. Galveston County, 111 Tex. 50, 228 S.W. 547, 548.

"Ex officio services," which deputy attorney general may perform in place of Attorney General, are services imposed by law on public officer by virtue of his office and relating to public interests or business of county or state. Chemical Bank & Trust Co. v. Oakland County, 264 Mich. 673, 251 N.W. 395.

EX PACTO ILLICITO NON ORITUR ACTIO. From an illegal contract an action does not arise. Broom, Max. 742. See 7 Clark & F. 729.

EX PARTE. On one side only; by or for one party; done for, in behalf of, or on the application of, one party only.
A judicial proceeding, order, injunction, etc., is said to be ex parte when it is taken or granted at the instance and for the benefit of one party only, and without notice to, or contestation by, any person adversely interested. Janin v. Logan, 209 Ky. 811, 273 S.W. 531, 532; Van Alen v. Superior Court in and for Los Angeles County, 174 P. 672; Stella v. Moseley, 299 53, 19 N.E.2d 433, 435.

In its primary sense, ex parte, as applied to an application in a judicial proceeding, means that it is made by a person who is not a party to the proceeding, but who has an interest therein, and which is beneficial to him and injurious to the opposite party.

In its more usual sense, ex parte means that an application is made by one party to a proceeding in the absence of the other. Thus, an ex parte injunction is one granted without the opposite party having had notice of the application. It would not be called "ex parte" if he had proper notice of it, and chose not to appear to oppose it. Sweet.

"Ex parte," in the heading of a reported case, signifies that the name following is that of the party upon whose application the case is heard.

EX PARTE MATerna. On the mother's side; of the maternal line.

EX PARTE PATERNa. On the father's side; of the paternal line.

The phrases "ex parte materna" and "ex parte paterna" denote the line or blood of the mother or father, and have no, such restricted or limited sense as from the mother or father exclusively. Banta v. Demarest, 24 N.J.L. 431.

EX PARTE TALIS. A writ that lay for a bailiff or receiver, who, having auditors appointed to take his accounts, cannot obtain of them reasonable allowance, but is cast into prison. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 129.

EX PAUCIS DICTIS INTENDERE PLURIMA POSSIBILIS. Litt. § 384. You can imply many things from few expressions.

EX PAUCIS PLURIMA CONCIPIT INGENIUM. Litt. § 550. From a few words or hints the understanding conceives many things.

EX POST FACTO. After the fact; by an act or fact occurring after some previous act or fact, and relating thereto; by subsequent matter; the opposite of ab initio. Thus, a deed may be good ab initio, or, if invalid at its inception, may be confirmed by matter ex post facto.

EX POST FACTO LAW. A law passed after the occurrence of a fact or commission of an act, which retrospectively changes the legal consequences or relations of such fact or deed. By Const. U. S. art. 1, § 10, the states are forbidden to pass "any ex post facto law." In this connection the phrase has a much narrower meaning than its literal translation would justify, as will appear from the extracts given below.

A statute which changes punishment which may be imposed for a crime theretofore committed is "ex post facto" only if it prescribes or permits the greater sentence. People ex rel. Pincus v. Adams, 274 N.Y. 447, 9 N.E.2d 46, 110 A.L.R. 1303.

An "ex post facto law" has been defined as (1) Every law that makes an action, done before the passing of the law, and which was innocent when done, criminal, and punishes such action. (2) Every law that aggravates a crime, or makes it greater than it was when committed. (3) Every law that changes the punishment, and inflicts a greater punishment than was attached to the crime when committed. (4) Every law that alters the legal rules of evidence, and receives less or different testimony than was required at the time of the commission of the offense, in order to convict the offender. All these and similar laws, are prohibited by the constitution. But a law may be ex post facto, and still not amenable to this constitutional prohibition; that is, that, in order to aggravate, the rigor of the criminal law. Cummings v. Missouri, 4 Wall. 277, 18 L.Ed. 356; 3 Story, Const. 212; State v. Malby, 95 S.C. 441, 78 S.E. 995, 997, Ann.Cas.1915C, 1053; Commonwealth ex rel. Beasly v. Denver County Jail, 211 U.S. 406, 29 S.Ct. 455, 53, 19 N.E.2d 433; State v. Teasdale, 194 Ala. 574, 69 So. 723, 725, Ann.Cas. 1918E, 347; Beazell v. State of Ohio, 269 U.S. 167, 46 S.Ct. 68, 70 L.Ed. 216; Hernandez v. State, 43 Ariz. 424, 32 P. 2d 18, 24.

An "ex post facto law" includes every law that creates and punishes a criminal offense which, when done before the passing of the law, was innocent, and every law that aggravates a crime or makes it greater than it was when committed, and every law that inflicts a greater punishment than it was attached to the crime when committed. State v. Pleason, 56 N. D. 499, 218 N.W. 154, 155.

An "ex post facto law" is defined as a law which provides for the infliction of punishment upon a person for an act done which, when it was committed, was innocent; a law which aggravates a crime or makes it greater than when it was committed; a law that changes the punishment or inflicts a greater punishment than the law annexed to the crime when it was committed; a law that changes the rules of evidence and receives less or different testimony than was required at the time of the commission of the offense in order to convict the offender; a law which, assuming to regulate civil rights and remedies only, in effect imposes a penalty or the deprivation of a right which, when done, was lawful; a law which deprives persons accused of crime of some lawful protection to which they have become entitled, such as the protection of a former conviction or acquittal, or of the privilege of not being again tried, which, in relation to the offense or its consequences, alters the situation of a person to his disadvantage. State v. Rowe, 116 N.J.L. 48, 181 A. 706.

An "ex post facto law" is one which makes an act punishable in a manner in which it was not punishable when it was committed. Statler v. U. S., Savings & Trust Co., 122 Pa.Super. 189, 186 A. 290, 292; Southern Kraft Corporation v. Hardin, 205 Ark. 512, 169 S.W.2d 637, 643.

An "ex post facto law" is one which makes a crime of an act which when committed was not a crime or a law which increases the punishment for an act already committed. Commonwealth ex rel. Wall v. Smith, 345 Pa. 512, 29 A.2d 912, 913.

An "ex post facto law" is one which renders an act punishable in manner in which it was not punishable when it was committed, or which deprives accused of any substantial right or immunity possessed by him before its passage or prior offenses. People of U. S. ex rel. Embenhowar v. McDonnell, D.C.III., 11 F.Supp. 1014, 1015.

An "ex post facto law" is one which renders an act punishable in manner in which it was not punishable when it was committed. Such a law may inflict penalties on the person, or pecuniary penalties which swell the public treasury. Cummings v. Missouri, 4 Wall. 277, 18 L.Ed. 356; 3 Story, Const. 212; State v. Malby, 95 S.C. 441, 78 S.E. 995, 997, Ann.Cas.1915C, 1053; Commonwealth ex rel. Beasly v. Denver County Jail, 211 U.S. 406, 29 S.Ct. 455, 53, 19 N.E.2d 433; State v. Teasdale, 194 Ala. 574, 69 So. 723, 725, Ann.Cas. 1918E, 347; Beazell v. State of Ohio, 269 U.S. 167, 46 S.Ct. 68, 70 L.Ed. 216; Hernandez v. State, 43 Ariz. 424, 32 P. 2d 18, 24.

An increase in possible penalty is "ex post facto" regardless of length of sentence actually imposed. Ex parte Flora, Ohio App., 31 N.E.2d 482, 485.

The plain and obvious meaning of prohibition is that the legislature shall not pass any law, after a fact done by any citizen, which shall have relation to that fact, so as to punish that which was innocent when done; or to add to the punishment of that which was criminal; or to increase the malignity of a crime; or to retrench the rules of evidence, so as to make conviction more easy. This definition of an "ex post facto law" is sanctioned by long usage. Strong v. State, 1 Black., Ind., 196.
The term "ex post facto law," in the United States constitution, cannot be construed to include and to prohibit the enacting any law after a fact, nor even to prohibit the depriving a citizen of a vested right to property. Calder v. Bull, 3 Daill. 386, 1 L.Ed. 648.

Any law passed after commission of offense for which the defendant is tried which inflicts greater punishment or which alters situation of accused is "ex post facto". United States v. Platt, D.C.Tex., 31 F.Supp. 788, 793.

Statute which punishes as a crime an act previously committed, which was innocent when done, which makes more burdensome punishment for a crime after its commission, or which deprives one charged with crime of any defense available according to law at time act was committed, is "ex post facto". People ex rel. Luciano v. Murphy, 290 N.Y. 1011, 101 Misc. 573.

The operation of a statute to repeal, extend the period of, or provide for the tolling of a statute of limitations under which a complete defense has already accrued, would be "ex post facto". Hill v. State, 146 Tex.Cr.R. 333, 171 S.W.2d 680, 882, 883, 884.

To render a statute "ex post facto," it must be one which imposes punishment for an act which was not punishable when it was committed, or imposes additional punishment -or alters the situation of the accused to his disadvantage. Andrews v. McCauley, D.C.Wash., 21 F.Supp. 70.

Trials procedure may be changed by Legislature, and new procedure may be made applicable to offenses previously committed, without violation of constitutional provision. People ex rel. Pincus v. Adams, 274 N.Y. 447, 9 N.E.2d 46, 49, 50, 110 A.L.R. 1303.

"Ex post facto" and "retrospective" are not convertible terms. The latter is a term of wider signification than the former and includes it. All ex post facto laws are necessarily retrospective, but not e converso. A curative or confirmatory statute is retrospective, but not ex post facto. Constitutions of nearly all the states contain prohibitions against ex post facto laws, but only a few forbid retrospective legislation in specific terms. Black, Const.Prohib. §§ 170, 172, 222.

Retrospective laws divesting vested rights are impolitic and unjust; but they are not "ex post facto" laws, within the meaning of the constitution of the United States, nor repugnant to any other of its provisions; and, if not repugnant to the state constitution, a court cannot pronounce them to be void, merely because in their judgment they are contrary to the principles of natural justice. Albree v. May, 2 Paine, 74 Fed.Cas.No.134.

Every retrospective act is not necessarily an ex post facto law. That phrase embraces only such laws as impose or affect penalties or forfeitures. Locke v. New Orleans, 4 Wall. 172, 18 L.Ed. 334.

Retrospective laws which do not impair the obligation of contracts, or affect vested rights, or partake of the character of ex post facto laws, are not prohibited by the constitution. Bay v. Gage, 36 Barb., N.Y., 447.

The act providing that every sentence of death imposed shall be by electrocution is not an ex post facto law because of its retrospective effect. State ex rel. Pierre v. Jones, 200 La. 808, 9 So.2d 42, 45, 47.

EX PROVISIONE HOMINIS. By the provision of man. By the limitation of the party, as distinguished from the disposition of the law. 11 Coke, 80b.

EX PROVISIONE MARITI. From the provision of the husband.

EX QUASI CONTRACTU. From quasi contract. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 60.

EX RELATIONE. Upon relation or information.

Legal proceedings which are instituted by the attorney general (or other proper person) in the name and behalf of the state, but on the information and at the instigation of an individual who has a private interest in the matter, are said to be taken "on the relation" (ex relatione) of such person, who is called the "relator." Such a cause is usually entitled thus: "State ex rel. Doe v. Roe."

In the books of reports, when a case is said to be reported ex relatione, it is meant that the reporter derives his account of it, not from personal knowledge, but from the relation or narrative of some person who was present at the argument.

EX RIGORE JURIS. According to the rigor or strictness of law; in strictness of law. Fleta, lib. 3, c. 10, § 3.

EX SCRIPTIS OLIM VISIS. From writings formerly seen.

A term used as descriptive of that kind of proof of handwriting where the knowledge has been acquired by the witness having seen letters or other documents professing to be the handwriting of the party, and having afterwards communicated personally with the party upon the contents of those letters or documents, or having otherwise acted upon them by written answers, producing further correspondence or acquiescence by the party in some matter to which they relate, or by the witness transacting with the party some business to which they relate, or by any other mode of communication between the party and the witness which, in the ordinary course of the transactions of life, induces a reasonable presumption that the letters or documents were the handwriting of the party. 5 Adol. & E. 730.

EX SHIP. See Ship.

EX STATUTO. According to the statute. Fleta. lib. 5, c. 11, § 1.

EX STIPULATU ACTIO. In the civil law. An action of stipulation. An action given to recover marriage portions. Inst. 4, 6, 29.

EX TEMPORE. From or in consequence of time; by lapse of time. Bract. fols. 51, 52. Ex diurnto tempore, from length of time. Id. fol. 51b.

Without preparation or premeditation.

EX TESTAMENTO. From, by, or under a will. The opposite of ab intestato (q. v.).

EX TOTAM MATERIA EMERGAT RESOLUTIO. The explanation should arise out of the whole subject-matter; the exposition of a statute should be made from all its parts together. Wing. Max. 238.

EX TURPI CAUSA NON ORITUR ACTIO. Out of a base [illegal, or immoral] consideration, an action does [can] not arise. 1 Selw. N. P. 63; Broom, Max. 730, 732; Story, Ag. § 195.

No disgraceful matter can ground an action. Eisdon v. Maddox, 195 Ga. 641, 24 S.E.2d 895, 897.
EX TURPI

EX TURPI CONTRACTU ACTIO NON ORITUR. From an immoral or iniquitous contract an action does not arise. A contract founded upon an illegal or immoral consideration cannot be enforced by action. 2 Kent, Comm. 466; Dig. 2, 14, 27, 4.

EX UNA PARTE. Of one part or side; on one side.

EX UNO DISCES OMNES. From one thing you can discern all.

EX UTRIQUE PARTE. On both sides. Dyer, 126b.

EX UTRISQUE PARENTIBUS CONJUNCTI. Related on the side of both parents; of the whole blood. Hale, Corn. Law, c. 11.

EX VI TERMINI. From or by the force of the term. From the very meaning of the expression used. 2 Bl. Comm. 109, 115.

EX VISCRIBUS. From the bowls. From the vital part, the very essence of the thing. 10 Coke, 24b; Homer v. Shelton, 2 Metc. Mass. 213. Ex viscribus verborum, from the mere words and nothing else. 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 980; Fisher v. Fields, 10 Johns. N.Y. 495.

EX VISITATIONE DEI. By the dispensation of God; by reason of physical incapacity. Anciently, when a prisoner, being arraigned, stood silent instead of pleading, a jury was impaneled to inquire whether he obstinately stood mute or was dumb ex visitatione Dei. 4 Steph. Comm. 394.

...also by natural, as distinguished from violent, causes. When a coroner's inquest finds that the death was due to disease or other natural cause, it is frequently phrased "ex visitatione Dei."

EX VISU SRIPTIONIS. From sight of the writing; from having seen a person write. A term employed to describe one of the modes of proof of handwriting. Best, Pres. 218.

EX VOLUNTATE. Voluntarily; from freewill or choice.

EXACTION. The wrongful act of an officer or other person in compelling payment of a fee or reward for his services, under color of his official authority, where no payment is due.

Between "extortion" and "exactation" there is this difference: that in the former case the officer extorts more than his due, when something is due to him; in the latter, he exacts what is not his due, when there is nothing due to him. Co.Litt. 368.

EXACTLY ALIKE. Representation that the living apartment on the first floor was exactly like the living apartment on the second floor is specific and definite; exactly alike meaning not absolutely identical, but substantially so in size, design, finish, and fixtures. Lipsher v. Resnikoff, 99 Conn. 13, 120 A. 859.

EXACTOR. Civil law. A gatherer or receiver of money; a collector of taxes. Cod. 10, 19.

Old English law. A collector of the public moneys; a tax gatherer. Thus, exactor regis was the name of the king's tax collector, who took up the taxes and other debts due the treasury.

EXALTARE. In old English law. To raise; to elevate. Frequently spoken of water, i.e., to raise the surface of a pond or pool.

EXAMINATION. An investigation; search; interrogating. Criminal Practice

An investigation by a magistrate of a person who has been charged with crime and arrested, or of the facts and circumstances which are alleged to have attended the crime and to fasten suspicion upon the party so charged, in order to ascertain whether there is sufficient ground to hold him to bail for his trial by the proper court. U. S. W. Stanton, C.C.A.Conn., 17 C.C.A. 475, 70 F. 890; State v. Conrad, 95 N.C. 669. The preliminary hearing to determine whether person charged with having committed a crime should be held for trial. Commonwealth v. Cohen, 102 Pa. Super. 397, 157 A. 32, 33.

Trial Practice

The examination of a witness consists of the series of questions put to him by a party to the action, or his counsel, for the purpose of bringing before the court and jury in legal form the knowledge which the witness has of the facts and matters in dispute, or of probing and sift ing his evidence previously given.

Of a long account. This phrase does not mean examination of the account to ascertain the result or effect of it, but proof by testimony of correctness of items composing it. Magown v. Sinclair, 5 Daly N.Y. 63; State ex rel. Hustisford Light, Power & Mfg. Co. v. Grimm, 208 Wis. 366, 243 N.W. 763.

Of bankruptcy. This is the interrogation of a bankrupt, in the course of proceedings in bankruptcy, on a prior to the adjudication (Cameron Power & Mfg. Co. v. Grimm, 208 Wis. 366) concerning the conduct of his business, the cause of his bankruptcy, his dealings with his creditors and other persons, the amount, kind, and whereabouts of his property, and all matters which may affect the administration and settlement of his estate. This is authorized by Bankruptcy Act, § 7, 30 Stat. 548, 11 U.S.C.A. § 25. The bankrupt’s wife or any other person may also be examined concerning the bankrupt's acts, conduct, or property. Bankruptcy Act, § 21, 30 Stat. 551, as amended by Act Feb. 5, 1903, c. 487, § 7, 32 Stat. 798, 11 U.S.C.A. § 44. In re Horgan, C.C.A.N.Y., 39 C.C.A. 118, 98 F. 414.

Of invention. An inquiry made at the patent-office, upon application for a patent, into the novelty and utility of the alleged invention, and as to its interfering with any other patented invention. Rev.St. U. S. § 4893, 35 U.S.C.A. § 36.

Of title. An investigation made by or for a person who intends to purchase real estate, in the offices where the public records are kept, to ascertain the history and present condition of the title to such land, and its status with reference to liens, incumbrances, clouds, etc.
Of wife. See Private Examination.

On his own behalf. For executor or devisee to be "examined on his own behalf", such executor or devisee must be a party to the action. In re Custer's Estate, 229 Iowa 1061, 295 N.W. 848, 852.

EXAMINED COPY. A copy of a record, public book, or register, and which has been compared with the original. 1 Campb. 469.

EXAMINER. English law. A person appointed by a court to take the examination of witnesses in an action, e., to take down the result of their interrogation by the parties or their counsel, either by written interrogatories or viva voce. An examiner is generally appointed where a witness is in a foreign country, or is too ill or infirm to attend before the court, and is either an officer of the court, or a person specially appointed for the purpose. Sweet.

New Jersey. An examiner is an officer appointed by the court of chancery to take testimony in causes depending in that court. His powers are similar to those of the English examiner in chancery.

Patent Office. An officer in the patent-office charged with the duty of examining the patentability of inventions for which patents are asked.

For "Special Examiner," see that title.

EXAMINER IN CHANCERY. An officer of the court of chancery, before whom witnesses are examined, and their testimony reduced to writing, for the purpose of being read on the hearing of the cause. Cowell.

EXAMINERS. Persons appointed to question students of law in order to ascertain their qualifications before they are admitted to practice.

EXANNUAL ROLL. In old English practice. A roll into which (in the old way of exhibiting sheriffs' accounts) the illeivable fines and desperate debts were transcribed, and which was annually read to the sheriff upon his accounting, to see what might be gotten. Cowell.

EXCAMB. In Scotch law. To exchange. 6 Bell, App. Cas. 19, 22.

EXCAMBIATOR. An exchanger of lands; a broker. Obsolete.

EXCAMBIUM. An exchange; a place where merchants meet to transact their business; also an equivalent in recompense; a recompense in lieu of dower ad ostium ecclesiae.

EXCELSION. America. The title is sometimes given to the chief executive of a state or of the nation.

EXCEPTIO. English law. The title of a viceroy, governor general, ambassador, or commander in chief.

The expression "except for" is synonymous in many cases with "but for" and "only for." Rickman v. Commonwealth, 195 Ky. 715, 243 S.W. 929.

EXCEPT AS PROVIDED BY LAW. As used in statute held to refer to statutory and not general law of state, Pace v. Pace Bros. Co., 91 Utah 132, 59 P.2d 1, 8.

EXCEPT FOR THE INTESTATE SHARE OF THE SURVIVING SPOUSE, IF ANY, OF SUCH RELICT. Phrase as used in statute relating to disposition of property coming from a deceased spouse to relict dying intestate and without issue, refers to share a surviving spouse would take under section covering generally distribution of an intestate's property. Russell v. Roberts, 54 Ohio App. 441, 7 N.E.2d 811, 813.

EXCEPT IN TIME OF WAR. In statute providing for delivery to civil authorities of persons accused of crime but • subject to military law, "except in time of war", quoted words merely relieve military authorities in time of war of duty to deliver accused persons to civil authorities. Articles of War, art. 74, 10 U.S.C.A. § 1546. People v. Williams, 184 Misc. 510, 55 N.Y.S.2d 181, 182.

EXCEPT RIGHT OF WAY. Recitals "less the right of way" and "except right of way" in granting clause of deed have well-defined accepted certain and unambiguous meaning by which grantor conveys entire interest in servient estate and at same time expressly recognizes and acknowledges dominant estate. Jennings v. Amerada Petroleum Corporation, 179 Okl. 561, 66 P.2d 1069, 1071.

EXCEPTING. As used in a deed, the terms "reserving" and "excepting" are used interchangeably, and their technical meaning will give way to the manifest intent. Porter v. Warner-Caldwell Oil Co., 183 Okl. 1, 80 P.2d 252, 253.

The words "reserving" and "excepting," although strictly distinguishable, may be used interchangeably or indiscriminately. Stephan v. Kentucky Valley Distilling Co., 275 Ky. 705, 122 S.W.2d 493, 496.

EXCEPTIO. Modern civil law. A plea by which the defendant admits the cause of action, but alleges new facts which, provided they be true, totally or partially answer the allegations put forward on the other side; thus distinguished from a mere traverse of the plaintiff's averments. Tomkins & J. Mod. Rom. Law, 90. In this use, the term corresponds to the common-law plea in confession and avoidance.

Roman law. An exception. In a general sense, a judicial allegation opposed by a defendant to the plaintiff's action. Calvin. A stop or stay to an action opposed by the defendant. Cowell.

Answering to the "defense" or "plea" of the common law. An exception and defense of a defendant by which the plaintiff's claim or complaint is defeated, either according to strict law or upon grounds of equity.

In a stricter sense, the exclusion of an action that lay in strict law, on grounds of equity. (actionis jure stricto competentis ob cequitatem exclusio.) Heinecc. A kind of limitation of an action, by which it was shown that the action, though otherwise just, did not lie in the particular case. Calvin. A species of defense allowed in cases where, though the action as brought by the plaintiff was in itself just, yet it was unjust as against the particular party sued. Inst. 4, 13, pr.

EXCEPTIO DILATORIA. A dilatory exception; called also "temporalis," (temporary:) one which defeated the action for a time, (quæ ad tempus nocet,) and created delay, (et temporis dilationem tribuit:) such as an agreement not to sue within a certain time, as five years. Inst. 4, 13, 10. See Dig. 44, 1, 3.

EXCEPTIO DOLI MALL. An exception or plea of fraud. Inst. 4, 13, 1, 9; Bract. fol. 100b.

EXCEPTIO DOMINII. A claim of ownership set up in an action for the recovery of property not in the possession of the plaintiff. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 299.

EXCEPTIO DOTIS CAUTZEN NON NUMERATIE. A defense to an action for the restitution of a dowry that it was never paid, though promised, available upon the dissolution of the marriage within a limited time. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 458.

EXCEPTIO EJUS REI CUIJUS PETITUR DISSOLUTIO NULLA EST. A plea of that matter the dissolution of which is sought [by the action] is null, [or of no effect.] Jenk. Cent. 37, case 71.

EXCEPTIO FALSOM OMNIMI ULTIMA. A plea denying a fact is the last of all.

EXCEPTIO FIRMAT REGULAM IN CASIBUS NON EXCEPTIS. An exception affirms the rule in cases not excepted. Bacon, Aph. 17.

EXCEPTIO FIRMAT REGULAM IN CONTRARIIUM. An exception proves an opposite rule. See exceptio probat regulam. Bacon, Aph. 17.

EXCEPTIO IN FACTUM. An exception on the fact. An exception or plea founded on the peculiar circumstances of the case. Inst. 4, 13, 1.

EXCEPTIO IN PERSONAM. A plea or defense of a personal nature, which may be alleged only by the person himself to whom it is granted by the law. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 217.

EXCEPTIO IN REM. A plea or defense not of a personal nature, but connected with the legal circumstances on which the suit is founded, and which may therefore be alleged by any party in interest, including the heirs and sureties of the proper or original debtor. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 217.

EXCEPTIO JURISJURANDI. An exception of oath; an exception or plea that the matter had been sworn to. Inst. 4, 13, 4. This kind of exception was allowed where a debtor, at the instance of his creditor, (creditors deferrente,) had sworn that nothing was due the latter, and had notwithstanding been sued by him.

EXCEPTIO METUS. An exception or plea of fear or compulsion. Inst. 4, 13, 1, 9; Bract. fol. 100b. Answering to the modern plea of duress.

EXCEPTIO NON ADIMPLETI CONTRACTUS. An exception in an action founded on a contract involving mutual duties or obligations, to the effect that the plaintiff is not entitled to sue because he has not performed his own part of the agreement. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 394.

EXCEPTIO NON SOLUTZE PECUNIE NON NUMERATE. A plea of that matter the dissolution of which is sought [by the action] is null, [or of no effect.] Jenk. Cent. 106, case 2.

EXCEPTIO NULLA EST VERSUS ACTIONEM QUIE EXCEPTIONEM PERIMIT. There is [can be] no plea against an action which destroys [the matter of] the plea. Jenk. Cent. 106, case 2.

EXCEPTIO PACTI CONVENTI. An exception of compact; an exception or plea that the plaintiff had agreed not to sue. Inst. 4, 13, 3.

EXCEPTIO PECUNIE NON NUMERATE. An exception or plea of money not paid; a defense which might be set up by a party who was sued on a promise to repay money which he had never received. Inst. 4, 13, 2.

EXCEPTIO PEREMPTORIA. A peremptory exception; called also ‘perpetua: (perpetual:) one which forever destroyed the subject-matter or ground of the action. (quæ semper rem de qua agitur perimit;) such as the exceptio doli mall, the exceptio metus, etc. Inst. 4, 13, 9. See Dig. 44, 1, 3.

EXCEPTIO PROBAT REGULAM. The exception proves the rule. 11 Coke, 41; 3 Term, 722. Sometimes quoted with the addition “de rebus non exceptis," ("so far as concerns the matters not excepted.")

EXCEPTIO QUIE FIRMAT LEGEM, EXPONIT LEGEM. An exception which confirms the law explains the law. 2 Bulst. 189.

EXCEPTIO QUOQUE REGULAM DECLARAT. The exception also declares the rule. Bacon, Aph. 17.
EXCEPTIO REI JUDICATIE. An exception or plea of matter adjudged; a plea that the subject-matter of the action had been determined in a previous action. Inst. 4, 13, 5.

This term is adopted by Bracton, and is constantly used in modern law to denote a defense founded upon a previous adjudication of the same matter. Bract. fols. 100b, 177; 2 Kent, Comm. 120. A plea of a former recovery or judgment.

EXCEPTIO REI VENDITIE ET TRADITZAE. An exception or plea of the sale and delivery of the thing.

This exception presumes that there was a valid sale and a proper tradition; but though, in consequence of the rule that no one can transfer to another a greater right than he himself has, no property was transferred, yet because of some particular circumstance the real owner is estopped from contesting it. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 299.

EXCEPTIO SEMPER ULTIMO PONEENDA EST. An exception should always be put last. 9 Coke, 53.

EXCEPTIO SENATUSCONSULTI MACEDONIAN. A defense to an action for the recovery of money loaned, on the ground that the loan was made to a minor or person under the paternal power of another; so named from the decree of the senate which forbade the recovery of such loans. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 432.

EXCEPTIO SENATUSCONSULTI VELLEIANI. A defense to an action on a contract of suretyship, on the ground that the surety was a woman and therefore incapable of becoming bound for another; so named from the decree of the senate forbidding it. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 455.

EXCEPTIO TEMPORIS. An exception or plea analogous to that of the statute of limitations in our law; viz., that the time prescribed by law for bringing such actions has expired. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 213.

EXCEPTION. Act of excepting or excluding from a number designated or from a description; that which is excepted or separated from others in a general rule or description; a person, thing, or case specified as distinct or not included; an act of excepting, omitting from mention or leaving out of consideration; and "except" means not including. In re Kelly’s Estate, 153 Misc. 445, 274 N.Y.S. 488.

For "General Exception" and "Special Exception," see those titles.

Admiralty and Equity Practice

An exception is a formal allegation tendered by a party that some previous pleading or proceeding taken by the adverse party is insufficient. Peck v. Osteen, 37 Fla. 427, 20 So. 549; Arnold v. Slawgher, 36 W.Va. 589, 15 S.E. 250.

In admiralty, an "exception" serves the function of a demurrer in common law or equity pleading. The Nea Helis, C.C.A.N.Y., 116 F.2d 803, 805.

Bail

An exception to bail is an objection to the special bail put in by the defendant to an action at law made by the plaintiff on grounds of the insufficiency of the bail. 1 Tidd, Pr. 255.

Bequests

Bequests of sums made to same persons by different paragraphs in same codicil held accumulative, where second paragraph stated that bequest was "exception" to other bequests made; term as used meaning in addition to person’s bequests. In re Kelly’s Estate, 153 Misc. 445, 274 N. Y.S. 488.

Civil Law

An exception is something taken out of instrument and of kind dealt with in contract. Reliance Ins. Co. v. Naman, 118 Tex. 21, 6 S.W.2d 743, 745.

Deeds or Conveyances

Insurance Contract or Policy

The object of an exception is to exclude that which otherwise would be included, Estabrook v. Eastern Commercial Travelers Accident Ass’n, 308 Mass. 439, 32 N.E.2d 250, 252; to take special cases out of a general class or to guard against misinterpretation. Landau v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of United States, 1 N.Y.S.2d 891, 895, 166 Misc. 42.

Under liability policy, excluded uses of automobile held not ‘‘exceptions’’ since they were not in first instance included within any statement of insurance. Raymond v. Great American Indemnity Co., 86 N.H. 93, 163 A. 713, 716.
A formal objection to the action of the court, during the trial of a cause, in refusing a request or overruling an objection; implying that the party excepting does not acquiesce in the decision of the court, but will seek to procure its reversal, and that he means to save the benefit of his request or objection in some future proceeding. United States v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 236 U.S. 512, 35 S.Ct. 298, 303, 59 L.Ed. 696; Liquid Carbonic Co. v. Rodman, 52 Okl. 211, 152 P. 439; State v. Laundy, 103 Or. 443, 206 P. 290. It is also somewhat used to signify other objections in the course of a suit; for example, exception to bail is a formal objection that special bail offered by defendant is insufficient. 1 Tidd, Pr. 255.

An exception is, an objection formally taken to a decision of the court on a matter of law. State v. Wolzenski, 340 Mo. 1181, 105 S.W.2d 905, 907; an objection on a matter of law to a decision made, either before or after judgment, by a court, tribunal, judge, or other judicial officer in an action or proceeding. Hearn v. Gunther, 57 Cal. App.2d 82, 134 P.2d 3, 5; an objection, oral or written, taken, in course of an action or proceeding, as to bail, to the decision or a ruling of a judge, or to something in his charge to a jury. In re Pardue’s Estate, 57 Cal.App.2d 918, 135 P.2d 394, 395.

An objection to a pleading or any part thereof for want of substance is a general exception; an objection to the form in which a cause of action is stated is a special exception. Cochran v. People’s Nat. Bank, Tex.Civ.App., 271 S.W. 433, 434.

To authorize review of alleged error in admitting evidence in compensation case, there must be an “exception”, distinguishing from rulings appearing of record, and nothing more. Indrisano’s Case, 307 Mass. 520, 30 N.E.2d 538, 539.

Proviso and Exception Distinguished

A "proviso" and an "exception" are substantially the same thing. Evans v. McCabe, 164 Tenn. 672, 52 S.W.2d 159, 160.

A proviso differs from an exception. 1 Barn. & Ald. 99. An exception "exempts", absolutely, from the operation of an engagement or an enactment; a proviso, properly speaking, defeats their operation, conditionally. An exception takes out of an engagement or enactment something which would otherwise be part of the subject-matter of it; a proviso avoids them by way of defeasance or excuse. 8 Am.Jur. 242; Board of Com’rs of Noble County v. Whitney, 73 Okl. 160, 175 P. 112, 113; Philadelphia Life Ins. Co. v. Farnsley’s Adm’r, 162 Ky. 27, 171 S.W. 1004, 1005; New Jersey State Board of Optometrists v. S. S. Kresge Co., Sup., 113 N.J.L. 287, 174 A. 353, 357; Sowers Plan Crop Ins. Mut. Co. v. Hobbs, 146 Kan. 166, 68 P.2d 1110, 1111.

The ordinary office of an “exception” or “proviso” in a policy is to take special cases out of a general class or to guard against misinterpretation. Landaii v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of United States, 1 N.Y.S.2d 891, 895, 166 Misc. 42.

Reservation and Exception as Synonymous or Distinguishable

A reservation is always of a thing in esse, but newly created or reserved out of the land or tenement demised; • an exception is always of a part of the thing granted, and of a thing in esse. Co.Litt. 47a; 4 Kent, Comm. 468.

A “reservation” creates some new right in grantor while an “exception” will take out of grantor’s title some part of property which would otherwise pass. Clark v. Pauley, 291 Ky. 637, 165 S.W.2d 161, 162; Federal Land Bank of New Orleans v. Cooper, 190 Miss. 490, 200 So. 729, 730, 731; Goss v. Congdon, 114 Vt. 161, 32 A.2d 140, 143.

A reservation does not affect the description of the property conveyed, but retains to the grantor some right upon the property, as an easement, whereas an exception operates upon the description and withdraws from the description the excepted property. Moore v. Davis, 273 Ky. 835, 117 S.W.2d 1033, 1035.

A “reservation” is always of something taken back out of that which is clearly granted, while an “exception” is of some part of the estate not granted at all. Houghtaling v. Stothoff, 170 Misc. 773, 12 N.Y.S.2d 207, 210; Lewis v. Standard Oil Co. of California, C.C.A.Cal., 88 F.2d 512, 514.

A reservation provides for return of rent or service, regarded as issuing out of land granted. An exception withholds particular portion of land granted. Cook v. Farley, 195 Miss. 638, 15 So.2d 352, 355; Marias River Syndicate v. Big West Oil Co., 98 Mont. 254, 38 P.2d 599, 601.

Reservation means something issuing or arising out of thing granted while an exception means some part of the estate not granted, or withdrawn from the effect of the grant, although the terms are often used indiscriminately and given effect contrary to the manifest intent of the parties. Vance v. Pritchard, 213 N.C. 552, 197 S.E. 182, 185.

Reservation must always be in favor of and for benefit of grantor, whereas exception is mere exclusion from grant, of some interest which may be vested in grantor or outstanding in another; reservation reserves to grantor some new thing, either issuing out of or incident to thing granted, while exception in deed is clause exempting from operation, thereof and returning in grantor title to some part of the thing granted or excepting some part of thing granted, title to which is at the time in another. Klein v. Humble Oil & Refining Co., Tex.Civ.App., 67 S.W.2d 911, 915.

Reservation reserves to grantor some new interest out of thing granted, while exception excludes from operation of grant some existing part of estate. Petty v. Griffith, Mo., 165 S.W.2d 412, 414; U. S. v. 1,010.8 Acres, More or Less, Situate in Sussex County, Del., D.C.Del., 56 F.Supp. 120, 123.

The terms “reservation” and “exception” are frequently used as interchangeable for synonymous terms. Nelson v. Bacon, 113 Vt. 161, 32 A.2d 140, 145; Murphy v. Sunset Hills Ass’n, 243 Wis. 139, 9 N.W.2d 613, 615; Meaning in text must be determined by reference to matter and surrounding circumstances. Federal Land Bank of New Orleans v. Cooper, 190 Miss. 490, 200 So. 729, 730, 731; Duus v. Town of Ephrata, 14 Wash.2d 426, 128 P.2d 510, 511; Parties’ intention not language used, is dominating factor in determining whether provision is reservation or exception. Goss v. Congdon, 114 Vt. 155, 40 A.2d 429, 430; Technical meaning will yield to the manifest intent. Jensen v. Sheker, 231 Iowa 240, 1 N.W.2d 262, 267; Technical misnomer does not operate to defeat attempted reservation or exception. Clark v. Pauley, 291 Ky. 637, 165 S.W. 2d 61, 62; It has been also said that there is a diversity between an exemption and a saving; for an exception exempts clearly, but a saving goes to the matters touched, and does not exempt. Plowd. 361. Ogden v. Straus Bldg. Co., 187 N.J. Eq. 209, 122 N.J.L. 529, 12 N.J. Eq. 529; Windsor Reservoir & Canal Co., 81 Colo. 168, 254 P. 768, 770; Central Bank & Trust Co. v. Wyatt, 189 N.C. 107, 126 S.E. 93, 94; Greenspan v. Yapple, 194 N.Y.S. 658, 659, 201 App. Div. 575.

Statutory Law

An exception in a statute is a clause designed to reserve or exempt some individuals from the general class of persons or things to which the language of the act in general attaches. People v. Bailey, 103 Misc. 366, 171 N.Y.S. 394, 397.

An exception differs from an explanation, which, by the use of a "videlicet", proviso, etc., is allowed only to explain

The office of an "exception" in a statute is to except

Two statutes relating to same subject must be read together, and provisions of one having special application to particular subject will be deemed an "exception" to other statute general in its terms. Eagleton v. Murphy, 348 Mo.

Zoning

An "exception" in zoning ordinance is one al-

Exceptions may be treated as a legislative process, conditions for which must be found in the zoning ordinance and may not be varied, and variances may be treated as judicial function through appeals from administrative orders, whereby literal enforcement of ordinance may be

EXCEPTION EN MASSE. An assignment in defendant's amended motion for new trial that "court erred in giving Instructions Nos. 1 to 10, inclusive," is "exception en masse." Tugg v. State, 206 Ark. 161, 174 S.W.2d 374, 376.

EXCEPTION OF LACK OF CAPACITY TO STAND IN JUDGMENT. Challenges authority of plaintiff to institute and prosecute suit regardless of whether plaintiff owns or has an interest in the claim. It is usually resorted to where plaintiff is alleged to be under some disability or where he sues through a representative who, it is alleged, has no authority. Riche v. Ascension Parish School Board, La.App., 200 So. 681, 685.

EXCEPTION OF MISJOINER seeks to restrain plaintiff's pursuit of the cause when there is present another party whose liabilities or rights are not connected with the exceptor. Henrichs v. New Orleans Public Service, La.App., 179 So. 610.

EXCEPTION OF CAUSE OF ACTION addresses itself to sufficiency in law of the petition and exhibits attached. Bartholomew v. Impastato, La.App., 12 So.2d 700, 702.

EXCEPTION OF NO RIGHT OF ACTION chal-

EXCEPTION OF WANT OF INTEREST or of "no right of action" is afforded as means of challenging preliminarily either interest or right of plaintiff to assert cause of action and is not limited to want of capacity in plaintiff as such to bring suit.
McCain v. Le Blanc Bros., La.App., 10 So.2d 116, 118.

EXCEPTIONAL CIRCUMSTANCES. -Peculiar urgency, existed where death sentence was imposed, or defendant had not been given a reasonable opportunity to prepare for trial, or the commonwealth conceded belatedly, though not too late, that its material evidence is perjured. Sharpe v.
Commonwealth of Kentucky, C.C.A.Ky., 135 F.2d 974, 977.

EXCEPTIS EXCIPIENDIS. Lat. With all necessary exceptions.

EXCEPTOR. In old English law. A party who entered an exception or plea.

EXCERPTA, or EXCERPTS. Extracts.

EXCESS. When a defendant pleaded to an action of assault that the plaintiff trespassed on his land, and he would not depart when ordered, whereupon he, molliter manus imposuit, gently laid hands on him, the replication of excess was to the effect that the defendant used more force than necessary. Wharton.

Degree or amount by which one thing or number excceeds another, and the remainder or the difference between two numbers is the excess of one over the other. In re Bunce's Estate, 100 Misc. 385, 165 N.Y.S. 426.

Statute providing that, if capital used or invested in business of corporations includes borrowed capital in "excess" of capital stock, surplus and undivided profits, such excess of borrowed capital shall be added to capital stock, surplus and undivided profits as basis for computing franchise tax, means that, if corporation uses any borrowed or additional capital, such borrowed or additional capital shall be added to the capital in order to form basis for computing the tax. State v. Union Bldg. Corporation, 185 La. 598, 170 So. 7, 12.

EXCESS FEES of tax collector consist of sum remainin in collector's hands after deducting from total of all lawful fees collected, his maximum annual fees, his deputy hire, his official expenses and one-fourth of remainder until such one-fourth amounts to specified sum. American Indemnity Co. v. Red River Nat. Bank in Clarksville, Tex.

EXCESS INSURANCE. No recovery for loss of cotton which was insured under another policy could be had except that recoverable as "excess insurance," although the other policy also provided for its avoidance by other insurance, for, as to such other policy, the litigated policy was not "other" but merely "excess insurance." St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Garza County Warehouse & Marketing Ass'n, C.C.A.Tex., 93 F.2d 590, 592; Travelers Indemnity Co. v. State Automobile

Where fire and theft policy issued to conditional seller of truck contained indorsement against accidental collision occurring after insured had repossessed truck, and policy provided that such insurance was excess insurance where any specific insurance existed for benefit of insured, when seller later repossessed truck, insurance taken by seller became "excess insurance." Pageol Truck & Coach Co. v.

Where materials which belonged to owners who carried fire insurance covering merchandise while in possession of contractors, were sent to contractors to be made into finished garments, fire policies of contractors covering merchandise held in trust but excluding property otherwise specifically insured, provided only "excess insurance" in accordance with terms thereof, as to goods in possession

A departure by a court from those recognized and established requirements of law, however close apparent adherence to mere form in method of procedure, which has the effect of depriving one of a constitutional right, is an "excess of jurisdiction." Wuest v. Wuest, 53 Cal.App.2d 339, 127 P.2d 934, 937.

EXCESS OR SURPLUS WATER. Mean simply water which is flowing in stream in addition to what may be termed adjudicated waters. Quigley v. McIntosh, 88 Mont. 103, 290 P. 266, 268; Any water not needed for reasonable beneficial uses of those having prior rights is "excess or surplus water". City Of. Pasadena v. City of Alhambra, Cal., 207 P.2d 17;28.

EXCESSES. Spouse’s gambling habits or extravagances when carried to excess, constitute "excesses" authorizing separation from bed and board. Moore v. Moore, 192 La. 289, 187 So. 670, 672.

EXCESSIVE. Greater than what is usual or proper; overmuch; a general term for what goes beyond just measure or amount. Austin St. Ry. Co. v. Oldham, Tex.Civ.App., 109 S.W.2d 235, 237. Tending to or marked by excess, which is the quality or state of exceeding the proper or reasonable limit or measure. Railway Co. v. Johnston, 106 Ga. 130, 32 S.E. 78; Morrow v. Missouri Gas & Electric Service Co., 315 Mo. 367, 286 S.W. 106, 111.

EXCESSIVE ASSESSMENT. A tax assessment grossly disproportionate as compared with other assessments. Southern California Telephone Co. v. Los Angeles County, 45 Cal.App.2d 111, 113 P.2d 773, 776.

EXCESSIVE BAIL. Bail in a sum more than will be reasonably sufficient to prevent evasion of the law by flight or concealment; bail which is per se unreasonably great and clearly disproportionate to the offense involved, or shown to be so by the special circumstances of the particular case. In re Losasso, 15 Colo. 163, 24 P. 1080, 10 L.R.A. 847; Ex parte Ryan, 44 Cal. 558.

The denial of bail is not necessarily "excessive bail", although such denial may be in a particular case the equivalent of excessive bail. People ex rel. Shapiro v. Keeper of City Prison, Tombs, New York County, 265 App.Div. 474, 39 N.Y.S.2d 526, 531.

EXCESSIVE DAMAGES. See Damages.

EXCESSIVE DRUNKENNESS. Drunkenness is excessive where a party is so far deprived of his reason and understanding as to render him incapable of understanding character and consequences of his act. Taylor v. Koenigstein, 128 Neb. 809, 260 N.W. 544.

EXCESSIVE FINE OR PENALTY. Any fine or penalty which seriously impairs the capacity of gaining a business livelihood. C. F. Smith Co. v. Fitzgerald, 270 Mich. 659, 259 N.W. 352.

EXCESSIVE OR INTEMPERATE USE OF IN-TOXICANTS. In benefit certificate. Habitual indulgence in intoxicating liquors to such extent as to impair health or otherwise render insurance risk more hazardous. Wising v. Brotherhood of American Yeomen, ,132 Minn. 303, 156 N.W. 247, 248, Ann.Cas.1918A, 621.

EXCESSIVE OXIDATION. As used in product patent for improvement in bleached and dyed furs and the like, relate to what would occur if it was attempted to effect oxidation, bleaching of a dark skin with an ordinary bleach, such as strong hydrogen peroxide, without a protecting agent. Steinfur Patents Corporation v. J. Meyerson, Inc., D.C.N.Y., 56 F.2d 372, 382.

EXCESSIVE SPEED. Automobile's speed is "excessive" whenever it places car beyond driver's control. Esponette v. Wiseman, 130 Me. 297, 155 A. 650, 653.

EXCESSIVE TAX. One that exceeds what the tax would be if correctly calculated at the legal rate on the valuation as finally fixed by the county authorities. Pocomoke Guano Co. v. City of New Bern, 172 N.C. 258, 90 S.E. 202, 203.

EXCESSIVE VERDICT. A verdict which is result of passion or prejudice. Babb v. Murray, 26 Cal.App.2d 153, 79 P.2d 159, 160.

The test of whether a verdict is "excessive" is whether the amount thereof is such as to shock the conscience of the court. Scheidegger v. Thompson, Mo.App., 174 S.W.2d 216, 222.

EXCESSIVELY INTOXICATED. Where one is so intoxicated as to be so far deprived of his reason and understanding as to render him incapable of knowing the character and consequences of his act. Keedick v. Brogan, 116 Neb. 339, 217 N.W. 583, 585.

EXCESSIVUM IN JURE REPROBATUR. EX-CESSUS IN RE QUALIBET JURE REPROBATUR COMMUNI. Co. Litt. 44. Excess in law is reprehended. Excess in anything is reprehended at common law.

The criterion in determining whether a transaction is a sale or an exchange is whether there is a determination of value of things exchanged, and if no price is set for either property it is an "exchange". Gruver v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.4, 142 F.2d 356, 366.

The profit which arises from a maritime loan, when such profit is a percentage on the money lent, considering it in the light of money lent in one place to be returned in another, with a difference in amount in the sum borrowed and that paid, arising from, the difference of time and place. The term is commonly used in this sense by French writers. Hall, Emerig, Mar. Loans, 56n.

A public place where merchants, brokers, factors, etc., meet to transact their business.

Conveyancing

A mutual grant of equal interests, (in lands or tenements,) the one in consideration of the other. 2 Bl.Comm. 323; Windsor v. Collinson, 32 Or. 297, 52 P. 26; Herring Motor Co. v. 2Etna Trust & Savings Co., 87 Ind.App. 83, 154 N.E. 29, 31; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Western Union Telegraph Co., D.C.N.Y., 241 F. 162, 169; Finke v. Boyer, 331 Mo. 1242, 56 S.W.2d 372.

Nontaxable Exchange

Elements are that property be transferred to a corporation solely in exchange for stock or securities in corporation and that transferors immediately after exchange be in control of corporation, through ownership of 80 per cent. of all voting stock, and at least 80 per cent. of all other classes of stock of corporation. Commissioner of Internal Revenue v. Cement Investors, C.C.A.10, 122 F.2d 380, 383.

Personal Property Law

Exchange of goods is a commutation, transmutation, or transfer of goods for other goods, as distinguished from sale, which is a transfer of goods for money. 2 Bl.Comm. 446; 2 Steph. Comm. 120; Elwell v. Chamberlin, 31 N.Y. 624; Cooper v. State, 37 Ark. 418; Preston v. Keene, 14 Pet. 137, 10 L.Ed. 387.

Exchange is a contract by which the parties mutually give, or agree to give, one thing for another, neither thing, or both things, being money only.

The difference between a sale and exchange of property is rather one of shadow than of substance. In both cases the title to property is absolutely transferred; and the same rules of law are applicable to the transaction, whether the consideration of the contract is money or by way of barter. It can make no essential difference in the right and obligations of parties that goods and merchandise are transferred and paid for by other goods and merchandise instead of by money, which is but the representative of value or property. Com. v. Clark, 14 Gray, Mass., 367.

Stock and Securities

To exchange one security for a different security of some kind or for other property or rights. Mertz v. H. D. Hudson Mfg. Co., 194 Minn. 636, 261 N.W. 472.

Plan whereby preferred stock was issued in exchange for half of common stock held by voting trustees and other half was split up on basis of two for one constituted a genuine "exchange" of common stock for preferred stock in pursuance of a plan of "recapitalization". Bass v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.1, 129 F.2d 300, 307.

Where holder of nearly all of a corporation's stock delivered securities to corporation, gave corporation his check in payment of preferred stock, and received from corporation its check in payment of his securities, and checks, which were simultaneously deposited, cancelled each other almost entirely, transaction was exchange. Louis W. Gunby, Inc., v. Helvering, 74 App.D.C. 185, 122 F.2d 203, 206.

EXCHANGE BROKER. One who negotiates bills of exchange drawn on foreign countries or on other places in the same country; one who makes and concludes bargains for others in matters of money or merchandise. Little Rock v. Barton, 33 Ark. 444; Portland v. O'Neill, 1 Or. 219.

EXCHANGE OF LIVINGS. In ecclesiastical law.

EXCHEQUER. That department of the English government which has charge of the collection of the national revenue; the treasury department.

It is said to have been so named from the chequered cloth, resembling a chess-board, which anciently covered the table there, and on which, when certain of the king's accounts were made up, the sums were marked and scored with counters. 3 Bl.Comm. 44.

For "Court of Exchequer" and "Court of Exchequer Chamber," see those titles.

Instruments issued at the exchequer, under the authority, for the most part, of acts of parliament passed for the purpose of containing an engangement on the part of the government for repayment of the principal sums advanced with interest. 2 Steph.Comm. 586. See Briscoe v. Bank of Kentucky, 11 Pet. 328, 9 L.Ed. 709.

EXCHEQUER DIVISION. A division of the English high court of justice, to which the special business of the court of exchequer was specially assigned by section 34 of the judicature act of 1873. Merged in the queen's bench division from and after 1881, by order in council under section 31 of that act. Wharton.

EXCISE. An inland imposition, paid sometimes upon the consumption of the commodity, and frequently upon the retail sale. 1 Bl.Comm. 318; Patton v. Brady, 184 U.S. 608, 22 S.Ct. 493, 46 L.Ed. 713; Portland Bank v. Apthorp, 12 Mass. 256.

An excise has been defined as meaning tribute, custom, tax, tollage, or assessment, a fixed absolute and direct charge laid on merchandise, products, or commodities without any regard to amount of property belonging to those on whom it may fall, or to any supposed relation between money expended for a public object and a special benefit occasioned to those by whom the charge is to be paid. In re Opinion of the Justices, 282 Mass. 619, 186 N.E. 490, 491.

An excise is an impost for a license to pursue certain callings or to deal in special commodities or to exercise particular franchises. East Ohio Gas Co. v. Tax Commission of Ohio, D.C.Ohio, 43 F.2d 170, 172; any tax not falling within classification of poll or property tax, Diefendorf v. Gallet, 31 Idaho 619, 10 P.2d 307, 312; any tax which is not directly on property or the rents or incomes from real estate, Anne Arundel County Comrs v. English, 182 Md. 514, 35 A.2d 135, 141; duties laid on manufacture, sale, or consumption of commodities, or upon certain callings or occupations, in re City of Enid, 195 Okl. 365, 158 P.2d 348, 350, 159 A.L.R. 358; every form of charge imposed by public authority on performance of act, enjoyment of privilege, or engagement in occupation, Idaho Gold Dredging Co. v. Balderston, 258 Idaho 692, 78 P.2d 105, 112; every form of taxation which is not laid directly on persons or property, Gila Meat Co. v. State, 23 Ariz. 194, 276 P. 1, 2; Lutz v. Arnold, 208 Ind. 480, 193 N.E. 840; public charges on subjects other than manufacture and sale of commodities, such as licenses to pursue particular callings, franchises of corporations and particularly the franchise of corporate existence, and inheritance or succession of estates, Pollock v. Farmers' L. & T. Co., 158 U.S. 601, 15 S.Ct. 912, 19 L.Ed. 1108; Albert Pick & Co. v. Jordan, 169 Cal. 1, 145 P. 506, 513, Ann.Cas. 1916C, 1237; Des Moines Union Ry. Co. v. Chicago Great Western Ry. Co., 188 Iowa, 1019, 177 N.W. 90, 9 A.L.R. 1557; Northern Cent. Ry. v. Fidelity Trust Co., 152 Mass. 94, 136 A.6, 66, 68, 60 A.L.R. 558; Hatfield v. USA, 126 Miss. 34, 88 So. 4, 5, 25 A.L.R. 748; something cut off from price paid on sale of goods as contribution to government, City of Louisville v. Churchill Downs, 267 Ky. 339, 102 S.W. 2d 10, 15; tax imposed on performance of act, engagement in occupation, or enjoyment of privilege, State v. Fields, Ohio App., 35 N.E.2d 744, 747; tax laid on manufacture, sale, or consumption of commodities or upon licenses to pursue certain occupations or upon corporate privileges, Alexander Theatre Ticket Office v. U. S., C.C.A. N.Y., 23 F.2d 44, 46; City of De Land v. Florida Public Service Co., 119 Fla. 804, 816 So 735, 738.

An "excise tax" is often used as synonymous with "franchise" or "license tax". Shannon v. Streckfus Steamship Co., 279 Ky. 649, 131 S.W.2d 833, 838.

The terms excise tax and privilege tax are synonymous. American Airways v. Wallace, D.C.Tenn., 57 F.2d 877, 880.

English Law

The name given to the duties or taxes laid on certain articles produced and consumed at home, among which spirits have always been the most important; but, exclusive of these, the duties on the licenses of auctioneers, brewers, etc., and on the licenses to keep dogs, kill game, etc., are included in the excise duties. Wharton.

Tax and Excise Distinguished

A tax imposed directly by Legislature without assessment and measured by amount of business done, income previously received, or by extent to which privilege may have been enjoyed or exercised by the taxpayer, irrespective of nature or value of his assets or his investments in business, is excise tax while assessed tax on valuation of property is property tax. City of De Land v. Flori-da Public Service Co., 119 Fla. 804, 161 So. 735, 738.

A "property tax" is a visitational tax and is the taking of part of taxpayer's wealth, represented by property he owns for needs of government, and is not an "excise tax" for privilege of owning property for period of fiscal year. Beris Hardwood Lumber Co. v. Graham County, N. C., 214 N.C. 167, 198 S.E. 843, 845.

A tax directly on property is a property tax; but a tax is an excise tax where it is not a tax on property as such, but on certain kinds of property, having reference to their origin and their intended use. State ex rel. Porterie v. H. L. Hunt, Inc., 182 La. 1073, 162 So. 777, 103 A.L.R. 9.

An excise tax is an inland impost on articles of manufacture or sale, and also upon licenses to pursue certain trades, or to deal in certain commodities, and property tax is a tax which is not a capitation tax or a direct tax on land or personality. Flynn, Welch & Yates v. State Tax Commission, 38 N.M. 131, 28 P.2d 889, 891.

An excise tax is an inland impost on articles of manufacture or sale, and also upon licenses to pursue certain trades, or to deal in certain commodities, and property tax is a tax which is not a capitation tax or a direct tax on land or personality. Flynn, Welch & Yates v. State Tax Commission, 38 N.M. 131, 28 P.2d 889, 891.

As usually used, "franchise tax" is tax on intangible value, being a license to own or use property or to engage in intangible property, being "ad valorem" as distinguished from "excise" or "privilege" tax. State Tax Commission v. Petroleum Exploration, 253 Ky. 119, 68 S.W.2d 777.
If a mortgage registration tax is in effect upon the instrument itself, the tax is a "property tax", but if the tax is imposed solely upon the privilege of registration, and validity or use of the instrument is not affected by failure to pay the tax, the tax is an "excise tax". Community Public Service Co. v. James, Tex.Civ.App., 167 S.W.2d 588, 595.

Income tax is a "property tax" and not an "excise tax." Jensen v. Henneford, 185 Wash. 209, 53 P.2d 607, 610.

The words "tax" and "excise," although often used as synonymous, are to be considered as having entirely distinct and separate significations, under Const.Mass. c. 1, § 1, art. 4. The former is a charge apportioned either among the whole people of the state or those residing within certain districts, municipalities, or sections. It is required to be imposed, so that, if levied for the public charges of government, it shall be shared according to the estate, real and personal, which each person may possess; or, if raised to defray the cost of some local improvement of a public nature, it shall be borne by those who will receive some special and peculiar benefit or advantage which an expenditure of money for a public object may cause to those on whom the tax is assessed. An excise, on the other hand, is of a different character. It is based on no rule of apportionment or equality whatever. It is a fixed, absolute, and direct charge laid on merchandise, products, or commodities, without any regard to the amount of property belonging to those on whom it may fall, or to any supposed relation between money expended for a public object and a special benefit occasioned to those by whom the charge is to be paid. Oliver v. Washington Mills, 11 Allen, Mass., 268.

EXCLUSIVE LAW. A law imposing excise duties on specified commodities, and providing for the collection of revenue therefrom. In a more restricted and more popular sense, a law regulating, restricting, or taxing the manufacture or sale of intoxicating liquors.

A statute requiring payment of license fee for operating motor vehicle on state highway for hire is an "excise tax measure" rather than a "police measure." Comp. Laws Excllusive. Appertaining to the subject alone, though witness' intent or state of mind is ma- terial to the issue. McCain v. City of Montgomery, 92 So.2d 678, 681, 38 Ala.App. 568.

EXCLUSION, RULE OF. A witness, whether a party to the cause or not, may not testify as to his uncommunicated intent, purpose or motive. Occidental Life Ins. Co. of Cal. v. Nichols, 97 So.2d 879, 885, 266 Ala. 521. This rule applies even though witness' intent or state of mind is material to the issue. McCain v. City of Montgomery, 92 So.2d 678, 681, 38 Ala.App. 568.

EXCLUSIVE. Appertaining to the subject alone, not including, admitting, or pertaining to any others. Fellows v. Seymour, 171 Misc. 833, 13 N.Y. S.2d 803, 805. Sole. State v. Bridges, 246 Ala. 486, 21 So.2d 316, 319. Shutting out; debarring from interference or participation; vested in one person alone.

The term "exclusive" as used to define quantity of control of offending agency for res ipsa loquitur to apply means that control must be exclusive as against all who do not have a concurrent joint control. Frenk il v. John- son National Retailers Mut. Ins. Co., 175 Md. 592, 3 A.2d 479, 485.

EXCLUSIVE AGENCY. A contract to give an "exclusive agency" to deal with property is ordinarily interpreted as not precluding competition by the principal generally, but only as precluding him from appointing another agent to accomplish the result. Navy Gas & Supply Co. v. Schoech, 105 Colo. 374, 98 P.2d 860, 861, 863, 126 A.L.R. 1225.

The grant of an "exclusive agency to sell," that is, the exclusive right to sell the products of a wholesaler in a specified territory, ordinarily is interpreted as precluding competition in any form within designated area. Navy Gas & Supply Co. v. Schoech, 105 Colo. 374, 98 P.2d 860, 861, 126 A.L.R. 1225.

Relationship such as that created by contract between manufacturer and sole distributors within specified territory for outright sales to distributors who established retail prices. Stratton & Terstegge Co. v. Stigliitz Furniture Co., 258 Ky. 678, 81 S.W.2d 1, 3.

EXCLUSIVE AGENCY CONTRACT means that owner will not sell property through any other agency. Torrey & Dean v. Coyle, 138 Or. 509, 7 P.2d 561, 562.

As used in statute giving city exclusive control of school system, means control to exclusion of control exercised by county or state over other types of independent school districts authorized by school laws. Temple Independent School Dist. v. Proctor, Tex.Civ.App., 97 S.W.2d 1047, 1054.

EXCLUSIVE JURISDICTION. These words preclude idea of co-existence, and mean possessed to exclusion of others. Dunn Const. Co. v. Craig, 191 Miss. 682, 2 So.2d 166, 171.

The words "exclusive jurisdiction" when used in statutes with respect to inferior criminal courts were only intended to define jurisdiction of inferior criminal courts established thereby as between themselves. People ex rel. Kawiecki v. Carnhart, 170 Misc. 894, 13 N.Y.S.2d 293, 294.

EXCLUSIVE LICENSE is permission to do thing and contract not to give leave to any one else to do same thing. Overman Cushion Tire Co. v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 59 F.2d 998, 999.

A license which binds licensor not to enlarge thereafter the scope of other licenses already granted, or increase the number of licenses, is called "exclusive license", Mechanical Ice Tray Corporation v. General Motors Corporation, C.C. A.N.Y., 144 F.2d 720, 725.

EXCLUSIVE LICENSEE. One granted exclusive right and license to use, manufacture, and sell signed by lienholder satisfactory to lessee, lessor whose verse possessor must show an exclusive dominion over the land, had exclusive possession, visible to another. Whittaker v. Farmers' Nat. Bank of Somerset, 237 Ky. 388, 38 S.W.2d 737, 739.

EXCLUSIVE MOVING PICTURE RIGHTS. Granted by author in book held to include technical improvements in motion pictures developed during license. L. C. Page & Co. v. Fox Film Corporation, C.C.A.N.Y., 83 F.2d 196, 199.

EXCLUSIVE OF ANY OUT BUILDINGS as used in covenant that within restricted area, no residence should be erected, "actual bona fide cost" of which "exclusive of any outbuildings" should be less than $10,000, meant that no buildings other than the residence could or should be considered. Dillingham v. Kahn, 188 Ark. 759, 67 S.W.2d 735.

EXCLUSIVE OF INTEREST AND COSTS as used in statute defining court's pecuniary jurisdiction, refers to interest accrued before filing of complaint, not that accruing after suit was brought. Athan v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 73 F.2d 66, 67.

EXCLUSIVE ORIGINAL JURISDICTION IN ALL CASES. Constitutional provision, giving circuit court "exclusive original jurisdiction in all cases in equity", established in circuit court exclusive jurisdiction in all cases in equity involving matters which were of exclusive equity jurisdiction under the common law. In re Niernsee's Estate, 147 Fla. 388, 2 So.2d 737, 739.

EXCLUSIVE OWNERSHIP. Ownership free from any kind of legal or equitable interest in any one else. U. S. Casualty Co. v. Timmerman, 118 N.J. Eq. 563, 180 A. 629.

EXCLUSIVE POSSESSION. Possession may be "exclusive" so as to entitle possessor to title by adverse possession, notwithstanding that the land is subject to exercise of easement by private party. Young v. City of Lubbock, Tex.Civ.App., 130 S.W.2d 418, 420.

Defendant, if in actual adverse open and notorious possession of land, had exclusive possession, visible to another accepting mortgage on premises sought to be foreclosed. Whitaker v. Farmers' Nat. Bank of Somerset, 237 Ky. 596, 36 S.W.2d 18, 19.

Exclusive possession by adverse possessor means that adverse possessor must show an exclusive dominion over the land and an appropriation of it to his own use and benefit. Vernon's Ann.Civ.St. art. 5510. W. T. Carter & Bro. v. Holmes, 131 Tex. 365, 113 S.W.2d 1225, 1226.

Under lease providing that lessor should give exclusive possession which was defined to include consent agreements signed by lienholder satisfactory to lessee, lessor whose mortgage was in default did not comply with lease requirement by tendering a consent agreement from a company which agreed to refinance the mortgage. Fox Realty Co. v. Montgomery Ward & Co., C.C.A.Ind., 124 F.2d 710, 712, 713.

EXCLUSIVE POWER. If special power permits donee to bar one or more members of class from receiving portion of property it is "exclusive". Moore v. Emery, 137 Me. 259, 18 A.2d 781, 788, 792.

Power upon specified condition to appoint by will such full-blood relations of donor to take estate as donee might designate held exclusive power. In re Skidmore's Estate, 148 Misc. 569, 266 N.Y.S. 312.

Under will giving testator's daughters power to dispose of principal of trusts created in their favor, provided it be bequeathed to testator's descendants, where testator's general intent was that property should be kept in the family, but that his children should share equally, power of appointment was exclusive. Moore v. Emery, 137 Me. 259, 18 A.2d 781, 788, 792.

EXCLUSIVE PRIVILEGE or FRANCHISE. A statute does not grant an "exclusive" privilege or franchise, unless it shuts out or excludes others from enjoying a similar privilege or franchise. Sunnyside Land & Investment Co. v. Bernier, 119 Wash. 386, 205 P. 1041, 1042, 20 A.L.R. 1261; Toten v. Stuart, 143 Va. 201,129 S.E. 217, 218.

EXCLUSIVE REMEDY. Where a statute creates a new right or imposes a new duty or liability, unknown to the common law, and gives a remedy for its enforcement, the remedy prescribed is "exclusive". Kosicki v. S. A. Healy Co., 312 Ill.App. 307, 38 N.E.2d 525, 528; Kosicki v. S. A. Healy Co., 380 Ill. 298, 44 N.E.2d 27, 29.

Statute declaring right to compensation under Compensation Law exclusive remedy of employee injured by fellow employee means that injured employee suing fellow employee without having elected to take compensation under such law loses remedy against employer. Hall v. Hill, 158 Misc. 341, 285 N.Y.S. 815.

EXCLUSIVE RIGHT. An exclusive right is one which only the grantee thereof can exercise, and from which all others are prohibited or shut out.

By "exclusive right" essential to a right of way by prescription, the law means that the right should not depend for its enjoyment upon a similar right in others; it must be exclusive as against the right of the community at large. Downie v. City of Benton, 162 Wash. 151, 298 P. 454, 457.

The word "exclusive," as used in deed granting exclusive right to erect and maintain poles with wires meant that the right was exclusive of grantor, not exclusive in grantee. American Telephone & Telegraph Co. of Massachusetts v. McDonald, 273 Mass. 324, 173 N.E. 502, 503.

EXCLUSIVE USE. As used in law authorizing registration of trade-marks, means exclusive use not only of specific mark but also any other confusingly similar mark or term. McKesson & Robbins v. Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co., C.C.A. Conn., 53 F.2d 1011.

Exclusive use does not mean that no one may or does not use way except claimant of easement, but means only that claimant's right to do so does not depend on like right in others, Rush v. Collins, 366 Ill. 307, 8 N.E.2d 659, 662.

Seminary property is fairly to be regarded as in "exclusive use" for educational purposes. Trustees of Phillips Exeter Academy v. Exeter, 90 N.H. 472, 27 A.2d 569, 591.

dent Ins. Co. v. Campbell, 18 Tenn.App. 452, 79 S. W.2d 292, 296; Stuart v. Occidental Life Ins. Co., 156 Or. 522, 68 P.2d 1037, 1044. Substantially all or for the greater part. Anoka County v. City of St. Paul, 194 Minn. 554, 261 N.W. 588, 99 A.L.R. 1137. To the exclusion of all others; without ad-

EXCLUSIVELY FOR PUBLIC PURPOSES. It is not essential to exemption from taxation under provisions exempting from taxation public property used “exclusively for any public purpose” that all the property that is part of the utility unit be used for public purposes. City of Toledo v. Jenkins, 143 Ohio St. 141, 54 N.E.2d 656, 664, 665.

EXCLUSIVELY OF ALL OTHER CAUSES. Mean that, if accident is shown to be cause of injury for which action is brought, insured can recover. Williams v. General Accident Fire & Life Assur. Corporation, Limited, of Perth, Scotland, 144 Kan. 755, 62 P.2d 856, 857.

EXCLUSIVELY USED. The phrase in provision exempting from taxation properties exclusively used for religious worship, for schools or for purposes purely charitable, has reference to primary and inherent as over against a mere secondary and incidental use. Salvation Army v. Hoehn, Mo., 354 Mo. 107, 188 S.W.2d 826, 830.

EXCOMMENCEMENT. Excommunication (q. v.). Co. Litt. 134a.

EXCOMMUNICATION. A sentence of censure pronounced by one of the spiritual courts for offenses falling under ecclesiastical cognizance.

It is described in the books as two-fold: (1) The lesser excommunication, which is an ecclesiastical censure, excluding the party from the sacraments; (2) the greater, which excludes him from the company of all Christians. Formerly, too, an excommunicated man was under various civil disabilities. He could not serve upon juries, or be a witness in any court; neither could he bring an action to recover lands or money due to him. These penalties are abolished by St. 53 Geo. III. c. 127. 3 Steph. Comm. 721.

EXCOMMUNICATO APIENDO. In ecclesiastical law. A writ issuing out of chancery, founded on a bishop’s certificate that the defendant had been excommunicated, and requiring the sheriff to arrest and imprison him, returnable to the king’s bench. 4 Bl.Comm. 415; Bac. Abr. “Excommunication,” E.

EXCOMMUNICATO DELIBERANDO. A writ to the sheriff for delivery of an excommunicated person out of prison, upon certificate from the ordinary of his conformity to the ecclesiastical jurisdiction. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 63.

EXCOMMUNICATOR INTERDICTUR OMNIS ACTUS LEGITIMUS, ITA QUOD AGERE NON POTEST, NEC ALIQUEM CONVENIRE, LICET IPSE AB ALIIS POSSIT CONVENIRI. Co. Litt. 133. Every legal act is forbidden an excommunicated person, so that he cannot act, nor sue any person, but he may be sued by others.

EXCOMMUNICATO RECAPIENDO. A writ commanding that persons excommunicated, who for their obstinacy had been committed to prison, but were unlawfully set free before they had given caution to obey the authority of the church, should be sought after, retaken, and imprisoned again. Reg. Orig. 67.

EXCULPATE is employed in sense of excuse of justification. State v. Langdon, 46 N.M. 277, 127 P.2d 875, 876.

EXCULPATION. In Scotland the law allows of an “exculpation”, by which the prisoner is suffered before his trial to prove the thing to be impossible. State v. Langdon, 46 N.M. 277, 127 P.2d 875, 876.

EXCULPATION, LETTERS OF. In Scotch law. A warrant granted at the suit of a prisoner for citing witnesses in his own defense.

EXCULPATORY. Clearing or tending to clear from alleged fault or guilt; excusing. Moore v. State, 124 Tex.Cr.R. 97, 60 S.W.2d 453.

EXCULPATORY CLAUSE. Such clause in favor of a trustee in will implies that trustee has power which he purports to execute, and it exculpates him where this power is exercised in good faith. In re Wacht’s Estate, Sur., 32 N.Y.S.2d 871, 897.

EXCUSABLE. Admitting of excuse or palliation. As used in the law, this word implies that the act or omission spoken of is on its face unlawful, wrong, or liable to entail loss or disadvantage on the person chargeable, but that the circumstances attending it were such as to constitute a legal “excuse” for it, that is, a legal reason for withholding or foregoing the punishment, liability, or disadvantage which otherwise would follow.

EXCUSABLE ASSAULT. One committed by accident or misfortune in doing any lawful act by lawful means, with ordinary caution and without any unlawful intent. People v. O’Connor, 82 App. Div. 55, 81 N.Y.S. 555.

EXCUSABLE HOMICIDE. See Homicide.

EXCUSABLE NEGLECT. In practice, and particularly with reference to the setting aside of a judgment taken against a party through his “excusable neglect,” this means a failure to take the proper steps at the proper time, not in consequence of the party’s own carelessness, inattention, or willful disregard of the process of the court, but in consequence of some unexpected or unavoidable hindrance or accident, or reliance on the care and vigilance of his counsel or on promises made by the adverse party. See 1 Bl. Juddg. § 340; Brothers v. Brothers, 71 Mont. 378, 230 P. 60, 61; Westbrook v. Rice, 28 N.D. 324, 148 N.W.

EXCUSABLE
EXCUSAT

EXCUSAT AUT EXTEMUAT DELICTUM IN CAPITALIBUS QUOD NON OPERATUR IDEM IN CIVILIBUS, Bac. Max: r. 15. That may excuse or palliate a wrongful act in capital cases which would not have the same effect in civil injuries. See Broom, Max. 324.

EXCUSATIO. In the civil law. An excuse or reason which exempts from some duty or obligation.

EXCUSATOR. English law. An excuser.

Old German law. A defendant; he who utterly denies the plaintiff's claim. Du Cange.

EXCUSATUR QUIS QUOD CLAMEUM NON OPPOSERIT, UT SI TOTO TEMPORE LITIGII FUIT ULTRA MARE QUACUNQUE OCCASIONE. Co. Lit. 260. He is excused who does not bring his claim, if, during the whole period in which it ought to have been brought, he has been beyond sea for any reason.

EXCUSE. A reason alleged for doing or not doing a thing. Worcester; State v. Weagley, 286 Mo. 677, 228 S.W. 817, 820; State v. Safron, 143 Wash. 34, 254 P. 463. A matter alleged as a reason for relief or exemption from some duty or obligation.

That which is offered as a reason for being excused, or a plea offered in extenuation of a fault or irregular deportment; it is that plea or statement made by the accused which arises out of the state of facts constituting and relied on as the cause. State v. Craig, 161 S.C. 232, 159 S.E. 559, 560.

EXCUSS. To seize and detain by law.

EXCUSSIO. Civil law. A diligent prosecution of a remedy against a debtor; the exhausting of a remedy against a principal debtor, before resorting to his sureties. Translated "discussion" (q. v.).

Old English law. Rescue or rescous. Spelman.

EXEAT. A permission which a bishop grants to a priest to go out of his diocese; also leave to go sea for any reason.

EXECUTE. To complete; to make; to perform; to do; to follow out. Glover v. American Mortgage Corporation, Tex.Civ.App., 94 S.W.2d 1235, 1236.

To finish, accomplish, make complete, fulfill. To perform; obey the injunctions of.

To perform; carry out according to its terms; as to execute a contract, or a writ. State v. Miller, 104 W.Va. 226, 139 S.E. 711, 712; Harrity v. Steers, 185 N.Y.S. 704, 195 App. Div. 11.

To fulfill the purpose of; to obey; to perform the commands of; as to execute a writ. A statute is said to execute a use where it transmutes the equitable interest of the cestui que use into a legal estate of the same nature, and makes him tenant of the land accordingly, in lieu of the feejee to uses or trustee, whose estate, on the other hand, is at the same moment annihilated. 1 Steph.Comm. 339.

Word "sign" as used in trial court's general oral charge and in special written charge given at request of defendant was synonymous with word "execute". Kinney v. Glenn, 29 Ala.App. 478, 198 So. 250, 253.

EXECUTED. Completed; carried into full effect; already done or performed; taking effect immediately; now in existence or in possession; conveying an immediate right or possession. The opposite of executory.

Generally a jail sentence is "executed" only when the convict has actually suffered the imprisonment. State ex rel. Libtz v. Coleman, 149 Fla. 28, 5 So.2d 60, 61.

EXECUTED CONSIDERATION. A consideration which is wholly past. 1 Pars. Cont. 391. An act done or value given before the making of the agreement.

EXECUTED CONTRACT. See Contract.

EXECUTED ESTATE. See Estate.

EXECUTED FINE. The fine due ceo que it ad de son done; or a fine upon acknowledgment of the right of the cognizee, as that which he has of the gift of the cognizor. Abolished by 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 74.

EXECUTED NOTE. Under Small Loan Act note was not "executed" until it was both signed and delivered. Trustees System Co. of Newark v. Stoll, 13 N.J.Misc. 490, 179 A. 372, 373.

EXECUTED ORAL AGREEMENT. An oral agreement is not "executed" unless it has been fully performed by both parties. Walther v. Occidental Life Ins. Co., 40 Cal.App.2d 160, 104 P.2d 551, 554.

EXECUTED REMAINDER. See Remainder.

EXECUTED SALE. See Sale.
EXECUTED TRUST. See Trust.
EXECUTED USE. See Use.
EXECUTED WRIT. In practice. A writ carried into effect by the officer to whom it is directed.
EXECUTED USE. See Use.
EXECUTED TRUST. See Trust.
The term “executed,” applied to a writ, has been held to mean “used.” Amb. 61.
EXECUTIO. Lat. The doing or following up of a thing; the doing a thing completely or thoroughly; management or administration.
EXECUTIO EST EXECUTIO JURIS SECUNDUM JUDICIIUM. 3 Inst. 212. Execution is the execution of the law according to the judgment.
EXECUTIO EST FINIS ET FRUCTUS LEGIS. Co. Litt 289. Execution is the end and fruit of the law.
EXECUTIO JURIS NON HABET INJURIAM. 2 Roll. 301. The execution of law does no injury.
At common law, executions are said to be either final or quousque; the former, where complete satisfaction of the debt is intended to be procured by this process; the latter, where the execution is only a means to an end, as where the defendant is arrested on co. sa.
The word cannot be stretched to include prescription; the natural meaning of “execution” is “performance,” including excuses for performance. Wood & Selick v. Compagnie Generale Transatlantique, C.C.A.N.Y., 43 F.2d 941, 942.
Where testatrix left residue of her estate to be divided equally among named individuals, but provided that, if any of those beneficiaries should be deceased at time of “execution” of the will, their share “is” to revert to testatrix estate, the word “execution” had reference to time when will should take effect and not to time when will was signed. Central Nat. Bank v. Stevenson, 25 Del.Ch. 215, 256. 16 A.2d 114, 115.
Writ of assistance is in the nature of an “execution.” Davis v. Federal Land Bank of Columbia, 217 N.C. 145, 7 S.E.2d 373, 376.
Attachment distinguished
Term “executions” as used in Code section dealing with commissions which sheriff may charge in cases where sheriff has collected a judgment on execution without making a sale of the judgment debtor's property is sufficiently broad to include attachment. Jones-Noland Drilling Co. v. Bixby, 34 N.M. 413, 282 P. 382, 384.
Under an attachment, property of defendant is placed in custody of law to await final determination of suit, and the attachment is really a preliminary execution dependent for its ultimate efficacy upon the rendering of a judgment in plaintiff's favor; on the other hand, an “execution” is a remedy afforded by 4 w for the enforcement of a judgment of the court. J. M. Radford Grocery Co. v. Owenby, Tex.Civ.App., 34 S.W.2d 385, 387.
Criminal Law
The carrying into effect of the sentence of the law by the infliction of capital punishment. 4 Bl.Com. 403; 4 Steph. Comm. 470.
French Law
A method of obtaining satisfaction of a debt or claim by sale of the debtor's property privately, i.e., without judicial process, authorized by the deed or agreement of the parties or by custom; as, in the case of a stockbroker, who may sell securities of his customer, bought under his instructions or deposited by him, to indemnify himself or make good a debt. Arg.Fr.Merc.Law, 557.
Garnishment
Execution includes writ of garnishment. Buckley v. F. L. Riley Mercantile Co., 155 Miss. 150, 124 So. 267.
Garnishee execution is an execution against property. In re Howard Hotel Corporation, 150 Misc. 782, 270 N.Y.S. 259.
Garnishment after judgment “is execution” within statute providing that execution shall only be issued from court in which judgment is rendered. Though a garnishment is not an execution, garnishment after execution is practically an equitable execution. First Nat. Bank of Cordell v. City Guaranty Bank of Hobart, 174 Okl. 545, 51 P.2d 573, 576.
Order of Sale
Practice
The name of a writ issued to a sheriff, constable, or marshal, authorizing and requiring him to execute the judgment of the court. Raulerson v. Peeples, 81 Fla. 206, 87 So. 629, 630.
For “Attachment execution,” see Attachment.
For “Body Execution,” “Dormant Execution,” “Equitable Execution,” “General Execution,” “Junior Execution” and “Special Execution,” see those titles.
For “Execution of Judgment or Decree,” see that title.
For “Testament execution,” see Testament.
EXECUTION CREDITOR. See Creditor.
EXECUTION LIEN. An “execution lien” may be created by service of execution, levy upon real estate, and filing of a certificate of levy in the proper office of county in which real estate is located. Reconstruction Finance Corporation v. Maley, C.C.A.II., 125 F.2d 131, 135.
Delivery is essential to complete execution of deed. Barnes v. Aycock, 219 N.C. 360, 13 S.E.2d 611, 612.
Execution imports, includes or involves delivery. Miller v. Jansen, 21 Cal.2d 473, 132 P.2d 801, 802; ivcCarthy Co.
EXECUTION

v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.9, 80 F.2d 618, 620; Stocks v. Inzer, 232 Ala. 482, 168 So. 877, 878.

Execution includes performance of all acts necessary to render instrument complete and of every act required to give instrument validity or to carry it into effect. Northwest Steel Rolling Mills v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.9, 110 F.2d 286, 290.

Execution of deed means making thereof, Turlington v. Neighbors, 222 N.C. 694, 24 S.E.2d 648, 650. Execution of instruments means making thereof, and when spoken of deeds, it includes all acts such as signing, sealing, and delivering, which are necessary to give effect thereto. United States v. Peppa, D.C.Cal., 13 F.Supp. 669, 670.

"Execution" of written contract includes signing, unconditional delivery by promisor, and acceptance by promisee. Coen v. American Surety Co. of New York, C.C.A. Mo., 120 F.2d 393, 397.

Performance and completion of all of those formal acts essential for mortgage's effectiveness. Southern Enterprises v. Foster, La.App., 12 So.2d 842, 844.

Term "execution" as employed in respect to promissory note means both signing and delivery of bill or note, and mere signing is insufficient. In re Tynan's Estate, 142 Neb. 671, 7 N.W.2d 628, 630.

The signing and publication of a will.

Words "issuing" and "execution," used in statutes in relation to passing of title by tax deed, are interchangeable terms. Lance v. Smith, 123 Fla. 461, 167 So. 366, 369.

EXECUTION OF JUDGMENT OR DECREE.

"Execution" is putting into effect of final judgment of court. Tice v. Tide, 208 Iowa 145, 224 N.W. 571, 572.

As used in Code provision regarding right to demand that validity of judgment be declared unless defendant suffered judgment to be executed, means the seizure of property. Frank v. Currie, La.App., 172 So. 843, 848.

Execution embraces all appropriate means to execution of judgment, Buckley v. F. L. Riley Mercantile Co., 155 Miss. 150, 124 So. 267.

Sometimes from the neglect of parties, or some other cause, it became impossible to carry a decree into execution without the further decree of the court upon a bill filed for that purpose. This happened generally in cases where, parties having neglected to proceed upon the decree, their rights under it became so embarrassed by a variety of subsequent events that it was necessary to have the decree of the court to settle and ascertain them. Such a bill might also be brought to carry into execution the judgment of an inferior court of equity, if the jurisdiction of that court was not equal to the purpose; as in the case of a decree in Wales, which the defendant avoided by fleeing into England. This species of bill was generally partly an original bill, and partly a bill in the nature of an original bill, though not strictly original. Story, Eq. P1 342; Daniell, Ch.Pr. 1429.

Statutory means provided for enforcement of judgment requiring the payment of money is execution. Lupion v. Edmundson, 220 N.C. 188, 16 S.E.2d 840, 841.

Within statute providing for execution of judgment after five years from its entry, "execution" is used in broad sense of execution or carrying into effect by such means as are provided by law for enforcement of various classes of judgments. Bank of America N. T. & S. A. v. Katz, 45 Cal.App.2d 138, 113 P.2d 799, 760.

Writ of execution is a civil proceeding for enforcement of a judgment against property. Lash v. Mann, 141 Ohio St. 377, 49 N.E.2d 689, 691.

EXECUTION PAREE, In French law. A right founded on an act passed before a notary, by which the creditor may immediately, without citation or summons, seize and cause to be sold the property of his debtor, out of the proceeds of which to receive his payment. It imports a confession of judgment, and is not unlike a warrant of attorney. Code Proc. La. art. 732; 6 Toullier, no. 208; 7 Toullier, no. 99.

EXECUTION SALE. A sale by a sheriff or other ministerial officer under the authority of a writ of execution which he has levied on property of the debtor. Noland v. Barrett, 122 Mo. 181, 26 S.W. 692, 43 Am.St.Rep. 572; Norton v. Reardon, 67 Kan. 302, 72 P. 861, 100 Am.St.Rep. 459.

EXECUTION THEREOF. In ordinance providing that contractor should not have claim under city contract unless controller certified that at date of "execution thereof" sufficient amount was stood to credit of appropriation for contract, words "execution thereof" mean date of certification. Edwin E. Hallenbeck, Inc., v. Hadley, 312 Pa. 176, 167 A. 574, 575.

EXECUTIONE FACIENDA IN WITHERNAM-IUM. A writ that lay for taking cattle of one who has conveyed the cattle of another out of the county, so that the sheriff cannot replevy them. Reg. Orig. 82.

EXECUTIONE JUDICII. A writ directed to the judge of an inferior court to do execution upon a judgment therein, or to return some reasonable cause wherefore he delays the execution. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 20.

EXECUTIONER. The name given to him who puts criminals to death, according to their sentence; a hangman.

EXECUTIVE. As distinguished from the legislative and judicial departments of government, the executive department is that which is charged with the detail of carrying the laws into effect and securing their due observance. The word "executive" is also used as an impersonal designation of the chief executive officer of a state or nation. In re Railroad Com'ts, 15 Neb. 679, 50
EXECUTOR

EXECUTIVE AGENT. President of a bank is but the "executive agent" of board of directors. Ex parte Lamberth, 242 Ala. 165, 5 So.2d 622, 623.

EXECUTIVE AUTHORITY. Petition for referendum filed with clerk is filed with executive authority of municipality. State ex rel. Tietje v. Collett, 138 Ohio St. 425, 35 N.E.2d 568, 570. State ex rel. City of Middletown v. City Commission of City of Middletown, 140 Ohio St. 368, 44 N.E.2d 459, 463.

EXECUTIVE EMPLOYEES. Persons whose duties include some form of managerial authority, actually directing the work of other persons. Stanger v. Glenn L. Martin Co., D.C.Md., 56 F. Supp. 163, 166; persons whose duties relate to active participation in control, supervision and management of business, or who administer affairs, or who direct, manage, execute or dispense. Stein er v. Pleasantville Constructors, 181 Misc. 798, 46 N.Y.S.2d 120, 123.

Fort Worth & Denver City Ry. Co. v. Motley, Tex.Civ.App., 87 S.W.2d 551, 554.

EXISTING LIABILITIES embrace conditional or contingent obligations, which may or may not in the future result in indebtedness. Daniels v. Goff, 192 Ky. 15, 232 S.W. 66, 67.

A tax may be a "liability" within meaning of agreement to assume "existing liabilities." Shepard v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A. 7, 101 F.2d 595, 598.

EXISTING PERSON. A child conceived, but not born, is to be deemed an "existing person" so far as may be necessary for its interests in the event of its subsequent birth. Comp.Laws N.D.1913, § 4337; 1 Bl.Comm. 130.

EXISTING PUBLIC SCHOOL. Mean not only the building, but the school grounds. State ex rel. Fronton Exhibition Co. v. Stein, 144 Fla. 387, 198 So. 82, 87.

EXISTING RAILROAD CORPORATIONS. Extends to such as are incorporated after as well as before its passage, unless exception is provided in their charters. Indianapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Blackman, 63 Ill. 117; Lawrie v. State, 5 Ind. 525; Fox v. Edwards, 38 Iowa, 215.

EXISTING RIGHT. Rights as exist under general laws. Funk v. Inland Power & Light Co., 164 Wash. 110, 1 P.2d 872, 874.

EXISTING USE. Construction of adaptability of a building or room for purpose, and employment of building or room or land within the purpose. Appeal of Yocom, 142 Pa.Super. 165, 15 A.2d 687, 690.

Utilization of premises so that they may be known in neighborhood as being employed for given purpose. De Felice v. Zoning Board of Appeals of Town of East Haven, 130 Conn. 156, 32 A.2d 635, 637, 638; Landay v. MacWilliams, 173 Md. 460, 196 A. 293, 297, 114 A.L.R. 984.

EXISTS OR IS KEPT OR MAINTAINED. An actual being; something in fact in existence; something continuing and not failing. McCarron v. Commonwealth, 169 Va. 387, 193 S.E. 509, 512.

EXIT. Lat. It goes forth. This word is used in docket entries as a brief mention of the issue of process. Thus, "exit fi. fa." denotes that a writ of fieri facias has been issued in the particular case. The "exit of a writ" is the fact of its issuance.

EXIT WOUND. A term used in medical jurisprudence to denote the wound made by a weapon on the side where it emerges, after it has passed completely through the body, or through any part of it.

EXITUS. Children; offspring. The rents, issues, and profits of lands and tenements. An export duty. The conclusion of the pleadings.

EXLEGALITAS. In old English law. Outlawry. Spelman.

EXLEGALITUS. He who is prosecuted as an outlaw. Jacob.

EXLEGARE. In old English law. To outlaw; to deprive one of the benefit and protection of the law, (exuere aliquem beneficio legis.) Spelman.

EXOINE. In French law. An act or instrument in writing which contains the reasons why a party in a civil suit, or a person accused, who has been summoned, agreeably to the requisitions of a decree, does not appear. Poth. Proc. Crim. § 3, art 3. The same as "Essoin" (q. v.).

EXONERATION. The removal of a burden, charge, or duty. Particularly, the act of relieving a person or estate from a charge or liability by casting the same upon another person or estate. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Comm., 114 Ky. 787, 71 S.W. 916; Bannon v. Burns, C.C.Mo., 39 Fed. 898.

A right or equity which exists between those who are successively liable for the same debt. "A surety who discharges an obligation is entitled to look to the principal for reimbursement, and to invoke the aid of a court of equity for this purpose, and a subsequent surety who, by the terms of the contract, is responsible only in case of the default of the principal and a prior surety, may claim exoneration at the hands of either." BisEq. § 331.

A right to have a fund applied to payment of guaranteed claims. Stulz-Sickles Co. v. Fredburn Const. Corporation, 114 N.J.Eq. 475, 169 A. 27, 28.

The right which a person has who has been compelled to pay what another should be forced to pay in full. Fidelity & Casualty Ins. Co. of New York v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 124 Conn. 227, 199 A. 93, 94.

Scotch Law

A discharge; or the act of being legally disburdened of, or liberated from, the performance of a duty or obligation. Bell.

EXONERATIONE SECTZ. A writ that lay for the crown's ward, to be free from all suit to the county court, hundred court, leet, etc., during wardship. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 158.

EXONERATIONE SECTIE AD CURIAM BARON. A writ of the same nature as that last above described, issued by the guardian of the crown's ward, and addressed to the sheriffs or stewards of the court, forbidding them to distrain him, etc., for not doing suit of court, etc. New Nat. Brev. 352.

EXONERETUR. Lat. Let him be relieved or discharged. An entry made on a bailpiece, wherever the surety is relieved or discharged from further obligation, when the condition is fulfilled by the surrender of the principal or otherwise.

EXORBITANT. Deviating from the normal or customary course, or going beyond the rule of established limits of right or propriety. U. S. v. Oglesby Grocery Co., D.C.Ga., 264 F. 691, 695.

EXORDIUM. The beginning or introductory part of a speech.

EXPECT. To await; to look forward to something intended, promised, or likely to happen. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Hamlin, 67 Kan. 476, 73 P. 58; Kronenberg v. Whale, 21 Ohio App. 322, 153
EXPECT

N.E. 302, 308; to look for mentally, to look forward to, as to something about to happen or come, to have a previous apprehension of whether good or evil, to look for with some confidence, and once meant to demand, to require. Holcomb v. Holcomb, 173 Miss. 192, 159 So. 564, 566.

The word has also a secondary meaning, in which it implies a demand rather than anticipation, as where a person, in negotiating a contract, says he will "expect" to write half the fire insurance. Stillman v. Spokane Savings & Loan Soc., 103 Wash. 619, 175 P. 296, 297.

Where testator gave life estate provided that after life tenant's death he "expected" his realty to be sold the word "expect" was almost equivalent of word "direct". Wattjes v. Faeth, 379 Ill. 290, 40 N.E.2d 521, 524.

'EXPECTABLE RISK. Risk which is indefinite and uncertain. Martin v. Hodson, 93 N.H. 66, 35 A.2d 402, 404.

EXPECTANCY. That which is expected or hoped for. The condition of being deferred to a future time, or of dependence upon an expected event; contingency as to possession or enjoyment. With respect to the time of their enjoyment, estates may either be in possession or in expectancy; and of expectancies there are two sorts,—one created by the act of the parties, called a "remainder;" the other by act of law, called a "reversion." 2 Bl.Comm. 163.

"'Expectancy' as applied to property, is contingency as to possession, that which is expected or hoped for. At most it is a mere hope or expectation, contingent upon the will and pleasure of the landowner, and hardly reaches the height of a property right, much less a vested right, because where there is no obligation, there is no right. It is a possibility for which a party may under certain circumstances properly hope." Robinson v. Eagle-Picher Lead Co., 132 Kan. 860, 297 P. 697, 698, 75 A.L.R. 840.

EXPECTANCY OF LIFE. In the doctrine of life annuities, the share or number of years of life which a person of a given age may, upon an equality of chance, expect to enjoy. Wharton.

EXPECTANT. Contingent as to enjoyment. Having relation to, or dependent upon, a contingency.

EXPECTANT ESTATES, See Estate in Expectancy.

EXPECTANT HEIR. A person who has the expectation of inheriting property or an estate, but small present means.

The term is chiefly used in equity, where relief is afforded to such persons against the enforcement of "catching bargains," (q. v.) Jeffers v. Lampson, 10 Ohio St. 106; In re Robins' Estate, 199 Pa. 500, 49 A. 233. "The phrase is used not in its literal meaning, but as including every one who has either a vested remainder, or a contingent remainder in a family property, including a remainder in a portion, as well as a remainder in an estate, and every one who has the hope of succession to the property of an ancestor, either by reason of his being the heir-apparent or presumptive, or by reason, merely, of the expectation of a devise or bequest on account of the supposed or presumed affection of his ancestor or relation. More than this, the doctrine as to expectant heirs has been extended to all reversioners and remaindermen. So that the doctrine not only included the class mentioned, who in some popular sense might be called 'expectant heirs,' but also all remaindermen and reversioners." Jessel, M. R.

EXPECTANT RIGHT. A contingent right, not vested; one which depends on the continued existence of the present condition of things until the happening of some future event. Pearsall v. Great Northern R. Co., 161 U.S. 646, 16 S.Ct. 705, 40 L.Ed. 838; Pollack v. Meyer Bros. Drug Co., C.C.A. Mo., 233 F. 861, 868; Adams v. Ernst, 1 Wash.2d 255, 95 P.2d 799, 804. A right is contingent, not vested, when it comes into existence only on an event or condition which may not happen. Wirtz v. Nestos, 51 N.D. 603, 200 N.W. 524, 530.

EXPECTATION OF LIFE. See Expectancy of Life.

EXPECTED. A shipping agent's letter that a ship was "expected" to be ready to be loaded at a port on a stated date constituted a representation of a belief or expectation. L. N. Jackson & Co. v. Seas Shipping Co., 185 Misc. 94, 56 N.Y.S.2d 501, 503.

EXPECTED SERVICE. Incidental to employment is that service which an employee has no absolute duty to perform but is of the type of duty which has the approval of the employer. Severson v. Industrial Commission, 221 Wis. 169, 266 N.W. 235, 236.

EXPEDIENTE. An historical record of proceedings in connection with grant of land by the sovereign. State v. Balli, Tex.Civ.App., 173 S.W.2d 522, 526. In Mexican law, a term including all the papers or documents constituting a grant or title to land from government. Vanderslice v. Hanks, 3 Cal. 27, 38.

EXPEDIMENT. The whole of a person's goods and chattels, bag and baggage. Wharton.

EXPEDIT AREIPUBLICZE NE SUA RE QUIS MALE UTATUR. It is for the interest of the state that a man should not enjoy his own property improperly (to the injury of others). Inst. 1, 8, 2.

EXPEDIT REIPUBLICIE UT SIT FINIS LITIUM. It is for the advantage of the state that there be an end of suits; it is for the public good that actions be brought to a close. Co.Litt. 303b; Broom, Max. 365-6; Belcher v. Farrar, 8 Allen, Mass. 329. This maxim belongs to the law of all countries: 1 Phill. Int. L. 553; French v. Shotwell, 5 Johns. Ch., N.Y., 555, 568.

EXPEDITATION- ARBORES. Trees rooted up or cut down to the roots. Fleta, 1. 2, c. 41.

EXPEDITATION. In old forest law. A cutting, without the claws or ball of the forefeet of mastiffs or other dogs, to prevent their running after deer;—a practice for the preservation of the royal furs ests. Cart. de For. c. 17; Spelman; Cowell.
EXPEDITED. To hasten; to make haste; to speed. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Ridley, 119 Okl. 138, 249 P. 289, 290.

EXPEDITER. An employee whose duty is to see that shortage in material at one point in a plant is remedied by delivery of the needed material from another part of the plant where it is stacked or stored. American Mut. Liability Ins. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 250 Ala. 354, 34 So. 2d 474, 476.

EXPEDITIO. An expedition; an irregular kind of army. Spelman.

EXPEDITIO BREVIS. In old practice. The serving forth or setting forth of army. Spelman.

EXPEDITION. A sending forth or setting forth for the execution of some object of consequence. Progress. An important journey or excursion for a specific purpose; as, a military or exploring expedition; also, the body of persons making such an excursion. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of United States v. Dyess, 194 Ark. 1023, 109 S.W.2d 1263, 1265.

An important journey or excursion for specific purpose; a journey, march, or voyage generally of several or many persons for definite purpose, such as a military or exploring expedition or a trading expedition to the African coast; the word carries an implication of a military exploit or of an exploration into remote regions or over new routes. Day v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of U. S., C.C.A.Colo., 83 F.2d 147, 149.

EXPEDITIOUS. Possessed of, or characterized by, expedition or efficiency and rapidity in action; performed with, or acting with, expedition; quick; speedy. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Ridley, 119 Okl. 138, 249 P. 289, 290.

EXPEL. In regard to trespass and other torts, this term means to eject, to put out, to drive out, and generally with an implication of the use of force. Perry v. Fitzhowe, 8 Q.B. 779; Smith v. Leo, 92 Hun, 242, 36 N.Y.S. 949.

EXPEND. To pay out, use up, consume. Adams v. Prather, 176 Cal. 33, 167 P. 534, 538, 3 A.L.R. 928; School Dist. No. 24 of Marion County v. Smith, 82 Or. 443, 161 P. 706, 708. To pay out, lay out, use up, and implies receiving something in return. In re Holmes' Estate, 233 Wis. 274, 289 N.W. 638, 641.

EXPENDERE. The word "expense" had its origin in the Latin word "expendere"; "ex" meaning "out," and "pendere" meaning "to weigh." State v. DeWitt C. Jones Co., 108 Fla. 613, 147 So. 230, 233.

EXPENDITORS. Paymasters. Those who expend or disburse certain taxes. Especially the sworn officer who supervised the repairs of the banks of the canals in Romney Marsh. Cowell.

EXPENDITURE. An expending, a laying out of money; disbursement,—it is not the same as an "appropriation," the setting apart or assignment to a particular person or use, in exclusion of all others. Grout v. Gates, 97 Vt. 434, 124 A. 76, 80.

As used in constitutional provision relating to allowable increase over preceding fiscal year, includes all expenditures lawfully made by county rather than expenditures in enforcement of law only. Crow v. Board of Sup'rs of Stanislaus County, 135 Cal.App. 451, 27 P.2d 655.

The word "expenditure" has been defined as the spending of money; the act of expending; disbursement expense; money expended; a laying out of money; payment; expenditure. Crow v. Board of Sup'rs of Stanislaus County, 135 Cal.App. 451, 27 P.2d 655.

EXPENSE LITIS. Costs or expenses of the suit, which are generally allowed to the successful party.

EXPENSE. That which is expended, laid out or consumed; an outlay; charge; cost; price. Rowley v. Clarke, 162 Iowa 732, 144 N.W. 908, 911.

Actual outlay or actual obligation to make outlay. U. S. v. Block & Kohner Mercantile Co., D.C.Mo., 33 F.2d 196, 197; an actual and honest disbursement, H. B. Humphrey Co. v. Pollack Roller Runner Sled Co., 278 Mass. 350, 180 N. E. 164, 166; an outlay of money; the expenditure of time, labor, and thought; the employment and consumption of time and labor; act of expending, disbursement, expenditure, etc., 88 F.2d 967, 968; State v. De Witt C. Jones Co., 108 Fla. 613, 147 So. 230, 233; expenditures, outlays, or disbursements of money, In re McMurray, 131 Misc. 182, 227 N.Y.S. 115, 117; laying out or expending of money or other resources, as time or strength; expenditure; hence drain on resources; detriment; loss; as, at the expense of health; the habit of expending; money expended; outlay; charge; as, expenses for the journey. In re Bates' Will, 152 Misc. 627, 274 N.Y.S. 93; laying out or spending of money or other resources, In re Bond & Mortgage Guarantee Co., Sup., 39 N.Y.S.2d 760, 767.

For "Current Expenses," see that title.

EXPENSES OF FAMILY. Medical and funeral expenses are "expenses of the family" within meaning of statute making expenses of family chargeable upon property of both husband and wife. Hansen v. Hayes, 175 Or. 358, 154 P.2d 202, 205.

Under such a statute the term includes not only merchandise used by family as a whole, but also expenses, such as medical aid, hospital services and burial attendance, incurred or supplied for one of the spouses. In re De Nisson's Guardianship, 197 Wash. 265, 84 P.2d 1026.

EXPENSES OF RECEIVERSHIP. Comprehend allowances to receivers' counsel, master's fees, appraisers' fees, auditors' fees, and rent and expenses incurred by receivers in conducting business. Philadelphia Dairy Products Co. v. Summit Sweets Shoppe, Ch., 113 N.J.Eq. 458, 167 A. 667.

EXPERIENCE RATE. Under compensation policy

EXPERIENCE. A state, extent, or duration of being engaged in a particular study or work; the real life as contrasted with the ideal or imaginary.

EXPERIMENT. A trial or special test or observation

In patent law, either a trial of an uncompleted mechanical structure to ascertain what changes or additions may be necessary to make it accomplish the design of the proponent, or a trial of a completed machine to test or illustrate its practical efficiency. In the former case, the inventor's efforts, being incomplete, if they are then abandoned, will have no effect upon the right of the subsequent inventor; but if the experiment proves the capacity of the machine to effect what its inventor proposed, the law assigns to him the merit of having produced a complete invention. Northwestern Fire Extinguisher Co. v. Philadelphia Fire Extinguisher Co., 10 Phila. 227, 18 Fed.Cas. 394.

EXPERIMENTAL TESTIMONY. That of some witness who, after the commission of the crime, makes experiments for the purpose of ascertaining the effect of a certain act under certain conditions, and swears to such experiments. State v. Harlan, Mo.Sup., 240 S.W. 197, 201.

EXPERT EVIDENCE. Testimony given in relation to some scientific, technical, or professional matter by experts, i.e., persons qualified to speak authoritatively by reason of their special training, skill, or familiarity with the subject.

Evidence of persons who are skilled in some art, science, profession, or business, which skill or knowledge is not common to their fellow men, and which has come to such experts by reason of special study and experience in such art, science, profession, or business. Culver v. Prudential Ins. Co. of America, 6 W.W.Harr. 582, 179 A. 400.

Opinion by qualified person on facts already proved involving scientific or technical knowledge, and not evidence of thing done or measurement taken which any one is competent to prove. Crichton v. Krouse, La.App., 150 So. 443, 445; Allen v. Tex. & N. O. R. Co., Tex.Civ.App., 70 S.W.2d 758, 763.

Opinion of witness possessing peculiar knowledge, wisdom, skill or information regarding subject matter under consideration, acquired by study, investigation, observation, practice or experience and not likely to be possessed by ordinary layman or inexperienced person. Baker v. Kansas City Public Service Co., 353 Mo. 625, 183 S.W.2d 873, 875; Ambruster v. Levitt Realty & Investment Co., 341 Mo. 364, 107 S.W.2d 74, 79.

Such as is given on questions of science, skill, or trade by persons learned or experienced therein. Langford v. State, 124 Tex.Cr.R. 473, 63 S.W.2d 1027.

Schwartz, 146 Okl. 250, 293 P. 1087, 1090; one skilled in any particular art, trade, or profession, being possessed of peculiar knowledge concerning the same, and one who has given subject in question particular study, practice, or observation. Hardy v. Dahl, 210 N.C. 530, 187 S.E. 788, 790; one who by habits of life and business has peculiar skill in forming opinion on subject in dispute, Robertson v. /Etna Life Ins. Co., 37 Ga.App. 703, 141 S.E. 504, 505; Sims v. State, 40 Ga.App. 10, 148 S.E. 769, 771; one who can see all sides of a subject, Kentucky & West Virginia Power Co. v. Howes, 246 Ky. 843, 56 S.W.2d 539.

Persons selected by the court or parties in a cause, on account of their knowledge or skill, to examine, estimate, and ascertain things and make a report of their opinions. Merlin, Repert.

Persons who are professionally acquainted with some science or are skilled in some art or trade, or who have experience or knowledge in relation to matters which are not generally known to the people. Miller v. State, 9 Okd.Cr. 255, 131 P. 717, 718, L.R.A.1915A, 1088.

EXPILARE. In the civil law. To spoil; to rob and ascertain things and make a report of their knowledge or skill, to examine, estimate, Gibson, 194 N.C. 289, 139 S.E. 443, 445, 54 A.L.R. 885.

EXPILATOR. In the civil law. A robber; a spoiler or plunderer. Expiratores sunt atrociores fures. Dig. 47, 18, 1, 1.

The term "expiration," as in an insurance policy, refers to termination of the policy by lapse of time covering the policy period, while "cancellation" refers to termination of the policy by act of either or both parties prior to ending of the policy period. Beha v. Breger, 223 N.Y.S. 726, 731, 130 Misc.Rep. 235; Hanson v. Royal Ins. Co., C.C.A.Tenn., 257 F. 715, 716.

EXPIRATION OF CREDIT. As used in statute, refers to expiration of additional period of grace or credit extension accorded the debtor. Fleshman v. Whiteside, 148 Or. 73, 34 P.2d 648, 650, 93 A.L.R. 1456.

EXPIRATION OF PERIOD FOR REDEMPTION. As used in statute concerning conveyance of title by tax deed, it means time of application for tax deed. Hartman v. Mimmack, 116 Mont. 392, 154 P.2d 279, 281.

EXPIRE. Where term of lease has ended, either by lapse of time or by limitation, it has expired. Burner Corporation v. Uneeda Pure Orange Drink Co., 132 Misc. 435, 230 N.Y.S. 239, 246.

EXPIRY OF THE LEGAL. In Scotch law and practice. Expiration of the period within which an adjudication may be redeemed, by paying the debt in the decree of adjudication. Bell; 3 Jurid. Styles, 3d ed. 1107.

EXPLEES. See Esplees.

EXPLETA, EXPLETIA, or EXPLECIA. In old records. The rents and profits of an estate.

EXPLICATIO. In the civil law. The fourth pleading; equivalent to the surrejoinder of the common law. Calvin.

EXPLICIT. Not obscure or ambiguous, having no disguised meaning or reservation. Eclipse Lumber Co. v. Biltter, 213 Iowa 1313, 241 N.W. 696, 698.

EXPLORATION. In mining law. The examination and investigation of land supposed to contain valuable minerals, by drilling, boring, sinking shafts, driving tunnels, and other means, for the purpose of discovering the presence of ore and its extent. Colvin v. Weimer, 64 Minn. 37, 65 N.W. 1079.

EXPLORATOR. A scout, huntsman, or chaser.

A sudden and rapid combustion, causing violent expansion of the air, and accompanied by a report. United Life, Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Foote, 22 Ohio St. 348, 10 Am. Rep. 735; Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. Empire Coal Mining Co., C.C.A.Colo., 30 F.2d 794, 798. In the common acceptance of the term, it includes the sudden bursting or breaking up from an internal or other force, and is not limited to cases caused by combustion or fire. American Paper Products Co. v. Continental Ins. Co., 208 Mo.App. 87, 225 S.W. 1029, 1030. The ordinary idea is that the explosion is the cause, while the rupture is the effect. Mitchell v. Ins. Co., 183 U.S. 42, 22 S.Ct. 22, 46 L. Ed. 74.

Sudden release of pressure such as disruption of steam boiler, Travellers' Indemnity Co. v. B. & B. Ice & Coal Co., 248 Ky. 443, 58 S.W.2d 640.

The word "explosion" is variously used in ordinary speech, and is not one that admits of exact definition. Every combustion of an explosive substance, whereby other property is ignited and consumed, would not be an "explosion," within the ordinary meaning of the term. It is not used as a synonym of "combustion." An explosion may be described generally as a sudden and rapid combustion, causing violent expansion of the air, and accompanied by a report. The rapidity of the combustion, the violence of the expansion, and the vehemence of the report vary in intensity as often as the occurrences multiply. Hence an explosion is an idea of degrees; and the true meaning of the word, in each particular case, must be settled, not by any fixed standard or accurate measurement, but by the common experience and notions of men in matters of that sort. Insurance Co. v. Foote, 22 Ohio St. 348, 10 Am.Rep. 735. And see Insurance Co. v. Dorsey, 56 Md. 81, 40 Am.Rep. 403; Louisville Underwriters v. Durland, 123 Ind. 544, 24 N.E. 221, 7 L.R.A. 399.

The word "explosion," when used in a fire policy, is that which ordinary men, not scientists, understand an explosion to be. Roma Wine Co. v. Hardware Mut. Fire Ins. Co. of Minnesota, 31 Cal.App.2d 455, 88 P.2d 260, 262.

EXPLOSION OF ANY KIND. Under fire policy exempting insurer from liability, phrase refers not to agency producing explosion, but to kinds of material which explode. McDonnell v. Royal Ins. Co., 98 Mont. 572, 40 P.2d 1005, 1006.

EXPLOSIVE. Any substance by whose decomposition or combustion gas is generated with such rapidity that it can be used for blasting or in fire-arms. Schwartz v. Northern Life Ins. Co., C.C. A.Cal., 25 F.2d 555, 559.

"Explosive" is compound or mixture susceptible of explosive chemical reaction, as gunpowder or nitroglycerine, and has been construed not to cover specific things which do explode or contain explosive material. Henderson v. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co., 337 Mo. 1, 84 S.W.2d 922, 925.

EXPORT, v. To carry or to send abroad. Tennes-see Oil Co. v. McCanless, 178 Tenn: 683, 157 S.W. 2d 267, 271, 272. To send, take, or carry an article of trade or commerce out of the country. To transport merchandise from one country to another in the course of trade. To carry out or convey goods by sea. State v. Turner, 5 Har., Del., 501.

Transportation of goods from United States to foreign country. West India Oil Co. v. Sancho, C.C.A.Puerto Rico, 108 F.2d 144, 147.

"Export," in its primary sense, means to carry or send out of a place, and in secondary sense means to carry from one state or country. McKesson & Robbins v. Collins, 18 Cal.App.2d 648, 64 P.2d 469, 470.

While the word export technically includes the landing in as well as the shipment to a foreign country, it is often used as meaning only the shipment from this country. U. S. v. Chavez, 228 U.S. 525, 33 S.Ct. 595, 57 L.Ed. 950.

EXPORT, n. A thing or commodity exported. More commonly used in the plural.

In American law, this term is only used of goods carried to foreign countries, not of goods transported from one state to another. Swan v. U. S., 190 U.S. 143, 23 S.Ct. 702, 47 L.Ed. 984; Rothermel v. Meyerle, 136 Pa. 250, 20 A. 583, 9 L.R.A. 366.

EXPORTATION. A severance of goods from mass of things belonging to United States with intention of uniting them to mass of things belonging to some foreign country. U. S. v. Hill, C.C.A.N.Y., 34 F.2d 133, 135. The act of sending or carrying goods and merchandise from one country to another.

EXPOSE, v. To show publicly; to display; to offer to the public view; as, to "expose" goods to sale, to "expose" a tariff or schedule of rates, to "expose" the person. Comm. v. Byrnes, 158 Mass. 172, 33 N.E. 343; Adams Exp. Co. v. Schlessinger, 75 Pa. 246. To "expose for sale" means to keep and show for the purpose of selling. State v. Hogan, 212 Mo.App. 473, 252 S.W. 90; to have in stock. People ex rel. Goldstein v. Glass, 154 Misc. 569, 278 N.Y.S. 764.

To place in a position where the object spoken of is open to danger, on where it is near or accessible to anything which may affect it detrimentally; as, to "expose" a child, or to expose oneself or another to a contagious disease or to danger or hazard of any kind. EXPRESSION COMMON-LAW DEDICATION. See Dedication.

A common carrier that carries at regular and stated times, over fixed and regular routes, money and other valuable packages, which cannot be conveniently or safely carried as common freight; and also other articles and packages of any description which the shipper desires or the nature of the article requires should have safe and rapid transit and quick delivery, transporting the same in the immediate charge of its own messenger on passenger steamers and express and passenger railway trains, which it does not own or operate, but with the owners of which it contracts for the carriage of its messengers and freights. Pacific Exp. Co. v. Seibert, C.C.Mo., 44 F. 310.

EXPRESSION DISSATISFACTION. Where will declares that any one expressing dissatisfaction with its provisions should forfeit his interest, "dissatisfaction" is legally "expressed" when beneficiary contests or objects in legal proceeding to enforcement of any provision of will. In re Hickman's Estate, 308 Pa. 230, 162 A. 168, 169.

EXPRESSION PRIVATE TRUST. See Trust.

EXPRESSION REPEAL. Abrogation or annulment of previously existing law by enactment of subsequent statute declaring that former law shall be revoked or abrogated. Brockman v. Board of Directors of Jefferson County Bridge Dist., 188 Ark. 396, 66 S.W.2d 619. A repeal of statute is "ex-
EXPRESSIO UNIUS EST EXCLUSIO ALTERI. The expression of one thing is the exclusion of another. Fazio v. 2 Pars. Contr. 28; 4 Co. 73; Andr. Steph. P1. 366; Hob. 170; in a law, contract, or will, an intention to exclude all others from its operation may be inferred. Little v. Town of Conway, 171 S.C. 27, 170 S.E. 447, 448.

A man's own words are void, when the law speaketh as much. Finch, b. 1, c. 36. Words used to exclude all others from its operation may be inferred. People v. One 1941 Ford 8 Stake Truck, Engine No. 99T370053, License No. P.8410, Cal., 159 P.2d 641, 642.

Under this maxim, if statute speaks one exception to a general rule, it is to be considered as excluding that which is not expressed. McLean v. Commissioner, 347 N.Y.S. 689, 690. Where certain persons or things are specified, other exceptions or effects are excluded, People v. One 1941 Ford 8 Stake Truck, Engine No. 99T370053, License No. P.8410, Cal., 159 P.2d 641, 642.

EXPRESSIA NON PROSUNT QUIE NON EXPRESSA PRODERUNT. 4 Coke, 73. The expression or express mention of those things which are tacitly availed of nothing. 2 Inst. 365. Words used to exclude all others from its operation may be inferred. Little v. Town of Conway, 171 S.C. 27, 170 S.E. 447, 448.

Expressa non prosunt qui e silentibus nos traduntur. 5 Coke, 11; Broom, Max. 669, 753; Words used to exclude all others from its operation may be inferred. Little v. Town of Conway, 171 S.C. 27, 170 S.E. 447, 448.

Words used to exclude all others from its operation may be inferred. Little v. Town of Conway, 171 S.C. 27, 170 S.E. 447, 448.

Express and implied covenants are enforceable. Butcher v. Walker, 308 Mich. 175, 242 N.W. 765. Where an agreement is expressed, it is to be considered as excluding that which is not expressed. People v. One 1941 Ford 8 Stake Truck, Engine No. 99T370053, License No. P.8410, Cal., 159 P.2d 641, 642.

A man's own words are void, when the law speaketh as much. Finch, b. 1, c. 36. Words used to exclude all others from its operation may be inferred. People v. One 1941 Ford 8 Stake Truck, Engine No. 99T370053, License No. P.8410, Cal., 159 P.2d 641, 642.

Where a law sets down plainly its whole meaning the court is prevented from making it mean what the court pleases. Munro v. City of Albuquerque, 48 N.M. 306, 150 P.2d 731. A meaning has been attached to the term, imported from French law.

EXPROPRIATION. This word primarily denotes a voluntary surrender of rights or claims; the act of divesting oneself of that which was previously owned; the act of renouncing it. In this sense it is the opposite of appropriation. "Proprity is the opposite of appropriation." Halsbury, Laws of England.

A meaning has been attached to the term, imported from French law. Expropriation is the compulsory realization of a debt by the creditor out of the lands of his debtor. French Law.

In the civil law, they differ from a surety, inasmuch as this contracts the debt of another, and becomes solely the debtor, who becomes bound instead of the old, the latter being released. 1 Bouv.Inst. no. 802. Expropriation is the compulsory realization of a debt by the creditor out of the lands of his debtor. French Law.

EXPRESSUM SERVITUM REGAT VEL DESEDAE RERUM. In the civil law. The species expressed, means stated or declared in direct terms, set forth in words; not left to inference or implication. Anderson v. Board of Education, 567.

EXPRESSUUM, NON EXPRESSA, PROPRIUM, MANOETERIUM. In the civil law. To underwrite a contract, or will, an intention to exclude all others from its operation may be inferred. Little v. Town of Conway, 171 S.C. 27, 170 S.E. 447, 448.

A man's own words are void, when the law speaketh as much. Finch, b. 1, c. 36. Words used to exclude all others from its operation may be inferred. Little v. Town of Conway, 171 S.C. 27, 170 S.E. 447, 448.

Words used to exclude all others from its operation may be inferred. Little v. Town of Conway, 171 S.C. 27, 170 S.E. 447, 448.

Expressa non prosunt qui e silentibus nos traduntur. 5 Coke, 11; Broom, Max. 669, 753; Words used to exclude all others from its operation may be inferred. Little v. Town of Conway, 171 S.C. 27, 170 S.E. 447, 448.

Words used to exclude all others from its operation may be inferred. Little v. Town of Conway, 171 S.C. 27, 170 S.E. 447, 448.

A man's own words are void, when the law speaketh as much. Finch, b. 1, c. 36. Words used to exclude all others from its operation may be inferred. Little v. Town of Conway, 171 S.C. 27, 170 S.E. 447, 448.

Words used to exclude all others from its operation may be inferred. Little v. Town of Conway, 171 S.C. 27, 170 S.E. 447, 448.

A meaning has been attached to the term, imported from French law. Expropriation is the compulsory realization of a debt by the creditor out of the lands of his debtor. French Law.
or the usufruct thereof. When the debtor is cotenent with others, it is necessary that a partition should first be made. It is confined, in the first place, to the lands (if any) that are in hypothèque, but afterwards extends to the lands not in hypothèque. Moreover, the debt must be of a liquidated amount. Brown.

EXPULSION. A putting or driving out. Ejectment; banishment; a cutting off from the privileges of an institution or society permanently. John B. Stetson University v. Hunt, 88 Fla. 510, 102 So. 637, 639. The act of depriving a member of a corporation, legislative body, assembly, society, commercial organization, etc., of his membership in the same, by a legal vote of the body itself, for breach of duty, improper conduct, or other sufficient cause. New York Protective Ass'n v. McGrath, Super.Ct., 5 N.Y.S. 10; Palmetto Lodge v. Hubbell, 2 Strob., S.C., 462, 49 Am. Dec. 604. Also, in the law of torts and of landlord and tenant, an eviction or forcible putting out. See Expel.

“Separation” from a church by reason of a schism is not like “expulsion” or “excommunication,” which terms necessarily involve involuntary and compulsory separation of members. Lindstrom v. Tell, 131 Minn. 203, 154 N.W. 969, 971.

EXPUNGE. Means to destroy or obliterate; it necessarily involve involuntary and compulsory separation of members. Andrews v. Police Court of City of Stockton, Cal. App., 123 P.2d 128, 129. To blot out; to efface designedly; to obliterate; to strike out wholly. Webster. See Cancel.

EXPURGATION. The act of purging or cleansing, as where a book is published without its obscene passages.

EXPURGATOR. One who corrects by expurgating.

EXQUISTOR. In Roman law. One who had filled the office of questor. A title given to Tribonian. Inst. proem. § 3. Used only in the ablative case, (exquestore.)

EXROGARE. (From ex, from, and rogare, to pass a law.) In Roman law. To take something from an old law by a new law. Tayl. Civil Law, 155.

EXTEND. Lends itself to great variety of meanings, which must in each case be gathered from context. Blouch v. Stevens, 106 N.J.L. 488, 150 A. 581, 583.

It may mean to broaden the application or action of, Meyering v. Miller, 33 Mo. 885, 51 S.W.2d 65, 66; to carry forward, Loeffier v. Federal Supply Co., 187 Okl. 373, 102 P.2d 862, 864; to cause to reach or continue as from point to point. Henderson Development Co. v. United Fuel Gas Co., 121 W.Va. 284, 3 S.E.2d 217, 219; to expand, enlarge, prolong, lengthen, widen, carry out, further than the original limit; as, to extend the time for filing an answer, to extend a lease, term of office, charter, railroad track, etc., State v. Armstrong, 31 N.M. 220, 243 P.335, 345; lesser, Goldman Cotton Co. v. Cache River Drainage Dist., 174 Ark. 160, 294 S.W. 711, 713; State v. Scott, 113 Mo. 559, 20 S.W. 1076; Moers v. Reading, 21 Pa. 201; Keetch v. Cordner, 90 Utah 423, 62 P.2d 273, 277, 108 A.L.R. 52; to give as a privilege, Tantum v. Keller, 95 N.E. Eq. 466, 123 A. 299, 301, 302; to give wider range, State ex rel. Berhot v. Gallatin County High School Dist., 102 Mont. 356, 58 P.2d 264, 266; to make more comprehensive or capricious, Meyering v. Miller, 33 Mo. 885, 51 S.W.2d 65, 66; Keetch v. Cordner, 90 Utah 423, 62 P.2d 273, 277, 108 A.L.R. 52; to stretch out or to draw out: Crane Enamelware Co. v. Smith, 168 Tenn. 203, 76 S.W.2d 644; Loeffier v. Federal Supply Co., 187 Okl. 373, 102 P.2d 862, 864.

To extend a charter is to give one which now exists greater or longer time to operate in than that to which it was originally limited. Fidelity & Columbia Trust Co. v. Louisville Ry. Co., 258 Ky. 817, 81 S.W.2d 896, 900.

To “extend” a lease or contract is not necessarily the same as “renew,” for a stipulation to renew requires the making of a new lease, while one to extend does not. Sanders v. Wender, 205 Ky. 422, 265 S.W. 939, 941. See, also, Nenzel v. Rochester Silver Corporation, 48 Nev. 41, 226 P. 1102, 1105; Livingston Waterworks v. City of Livingston, 53 Mont. 1, 162 P. 381, 383, L.R.A.1917D, 1074; Buckland v. Tarble, 95 Vt. 87, 112 A. 217, 218. But whether a clause in a lease is a covenant of renewal or an agreement for an extension depends on the parties’ intention and the use of the word “renewal,” Freihart v. Broch, 98 Conn. 166, 118 A. 828, 829; and the two terms may be used practically synonymously: American Press v. City of St. Louis, 314 Mo. 288, 284 S.W. 482, 486; Orr v. Doubleday, 119 Cal. 1012, 1017, 49 Cal. Inst. proem. § 3. To execute a clause in a lease does not necessarily mean the same, as “renew,” but context may show intent that the words be given a similar meaning. Candler v. S. & L. Co., 168 Ga. 276, 147 S.E. 552, 554.

To extend a street means to prolong and continue it in the direction in which it already points, but does not include deflecting it from the course of the existing portion. In re Charlotte St., 23 Pa. 288; Seattle & M. Ry. Co. v. State, 7 Wash. 150, 34 P. 551, 22 L.R.A. 217.

English Practice

To value the lands or tenements of a person bound by a statute or recognition which has become forfeited, to their full extended value. 3 Bl.Comm. 420; Fitzh.Nat.Brev. 131. To execute the writ of extent or extendi facias (q. v.). 2 Tidd, Pr. 1043, 1044.

Taxation

Extending a tax consists in adding to the assessment roll the precise amount due from each person whose name appears thereon. “The subjects for taxation having been properly listed, and a basis for apportionment established, nothing will remain to fix a definite liability but to extend upon the list or roll the several proportionate amounts, as a charge against the several taxables.” Cooley, Tax’n, 2d Ed., 423.

EXTENDED. A lengthening out of time previously fixed and not the arbitrary setting of a new date. In re Parent, D.C.N.H., 30 F.Supp. 943, 945, Stretched, spread, or drawn out. Rathbone v. State Board of Land Com’rs of Montana, 100 Mont. 109, 47 P.2d 47, 49.

As used in constitutional inhibition against extending provisions of statute the reference to its title only, has reference to an attempt to add something to text of pre-existing law. Hollis & Co. v. McCarron, 200 Ark. 523, 140 S.W.2d 420, 422.

EXTENDED INSURANCE. An option to use dividend to procure extended insurance is one to procure extension of term of insurance from date 693 to which premiums have been paid, without further payment. Williams v. Union Central Life Ins. Co., Tex., 291 U.S. 170, 54 S.Ct. 348, 78 L.Ed. 711, 92 A.L.R. 693.

EXTENDED LEASE. An "extended lease" is merely enlarged upon all the terms and conditions of the instrument, while a "renewed lease" is a new lease. Rathbone v. State Board of Land Com’rs of Montana, 100 Mont. 109, 47 P.2d 47, 49.

EXTENDI FACIAS. Lat. You cause to be extended. In English practice. The name of a writ of execution, (derived from its two emphatic words;) more commonly called an "extent." 2 Tidd, Pr. 1043; 4 Steph.Comm. 43.

EXTENDING as used in agreement to extend railroad siding at point of termination signified making connection with. Blouch v. Stevens, 106 N.J.L. 488, 150 A. 581, 582.

Renewal of paper is not a loan but an extension of time for payment. McRoberts v. Spaulding, D.C.Iowa, 32 F.2d 315, 318.

The word "extension" ordinarily implies the existence of something to be extended. State v. Graves, 352 Mo. 1102, 182 S.W.2d 46, 51.

Bankruptcy
An extension proposal is an agreement on part of creditors that they will extend time within which their claims are probably to be paid. In full as to secured creditors, on terms proposed by debtor and approved by court. Heldstab v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of United States, C.C.A. Kan., 91 F.2d 655, 658.

"Extension" under Bankruptcy Act is proceeding wherein debtor merely obtains extension of time within which to pay in full. In re Thompson, D.C.Va., 51 F.Supp. 12, 14.

Proposal under which debts which were not settled in full but were merely extended in time for ultimate payment in full was an "extension proposal". Mullican v. Texas Land & Mortgage Co., C.C.A.Tex., 117 F.2d 576, 578.

Carrier’s Lines
Tracks over which there are to be train movements in the sense that such movements are a part of the actual transportation haul from shipper to the oonsignee. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Chicago Great Western R. Co., 137 Kan. 217, 19 P.2d 484, 489.

Lease
An option for renewal implies giving of new lease on same terms as old lease, while an option for extension contemplates a continuance of old lease for a further period. Mutual Paper Co. v. Hosque-Sprague Corporation, 297 Mass. 294, 9 N.E.2d 802, 806.

"Renewal" and "extension," as used in leases with reference to options for renewal or for extension, are synonymous. Economy Stores v. Moran, 178 Miss. 62, 172 So. 865, 867.

The distinction between "extension" and "renewal" of lease is chiefly that, in the case of renewal, a new lease is requisite, while, in the case of extension, the same lease continues in force during additional period upon performance of stipulated act. Carrano v. Shoor, 118 Conn. 86, 171 A. 17, 20.

The word "extension," when used in its proper and usual sense in connection with a lease, means a prolongation Di the previous leasehold estate. Talbot v. Redinallogh Co., 283 Mass. 225, 186 N.E. 273, 275.

Mercantile Law
An allowance of additional time for the payment of debts. An agreement between a debtor and his creditors, by which they allow him further time for the payment of his liabilities. A creditor’s indulgence by giving a debtor further time to pay an existing debt. State v. Mestayer, 144 La. 601, 80 So. 891, 892. Among the French, a similar agreement is known by the name of attermoiement. Merlin, Repert. mot Attermoiement.

Patent Law
An extension of the life of a patent for an additional period of seven years, formerly allowed by law in the United States, upon proof being made that the inventor had not succeeded in obtaining a reasonable remuneration from his patent-right. This is no longer allowed, except as to designs. See Rev.St.U.S. § 4924.

EXTENSION OF PAYMENT. To constitute “extension of payment” of obligation which would release sureties, there must be agreement between obligor and obligee supported by consideration by which obligee has precluded himself from taking action against obligor during period of extension. O’Banion v. Willis, 14 La.App. 638, 129 So. 440, 441.

EXTENSION OR RENEWAL OF NOTE. Takes place when parties agree upon valuable consideration for maturity of debt on day subsequent to that provided in original contract. Elk Horn Bank & Trust Co. v. Spraggins, 182 Ark. 27, 30 S.W.2d 858, 859.

EXTENSIVE. Widely extended in space, time, or scope; great or wide or capable of being extended. American Cannel Coal Co. v. Indiana Cotton Mills, 78 Ind.App. 115, 134 N.E. 891, 893.

EXTENSIVE RAINFALL is not same as "extraordinary rainfall," for which damages could not be recovered; word "extensive" being applicable to area embraced in circumference of particular rainfall, but not implying necessarily rainfall out of ordinary. Johnson v. Ratliff, 233 Ky. 187, 25 S.W.2d 355, 356. See Extraordinary Rainfall.

EXTENSORES. In old English law. Extenders or appraisers.

The name of certain officers appointed to appraise and divide or apportion lands. It was their duty to make a survey, schedule, or inventory of the lands, to lay them out under certain heads, and then to ascertain the value of each, as preparatory to the division or partition. Bract. fols. 72b, 75; Brit. c. 71.

A writ of execution issuing from the exchequer upon a debt due the crown, or upon a debt due a private person, if upon recognizance or statute merchant or staple, by which the sheriff is directed to appraise the debtor's lands, and, instead of selling them, to set them off to the creditor for a term during which the rental will satisfy the judgment. Hackett v. Amsden, 56 Vt. 201; Nason v. Fowler, 70 N.H. 291, 47 A. 263. It is so called because the sheriff is to cause the lands to be appraised at their full extended value before he delivers them to the plaintiff. Fitzh.N.B. 131. The term is sometimes used in the various states of the United States to denote writs which give the creditor possession of the debtor's lands for a limited time till the debt be paid. Roberts v. Whiting, 16 Mass. 186.

Scotch Practice

The rents, profits, and issues of lands. Skene.

For "Manorial Extent," see that title.

EXTENT IN AID. That kind of extent which issues at the instance and for the benefit of a debtor to the crown, for the recovery of a debt due to himself. 2 Tidd, Pr. 1045; 4 Steph.Comm. 47. This writ was much abused, owing to some peculiar privileges possessed by crown-debtors, and its use was regulated by Stat. 57 Geo. III. c. 117. See 3 Bla.Comm. 419. The writ used by a debtor of the king against his debtor to enforce the right of preference given to him because of his indebtedness to the king. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Carter, 161 Va. 381, 170 S.E. 764, 768, 90 A.L.R. 191.

EXTENT IN CHIEF. A summary process by which the king's action was commenced against his debtor and his body, personal property (tangible and intangible), and lands at once seized for the satisfaction of the king's debt. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Carter, 161 Va. 381, 170 S.E. 764, 768, 90 A.L.R. 191. The principal kind of extent, issuing at the suit of the crown, for the recovery of the crown's debt. 4 Steph.Comm. 47. An adverse proceeding by the king, for the recovery of his own debt. 2 Tidd, Pr. 1045.

EXTENT OF SUCH PAYMENT. Under statute extending right of subrogation to Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, phrase "to the extent of such payment" is equivalent to term "pro tanto" or words "as to the portion of the deposit paid". Federal Deposit Ins. Corporation v. Citizens State Bank of Niangua, C.C.A.Mo., 130 F.2d 102, 103.

EXTENTA MANERH. (The extent or survey of a manor.) The title of a statute passed 4 Edw. I. St. 1; being a sort of direction for making a survey or terrier of a manor, and all its appendages. 2 Reeve, Eng.Law, 140.

EXTENUATE. To lessen; to palliate; to mitigate. Connell v. State, 46 Tex.Cr.R. 259, 81 S.W. 748.

EXTENUATING CIRCUMSTANCES. Such as render a delict or crime less aggravated, heinous, or reprehensible than it would otherwise be, or tend to palliate or lessen its guilt. Such circumstances may ordinarily be shown in order to reduce the punishment or damages.

EXTENUATION. That which renders a crime or tort less heinous than it would be without it. It is opposed to aggravation.

EXTERIOR. As used in policy means on the outside, external, pertaining to the outside part, Northwestern Casualty & Surety Co. v. Barzune, Tex.Civ.App., 42 S.W.2d 100, 103; the surface outside, Jackson Steam Laundry v. J.Etna Casualty & Surety Co., 156 Miss. 649, 126 So. 478, 480.

The phrase "exterior of the building" as used in a lease of a building adjacent to another building, each having its own wall, the two against each other forming a solid double wall, means co-extensive with its external parts and including the four walls. B. Siegel Co. v. Codd, 183 Mich. 145, 149 N.W. 1015, 1017.

EXTERNAL. Apparent, outward, visible from the outside, capable of being perceived. Toliver v. Massachusetts Bonding & Insurance Co., Mo. App., 47 S.W.2d 140, 141. Outward; exterior; relating to the outside, as of the body; really being without; acting from without, as the external surface of a body; and outwardly; perceptible, visible; physical or corporeal; as distinguished from mental or moral. Provident Life & Accident Ins. Co. v. Campbell, 18 Tenn.App. 452, 79 S.W.2d 292, 296.

EXTERNAL, VIOLENT AND ACCIDENTAL MEANS. Death through "external, violent and accidental means" necessarily implies that death did not result indirectly from disease or bodily infirmity. Mutual Life Ins. Co. of New York v. Hassing, C.C.A.10, 134 F.2d 714, 716.

EXTERRITORIALITY. The privilege of those persons (such as foreign ministers) who, though temporarily resident within a state, are not subject to the operation of its laws. The exemption from the operation of the ordinary laws of the state accorded to foreign monarchs temporarily within the state and their retinue, to diplomatic agents and the members of their household, to consuls in non-Christian states, and to foreign men of war in port. 1 Opp. 460-469. See Capitulation; Extraterritoriality.

EXTERUS. Lat. A foreigner or alien; one born abroad. The opposite of civis.

EXTERUS NON HABET TERRAS. An alien holds no lands. Tray.Lat.Max. 203.

EXTINCT. Extinguished. A rent is said to be extinguished when it is destroyed and put out. Co.Litt. 147b. See Extinguishment.

EXTINCTO SUBJECTO, TOLLITUR ADJUNCTUM. When the subject [or substance] is extinguished, the incident [or adjunct] ceases. Thus, when the business for which a partnership has been formed is completed, or brought to an end, the partnership itself ceases. Inst. 3, 26, 6; 3 Kent, Comm. 52, note; Griswold v. Waddington, 16 Johns., N.Y., 438, 492.

EXTINGUISH. To put an end to. Onondaga Water Service Corporation v. Crown Mills, Inc., 132

EXTINGUISHMENT. The destruction or cancellation of a right, power, contract, or estate. The annihilation of a collateral thing or subject in the subject itself out of which it is derived. Prest. Merg. 9. For the distinction between an extin-ğuishment and passing a right, see 2 Shars.Bl. Comm. 325, note.

"Extinguishment" is sometimes confounded with "merger," though there is a clear distinction between them. "Merger" is only a mode of extinguishment, and applies to estates only under particular circumstances; but "extin-ğuishment" is a term of general application to rights, as well as estates. 2 Crabb, Real Prop. p. 367, § 1487. "Extin-ğuishment" connotes the end of a thing, precluding the existence of future life therein; in "mergers" there is a carrying on of the substance of the thing, except that it is merged into and becomes a part of a separate thing with a new identity. McRoberts v. McRoberts, 177 Okl. 156, 57 P.2d 1175, 1177.

EXTINGUISHMENT OF COMMON. Loss of the right to have common. This may happen from various causes. 2 Steph.Com. 41; Co.Litt. 280; 1 Bacon, Abr. 628; Cro.Eliz. 594.

EXTINGUISHMENT OF COPYHOLD. In English law. A copyhold is said to be extinguished when the freehold and copyhold interests unite in the same person and in the same right, which may be either by the copyhold interest coming to the freehold or by the freehold interest coming to the copyhold. 1 Crabb, Real Prop. p. 670, § 864; Hutt. 81; Cro.Eliz. 21; Wms.R.P. 287.

EXTINGUISHMENT OF DEBTS. This takes place by payment; by accord and satisfaction; by novation, or the substitution of a new debtor; by merger, when the creditor recovers a judgment or accepts a security of a higher nature than the original obligation; by a release; by the marriage of a female sole creditor with the debtor, or of an obligee with one of two joint obligors; and where one of the parties, debtor or creditor, makes the other his executor.

EXTINGUISHMENT OF LEGACY. This occurs in case the identical thing bequeathed is not in existence, or has been dissipated or so that it does not form part of the testator's estate, at the time of his death. Welch v. Welch, 147 Miss. 728, 113 So. 197, 198. See Ademption.

EXTINGUISHMENT OF RENT. If a person have a yearly rent of lands, and afterwards purchase those lands, so that he has as good an estate in the land as in the rent, the rent is extinguished. Termes de la Ley; Cowell; Co.Litt. 147. Rent may also be extinguished by conjunction of estates, by confirmation, by grant, by release, and by surrender. 1 Crabb, Real Prop. pp. 210-213, § 209.

EXTINGUISHMENT OF WAYS. This is usually effected by unity of possession. As if a man have a way over the close of another, and he purchase that close, the way is extinguished. 1 Crabb, Real Prop. p. 341., § 384; 2 Washb.Real Prop.

EXTIRPATION. In English law. A species of destruction or waste, analogous to estrepement. See Estrempement.

EXTIRPATIONE. A judicial writ, either before or after judgment, that lay against a person who, when a verdict was found against him for land, etc., maliciously overthrow any house or extirpat-

EXTOTCARE. In old records. To grub woodland, and reduce it to arable or meadow; "to stock up." Cowell.

EXTORSIVELY. A technical word used in indictments for extortion.

It is a sufficient averment of a corrupt intent, in an indictment for extortion, to allege that the defendant "extorsively" took the unlawful fee. Leeman v. State, 35 Ark. 438, 37 Am.Rep. 44. When a person is charged with extorsively taking, the very import of the word shows that he is not acquiring possession of his own, 4 Cox, Cr.Cas. 387. In North Carolina the crime may be charged without using this word, State v. Dickens, 2 N.C. 406.

EXTORT. To compel or coerce, as a confession or information by any means serving to overcome one's power of resistance, or making the confession or admission involuntary. Sutton v. Commonwealth, 207 Ky. 597, 269 S.W. 754, 757.

To gain by wrongful methods, to obtain. In an unlawful manner, to compel payments by means of threats of injury to person, property, or reputation. McKenzie v. State, 113 Neb. 576, 204 N.W. 60, 61; State v. Richards, 97 Wash. 587, 167 P. 47, 48. To take from unlawfully; to exact some-

To wrest from, to exact, to take under a claim of protection. Commonwealth v. Neubauer, 142 Pa.Super. 528, 16 A.2d 450, 452.

The natural meaning of the word "extort" is to obtain money or other valuable thing either by compulsion, by actual force, or by the force of motives applied to the will, and often more overpowering and irresistible than physical force. Com. v. O'Brien, 12 Cush., Mass., 90.

EXTERNAL OR OFFICH EX TORQUET QUOD NON EST DEBITUM, VEL SUPRA DEBITUIVI, VEL ANTE TEMPUS QUOD EST DEBITUM. 10 Coke, 102. Extortion is a crime when, by color of office, any person extorts that which is not due, or more than is due, or before the time when it is due.

It has also been defined as corrupt demanding or receiving by a person in office of a fee for services which should be performed gratuitously; or, where compensation is permissible, of a larger fee than the law justifies, or a fee not due, 2 Bish.Crim.Law. § 390; exaction of money by reason of oppressive conditions or circumstances, People v. Wel-ler, 237 N.Y. 316, 143 N.E. 205, 208, 38 A.L.R. 613; obtaining of property from another, with his consent, induced by wrongful use of force or fear, or under color of official right. And see State v. Logan, 104 La. 760, 29 So. 336; In re Remper, 51 S.D. 393, 216 N.W. 355, 359, 55 A.L.R. 1346; Lee v. State, 16 Ariz. 291, 145 F. 244, 246, Ann.Cas.1917B, 131; obtaining of property of another by threats to injure him and to destroy his property, State v. Phillips, 62 Idaho 656, 115 P.2d 418, 420. Taking or obtaining of anything due, 2 Bish.Crim.Law, § 390; exaction of money by reason of exercise of influence, and covers the obtaining of money or thing of value, whether by an officer or otherwise, United States v. Dunkley, D.C.Cal., 235 F. 1000, 1001. Unlawful taking by any officer, by color of his office, of any money or thing of value that is not due to him, or more than is due, or before it is due, 4 Bla.Comm.141; Com. v. Saulsbury, 152 Pa. 554, 25 A. 610; 1 Russ.Cr.* 144; 2 Bish.Cr.L. 390; U. S. v. Deaver, D.C.N.C., 14 F. 595; Bush v. State, 19 Ariz. 195, 168 P. 508, 509. Wrongful exaction of money or other valuable thing, either by compulsion, actual force, or by force of motives applied at will, Commonwealth v. Donoghue, 250 Ky. 343, 65 S.W.2d 3, 89 A.L.R. 819.

A taking under color of office is of essence of offense. La Tour v. Stone, 139 Fla. 681, 190 So. 709, 710. At common law, any oppression by color or pretense of right, and particularly and technically the exaction or unlawful taking by an officer of money or thing of value, by color of his office, either when none at all is due, or not so much is due, or when it is not yet due. Preston v. Bacon, 4 Conn. 480. See People v. Barondess, 16 N.Y.S. 12 A.2d 421.

A Latin preposition, occurring in many legal phrases, and meaning beyond, except, with-EXTRA TERRITORIUM JUS DICENTI IMPUNE NON PARETUR. One who exercises jurisdiction out of his territory is not obeyed with impunity. Dig. 2, 1, 20; Branch, Princ.; 10 Coke, 77; Story, Confl. Laws, § 539. He who exercises judicial authority beyond his proper limits cannot be obeyed with safety.

EXTRA VIAM. Outside the way. Where the defendant in trespass pleaded a right of way in justification, and the replication alleged that the trespass was committed outside the limits of the way claimed, these were the technical words to be used.

EXTRA VIRES. Beyond powers. See Ultra Vires.

EXTRA WORK. As used in connection with construction contract, means work done not required in performance of the contract, something done or furnished in addition to or in excess of the requirement of the contract. Kansas City Bridge Co. v. State, 61 S.D. 580, 250 N.W. 343; work entirely outside and independent of contract—something not required or contemplated in its performance. Bradshaw v. Wolfe City, Tex.Civ.App., 3 S.W.2d 527, 530; while additional work on the other hand, is usually work which results from a change or alteration in plans concerning work which has to be done under a contract. De Martini v. Elade Realty Corp., Co.Ct., 52 N.Y.S.2d 487, 489; such work may fairly be presumed to arise in the construction, and is within the contract, although not included in the plans and specifications. Wilson v. Salt Lake City, 52 Utah, 506, 174 P. 847, 850.

But in a sewer construction contract providing that the city engineer might make such changes in the lines, grades, and dimensions which do not entail any extra expense to the contractor, the word "extra" was deemed equivalent to additional work which was required in the performance of the contract, and not necessary to such performance in the sense that the contract could not have been carried out without it, but necessary in the sense that by means of it the contract could be more conveniently and beneficially performed in the interest of both parties thereto, and did not include work arising out of and entirely independent of the contract. City of Richmond v. Burton, 115 Va. 206, 78 S.E. 560, 563. See, also, Fetterolf v. S. & L. Const. Co., 161 N.Y.S. 549, 550, 175 App.Div. 177; McHugh v. City of Tacoma, 76 Wash. 127, 135 P. 1011, 1015.

Materials and labor not contemplated by the contract, but which are required by changes in the plans and specifications made after the contract had been entered into, are "extra work". Collins v. Hall, Tex.Civ.App., 161 S.W.2d 311, 314.

EXTRACT, v. To draw out or forth; to pull out from a fixed position. Webster.

To "extract" ore within the meaning of a royalty provision in a mining lease contemplates not only the removal of the ore from the mine and throwing it on a dump, but also the separation of the ore from the dirt and refuse in which it was found on the dump. Giersa v. Creech, Mo.App., 181 S.W. 588, 589.

EXTRACT, n. A portion or fragment of a writing. In Scotch law, the certified copy, by a clerk of a court, of the proceedings in an action carried on before the court, and of the judgment pronounced; containing also an order for execution or proceedings thereupon. Jacob; Whishaw.

EXTRACTA CURLE. In old English law. The issues or profits of holding a court, arising from the customary fees, etc.

EXTRADITION. The surrender by one state to another of an individual accused or convicted of an offense outside its own territory and within the territorial jurisdiction of the other, which, being competent to try and punish him, demands the surrender. Waller v. Jordan, 58 Ariz. 169, 118 P. 2d 450, 451.

The surrender of a criminal by a foreign state to which he has fled for refuge from prosecution to the state within whose jurisdiction the crime was committed, upon the demand of the latter state, in order that he may be dealt with according to its laws. Extradition may be accorded as a mere matter of comity, or may take place under treaty stipulations between the two nations. It also obtains as between the different states of the American Union. Terlinden v. Ames, 184 U.S. 270, 22 S.Ct. 484, 46 L. Ed. 534; Fong Yue Ting v. U. S., 149 U.S. 698, 13 S.Ct. 210, 37 L. Ed. 905.

Extradition between the states must be considered and defined to be a political duty of imperfect obligation, founded upon compact, and requiring each state to surrender one who, having violated the criminal laws of another state, has fled from its justice, and is found in the state from which he is demanded, on demand of the executive authority of the state from which he fled. Abbott.

—Extradition warrant. See Executive Warrant.

EXTRAHAZARDOUS. In the law of insurance. Characterized or attended by circumstances or conditions of special and unusual danger. Reynolds v. Insurance Co., 47 N.Y. 597; Russell v. Insurance Co., 71 Iowa 69, 32 N.W. 95.

EXTRAHURA. In old English law. An animal wandering or straying about, without an owner; an estray. Spelman.

EXTRAJUDICIAL. That which is done, given, or effected outside the course of regular judicial proceedings; not founded upon, or unconnected with, the action of a court of law; as extrajudicial evidence, an extrajudicial oath.

That which, though done in the course of regular judicial proceedings, is unnecessary to such proceedings, or interpolated, or beyond their scope; as an extrajudicial opinion, (dictum.) That which does not belong to the judge or his jurisdiction, notwithstanding which he takes cognizance of it.

EXTRAJUDICIAL CONFESSION. See Confession.

EXTRAJUDICIAL EVIDENCE is that which is used to satisfy private persons as to facts requiring proof.

EXTRAJUDICIAL OATH. One taken not in the course of judicial proceedings, or taken without any authority of law, though taken formally before a proper person. State v. Scatena, 84 Minn. 281, 87 N.W. 764.

EXTRAJUDICALLY. The testimony of an expert witness based upon information obtained "extrajudicially", which means in any other manner. than from evidence given in court, is objectionable. State v. David, 222 N.C. 242, 22 S.E.2d 633, 640.

EXTRALATERAL RIGHT. In mining law. The right of the owner of a mining claim duly located on the public domain to follow, and mine, any vein or lode the apex of which lies within the boundaries of his location on the surface, notwithstanding the course of the vein on its dip or downward direction may so far depart from the perpendicular as to extend beyond the planes which would be formed by the vertical extension downwards of the side lines of his location. See Rev.Stat. U.S. § 2322, 30 U.S.C.A. § 26.

EXTRAMURAL. As applied to the powers of a municipal corporation, its “extramural” powers are those exercised outside the corporate limits, as distinguished from “intramural” powers. State v. Port of Astoria, 79 Or. 1, 154 P. 399, 404.

EXTRANEOUS EVIDENCE. With reference to a contract, deed, will, or any writing, extraneous evidence is such as is not furnished by the document itself, but is derived from outside sources; the same as evidence aliunde. See, also, Aliunde.

EXTRANEOUS OFFENSE. Is one that is extra, beyond, or foreign to the offense for which the party is on trial. Ridinger v. State, 146 Tex. Cr.R. 286, 174 S.W.2d 319, 320.

EXTRANEOUS. Old English law. One foreign born; a foreigner. 7 Coke, 16.

Roman law. An heir not born in the family of the testator. Those of a foreign state. The same as alienus. Vicat; Du Cange.

EXTRANEOUS EST SUBDITUS QUI EXTRA TERRAM, i.e., POTESTATEM REGIS NATUS EST. 7 Coke, 16. A foreigner is a subject who is born out of the territory, e., government of the king.

EXTRAORDINARY. Out of the ordinary; exceeding the usual, average, or normal measure or degree; beyond or out of the common order or rule; not usual, regular, or of a customary kind; remarkable; uncommon; rare. Puget Sound Traction, Light & Power Co. v. Reynolds, D.C. Wash., 223 F. 371, 378; Courtney v. Ocean Accident & Guaranty Corporation, 346 Mo. 703, 142 S.W.2d 858, 861, 130 A.L.R. 234. The word is both comprehensive and flexible in meaning. Zollman v. Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co., 121 N.E. 135, 140, 70 Ind.App. 395.

Beyond or out of the common order or method; exceeding the ordinary degree; not ordinary; unusual; employed for an exceptional purpose or on a special occasion; as a noun it is defined as, something extraordinary; especially, an extraordinary expense or allowance; specifically (Eng.) any allowance made to troops beyond the customary gross paid. State v. Rogers, 142 Kan. 841, 52 P.2d 1185, 1195.

EXTRAORDINARY AVERAGE. A contribution by all the parties concerned in a mercantile voyage, either as to the vessel or cargo, toward a loss sustained by some of the parties in interest for the benefit of all. Wilson v. Cross, 33 Cal. 69.

EXTRAORDINARY CASE. “The extraordinary motions or cases contemplated by the statute are such as do not ordinarily occur in the transaction of human affairs; as, when a man has been convicted of murder, and it afterwards appears that the supposed deceased is still alive, or where one is convicted on the testimony of a witness who is subsequently found guilty of perjury in giving that testimony, or where there has been some providential cause, and cases of like character.” Herrington v. State, 32 Ga.App. 83, 123 S.E. 147, 148; Farmers’ Union Warehouse of Metter v. Boyd, 31 Ga.App. 104, 119 S.E. 542.

EXTRAORDINARY DANGER. In the law of master and servant, one not ordinarily incident to the service. Piorkowski v. A. Leschen & Sons Rope Co., 190 Mo.App. 597, 176 S.W. 258, 260.

EXTRAORDINARY DIVIDENDS. Cash disbursements by “wasting asset” companies are apportioned as “extraordinary dividends” where they represent, in part at least, distribution of proceeds of capital assets. In re Nirdlinger’s Estate, 327 Pa. 160, 193 A. 33.

“Extraordinary dividends” may assume unusual form and amount, paid at irregular intervals from accumulated surplus or earnings. In re Nirdlinger’s Estate, 327 Pa. 160, 193 A. 33.

EXTRAORDINARY EXPENSES. This term in a constitutional provision that the state may incur indebtedness for extraordinary expenses, means other than ordinary expenses and such as are incurred by the state for the promotion of the general welfare, compelled by some unforeseen condition which is not regularly provided for by law, such as flood, famine, fire, earthquake, pestilence, war, or any other condition that will compel the state to put forward its highest endeavors to protect the people, their property, liberty, or lives. State v. Davis, 113 Kan. 4, 213 P. 171, 172.

EXTRAORDINARY FLOOD. One of those unexplained visitations whose comings are not foreseen by the usual course of nature, Jensen v. Buffalo Drainage Dist. of Cloud County, 148 Kan. 712, 84 P.2d 961, 965; and whose magnitude and destructiveness could not have been anticipated or provided against by the exercise of ordinary foresight. Eikland v. Casey, C.C.A.Alaska, 266 F. 821, 823, 12 A.L.R. 179; Clements v. Phoenix Utility Co., 119 Kan. 190, 237 P. 1062, 1065.

One of such unusual occurrence that it could not have been foreseen by men of ordinary experience and prudence.
EXTRAORDINARY

EXTRAORDINARY RISK. If hazards are increased by what other servants do, and injured servant has no part in increasing them, they are "extraordinary". Stone v. Howe, 92 N.H. 425, 32 A.2d 484, 487.

As respects assumption of risks, an "extraordinary risk" is not one which is uncommon or unusual in the sense that it is rare, but is one which arises out of unusual conditions not resulting in the ordinary course of business, as by reason of the master's negligence, Leyba v. Albuquerque & Cerrillos Coal Co., 22 N.M. 455, 164 P. 823, 825; Houston Lighting & Power Co., 1905 v. Conley, Tex.Civ.App., 171 S.W. 561, 563; it is a risk arising from the master's negligence, Simowitz v. Register, 60 Ga.App. 180, 3 S.E.2d 231, 233; it is a risk which may be obviated by exercise of reasonable care on master's part. Tyner v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 149 S.C. 89, 146 S.E. 663, 670. A servant does not assume "extraordinary risks" unless they are known to and appreciated by him, or are so obvious that ordinarily prudent person under circumstances would have observed and appreciated them, Brazeale v. Piedmont Mfg. Co., 184 S.C. 471, 193 S.E. 39, 43; unless they are known or obvious. Pollard v. Weeks, 60 Ga.App. 664, 4 S.E.2d 722, 727. If injury results from master's breach of duty of due care the risk is "extraordinary" and is assumed only if servant knew or ought to have known of dangerous condition and comprehended it or must be taken to have known of and comprehended it. Stone v. Howe, 92 N.H. 425, 32 A.2d 484, 486.

Under Federal Employers' Liability Act, "extraordinary risk" means risks not ordinarily and necessarily incident to employment, Southern Ry. Co. v. Blanton, 63 Ga.App. 93, 10 S.E.2d 430, 434; an employee is not treated as assuming extraordinary risks arising from defects due to negligence. Of employer unless he has knowledge of them or danger is so obvious that it would be appreciated by ordinarily prudent person, Snow v. Texas & P. Ry. Co., La.App., 166 So. 200, 203.

EXTRAORDINARY SERVICES. As applied to the care and attention of an old and infirm person, such services as are unusual, extra, or above those generally required or to be anticipated in usual course of things, not such services as are rendered to an old and feeble person, even though sick, which are not different from those usually required by such persons in similar circumstances. Allen v. Smith, 208 Ky. 207, 270 S.W. 782, 783. As used in statute authorizing allowance of additional compensation to guardian, means services in addition to guardian's usual or regular services. In re Gislarson's Estate, 73 N.D. 731, 19 N.W.2d 447, 451, 452.

EXTRAORDINARY STORM is not necessarily an unprecedented one, but one that happens so rarely that it is unusual and not ordinarily to be expected. Spitzer v. City of Waterbury, 113 Conn. 84, 154 A. 157, 160; Oklahoma City v. Evans, 173 Okl. 586, 50 P.2d 234, 238.

EXTRAPAROCHIAL. Out of a parish; not within the bounds or limits of any parish. 1 Bl. Comm. 113, 284.

EXTRATERRITORIAL. The extraterritorial operation of laws; that is, their operation upon persons, rights, or jural relations, existing beyond the limits of the enacting state, but still amenable to its laws. A term used, especially formerly, to express, in lieu of the word extrer-monality (q. v.), the exemption from the obligation of the laws of a state granted to foreign diplomatic agents, warships, etc. Wheaton, § 224. The term is used to indicate jurisdiction exercised by a nation in another countries, by treaty, as, by the United States in China or Egypt; or by its own ministers or consuls in foreign lands. Crime is said to be extraterritorial when committed in a country other than that of the forum in which the party is tried. See 2 Moore, Int.L.Dig.; U. S.
v. Lucas, D.C.Wash., 6 F.2d 327, 328.

EXTRAVAGANTES. In canon law. Those de-amendable to its laws. A term used, especially The term is used to indicate jurisdiction exercised by a nation in other countries, by treaty, as, by the United States in China or Egypt; or by its own ministers or consuls in foreign lands. Crime is said to be extraterritorial when committed in a country other than that of the forum in which the party is tried. See 2 Moore, Int.L.Dig.; U. S.
v. Lucas, D.C.Wash., 6 F.2d 327, 328.

EXTREME CARE. Such care as prudent man would exercise in place of danger. Schlossstein
v. Bernstein, 293 Pa. 245, 142 A. 324, 327.

EXTREME CASE. An extreme case, in which an injunction granted inadvertently or improvidently may be dissolved ex parte, means one in which the injunction was manifestly granted improperly, and its continuation until hearing in due course might cause great injury. Teacle v. Hughes, 146 La. 195, 83 So. 457, 458.

EXTREME CRUELTY is condition of extreme discomfort and wretchedness incapacitating spouse to discharge duties or seriously endangering health. McKee v. McKee, 107 N.J.Eq. 1, 151
A. 620, 622. It is grave and serious misconduct which defeats marriage relation. Kennedy v. Kenney, 101 Fla. 239, 134 So. 201, 203.

Any habitual indulgence by one spouse, that causes mental torture, undermines the health, or tends to dethrone reason of other, is sufficient to constitute "extreme cruelty". Bergman v. Bergman, 145 Fla. 10, 199 So. 920, 922.

As respects constructive abandonment, "extreme cruelty" per se by husband is conduct which law presumes to be malicious, intended to force separation, and dangerous to life or health of wife, or incapacitates her from performing er duties. Fallon v. Fallon, 111 N.J.Eq. 512, 162 A. 406, 409.

Extreme cruelty is conduct or treatment which causes reasonable apprehension of bodily hurt, Chisholm v. Chisholm, 98 Fla. 1196, 125 So. 694, 702; constitutes aggravated or inhuman ill treatment, having regard to the physical and temperamental condition of the parties and all the surcircling circumstances, Donald v. Donald, 21 Fla. 573;
Blanchard v. Blain, 45 Va. 194; Poor v. Poor, 8 N.H. 315, 29
Am. Dec. 664; damages health, Chisholm v. Chisholm, 98
Fla. 1196, 125 So. 694, 703; destroys conract, harmony, happiness, or affection, Hassell v. Hassell, 185 Okt. 154, 90
P.2d 885; destroys happiness and health and defeats the very purposes of marriage, Hassell v. Hassell, 185 Okt.
154, 90 P.2d 885; destroys legitimate ends and objects of marriage, Dier v. Dier, 141 Neb. 685, 4 N.W.2d 731, 734; McCarty v. McCarty, 193 Okt. 18, 141 P.2d 103, 104;
destroys peace of mind, Dier v. Dier, 141 Neb. 685, 4 N.W.2d 731, 734; destroys peace of mind as to seriously impair health or endanger life, Smith v. Smith, 61 Ariz.
373, 149 P.2d 683, 684; McCarty v. McCarty, 193 Okt. 18, 141
P.2d 103, 104; Hornor v. Hornor, 151 Okt. 292, 3 P.2d 670, 671; endangers health and prevents proper discharge of maritinal duties, Brinkerhoff v. Brinkerhoff, 106 N.J.Eq.
570, 199 A. 54, 55; endangers life or health, Fallon v. Fallon, 111 N.J.Eq. 512, 162 A. 406, 408; Chisholm v. Chisholm, 98 Fla. 1196, 125 So. 694, 702; impairs bodily health, Dier v. Dier, 141 Neb. 685, 4 N.W.2d 731, 734; incapacitates one from performing marital duties, Fallon v. Fallon, 111 N.J.Eq. 512, 162 A. 406, 408; inflicts grievous bodily injury or grievous mental suffering.
Civ. Code Cal. § 94, McFall v. McFall, 58 Cal.App.2d 208, 136 P.2d 580, 583; produces continuous, intense mental pain and suffering, danger to health, or a forced abnegation of the marital relation, Currie v. Currie, 120 Fla. 28, 162 So. 152; wounds, feelings, Nelson v. Nelson, 89 Okt. 318, 117 P.2d 110, 111; Smith v. Smith, 61 Ariz.
373, 149 P.2d 683, 684; renders cohabitation intolerable, Stocker v. Stocker, 173 Okt. 64, 47 P.2d 107, 108; renders cohabitation intolerable and unsafe, Chisholm v.
Chisholm, 98 Fla. 1196, 125 So. 694, 703.

Physical violence is extreme cruelty. Baker v. Baker, 94 Fla. 1001, 114 So. 661, 663. But "extreme cruelty" is not confined to physical violence. Henderson v. Henderson, 139 Fla. 770, 189 So. 24, 25; Bastien v. Bastien, 57 R.I. 176, 189
A. 37, 38.

To constitute "extreme cruelty" within divorce statute, the acts must be directed toward the other party and must be committed with a malevolent motive. Nason v. Nason, 48 Cal.App.2d 500, 120 P.2d 37, 39, 40.

Voluntary or intentional extreme cruelty is the "extreme cruelty," which is ground for divorce, Heim v. Heim, 35

EXTREME HAZARD. To constitute extreme hazard, the situation of a vessel must be such that there is imminent danger of her being lost, notwithstanding all the means that can be applied to 421.

EXTREME LOW TIDE are tides which are lower than lower low. State v. Edwards, 188 Wash. 467, 62 P.2d 1094, 1095.

EXTREMIS. When a person is sick, beyond the hope of recovery, and near death, he is said to be in extremis.

EXTREMIS PROBATUS, PRIESUMUNTUR MED-IA. Extremes being proved, intermediate things are presumed. Tray,' Lat. Max. 207.

EXTRINSIC. Foreign; from outside sources; dehors. As to “Extrinsic Fraud”, see "Fraud."

Grounds for quashing of indictment may be matters "intrinsic" to the pleading, as defects apparent upon its face, United States v. Frankfield, D.C.D.C., 38 F.Supp. 1018, 1019.

EXTRINSIC AMBIGUITY. In a written contract is an uncertainty which does not arise by the terms of the instrument itself, but is created by some collateral matter not appearing in the instrument. Pacific Indemnity Co. v. California Electric Works, 29 Cal.App.2d 260, 84 P.2d 313, 320.

EXTRINSIC EVIDENCE is external evidence, or that which is not contained in the body of an agreement, contract, and the like. Extrinsic evidence is also said to be evidence not legitimately before the tribunal in which the determination is made. Baldwin v. City of Buffalo, 35 N.Y. 375, 382.

EXTUMZE. In old records. Relics. Cowell.

EXUERE PATRIAM. To throw off or renounce one’s country or native allegiance; to expatriate one’s self. Phillim. Dom. 18.

EXULARE. In old English law. To exile or banish. Nullus liber homo, exuletur, nisi, etc., no freeman shall be exiled, unless, etc. Magna Charta, c. 29; 2 Inst. 47.

EXUPERARE. To overcome; to apprehend or take. Leg. Edm. c. 2.

EY. A watery place; water. Co.Litt. 6.

EYDE. Aid; assistance; relief. A subsidy.

"Eye-witness" does not necessarily mean one who obtains knowledge of an act through the sense of sight alone, and may include one who is able to identify a person by his voice and who could not recognize the person on account of absence of sight. Anderson v. Commonwealth, 291 Ky. 727, 166 S.W.2d 30, 36.

EYEWITNESS RULE is that, in absence of eye-witness, or of any obtainable direct evidence as to what deceased did or failed to do by way of precaution, at and immediately before injury, presumption is that he, prompted by natural instinct, was in exercise of care for his own safety, obtains. Edwards v. Perley, 223 Iowa 1119, 274 N.W. 910, 915.

EYGNE. The same as “eigne” (q. v.).

EYOTT. A small island arising in a river. Fleta, 1. 3, c. 2; Bract. 1. 2, c. 2.

EYRE. A journey; a court of itinerant justices. Justices in eyre were judges commissioned in Anglo-Norman times in England to travel systematically through the kingdom, once in seven years, holding courts in specified places for the trial of certain descriptions of causes.

EYRER. L. Fr. To travel or journey; to go about or itinerate. Britt. c. 2. See Eyre.

EZARDAR. In Hindu law. A farmer or renter of land in the districts of Hindooostan.
F. The sixth letter of the alphabet.

Under the old English criminal law, this letter was branded upon felons upon their being admitted to clergy; as also upon those convicted of fights or frays, or falsity.

Jacob; Cowell; 2 Reeve, Eng.Law, 392; 4 Reeve, Eng.Law, 485.

F. A. A. Federal Aviation Agency.

F. A. A. In marine insurance. "Free of all average," denoting that the insurance is against total loss only. Wharton.

A lumber contract providing that prices were f. o. b., f. a. s. is too indefinite for enforcement; the expression "f. o. b." designating that the seller should bear the expense of loading onto the vessel, while the expression "f. a. s." denotes that the lumber should merely be placed within reach of the vessel’s tackle. McGowin Lumber & Export Co. v. R. J. & B. F. Lumber Co., 192 Ala. 35, 68 So. 263, 264.

The delivery of goods under contract "F. A. S." which means free aside ship, is complete and relieves consignor of liability after the goods have been delivered in good order to dock where ship is to sail. Tex-O-Kan Flour Mills Co. v. Nord, La.App., 18 So.2d 50, 54.

F. C. A. Farm Credit Administration.

F. C. C. Federal Communications Commission.

F. D. A. Food and Drug Administration.

F. D. I. C. Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

F. G. A. In marine insurance. "Free from general average"; also, sometimes, "foreign general average." The precise meaning of this abbreviation must be gathered from the context. Wharton.

F. H. A. Federal Housing Administration; Farmers Home Administration.

F. H. L. B. B. Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

F. M. C. S. Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service.

F. O. B. Term "f. o. b." is an abbreviation for "free on board," and means that seller or consignor shall deliver them on car, vessel, or other conveyance by which the goods shall be transported without expense to buyer or consignee. Hatcher v. Ferguson, 33 Idaho, 639, 198 P. 680, 681, 16 A.L.R. 590; Swardfeger v. United Acceptance Corporation, 9 Cal.App.2d 590, 50 P.2d 818, 820; Olsen v. McPhail & Pentzien, 139 Neb. 506, 297 N.W. 830, 832; Fernholtz Machinery Co. v. Wilson, 118 Cal.App. 573, 5 P.2d 679, 682.

Contract provision for shipment of goods by seller "f. o. b." place of manufacture means that they are to be delivered to carrier by seller without expense to buyer.'

The term "F. O. B." as used in contract for purchase of scrap iron from railroad for overseas shipment, might reasonably be construed as meaning merely that purchased scrap iron was fixed on basis that railroad would transport it free of charge and not as indicating the point of passage of title. Expression "F. O. B." signifies generally an intention to pass title. Southern Pac. Co. v. Hymann-Michaels Co., 63 Cal.App.2d 757, 147 P.2d 692, 696.

"F. o. b. factory" means "1. o. b. railroad cars at factory," obligating seller to deliver to carrier without cost to buyer, who takes risk thereafter. Richter v. Zoccoli, 8 N.J.Misc. 289, 150 A. 1, 2.

Generally, place "f. o. b." where goods are sold is regarded as place of delivery, but effect of term "t. o. b." depends on connection in which used. Craig Brokerage Co. v. Joseph A. Goddard Co., 92 Ind. App. 234, 175 N.E. 19, 22.

The initials "f. o. b." are generally construed as an intention that the price is to be paid when the property is delivered to carrier. Rudy-Patrick Seed Co. v. Roseman, 247 Iowa 597, 13 N.W.2d 347, 349, 350.

When in connection with the price of goods, the term is commonly construed as fixing only the price, and not as relating to the time, place, or mode of delivery. Lee v. Northway Motor Sales Co., R.I., 121 A. 425; Pond Creek Mill & Elevator Co. v. Clark, C.C.A.Ill., 270 F. 482, 486; Bott v. N. Snellenburg & Co., 177 Va. 331, 14 S.E.2d 372, 374.

F. P. A. In marine insurance. "Free from particular average." Wharton. See Average.

F. R. S. Federal Reserve System.

F. T. C. Federal Trade Commission.

A woven, felted, or knitted material for wear or ornament, as cloth, felt, hosiery, or lace; also the material used in its making; something that has been fabricated, constructed, or put together; any complex construction; a system built up of correlated parts; structure or edifice. Guaranty Trust Co. of New York v. Johns-Manville Corporation, D.C.N.Y., 14 F.Supp. 792, 797.

Something that has been fabricated, constructed, or put together; the structure of anything or anything manufactured, and in a broad sense includes a flexible sheet metal. Johns-Manville Corporation v. National Tank Seal Co., C.C.A.Old., 49 P.2d 142, 145.

FABRIC LANDS. In English law. Lands given towards the maintenance, rebuilding, or repairing of cathedral and other churches. Cowell; Blount. Called by the Saxons timber-lands. Spelman.

It was the custom, says Cowell, for almost every one to give by will more or less to the fabric of the cathedral or parish church where he lived. These lands so given were called fabric lands, because given ad fabricam ecclesiae (for repairing the fabric of the church).

FABRICA. In old English law. The making or coining of money.
FABRICARE. Lat. To make. Used in old English law of a lawful coining, and also of an unlawful making or counterfeiting of coin. Used in an indictment for forging a bill of lading; 1 Salk. 341.

FABRICATE. To invent; to devise falsely. In-FABULA. In old European law. A contract or
T. & S. F. IL Co. v. Union Wire Rope Corporation, 341.

FABRICATED FACILITY. Evidence. Evidence manufactured or arranged after the fact, and either wholly false or else warped and discolored by artifice and contrivance with a deceitful intent. See supra.

FABRICATED FACT. In the law of evidence. A fact existing only in statement, without any foundation in truth. An actual or genuine fact to which a false appearance has been designedly given; a physical object placed in a false connection with another, or with a person on whom it is designed to cast suspicion.

FABRICATION. "Manufacture" and "fabrication," are often, in broadest sense, interchangeable in meaning; definition in particular instance depending on environment of particular use of either. Union Wire Rope Corporation v. Athi-

The word "fabrication," meaning "making," although not generally synonymous with "rewriting," meaning a working over, was expressly so used in railroad tariff in question, as distinguished from "manufacture." Athison, T. & S. F. IL Co. v. Union Wire Rope Corporation, D.C.Mo., 1 F.Supp. 399.

FABULA. In old European law. A contract or formal agreement; particularly used in the Lombardic and Visigothic laws to denote a marriage contract or a will. Burrill.

FACE. That which is shown by the mere language employed without any explanation, modification, or addition from extrinsic facts or evidence, the principal sum which it expresses to be due or payable, without any additions in the way of interest and costs. Cunningham v. Great Southern Life Ins. Co., Tex.Civ.App., 66 S.W.2d 765, 773. The outward appearance or aspect of a thing. For "Regular on its face," see that title.

The surface of anything; especially the front, upper, or outer part or surface; that which particularly offers itself to the view of a spectator. The words of a written paper in their apparent or obvious meaning, as, the face of a note, bill, bond, check, draft, judgment record, or contract; the face of a judgment for which it was rendered exclusive of interest. Cunningham v. Great Southern Life Ins. Co., Tex.Civ.App., 66 S.W.2d 765, 773.

FACE AMOUNT. The "face amount" of an instrument is that shown by the mere language employed, and excludes any accrued interest. Burns v. Corn Exch. Nat. Bank of Omaha, Neb., 33 Wyo. 474, 240 P. 683, 687. See Face of instrument.

The face amount of a policy means the amount which is, in all events, payable under the policy as straight life insurance without regard to any additional features, such as accident or disability insurance, Smith v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of United States, 232 Mo.App. 935, 107 S.W.2d 191, 195; face values specified in policies plus dividend additions postdating lapse, and exclusive of accidental death benefits, Valenti v. Prudential Ins. Co. of America, C.C.A.Mo., 71 F.2d 229, 233.

FACE AMOUNT INSURED BY THE POLICY. Within statute relating to extended life insurance, means the amount which is, in all events, payable under the policy as straight life insurance without regard to additional features such as accident or disability insurance. Wilkins v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 350 Mo. 185, 165 S.W.2d 858, 861, 862; Wilkins v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 236 Mo.App. 586, 159 S.W.2d 354, 356.

FACE OF BOOK. Under an act providing that a public or private statute or the proceedings of any legislative body purporting on the face of the book to be printed by authority of the government of the state are evidence without further proof, the "face of the book" and the "title page" need not coincide, as "face" is used in contradistinction to "cover." Pensacola, St. A. & G. S. Co. v. Brooks, 14 Ala.App. 364, 70 So. 968, 970.

FACE OF INSTRUMENT. That which is shown by the language employed, without any explanation, modification, or addition from extrinsic facts or evidence. Adopted in Re Stoneman, Sur., 146 N.Y.S. 172, 175; Investors' Syndicate v. Willcuts, D.C.Minn., 45 F.2d 900, 902. Thus, if the express terms of the paper disclose a fatal legal defect, it is said to be "void on its face." Regarded as an evidence of debt, the face of an instrument is the principal sum which it expresses to be due or payable, without any additions in the way of interest or costs. Osgood v. Bringolf, 32 Iowa, 265. See, also, State v. Newby, 169 Wis. 208, 171 N.W. 953, 954.

FACE OF JUDGMENT. The sum for which it was rendered, exclusive of interest. Osgood v. Bringolf, 32 Iowa, 265. See, also, Face of instrument.

FACE OF POLICY. A phrase which, as used in a statute forbidding life insurance policies to contain provision for any mode of settlement at maturity of less value than the amount insured on the "face of the policy," does not mean merely the first page, but denotes the entire insurance con-

The "face of the record" means, in a criminal case, the indictment and the verdict. Jones v. State, 58 Ga.App. 374, 198 S.E. 566.

The phrases "judgment roll," "judgment record," and "face of the record" are synonymous. Every part of trial proceedings reserved in courts of record under direction of court for purpose of its records constitutes the "judgment roll." Permian Oil Co. v. Smith, 129 Tex. 413, 107 S.W.2d 564, 566, 111 A.L.R. 1152.

FACE VALUE. This term, in a statute taxing one's law; to make or pay a fine; facere sacramentum, to make the duel, or make or do battle; facere defaltam, to make default; facere duellum, to make the duel, or make or do battle; facere finem, to make or pay a fine; facere legem, to make one's law; facere sacramentum, to make oath.

FACIAL DISFIGUREMENT. That which impairs or injures the beauty, symmetry, or appearance of a person, that which renders unsightly, misshapen or imperfect or deforms in some manner. Ferguson v. State Highway Department, 197 S.C. 520, 15 S.E.2d 775, 778; Poole v. Saxon Mills, 192 S.C. 339, 6 S.E.2d 761, 764.

FACIA& That you cause.

Occurring in the phrases "scare facias," (that you cause to know,) "fieri facias," (that you cause to be made,) etc. Used also in the phrases Do ut facias (I give that you may do), Facio ut facias (I do that you may do), two of the four divisions of considerations made by Blackstone, 2 Comm. 444. See Facio ut des; Facio ut facias.

FACIENDO. In doing or paying; in some activity.

FACIES. Lat. The face or countenance; the exterior appearance of a thing, hence, contemplation or study of a thing on its external or apparent side.

Thus, prima facie means at the first inspection, on a preliminary or exterior scrutiny. When we speak of a "prima facie case," we mean one which, on its own showing, on a first examination, or without investigating any alleged defenses, is apparently good and maintainable.

FACILE. In Scotch law. Easily persuaded; easily imposed upon. Bell.

FACILITATE. To make easy or less difficult, or to free from difficulty or impediment. Pon Wing Quon v. United States, C.C.A.Cal., 111 F.2d 751, 756. To make more easy or less difficult; free more or less completely from obstruction or hindrance; lessen the labor of: United States v. One Dodge Coupe, Motor No. D14-105424, Serial No. 30284066, D.C.N.Y., 43 F.Supp. 60, 61.

FACILITIES. That which promotes the ease of any action, operation, transaction, or course of conduct. Webster. The term denotes inanimate means rather than human agencies. Sloss-Sheffield Steel & Iron Co. v. Smith, 185 Ala. 607, 64 So. 337, 338.

Also, a name formerly given to certain notes of some of the banks in the state of Connecticut, which were made payable in two years after the close of the war of 1812. Springfield Bank v. Merrick, 14 Mass. 322.

As applied to carriers, means everything necessary for the convenience of passengers and the safety and prompt transportation of freight; everything incident to the general, prompt, safe, and impartial performance of the duties to the public at large imposed by the state, in the proper exercise of its police power, upon transportation or transmission companies. As applied to a ferry service, everything incident to the general, prompt, and safe carriage of passengers, boats in good repair, appliances answering the purpose, and readiness and willingness to perform the services incident to the grant. Fraters v. Keefing, 20 Cal.App.2d 490, 67 F.2d 118, 119.

As used in phrase "special facilities within the place of amusement," in statute creating amusement tax, referred to personal accommodations furnished for comfort of patron to enable him to obtain a better view of what he paid for when he entered the ground or to more conveniently do so. Martin v. F. H. Bee Shows, 271 Ky. 822, 113 S.W.2d 448, 452.

As used in statute giving Public Service Commission control over service and facilities of public service companies, means something owned by or under the control of a public utility. Borough of Swarthmore v. Public Service Commission, 277 Pa. 472, 121 A. 488, 489.

Electric company's corporate organization, contracts, accounts, memorandum, papers, and other records constituted "facilities" within Federal Power Act. The word "facilities" embraces anything which aids or makes easier the performance of the activities involved in the business of a person or corporation. Hartford Electric Light Co. v. Federal Power Commission, C.C.A.2, 131 F.2d 953, 960, 961, 962.

Freight cars are "facilities" of transportation as defined by Interstate Commerce Act. General American Tank Car Corporation v. El Dorado Terminal Co., Cal., 308 U.S. 422, 60 S.Ct. 325, 329, 84 L.Ed. 361.

Sidetracks constituting part of a transportation system are "facilities" of the railroad, even though privately owned. Lehigh Na., Coal Co. v. Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission, 133 Pa.Super. 67, 1 A.2d 540, 544.

FACILITY. In Scotch law. Pliancy of disposition. Bell.

Where electric company transmitted electricity to another company which transmitted it in interstate commerce, the former company's line was a "facility" subject to jurisdiction of Federal Power Commission. Jersey Central Power & Light Co. v. Federal Power Commission, 319 U.S. 61, 63 S.Ct. 953, 959, 87 L. Ed. 1258.

FACILITY

Where electric company transmitted electricity to another company which transmitted it in interstate commerce, the former company's line was a "facility" subject to jurisdiction of Federal Power Commission. Jersey Central Power & Light Co. v. Federal Power Commission, 319 U.S. 61, 63 S.Ct. 953, 959, 87 L. Ed. 1258.

FACSIMILE PROBATE. In England, where the FACSIMILE. An exact copy, preserving all the appearance of the original paper, the court will order an actual occurrence. An actual happening in the presence of the court at the time of the happening.

FACT. A thing done; an action performed or an accident transpiring; an event or circumstance; an actual occurrence. An actual happening in time or space or an event mental or physical.

FACSIMILE. An exact copy, preserving all the appearance of the original paper, the court will order in facsimile as it may possibly help to show the meaning of the testator. 1 Williams, Ex'ts, 7th Ed., 331, 386, 566.

FACT. A thing done; an action performed or an incident transpiring; an event or circumstance; an actual occurrence. An actual happening in time or space or an event mental or physical.

FACSIMILE PROBATE. In England, where the construction of a will may be affected by the appearance of the original paper, the court will order the probate to pass in facsimile, as it may possibly help to show the meaning of the testator. 1 Williams, Ex'ts, 7th Ed., 331, 386, 566.

FACT. A thing done; an action performed or an incident transpiring; an event or circumstance; an actual occurrence. An actual happening in time or space or an event mental or physical.

FACSIMILE. An exact copy, preserving all the appearance of the original paper, the court will order a motion, that is, an event. 1 Bent.Jud.Ev. 48.

Fact (factum, fact) stands in lawbooks for: 1. An act; 2. For a completed and operative transaction brought about by sealing and executing a certain sort of writing, and for the intent of the parties concerned, a deed (fide infra, 2.); as designating what exists, in contradistinction to what should exist (de facto as contrasted with de jure); 4. As indicating things, events, actions, conditions, as happening, existing, really taking place. Thayer, Ev. 190.

"Fact" was formerly used almost exclusively in the sense of "action" or "deed." This usage survives in phrases such as "accessory before the fact."

As used in statute providing that malice shall be presumed from publication of matter not privileged, unless the "fact" and the intent to defraud, can be shown by evidence and oral, and instructions and pleadings. State ex rel. Horspool v. Haid, 328 Mo. 327, 40 S.W.2d 611, 613.

"Facts" to which Supreme Court is limited on certiorari to quash Court of Appeals' decision for conflict comprise recorded facts decided by the lower courts, evidence, documentary and oral.

FACSIMILE. An exact copy, preserving all the appearance of the original paper, the court will order in facsimile as it may possibly help to show the meaning of the testator. 1 Williams, Ex'ts, 7th Ed., 331, 386, 566.

FACT. A thing done; an action performed or an incident transpiring; an event or circumstance; an actual occurrence. An actual happening in time or space or an event mental or physical.

mere supposition or opinion; a truth, as distinguished from fiction or error. Burrill, Circ. Ev. 218.

"Facts" and "evidence" are sometimes used interchangeably. Mackey v. First Nat. Bank, Mo.App., 293 S.W. 66, 71. But the terms are not really synonymous; evidence, broadly defined, being means from which an inference may logically be drawn as to existence of a fact. Tjernstrom v. Ford Motor Co., 285 Mich. 450, 280 N.W. 823, 825. Yet, although "facts" and the "evidence" are quite different, it sometimes may happen that they constitute one and the same thing. Gates v. Haw, 150 Ind. 370, 30 N.E. 299.

Hypothetical question propounded to plaintiff's witness in which an assumed fact was that a test made by another expert had a specified result referred to a "fact" and not an "opinion" of the expert. Cody v. Toiler Drug Co., 232 Iowa 475, 5 N.W.2d 824, 828.

In rule 41(b), providing for motion for dismissal at close of plaintiff's evidence in nonjury case on ground that upon that showing and the law plaintiff has not established a right to relief, the "facts" referred to are the prima facie facts shown by plaintiff's evidence viewed in light most favorable to him. Schad v. Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, C.C.A., Pa., 136 F.2d 991, 993.

Statement that cause of death was a gunshot wound was a statement of "fact" but further statements, that such wound was self-inflicted and that death was suicide were mere expressions of "opinion." Kentucky Home Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Watts, 298 Ky. 471, 183 S.W.2d 499, 502.

Where person states matter which might otherwise be only an "opinion" as an existing fact material to the transaction, the statement clearly becomes a statement of "fact". Fidelity & Casualty Co. of New York v. J. D. Pittman Tractor Co., 244 Ala. 354, 13 So.2d 669, 672.

Words "facts" and "circumstances" are used interchangeably in the phrase circumstantial evidence. Pulliam v. State, 196 Ga. 782, 28 S.E.2d 139, 147.

Workmen's compensation claimant's testimony that he was well related to a "fact" and not to an "opinion." Texas Employers Ins. Ass'n v. Griffin, Tex.Civ.App., 141 S.W.2d 687, 690.

Truth and Fact Distinguished

The terms "fact" and "truth" are often used in common parlance as synonymous, but, as employed in reference to pleading, they are widely different. A fact in pleading is a circumstance, act, event, or incident; a truth is the legal principle which declares or governs the facts and their operative effect. Admitting the facts stated in a complaint, the truth may be that the plaintiff is not entitled, upon the face of his complaint, to what he claims. The mode in which a defendant sets up that truth for his protection is a demurrer. Drake v. Cockroft, 4 E. D. Smith, N.Y., 37.

FACT MATERIAL TO RISK. See Material Fact.

FACTA. In old English law. Deeds. Facta armorum, deeds or deeds of arms; that is, jousts or tournaments. Cowell.

Facts. Facta et casus, facts and cases. Bract. fol. 1b.

FACTA SUNT PONTOBIOROA VERBS. Deeds or facts are more powerful than words.

FACTA TENET MULTA QUE FIERI PROHIBENTUR. 12 Coke, 124. Deeds contain many things which are prohibited to be done.

FACTIO TESTAMENTI. In the civil law. The right, power, or capacity of making a will; called "factio activa." Inst. 2, 10, 6.

The right or capacity of taking by will; called "factio passiva." Inst. 2, 10, 6; Vicat, Voc.Jur.

FACTO. In fact; by an act; by the act or fact. Ipso facto, by the act itself; by the mere effect of a fact, without anything superadded, or any proceeding upon it to give it effect. 3 Kent, Comm. 55, 58.

FACTOR. A commercial agent, employed by a principal to sell merchandise consigned to him for that purpose, for and in behalf of the principal, but usually in his own name, being intrusted with the possession and control of the goods, and being remunerated by a commission, commonly called "factorage." Howland v. Woodruff, 60 N.Y. 80; In re Rabenau, D.C.Mo., 118 F. 474; Graham v. Duckwall, 8 Bush, Ky., 17; Pal.Ag. 13; Sto.Ag. § 33; Com.Dig. Merchant, B; Malynges, Lex Merc. 81; Beawes, Lex Merc. 44; 3 Chit.Com.L. 193; 2 Kent 622; 1 Bell, Comm. 385, § 408; 2 B. & Ald. 143.

In scotch law, a person appointed to transact business or manage affairs for another, but more particularly an estate-agent or one intrusted with the management of a landed estate, who finds tenants, makes leases, collects the rents, etc.

In some of the states, the person who is elsewhere called "garnishee" or "trustee." See Factoring Process.

A commercial agent to whom the possession of personality is entrusted by or for the owner, to be sold, for a compensation, in pursuance of the agent's usual trade or business, with title to goods remaining in principal and the "factor" being merely a bailee for the purposes of the agency. Neild v. District of Columbia, 71 App.D.C. 306, 110 F.2d 246, 259.

Although a "factor" is in the last analysis an agent, the agency is a limited one. Falls Rubber Co. v. La Fon, Tex. Civ.App., 256 S.W. 577, 579.

An agent employed to sell goods for principal, The Robin Gray, D.C.N.Y., 53 F.2d 1037, 1041. An agent employed to sell goods for his principal which are in his possession for a commission and ordinary consignment contract create a relation of factor and principal. Robertson v. State, 207 Ind. 374, 192 N.E. 887, 888.

An agent employed to sell goods or merchandise consigned or delivered to him, by or for his principal, for a compensation, commonly called factorage or commission, and an agent for the sale of goods in his possession or consigned to him. Hughes v. Young, 17 Tenn.App. 24, 65 S.W.2d 858.

An agent, who, in pursuance of his usual trade or business, and for compensation, sells goods or merchandise consigned or intrusted to his possession for that purpose by or

An agent who, in the pursuit of an independent calling, is employed by another to sell property for him, and is vested by the latter with the possession or control of the property, or authorized to receive payment therefor from the purchaser. Civ.Code Cal. § 2026; Comp.Laws N.D.1913, § 6145; Comp.Laws S.D.1929, § 1288; Leland v. Oliver, 82 Cal.App.474, 255 P. 775, 777.

One who, in pursuance of business, receives goods from principal and sells them for compensation called factorage or commission. Hollman v. Taylor, 200 N.C. 618, 158 S.E. 88, 89.

In the old law, one to whom goods are consigned to sell by a merchant at a distance from the place of sale. Eames v. H. B. Claffin Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 239 F. 631, 635.

Broker and Factor Distinguished
A factor differs from a "broker" in that he is intrusted with the possession, management, and control of the goods, which gives him a special property in them (while a broker acts as a mere intermediary without control or possession of the property. A factor may buy and sell in his own name as well as in that of the principal, while a broker, as such, cannot ordinarily buy or sell in his own name. Commercial Inv. Trust v. Stewart, 235 Mich. 502, 209 N.W. 660, 661; Sutton & Cummins v. Kiel Cheese & Butter Co., 155 Ky. 465, 159 S.W. 950, 951; Hughes v. Young, 17 Tenn.App. 24, 65 S.W.2d 858; Gadsden County Tobacco Co. v. Corry, 103 Fla. 217, 137 So. 255, 257.

A factor or commission merchant has a lien upon the goods for his charges, advances, and commissions, while the broker has no control of the property and is responsible only for bad faith. McCormick & Co., Bankers v. Tolmie Bros., 42 Idaho 1, 243 P. 355, 358.

A factor or commission merchant is one who has the actual or technical possession of goods or wares of another for sale. A "merchandise broker" is one who negotiates the sale of merchandise without having in his possession or control. He is simply an agent with very limited power to sell. A "merchandise broker" is one who negotiates the sale of merchandise without having in his possession or control, and it is said that there is no difference in the meaning of these terms, the latter being perhaps more commonly used in America. Holm v. H. B. Claffin Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 239 F. 631, 635.

Commission Merchants and Factors as Synonymous Factors are also frequently called "commission merchants;" and it is said that there is no difference in the meaning of these terms, the latter being perhaps more commonly used in America.

A "foreign factor," as understood in marine matters, was a person who had charge of the cargo to handle it, dispose of it, convert it into money, or exchange it for other property, but who had nothing to do with the management of the boat when he sailed thereon, at which time he was called a "supercargo." Gilechrist Transp. Co. v. Worthington & Sill, 193 App.Div. 250, 184 N.Y.S. 81, 83; Beawes, Lex Merc. 44; Liverm.Ag. 69; 1 Domat, b. 1, t. 16, § 3, art. 2.

Judicial Factor
In Scotch law. A factor appointed by the courts in certain cases where it becomes necessary to intrust the management of property to another than the owner, as, where the latter is insane or imbecile or the infant heir of a decedent.

Supercargo as a Factor
Where an owner of goods to be shipped by sea consigns them to the care of an agent, who sails on the same vessel, has charge of the cargo on board, sells it abroad, and buys a return cargo out of the proceeds, such agent is strictly and properly a "factor," though in maritime law and usage he is commonly called a "supercargo." Beawes, Lex Merc. 44, 47; Liverm.Ag. 69, 70.

FACTORAGE. The wages, allowance, or commission paid to a factor for his services. Winne v. Hammond, 37 Ill. 103; State v. Thompson, 25 S.W. 346, 120 Mo. 12.

FACTORS' ACTS. The name given to several English statutes (6 Geo. IV. c. 94; 5 & 6 Vict. c. 39; 40 & 41 Vict. c. 39) by which a factor is enabled to make a valid pledge of the goods, or of any part thereof, to one who believes him to be the bona fide owner of the goods. Similar legislation is not uncommon in the United States.

FACTORY, American Law
A building or group of buildings appropriated to the manufacture of goods, including the machinery necessary to produce the goods, and the engine or other power by which the machinery is propelled; the place where workers are employed in fabricating goods, wares, or utensils. Cent. Diet.; Mayhew v. Hardesty, 8 Md. 479. A structure where something is made or manufactured. People v. R. F. Stevens Co., 178 App.Div. 306, 165 N.Y.S. 39.

An undertaking in which the business of working at commodities is carried on with power-driven machinery. Gowey v. Seattle Lighting Co., 108 Wash. 479, 184 P. 339.
Any mill, workshop, or any manufacturing or business establishment, and all buildings, sheds, structures, or other places used for or in connection therewith where one or more persons are employed at labor. Under such statute, the term includes a machine shop. People v. Transit Development Co., 165 N.Y.S. 114, 115, 178 App.Div. 288; and a theatrical company; Ursprung v. Winter Garden Co., 160 N.Y.S. 738, 745, 183 App.Div. 718; but not a butchery shop; O'Connor v. Webber, 219 N.Y. 439, 114 N.E. 799.

Any premises where steam, water, or other mechanical power is used in the aid of any manufacturing process without reference to whether it is inclosed in a building. Casey v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co., C.C.A.Wash., 202 F. 1, 5.

Any premises wherein power is used in manufacturing, making, altering, adapting, ornamenting, finishing, repairing, or renovating articles for purpose of trade or gain, or of business carried on therein. Bradley v. Blakley, La.App., 147 So. 709, 710; Menke v. Hauber, 99 Kan. 171, 160 P. 1017, 1018.

The word does not necessarily mean a single building or edifice, but may apply to several, where they are used in connection with each other, for a common purpose, and stand together in the same inclosure. Liebenstein v. Insurance Co., 45 Ill. 303. And see Hernischel v. Texas Drug Co., 26 Tex.Civ.App. 1, 61 S.W. 419; Schott v. Harvey, 105 Pa. 227, 51 Am.Rep. 201; Amberg v. Kinley, 214 N.Y. 531, 108 N.E. 830, 833, L.R.A.1915E, 519.

To bring acts within statutory definition of "factory" as used in statute relating to employees' rest each week, the acts must be manufacturing ones. People v. Middletown & U. R. Co., 169 Misc. 773, 8 N.Y.S.2d 193, 195, 196.

English Law and Statutes

The term includes all buildings and premises wherein, or within the close or curtilage of which, steam, water, or any mechanical power is used to move or work any machinery employed in preparing, manufacturing, or finishing cotton, wool, hair, silk, flax, hemp, jute, or tow. So defined by the statute 7 Vict. c. 15, § 73.

By later acts this definition has been extended to various other manufacturing places. Mozley & Whitley.

Also a place where a considerable number of factors reside, in order to negotiate for their masters or employers. Enc. Brit.

Scotch Law

A species of contract or employment which falls under the general designation of "agency," but which partakes both of the nature of a mandate and of a bailment of the kind called "locatio ad operandum." 1 Bell, Comm. 259.

FACTORY ACTS. Laws enacted for the purpose of regulating the hours of work, and the sanitary condition, and preserving the health and morals, of the employees, and promoting the education of young persons employed at such labor.

FACTORY PRICES. The prices at which goods may be bought at the factories, as distinguished from the prices of goods bought in the market after they have passed into the hands of third persons or shop-keepers. Whipple v. Levett, 2 Mason, 90, Fed.Cas.No.17,518.

FACTORY RATING. Of carrying capacity of motortrucks as used in statute imposing license fee means customary public announcement of manufacturer in placing motortrucks on market. Memphis Steam Laundry Co. v. Crenshaw, 166 Tenn. 168, 61 S.W.2d 669.

FACTS. See Fact.
FACTUM

FACTUM CUIQUE SUUM NON ADVERSARIO, NOCERE DEBET. Dig. 50, 17, 155. A party's own act should prejudice himself, not his adversary.

FACTUM INFECTUM FIERI NEQUIT. A thing done cannot be undone. 1 Kames, Eq. 96, 259.

FACTUM JURIDICUM. A juridical fact. Denotes one of the factors or elements constituting an obligation.

FACTUM NEGANTIS NULLA PROBATIO SIT. Cod. 4, 19, 23. There is no proof incumbent upon him who denies a fact.

"FACTUM" NON DICITUR QUOD NON PERSEVERAT. That is not called a "deed" which does not continue operative. That is not said to be done which does not last. 5 Coke, 96; Shep. Touch., Preston ed. 391.

FACTUM PROBANDUM. Lat. In the law of evidence. The fact to be proved; a fact which is in issue, and to which evidence is to be directed. 1 Greenl. Ev. § 13.

FACTUM PROBANS. A probative or evidentiary fact; a subsidiary or connected fact tending to prove the principal fact in issue; a piece of circumstantial evidence.

FACTUM UNIUS ALTERI NOCERI NON DEBET. Co. Litt. 152. The deed of one should not hurt another.

FACULTAS PROBATIONUM NON EST ANGUSTANDA. The power of proofs [right of offering or giving testimony] is not to be narrowed. 4 Inst. 279.

FACULTATIVE COMPENSATION is that which operates by the will of the parties, when one of them removes an obstacle preventing compensation, resulting from the dispositions of the law. In re Interstate Trust & Banking Co., La.App., 194 So. 35, 40, 42.

FACULTATIVE REINSURANCE. Under type designated "facultative", the reinsurer has the option of accepting the tendered part of the original insurer's risk. Lincoln Nat. Life Ins. Co. v. State Tax Commission, 196 Miss. 82, 16 So.2d 369.

FACULTIES. In the law of divorce. The capability of the husband to render a support to the wife in the form of alimony, whether temporary or permanent, including not only his tangible property, but also his income and his ability to earn money. 2 Bish. Mar. & Div. § 446; Lovett v. Lovett, 11 Ala. 763; Wright v. Wright, 3 Tex. 168; Fowler v. Fowler, 61 Okt. 280, 161 P. 227, 230, L. R.A. 1917C, 89. See Allegation of Faculties.

FACULTIES, COURT OF. In English ecclesiastical law. A jurisdiction or tribunal belonging to the archbishop. It does not hold pleas in any suits, but creates rights to pews, monuments, and particular places, and modes of burial. It has also various powers under 25 Hen. VIII. c. 21, in granting licenses of different descriptions, as a license to marry, a faculty to erect an organ in a parish church, to level a church-yard, to remove bodies previously buried. 4 Inst. 337. See Arches Court.

FACULTIES, MASTER OF THE. An official in the archdiocese of Canterbury who granted dispensations. 4 Inst. 337. See Arches Court.

FACULTY.

Ecclesiastical Law. A license or authority; a privilege granted by the ordinary to a man by favor and indulgence to do that which by law he may not do; e. g., to marry without banns, to erect a monument in a church, etc. Termes de la Ley.

Faculties are of two kinds: first, when the grant is to a man and his heirs in gross; second, when it is to a person and his heirs as appurtenant to a house which he holds in the parish; 1 Term 429, 432; 12 Co. 106.

Scotch Law. A power founded on consent, as distinguished from a power founded on property. 2 Kames, Eq. 265.

FACULTY OF A COLLEGE OR UNIVERSITY. The corps of professors, instructors, tutors, and lecturers. To be distinguished from the board of trustees, who constitute the corporation.

The teaching body. West v. Board of Trustees of Miami University and Miami Normal School, 41 Ohio App. 367, 181 N.E. 144, 150.

FACULTY OF ADVOCATES. The college or society of advocates in Scotland.

FAIDERFIUM. In old English law. A marriage gift coming from the father or brother of the bride. Spelman.

FZEDER-FEOH. In old English law. The portion of land which comes to a widow in case the heir of her deceased husband refused his consent to her second marriage; i. e., it reverted to her family in case she returned to them. Wharton.

FIESTING-MEN. Approved men who were strong-armed; habentes homines or rich men, men of substance; pledges or bondsmen, who, by Saxon custom, were bound to answer for each other's good behavior. Cowell; Du Cange.

FAGGOT. A badge worn in popish times by persons who had recanted and abjured what was then adjudged to be heresy, as an emblem of what they had merited. Cowell.

FAGGOT VOTE. A term applied to votes manufactured by nominally transferring land to persons otherwise disqualified from voting for members of parliament. A faggot vote occurs where a man is formally possessed of a right to vote for members of parliament, without possessing the substance which the vote should represent; as if he is enabled to buy a property, and at the same moment mortgage it to its full value, for the mere sake of the vote. See 7 & 8 Wm. III. c. 25, § 7. Wharton.

FIADA. In Saxon law. Malice; open and deadly hostility; deadly feud.

The word designated the enmity between the family of a murdered man and that of his murderer, which was recognized, among the Teutonic peoples, as justification for vengeance taken by any one of the former upon any one of the latter. Du Cange; Spelman.

It also means:

The difference between "fail" and "refuse" is that the latter involves an act of the will, while the former may be an act of inevitable necessity. Taylor v. Mason, 9 Wheat. 344, 6 L.Ed. 101. See Stallings v. Thomas, 55 Ark. 326, 18 S.W. 184; Persons v. Hight, 4 Ga. 497; Maestas v. American Metal Co. of New Mexico, 37 N.M. 203, 20 F.2d 924, 928.

The words "fail to comply," however, have in general the same operation in law as the words "refuse to comply." Ginnchio v. Hydraulic Press Brick Co., C.D.Ohio, 266 F. 564, 569. And an allegation in an indictment that defendant "failed and refused" to comply with a statute should not be expanded to carry the implication that there was a deliberate, intentional, and inexusable refusal, especially where the indictment is not good without such expansion. Mackey v. U.S., C.C.A.Tenn., 290 F. 18, 21.

The term may imply an opportunity to act. Worthington Pump & Machinery Corporation v. City of Cudahy, 182 Wis. 8, 195 N.W. 717.

FAILING CIRCUMSTANCES. Insolvency, that is, the lack of sufficient assets to pay one's debts. Bradley v. State, 71 Tex.Cr.R. 353, 162 S.W. 339, 346. A person (or a corporation or institution) is said to be in failing circumstances when he is about to fail, that is, when he is actually insolvent and is acting in contemplation of giving up his business because he is unable to carry it on. Appeal of Millard, 62 Conn. 184, 25 A. 658; Utley v. Smith, 24 Conn. 310, 63 Am.Dec. 163.

A bank is in "failing circumstances" when, from any cause, it is unable to pay its debts in the ordinary or usual course of business, Sanders v. Owens, Mo.App., 47 S.W.2d 132, 134; when in state of uncertainty as to whether it will be able to sustain itself, depending on favorable or unfavorable contingencies, over which its officers have no control. Graf v. Allen, 230 Mo.App. 721, 74 S.W.2d 61, 66.

FAILING OF RECORD. When an action is brought against a person who alleges in his plea matter of record in bar of the action, and avers to prove it by the record, but the plaintiff saith null record, viz., denies there is any such record, upon which the defendant has a day given him by the court to bring it in, if he fail to do it, then he is said to fail of his record, and the plaintiff is entitled to sign judgment. Termes de la Ley.

FAILLITE. In French law. Bankruptcy; failure; the situation of a debtor who finds himself unable to fulfill his engagements. Code de Com. arts. 442, 580; Civil Code La. art. 3556, No. 11; 3 Masses, Droit Comm. 171; Guyot, Répért.

FAILS TO ATTEND AT THE TRIAL. Must be such a prolonged absence and failure to attend as to hinder and delay the orderly business of the court. Smith v. State, 42 Okl.Cr. 308, 275 P. 1071, 1072.

FAILURE. Abandonment or defeat, State v. Summers, 320 Mo. 189, 6 S.W.2d 883, 885. Deficiency, want, or lack; ineffectualness; inefficiency as measured by some legal standard; an unsuccessful attempt. State v. Butler, 81 Minn. 103, 83 N.W. 483; In re Moore, 79 Ind.App. 470, 138 N.E. 783. Lapse. Wilmington Trust Co. v. Wilmington Trust Co., 25 Del.Ch. 204, 15 A.2d 830, 834. See, also, Fail.

As used in municipal charter concerning "failure" to fill certain office by certain methods, the term presupposes efforts that had proved fruitless, and demands a bona fide and seasonable attempt to select by such methods. Scott v. Suitor, 103 Vt. 175, 152 A. 801, 802.

Discontinuance of business from insolvency, bankruptcy, or the like. State v. Thompson, 333 Mo. 1069, 64 S.W.2d 277.

"Failure" of appeal tax court to reduce assessment giving right of appeal means failure to reduce after application by owner asking that assessment be reduced. Aegis Co. v. Ray, 156 Md. 590, 144 A. 842, 844.

"Failure" is not always synonymous with "insolvency." State v. Tunnicliffe, 98 Fla. 731, 124 So. 279, 281.

The failure to note action for trial is a "neglect" or "failure" within practice rule relating to dismissal of action without prejudice for want of prosecution. State ex rel. Woodworth & Cornell v. Superior Court for King County, 9 Wash.2d 37, 113 P.2d 529, 530.

The neglect of any duty may be a "failure." See Christhilf v. City of Baltimore, 152 Md. 204, 136 A. 527, 528; Washington v. State, 22 Okl.Cr. 69, 209 P. 967, 968. Compare, however, In re Green, 192 Cal. 714, 221 P. 903, 905. But to constitute a statutory offense, such as the failure to work on public roads, the term may imply willfulness and the absence of sufficient excuse. Jones v. State, 7 Ala. App. 180, 62 So. 306, 307.

FAILURE OF CONSIDERATION. As applied to notes, contracts, conveyances, etc., this term does not mean a want of consideration, but implies that a consideration, originally existing and good, has since become worthless or has ceased to exist or been extinguished, partially or entirely. Shirk v. Neible, 156 Ind. 66, 59 N.E. 281, 83 Am.St.Rep. 150; Williamson v. Cline, 40 W.Va. 194, 20 S.E. 920.

It means that sufficient consideration was contemplated by the parties at time contract was entered into, but either on account of some innate defect in the thing to be given or nonperformance in whole or in part of that which the promise agreed to do or forbear nothing of value can be or is received by the promisee. Holcomb v. Long Beach Pump Co., 129 Cal.App. 265, 15 P.2d 31. 36.

It occurs where the thing expected to be received by one party and given by the other party cannot be or has not been given without fault of the party contracting to give it.

Edmund D. Cook, Inc. v. Commercial Casualty Ins. Co., 15

"Fraud" cannot be pleaded as defense to note on ground that it amounts to "failure of consideration." Fraud is in Italics, while "failure of consideration" ordinarily involves no actionable wrong, but occurs by reason of accident or mistake. Kothmann v. Southwest Co., Tex.
 Civ.App., 92 S.W.2d 272, 276.

Want of consideration as synonymous or distinguishable
"Failure of consideration" is in fact simply a want of 540, 101 S.W.2d 158, 163.

"Want of consideration" embraces transactions or instances where no consideration was intended to pass from obligee to obligor was contemplated. In re Conrad's Estate, 333 Pa. 561, 3 A.2d 697, 699; Rauschenbach v. McDaniel's Estate, 122 W.Va. 632, 11 S.E.2d 852, 854.

There is "want of consideration" when nothing of value has ever been received, and "failure of consideration where something of value was originally received which has since lost its value. Columbia Restaurant v. Sadnowick, La.App., 157 So. 280, 282.

FAILURE OF EVIDENCE. Judicially speaking, a total "failure of evidence" means not only the utter absence of all evidence, but it also means a failure to offer proof, either positive or inferential, to establish one or more of the many facts, the establishment of all of which is indispensable to the finding of the issue for the plaintiff. Cole

FAILURE OF GOOD BEHAVIOR. Enumerated in statute as ground for removal of a civil service employee means behavior contrary to recognized standards of propriety and morality, misconduct or wrong conduct. State ex rel. Ashbaugh v.
Bahr, 68 Ohio App. 308, 40 N.E.2d 677, 680, 682.

FAILURE OF ISSUE. The failure at a fixed time, or the total extinction, of issue to take an estate limited over by an executory devise. A definite failure of issue is when a precise time is fixed by the will for the failure of issue, as in the case where there is a devise to one, but if he dies without issue or lawful issue living at the time of his death, etc. An indefinite failure of issue is the period when the issue or descendants of the first taker shall become extinct, and when there is no longer any issue of the issue of the grantee, without reference to any particular time or any particular event. 4 Kent, Comm. 275; Huxford v.
Milligan, 50 Ind. 546; Parkhurst v. Harrower, 142
Pa. 432, 21 A. 826, 24 Am.St.Rep. 507; Woodlief

FAILURE OF JUSTICE. The defeat of a particular right, or the failure of reparation for a particular wrong, from the lack or inadequacy of a legal remedy for the enforcement of the one or the redress of the other. The term is also colloquially applied to the miscarriage of justice which occurs when the result of a trial is so palpably wrong as to shock the moral sense.

FAILURE OF PROOF. In this phrase, the word "failure" is of broader significance than either
"want" or "lack." State v. Davis, 154 La. 295, 97
So. 449, 456.

A "failure of proof" consists in failure to prove the cause of action or defense in its entire scope and meaning. Breslin-Griffitt Carpet Co. v. Asadorian, Mo.App., 145
S.W.2d 494, 496.

An omission of a material fact from special finding is deemed a "failure of proof". Kelley, Glover & Vale v.
Heitman, 220 Ind. 625, 44 N.E.2d 981, 984.

As used in a statute authorizing dismissal of suit without prejudice on account of failure of proof, the term does not mean failure to convince the court by preponderance of evidence, but failure to make prima facie case. Crim v.
Thompson, 112 Or. 399, 229 P. 916, 920; Wolke v. Schmidt, 112 Or. 99, 228 P. 921, 923.

Under a statute pertaining to variance, a "failure of proof" results when the evidence offered so far depart from the cause of action pleaded that it may be said fairly that the allegations of the pleading in their general scope and meaning are unproved. Chealey v. Purdy, 54 Mont.
489, 171 P. 926, 927; Nelson v. Dowgiallo, 73 Or. 342, 143
P. 924, 925.

Where evidence is such as would support either of two contradictory inferences, or presumptions, respecting the ultimate facts, there is a "failure of proof". Muesenfechter
v. St. Louis Car Co., Mo.App., 139 S.W.2d 1102, 1106.

Where time is not of essence of offense, showing that crime, which information alleged was committed "on or about" certain day, was committed on next day was not a failure of proof, even had words "on or about" been omitted. State v. Woodall, Mo., 300 S.W. 712, 713.

FAILURE OF RECORD. Failure of the defendant to produce a record which he has alleged and relied on in his plea.

See Failing of Record.

FAILURE OF TITLE. The inability or failure of a vendor to make good title to the whole or a part of the property which he has contracted to sell.
See Alger-Sullivan Lumber Co. v. Union Trust Co., 207 Ala. 138, 92 So. 254, 257.

FAILURE OF TRUST. The lapsing or nonexistence of a proposed trust, by reason of the defect or insufficiency of the deed or instrument creating it, or on account of illegality, indefiniteness, or other legal impediment.

FAILURE OTHERWISE THAN UPON MERITS.
Imports some action by court by which plaintiff is defeated without a trial upon the merits. Kim-

FAILURE TO ACT. Under statute setting up system of classification of offices and giving incumbent right to an administrative appeal in case of any failure to act by officers in charge of the classification plan, the words "failure to act" re-furred to duties in connection with classification of 318, 37 N.E.2d 998, 1000.

FAILURE TO BARGAIN COLLECTIVELY. An employer's refusal to discuss with union, as employees' bargaining agency, questions involving conditions of employment and interpretation of contract constituted a "failure to bargain collectively" with union. Rapid Roller Co. v. National Labor Relations Board, C.C.A.7, 126 F.2d 452, 459.

FAILURE TO COOPERATE. Material or intentional, or fraudulent variations of statements, of assured's driver as given at trial and before trial would constitute failure to co-operate with auto-FAILURE TO MAKE DELIVERY. Misdelivery within range of vision is equivalent. Brooks v. City of Ste. Genevieve, Mo.App., 164 S.W.2d 164, 168.

FAILURE TO MEET OBLIGATIONS. Bank's failure to pay depositors on demand constitutes "failure to meet obligations" in most cases. State of Ohio ex rel. Squire v. Union Trust Co. of Pittsburgh, 137 Pa.Super. 75, 8 A.2d 476, 480.

Where bank closed its doors and ceased to transact business or make transfers of capital stock, and thereafter ordinary deposits could not be drawn out and checks in process of collection were dishonored, returned unpaid, was "failure to meet obligations". State of Ohio ex rel. Squire v. Union Trust Co. of Pittsburgh, 137 Pa.Super. 75, 8 A.2d 476, 480.

FAILURE TO PERFORM. As regards reciprocal promises, allegation of defendant's "failure to perform" when demanded is equivalent to allegation of "refusal to perform," unless performance by plaintiff is condition precedent to cause of action. Brooks v. Scoville, 81 Utah 163, 17 P.2d 218, 220.

FAILURES IN REVENUE. Terms "casual deficits" and "failures in revenue," within provision authorizing Legislature to contract debt to meet such deficits, are synonymous. State Budget Commission v. Lebus, 244 Ky. 700, 51 S.W.2d 965.

FAINT (or FEIGNED) ACTION. In old English practice. An action was so called where the party bringing it had no title to recover, although the words of the writ were true; a false action was properly where the words of the writ were false. Litt. § 689; Co. Litt. 361.

FAINT PLEADER. A fraudulent, false, or culminating manner of pleading to the deception of a third person.

FAIR, n. In English law. A greater species of market; a privileged market. Cowell; Cunningham, Law Dict. It is an incorporeal hereditament, granted by royal patent, or established by prescription presupposing a grant from the crown. A public mall or place of buying or selling. 1 Bla.Comm. 274.

Though etymologically signifying a market for buying and selling exhibited articles, it includes a place for the exhibition of agricultural and mechanical products. State v. Long, 46 Ohio St. 509, 28 N.E. 1038.

A fair is usually attended by a greater concourse of people than a market, for the amusement of whom various exhibitions are gotten up. McCulloch, Comm.Dict.; Wharton, Dict.

A fair is a franchise which is obtained by a grant from the crown. 2d Inst. 220; 3 Mod. 123; 1 Ld.Raym. 341; 2 Saund. 172; 1 Rolle, Abr. 106; Tomlin; Cunningham, Law Dict.

In the earlier English law, the franchise to hold a fair conferred certain important privileges; and fairs, as legally recognized institutions, possessed distinctive legal characteristics. Most of these privileges and characteristics, however, are now obsolete. In America, fairs, in the ancient technical sense, are unknown, and, in the modern and popular sense, they are entirely voluntary and illegal, and transactions arising in or in connection with them are subject to the ordinary rules governing sales, etc.

Impartial, free from suspicion, bias, etc. Looney v. Elliott, Tex.Civ.App., 52 S.W.2d 949, 952. Just; equitable; even-handed; equal, as between conflicting interests.

FAIR ABRIDGMENT. In copyright law. An abridgment consisting not merely in the arrangement of excerpts, but one involving real and substantial condensation of the materials by the exercise of intellectual labor and judgment. Folsom v. Marsh, 9 Fed.Cas. 345.

FAIR AND EQUITABLE. A proposed plan to dissolve parent public utility holding company and to reclassify its preferred and voting common stock is "fair and equitable", if preferred stockholders' rights are transmuted into their equitable equivalents. In re Securities and Exchange Commission, C.C.A.Del., 142 F.2d 411, 419.

As condition of confirmation under provisions of Bankruptcy Act relating to corporate reorganization, signify that the final arrangement must conform to principle that unsecured creditors are entitled to priority over stockholders to full extent of their debts and that any scaling down of claims of creditors without fair compensating advantage to them which is prior to rights of stockholders is inadmissible. Securities and Exchange Commission v. United States Realty & Improvement Co., 310 U.S. 434, 60 S.Ct. 1044, 1051, 84 L.Ed. 1293; In re Janson Steel & Iron Co., D.C.Pa., 47 F.Supp. 652, 655, 656.

Statutory requirements of "fair and equitable" railroad reorganization are satisfied so long as creditors receive full compensatory treatment and each group shares in securities of the whole enterprise on an equitable basis. Ecker v. Western Pac. R. R. Corporation, 318 U.S. 448, 63 S.Ct. 692, 713, 87 L.Ed. 892.

FAIR AND EQUITABLE VALUE. In a contract to purchase a waterworks plant at fair and equitable value, the amount is to be determined not by capitalization of the earnings nor limited to the cost of reproducing the plant, but allowance should be made for the additional value created by connection with and supply of buildings, although the company did not own the connections. National Waterworks Co. v. Kansas City, Mo., 62 F. 863.

FAIR AND FEASIBLE. As test in determining whether corporate reorganization plan should be FAIR AND FULL EQUIVALENT FOR LOSS. The same as a full and perfect equivalent. Fonticello Mineral Springs Co. v. City of Richmond, 147 Va. 355, 137 S.E. 458, 460.

FAIR AND IMPARTIAL JURY means that every member of the jury must be a fair and impartial juror. City of San Antonio v. McKenzie Const. Co., 136 Tex. 315, 150 S.W.2d 989, 993.

FAIR AND IMPARTIAL TRIAL. One where accused’s legal rights are safeguarded and respected. Floyd v. State, 166 Miss. 15, 148 So. 226, 232; Raney v. Commonwealth, 287 Ky. 492, 153 S.W.2d 935, 937, 938.

A fair and impartial trial by a jury of one’s peers contemplates counsel to look after one’s defense, compulsory attendance of witnesses, if need be, and a reasonable time in the light of all prevailing circumstances to investigate, properly prepare, and present the defense. Christie v. State, 94 Fla. 469, 114 So. 450, 451.

One wherein defendant is permitted to be represented by counsel and new witnesses for counsel are intimidated. George v. Kanapae, 284 Ill.App. 648, 3 N.E.2d 149. One wherein no undue advantage is taken by the district attorney or any one else. People v. Nationwide News Service, 16 N.Y.S.2d 277, 279, 172 Misc. 752. One wherein witnesses of litigants are permitted to testify under rules of court to his prejudice upon the trial. State v. Burns, 181 Iowa 1098, 165 N.W. 364, 347.

Defendant has a “fair and impartial trial” when opportunity is given to object and except to what is done to his prejudice upon the trial. State v. Burns, 181 Iowa 1098, 165 N.W. 346, 347.

Such a trial contemplates a trial before a jury of 12 impartial and unbiased men, neither more nor less, in the presence and under the superintendence of a judge having the power to instruct them as to the law and advise them in respect to the facts, and the establishment of guilt of an unanimous verdict of such jury. Baker v. Hudspeth, C.C.A.Ka., 129 F.2d 779, 782, 783. It contemplates counsel, compulsory attendance of witnesses, and time in which to prepare for trial. Wood v. State, 155 Fla. 256, 19 So.2d 872, 875. It excludes jurors who have an opinion on the merits of the case, based on such testimony as may reasonably be expected to be presented on the trial, or an opinion founded on personal ill will towards the accused. Murphy v. State, 72 Okl.Cr. 1, 112 P.2d 438, 453, 454. It includes a reasonable opportunity to prepare for trial. Crutchirds v. State, 190 Miss. 892, 2 So.2d 145, 146.

It requires that the jury of 12 men chosen to sit in judgment shall have no fixed opinion concerning the guilt or innocence of one on trial. Baker v. Hudspeth, C.C.A.Ka., 129 F.2d 779, 782, 783. There must not only be fair and impartial jury, and learned and upright judge, but there should be an atmosphere of calm in which witnesses can deliver their testimony without fear and intimidation, in which attorneys can assert accused’s rights freely and fully, and in which the truth may be received and given credence without fear of violence. Raney v. Commonwealth, 287 Ky. 492, 153 S.W.2d 935, 937, 938.

FAIR AND PROPER LEGAL ASSESSMENT. Such as places the value of property on a fair, • equal, and uniform basis with other property of like character and value throughout the county and state. Edward Hines Yellow Pine Trustees v. Knox, 144 Miss. 560, 108 So. 907, 911.

FAIR AND REASONABLE COMPENSATION. Full compensation. Pfeiffer v. Schee, Mo.App., 107 S.W.2d 170, 175.

FAIR AND REASONABLE CONTRACT. One which, when made with an infant, must not be one wasting the infant’s estate, but must be a provident one, advantageous to the minor. Berglund v. American Multigraph Sales Co., 135 Minn. 67, 160 N.W. 191, 193.

FAIR AND REASONABLE MARKET VALUE. Under statute requiring determination of fair and reasonable market value of mortgaged premises in connection with deficiency judgment, means market value and should be determined by those market conditions prevailing where willing buyers meet willing sellers and deal on that basis. Berkshire Life Ins. Co. of Pittsfield, Mass. v. Van Voorhis, 245 App.Div, 592, 283 N.Y.S. 95, 97, 98.

FAIR AND REASONABLE TOLLS. The term is broad enough to include such fair and reasonable charges as may be deemed “fair and reasonable” for value of privilege the toll payer obtains for his money in use of bridge. In re Tolls on St. Johns River Bridge, 108 Fla. 172, 146 So. 99, 100.

FAIR AND REASONABLE VALUE. This phrase in a statute imposing a tax on property means the best price obtainable at a voluntary sale, to be paid at once in money, and excluding any additional amount that might be had were credit or terms allowed. State v. Woodward, 208 Ala. 31, 93 So. 826.

Provision of statute for appraisal of farm debtor’s property at “fair and reasonable value, not necessarily market value,” for purpose of discharging debtor from his obligations, means that market value is minimum value to be found, beyond which other circumstances may be considered to arrive at “fair and reasonable value”. Louisville Joint Stock Land Bank v. Radford, C.C.A.Ky., 74 F.2d 576, 582.

FAIR AND VALUABLE CONSIDERATION. One which is a substantial compensation for the property conveyed, or which is reasonable, in view of the surrounding circumstances and conditions, in contradistinction to an adequate consideration. Jones v. Wey, 124 Okl. 1, 253 P. 291, 292; Lucas v. Coker, 189 Okl. 95, 113 P.2d 589, 590.

FAIR CASH VALUE. The phrase is practically synonymous with "reasonable value," and "actual cash value," meaning the fair or reasonable cash price for which the property can be sold on the market. Montesano Lumber & Mfg. Co. v. Portland Iron Works, 94 Or. 677, 186 P. 428, 432; State v. Woodward, 208 Ala. 31, 93 So. 826, 827.

The words "fair cash value" and the words "fair market value" are frequently treated as synonymous. Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation v. Boston Edison Co., 310 Mass. 674, 39 N.E.2d 584, 593.

For tax purposes "fair cash value" means the highest price the property would bring free of incumbrances, at a fair and voluntary private sale for cash. Commonwealth v. Sutcliffe, 287 Ky. 809, 155 S.W.2d 243, 245. The price that an owner will not be compelled to sell ought to receive from one willing but not compelled to buy. Assessors of Quincy v. Boston Consolidated Gas Co., 309 Mass. 60, 34 N.E.2d 623, 626. The price that the property would bring at a voluntary sale is the price the owner is ready, willing and able to sell but not compelled to do so. In re 168 Adams Bldg. Corporation, C.C.A.11., 105 F.2d 704, 708; People ex rel. McGaughey v. Wilson, 367 Ill. 494, 12 N.E.2d 5, 6; the price which some one will pay for it in open market. Donovan v. City of Haverhill, 141 N.E. 564, 565, 247 Mass. 69, 30 A.L.R. 358.

It is ascertained by a consideration of all elements making it attractive for valuable use to one under no compulsion to purchase, but yet willing to buy for a fair price, attributing to each element of value the amount it adds to the price likely to be offered by such a buyer. Massachusetts General Hospital v. Inhabitants of Belmont, 233 Mass. 190, 124 N.E. 21, 26.

Taxable "fair cash value", of annuity contract was to be determined according to mortality tables. Evans v. Boyle County Board of Sup'r's, 296 Ky. 353, 177 S.W.2d 137, 139.

FAIR COMMENT. A term used in the law of libel, applying to statements made by a writer in an honest belief of their truth, relating to official acts, even though the statements are not true in fact. People v. Hebbard, 96 Misc. 617, 162 N.Y.S. 80, 92. In a privileged communication the words used, if defamatory and libelous, are excused, while in "fair comment" the words are not a defamation and not libelous. Van Lonkhuyzen v. Daily News Co., 203 Mich. 570, 170 N.W. 93, 99.

Defense of "fair comment" is not destroyed by circumstance that jury may believe that the comment is logically unsound, but it suffices that a reasonable man may honestly entertain such opinion, on facts found. Cohalan v. New York Tribune, 172 Misc. 20, 15 N.Y.S.2d 58, 60, 61.

Imputation to official of corrupt or dishonorable motives is improper "fair comment" as "fair competition" which fair-minded man might reasonably draw from facts. Tanzer v. Crowle's Pub. Corporation, 240 App.Div. 203, 268 N.Y.S. 620.

Mere exaggeration, slight irony, or wit, or all those delightful touches of style going to make article readable, do not push beyond limitations of fair comment. Briarcliff Lodge v. Westchester Newspapers, 260 N.Y. 106, 183 N.E. 193, 197.

The words "fair competition" in National Industrial Recovery Act do not include price fixing, since price regulation is the antithesis of competition, fair or otherwise. Mississippi Valley Hardwood Co. v. McClanahan, D.C., 8 F.Supp. 388.

In bankruptcy law, one which is honest or free from suspicion, or one actually valuable, but not necessarily adequate or a full equivalent. Myers v. Fultz, 124 Iowa, 437, 100 N.W. 351.

FAIR DAMAGES are something more than nominal damages; and are even more than such damages as would compensate for injury suffered. Gurfein v. Howell, 142 Va. 197, 128 S.E. 644, 646.

FAIR EQUIVALENT. As used in statute providing that fair consideration is given for property exchanged at fair equivalent means value of time of conveyance, "equivalent" means equal in worth or value; "fair" means equitable as a basis for exchange; reasonable; a fair price. Utah FAIR KNOWLEDGE OR SKILL. A

that are embraced in the phrase 'due process of law'.
United States ex rel. Eng Pon Sing v. Reimer, D.C.N.Y.,

Although rules of evidence and of procedure have not been strictly followed a hearing may be "fair." Ex parte Bridges, D.C.Cal., 49 F.Supp. 292, 306; U. S. ex rel. Shaw

Fair hearing of an alien's right to enter the United States means a hearing before the immigration officers in accordance with the fundamental principles that inhere in due process of law, and implies that alien shall not only have a fair opportunity to present evidence in his favor, but shall be apprised of the evidence against him, so that at the conclusion of the hearing he may be in a position to know all of the evidence on which the matter is to be decided; it being not enough that the immigration officials meant to be fair. Ex parte Petkos, D.C.Mass., 212 F. 275, 277. See, also, Ex parte Keisuki Sata, D.C.Cal., 215 F. 173, 176.

The obligation of a local draft board to grant a registrant a "fair hearing" on matter of classification does not mean a trial by court or a trial in strict or formal sense. Rase
v. United States, C.C.A.Mich., 129 F.2d 204, 210; Seele v.
U. S., C.C.A.Mo., 133 F.2d 1015, 1022.

The test of a "fair hearing" before the National Labor Relations Board is whether the issues were clearly defined so that the employee could address itself to the charges made against it. National Labor Relations Board

Where students were charged with sale of examination papers and expelled, a 'fair hearing' did not contemplate a trial as in a chancery court or court of law. State ex rel. Sherman v. Hyman, 180 Tenn. 99, 171 S.W.2d 822, 826.

FAIR KNOWLEDGE OR SKILL. A reasonable degree of knowledge or Measure of skill. Jones
v. Angell, 95 Ind. 382.

FAIR MARKET PRICE means not only that the price be ascertained by sales, but that the sales so made and the subject-matter of the sales are to be considered. In re Spify's Estate, 124 Cal.
App. 642, 13 P.2d 385, 386.

For inheritance tax purposes, "clear market price" is synonymous with "fair market price." In re Spify's Es-

For tax purposes, means price fixed by manufacturer

States, C.C.A.Mich., 129 F.2d 204, 210; Seele v.
U. S., C.C.A.Mo., 133 F.2d 1015, 1022.

"Fair market value" assumes agreement between owner willing but not obliged to sell for cash and buyer desirous but not compelled to purchase. Lewis v. Beall, 162 Md. 18, 158 A. 354, 356. It implies not only a willing buyer, but a willing seller. Syracuse Engineering Co. v.
Haight, C.C.A.N.Y., 110 F.2d 468, 471. It means neither panic value, auction value, speculative value, nor a value fixed by depressed or inflated prices. In re Board of Water Supply of City of New York, 277 N.Y. 452, 14 N.E.2d 789, 792.
It resides in estimate and determination of what is fair, economic, just and equitable value under normal conditions. State ex rel. Buck v. Rapp,

As of a certain date. Fair market value of a given dale means amount which the seller would have sold for a valuable security or Equity to be bought and sold in course of business, Robertson v. Routzahn, D.C.Ohio, 1 F.Supp. 355, 356; price that could actually have been realized on that date, Jenkins
v. Smith, D.C.Conn., 21 F.Sup. 251; price that could have resulted had goods been exchanged between willing, informed, and normal buyer and similar seller, Jenkins v. Smith, D.C.Conn., 21 F.Sup. 251; price that would have resulted had goods been exchanged between willing, informed, and normal buyer and similar seller, Jenkins v. Smith, D.C.Conn., 21 F.Sup. 251; price that would have resulted had goods been exchanged between willing, informed, and normal buyer and similar seller,

FAIR TRIAL

It resides in an estimate and a determination of what is the fair, economic, just, and equitable value under normal conditions. In re Board of Water Supply of City of New York, 277 N.Y. 452, 14 N.E.2d 789, 792.

"Fair market value" of stock received by taxpayer in payment of bonuses was value of stock received in extinguishment of bonus claims and not amount credited for bonuses. Commissioner of Internal Revenue v. Vandeveer, C.C.A.6, 114 F.2d 719, 722.

Primary evidence of "fair market value" of stock is what willing purchasers pay to willing sellers on open market. Hazelton Corporation v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.3, 89 F.2d 513, 518.

SYNONYMOUS TERMS:

Value of real property for railroad purposes approximated by capitalizing net income considered with other factors, may be accepted as indicative of "fair market value". Appeal of Pitney, 20 N.J.Misc. 448, 28 A.2d 660, 664.

FAIR ON ITS FACE. A tax deed "fair on its face," is one which cannot be shown to be illegal without extraneous evidence. Denny v. Stevens, 52 Wyo. 253, 73 P.2d 308, 310, 113 A.L.R. 1337.

A process fair on its face does not mean that it must appear to be perfectly regular or in all respects in accord with proper practice and after the most approved form, but that it shall apparently be process lawfully issued and such process fair on its face does not mean that it must be of an ascertainable valuation. McVicker v. Tissier, 222 Ala. 422, 133 So. 22, 24. For "Fair Market Price," see that title.

FAIR PERJURY means argument, exhortation, or treatise addressed to a person without threat of physical harm or economic loss, or persistent molestation or harassment or fraudulent misrepresentations. City of Reno v., Second Judicial District Court in and for Washoe County, 59 Nev. 416, 95 P.2d 994, 998, 125 A.L.R. 948.

FAIR PLAY MEN. A local irregular tribunal which existed in Pennsylvania about the year 1769, as to which see Serg. Land Laws Pa. 77; 2 Smith, Laws Pa. 195.

FAIR PLEADER. See Beau-pleader.

If evidence on any material allegation is equally balanced, verdict should be for defendant. Funk v. Bonham, 204 Ind. 170, 183 N.E. 312, 317.

Such a superiority of evidence on one side that the fact of its outweighing the evidence on the other side can be perceived if the whole evidence is fairly considered. Bryan v. Railroad Co., 63 Iowa, 464, 19 N.W. 295; City Bank's Appeal, 54 Conn. 274, 7 A. 548. Such evidence as when weighed with that which is offered to oppose it, has more convincing power in the minds of the jury. Neely V. Detroit Sugar Co., 138 Mich. 469, 101 N.W. 665, 666.

The probability of truth; In re Oliver's Will, 126 Misc. 511, 214 N.Y.S. 154, 164; not necessarily the largest number of witnesses; Verdi v. Donahue, 91 Conn. 488, 99 A. 1041, 1043; Cheney v. Russell, 132 Me. 130, 167 A. 857, 858.

For "Fair Rent," see that title.

FAIR RETURN. A net return upon fair value of property. State ex rel. City of St. Louis v. Public Service Commission, 341 Mo. 920, 110 S.W. 2d 749, 778.

A "fair return" is to be largely measured by usual returns in like investments in the same vicinity over the same period of time. Natural Gas Pipeline Co. of America v. Federal Power Commission, C.C.A.7, 120 F.2d 625, 633, 634.

FAIR RETURN ON INVESTMENT. A fair return on value of property used and useful in carrying on the enterprise, performing the service or supplying the thing for which the rates are paid. Lubin v. Finkelstein, 82 N.Y.S.2d 329, 335.

FAIR SALE. In foreclosure and other judicial proceedings, this means a, sale conducted with fairness and impartiality as respects the rights and interests of the parties affected. Lalor v. McCarthy, 24 Minn. 419. A sale at a price sufficient to warrant confirmation or approval when it is required.

FAIR TRIAL. A hearing by an impartial and disinterested tribunal; a proceeding which hears before it condemns, which proceeds upon inquiry, and renders judgment only after trial. Johnson v. City of Wildwood, 116 N.J.L. 462, 184 A. 616, 617.

A full and fair trial, required in order that a foreign judgment against a citizen be recognized as a credit in the courts of the United States, means not a summary proceeding, but an opportunity to be heard on the proper issues; it involves questions of fact, and to have it considered by an impartial court. Banco Minero v. Ross, 106 Tex. 522, 172 S.W. 711, 714.

Essential factors are a fair and impartial jury and a learned and upright judge to instruct jury and pass upon legal questions, and an atmosphere in which wit- nesses can deliver their testimony without fear and intimida- tion, in which attorneys can assert defendant's rights freely and fully, and in which truth may be received and given without fear of adverse influence. Floy v. New York, 166 Miss. 15, 148 So. 226, 232. A trial before an impartial judge, and in an atmosphere of judicial calm; that, while the judge may and should direct and control the proceedings, and may exercise his right to com- ment upon the evidence, yet he may not extend his activities so far as to become in effect either an assisting prsgee or a thirteenth juror, Goldstein v. U. S., C.C.A.Mo., 63 F.2d 608, [D.C.Va., 2 F.Supp. 870, 879. Price which buyers of the property would bring at a sale on execution shown to have been fair, if said to be fair and reasonable; fair market value of the property as between one who wants to purchase and one who wants to sell the property. Market St. Nat. Bank v. Huff, 319 Pa. 286, 179 A. 582, 583.

FAIR USAGE. The doctrine of "fair usage" means that the matter which was under copyright was neither copied nor adopted, but that the uncopyrightable underlying idea was used, since a theme or idea is not copyrightable. Towle v. Ross, D.C.Or., 32 F.Supp. 125, 127.

FAIR VALUATION. Present market value; such sum as the property will sell for to a purchaser desiring to buy, the owner wishing to sell; such a price as a capable and diligent business man could present obtain from the property after conferring with those accustomed to buy such property; the amount the property would bring at a sale on execution shown to have been fair, if said to be fair and reasonable; fair market value of the property as between one who wants to purchase and one who wants to sell the property. Market St. Nat. Bank v. Huff, 319 Pa. 286, 179 A. 582, 583.

As used in Bankruptcy Act the term means fair cash value of fair market value of property as between one who wants to purchase and one who wishes to sell, Harman v. Defatta, 182 La. 463, 162 So. 44; Trenton Trust Co. v. Carlisle Tire Corporation, 110 Conn. 125, 147 A. 366, 367; "fair market value," or value that can be made promptly effec- tive by owner of property for payment of debts, Nicolai- Neppach Co. v. Smith, 154 Or. 450, 58 P.2d 1016, 1019, 107 A.L.R. 1124; In re Sedalia Farmers' Coop. Packing & Produce Co., D.C.Mo., 268 F. 898, 900; present market value of property and the value that the debtor might realize thereon if permitted to continue in business, Arnold v. U. S., 95 W.Va. 891, 119 S.E. 891; "fair value," or value that can be realized from their collection in relation to business of debtor as a going concern, In re Gibson Hotels, D.C.Wa., 24 F.Supp. 859, 863. It is the value that, if paid in full, would, given credence without fear of violence, Floyd v. State, 187 Miss. 441, 193 So. 452, 458; Johnson v. City of Wildwood, 116 N.J.L. 462, 184 A. 616.

In determining "fair valuation" of property, court should consider all elements entering into the intrinsic value, as well as the selling value, and also the earning power of the property. In re Gibson Hotels, D.C.Wa., 24 F.Supp. 859, 863; the “fair valuation” of accounts is what with reason- able diligence can be realized from their collection within a reasonable time, Matthews v. Concrete Engineer- Co., 228 Iowa 493, 292 N.W. 64, 65, 133 A.L.R. 1270.

FAIR VALUE. Present market value; such sum as the property will sell for to a purchaser desiring to buy, the owner wishing to sell; such a price as a capable and diligent business man could present obtain from the property after conferring with those accustomed to buy such property; the amount the property would bring at a sale on execution shown to have been fair, if said to be fair and reasonable; fair market value of the property as between one who wants to purchase and one who wants to sell the property. Market St. Nat. Bank v. Huff, 319 Pa. 286, 179 A. 582, 583.

"Actual value," "market value," "fair value," and the like, may be used as convertible terms. Kerr v. Clinch- field Coal Corporation, 169 Va. 149, 192 S.E. 741, 744.

In determining depreciation, "fair value" implies consid- eration of all factors material in negotiating sale and pur- chase of property, such as wear, decay, deterioration, ob-solescence, inadequacy, and redundancy. Idaho Power Co. v. Thompson, D.C.Idaho, 19 F.2d 547, 566.

As affecting stockholder's right to participate in re-organization plan, "fair value" of corporate debtor's prop- erty, connotes fair market value along with certain kinds of property, and in certain cases stock exchange quotations are the best index of value, but bonds of Repub- lic of Cuba, secured by apparently adequate pledges of revenues, should be valued at pari or with reasonable certainty in selling conditions. In re Warren Bros. Co., D.C.Mass., 39 F.Supp. 381, 384, 385.

Dissenting stockholder is entitled on combination or merger of corporations to "fair value" of stock determined by an ascertainment of all assets and liabilities of corpora- tion, intrinsic value of stock, and not merely its market value, when traded in by the public. American General Corporation v. Crompton & Knowles, 269 N.Y. 1069, 162 N.E. 629.

For purpose of credit upon a deficiency claim arising out of a mortgage foreclosure proceeding, that sum which the mortgage purchaser ought, under all circumstances, reasonably expect to realize from the acquired premises either by way of sale in the future or upon the basis of

Within a Revenue Act levying an excise tax on corporations measured by the fair value of their capital stock, "fair value" is the exact equivalent of "actual value." Central Union Trust Co. of New York v. Edwards, C.C.A. N.Y., 287 F. 324, 327.

Within statute requiring fair value of mortgaged premises to be credited on mortgage debt, interest, and costs before confirmation of foreclosure sale or rendition of deficiency judgment, that amount which under all circumstances of case will not shock conscience of court. Northwestern Loan & Trust Co. v. Bidinger, 226 Wis. 239, 276 N.W. 643, 644.

Rate Purposes

"Fair value" rule requires that consideration be given to original cost of construction, amount expended in permanent improvements, amount and market value of bonds and stock, present cost of construction, probable earning capacity of the property. Historical cost, provided consideration is given to changes in price level, reproduction cost at time of inquiry, less accrued depreciation, market value of land, working capital, concern value, and future costs of construction. State ex rel. and to Use of City of St. Louis v. Public Service Com'r, 326 Mo. 751, 34 S.W.2d 507, 518.

A "fair value" for rate making is not the value for exchange, but such a value found after considering all relevant facts as will give the public utility a reasonable return and the public a reasonable rate. It is one which will enable the public utility to realize the expense of operating and keeping up its road and meeting its financial obligations for investments with a reasonable excess for dividends and ordinary contingencies. City of Rochester v. New York State Rys., 127 Misc. 766, 217 N.Y.S. 452, 458.

"Fair value" must include increase in value over original cost. Northern States Power Co. v. Public Service Commission, 73 N.D. 211, 13 N.W.2d 779, 786, 787.

Historical cost, provided consideration is given to changes in price level, reproduction cost at time of inquiry, less accrued depreciation, provided reproduction cost of component parts or buildings with reasonable certainty, financial history of utility, and other relevant facts, may be considered in determining "fair value" of a utility's property. State v. Tri-State Telephone & Telegraph Co., 204 Minn. 516, 284 N.W. 294, 306.

Reproduction cost of telephone company's property, less actual depreciation, is not the legal equivalent of "fair value" but is merely evidence of value. New York Telephone Co. v. Prendergast, D.C.N.Y., 36 F.2d 54, 59.

The book cost of a telephone company's exchange plant "is a reproduction cost new" basis are recognized methods of ascertaining "fair value" of the company's property. Application of Northwestern Bell Tel. Co., 69 S.D. 36, 6 N.W.2d 165, 169.

The "fair value" as a rate base and the "value" in money for purposes of taxation of a public utility are not necessarily the same. State ex rel. Public Service Commission v. Southern Pac. Co., 79 P.2d 35, 34.

The "fair value" of a utility's property is the cost of reproduction, less depreciation at time in question, whether more or less than original cost. Citizens' Gas Co. of Hancock v. Public Service Commission of Missouri, D.C.Mo., 8 F.2d 632, 633. It is the reasonable value of property, used and useful, for the service of the public at the time the property is being so used. Northern States Power Co. v. Board of Railroad Com'r, 71 N.D. 1, 298 N.W. 423, 431.

Value of additions completed and in use by a utility should be allowed in rate case in determining "fair value". Northern States Power Co. v. Board of Railroad Com'r, 71 N.D. 1, 298 N.W. 423, 431.

"Fairly" is not synonymous with "true," and "true" should not be substituted for it in a commissioner's oath. Language may be legally, yet unfairly, reported; that is, an answer may be truly written down, yet in a manner conveying a different meaning from that intended and conveyed. And language may be fairly reported, yet not in accordance with strict truth. Lawrence v. Finch, 17 N.E.2d 234.

FAIRWAY. A strip of land, where the grass is kept mowed, and at the opposite ends of which are a green and a tee. Page v. Unterreiner, Mo.App., 106 S.W.2d 528, 532.

The middle and deepest or most navigable channel. Water on which vessels of commerce habitually move; Horst v. Columbia Contract Co., 89 Or. 344, 174 P. 161, 163. The word "thatweg" (q.v.), from which it is apparently derived, has reference more particularly to navigable channels as boundaries. Johnson v. American Tugboat Co., 147 P. 1147, 85 Wash. 212.

FAIT. L. Fr. Anything done. A deed; act; fact.

A deed lawfully executed. Corn. Dig.

Femme (or Feme) de fait. A wife de facto.

FAIT ENROLLE. A deed enrolled, as a bargain and sale of freeholds. 1 Keb. 568.

FAIT JURIDIQUE. In French law. A juridical fact. One of the factors or elements constitutive of an obligation.

FAITH. Confidence; credit; reliance. Thus, an act may be said to be done "on the faith" of certain representations.

Belief; credence; trust. Thus, the constitution provides that "full faith and credit" shall be given to the judgments of each state in the courts of the others.

Purpose; intent; sincerity; state of knowledge or design. This is the meaning of the word in the phrases good faith and "bad faith."

Scotch Law. A solemn pledge; an oath. "To make faith" is to swear, with the right hand uplifted, that one will declare the truth. 1 Forb. Inst. pt. 4, p. 235.

FAITHFUL. Trusty, honest, trustworthy. Wright v. Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland, 176 Okl. 274, 54 P.2d 1084, 1087.

As used in the rule that executors must be "faithful," means that they must act in good faith. In re McCafferty's Will, 147 Misc. 179, 264 N.Y.S. 36.

The guaranty required by statute and bond of "faithful" discharge of school district treasurer's duties is a guaranty not only of treasurer's personal honesty but also of his

Where a public officer gives a bond for the "faithful" discharge of his duties, "faithful" implies that he has assumed that measure of responsibility laid on him by law had no bond been given. Thurston County, to Use of Vesely, v. Chmelka, 138 Neb. 696, 294 N.W. 857, 863, 132 A.L.R. 1077; London & Lancashire Indemnity Co. of America v. Community Savings & Loan Ass'n, 102 Ind.App. 665, 4 N.E. 2d 688, 693.

As used in bonds of public and private officers, this term imports not only honesty, but also a punctilious discharge of all the duties of the office, requiring competence, diligence, and attention, without any malfeasance or nonfeasance, aside from mere mistakes. State v. Chadwick, 10 Or. 468; Hoboken v. Evans, 31 N.J.L. 343; Harris v. Hanson, 11 Me. 245.

FAITOURS. Idle persons; idle livers; vagabonds. Termes de la Ley; Cowell; Blount; Cunningham, Law Dict.

FAKE. To make or construct. A "faked alibi" is a made, manufactured, or false alibi. U. S. v. Heftier, D.C.111., 274 F. 401, 409.

FAKIR. A term applied among the Mohammedans to a kind of religious ascetic or beggar, whose claim is that he "is in need of mercy, and poor in the sight of God, rather than in need of worldly assistance." Hughes, Dict. of Islam.

Sometimes spelled Faqueer or Fakereer. It is commonly used in English to designate a person engaged in some useless or dishonest business. Fake is also so used and also to designate the quality of such business.

FALANG. In old English law. A jacket or close coat. Blount.

FALCARE. In old English law. To mow. For "Jus Folecandi", see that title.

Falcata, grass fresh mown, and laid in swaths. That which was mowed. Kennett, Gloss.; Cowell; Jacobs.

Falcata, grass fresh mown, and laid in swaths. That which was mowed. Kennett, Gloss.; Cowell; Jacobs.

Falcata, a day's mowing. Falcatura una. Once mowing the grass.

FALCARIOUS. See Falsarius, FALCIDA. In Spanish law. The Faldadian portion; the portion of an inheritance which could not be legally bequeathed away from the heir, viz., one-fourth.

FALCIDIAN LAW. In Roman law. A law on the subject of testamentary disposition. It was enacted by the people during the reign of Augustus, in the year of Rome 714, on the proposition of the tribune Falcidius. By this law, the testator's right to burden his estate with legacies was subjected to an important restriction. It prescribed that no one could bequeath more than three-fourths of his property in legacies, and that the heir should have at least one-fourth of the estate, and that, should the testator violate this prescript, the heir may have the right to make a proportional deduction from each legatee, so far as necessary. Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 771; Inst. 2, 22; Heinec.Elem. lib. 2, tit. 22.

A similar principle exists in Louisiana. See Legitime. In some of the states the statutes authorizing bequests and devises to charitable corporations limit the amount which a testator may give, to a certain fraction of his estate.

FALCIDIAN PORTION. That portion of a testator's estate which, by the Faldadian law, was required to be left to the heir, amounting to at least one-fourth.

FALD, or FALDA. A sheep-fold. Cowell.

FALDA. Span. In Spanish law. The slope or skirt of a hill. Fossat v. United States, 2 Wall. 673, 17 L.Ed. 739.

FALDIE CURSUS. In old English law. A fold-course; the course (going or taking about) of a fold. Spelman. A sheep walk, or feed for sheep. 2 Vent. 139.

FALDAGE. The privilege which anciently several lords reserved to themselves of setting up folds for sheep in any fields within their manors, the better to manure them, and this not only with their own but their tenants' sheep. Called, variously, "recta foldare," "fold-course," "free-hold," "faldagi." Cowell; Spelman; Cunningham, Law Dict.

FALDATA. In old English law. A flock or fold of sheep. Cowell.

FALDFEY. Sax. A fee or rent paid by a tenant to his lord for leave to fold his sheep on his own ground. Blount; Cunningham, Law Dict, FALDISDORY. In ecclesiastical law. The bishop's seat or throne within the chancel.

FALDSOCA. Sax. The liberty or privilege of foldage.

FALDSTOOL. A place at the south side of the altar at which the sovereign kneels at his coronation. Wharton.

A folding seat similar to a camp stool, made either of wood or metal, sometimes covered with silk or other material. It was used by a bishop when officiating in other than his own cathedral church. Encyc.Dic.

FALDWORTH. In Saxon law. A person reckoned old enough to become a member of the decennary, and so subject to the law of frank-pledge. Spelman; Du Fresne.
FALK-LAND. See Folc-Land.

1st of September and terminating with the last

FALSE

In law, this word usually means something more than untrue; it means something designedly untrue and deceitful, and implies an intention to perpetrate some treachery or fraud. Hatcher v. Dunn, 102 Iowa, 411, 71 N.W. 343, 36 L.R.A. 133. False arrest. Any unlawful physical restraint by one of another's liberty, whether in prison or elsewhere. Gariety v. Fleming, 121 Kan. 762, 201, 22 A. 604. It implies either conscious wrong or culpable negligence, and signifies knowingly or negligently untrue. United States v. Ninety-Nine Diamonds, C.C.A. Minn., 139 F. 961, 72 C.C.A. 9, 2 L.R.A., N.S., 185. The word "false" has two distinct and well-recognized meanings: (1) intentionally or knowingly or negligently untrue; (2) untrue by mistake or accident, or honestly affecting the exercise of reasonable care. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Adams, D.C. Minn., App., 37. A 2d 345, 350. In jurisprudence, "false" and "falsely" are oftenest used to characterize a wrongful or criminal act, such as involves an error of untruth, intentionally or knowingly put forward. A thing is called "false" when it is done, or made, with knowledge, actual or constructive, that it is untrue or illegal, or is said to be done falsely when the meaning is that the party is in fault for its error. Fouts v. State, 113 Ohio St. 450, 149 N.E. 551, 554; Monahan v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. of New York, 192 Wis. 102, 212 N.W. 269, 271. The word "false" in its juristic use implies something more than a mere untruth, Dombroski v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 126 N.Y.L. 545, 19 A.2d 678, 680. The word "false" sometimes connotes an intent to deceive. People v. Wahl, 39 Cal.App.2d Supp. 771, 100 P.2d 550, 551; Salt's Textile Mfg. Co. v. Ghent, 107 Conn. 211, 139 A. 694, 695.

FALSE ACTION, See Feigned Action.

FALSE AND FRAUDULENT. The phrase "false and fraudulent" in Food and Drugs Act of 1906 means that the statement must have been made with actual intent to deceive. United States v. Dr. David Roberts Veterinary Co., C.C.A.Wis., 104 F.2d 785, 788. To amount to actionable "false and fraudulent representations", they must have been as to existing fact or known by one making them, from his superior knowledge, to have been untrue when made. Burlison v. Weis, Mo. App., 152 S.W.2d 201, 203.

FALSE ANSWER. In pleading. A sham answer; one which is false in the sense of being a mere pretense set up in bad faith and without color of fact. Howe v. Elwell, 57 App.Div. 357, 67 N.Y. Supp. 1108; Farnsworth v. Halstead, Sup., 10 N.Y. S. 763.

FALSE CHARACTER. Personating the master or mistress of a servant, or any representative of such master or mistress, and giving a false character to the servant is an offense punishable in England with a fine of £20. St. 32 Geo. III. c. 56.

FALSE CHECKS. Obtaining money by means and use of a check upon a bank, in which the drawer at the time had no funds or credit with which to meet the same, and which he had no reason to believe would honor such check upon presentation at said bank for payment, is obtaining money by use of a false check. Gunther v. State, 42 Okl.Cr. 129, 276 P. 237, 238.

FALSE CLAIM, in the forest law, was where a man claimed more than his due, and was amerced and punished for the same. Manw. c. 25; Tomlins.

As used in a statute making it a felony to present to any state, county, or city board or officer a false or fraudulent claim, a 'false claim' is something more than a merely excessive claim. Burke v. Knox, 59 Utah, 596, 206 P. 711, 714. The act of knowingly making untruthful statements of material facts in "reasons for refund" of excise taxes, supported by fictitious copies of letters and cards attached thereto, constitutes "false claim" against government, within Criminal Code, § 35 (18 T.J.S.CA §§ 80, 82-86). Evans v. U. S., C.C.A.S.C., 11 F.2d 37, 39.

FALSE DECRETALS. A collection of canon law, dated about the middle of the 9th century, probably by a Frankish ecclesiastic who called himself Isadon. It continued to be the chief repertory of the canon law till the 15th century when its untrustworthy nature was demonstrated.

FALSE DEMONSTRATION. Where description of person or thing in will is partly true and partly false, if part which is true describes subject or object of gift with sufficient certainty, untrue part may be rejected and gift sustained, under doctrine of "false demonstration." In re Heins' Estate, 132 Cal.App. 131, 22 F.2d 549.

FALSE ENTRY. An entry in books of a bank or trust company which is intentionally made to represent what is not true or does not exist, with intent either to deceive its officers or a bank examiner or to defraud the bank or trust company. Agnew v. U. S., 165 U.S. 36, 17 S.Ct. 235, 41 L.Ed. 624; Fricke v. State, 112 Neb. 767, 201 N.W. 667, 670; Commonwealth v. Bardolph, 111 Pa.Super. 85, 169 A. 574, 575; U. S. v. Mulloney, D.C.Mass., 5 F.Supp. 77, 79.

An untrue statement of items of account by written words, figures, or marks. United States v. Herrig, D.C. Mont., 204 F. 124, 125. One making an original false entry makes a false entry in every book which is made up in regular course from the entry or entries from the original book of entry. State v. Davidson, 46 N.D. 564, 180 N.W. 31, 32.

Where entry upon books of bank of matter contained in deposit slip is not true it is a "false entry," Adams v. State, 179 Ark. 1047, 20 S.W.2d 130, 133.

FALSE FACT. In the law of evidence. A feigned, simulated, or fabricated fact; a fact not founded in truth, but existing only in assertion; the deceitful semblance of a fact.

FALSE IMPERSONATION. To impersonate another falsely, and iri such assumed character to do any act whereby any benefit might accrue to the offender or to another person. People v. Horkans, 109 Colo. 177, 123 P.2d 824.
FALSE IMPRISONMENT. See Imprisonment.

FALSE INSTRUMENT. A counterfeit; one made in the similitude of a genuine instrument and purporting on its face to be such. U. S. v. Howell, 11 Wall. 435, 20 L.Ed. 195; U. S. v. Owens, C.C.Tenn., 37 Fed. 115; State v. Willson, 28 Minn. 52, 9 N.W. 28.

FALSE JUDGMENT. In old English law. A writ which lay when a false judgment had been pronounced in a court not of record, as a county court, court baron, etc. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 17, 18. In old French law. The defeated party in a suit had the privilege of accusing the judges of pronouncing a false or corrupt judgment, whereupon the issue was determined by his challenging them to the combat or duellum. This was called the "appeal of false judgment." Montesq. Esprit des Lois, liv. 28, c. 27.

FALSE LATIN. When law proceedings were written in Latin, if a word were significant though not good Latin, yet an indictment, declaration, or fine should not be made void by it; but if the word were not Latin, nor allowed by the law, and it were in a material point, it made the whole vicious. (5 Coke, 121; 2 Nels. 830.) Wharton.

FALSE MAKING. An essential element of forgery, where material alteration is not involved. Term has reference to manner in which writing is made or executed rather than to its substance or effect. A falsely made instrument is one that is fictitious, not genuine, or in some material particular something other than it purports to be and without regard to truth or falsity of facts stated therein. Wright v. U. S., C.Ariz., 172 F.2d 310, 311.

FALSE NEWS. Spreading false news, whereby discord may grow between the queen of England and her people, or the great men of the realm, or which may produce other mischiefs, discord may grow between the queen of England and her people, or the great men of the realm, or which may produce other mischiefs, still seems to be a misdemeanor, under St. 3 Edw. I. c. 34. Steph. Cr. Dig. § 95.

FALSE OATH. To defeat discharge in bankruptcy "false oath" must contain all the elements involved in "perjury" at common law, namely, an intentional untruth in matter material to a material issue, In re Bergman, D.C.N.Y., 6 F.Supp. 898, 901, it must have been knowingly and fraudulently made. In re Stone, D.C.N.H., 52 F.2d 639, 641. See, also, Perjury.

FALSE OR FRAUDULENT CLAIM. A "false or fraudulent claim" within meaning of statute providing for punishment of any one receiving proceeds of fraudulent audit or payment, since to be "false or fraudulent," must be a claim for services or materials not actually rendered or furnished. People v. Dally, 175 Misc. 680, 24 N.Y.S.2d 692, 695.

FALSE PAPER. In a statute defining an offense of willfully and knowingly subscribing to "false papers" to deceive bank examiners, the term refers not to one which is forged or spurious, but to a paper duly subscribed by the person purporting to sign it, and containing an untrue statement in the body of the instrument. State v. Pierson, 101 Wash. 318, 172 P. 236, 238.

FALSE PERSIONATION. The criminal offense of falsely representing some other person and acting in the character thus unlawfully assumed, in order to deceive others, and thereby gain some profit or advantage, or enjoy some right or privilege belonging to the one so personated, or subject him to some expense, charge, or liability. See 4 Steph. Comm. 181, 290.

FALSE PLEA. See Sham Plea.

FALSE PRETENSES. Designed misrepresentation of existing fact or condition whereby person obtains another's money or goods. People v. Gould, 363 Ill. 348, 2 N.E.2d 324.

Other definitions of "false pretenses" include:

- False representation of existing fact or condition by which a party obtains property of another. People ex rel. Courtney v. Sullivan, 363 Ill. 34, 1 N.E.2d 206, 208; false representation of existing fact, whether by oral or written words or conduct, calculated to deceive, intended to deceive, and does in fact deceive, whereby one person obtains value from another without compensation. Commonwealth v. Johnson, 312 Pa. 140, 167 A. 344, 345, 89 A.L.R. 333; State v. Alick, 62 S.D. 220, 252 N.W. 644; false representation of existing or past fact calculated to induce confidence on part of one to whom representation is made, and accompanied by or blended with a promise to do something in future. State v. Parkinson, 181 Wash. 69, 41 P.2d 1080, 1097; false representation of existing fact, made with knowledge of falsity, with intent that party to whom it is made should act upon it, and acted upon by such party to his detriment. Griffith v. State, 93 Ohio St. 294, 112 N.E. 1017, 1018; State v. Hathaway, 168 Wis. 518, 170 N.W. 654, 656; State v. Whitney, 43 Idaho, 743, 254 P. 525, 526; Smith v. State, 74 Fla. 594, 77 So. 274, 276; false representation of past or existing fact, made with knowledge of falsity, with intent to deceive and defraud, and which is adapted to deceive person to whom made, State v. Alick, 62 S.D. 220, 252 N.W. 644; false representations and statements, made with a fraudulent design to obtain money, goods, wares, or merchandise, with intent to cheat, 2 Bouv. Inst. 1, 239; false statements made with knowledge of its falsity, which is intended to deceive, and which in fact does deceive, and injury results. Morris Plan Bank of Richmond v. Henderson, D.C.N.C., 57 F.2d 326, 327; fraudulent representation of fact by one who knows it not to be true as is adapted to induce person to whom made to part with something of value, Fisher v. State, 161 Ark. 586, 256 S.W. 585, 860; State v. Tanner, 22 N.M. 493, 164 P. 321, 822, 17 L.R.A. 860; State v. Boyce (Ind. 1937) 152 A. 1079, 1080; State v. Barr, 63 Idaho 59, 177 P.2d 282, 286; misrepresentation of past fact, knowingly made to induce another to part with his property, People v. Martin, 372 Ill. 114, 276 N.E. 380, 381; misstatement of fact, Carr v. State, 60 Ga.App. 590, 4 S.E.2d 500, 501; representation of some fact or circumstance, calculated to mislead or deceive, which is not true. State v. Grant, 86 Iowa 216, 53 N.W. 120; Commonwealth v. McKnight, 289 Mass. 530, 195 N.E. 499, 506.

A pretense is the holding out or offering to others something as a fact which is not true. This misrepresentation, either by words or actions, which amounts to false representations. In fact, false representations are inseparable from the idea of a pretense. Without a representation which is false there can be no pretense. State v. Joaquín, 43 Iowa, 132.

Gist of offense of "obtaining money by false pretenses" is the fraud and deception by the perpetrator, his motive, and the result—the fact that a person was deceived and defrauded. Frazier v. Commonwealth, 291 Ky. 467, 165 S.W.2d 33, 34.

In "false pretenses" owner intends to part with his property in money or chattel but it is obtained from him by fraud. People v. Santora, 51 Cal.App.2d 707, 125 P.2d 606, 608.

One distinction between "embezzlement" and "false pretenses" is that in the former case the defendant does not have title to the property, while in the latter, he has. State v. Serkau, 128 Conn. 153, 20 A.2d 725, 727.

Confidence game distinguished

A "confidence game" is any swindling operation in which advantage is taken of the confidence reposed by the victim in the swindler. It consists of gaining the possession of money or property by means of some trick, device, or swindling operation in which advantage is taken of the confidence of the victim reposed in the swindler. In obtaining money by "false pretenses," the false pretenses used must have been believed and relied on by the defrauded party and been the means which another relied and acted, Platte Valley Bank v. Utter, 306 Mo. 529, 45 S.W.2d 396, 398.

"Confidence game" is not established by mere proof that property has been obtained by false pretense. Clark v. State, 53 Ariz. 416, 89 P.2d 1077, 1080.

Larceny and false pretenses distinguished

In larceny owner has no intention to part with his property, although he may intend to part with possession, while in false pretenses the owner does intend to part with the property but it is obtained from him by fraud. People v. Shwartz, 43 Cal.App. 696, 185 P. 686, 687. Roberta v. State, 181 Ind. 520, 104 N.E. 970, 971.

In larceny owner has no intention to part with title to and possession of property taken, while in false pretenses he does so intend, but it is obtained from him by fraud. Simmons v. State, 165 Md. 155, 167 A. 60, 64.

Only a very narrow distinction exists between "larceny" and "false pretense"; the character of the crime depending on the intention of the parties. Riley v. State, 64 Okl. Cr. 183, 78 P.2d 712, 716.

The intention of owner of property not to part with title to relinquishing possession of property is vital point to be determined in distinguishing between "larceny by fraud" and obtaining property by "false pretenses". Dobson v. State, 74 Okl.Cr. 347, 126 P.2d 95, 101.

Obtaining money or property by false pretenses

Elements are intent to defraud, actual fraud, false pretenses and fraud resulting therefrom. Simmons v. State, 165 Md. 155, 167 A. 60, 64; false pretenses, that property was obtained thereby, that false pretenses were made with intent to cheat and defraud, and that money was paid in reliance upon and under inducement of false pretenses, People v. Sloane, 165 Misc. 444, 300 N.Y.S. 1032, 1035.

It is sufficient if false pretenses are a part of the moving cause, and, without them, the defrauded party would not have parted with the property. State v. Faulkner, 139 Kan. 665, 33 P.2d 175, 177.

The distinction between obtaining money by false pretenses and forgery is that in the former, the acquisition of the money is the principal thing, while in forgery the making, altering, uttering, or publishing of the written instrument is the principal part, and money need not necessarily be obtained. State v. Hobl, 108 Kan. 261, 194 P. 921, 924.

The false representations may be made by implication. Johnson v. People, 110 Colo. 283, 133 P.2d 789, 792.

The "false pretense" may be the failure to speak when it was necessary to do so. People v. Etzlter, 292 Mich. 489, 290 N.W. 879, 880.

The "false pretense" must relate to existing fact, or to fact which has theretofore occurred. Jones v. State, 236 Ala. 30, 182 So. 404, 405.

FALSE REPRESENTATION. A representation which is untrue, willfully made to deceive another to his injury. See, also, Deceit and Fraud.

A deceitful representation, or one contrary to the fact, made knowingly and with the design and effect of inducing the other party to enter into the contract to which it relates; a declaration of present intention, false when made, to perform act in future. Pease & Elliman v. Wegeman, 223 App.Div. 682, 229 N.Y.S. 398, 400; a representation known to be false by person making it, or made without knowledge as a positive statement of known fact upon which another relied and acted, Platte Valley Bank v. Lemke, 141 Neb. 218, 3 N.W.2d 396, 399; a representation of what is true, which nevertheless creates an impression which is false. Newark Trust Co. v. Lackawanna Inv. Co., 88 N.J.Eq. 541, 103 A. 168, 169; McClellan v. Tobin, Ind., 211 Ind. 273, 274, 205 N.E. 573; a representation of something as true which in fact one does not know to be true. Tone v. Halsey, Stuart & Co., 286 Ill.App. 169, 3 N.E.2d 142, 147; an assertion of something as true which one does not know to be true, Hargrove v. Henderson, 108 Cal.App. 667, 292 P. 148; such representations as will deceive persons of ordinary prudence. Union Central Life Ins. Co. v. Kerron, 128 Or. 70, 264 P. 453, 455; Holmberg v. Prudential Savings & Loan Ass'n, 130 Or. 1, 278 P. 943, 945.

A "false representation" may arise from any conduct capable of being turned into a statement of fact. Bundesen v. Lewis, 291 Ill.App. 83, 9 N.E.2d 327, 334.

A "false representation" may be made scienter, so as to afford a right of action in damages, in any of the following ways: (1) With actual knowledge of its falsity (2) without knowledge and in reliance upon the false fact (3) under circumstances in which the person making it ought to have known if he did not know of its falsity. Horton v. Tyree, 724
FALSE WORDS

A false representation, within Bankruptcy Act not affected by discharge, must involve moral turpitude or intent to deceive. Hisey v. Lewis-Gale Hospital, D.C.Va., 27 F.Supp. 20, 23.

False statements although future in form may be “false representations” of existing facts and conditions. National Theatre Supply Co. v. Rigney, Mo.App., 130 S.W.2d 258, 263.

To maintain an action for damages for “false representation,” the plaintiff, in substance, must allege and must prove by a preponderance of the evidence the following elements: (1) What representation was made; (2) that it was false; (3) that the defendant knew it was false, or else made it without knowledge as a positive statement of known fact; (4) that the plaintiff believed the representation to be true; (5) that the plaintiff relied on and acted upon the representation; (6) that the plaintiff was thereby injured; and (7) the amount of the damages. Peterson v. Schaber, 116 Neb. 346, 217 N.W. 586, 587.

FALSE RETURN. See Return.

FALSE STATEMENT. Under statutory provision, making it unlawful for officer or director of corporation to make any false statement in regard to corporation’s financial condition, the phrase means something more than merely untrue or erroneous, but implies that statement is designedly untrue and deceitful, and made with intention to deceive person to whom false statement is made or exhibited. State v. Johnston, 149 S.C. 138, 146 S.E. 657, 660.

As used in bankruptcy statute provision concerning discharge, these words denote or connote guilty scienter on part of bankrupt. In re Krulewitch, D.C.N.J., 60 F.2d 1039, 1041; Wilensky v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., C.C.A.C.A. Mass., 67 F.2d 389, 390. They mean an incorrect statement made or acquiesced in with knowledge of incorrectness or with reckless indifference to actual facts and with no reasonable ground to believe it correct. International Shoe Co. v. Lewine, C.C.A.C.A.Miss., 68 F.2d 517, 518; statement false to bankrupt’s knowledge and made with fraudulent intent. In re Johnson, D.C.Conn., 1 F.Supp. 649, 651; statement knowingly false, or made recklessly without honest belief in its truth, and with purpose to mislead or deceive, Thode v. Schatten, C.C.A.Tenn., 81 F.2d 538, 540; In re Ventura, D.C.Conn., 25 F.Supp. 332. They mean more than erroneous or untrue and import intention to deceive. Schapiro v. Tweede Footwear Corporation, C.C.A.A.C.A. Cal., 131 F.2d 877, 878.

Bank’s statement which gives result showing bank substantially stronger than it is in fact; constitutes “false statement” within statute defining offense of making or publishing false statement. Rosenberg v. State, 212 Wis. 434, 249 N.W. 541.

FALSE SWERING. The essential elements of “false swearing” consist in willfully, knowingly, absolutely and falsely swearing under oath or affirmation on a matter concerning which the party could legally be sworn and on oath administered by one legally authorized to administer it. Smith v. State, 66 Ga.App. 669, 19 S.E.2d 168, 169.

To constitute “false swearing”, it must appear that matter sworn to was judicially pending or being investigated by grand jury, or was a subject on which accused could legally have been sworn, or on which he was required to be sworn. Capps v. Commonwealth, 294 Ky. 743, 172 S.W.2d 610, 611. The oath need not be taken in a matter judicially pending or any matter material to any point in question. Capps v. Commonwealth, 294 Ky. 743, 172 S.W.2d 610, 611. See also, Perjury.
FALSEDAD. In Spanish law. Falsity; an alteration of the truth. Las Partidas, pt. 3, tit. 26, l. 1.

Deception; fraud. Id. pt. 3, tit. 32, l. 21.

FALSEHOOD. A statement or assertion known to be untrue, and intended to deceive. A willful act or declaration contrary to the truth. Putnam v. Osgood, 51 N.H. 207.

The term is perhaps generally used in the second sense here given. It is committed either by the willful act of the party, or by dissimulation, or by words.

Crabbe thus distinguishes between falsehood and untruth: "The latter is an untrue saying, and may be unintentional, in which case it reflects no disgrace on the agent. A falsehood and a lie are intentional false sayings, differing only in degree of the guilt of the offender; falsehood being not always for the express purpose of deceiving, but a lie always for the worst of purposes." See Rosc.Cr.Ev. 362; Deceit; Fraud; Misrepresentation.

Scotch Law
A fraudulent imitation or suppression of truth, to the prejudice of another. Bell. "Something used and published falsely." An old Scottish nomen juris. "Falsehood is undoubtedly a nominate crime, so much so that Sir George Mackenzie and our older lawyers used no other term for the falsification of writs, and the name 'forgery' has been of modern introduction." If there is any distinction to be made between 'forgery' and 'falsehood,' I would consider the latter to be more comprehensive than the former. 2 Broun, 77, 78.

As applied to making or altering a writing in order to make it forged, implies that the paper or writing is not genuine; that in itself it is false or counterfeit. People v. Kramer, 352 Ill. 304, 185 N.E. 590, 591.

The use of the word falsely in a statute (against counterfeiting) implies that there must be a fraudulent or criminal intent in the act; U. S. v. King, 5 McLean 208, Fed. Cas.No.15,555. See, also, 4 B. & C. 329; 6 Com.Dig. 58; Stark, Cr.PI. 86.

The word 'falsely,' particularly in a criminal statute, suggests something more than a mere untruth and includes perfidiously or treacherously or with intent to defraud. United States v. Achter, C.C.A.N.Y., 144 F.2d 49, 52.

FALSELY IMPERSONATE. To "falsely impersonate" may mean to pretend to be a particular person without lawful authority. People v. Hors kans, 109 Colo. 177, 123 P.2d 824, 826.

FALSELY MAKE, means to make an instrument which has no original as such and no genuine maker whose work is copied, although in form it may resemble a type of recognized security. Pines v. United States, C.C.A.Iowa, 123 F.2d 825, 828.

FALSI CRIMEN. Fraudulent subornation or concealment, with design to darken or hide the truth, and make things appear otherwise than they are. It is committed (1) by words, as when a witness swears falsely; (2) by writing, as when a person antedates a contract; (3) by deed, as selling by false weights and measures. Wharton. See Crim. Falsi.

FALSIFICATION. In equity practice. The showing an item in the debit of an account to be either wholly false or in some part erroneous. 1 Story, Eq.Jur. § 525. And see Phillips v. Belden, 2 Edw. Ch. 23; Pit v. Cholmondeley, 2 Ves. Sr. 565; Tate v. Gairdner, 119 Ga. 133, 46 S.E. 73; Armstrong v. Toler, 11 Wheat., U.S., 237, 6 L.Ed. 468.

FALSIFY. To disprove; to prove to be false or erroneous; to avoid or defeat; spoken of verdicts, appeals, etc. Co. Litt. 104b.

To counterfeit or forge; to make something false; to give a false appearance to anything. To make false by mutilation or addition; to tamper with; as, to falsify a record or document. Pou v. Ellis, 66 Fla. 358, 63 So. 721, 722.

To show, as in an accounting before a master in chancery, that a charge has been inserted which is wrong; that is, either wholly false or in some part erroneous. Pull. Accts. 162; 1 Story, Eq.Jur. § 525. See Shores-Mueller Co. v. Bell, 21 Ga.App. 194, 94 S.E. 83, 84; Falsification.

The word "falsify" may be used to convey two distinct meanings—either that of being intentionally or knowingly untrue, made with intent to defraud, or mistakenly and accidentally untrue. Washer v. Bank of America Nat. Trust & Savings Ass'n, 21 Cal.2d 822, 136 P.2d 297, 301.

FALSIFYING A JUDGMENT. A term sometimes used for reversing a judgment. See 4 Steph. Com. 553.

Making or proving false.

FALSING OF DOOMS. In Scotch law. The proving the injustice, falsity, or error of the doom or sentence of a court. Tomlins; Jacob. The reversal of a sentence or judgment; an action to set aside a decree. Skene. Protesting against a sentence and taking an appeal to a higher tribunal. Bell, Dict.

FALSITY implies more than erroneous or untrue; it indicates knowledge of untruth. Abercrombie v. Hair, 185 Ga. 728, 196 S.E. 447, 451.

FALSO RETORNO BREVIUM. In old English law. A writ which formerly lay against the sheriff who had execution of process for false returning of writs. Reg. Jud. 43b; Cunningham, Law Dict.

FALSONARIUS. A forger; a counterfeiter. Hov. 424.
FALSUM. Lat. In the civil law. A false or forged thing; a fraudulent simulation; a fraudulent counterfeit or imitation, such as a forged signature or instrument. Also falsification, which may be either by falsehood, concealment of the truth, or fraudulent alteration, as by cutting out or erasing part of a writing.

FALSUS. Lat. False; fraudulent; erroneous. Deceitful; mistaken.

In the sense of "deceiving" or "fraudulent," it is applied to persons in respect to their acts and conduct, as well as to things; and in the sense of "erroneous," it is applied to persons on the question of personal identity.

The doctrine means that, if testimony of a witness on a material issue is willfully false and given with an intention to deceive, jury may disregard all the witness' testimony. Hargrave v. Stockloss, 127 N.J.L. 262, 21 A.2d 820, 823.

The maxim deals only with weight of evidence. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Wright, 190 Miss. 773, 142 S.W.2d 1046, 1052. It is a mere rule of evidence affirmaing a rebuttable presumption of fact, under which the jury must consider all the evidence of the witness who, if he is shown to have sworn falsely in their duty to give effect to so much of it, if any, as is relieved from the presumption against it and found to be true. Levine Bros. v. Mantell, 90 W.Va. 166, 111 S.E. 501, 504; Shecill v. United States, C.C.A.Wis., 226 F. 184, 187. It is not a rule of law and false statement, State v. Stur- chio, 127 N.J.L. 366, 22 A.2d 235, 237. It is not a rule of evidence within the meaning of the colonization laws of Coahuila and Texas. State v. Sullivan, 9 Tex. 156.

FAMILLE EMPTOR. In Roman law. An intermediate person who purchased the aggregate inheritance when sold per ces et libram, in the process of making a will under the Twelve Tables. This purchaser was merely a man of straw, transmitting the inheritance to the hceres proper. Brown.

FAMILLE ERCISCUNDIE. In Roman law. An action for the partition of the aggregate succession of a familia, where that devolved upon the hceres. It was also applicable to enforce a contribution towards the necessary expenses incurred on the familia. See Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 499; Stair, Inst. 1, 1, tit. 7, § 15.

FAMILIARITY. Acquaintance expresses less than intimacy, by close connection. Atkins Corporation v. Tourny, 6 Cal.2d 206, 57 P.2d 480, 483.

FAMILIARITY. Acquaintance expresses less than "familiarity"; familiarity less than intimacy. Acquaintance springs from occasional intercourse, familiarity from daily intercourse, intimacy from unreserved intercourse; acquaintance, having some knowledge, familiarity, from long habit, intimacy, by close connection. Atkins Corporation v. Tourny, 6 Cal.2d 206, 57 P.2d 480, 483.

FAMILY. The word is used to designate many relationships. Collins v. Northwest Casualty Co., 180 Wash. 347, 39 P.2d 986, 989, 97 A.L.R. 1235; State ex rel. Kemp v. Arnold, 234 Mo. 154, 113 S. W.2d 143, 146.

In broad or primary sense "family" means: a collective body of any two persons living together in one house as their common home for the time; In re Barnes' Estate, 149 Misc. 149, 267 N.Y.S. 634; a collective body of persons, living together in one home, in a permanent and domestic character, under one head or management,
State ex rel. Kemp v. Arnold, 234 Mo. 154, 113 S. W.2d 143, 146; a collective body of persons who live in one house and under one head or management, Fratellanza Italiana v. Nugnes, 114 N.E.Q. 185, 168 A. 589, 590; a group of blood-relatives; all the relations who descend from a common ancestor, or who spring from a common root, Civil Code La. art. 3556, no. 12; 9 Ves. 323; a group of kindred persons, Hartley v. Bohrer, 52 Idaho 72, 11 P.2d 616, 618; a household. Sullivan v. Walburn, 9 N.J.Misc. 280, 154 A. 617, 619; a household composed of parents or children, or other relatives or domestics and servants, Sullivan v. Walburn, 9 N.J.Misc. 280, 154 A. 617, 619; a small select corps attached to an army chief, Boston-Edison Protective Ass'n v. Paulist Fathers, 306 Mich. 253, 10 N.W.2d 847, 849, 148 A.L.R. 364; a whole sect, such as Shakers, Boston-Edison Protective Ass'n v. Paulist Fathers, 306 Mich. 253, 10 N.W.2d 847, 849, 148 A.L.R. 364; all members of the household living under the authority of the head thereof, Sullivan v. Walburn, 9 N.J.Misc. 280, 154 A. 617, 619; all persons of the blood of a common ancestor, Collins v. North- west Casualty Co., 180 Wash. 347, 39 P.2d 986, 989, 97 A.L.R. 1235; all the relations who descend from a common ancestor or who spring from a common root; all who are descended from a not too distant common progenitor, In re Lund's Estate, 26 Cal.2d 472, 159 P.2d 643, 655; an entire household. Sullivan v. Walburn, 9 N.J.Misc. 280, 154 A. 617, 619; any group of persons closely related by blood. In re Schmidt's Estate, 289 N.Y.S. 247, 250, 159 Misc. 373; any group of persons constituting a distinct domestic body, Sullivan v. Walburn, 9 N.J.Misc. 280, 154 A. 617, 619; or any group of persons of the domestic circle of a particular person, Collins v. Northwest Casualty Co., 180 Wash. 347, 39 P.2d 986, 989, 97 A.L.R. 1235; immediate members of one's household, Niemes v. Niemes, 97 Ohio St. 145, 119 N.E. 503, 506; members of the domestic circle, Sullivan v. Walburn, 9 N.J.Misc. 280, 154 A. 617, 619; or one or more persons living together in same house who are supported by one in whole or in part and are dependent on him therefore, where he is in an obligational or ministerial or business relationship, Umbarger v. State Farm Mut. Automobile Ins. Co., 218 Iowa 203, 254 N.W. 87; the genealogical stock from which a man and those related to him by blood have sprung, Albright v. Albright, 116 Ohio St. 668, 157 N.E. 760, 764; the personnel of the home. Sullivan v. Walburn, 9 N.J.Misc. 280, 154 A. 617, 619; those members of the household who are dependent on the householder to whom he owes some duty, Cheshire v. Burlington, 31 Conn. 326; those who are of the same lineage, or descend from one common progenitor, Fratellanza Italiana v. Nugnes, 114 N.E.Q. 185, 168 A. 589, 590.

The word may mean: a body of persons who live in one house and under one head or manager, Lumbermens Mut. Casualty Co. v. Pulsifer, D.C.Mc., 41 F.Supp. 249, 252; Carrie F. Wright Hospital, 82 N.H. 260, 132 A. 525, 526.

In restricted sense, the word "family" may be used interchangeably with household. Collins v. Northwest Casualty Co., 180 Wash. 347, 39 P.2d 986, 989, 97 A.L.R. 1235.

In secondary meaning, "family" means those who are of the same lineage, or descend from one common progenitor. Fratellanza Italiana v. Nugnes, 114 N.E.Q. 185, 168 A. 589, 590.

The word may mean: a body of persons who live in one house and under one head or manager, Lumbermens Mut. Casualty Co. v. Pulsifer, D.C.Mc., 41 F.Supp. 249, 252; Carrie F. Wright Hospital, 82 N.H. 260, 132 A. 525, 526.

Descent and descendants
As used in act changing descent as between relatives of half blood, "family" comprehends only the descendants of ancestor, those who have his blood running in their veins; in that sense is nearly if not quite of same import as the word "issue." Ryder v. Myers, 113 N.J.Eq. 360, 167 A. 22, 24.

The word "family" may mean: all descendants of a common progenitor, Logan v. St. Louis Police Relief Ass'n, Mo.App., 133 S.W.2d 1048, 1049, 1050; In re Lund’s Estate, 26 Cal.2d 472, 159 P.2d 643, 645; those who are of the same lineage, or descend from one common progenitor. Fratel-lanza Italiana v. Nugnes, 114 N.J.Eq. 185, 168 A. 589, 590.

Homestead and exemption laws
A "family" is a collection of persons living together under one head, Holosomback v. Slaughter, 177 Miss. 542, 543; a collection of persons living together, where there is an obligation, legal or moral, on head of the line to support the others or some of them, Logue v. Von Almen, 379 Ill. 208, 40 N.E.2d 73, 80, 140 A.L.R. 251; a collective body of persons, consisting of parents or children, or other relatives, domestics, and servants, residing together in one house or upon the same premises, and person to be member of family must be member in good faith, Lobban v. Bosworth, 180 Iowa, 975, 164 N.W. 238, 240; may constitute a “family.” See, also, In re Hooper’s Estate, 117 Wash. 463, 201 P. 740, 742.
FAMILY

Test of whether husband has a "family" within statute provisions for exemptions to widow of husband di viding a family cannot be measured by number of years husband and wife lived apart nor by distance of miles separating them. In re Brown's Will, 274 N.Y.S. 924, 153 Misc. 282.

To constitute family, status must be social and head of family must be legally or morally obligated to support other members of the household. Where relatives live together because such arrangement is more convenient or economical, or for reasons of friendship or affection, such relationship does not constitute them "family." Sullivan v. Island Bank & Trust Co. v. Lamont, 361 Ill. 432, 198 N.E. 430.

A "family" is a collective body of persons who form one household under one head and one domestic government, Sullivan v. Walburn, 9 N.J. Misc. 280, 154 A. 617, 619; a collective body of persons forming one household under one head and domestic government, having reciprocal, natural and moral duties to care for one another. Hartley v. Bohrer, 52 Idaho 72, 11 P.2d 616, 618; Krug v. Mills, 159 Md. 670, 152 A. 493, 495; a household, Sullivan v. Walburn, 9 N.J. Misc. 280, 154 A. 617, 619; a household composed of parents or children or other relatives, or domestics and servants, Sullivan v. Walburn, 9 N.J. Misc. 280, 154 A. 617, 619; all members of the household living together under the authority of the head thereof, Sullivan v. Walburn, 9 N.J. Misc. 280, 154 A. 617, 619; all persons who dwell together under a common head as a household, Hoff v. Hoff, 132 Pa. Super. 431, 1 A.2d 506, 508; an entire household, Sullivan v. Walburn, 9 N.J. Misc. 280, 154 A. 617, 619; the immediate members of one's household, as wife, children, brothers, and sisters or father and mother. Niemes v. Niemes, 97 Ohio St. 145, 119 N.E. 503, 506; those who live in the same household subject to general management and control of the head thereof, McGee v. Crawford, 205 N.C. 318, 171 S.E. 326, 327.

Family and household are substantially synonymous, Umbarger v. State Farm Mut. Automobile Ins. Co., 218 Iowa 203, 255 N.W. 87; the words are often used interchangeably, In re Mansfield Ave., 163 Ky. 187, 173 S.W. 349, 350. The word "family", as used in acts regulating service of process, is given its restricted meaning and held to include only a father, a mother, and their children, but the relationship between the person receiving a copy of the summons and the person on whom service is attempted must be more confidential and intimate than in most employer and employee or master and servant relationships in order that the receipt by the former may be deemed valid service on the latter. Moore v. Kasishke, 189 Okl. 336, 117 P.2d 113, 115, 136 A.L.R. 1502.

A "family" is a collection of persons living together under one head, under such circumstances or conditions that the head is under a legal or moral obligation to support the other members, and the other members are dependent upon him for support. American Family Protective Ass'n, Tex.Civ.App., 81 S.W.2d 1092, 1093; Lobban v. Vander Vries Realty & Mortgage Co., 48 Ariz. 180, 60 P.2d 933, 935.

To constitute persons living with another in same house a "family", it must appear that they are being supported by that other in whole or in part, and are dependent on him therefor, and that he is under a natural or moral obligation to render such support. Poffinbarger v. Administrator of Poffinbarger's Estate, 206 Iowa 961, 221 N.W. 550.

Where relatives live together because such arrangement is more convenient or economical, or for reasons of friendship or affection, such relationship does not constitute them "family." Sullivan v. Island Bank & Trust Co. v. Lamont, 361 Ill. 432, 198 N.E. 430.

Duty of town to support "family" of pauper includes only those persons whom head of family is bound by law to support. Town of St. Johnsbury v. Town of Sutton, 102 Vt. 451, 150 A. 133, 135.

Reservations lands

Words "family" and "heirs," within statute providing for holding of reservations lands by Seneca Indians, mean family and heirs which Indians themselves recognize. Woodin v. Seeley, 141 Misc. 207, 252 N.Y.S. 818, 826.

Servants

A family is a body of persons who live in one household under one head or management; a household including parents, children and servants, and, as the case may be, lodgers or boarders. Cleaves v. Funk, D.C.Okl., 3 F.Supp. 804, 805.

Domestic servants, when living in establishment, are included in term "family" for purposes of serving summons. Sullivan v. Walburn, 9 N.J. Misc. 280, 154 A. 617, 619.

Service of Process

Defendant's mother, who maintained permanent home, but who usually visited in defendant's home during winter months, held not a member of defendant's "family." Cleaves v. Funk, C.C.A.Okl., 76 F.2d 828, 829.

The word "family", as used in acts regulating service of process, is given its restricted meaning and held to include only a father, a mother, and their children, but the relationship between the person receiving a copy of the summons and the person on whom service is attempted must be more confidential and intimate than in most employer and employee or master and servant relationships in order that the receipt by the former may be deemed valid service on the latter. Moore v. Kasishke, 189 Okl. 336, 117 P.2d 113, 115, 136 A.L.R. 1502.

Support of persons

A "family" is a collection of persons living together under one head, under such circumstances or conditions that the head is under a legal or moral obligation to support the other members, and the other members are dependent upon him for support. Pomfret, 173 Tenn. 466, 122 S.W.2d 426, 427; those entitled by law to look to person for support and protection, In re Fulton's Estate, 15 Cal. App.2d 202, 59 P.2d 508, 510; those members of the household who are dependent upon the householder to whom he owes some duty, Brokaw v. Ogle, 170 Ill. 115, 48 N.E. 394; those whom it is the natural or moral duty of one to support, or who are dependent on him for support, Finn v. Eminent Household of Columbia Woodmen, 163 Ky. 187, 173 S.W. 349, 350.

Bankrupt whose minor children were living separately from him in custody of his divorced wife held person having "family dependent on him for support". In re McFarland, D.C.Wash., 49 F.2d 342, 343.

"Family," within statute imposing liability for articles going to support of "family," held to include wife as well as children. Balesed v. Greenbaum, 112 Conn. 64, 151 A. 637, 639.

He upon whom law imposes duty to support growing out of status and not out of contract, and persons to whom he owes this duty if dwelling together in a domestic establishment constitute a "family" of which he is the head. Owens v. Altsheller & Co., 263 Ky. 727, 93 S.W.2d 844, 846.

Householder's sister and her husband living with householder and dependent upon him may constitute "family." Rock Island Bank & Trust Co. v. Lamont, 361 Ill. 432, 198 N.E. 430.

Moral duty to support arising from ties of blood or possibly other similar relations will be sufficient to support claim that one is head of a family. Owens v. Altsheller & Co., 263 Ky. 727, 93 S.W.2d 844, 846.
Sister on whom moral obligation rested to support her sister and such sister constituted "family." Standard Paving Co. v. Carlisle, 128 Conn. 271, 208 A. 789, 791.

To constitute "family" within homestead or exemption provision there must be legal or moral or natural obligation of one to support other members and corresponding dependence of others. L. E. Whitham & Co. v. Briggs' Estate, 112 S.W. 2d 49; Lobban v. Under Vprecation and Realty & Mortgage Co., 48 Ariz. 180, 60 P.2d 933, 935; Wineblood v. Payne, 129 Okl. 103, 263 P. 669, 671.

Town of residence of head of "family" held not liable to reimburse another town for support furnished step-children. Town of St. Johnsbury v. Town of Sutton, 102 Vt. 451, 150 A. 133, 135.

As respects construction of will, the word "family" denotes a group of persons related to each other by marriage or blood living together under a single roof and comprising a household whose head is usually the father or husband, but the word is not one of inflexible meaning and its significance to a large extent depends upon the context and the purpose for which it is employed. The word "family" includes those who have left father's home and have married and established their own homes when context and purpose indicate such significance should be attributed to the word. Magill v. Magill, 317 Mass. 89, 56 N.E.2d 892, 894, 896, 154 A.L.R. 894, 896.

Testamentary precatory trust created in favor of any of testatrix' "family" held to comprehend those who would take under statute of distribution. Ryder v. Myers, 113 N. J.Eq. 360, 167 A. 22, 24.

Testatrix in creating trust for benefit of granddaughter during her life and providing that upon granddaughter's death without issue principal should go to then living members of granddaughter's father's "family" did not use word family to designate those who comprised her son's household, where testatrix knew when she executed will that son was dead and that his widow and daughter made their homes with testatrix and his other children lived separate from each other. Magill v. Magill, 317 Mass. 89, 56 N.E.2d 892, 894, 896, 154 A.L.R. 894, 896.

The use of the word "family" disclosed a testamentary intent to make a gift to a class including those who would have been distributees of the deceased brothers of testatrix had such brothers died as of the date of death of testatrix and included therein the widows of such brothers. In re Keegan's Estate, Sur., 37 N.Y.S.2d 368, 370, 371.

Under will of widow, providing that I wish my husband's family to share and share alike the remainder of my property, the word "family" is equivalent to "heirs," In re Keegan's Estate, Sur., 37 N.Y.S.2d 368, 370, 371.

When the word "family" is used to designate those entitled to receive a legacy, the intended meaning of the word depends upon the context of the will and upon a showing as to whom were the objects of the testator's benevolence or friendship. Where a legacy was to a class, consisting of family of testatrix' deceased brother who was survived by widow and three children, each of which children maintained separate households, "family" included widow and three children. In re Keegan's Estate, Sur., 37 N.Y.S.2d 368, 370, 371.

Where testatrix created trust for benefit of granddaughter during her life and, knowing that one of granddaughter's brothers was already dead, provided that any issue of granddaughter during testatrix' lifetime and such issue should be equally upheld by the living members of granddaughter's father's "family" in division of principal of trust and thereafter upon death of another grandson leaving a widow and two infant children executed a codicil giving grandson's legacy under another provision of will to his widow, word "family" was used to designate lineal descendants of granddaughter's father where such construction was consistent with provisions of the will and carried out intention of testatrix. Magill v. Magill, 317 Mass. 89, 56 N.E.2d 892, 894, 896, 154 A.L.R. 1406.

FAMILY ARRANGEMENT. A term denoting an agreement between a father and his children, or between the heirs of a deceased father, to dispose of property, or to partition it in a different manner than that which would result if the law alone directed it, or to divide up property without administration. In these cases, frequently, the mere relation of the parties will give effect to bargains otherwise without adequate consideration. 1 Chit. Pr. 67; 1 Turn. & R. 13; Boyd v. Robinson, 93 Tenn. 1, 23 S.W. 72; De Hatre v. De Hatre, 50 Mo. App. 1.

FAMILY AUTOMOBILE DOCTRINE. The doctrine is that one who owns and maintains an automobile for the general use of his household makes use of automobile for such purposes a part of his business so that any member using automobile for those purposes under general authority to do so becomes his representative, for whose negligence he is responsible. Durso v. A. D. Cozzolino, Inc., 128 Conn. 24, 20 A.2d 392, 394.

It is an extension of the principle of respondeat superior to the relation created by operation of family use automobile. Buss v. Wachsmith, 190 Wash. 673, 70 P.2d 417, 421. See, also, Family Car Doctrine and Family Purpose Doctrine.

It is based on theory that members of family were engaged in a joint enterprise or that child was agent of parents. Paulson v. McMillan, 8 Wash.2d 295, 111 P.2d 983, 989.

If an automobile is owned and maintained by a family corporation for general use of a family, such as that of corporation's manager and one of its principal stockholders, corporation may be held liable under the "family automobile doctrine" to third parties. Durso v. A. D. Cozzolino, Inc., 128 Conn. 24, 20 A.2d 392, 394.

FAMILY BIBLE. A Bible containing a record of the births, marriages, and deaths of the members of a family. As to its admissibility in evidence, see Whart. Ev. § 219; Tayl. Ev. 572; 1 Greenl. Ev. § 104; L. R. 1 Ex. 255; Greenleaf v. R. Co., 30 Iowa, 301; Southern Life Ins. Co. v. Wilkinson, 53 Ga. 535; Weaver v. Leiman, 52 Md. 709.

FAMILY CAR. Automobile used to send owner's children to school was "family car." Coleman v. Rollo, Tex.Civ.App., 50 S.W.2d 391, 392.

FAMILY CAR DOCTRINE. The doctrine rests upon the basis that the automobile is furnished by the husband in his individual capacity and as common-law head of the family for the use of the family, and not as the agent of the community. Dorn v. Kunz, 52 Ariz. 219, 79 P.2d 965. It rests on theory that operator is husband's agent and runs automobile in husband's "business," Hart v. Hogan, 173 Wash. 598, 24 P.2d 99; that wife is husband's agent in carrying out one of the purposes for which the automobile is purchased and owned, Moffitt v. Krueger, 11 Wash.2d 658, 120 P.2d 512, 513.

Under the doctrine, a father furnishing automobile for pleasure and convenience of family makes the use of automobile by family his business and any member of family driving automobile with father's express or implied consent is the father's agent and the father is liable for the member's negligence. Dorn v. Kunz, 52 Ariz. 219, 79 P.2d 965, 966, 967.

See, alsp, Family Automobile Doctrine and Family Purpose Doctrine.
FAMILY CAR DOCTRINE

The person upon whom it is sought to fasten liability under the doctrine must own, provide, or maintain an automobile for the general use, pleasure, and convenience of the family. Liability under the doctrine is not confined to owner or driver. It depends upon control and use. A widow, wife, or mother may be liable as well as a husband or father. Hart v. Hogan, 173 Wash. 598, 24 P.2d 99. To bring a case within doctrine, it must be shown that automobile was in fact a family pleasure automobile, but automobile purchased and used for business purposes may come within the doctrine, where it is also used for family pleasure.

FAMILY COUNCIL. See Family Arrangement; Family Meeting; Conseil de Famille.

FAMILY DEPENDENT UPON HIM FOR SUPPORT. Bankrupt whose minor children were living separately from him in custody of his divorced wife held to have “family dependent on him for support.” In re McFarland, D.C.Wash., 49 F.2d 342, 343.

FAMILY EXPENSES. Obligations incurred for something intended for the use or comfort of the collection spoken of as the family, as distinguished from individual or personal expenses. Vose v. Myott, 141 Iowa, 506, 120 N.W. 58, 21 L.R.A.,N.S., 277.

Purchase price of team of horses used on farm was a “family expense”. Wall v. Crawford, 103 Colo. 66, 82 P.2d 749, 750.

FAMILY GROUP, within purview of the family ear doctrine, is not confined to persons related to the owner, but includes members of the collective body of persons living in his household for whose convenience the car is maintained and who have authority to use it. Smart v. Bissonette, 106 Conn. 447, 138 A. 365, 366; Hart v. Hogan, 173 Wash. 598, 24 P.2d 99. See Family Purpose Doctrine, infra.

The children of trust settlor including an adult son are members of the settlor’s “family group” for income tax purposes. Commissioner of Internal Revenue v. Wilson, C.A., 125 F.2d 307, 310.

FAMILY HOTEL. A “family hotel”, as distinguished from an ordinary “public hotel”, in construction of covenant, is designed primarily for the accommodation of permanent guests. Kew Gardens Corporation v. Ciro’s Plaza, 175 Misc. 475, 23 N.Y.S.2d 957, 959.

FAMILY LIBRARY. Which one spouse cannot mortgage without consent of other may be composed of such books as family or head of family chooses to select. Lupton v. Merchants’ Nat. Bank of Topeka, 140 Kan. 615, 38 P.2d 125, 127.

FAMILY MEETING. An institution of the laws of Louisiana, being a council of the relatives (or, if there are no relatives, of the friends) of a minor, for the purpose of advising as to his affairs and the administration of his property.

The family meeting is called by order of a judge, and presided over by a justice or notary, and must consist of at least five persons, who are put under oath. In re Bothwick, 44 La.Ann. 1037, 11 So. 712; Civ. Code La. art. 305. It corresponds to the “conseil de famille” of French law.

FAMILY PHYSICIAN. A physician who regularly attends and is consulted by the members of the family as their medical adviser; but he need not attend in all cases or be consulted by all the members of the family. Price v. Ins. Co., 17 Minn. 519, Gil. 473, 10 Am.Rep. 166; Reid v. Ins. Co., 58 Mo. 424; Cromeens v. Sovereign Camp, W. O. W., Mo.App., 247 S.W. 1033, 1034.

FAMILY POOL. A species of contract that must have something to stand on besides wishful thinking, and the parties to it must be conscious that they are in it and contributing to it to be bound by it. Sherman v. Florida Tar & Creosote Corp., 160 Fla. 696, 36 So.2d 267, 269.

FAMILY PURPOSE DOCTRINE. A doctrine that the owner of a car, who gives it over to the use of his family and permits it to be operated by the members thereof, is liable for the injuries inflicted while being operated by a member of the family. Turoff v. Burch, 60 App.D.C. 221, 50 F.2d 986, 987; McNamara v. Prother, 277 Ky. 754, 127 S.W.2d 160, 161; Schwartz v. Johnson, 152 Tenn. 586, 28 A.W. 32, 33, 47 A.L.R. 323. The doctrine, that the owner of an automobile purchased or maintained for the pleasure of his family is liable for injuries inflicted by the machine while being used by the members of the family for their own pleasure. Doss v. Monticello Electric Light & Power Co., 193 Ky. 499, 236 S.W. 1046, 1047; Thompson v. Kansas City Rys. Co., 113 Kan. 74, 213 P. 633.

See, also, Family Automobile Doctrine; Family Car Doctrine; Family Group.

The doctrine imputes relationship of principal and agent where one maintains an automobile for pleasure or other use of member of his family. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Brann, 297 Ky. 381, 180 S.W.2d 102, 104; it is based on theory that each family member in using such car for own pleasure is carrying out the purpose for which it is furnished, and is the owner’s agent or servant, Behseleck v. Andrus, 60 S.D. 204, 244 N.W. 268, 269, 88 A.L.R. 596; Hackley v. Robey, 170 Va. 55, 195 S.E. 689, 692; Ener v. Gandy, Tex.Civ.App., 141 S.W.2d 772, 775. It is founded upon principles of agency or of master and servant. Kalil v. Spivey, 70 Ga.App. 84, 27 S.E.2d 475, 479; Baptist v. Slater, 162 Va. 55, 173 S.E. 512, 515; it is restricted to automobiles maintained for primary purpose of family and convenience of members of his family. Mitchell v. Mullen, 45 Ga.App. 285, 164 S.E. 278, 280; Commonwealth of Kentucky, for Use and Benefit of Kern, v. Maryland Casualty Co. of Baltimore, Md., C.C.A.Ky., 112 F.2d 352, 356.

A father is not liable merely because he is head of family, but the one who owns or provides the automobile is liable. McNamara v. Prather, 277 Ky. 754, 127 S.W.2d 160, 161; A wife may be held liable for the torts of her husband under the doctrine. Goldstein v. Johnson, 64 Ga. App. 31, 12 S.E.2d 92, 94. Agency is the very genesis of the doctrine, Vaughan v. Booker, 217 N.C. 479, 8 S.E.2d 603, 604, 605; Grandmother standing in loco parentis to grandson was liable under the doctrine for grandson’s negligent operation of her automobile. Rutherford v. Smith, 284 Ky. 592, 145 S.W.2d 533, 536; Where wife owned automobile, husband was not liable under “family purpose doctrine,” for minor son’s negligent operation of the automobile, notwithstanding husband paid part of gasoline and garage bills. McNamara v. Prather, 277 Ky. 754, 127 S.W.2d 160, 161.

It has been said that the family purpose doctrine has been accepted by the courts of about half of the states. Jacobsen v. Dailey, 36 N.W.2d 711, 228 Minn. 201. Among those states are Georgia, Nebraska, North Carolina and Oregon.

On the other hand, the doctrine has been specifically rejected, or not adopted, by fully one-half of the FAMILY RELATION. A relationship which may exist between one taken into the family by the head of the family, notwithstanding the absence of blood relationship or of legal adoption. Nelson v. Poorman’s Estate, Mo.App., 215 S.W. 753, 754.

Such relation exists: between two sisters when there is moral obligation on part of one to support and care for the other and when necessity for such care and support exists, Standard Paving Co. v. Tolson, Tex.Civ.App., 86 S.W.2d 789, 791; when child, receives from parent services, maintenance, or gifts reasonably frequent to lead to expectation of future enjoyment thereof. Gaydos v. Do- mabyl, 301 Pa. 523, 152 A. 549, 551; Where brother owes moral obligation to support sister and necessity for such support exists, Standard Paving Co. v. Tolson, Tex.Civ.App., 86 S.W.2d 789, 791.

FAMILY SERVICE RULE. Under “family-purpose doctrine” or “family-service rule” or “family-automobile doctrine” or “family-car rule”, family head maintaining automobile for use of family is liable for injury resulting from negligence of minor son who is member of family while operating automobile with knowledge and consent of family head for comfort or pleasure of family. Cohen v. Whiteman, 75 Ga.App. 286, 43 S.E.2d 184, 186.

FAMILY SETTLEMENT. An agreement between members of a family settling the distribution of family property among them. Fitzgerald v. Nelson, 159 Or. 264, 79 P.2d 254, 255.

An agreement made between a father and his son or children or between brothers to dispose of property in a different manner from that which would otherwise take place. Peterson v. Hegna, 158 Minn. 289, 197 N.W. 484, 487. A term of practically the same signification as “family arrangement,” q. v. supra. See Willey v. Hodge, 104 Wis. 81, 80 N.W. 75, 76 Am.St.Rep. 852.

Where decedent’s widow and son were only parties concerned in distribution of decedent’s estate, an agreement between the widow and son for division of the estate was a “family settlement”. Stark v. Stark, 201 Ark. 133, 143 S.W.2d 875, 878.

FAMILY USE. That use ordinarily made by and suitable for the members of a household whether or until father’s death, Cumberland & Liberty Mills v. Keggin, 139 Fla. 133, 190 So. 492, 493. Where there is legal or moral obligation on head of family to support the other members, and there is dependence upon such members for support, Standard Paving Co. v. Tolson, Tex.Civ.App., 86 S.W.2d 789, 791.

FAMOUS. In the civil and old English law. Relating to or affecting injuriously the character or reputation; defamatory; slanderous; scandalous.

FAMOUS LIBEL. A libelous writing. A term of the civil law denoting that species of injuria which corresponds nearly to libel or slander.

FANAL. Fr. In French marine law. A large lantern, fixed upon the highest part of a vessel’s stern.

FANATIC. A religious enthusiast; a bigot; a person entertaining wild and extravagant notions, or affected by zeal or enthusiasm, especially upon religious subjects.

Also, a person pretending to be inspired;—formerly applied to Quakers, Anabaptists, and all other sectaries, and factious dissenters from the Church of England. St. 13 Car. II. c. 6. Jacob.

FANCIFUL TRADE-NAME. Trade-names are “fanciful” when they do not, by their usual and ordinary meaning, denote or describe products to which they are applied, but indicate their purpose by application and association. Skinner Mfg. Co. v. General Foods Sales Co., D.C.Neb., 52 F.Supp. 432, 445.

FANEGA. In Spanish law. A measure of land varying in different provinces, but in the Spanish settlements in America consisting of 6,400 square varas or yards. Diccionario de la Acad.; 2 White Recop. 49; 138.

FAQUEER, See Fakir.

FARANDMAN. In Scotch law. A traveler or merchant stranger. Skene.

FARDEL OF LAND. In old English law. The fourth part of an yard-land. Spelman. As used in connection with interstate transportation, means a rate of charge for the carriage of passengers, as approved by the proper governmental agency. Krause v. Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. of California, 141 Neb. 844, 5 N. W.2d 229, 232.

In case of a water company it means the tax or compensation which the company may charge for furnishing a supply of water. McNeal Pipe & Foundry Co. v. Howland, 111 N.C. 615, 16 S.E. 857, 20 L.R.A. 743.

FARDEL OF LAND. In old English law. The fourth part of a yard-land. Spelman. Noy says an eighth only, because, according to him, two fardels make a nook, and four nooks a yard-land. Wharton. See Noy, Complete Lawyer 57; Cowell; Cunningham, Law Dict.

FARDELLA. In old English law. A bundle or pack; a fardel. Fleta, lib. 1, c. 22, § 10.

FARDING-DEAL. The fourth part of an acre of land. Spelman.

FARE. A voyage or passage by water; also the money paid for a passage either by land or by water. Cowell.

As used in connection with interstate transportation, means a rate of charge for the carriage of passengers, as approved by the proper governmental agency. Krause v. Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. of California, 141 Neb. 844, 5 N. W.2d 229, 232.

In case of a water company it means the tax or compensation which the company may charge for furnishing a supply of water. McNeal Pipe & Foundry Co. v. Howland, 111 N.C. 615, 16 S.E. 857, 20 L.R.A. 743.

FARE

FARE 1AYING PASSENGER is a passenger who pays the legal fare. Krause v. Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. of California, 141 Neb. 844, 5 N.W. 2d 229, 232.

FARINA. A mill; a toll of meal or flour. Jacob; Spelman.

FARLEU (or FARLEY). Money paid by tenants in lieu of a heriot. It was often applied to the best chattel, as distinguished from heriot, the best beast. Cowell.

FARLINGARI. Whoremongers; adulterers.

FARM, n. A body of land under one ownership, devoted to agriculture, either to raising crops, or pasture, or both. Dorsett v. Watkins, 59 Oki. 198, 158 P. 608, 9 A.L.R. 278. With the development particularly of the western states, a large part of whose wealth consists of cattle, the word "farm" has acquired a somewhat broader meaning, and in its generic sense is as applicable to a stock farm as to one where grain is raised. Porter v. Yakima County, 77 Wash. 299, 137 P. 466, 467. A certain amount of provision reserved as the rent of a messuage. Spelman. A considerable tract of land cultivated or used in some one of the usually recognized ways of farmed land. Ranipal v. Funahara, 191 Okl. 168, 127 P.2d 140, 141. A term, a lease of lands; a leasehold interest. 2 Bl.Comm. 17; 1 Reese, Eng. Law, 301, note. The land itself, let to farm or rent. 2 Bl.Comm. 368. Rent generally which is reserved on a lease; when it was to be paid in money, it was called "blanche firme." Spelman; 2 Bl.Comm. 42.

Old English Law. A lease of other things than land, as of imposts. There were several of these, such as "the sugar farm," "the silk farm," and farms of wines and currants, called "petty farms." See 2 How. State Tr. 1197-1206.

The word has been defined to mean: a considerable tract of land, or a number of small tracts, devoted wholly or partially to agricultural purposes or pasturage of cattle but may also include woodland, Jones v. Holloway, 183 Misc. 391, 91 N.Y.S.2d 551, 554, 152 N.Y.S.2d 933; a large tract of portion of land taken by a lease under a yearly rent payable by the tenant, Tomlin, Law Diet. a parcel or group of parcels of land cultivated as a unit, Supervisors of Manheim Tp., Lancaster County, v. Workman, 154 Pa.Super. 146, 35 A.2d 747, 749; a piece of land held under lease for cultivation; Supervisors of Manheim Tp., Lancaster County, v. Workman, 154 Pa.Super. 146, 35 A.2d 747, 749; a tract of land used wholly or principally for agricultural purposes. State Industrial Accident Commission v. Eggiman, 172 Or. 19, 139 P.2d 565, 567; a plot or tract of land devoted to the raising of domestic or other animals; as a chicken farm; a fox farm; Hagenburger v. City of Los Angeles, 51 Cal.App.2d 161, 124 P.2d 345, 347; a portion of land used for agricultural purposes, either wholly or in part; a tract of land devoted in part, at least, to cultivation, for agricultural purposes, without reference to its extent, or to the tenure by which it is held. People ex rel. Rogers v. Caldwell, 142 Ill. 434, 32 N.E. 691; Fleckles v. Hille, 83 Ind.App. 715, 149 N.E. 915.

The original meaning of the word was "rent," and by a natural transition it came to mean the land out of which the rent issued.

The term does not necessarily include only the land under cultivation and within a fence. It may include all the land which forms part of the tract, and may also include several connected parcels under one control. Succession of Williams, 132 La. 865, 61 So. 852, 853.

The word "farm" within town zoning by-law, means land used for production of crops, livestock grazing, raising of hay for cows to produce milk and other dairy products, raising of poultry and sale of chickens and eggs, or growing of fruit. Town of Lincoln v. Murphy, 314 Mass. 16, 49 N.E.2d 453, 455, 146 A.L.R. 1196.

Usually the chief messuage in a village or town whereto belongs a great demesne of all sorts. Cowell; Cunningham, Law Diet. ; Terms de la Ley.

FARM, v. To lease or let; to demise or grant for a limited term and at a stated rental.

FARM CROSSING. A roadway over a railroad track at grade for the purpose of reaching tillage land cut off by the track. True v. Maine Cent. R. Co., 113 Me. 375, 94 A. 183, 184. See, also, In re Colvin Street in City of Buffalo, 155 App.Div. 808, 140 N.Y.S. 882, 883.

A conveyance of strip of land across farm to railroad as of right of way, which reserved to grantor right to maintain two "farm crossings" over right of way, is broad enough to permit installation of an underground conduit for purpose of supplying electricity to farm of grantor for domestic and farm purposes. New York Cent. R. Co. v. Yarian, 719 Ind. 477, 39 N.E.2d 604, 607, 139 A.L.R. 455.

A farm crossing is a crossing used in connection with a farm and not property within city limits. Chicago, M., St. P. & P. R. Co. v. Cross, 212 Iowa 218, 234 N.W. 569, 572.

FARM LABOR. Agricultural employment and farm labor are used as practically synonymous and include all farm work and work incidental thereto. Smythe v. Phoenix, 63 Idaho 585, 123 P. 2d 1010, 1012.

Ordinarily, the term "farm labor" connotes the tilling of the soil, its products and the raising and caring for such domestic animals as are usually found in those surroundings. Tucker v. Newman, 217 Minn. 473, 14 N.W.2d 767, 771, 772.

Under Unemployment Insurance Law an employee employed on a farm devoted to the raising of fur-bearing animals was engaged in "farm labor". In re Bridges, 262 App.Div. 19, 28 N.Y.S.2d 312, 314.

One employed as a laborer on a farm, especially one who does all kinds of farm work. In re Keaney, 217 Mass. 5, 104 N.E. 438; one employed in or about business of growing, Frindgen v. Tutho, 44 Ga.App. 147, 160 S.E. 701, 702; one employed on a farm in customary types of farm work or employed and paid directly by a farmer in transporting his raw produce. Cedarburg Fox Farms v. Industrial Commission, 241 Wis. 604, 6 N.W.2d 687, 689, 690; one who devotes his time to ordinary farm labor as gainful occupation with some reasonable degree of regularity and continuity, Adams v. Ross, 230 App.Div. 216, 243 N.Y.S. highways leading to markets. Hastings v. Pfeffer, 184 Ark. 952, 43 S.W.2d 1073, 1074.

FARM UTENSILS. A term which, in an insurance policy, is broader than the term garden tools, and includes any instrumentalities within the meaning of the word utensils made use of on a farm, including a stock scale or a new windmill not erected. Murphy v. Continental Ins. Co., 17&Iowa 375, 157 N.W. 855, L.R.A.1917B, 934.

FARM WAGON. This term in an exemption statute includes a farm wagon moved by mechanical as well as by animal power. People v. Corder, 82 Colo. 318, 259 P. 613.

FARMER. A cultivator; a husbandman; an agriculturist. Kaslovitz v. Reid, C.C.A.Utah, 128 F.2d 1017, 1018. One who assumes the collection of the public revenues, taxes, excise, etc., for a certain commission or percentage; as a farmer of the revenues. The lessee of a farm. It is said that every lessee for life or years, although it be but of a small house and land, is called ”farmer.” This word implies no mystery, except it be that of husbandman. Cunningham; Cowell; 3 Sharsw. Bla.Comm. 318. There may also be a farmer of other personal property as well as of revenue and of lands. Plowd... 195; Cunn. Law Diet.

The word ”farmer” also includes: an individual primarily, bona fide, personally engaged in producing products of the soil, in dairy farming, the production of poultry or livestock, the production of poultry or livestock products, or the principal part of whose income is derived from any one or more of the foregoing operations. In re Davis, D.C.Iowa, 22 F.Supp. 12, 13; employer cutting valuable timber off land incidental to his occupation of agriculture, Robinson v. Stockley, 166 Tenn. 380, 61 S.W.2d 677. One continuously and profitably engaged in farming, though much of his efforts were devoted to unprofitable seed business, Koster v. Cleveland Trust Co., C.C.A.Ohio, 133 F.2d 180, 181; one engaged exclusively in raising tomato plants to sell to others who actually grow the tomatoes for market, In re Horner, C.C.A.I11., 104 F.2d 600, 602; one engaged in agricultural pursuits as a livelihood or business, Skinner v. Dingwell, C.C.A.Iowa, 134 F.2d 391, 393; one engaged in dairy farming and in production of poultry or livestock, Leonard v. Bennett, C.C.A.Or., 116 F.2d 128, 131, 132, 133; one engaged in business of farming or employing it for the purpose of husbandry, Kaslovitz v. Reid, C.C.A.Utah, 128 F.2d 1017, 1018; one living on his farm from revenue thereof and personally operating it on large scale as his primary activity, In re Lindsay, D.C.Tex., 41 F.Supp. 948, 950, 951; one personally engaged in farming, Shyvers v. Security-First Nat. Bank of Los Angeles, C.C.A.Gal., 108 F.2d 011, 612, 613, 126 A.L.R. 674; in re Davis, D.C.Iowa, 22 F.Supp. 12, 13; one primarily engaged in agricultural pursuits. Leonard v. FATAL INJURY. A term embracing injuries resulting in death, which, as used in accident and disability insurance policies is distinguished from "disability," which embraces injuries preventing the insured from performing the work in which he is usually employed, but not resulting in death. Provident Life & Accident Ins. Co. v. Johnson, Tex.Civ.App., 235 S.W. 650, 652.

A variance in order to be "fatal" must be material. Whittier v. Leifert, 72 N.D. 528, 9 N.W.2d 402, 405; People v. Mizer, 37 Cal.App.2d 148, 99 P.2d 333, 335, 336; it must be misleading or serve to mislead the adverse party, Lorenz v. Santa Monica City High School Dist., 51 Cal.App.2d 393, 124 P.2d 846, 851; it must be substantial and material, Miller v. Arliskas, 324 Ill.App. 588, 58 N.E.2d 743.

Attempt to introduce evidence of special damages from breach of tort or breach of contract, under general averment of damage is a "fatal variance". W. C. Hardesty Co. v. Schaefer, Mo.App., 139 S.W.2d 1031, 1035.

The general rule with respect to proof of time when an offense is committed is that there is no "fatal variance" from the allegation that it was committed on a particular date, to show that it was actually committed on or about or near that date unless the variance results in misleading defendant so as to prevent him from making his defense to the charge or to deprive him of the benefit of a plea of former jeopardy in event of another trial for the same offense. People v. Tracy, 50 Cal.App.2d 460, 123 P.2d 138, 140, 141.

FATETUR FACINUS QUI JUDICIUM FUGIT. He who flees judgment confesses his guilt. 3 Inst. 14; 5 Co. 109b. But see Best, Pres. § 248.

FATHER. A male parent. In re Clark's Estate, 228 Iowa 75, 290 N.W. 13, 32. He by whom a child is begotten. Natural father; procreator of a child. In re Dexheimer's Estate, 197 Wis. 145, 221 N.W. 737. For "Putative Father," see that title.

As used in law, this term may (according to the context and the nature of the instrument) include a putative as well as a legal father, also a stepfather, an adoptive father, or a grandfather, but is not as wide as the word "parent," and cannot be so construed as to include a female. Thorneburg v. American Strawboard Co., 141 Ind. 443, 40 N.E. 1062, 50 Am.St.Rep. 334; McGaughey v. Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W. of State of Minnesota, 148 Minn. 136, 180 N.W. 1001; Fienup v. Stamer, Mo.App., 28 S.W.2d 437, 439. The term may, however, be so limited as to mean only the father of a legitimate child. People v. Wolf, 216 App.Div. 771, 215 N.Y.S. 95, 96; Howard v. U., S., D.C.Ky., 2 P.2d 170, 173.

As used in law, this term may mean natural father and not adoptive parent. McKinney v. Minkler, Tex.Civ.App., 102 S.W.2d 273, 279; Jackson's Adm'r v. Alexiou, 223 Ky. 95, 3 S.W.2d 177, 178, 56 A.L.R. 1345.

As used in statute providing that father may inherit from his illegitimate children, includes heirs of the father. State v. Chavez, 42 N.M. 569, 82 P.2d 900, 906.

As used in statutes relating to duty of a father and other relatives to support adult children likely to become public charges, refers to fostor father after adoption, Betz v. Horr, 276 N.Y. 83, 11 N.E.2d 548, 550, 114 A.L.R. 491. The appellation "Father" indicates that the one to whom it is applied is a priest of the Catholic Church. Sweeney v. Newspaper Printing Corporation, 177 Tenn. 196, 147 S.W.2d 406, 407.

The word may be used in will as equivalent of "parent," which is defined as meaning father and mother. In re Frist's Estate, 18 Del.Ch. 409, 161 A. 918.

FATHER-IN-LAW. The father of one's wife or husband.

FATHOM. A nautical measure of six feet in length. Occasionally used as a superficial measure of land and in mining, and in that case it means a square fathom or thirty-six square feet. Na-hoelua v. Kaahau, 9 Hawaii, 601.

FATUITAS. In old English law. Fatuity; idiocy. Reg. Orig. 266.

FATUM. Lat. Fate; a superhuman power; an event or cause of loss, beyond human foresight or means of prevention.

FATUOUS PERSON. In Scotch law. One entirely destitute of reason; is qui omnino desipit. Ersk. Inst. 1, 7, 48. An idiot. Jacob. One who is incapable of managing his affairs, by reason of a total defect of reason. He is described as having uniform stupidity and inattention of manner and childishness of speech. Bell's Law Dict.

FATUUM JUDICIIUM. A foolish judgment or verdict. As applied to the latter it is one rather false by reason of folly than criminally so, or as amounting to perjury. Bract. fol. 289.

FATUUS. An idiot or fool. Bract. fol. 420b. Foolish; silly; absurd; indiscreet; or ill considered. See Fatuum judicium.

FATUUS, APUD JURISCONSULTOS NOSTROS, ACCIPITUR PRO NON COMPOS MENTIS; ET FATUUS DICITUR, QUI OMNINO DESIPIT. 4 Coke, 128. Fatuous, among our jurisconsults, is understood for a man not of right mind; and he is called "fatuus" who is altogether foolish.

FATUUS PRZESUMITUR QUI IN PROPRIO NOMINE ERRAT. A man is presumed to be simple who makes a mistake in his own name. Code, 6, 24, 14; Van Alst v. Hunter, 5 Johns. Ch., N.Y. 148, 161.

FAUBOURG. In French law, and in Louisiana. A district or part of a town adjoining the principal city; a suburb. See City Council of Lafayette v. Holland, 18 La. 286.

FAUCES TERRÆ. (Jaws of the land.) Narrow headlands and promontories, inclosing a portion or arm of the sea within them. 1 Kent, Comm. 367, and note; Hale, De Jure Mar. 10; The Harriet, 1 Story, 251, 259, Fed. Cas. No. 6,099; 16 Yale L.J. 471.

As respects wife's fault as ground for divorce, it means more than a deviation from the rules of propriety and also means a blasmish or impairment of excellence. Barnett v. Barnett, 292 Ky. 672, 107 S.W.2d 845, 847.

As used in statute respecting suits for separate maintenance, means voluntary separation, or failure of duty or misconduct materially contributing to disruption of marital relation. Amberson v. Amberson, 349 III. 214, 181 N.E. 825, 826.

As used in Unemployment Compensation Act protecting persons unemployed through no fault of their own, means failure or volition, White v. Review Board of Indiana Employment Security Division, 114 Ind.App. 383, 52 N.E.2d 500, 502.

The word "fault," the primary lexical meaning of which is defect or failing, in the language of the law and in the interpretation of statutes signifies a failure of duty, and is the equivalent of negligence. Milliken v. Fender, 110 Me. 306, 86 A. 174, 175; Marston v. Pickwick Stages, 78 Cal.App. 526, 248 P. 930, 933. But see Liberty Highway Co. v. Callahan, 24 Ohio App. 374, 157 N.E. 708, 714.

Civil Law. Negligence; want of care. An improper act or omission, injurious to another, and transpiring through negligence, rashness, or ignorance.

There are in law three degrees of faults,—the gross, the slight, and the very slight fault. The gross fault is that which proceeds from inexcusable negligence or ignorance; it is considered as nearly equal to fraud. The slight fault is that want of care which a prudent man usually takes of his business. The very slight fault is that which is excusable, and for which no responsibility is incurred. Civil Code La. art. 3556, par. 13.

Commercial Law. Defect; imperfection; blemish. See With All Faults.

Mining Law. A dislocation of strata; particularly, a severance of the continuity of a vein or lode by the dislocation of a portion of it.

FAUTOR. Old English law. A favorer or supporter of others; an abettor. Cowell. A partisan. One who encouraged resistance to the execution of process.

Spanish Law. Accomplice; the person who aids or assists another in the commission of a crime.

FAUX. French Law. A falsification or fraudulent alteration or suppression of a thing by words, by writings, or by acts without either. Biret.

"Faux may be understood in three ways. In its most extended sense it is the alteration of truth, with or without intention; it is nearly synonymous with 'lying.' In a less extended sense, it is the alteration of truth, accompanied with fraud, mutatio veritatis cum dolo facta. And lastly, in a narrow*, or rather the legal, sense of the word, when it is a question to know if the faux be a crime, it is the fraudulent alteration of the truth in those cases ascertained and punished by the law." Touillier, t. 9, n. 188.

FAVOR, n. An act of kindness or generosity, as distinguished from one that is inspired by regard for justice, duty, or right. Ross v. Davis, 138 Misc. 863, 248 N.Y.S. 441, 443. Bias; partiality; lenity; prejudice. See Challenge.

FAVOR, v. To regard with favor; to aid or to have the disposition to aid; to show partiality or unfair bias towards;—practically synonymous with "support." United States v. Schulze, D.C.

FAVORABILIORES SUNT EXECUTIONES ALIIS PROCESSIBUS QUIBUCUNQUE. Co. Litt. 289. Executions are preferred to all other processes whatever.

FAVORES AMPLIANDI SUNT; ODIA RESTRINGENDA. Jenk. Cent. 186. Favors are to be enlarged; things hateful restrained.

FEAL. Faithful; truthful; true. Tenants by convertible terms, because in some continental countries they are blended so as to form one engagement, yet they are not to be confounded in our country, for they do not imply the same thing. Homage being the acknowledgment of tenure, and fealty, the vassal oath of fidelity, being the essential feudal bond, and the animating principle of a feud, without which it could not subsist. Wharton.

FEASANCE. A doing; the doing of an act; a performing or performance. See Malfeasance; Misfeasance; Nonfeasance.

FEASANT. Doing, or making, as, in the term "damage feasant," (doing damage or injury,) spoken of cattle straying upon another's land.

FEASIBLE. Capable of being done, executed, or affected. Lowe v. Chicago Lumber Co. of Omaha, 135 Neb. 735, 283 N.W. 841, 844.

FEAST. Certain established festivals or holidays in the ecclesiastical calendar. These days were anciently used as the dates of legal instruments, and in England the quarter-days, for paying rent, are four feast-days. The terms of the courts, in England, before 1875, were fixed to begin on certain days determined with reference to the occurrence of four of the chief feasts.

FEASIAL. The nearest approach to a system of international law known to the ancient world. It was a branch of Roman jurisprudence, concerned with embassies, declarations of war, and treaties of peace. It received this name from the feciiales, (q. v.) who were charged with its administration.

FECIALES. Among the ancient Romans, that order of priests who discharged the duties of ambassadors. Subsequently their duties appear to have related more particularly to the declaring war and peace. Calvin.; 1 Kent, Comm. 6.

FEDERAL.

American Law. Belonging to the general government or union of the states. Founded on or organized under the constitution or laws of the United States.

The United States has been generally styled, in American political and judicial writings, a “federal government.” The term has not been imposed by any specific constitutional authority, but only expresses the general sense and opinion upon the nature of the form of government. In recent years, there is observable a disposition to employ the term “national” in speaking of the government of the Union. Neither word settles anything as to the nature or powers of the government. “Federal” is somewhat more appropriate if the government is considered a union of the states; “national” is preferable if the view is adopted that the state governments and the Union are two distinct systems, each established by the people directly, one for local and the other for national purposes. See United States v. Cuiikshank, 92 U.S. 542, 23 L.Ed. 588; Abbott Mills, Representative Government 301; Freeman, Fed. Gov’t.

FEDERAL CENSUS. A census of each state or territory or of a certain state or of any subdivision or portion of any state, provided it is taken by and under the direction and supervision of the Census Bureau of the United States, and approved and certified by it as the census of that state or subdivision. In re Cleveland’s Claim, 72 Okl. 279, 180 P. 852, 885.

FEDERAL COMMON LAW is a body of decisional law developed by the federal courts untrammeled by state court decisions. O’Brien v. Western Union Telegraph Co., C.C.A.Mass., 113 F.2d 539, 541.

FEDERAL COURTS. The courts of the United States. See Courts of the United States.

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT. The system of government administered in a state formed by the union or confederation of several independent or quasi, independent states; also the composite state so formed.

In strict usage, there is a distinction between a confederate and a federal government. The former term denotes a league or permanent alliance between several states, each of which is fully sovereign and independent, and each of which retains its full dignity, organization, and sovereignty, though yielding to the central authority a controlling power for a few limited purposes, such as external and diplomatic relations. In this case, the component states are the units, with respect to the confederation, and the central government acts upon them, not upon the individual citizens. In a federal government, on the other hand, the allied states form a union,—not, indeed, to such an extent as to destroy their separate organization or deprive them of quasi sovereignty with respect to the administration of their purely local concerns, but so that the central power is erected into a true state or nation, possessing sovereignty both external and internal,—while the administration of national affairs is directed, and its effects felt, not by the separate states deliberating as units, but by the people of all, in their collective capacity, as citizens of the nation. The distinction is expressed, by the German writers, by the use of the two words “Staatenbund” and “Bundesstaat;” the former denoting a league or confederation of states, and the latter a federal government, or state formed by means of a league or confederation.

FEDERAL QUESTION. Cases arising under Constitution of United States, Acts of Congress, or treaties, and involving their interpretation and application, and of which jurisdiction is given to federal courts, are commonly described as involving a “federal question.” McAllister v. St. Louis Merchants’ Bridge Terminal Ry. Co., 324 Mo. 1005, 25 S.W.2d 791, 792.

FEDERALIST, THE. A series of 85 essays by Alexander Hamilton, James Madison, and John Jay, expounding and advocating the adoption of the Constitution of the United States. All but six of the essays were first published in the ‘Independent Journal’ of New York City from October, 1787, to April, 1788. Webster, New Int. Dict. “The opinion of the Federalist has always [been] considered as of great authority.” Cohens v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 264, 418, 5 L.Ed. 257.

FEDERATED STATE. An independent central organism, having its own machinery absorbing, in view of international law, all the individual states associated together. Molina v. Comision Reguladora Del Mercado De Henequen, 91 N.J.L. 382, 103 A. 397, 400.

FEE. A charge fixed by law for services of public officers or for use of a privilege under control of government. Fort Smith Gas Co. v. Wiseman, 189 Ark. 675, 74 S.W.2d 789, 790. A recompense for an official or professional service or a charge or emolument or compensation for a particular act or service. Craig v. Shelton, 201 Ky. 790, 258 S.W. 694. A fixed charge or perquisite charged as recompense for labor and trouble, a reward, compensation, or wage given to a person for performance of professional services or something done or to be done. People v. Goulding, 275 Mich. 353, 266 N.W. 378, 379.

A contingent fee is a fee stipulated to be paid to an attorney for his services in conducting a suit or other proceeding only in case he wins it; it may be a percentage of the amount recovered. Adopted in Gray v. Stern, 85 Wash. 645, 149 P. 26, 28.

For docket fee, see Docket.

Estates

Ordinarily, word "fee" or "fee simple" is applied to an estate in land, but term is applicable to any kind of hereditament, corporeal or incorporeal, and is all the property in thing referred to or largest estate therein which person may have. In re Forstrom, 44 Ariz. 472, 38 P.2d 878, 888.

A freehold estate in lands, held of a superior lord, as a reward or for services, and on condition and on performance of service in return for it. The true meaning of the word "fee" is the same as that of "feud" or "fief," and in its original sense it is taken in contradistinction to "allodium," which latter is defined as a man's own land, which he possesses merely in his own right, without owing any rent or service to any superior. 2 Bl.Comm. 105. See Wendell v. Crandall, 1 N.Y. 491.

In modern English tenures, "fee" signifies an estate of inheritance, being the highest and most extensive interest which a man can have in a feud; and when the term is used simply, without any adjunct, or in the form "fee-simple," it imports an absolute inheritance clear of any condition, limitation, or restriction to particular heirs, but descendible to the heirs general, male or female, lineal or collateral. 2 Bl.Comm. 106; Cowell; Termes de la Ley; 1 Washb.R.P. 51; Co.Litt. 1 b; 1 Prest. Est. 420; 3 Kent 514.

Base fee. A determinable or qualified fee; an estate having the nature of a fee, but not a fee simple absolute. In re Douglass' Estate, 94 Neb. 280, 143 N.W. 299, 302.

Conditional fee. An estate restrained to some particular heirs, exclusive of others, Blume v. Pearcy, 204 S.C. 409, 29 S.E.2d 673, 674, as to the heirs of a man's body, by which only his lineal descendants were admitted, in exclusion of collateral; or to the heirs male of his body, in exclusion of heirs female, whether lineal or collateral. It was called a "conditional fee," by reason of the condition expressed or implied in the donation of it that, if the donee died without such particular heirs, the land should revert to the donor. 2 Bl.Comm. 110. The term includes a fee that is either to commence or determine on some condition, 10 Co. 950; Prent. Est. 476; Fearne, Cont.Rem. 9; and is sometimes used interchangeably with "base fee," that is, one to determine or be defeated on the happening of some condition, but not on the death of the owner, and thereby also incorporate a fee simple; Citizens' Electric Co. v. Susquehanna Boom Co., 270 Pa. 517, 113 A. 559, 561; Glass v. Johnson, 297 N.E. 473, 474.

Determinable fee. Also called a "base" or "qualified" fee. Stubbs v. Abel, 114 Or. 610, 233 P. 852, 859. One which has a qualification subjoined to it, and which must be determined whenever the qualification annexed to it is at an end. Littleton § 254; Co.Litt. 27a, 220; 1 Prest.Est. 449; 2 Bla.Comm. 109; Cruise, Dig. tit. 1, § 82. An estate in fee which is liable to be determined by some act or event expressed on its limitation to circumscribe its continuance, or inferred by law as bounding its extent. 1 Washb. Real Prop. 62; McLane v. Bovee, 35 Wis. 36. An estate which may last forever is a "fee," but if it may end on the happening of a merely possible event, it is a "determinable," or "qualified fee." Reichard v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 231 Iowa 563, 1 N.W.2d 721, 727.

Determinate fee or fee simple. Estate created with special limitation which delimits duration of estate in land.

Fee damages. See Damages.

Fee expectant. A name sometimes applied to an estate created where lands are given to a man and his wife and the heirs of their bodies. See also Frank-Marriage.

Fee simple defeasible. Title created in trustees where legal title in fee simple to active trust estate is by will placed in trustees who are required to distribute property in fee simple upon happening of event. Also called a "determinable fee," "base fee," or "qualified fee." Kanawha Valley Bank v. Hornbeck, W.Va., 151 S.E.2d 694, 700.

Fee farm. In feudal law, the designation of a fee held directly from the crown.

Knight's fee. See Knight's Fee.

Limited fee. An estate of inheritance in lands, which is clogged or confined with some sort of condition or qualification. Such estates are base or fee simple, or qualify, and are fee tail. The term is opposed to "fee-simple." 2 Bl.Comm. 109; Lott v. Wyckoff, 1 Barb., N.Y., 575; Paterson v. Ellis, 11 Wend., N.Y., 259.

Plowman's fee. In old English law, was a species of tenure peculiar to peasants or small farmers, somewhat like gavelkind, by which the lands descended in equal shares to all the sons of the tenant.

Qualified fee. In English law. A fee having a qualification subjoined thereto, and which must be determined whenever the qualification annexed to it is at an end; otherwise termed a "base fee." 2 Bl.Comm. 109; 1 Steph. Comm. 225. An interest which may continue forever, but is liable to be determined, without the aid of a conveyance, by some act or event, circumscribing its continuance or extent. 4 Kent, Comm. 9; Moody v. Walker, 3 Ark. 190; U.S. v. Reese, 27 Fed.Cas. 744. An interest given to a man and certain of his heirs at the time of its limitation. See Kelso v. Stigar, 75 Md. 397, 24 A. 18.

Quasi fee. An estate gained by wrong. Wharton.

Also, the land which is held in fee.

American Law

An estate of inheritance without condition, belonging to the owner, and alienable by him or transmissible to his heirs absolutely and simply, and is an absolute estate in perpetuity and the largest possible estate a man can have, being, in fact, alodial in its nature. Stanton v. Sullivan, 63 R.I. 216, 7 A.2d 696, 698, 699.

Every estate which is not for life, for years or will. Chance v. Weston, 96 Or. 390, 190 P. 155, 157.

FEE AND LIFE-RENT. In Scotch law, two estates in land—the first of which is the full right of proprietorship, the second the limited right of usufruct during life—may be held together, or may co-exist in different persons at the same time. See Bell, Prin. § 1712; Ersk. Prin. 420; Fiar.

FEE-FARM. A species of tenure, where land is held of another in perpetuity at a yearly rent, without fealty, homage, or other services than such other special services as the tenure itself imposed. It corresponds very nearly to the "emphyteusis" of the Roman law. Cowell. Fealty, however, was incident to a holding in fee-farm, according to some authors. Spelman; Termes de la Ley.

Fee-farm is where an estate in fee is granted subject to a holding in fee-farm, according to some authors. Spelman; Termes de la Ley.

Fee-farm is where an estate in fee is granted subject to a holding in fee-farm, according to some authors. Spelman; Termes de la Ley.

FEE-FARM considerable a rent is indeed only letting lands to farm in too high a price for the land to deserve. Of course, a rent

FEE-FARM RENT. The rent reserved on granting a fee-farm. It might be one-fourth the value of the land, according to Cowell; one-third, according to other authors. Spelman; Terms de la Ley; 2 Bl. Comm. 43. Fee-farm rent is a rent-charge issuing out of an estate in fee; a perpetual rent reserved on a conveyance in fee-simple. De Peyster v. Michael, 6 N.Y. 467, 495, 57 Am.Dec. 470.

FEE SIMPLE.

Absolute

A fee simple absolute is an estate limited absolutely to a man and his heirs and assigns forever without limitation or condition. Rathbun v. State, 284 Mich. 521, 280 N.W. 35, 40.

Conditional

At the common law, an estate in fee simple conditional was a fee limited or restrained to some particular heirs, exclusive of others. But the statute "De Donis" converted all such estates into estates tail. 2 Bl. Comm. 110.

American Law

An absolute or fee-simple estate is one in which the owner is entitled to the entire property, with unconditional power of disposition during his life, and descending to his heirs and legal representatives upon his death intestate. Code Ga. 1882, § 2246 (Civ.Code 1910, § 3657). Friedman v. Steiner, 107 Ill. 131; Woodberry v. Matherson, 19 Fla. 785; Lyle v. Richards, 9 Serg. & R., Pa. 374. Unlimited as to duration, disposition, and descendibility. Slayden v. Hardin, 257 Ky. 685, 79 S.W. 2d 11, 12.

The estate which a man has where lands are given to him and to his heirs absolutely without any end or limit put to his estate. 2 Bl. Comm. 106; Plowd. 557; 1 Prest. Est. 425; Litt. § 1. The word "fee," used alone, is a sufficient designation of this species of estate, and hence "simple" is not a necessary part of the title, but it is added as a means of clearly distinguishing this estate from a fee-tail or from any variety of conditional estates.

Fee-simple signifies a pure fee; an absolute estate of inheritance clear of any condition or restriction to particular heirs, being descendlible to the heirs general, whether male or female, lineal or collateral. It is the largest estate and most extensive interest that can be enjoyed in land. Haynes v. Bourn, 42 Vt. 686; Powers v. Trustees of Caledonia County Grammar School, 93 Vt. 220, 106 A. 836, 841; Smith v. Smith's Ex'r, 122 Va. 341, 94 S.E. 777, 779. When a person owns in common with another, he does not own the entire fee,—a fee-simple; it is a fee divided or shared with another. Brackett v. Ridlon, 54 Me. 426.

Terms "fee," "fee simple," and "fee simple absolute," are equivalent. Boon v. Boon, 348 Ill. 120, 180 N.E. 792, 794.

English Law

A freehold estate of inheritance, absolute and unqualified. It stands at the head of estates as the highest in dignity and the most ample in extent; since every other kind of estate is derivable therefrom, and mergeable therein. It may be enjoyed not only in land, but also in advowsons, commons, estovers, and other hereditaments, as well as in personality, as an annuity or dignity, and also in an upper chamber, though the lower buildings and soil belong to another. Wharton; Co.Litt. 1 b; 2 Bla. Comm. 106.

FEE TAIL. A freehold estate in which there is a fixed line of inheritable succession limited to the issue of the body of the grantee or devisee, and in which the regular and general succession of heirs at law is cut off. Coleman v. Shoemaker, 147 Kan. 689, 78 P.2d 905, 907.

An estate tail is an estate of inheritance given to a man and the heirs of his body, or limited to certain classes of particular heirs. It corresponds to the feudum talliatum of the feudal law, and the idea is believed to have been borrowed from the Roman law, where, by way of fi deicommissum, lands might be entailed upon children and freedmen and their descendants, with restrictions as to alienation. 1 Washb.Real Prop. *66. For the varieties and special characteristics of this kind of estate, see Tail, Estate in.

FEED. To lend additional support; to strengthen ex post facto. "The interest when it accrues feeds the estoppel." Christmas v. Oliver, 5 Mood. & R. 202. Similarly, a subsequent title acquired by the mortgagor is said "to feed the mortgage."

The word is used in its ordinary sense with reference to cattle and hogs which are said to be made marketable by feeding. Brockway v. Rowley, 66 Ill. 102.

It is also used in the phrase feeding of a cow by and on the land to signify from the land while there is food on it, and with hay by the owner of the land at other times; 2 Q. B. Div. 49.

FEGANGI. In old English law, a thief caught while escaping with the stolen goods in his possession. Spelman.

FEHMGERICHTER. The name given to certain secret tribunals which flourished in Germany from the end of the twelfth century to the middle of the sixteenth, usurping many of the functions of the governments which were too weak to maintain law and order, and inspiring dread in all who came within their jurisdiction. Enc. Brit. Such a court existed in Westphalia (though with greatly diminished powers) until finally suppressed by Jerome Bonaparte in 1811. See Bork, Geschichte der Westphalischen Vehmergerichte; Paul Wigand, Das Fehmggericht Westphaleus.

FEIGNED. Fictitious; pretended; supposititious; simulated.

FEIGNED ACCOMPlice. One who pretends to consult and act with others in the planning of commission of a crime, but only for the purpose of discovering their plans and confederates and FEIGNED ACTION. In practice, an action brought on a pretended right, when the plaintiff has no true cause of action, for some illegal purpose, in a feigned action the words of the writ are true. It differs from false action, in which case the words of the writ are false. Co. Litt. 361.

FEIGNED DISEASES. Simulated maladies. Diseases are generally feigned from one of three causes,—fear, shame, or the hope of gain. Co. Litt. 361.

An issue made up by the direction of a court of equity, (or by consent of parties,) and sent to a common-law court, for the purpose of obtaining the verdict of a jury on some disputed matter of fact which the court has not jurisdiction, or is unwilling, to decide. It rests upon a suppositious wager between the parties. See 3 Bl.Comm. 452. Under the reformed codes of some states issues may be framed in certain exceptional cases. In England, the practice has been disused since the passing of the Stat. 8 and 9 Vict. c. 109, s. 19, permitting any court to refer any question of fact to a jury in a direct form. The act 21 and 22 Vict. c. 27, provided for trial by jury in the court of chancery.

FELAGUS. In Saxon law, one bound for an oath; a sworn brother. A friend bound with another in some legal relation; a companion; one with whom we consort; a vassal forfeited his fee. Spelman; Calvin. Per feloniam, a vassal forfeited his fee. Spelman; Calvin. Per feloniam, a vassal forfeited his fee. Spelman; Calvin.

FELD. A field; in composition, wild. Blount.

FELE, FEAL. L. Fr. Faithful. See Feal.

FELLATIO, or FELLATION. The offense committed with the male sexual organ and the mouth. State v. Murry, 136 La. 253, 66 So. 963. See Sodomy.

FELLOW. A co-worker; a partaker or sharer of; a companion; one with whom we consort; one joined with another in some legal status or relation; a member of a college or corporate body.

FELLOW-HEIR. A co-heir; partner of the same inheritance.

FELLOW SERVANT. One who serves and is controlled by the same master. Walsh v. Eu-banks, 183 Ark. 34, 34 S.W.2d 762, 764.

Those engaged in the same common pursuit, under the same general control. Cooley, Torts 541. Those who derive authority and compensation from the same common source, and are engaged in the same general business, though it may be in different grades or departments of it. 2 Thomp. Neg. p. 1026, § 31; Southern Ry. Co. v. Taylor, 57 App.D.C. 21, 16 F.2d 517, 519; Brush Electric Light Co. v. Wells, 110 Ga. 192, 35 S.E. 365. When servants are employed and paid by the same master, and their duties are such as to bring them into such relation that negligence of one in doing his work may injure other in performance of his, then they are engaged in the same common business, and are "fellow servants." Hercules Powder Co. v. Hammack, 145 Miss. 304, 110 So. 676, 677. But it has been held that an inferior employee is not a "fellow servant" of a superior employee. McDonald v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 232 Ky. 734, 24 S.W.2d 585, 587.

FELONICE. Feloniously. Cunningham, Law Dict.

Anciently an indispensable word in indictments for felony, and classed by Lord Coke among those voces artis (words of art) which cannot be expressed by any paraphrase or circumlocution. 4 Coke, 39; Co.Litt. 391a; 4 Bl.Comm. 307.

FELONIOUS. A technical word of law which means done with intent to commit crime; of the grade or quality of a felony; such an assault on the person as, if consummated, would subject the person as, if consummated, would subject the person to punishment of a felony. Martin v. State, 163 Miss. 454, 142 So. 15, 16. Malicious; villainous; traitorous. People v. Knapp, 152 Misc. 368, 274 N.Y.S. 85. Malignant. People v. Moore, 37 Hun, N.Y., 93. Wickedly and against the admonition of the law; unlawfully. State v. Allister, 317 Mo.
FELONIOUS ASSAULT. Such an assault upon the person as, if consummated, would subject the party making it, upon conviction, to the punishment of a felony, that is, to imprisonment in the penitentiary. Hinkle v. State, 94 Ga. 595, 21 S.E. 595.

FELONIOUSLY. Of, pertaining to, or having, the quality of felony. People v. Thomas, 58 Cal. App. 308, 208 P. 343, 344.

An indispensable word at common law in indictments for felony, as felonice was in the Latin forms. 4 Bl. Comm. 307; State v. Jesse, 19 N.C. 300; Com. Dig. Indictment (G 6); Bac.Abr. Indictment (G 1); 2 Hale, Pl.Cr. 172, 184; 1 Ben. & H. Lead. Cr.Cas. 154. It is still necessary in describing a common-law felony, or where its use is prescribed by statute; Whart. Cr. Fl. § 260; Bowler v. State, 41 Miss. 570; Cain v. State, 18 Tex. 387.

Felony, compounding of. See Compounding Felony.

FELONY ACT. The statute 33 & 34 Vict. c. 23, abolishing forfeitures for felony, and sanctioning the appointment of interim curators and administrators of the property of felons. Mozley & Whiteley; 4 Steph. Comm. 10, 459.

FELTING. In the process of "felting," as applied to the manufacture of fur felt hats, the fur fibers become interlocked with the wool fibers, or with other fibers of fur, for their whole length. Mattawan Mfg. Co. v. Emmons Bros. Co., C.C.A. Mass., 253 F. 372, 375. See, also, Werk v. Parker, C.C.A.Pa., 231 F. 121, 123.

FEMALE. The sex which conceives and gives birth to young. Also a member of such sex. The term is generic, but may have the specific meaning of "woman," if so indicated by the context. State v. Hemm, 82 Iowa, 609, 48 N.W. 971; State v. Phillips, 26 N.D. 206, 144 N.W. 94, 95, 49 L.R.A., N.S., 470, Ann.Cas.1916A, 320.

Unmarried female, is a term descriptive not only of those who have never married, but also of widows and divorced women. People v. Weinstock, 27 N.Y.Cr.R. 53, 140 N.Y.S. 453, 458.
FEME, FEMME. L. Fr. A woman. Ducre v. Milner, La.App., 146 So. 734, 736. Also, a wife, as in the phrase "baron et feme" (q. v.).

FEME COVERT. A married woman. Generally used in reference to the legal disabilities of a married woman, as compared with the condition of a feme sole. Hoker v. Boggs, 63 Ill. 111.161.

FEME SOLE. A single woman, including those who have been married, but whose marriage has been dissolved by death or divorce, and, for most purposes, those women who are judicially separated from their husbands. Mozley & Whiteley; 2 Steph. Comm. 250. Kirkley v. Lacey, 7 Houst. Del. 213, 30 A. 994.

FEME SOLE TRADER. In English law, a married woman, who, by the custom of London, trades on her own account, independently of her husband; so called because, with respect to her trading, she is the same as a feme sole. Jacob; Cro. Car. 68. The term is applied also to women deserted by their husbands, who do business as fames sole. Rhea v. Rhenner, 1 Pet. 105, 7 L.Ed. 72.

The custom was recognized as common law in South Carolina, but did not extend beyond trading in merchandise; McDaniel v. Cornwell, 1 Hill, S.C., 429; Newbiggin v. Roberts, 2 Bay, S.C., 164. By statute in several states a similar custom is recognized, as in Pennsylvania, by act of Feb. 22, 1718, 48 P.S. § 41. Black v. Tricker, 59 Pa. 13; People's Sugar Co. v. Denig, 131 Pa. 241, 18 A. 1083.

FEMICIDE. The killing of a woman. Wharton. One who kills a woman.

FEMININE. Of or belonging to females.

FEMME COULEUR LIBRE. Up to the time of Civil War, term applied to all persons not of the white race, including Indians. Sunseri v. Cassagne, 191 La. 209, 185 So. 1, 4.

FENATIO (or FEONATIC). In forest law, the fawning of deer; the fawning season. Spelman.

FENCE, v. In old Scotch law, to defend or protect by formalities.

To "fence a court" was to open it in due form, and interact all manner of persons from disturbing their proceedings. This was called "fencing," q. d., defending or protecting the court. Pitcairn, Cr.Law., pt. 1, p. 75.

FENCE, n. A hedge, structure, or partition, erected for the purpose of inclosing a piece of land, or to divide a piece of land into distinct portions, or to separate two contiguous estates. Kimball v. Carter, 95 Va. 77, 27 S.E. 823, 38 L.R.A. 570; Estes v. Railroad Co., 63 Me. 309.

FENCING PATENTS. Patents procured in an effort to broaden the scope of the invention beyond the article or process which is actually intended to be manufactured or licensed. Special Equipment Co. v. Coe, 79 U.S.App.D.C. 133, 144 F.2d 497, 499.

FENGERL. In Saxon law, a tax or imposition, exacted for the repelling of enemies. Spelman.

FENIAN. A champion, hero, giant. This word, in the plural, is generally used to signify invaders or foreign spoilers. The modern meaning of "Fenian" is a member of an organization of persons of Irish birth, resident in the United States, Canada, and elsewhere, having for its aim the overthrow of English rule in Ireland. Webster.

FEOD. The same as feudal or fief. 2 Bla. Comm. 45; Spelman.

FEODAL. Belonging to a fee or feud; feudal. More commonly used by the old writers than feudal.

FEODAL ACTIONS. Real actions. 3 Bla. Comm. 117.

FEODAL SYSTEM. See Feudal System.

FEODALITY. Fidelity or fealty. Cowell. See Fealty.

FEODARUM (or FEUDARAM) CONSUELUDINES. The customs of feuds. The name of a compilation of feudal laws and customs made at Milan in the twelfth century. It is the most ancient work on the subject, and was always regarded, on the continent of Europe, as possessing the highest authority.

FEODARY. An officer of the court of wards, appointed by the master of that court, under 32 Hen. VIII. c. 26, whose business it was to be present with the escheator in every county at the finding of offices of lands, and to give evidence for the king, as well concerning the value as the tenure; and his office was also to survey the land of the ward, after the office found, and to rate it.
FEODUM TALLIATUM, i.e., HIEREDITAS IN FEODI FIRMA. In old English law, fee-farm definite descent.

Termes de la Ley. Blackstone uses feodatory

FEODATORY, or FEUDATORY. In feudal law, the grantee of a feod, feud, or fee; the vassal or tenant who held his estate by feudal service. Termes de la Ley. Blackstone uses "feodatory!"

FEODUM. This word (meaning a feud or fee) tenant who held his estate by feudal service.

FEODUM NOBILE. A fief for which the tenant did guard and owed homage. Spelman.

FEODUM SIMPLEX. A feu d'âpre or a free fee, a right or interest in land which the tenant can dispose of at will.

FEODUM SIMPLEX QUA FEODUM IDEM EST QUOD ILEREDITAS, ET SIMPLEX IDEM EST QUOD LEGITIMUM VEL PURUM; ET SIC FEODUM SIMPLEX IDEM EST QUOD HIEREDITAS LEGITIMA VEL HIEREDITAS PURA. Litt. § 1. A fee-simple, so called because fee is the same as inheritance, and simple is the same as lawful or pure; and thus fee-simple is the same as a lawful inheritance, or pure inheritance.

FEODUM TALLIATUM, i.e., HIEREDITAS IN QUANDAM CERTIDUDINEM LIMITATA. Litt. § 13. Fee-tail, e., an inheritance limited in a definite descent.

FEOFFMENT. A feoffment. 2 Bl. Comm. 310.

FEOFFARE. To enfoffe; to bestow a fee. The bestower was called "feoffator," and the grantee or feoffee, "feoffatus." 1 Reeve, Hist. Eng. Law, 91.

FEOFFATOR. In old English law, a feoffor or feoffor; one who gives or bestows a fee; one who makes a feoffment. Bract. fols. 12b, 81.

FEOFFATURE. In old English law, a feoffee; one to whom a fee is given, or a feoffment made. Bract. fols. 17b, 44b.

FEOFFEE. He to whom a fee is conveyed. Litt. § 1; 2 Bl. Comm. 20.

FEOFFEE TO USES. A person to whom land was conveyed for the use of a third party. (The latter was called "cestui que use.") One holding the same position with reference to a use that a trustee does to a trust. 1 Greenl. Cruise, Dig. 333. He answers to the hares fiduciarius of the Roman law.

FEOFFMENT. The gift of any corporeal hereditament to another (2 Bl. Comm. 310), operating by transmutation of possession, and requiring, as essential to its completion, that the seisin be passed (Watk. Con. 183), which might be accomplished either by investiture or by livery of seisin. 1 Washb. Real Prop. 33. Thatcher v. Omans, 3 Pick., Mass., 532; French v. French, 3 N.H. 260. A gift of a freehold interest in land accompanied by livery of seisin. The essential part is the livery of seisin, 3 Holdsw. Hist. E. L. 187.

Also the deed or conveyance by which such corporeal hereditament is passed.

A feoffment originally meant the grant of a feud or fee; that is, a barony or knight's fee, for which certain services were due from the feoffee to the feoffor. By custom it came afterwards to signify also a grant (with livery of seisin) of a free inheritance to a man and his heirs, referring rather to the perpetuity of the estate than to the feudal tenure. 1 Reeve, Eng.Law, 90, 91. It was for ages the only method (in ordinary use) for conveying the freehold of land in possession, but has now fallen in great measure into disuse, even in England, having been almost entirely supplanted by some of that class of conveyances founded on the statute law of the realm. 1 Steph. Comm. 467, 468; Dane, Abr. c. 104; Stearn, Real Act. 2; Green v. Liter, 8 Cranch, U.S., 229, 3 L. Ed. 454.

FEOFFMENT TO USES. A feoffment of lands to one person to the use of another.

In such case the feoffee was bound in conscience to hold the lands according to the use, and could himself derive no benefit. Sometimes such feoffments were made to the use of the feoffor. The effect of such conveyance was entirely changed by the statute of uses. See Wms.R.P., 6th Ed., 155; 2 Sand.U.s. 13; Watk.Conv. 288.

FEOFFOR. The person making a feoffment, or enfeoffing another in fee. 2 Bl. Comm. 310; Litt. §§ 1, 57.

FEOH. This Saxon word meant originally cattle, and thence property or money, and, by a second transition, wages, reward, or fee. It was probably the original form from which the words "feod," "feudum," "fief," "feu," and "fee" (all meaning a feudal grant of land) have been derived. Spelman, Feuds.

FEONATIO. In forest law, the fawning season of deer.
FERME. A certain portion of the produce of the land due by the grantee to the lord according to the terms of the charter. Speel. Feuds, c. 7.

FERZE BESTIIE. Wild beasts.

FERIE NATURIE, Lat. Of a wild nature or disposition.

Animals which are by nature wild are so designated, by way of distinction from such as are naturally tame, the latter being called "domine naturae." Fleet v. Hegeman, 14 Wend., N.Y. 43; State v. Taylor, 27 N.J.L. 119, 72 Am. Dec. 347; Gillet v. Mason, 7 Johns., N.Y. 17.

FERCOSTA. Ital. A kind of small vessel or boat. Mentioned in old Scotch law, and called "fercost." Skene.

FERDELLA TERRIE. A fardel-land; ten acres; or perhaps a yard-land. Cowell.

F'ERDFARE. Sax. A summons to serve in the army. An acquittance from going into the army. Fleta, lib. 1, c. 47, § 23.

FERDINGUS. A term denoting, apparently, a freeman of the lowest class, being named after the cotsetti. Anc. Inst. Eng.

FERDWITE. In Saxon law, an acquittance of military expedition. Cowell.

FERFINGATA. A fourth part of a yard-land.

FERLINGATA, or FERLINGUM. A furlong. Co. Litt. 5 b.

FERLINGUS, or FERLINGUM. A furlong. Co. Litt. 5 b.

FERM, or FEARM. A house or land, or both, let by lease. Cowell.

FERM, or FEARM. A farm; a rent; a lease; a house or land, or both, taken by indenture or lease. Plowd. 195; Vicat; Cowell. See Farm.

FERMENTATION. A decomposition produced in an organic substance by the physiological action of a living organism, or by certain unorganized agents. U. S. v. Dodson, D.C.Cal., 268 F. 397, 403.

FERMENTED LIQUORS. Beverages produced by, or which have undergone, a process of alcoholic fermentation, to which they owe their intoxicating properties, including beer, wine, hard cider, and the like, but not spirituous or distilled liquors. State v. Lemp, 16 Mo. 391; State v. Biddle, 54 N. H. 383; People v. Foster, 64 Mich. 715, 31 N.W. 596; Hill v. State, 174 Md. 137, 197 A. 795, 799.

FERMER, FERMOR. A lessee; a farmer. One who holds a term, whether of lands or an incorporeal right, such as customs or revenue.

FERM, or FEARM. A house or land, or both, let by lease. Cowell.

FERME. A certain portion of the produce of the land due by the grantee to the lord according to the terms of the charter. Speel. Feuds, c. 7.

FERME. A farm; a rent; a lease; a house or land, or both, taken by indenture or lease. Plowd. 195; Vicat; Cowell. See Farm.

FERMENTATION. A decomposition produced in an organic substance by the physiological action of a living organism, or by certain unorganized agents. U. S. v. Dodson, D.C.Cal., 268 F. 397, 403.

FERMENTED LIQUORS. Beverages produced by, or which have undergone, a process of alcoholic fermentation, to which they owe their intoxicating properties, including beer, wine, hard cider, and the like, but not spirituous or distilled liquors. State v. Lemp, 16 Mo. 391; State v. Biddle, 54 N. H. 383; People v. Foster, 64 Mich. 715, 31 N.W. 596; Hill v. State, 174 Md. 137, 197 A. 795, 799.

FERMER, FERMOR. A lessee; a farmer. One who holds a term, whether of lands or an incorporeal right, such as customs or revenue.

FERMIER. In French law, one who farms any public revenue.

FERMISONA. In old English law, the winter season for killing deer.

FERMORY. In old records, a place in monasteries, where they received the poor, (hospicio excepient,) and gave them provisions (ferm, firma.) Spelman. Hence the modern infirmary, used in the sense of a hospital.

FERNIGO. In old English law, a waste ground, or place where fern grows. Cowell.

FEREIDA. In old English law, a weekday; a holiday; a day on which process could not be served; a fair; a ferry. Cowell; Du Cange; Spelman; 4 Reeve, Hist. Eng. Law 17.

FERRER, or FERRURA. The shoeing of horses. Kelham. See Ferrum.

FERRUERE, or FERRURA. The shoeing of horses. Kelham. See Ferrum.

FERRY. A place of transit across a river or arm of the sea. Woolr.Ways 217. In law it is treated as a franchise, and defined as the exclusive right to carry passengers across a river, or arm of the sea, from one vil to another, or to connect a continuous line of road leading from township or vill to another. Canadian Pac. Ry. Co. v. U.S., C.C.A. Wash., 73 F.2d 831, 832.

A continuation of the highway from one side of the water over which it passes to the other, for transportation of passengers or of travelers with their teams and vehicles and such other property as they may carry or have with them. U. S. v. Puget Sound Na\textsuperscript{Y}, Co., D.C.Wash., 24 F.Supp. 431, 432.

A liberty to have a boat on a stream, river, arm of the sea, lake, or other body of water for the transportation of men, horses, and vehicles with their contents, for a reasonable toll. Sometimes limited to the landing place. State Highway Commission v. Smith, 250 Ky. 269, 62 S.W.2d 1044.

It may be said to be necessary service by specially constructed boat for the transportation of passengers and property across rivers or bodies of water from place on one shore to point conveniently opposite on other shore and continuation of thoroughfare at each terminus. U. S. v. Canadian Pac. Ry. Co., D.C.Wash., 4 F.Supp. 851, 853. It comprises not merely the exclusive privilege of transportation, but also the use for that purpose of the respective landings, with the outlets therefrom. Hale v. Record, 74 Old. 77, 176 P. 756, 757.

A public ferry is one to which all the public have the right to resort, for which a regular fare is established, and the ferryman is a common carrier, bound to take over all who apply, and bound to keep his ferry in operation and good repair. Hudspeth v. Hall, 111 Ga. 510, 36 S.E. 770; Broadnax v. Baker, 94 N.C. 681, 55 Am.Rep. 633.

A private ferry is one mainly for the use of the owner, and though he may take pay for ferriage, he does not follow it as a business. His ferry is not open to the public at its demand, and he may or may not keep it in operation. Hudspeth v. Hall, supra; St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Harrison, 140 Ark. 158, 215 S.W. 698.

FERRY FRANCHISE. The public grant of a right to maintain a ferry at a particular place; a right conferred to land at a particular point and secure toll for the transportation of persons and property across the stream. Mills v. St. Clair County, 7 Ill. 208. A grant to a named person empowering him to continue an interrupted land highway over the interrupting waters. U. S. v. Puget Sound Na\textsuperscript{Y}, Co., D.C.Wash., 24 F. Supp. 431, 432.

FERRYBOAT. A vessel traversing any of the waters of the state between two constant points regularly employed for the transfer of passengers and freight, authorized by law so to do, and also any boat employed as a part of the system of a railroad for the transfer of passengers and freight plying at regular and stated periods between two points. Pol.Code Cal. § 3643; Lake Tahoe Ry. & Transp. Co. v. Roberts, 168 Cal. 551, 143 P. 786, 789, Ann.Cas.1916B, 1196.

FERRYMAN. One employed in taking persons across a river or other stream, in boats or other contrivances, at a ferry. Covington Ferry Co. v. Moore, 8 Dana, Ky., 158; State v. Clarke, 2 McCord, S.C., 48, 13 Am.Dec. 701.

FESTA IN CAPPIS. In old English law, grand holidays, on which choirs wore caps. Jacob.

FESTINATIO JUSTITIE EST NOVERCA IN-FORTUNII. Hob. 97. Hasty justice is the stepmother of misfortune.

FESTING--MAN. In old English law, a bondsman; a surety; a frank-pledge, or one who was surety for the good behavior of another. Monasteries enjoyed the privilege of being "free from festing-men," which means that they were "not bound for any man's forthcoming who should transgress the law." Cowell. See Frank-Pledge.

FESTING--PENNY. Earnest given to servants when hired or retained. The same as arles-penny. Cowell.

FESTINUM REMEDIUM. Lat. A speedy remedy.

A term applied to those cases where the remedy for the redress of an injury is given without any unnecessary delay. Bacon, Abr. Assise, A. The action of dower is festinum remedium. The writ of assise was also thus characterized (in comparison with the less expeditious remedies previously available) by the statute of Wdstminster 2 (13 Edw. 1 c. 24.)

FESTUCA. In Frankish law, a rod or staff or (as described by other writers) a stick, on which imprecatory runs were cut, which was used as a gage or pledge of good faith by a party to a contract, or for symbolic delivery in the conveyance or quit-claim of land, before a court of law, anterior to the introduction of written documents by the Romans. 2 Poll. & Maitl. 86, 184, 190; Maitl. Domedays Book and Beyond 323.

FESTUM. A feast, holiday, or festival. Festum stultorum, the feast of fools.

FETICIDE. In medical jurisprudence, destruction of the fetus; the act by which criminal abortion is produced. 1 Beck, Med.Jur. 288; Guy, Med. Jur. 133. See, also, Prolicide.

FETTERS. Chains or shackles for the feet; irons used to secure the legs of convicts, unruly prisoners, etc. Similar chains securing the wrists are called "handcuffs."

FEU. In Scotch law, a holding or tenure where the vassal, in place of military service, makes his return in grain or money. Distinguished from "wardholding," which is the military tenure of the country. Bell; Erskine, Inst. lib. tit. 3, § 7.

FEU ANNUALS. In Scotch law, the reddendo, or annual return from the vassal to a superior in a feu holding. Wharton, Diet., 2d Lond.Ed.

FEU ET LIEU. Fr. In old French and Canadian law, hearth and home. A term importing actual settlement upon land by a tenant.

FEUAR. In Scotch law, the tenant or vassal of a feu; a feu-vassal. Bell.

FEU HOLDING. A holding by tenure of rendering grain or money in place of military service. Bell.

FEUAR. In Scotch law, the tenant or vassal of a feu; a feu-vassal. Bell.

FEUD. Feudal law. An estate in land held of a superior on condition of rendering him services. 2 Bl.Comm. 105. An inheritable right to the use and occupation of lands, held on condition of rendering services to the lord or proprietor, who himself retains the property in the lands. See Spel. Feuds, c. 1.

In this sense the word is the same as "feod," "feodum," "feudum," "fief," or "fee." 1 Sullivan...
FEUDAL ACTIONS. An ancient name for real incidents, and transmission of feudal estates. Between the family of a murdered man and the family of his slayer, in Scotland and the north of England, a combination of all the kins to revenge the death of any of the blood upon the slayer and all his race. Termes de la Ley; Whishaw. See Deadly Feud; Faida.

Military Feuds

The genuine or original feuds which were in the hands of military men, who performed military duty for their tenures.

FEUDA. Feuds or fees.

FEUDAL. Pertaining to feuds or fees; relating to or growing out of the feudal system or feudal law; having the quality of a feud, as distinguished from "allodial."

FEUDAL ACTIONS. An ancient name for real actions, or such as concern real property only. 3 Bl.Comm. 117.

FEUDAL COURTS. In the 12th century a lord qua lord had the right to hold a court for his tenants. In the 13th century they became of less importance and for three reasons: The feudal principle would have led to a series of courts one above the other, and the dominions of the large landowners were usually scattered, so that great feudal courts became impossible. The growth of the jurisdiction of the king's court removed the necessity for feudal courts. All the incidents of the feudal system came to be regarded in a commercial spirit as property. Its jurisdiction became merely appendant to landowning. 1 Holdsw. Hist. E. L. 64.

FEUDAL LAW. The body of jurisprudence relating to feuds; the real-property law of the feudal system; the law anciently regulating the property relations of lord and vassal, and the creation, incidents, and transmission of feudal estates.

The body of laws and usages constituting the "feudal law" was originally customary and unwritten, but a compilation was made in the twelfth century, called "Feodarum Consuetudines," which has formed the basis of later digests. The feudal law prevailed over Europe from the twelfth to the fourteenth century, and was introduced into England at the Norman Conquest, where it formed the entire basis of the law of real property until comparatively modern times. Survivals of the feudal law, to the present day, so affect and color that branch of jurisprudence as to require a certain knowledge of the feudal law in order to the perfect comprehension of modern tenures and rules of real-property law.

FEUDAL POSSESSION. The equivalent of "seisin" under the feudal system.

FEUDAL SYSTEM. The system of feuds. A political and social system which prevailed throughout Europe during the eleventh, twelfth, and thirteenth centuries, and is supposed to have grown, out of the peculiar usages and policy of the Teutonic nations who overran the continent after the fall of the Western Roman Empire, as developed by the exigencies of their military domination, and possibly furthered by notions taken from the Roman jurisprudence.

It was introduced into England, in its completeness, by William I., A. D. 1085, though it may have existed in a rudimentary form among the Saxons before the Conquest. It formed the entire basis of the real-property law of England, the medieval times; and survivals of the system, in modern days, so modify and color that branch of jurisprudence, both in England and America, that many of its principles require for their complete understanding a knowledge of the feudal system. The feudal system originated in the relations of a military chieftain and his followers, or king and nobles, or lord and vassals, and especially their relations as determined by the bond established between a grant of land from the former to the latter. From this it grew into a complete and intricate complex of rules for the tenure and transmission of real estate, and of correlated duties and services; while, by tying men to the land and to those holding above and below them, it created a close-knit hierarchy of persons, and developed an aggregate of social and political institutions. For an account of the feudal system in its juristic relations, see 2 Bl.Comm. 44; 1 Steph. Comm. 160; 3 Kent, Comm. 487; Spel. Feuds; Litt. Ten.; Su11. Lect.; Spence, Eq. Jur.; 1 Washb. Real. Prop. 15; Dalr. Feu. Prop. For its political and social relations, see Hall, Middle Ages; Maine, Anc. Law; Rob. Car. V.; Montesq. Esprit des Lois, bk. 30; Guizot, Hist. Civilization.

FEUDAL TENURES. The tenures of real estate under the feudal system, such as knight-service, socage, vilenage, etc.

FEUDALISM. The aggregate of feudal principles and usages. It is a vague term to describe a congeries of customs and legal relations by no means uniform throughout Europe and never static. But feudalism had one basic characteristic traceable through all its variations: It rested on relations to land, the primary factor in a relatively primitive agrarian civilization. United States v. Forness, C.C.A. N.Y., 125 F. 2d 928, 933.

FEUDALIZE. To reduce to a feudal tenure; to conform to feudalism. Webster.

FEUDARY. A tenant who holds by feudal tenure, (also spelled "feodatory" and "feudatory.") Held by feudal service. Relating to feuds or feudal tenures.

FEUDBOTE. A recompense for engaging in a feud, and the damages consequent, it having been the custom in ancient times for all tale kindred to engage in their kinsman's quarrel. Jacob.

FEUDE. An occasional early form of "feud" in the sense of private war or vengeance. Termes de la Ley. See Feud.

FEUDIST. A writer on feuds, as Cujacius, Spelman, etc.

FEUDO. In Spanish law, feud or fee. White, New Recop. b. 2, tit. 2, c. 2.

FEUDORUM LIBER. The book of feuds. This was a compilation of feudal law, prepared by order of the emperor Frederick I., and published at Milan in 1170. It comprised five books, of which only the first two are now extant with fragmentary portions of the others, printed at the end of modern editions of the Corpus Juris Civilis. Giannone, b. 13, c. 3; Cruise, Dig. prel. diss. c. 1, 31.

FEUDORUM LIBEL The Books of Feuds published during the reign of Henry about the year 1152.
FEUDUM MILITARE. A knight's fee, held by knight service and esteemed the most honorable.

FEUDUM MATERNUM. A maternal fief; a fief the vassal owed fealty to his lord against all persons.

FEUDUM NOBILE. A fee for which the tenant held with the qualities and incidents of an ancient kind. 2 Reeves, Hist. Eng. Law, 55.

FEUDUM ANTIQUUM. An ancient feud or fief; a fief descended to the vassal from his ancestors. 2 Bl. Comm. 212, 221. A fief which ancestors had possessed for more than four generations. Spelman; Priest v. Cummings, 20 Wend. N.Y. 349.

FEUDUM APERTUM. An open feud or fief; a fief which that branch of learning had been there cultivated.

FEUDUM NOVUM UT ANTIQUUM. A new fee held with the qualities and incidents of an ancient one. 2 Bl. Comm. 212.

FEUDUM PATERNUM. A fee which the paternal ancestors had held for four generations. Calvin.; Spelman. One descendible to heirs on the paternal side only. 2 Bl. Comm. 223. One which might be held by males only. Du Cange.

FEUDUM PROPRIUM. A proper, genuine, and original feud or fief; being of a purely military character, and held by military service. 2 Bl. Comm. 57, 58.

FEUDUM TALLIATUM. A restricted fee. One limited to descend to certain classes of heirs. 2 Bl. Comm. 112, note; 1 Washb. Real Prop. 66; Spelman.

FEUM. An older form of feu. Mailt. Domesday Book and Beyond 152.

FF. A Latin abbreviation for "Fragmenta," designating the Digest or Pandects in the Corpus Juris Civilis of Justinian; so called because that work is made up of fragments or extracts from the writings of numerous jurists. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 74.

FI. FA. An abbreviation for fieri facias, (which see.)

FIANCER. L. Fr. To pledge one's faith. Kelham.

FIANZA. Sp. In Spanish law, trust, confidence, and correlatively a legal duty or obligation arising therefrom.

The term is sufficiently broad in meaning to include both a general obligation and a restricted liability under a single instrument. Martinez v. Runkle, 57 N.J.L. 111, 30 A. 593. But in a special sense, it designates a surety or guarantor, or the contract or engagement of suretyship; the contract by which one person engages to pay the debt or fulfill the obligations of another if the latter should fail to do so.

FIAR. In Scotch law, he that has the fee or feu. The proprietor is termed "flar," in contradistinction to the life renter. 1 Karnes, Eq. Pref. One whose property is charged with a life-rent. Where a right is taken to a husband and wife in conjunct fee and life-rent, the husband, as the persona dignior, is the only flan Ersk. Prin. 421.
FIAT PROUT FLERI CONSUEVIT, (NIL TEMERE FIAT JUSTITIA, RUAT C(ELUM. Let right be various counties of Scotland, fixed yearly by the practice, being a power, signed by the lord chan-istor directing some act to be done; an authority issuing from some competent source for the doing of some legal act. See 1 Tidd Pr. 100.

One of the proceedings in the English bankrupt-branch, addressed to the court of bankruptcy, au-posing a fact by previous conduct inconsistent with the purpose of getting at a certain conclusion, though arbitrary, where the subject is intrinsically liable to doubt from the remoteness, discrepancy, or actual defect of proofs.

Fictions are also to be distinguished from estoppels; an estoppel being the rule by which a person is precluded from asserting a fact by previous conduct inconsistent erthwithstanding his own part or the part of those under whom he claims, or by an adjudication upon his rights which he cannot be allowed to question.

Best distinguishes legal fictions from presumptions juris et de jure, and divides them into three kinds,—affirmative or positive fictions, negative fictions, and fictions by rela-

FICTION OF LAW. Something known to be false is assumed to be true. Ryan v. Motor Credit Co., 130 N.J.Eq. 531, 23 A.2d 607, 621.

FICTIONAL. Founded on a fiction; having the character of a fiction; pretended; counterfeit.
People v. Carmona, 79 Cal.App. 159, 251 P. 315, 151; State v. Tinnin, 64 Utah 587, 232 P. 543, 545, 43 A.L.R. 46. Feigned, imaginary, not real, false, not genuine, nonexistent. Bill alleging that amount of mortgage sought to be canceled was "fictional" held to allege that mortgage was without consideration. Kinney v. Kinney, 230 Ala. 558, 161 So. 798, 800. Arbitrarily invented and set up, to accomplish an ulterior object. West Virginia Mortgage & Discount Corporation v. Newcomer,

FICTIONAL ACTION. An action brought for the sole purpose, of obtaining the opinion of the court on a point of law, not for the settlement of any actual controversy between the parties.

FICTIONAL NAME. A counterfeit, feigned, or pretended name taken by a person, differing in some essential particular from his true name, (consisting of Christian name and patronymic,) FICTITIOUS

with the implication that it is meant to deceive or mislead. Pollard v. Fidelity F. Ins. Co., 1 S.D. 570, 47 N.W. 1060; Carlock v. Cagnacci, 88 Cal. 600, 26 P. 597; Mangan v. Schuykill County, 273 Pa. 310, 116 A. 920, 921.

FICTITIOUS PAYEE. Negotiable instrument is drawn to fictitious payee whenever payee named in it has no right to it, and its maker does not intend that such payee shall take anything by it; whether name of payee used by maker is that of person living or dead or one who never existed is immaterial. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. of California v. Wells Fargo Bank & Union Trust Co., 1 Cal.App.2d 694, 37 P.2d 483.

FICTITIOUS PERSON. A person, who, though named as payee in a check has no right to it or its proceeds because the drawer of it so intended. Johnston v. Exchange Nat. Bank of Tampa, 152 Fla. 228, 9 So.2d 810, 811, 812.

FICTITIOUS PLAINTIFF. A person appearing in the writ or record as the plaintiff in a suit, but who in reality does not exist, or who is ignorant of the suit and of the use of his name in it. It is a contempt of court to sue in the name of a fictitious party. See 4 Bl.Comm. 134.

FICTITIOUS PROMISE. See Promise.

FIDE-COMMISSARY. A term derived from the Latin "fidei-commissarius," and occasionally used by writers on equity jurisprudence as a substitute for the law French term "cestui, que trust," as being more elegant and euphonious. See Brown v. Brown, 83 Hun, 160, 31 N.Y.S. 650.

FIDEI-COMMISSARIUS. In the civil law, this term corresponds nearly to our "cestui que trust?" It designates a person who has the real or beneficial interest in an estate or fund, the title or administration of which is temporarily confided to another. See Story, Eq.Jur. § 966; 1 Greenl.Cruise, Dig. 295.

According to Du Cange, the term was sometimes used to denote the executor of a will.

FIDEI-COMMISSUM. In the civil law, a species of trust; being a gift of property (usually by will) to a person, accompanied by a request or direction of the donor that the recipient will transfer the property to another, the latter being a person not capable of taking directly under the will or gift. In re Courtin, 144 La. 971, 81 So. 457, 459; Succession of Reilly, 136 La. 347, 67 So. 27, 33; Gortario v. Cantu, 7 Tex. 44.

FIDE-JUBERE. In the civil law, to order a thing upon one's faith; to pledge one's self; to become surety for another. Fide-jubes? Fide-jubeo: Do you pledge yourself? I do pledge myself. Inst. 3, 16, L One of the forms of stipulation.
FIDES SERVANDA EST. Faith must be observed. An agent must not violate the confidence reposed in him. Story, Ag. § 192; Coolidge v. Brigham, 1 Metc., Mass., 551.

FIDES SERVANDA EST; SIMPLICITAS JURIS GENTIUM PRIEVALEAT. Faith must be kept; the simplicity of the law of nations must prevail. A rule applied to bills of exchange as a sort of sacred instruments. 3 Burrows, 1672; Story, Bills, § 15.

FIDUCIAL. An adjective having the same meaning as "fiduciary;" as, in the phrase "public or fiducial office." Ky.St. § 3752; Moss v. Rowlett, 112 Ky. 121, 144 P. 405, 409; McGinn v. Shaeffer, 7 Watts, Pa., 415.

FIDUCIARIUS HIERES. See Fiduciary Heir.

FIDUCIARIUS TUTOR. In Roman law, the elder brother of an emancipated pupillus, whose father had died leaving him still under fourteen years of age.

FIDUCIARY. The term is derived from the Roman law, and means (as a noun) a person holding the character of a trustee, or a character analogous to that of a trustee, in respect to the trust and confidence involved in it and the scrupulous good faith and candor which it requires. Svaneo v. Jurgens, 144 Ill. 507, 33 N.E. 955; Stoll v. King, 8 How.Prac.,N.Y., 299. A person having duty, created by his undertaking, to act primarily for another's benefit in matters connected with such undertaking. Haluka v. Baker, 66 Ohio App. 308, 34 N.E.2d 68, 70. As an adjective it means of the nature of a trust; having the characteristics of a trust; analogous to a trust; relating to or founded upon a trust or confidence.

FIDUCIARY CAPACITY. One is said to act in a "fiduciary capacity" or to receive money or contract a debt in a "fiduciary capacity," when the business which he transacts, or the money or property which he handles, is not his own or for his own benefit, but for the benefit of another person, as to whom he stands in a relation implying and necessitating great confidence and trust on the one part and a high degree of good faith on the other part. The term is not restricted to technical or express trusts, but includes also such of fices or relations as those of an attorney at law, a guardian, executor, or broker, a director of a corporation, and a public officer. Templeton v. Boekler, 73 Or. 494, 144 P. 405, 409; Madison Tp. v. Dunkle, 114 Ind. 262, 16 N.E. 592. As used in the Bankruptcy Act, § 17, subd. 4, 11 U.S.C.A. § 35, however, the term imports a technical trust, actually and expressly constituted, and not such merely as the law implies, and has no application to debts or obligations merely because they were created under circumstances in which trust or confidence in the popular sense of those terms was reposed in debtor. Culp v. Robey, Tex.Civ.App., 294 S.W. 647, 651; American Agricultural Chemical Co. v. Berry, 110 Me. 528, 87 A. 218, 45 L.R.A., N.S., 1106, Ann.Cas.1915A, 1293.

FIDUCIARY DEBT. A debt founded on or arising from some confidence or trust as distinguished from a "debt" founded simply on contract. Montgomery v. Phillips Petroleum Co., Tex.Civ.App., 49 S.W.2d 967, 973.

FIDUCIARY DEBTORS. Only public officers and trustees, not agents, factors, commission men, and the like, within the meaning of Bankruptcy Act, § 14, subd. 4, 11 U.S.C.A. § 32. Keefauver v. He FIDUCIARY HEIR. The Roman laws called a fiduciary heir the person who was instituted heir, and who was charged to deliver the succession to a person designated by the testament. Merlin, Répert. But Pothier, Pand. vol. 22, says that fiduciarius heres properly signifies the person to whom a testator has sold his inheritance under the condition that he should sell it to another.

FIDUCIARY OR CONFIDENTIAL RELATION. A very broad term embracing both technical fiduciary relations and those informal relations which exist wherever one man trusts in or relies upon another. State v. Gautier, 108 Fla. 390, 147 So. 240, 242. One founded on trust or confidence reposed by one person in the integrity and fidelity of another. Kerrigan v. O'Meara, 71 Mont. 1, 227 P. 819, 821.

The origin of the confidence and the source of the influence are immaterial. Quinn v. Phipps, 93 Fla. 805, 113 So. 419, 420, 54 A.L.R. 1173. The relations and duties involved need not be legal but may be moral, social, domestic, or merely personal. Trustees of Jesse Parker Williams Hospital v. Nisbet, 191 Ga. 821, 14 S.E.2d 64, 76. See also, Fiduciary Relation.

FIDUCIARY RELATION. An expression including both technical fiduciary relations and those informal relations which exist whenever one man trusts and relies upon another. Peckham v. Johnson, Tex.Civ.App., 98 S.W.2d 408, 416. It exists where there is special confidence reposed in one-who in equity and good conscience is bound toact in good faith and with due regard to interests of one reposing the confidence. Neagle v. McMullen, 334 Ill. 168, 165 N.E. 605, 608. A relation subsisting between two persons in regard to a business, contract, or piece of property, or in regard to the general business or estate of one of them, of such a character that each must repose trust and confidence in the other and must exercise a corresponding degree of fairness and good faith.

Out of such a relation, the law raises the rule that neither party may exert influence or pressure upon the other, take selfish advantage of his trust, or deal with the subject-matter of the trust in such a way as to benefit himself or prejudice the other except in the exercise of the utmost good faith and with the full knowledge and consent of that other, business shrewdness, hard bargaining, and astuteness to take advantage of the forgetfulness or negligence of another being totally prohibited as between parties standing in such a relation to each other. Examples of fiduciary relations are those existing between attorney and client, guardian and ward, principal and agent, executor and heir, trustee and cestui que trust, landlord and tenant, etc. Robins v. Hope, 57 Cal. 497; Thomas v. Whitney, 186 Ill. 225, 57 N.E. 808; Central Nat. Bank v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co., 104 U.S. 68, 26 L.Ed. 693. The relation need not be legal, but may be moral, social, domestic, or mercantile personal. Miranovitz v. Gee, 163 Wis. 246, 157 N.W. 790, 792; Higgins v. Chicago Title & Trust Co., 312 Ill. 11, 143 N.E. 482, 484. It is one in which, if a wrong arise, the same remedy exists against the wrongdoer on behalf of the principal as would exist against a trustee on behalf of a cestui que trust. Smith v. Smith, 222 Mass. 102, 109 N.E. 830, 832. Sometimes confidential and fiduciary relations are regarded as synonymous; In re Cover's Estate, 188 Cal. 133, 204 P. 583, 588; but on the other hand, a technical distinction may be taken between a "fiducial relation" which is more correctly applicable to legal relationships between parties, such as guardian and ward, and other similar relationships, and a "confidential relation" which includes the legal relationships, and also every other relationship wherein confidence is rightfully reposed and is exercised. Roberts v. Parsons, 195 Ky. 274, 242 S.W. 594, 596.

FIELD. A fee, feod, or feud.

FIELD-ALE, or FILKDALE. An ancient custom in England, by which officers of the forest and bailiffs of hundreds had the right to compel the hundred to furnish them with ale. Tomlin&

FIELD BOOK. A description of the courses and distances of the lines, and of the corners of the lots of the town as they were surveyed, and as they appear by number and division on the town plan. Neill v. Ward, 103 Vt. 117, 153 A. 219, 225.

FIELD HOSPITAL. See Hospital.

FIELD REEVE. An officer elected, in England, by the owners of a regulated pasture to keep in order the fences, ditches, etc., on the land, to regulate the times during which animals are to be admitted to the pasture, and generally to maintain and manage the pasture subject to the instructions of the owners. (General Inclosure Act, 1845, § 118.) Sweet.

FIELD VISION. The general vision used in catching in sight, following and locating objects;—distinguished from "binocular vision" (q. v.). Turpin v. St. Regis Paper Co., 199 App.Div. 64, 192 N.Y.S. 85, 87.

FIELD WORK. Work in the field, specifically the task of gathering scientific data from the field. Includes the sphere of practical operation, as of an organization or enterprise; also, the place or territory where direct contacts, as with a clientele may be made or first-hand knowledge may be gained; sphere of action or place of contest, either literally or figuratively; hence, any scene of operations or opportunity for activity. State ex rel. McPherson v. Snell, 168 Or. 153, 121 P.2d 930, 937.

FIELDAD, In Spanish law, sequestration. This is allowed in six cases by the Spanish law where the title to property is in dispute. Las Partidas, pt. 3, tit. 3, 1. 1. Sometimes confidential and fiduciary relations are regarded as synonymous; In re Cover's Estate, 188 Cal. 133, 204 P. 583, 588; but on the other hand, a technical distinction may be taken between a "fiducial relation" which is more correctly applicable to legal relationships between parties, such as guardian and ward, and other similar relationships, and a "confidential relation" which includes the legal relationships, and also every other relationship wherein confidence is rightfully reposed and is exercised. Roberts v. Parsons, 195 Ky. 274, 242 S.W. 594, 596.

FIERI. Lat. To be made; to be done. See In Fieri.

FIERI FACIAS. Means that you cause to be made. In practice, a writ of execution commanding the sheriff to levy and make the amount of a judgment from the goods and chattels of the judgment debtor.

FIERI FACIAS DE BONIS ECCLESIASTIC'S. When a sheriff to a common fi, fa. returns nulla bona, and that the defendant is a beneficed clerk, not having any lay fee, a plaintiff may issue a fi. fa. de bonis ecclesiasticis, addressed to the bishop of the diocese or to the archbishop, (during the vacancy of the bishop's see,) commanding him to make of the ecclesiastical goods and chattels belonging to the defendant within his diocese the sum therein mentioned. 2 Chit.Archb.Pr. (12th Ed.) 1062.

FIERI FACIAS DE BONIS TESTATORIS. The writ issued on an ordinary judgment against an executor when sued for a debt due by his testator. If the sheriff returns to this writ nulla bona, and a devastavit, (q. v.,) the plaintiff may sue out a fieri facias de bonis propriis, under which the goods of the executor himself are seized. Sweet.

FIERI FECI. Means I have caused to be made. In practice, the return made by a sheriff or other officer to a writ of fieri facits, where he has collected the whole, or a part, of the sum directed to be levied. 2 Tidd, Pr. 1018. The return, as actually made, is expressed by the word "Satisfied" indorsed on the writ.

FIERI NON DEBET, (DEBIIT,) SED FACTUM every city, township, and borough. parliament, consisting of one-fifteenth of all the movable property of the subject or personalty in the wealth of the kingdom increased, the name ceased to be levied. 2 Tidd, Pr. 1018. The return, as actually made, is expressed by the word "Satisfied" indorsed on the writ.

FIFTEENTHS. In English law, this was originally a tax or tribute, levied at intervals by act of parliament, consisting of one-fifteenth of all the movable property of the subject or personality in every city, township, and borough.

Under Edward III., the taxable property was assessed, and the value of its fifteenth part (then about £29,000) was recorded in the exchequer, whence the tax, levied on that valuation, continued to be called a "fifteenth," although as the wealth of the kingdom increased, the name ceased to be an accurate designation of the proportion of the tax to the value taxed. See 1 B1.Comm. 309; Co. 2d Inst. 77; 1 Poll. & Maitl. 604; Cowell.

FIGHT. "Fight" means combat or battle, as hostile encounter or engagement between opposing forces, suggesting primarily the notion of a brawl or unpremeditated encounter, or that of a pugilistic combat. Gitlow v. Kiely, D.C.N.Y., 44 F.2d 859, 227, 232.

An encounter, with blows or other personal violence, between two persons. Carpenter v. People, 31 Colo. 284, 72 P. 1072; Coles v. New York Casualty Co., 87 App. Div. 41, 83 N.Y.S. 1063. The term does not necessarily imply that both parties, should give and take blows. It is sufficient that they voluntarily put their bodies in position with that intent; State v. Gladden, 73 N.C. 155; Tate v. State, 46 Ga. 148.

FIGHTWITE. Sax. A mulct or fine for making a quarrel to the disturbance of the peace. Called also by Cowell "forisfactura pugnæ."

A payment to a lord possessing soc or the place where a wrong was done. 2 Holdsw. Hist.E.L. 35.

FIGURES. Artificial representations of a form, as in sculpture, drawing, or painting, especially the human body represented by art of any kind. People v. Eastman, 89 Misc. 596, 152 N.Y.S. 314, 317.

Numerals. They are either Roman, made with letters of the alphabet: for example, MDCCCLXXVI; or they are Arabic, as follows: 1776.

FILACER. An officer of the superior courts at Westminster, whose duty was to file the writs on which he made process. There were fourteen filacers, and it was their duty to make out all original process. Cowell; Blount; Jacob L.Dict. It is used in 8 Mod. 284. The office was abolished in 1837.

FILARE. In old English practice, to file. Townsh.Pl. 67.

FILCHING. "Filching" means to steal money, commonly of little value, secretly or underhandedly. Peck v. Bez, W.Va., 40 S.E.2d 1, 10.

FILCHER. An officer of the superior courts at Westminster, whose duty it was to file the writs on which he made process. There were fourteen filacers, and it was their duty to make out all original process. Cowell; Blount; Jacob L.Dict. It is used in 8 Mod. 284. The office was abolished in 1837.

FILE, n. A record of the court. Milton v. United States, C.C.A.La., 105 F.2d 253, 255. A thread, string, or wire upon which writs and other exhibits in courts and offices are fastened or filed for the more safe-keeping and ready turning to the same. Spelman; Cowell; Tomlins. Papers put together and tied in bundles. A paper is said also to be filed when it is delivered to the proper officer, and by him received to be kept on file. 13 Vin.Abr. 211; 1 Lit. 113; 1 Hawk.P.C. 7, 207; Beebe v. Morrell, 76 Mich. 114, 42 N.W. 1119, 15 Am.St.Rep. 288. But, in general, "file," or "the files," is used loosely to denote the official custody of the court or the place in the offices of a court where the records and papers are kept. The "file" in a cause includes original subpoenas and all papers belonging thereto. Jackson v. Mobley, 157 Ala. 408, 47 So. 590.

The term "filed" is used to denote the paper placed with the clerk, and assigned by law to his official keeping. Ex parte Leifeste, 127 Tex.Cr.R. 445, 77 S.W.2d 675, 676.

"To file" a paper, on the part of a party, is to place it in the official custody of the clerk. "To file," on the part of the clerk, is to indorse upon the paper the date of its reception, and retain it in his office, subject to inspection by whomsoever it may concern. Holman v. Chevaillier, 14 Tex. 339.

"Filing a bill" in equity is an equivalent expression to "commencing a suit."

FILE WRAPPER ESTOPPEL. The doctrine depends upontthe fact that, when an applicant has accepted the rejection of a broad claim he may not later assert that another claim, deliberately restricted to secure its allowance, is its equivalent. Tampax, Inc. v. Personal Products Corporation, C.C.A.N.Y., 123 F.2d 722, 723.

FILED FOR RECORD. Left with recorder or lent. Tampax, Inc. v. Personal Products Corporation, C.C.A.N.Y., 123 F.2d 722, 723.

FILIAE. To fix a bastard child on some one, as its father. To declare whose child it is. 2 W.B1. 1017.

FILIATIO NON POTEST PROBARI. Co.Litt. 126. Filiation cannot be proved; that is, the husband is presumed to be the father of a child born during coverture. But see 7 & 8 Vict. c. 101.

FILIATION. The relation of parent and child, but does not import legitimacy, although often a step to that end. Rodrigues v. Rodrigues, 286 Mass. 77, 190 N.E. 20, 22. Correlative to "paternity."

The judicial assignment of an illegitimate child to a designated man as its father.

In the civil law, the descent of son or daughter, with regard to his or her father, mother, and their ancestors.

FILIATION PROCEEDING. A special statutory proceeding, criminal in form, but in the nature of a civil action to enforce a civil obligation or duty specifically for the purpose of establishing parentage and the putative father's duty to support his illegitimate child. State v. Morrow, 158 Or. 412, 75 P.2d 737, 738, 739, 744.

FILICETUM. In old English law, a ferny or bracky ground; a place where fern grows. Co. Lit. 4b; Shep.Touch. 95.

FILIOLUS (or FIIOLUS). In old records, a godson. Spelman.

FILIS. Lat. A son; a child.

As distinguished from heir filius is a term of nature, heeres a term of law. 1 Powell, Dev. 311. In the civil law the term was used to denote a child generally. Calvinus, Lex.; Vicat, Voc.Jur.

A distinction was sometimes made, in the civil law, between "fill" and "liberi," the latter word including grandchildren, (nepotes) the former not. Inst. 1, 14, 5. But, according to Paulus and Julianus, they were of equally extensive import. Dig. 50, 16, 84; Id. 50, 16, 201.

FILIUS FAMILIAS. In the civil law, the son of a family; an unemancipated son. Inst. 2, 12, pr.; Id. 4, 5, 2; Story, Confl.Laws, § 61.

FILIUS IN UTERO MATRIS EST PARS VISERUM MATRIS. 7 Coke, 8. A son in the mother's womb is part of the mother's vitals.

FILIUS MULIERATU8. In old English law, the eldest legitimate son of a woman, who previously had an illegitimate son by his father. Glanv. lib. 7, c. 1. Otherwise called "mulier." 2 Bl.Comm. 248.

FILIUS POPULI, A son of the people. In re Clark's Estate, 228 Iowa 75, 290 N.W. 13, 29. Natural child.

FILL. To make full; to complete; to satisfy or fulfill; to possess and perform the duties of; to occupy the whole capacity or extent of, so as to leave no space vacant.

Word "fill" in agreement to "take and fill" a certain number of shares, amounts to a promise to pay assessments. Bangor Bridge Co. v. McMahon, 10 Me. 478.

To fill a prescription is to furnish, prepare, and combine the requisite materials in due proportion as prescribed. Ray v. Burbank, 61 Ga. 505, 34 Am.Rep. 103.

To "fill" embroidery is to stuff out the figure, which is the ornamentation, by covering the stuffing with the silk, cotton, or other threads used by the embroiderer. G. Reis & Bro. v. Reform Initial Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 266 F. 219.

The term "fill," used in relation to shipments of live stock, means feeding and watering stock just prior to sale so as to increase their weight and thus enhance their value. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. West Bros., Tex.Com.App., 207 S.W. 915, 922.

FILLED MILK. Milk to which has been added fat or oil other than milk fat so that the resulting product is in imitation or semblance of milk, cream, or skim milk. State v. Hershman, 346 N.Y., 7, c. 1. Otherwise called "mulier." 2 Bl.Comm. 248.

FILLING STATION. A building or structure where motor vehicle fuel is stored for sale to the public. Hanes v. Carolina Cadillac Co., 176 N.C. 350, 97 S.E. 162.

FILLING CHAMBER. A place in which a bottle mouth is held so as to cut off communication with open air while the bottle is being filled with gaseous liquids to be sealed in it under pressure. Crown Cork & Seal Co. of Baltimore City v. Carpenter Automatic Bottling Mach. Co. of Baltimore City, D.C.Md., 229 F. 748, 750.

FILLING STATION. A building or structure where motor vehicle fuel is stored for sale to the public. Hanes v. Carolina Cadillac Co., 176 N.C. 350, 97 S.E. 162.

In Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, § 402(a) (3), 21 U.S.C.A. § 342(a) (3), word "filthy" is used in its usual and ordinary meaning, and is not to be confined to any scientific or medical definition. U. S. v. Lazere, D.C.Iowa, 56 F.Supp. 730, 732.

FILUM. Lat. In old practice, a file, i.e., a thread or wire on which papers were strung, that being the ancient method of filing.

An imaginary thread or line passing through the middle of a stream or road, as in the titles following.

FILUM FORESTIÆ. The border of the forest.

FIN. Fr. An end, or limit; a limitation, or period of limitation.

FIN DE NON RECEVOIR. In French law, an exception or plea founded on law, which, without entering into the merits of the action, shows that the plaintiff has no right to bring it, either because the time during which it ought to have been brought has elapsed, which is called "prescription," or that there has been a compromise, accord and satisfaction, or any other cause which has destroyed the right of action which once subsisted. Poth.Proc. Civile, pt. 1, c. 2, § 2, art. 2; Story, Confl.Laws, § 580.

FINAL ARCHITECT’S CERTIFICATE. One which is issued after a job is done and which finally determines the rights of the parties as to money and disputes. Johnson v. Hogg, 202 Ill. App. 253, 255; Hunt v. Owen Bldg. & Inv. Co., Mo.App., 219 S.W. 138, 140.

FINAL DETERMINATION. Final judgment is synonymous. The final settling of the rights of the parties to the action beyond all appeal. Quartermaster Corps v. Allegheny County, 141 Pa.Super. 356, 14 A.2d 575, 578. See Judgment.

FINAL DISPOSITION. Such a conclusive determination of the subject-matter embraced in a submission to arbitrators, that after the award is made nothing further remains to fix the rights and obligations of the parties, and no further controversy or litigation can arise thereon. Quartermaster Corps v. Allegheny County, 141 Pa.Super. 356, 14 A.2d 575, 578. It is such an award that the party against whom it is made can perform or pay it without any further ascertainment of rights or duties. Colcord v. Fletcher, 50 Me. 401.

pay to a third party. Christensen v. Hennepin Co. v. Love, Tex.Com.App., 34 S.W.2d 574, 577.

FINAL SUBMISSION. Exists when nothing remains to be done to render submission complete.
Thompson v. Schalk, 228 Iowa 705, 292 N.W. 851, 852.

Where the whole case, both requested instructions and evidence, is submitted to the court for its ruling and the court takes the case under advisement, there is a "final submission" of the entire case. Piatt v. Heim & Overly Realty Co., 342 Mo. 772, 117 S.W.2d 327, 329.

FINAL TRIAL. Under a statute such trial in the court having original trial jurisdiction as is the basis of entry of judgment finally disposing of action in that court; the term does not apply to procedings in the appellate court. Wynne v. Smith,

FINALIS CONCORDIA. A final or conclusive agreement.

In the process of "levying a fine," this was a final agreement entered by the litigating parties upon the record, by permission of court, settling the title to the land, and which was binding upon them like any judgment of the court.

Shields v. Shields, 115 Mont. 146, 139 P.2d 528, 530.
To discover; to determine; to ascertain and declare.

To announce a conclusion, as the result of judicial investigation, upon a disputed fact or state of facts; as a jury are said to, "find a will." To determine a controversy in favor of one of the parties; as a jury "find for the plaintiff." State v. Bulkeley, 61 Conn. 287, 23 A. 186, 14 L.R.A.
657. The term usually means to ascertain by judicial inquiry. State ex inf. of Barker v. Crandall, 269 Mo. 44, 190
S.W. 889, 893; in contradistinction to acts by a clerk of court, State v. Halaby, 148 La. 1, 86 So. 561, 563; or by administrative boards, Union Pac. R. Co. v. Board of Com'rs of Weld County, Colo., C.C.A.Colo., 217 F. 540, 541.
But the term does not always require a judicial or official finding. City of Chicago v. Atwood, 269 Ill. 624, 110 N.E.
127, 128.

FINDER. One who discovers and takes possesson of another's personal property, which was then lost. Kincaid v. Eaton, 98 Mass. 139, 93 Am.
Dec. 142.

banker to one who brings to him a deal out of which he makes money. Cray, McFawn & Co. v.
Hegarty, Conroy & Co., D.C.N.Y., 27 F.Supp. 93, 97, 98, 100, 101.

FINDING. The result of the deliberations of a jury or a court. Dennslow v. Moore, 2 Day (Conn.) 15,794. A decision upon a question of fact reached as the result of a judicial examination or investigation by a court, jury, referee, coroner, etc. Bent-
A recital of the facts as found. Crighton v. Jacobs, 100 Conn. 281, 123 A. 437, 438. The word commonly applies to the result reached by a judge. Maeder Steel Products Co. v. Zanello, 109 Or. 562, 220 P.
155, 158; it being sometimes, however, as a matter of interpretation, treated as a ruling of law. Gar-

FINDING OF FACT. A determination of a fact by the court, averred by one party and denied by the other, and founded on evidence in case. C.I.T.
Corp. v. Elliott, 66 Idaho 384, 159 P.2d 891, 897.
A conclusion by way of reasonable inference from the evidence. Barker v. Narragansett Racing Ass'n, 65 R.I. 489, 16 A.2d 495, 497. Also the answer of the judge to a specific interrogatory propounded to them as to the existence or non-existence of a fact in issue. Miles v. McCallan, 1 Ariz.
491, 3 P. 610; Murphy v. Bennett, 68 Cal. 528, 9
P. 738.

The term is not applicable, with special reference to review on appeal, to a mere conclusion that the evidence is insufficient to authorize relief. Monetaire Mining Co. v.
Columbus Rexall Consol. Mines Co., 53 Utah, 413, 174 P.
172, 174; nor to the opinion of the trial court, delivered in announcing judgment, Rogers v. Harris, 76 Okl. 215, 184 P. 459, 462; nor to a memorandum of the decision of the trial judge, Preston v. Preston, 102 Conn. 96, 128 A. 292, 296; nor to a transcript of the evidence, State v. Chin Lung, 106 Conn. 701, 139 A. 91, 97.

A general finding by a court is a general statement that the facts are in favor of a party or entitle him to judgment. It is a complete determination of all matters, and is a finding of every special thing necessary to be found to sustain the general finding. Miller v. Thompson, 80 Okl. 70, 194 P. 103, 105.

A special finding is a specific setting forth of the ultimate facts established by the evidence and which are determinative of the judgment which must be given. Rhodes v. United States Nat. Bank, Ill., 66 F. 514, 13 C.C.A. 612, 34 L.R.A. 742; Humphreys v. Third Nat. Bank, Ohio, 75 F. 856, 21 C.C.A. 538. It is only a determination of the ultimate facts on which the law must be determined, Societe Nouvelle d’Armement v. Barnaby, C.C.A.Wash.; 246 F. 68, 70. A special finding may also be said to be one limited to the fact issue submitted. Ex parte Woodward Iron Co., 212 Ala. 220, 102 So. 103, 106.

The term "fact" in the phrase "finding of fact" denotes the inferences drawn by the trier from ascertained facts. Porter v. Industrial Commission of Wisconsin, 173 Wis. 267, 131 N.W. 317, 318.

FINE, v. To impose a pecuniary punishment or mulct.

To sentence a per-son convicted of an offense to pay a penalty in money. Goodman v. Durant B. & L. Ass’n, 71 Miss. 310, 14 So. 146; State v. Belle, 92 Iowa 258, 60 N.W. 525.

Conveyancing

An amicable composition or agreement of a suit, either actual or fictitious, by leave of the court, by which the lands in question become, or are acknowledged to be, the right of one of the parties. 2 Bl.Comm. 349; Christy v. Burch, 25 Fla. 942, 2 So. 258; Hitz v. Jenks, 123 U.S. 297, 8 S.Ct. 143, 31 L.Ed. 156. Fines were abolished in England by statute 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 74, substituting a disentailing deed. (q. v.).

A fine is so called because it puts an end not only to the suit thus commenced, but also to all other suits and controversies concerning the same matter. The party who parted with the land, by acknowledging the right of the other, was said to levy the fine, and was called the "cognizor" or "conusor," while the party who recovered or received the estate was termed the "cognizee" or "conusor," and the fine was said to be levied to him.

Criminal Law

A pecuniary punishment imposed by lawful tribunal upon person convicted of crime or misdemeanor. In re Chester School District’s Audit, 301 Pa. 203, 151 A. 801, 808. A pecuniary penalty. Hanks v. Shreveport Yellow Cabs, La.App., 187 So. 817, 819. It may include a forfeiture or penalty recoverable in a civil action. Vitelli v. Mayor and • Council of Wilmington, 9 W.W.Harr. 336, 199 A. 283, 287.

The word "penalty" is broader than word "fine", which is always a penalty; whereas, a penalty may be a fine or it may designate some other form of punishment. McHugh v. Placid Oil Co., 206 La. 511, 19 So.2d 221.

Executed Fine

See Executed.

Joint Fine

In old English law. "If a whole vill is to be fined, a joint fine may be laid, and it will be good for the necessity of it; but, in other cases, fines for offenses are to be severally imposed on each particular offender, and not jointly upon all of them." Jacob.

Law of Tenure

A money payment made by a feudal tenant to his lord.

The most usual fine is that payable on the admittance of a new tenant, but there are also due in some manors fines upon alienation, on a license to demise the lands, or on the death of the lord, or other events. Elton, Copyh. 159; De Peyster v. Michael, 6 N.Y. 495, 57 Am.Dec. 470.

FINE AND RECOVERY ACT. The English statutes 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 74, for abolishing fines and recoveries. 1 Steph.Comm. 514, et seq.

FINE ANULLANDO LEVATO DE TENEMENTO QUOD FUIT DE ANTIQUO DOMINICO. An abolished writ for disannulling a fine levied of lands in ancient demesne to the prejudice of the lord. Reg.Orig. 15.

FINE CAPIENDO PRO TERRIS. An abolished writ which lay for the release of one imprisoned for the necessity of it; but, in other cases, fines for offenses are to be severally imposed on each particular offender, and not jointly upon all of them. Jacob.

FINE NON CAPIENDO PRO PULCHRE PLACITANDO. An obsolete writ that lay for the release of one imprisoned for a redisseisin, on payment of a reasonable fine. Reg.Orig. 222.

FINE ROLLS. See Oblate Rolls, FINE

FINE SUR COGNIZANCE DE DROIT, CUM CEO QUE IL AD DE SON DONE. A fine upon acknowledgment of the right of the cognizee as that which he hath of the gift of the cognizor. By this the deforciant acknowledged in court a former feoffment or gift in possession to have been made by him to the plaintiff. 2 Bl.Comm. 352.

FINE SUR COGNIZANCE DE DROIT TANTUM. A fine upon acknowledgment of the right merely, and not with the circumstance of a preceding gift from the cognizor.

This was commonly used to pass a reversionary interest which was in the cognizor, of which there could be no feoffment supposed. 2 Bl.Comm. 353; 1 Step.Comm. 519; Jacob, Law Diet.; Corn., Dig.

FINE SUR CONCESSIT. A fine upon concessit (he hath granted). A species of fine, where the cognizor, in order to make an end of disputes, though he acknowledged no precedent right, yet granted to the cognizee an estate de novo, usually for life or years, by way of supposed composition. 2 Bl.Comm. 353; 1 Step.Comm. 519.

FINE SUR DONE GRANT ET RENDER. A double fine, comprehending the fine sur cognizance de droit come ceo and the fine sur concessit.

It might be used to convey particular limitations of estates, whereas the fine sur cognizance de droit come ceo, etc., conveyed nothing but an absolute estate, either of inheritance, or at least freehold. In this last species of fines, the cognizee, after the right was acknowledged to be in him, granted back again or rendered to the cognizor, or perhaps to a stranger, some other estate in the premises. 2 Bl.Comm. 353; Viner, Abr. Fine; Comyns, Dig. Fine.

FINE-FORCE. An absolute necessity or inevitable constraint. Plowd. 94; 6 Coke, 11; Cowell; Old N.B. 78.

FINEM FACERE. To make or pay a fine. Bract. 106; Skene.

FINES LE ROY. In old English law, the king’s fines. Fines formerly payable to the king for any contempt or offense, as where one committed any trespass, or falsely denied his own deed, or did anything in contempt of law. Termes de la Ley.

FINGER PRINTS. See Anthropometry.

FINIRE. In old English law, to fine, or pay a fine. Cowell. To end or finish a matter.

FINIS. Lat. An end; a fine; a boundary or terminus; a limit. Also in L. Lat., a fine (q. v.).

FINIS REI ATTENDENDUS EST. 3 Inst. 51. The end of a thing is to be attended to.

FINIS UNIUS DIEI EST PRINCIPUIM ALTER!• US. 2 Bulst. 305. The end of one day is the beginning of another.

FINITO. An ending; death, as the end of life. Blount; Cowell.

FINIUM REGUNDORUM ACTIO. In the civil law, action for regulating boundaries. The name, of an action which lay between those who had lands bordering on each other, to settle disputed boundaries. Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 499.

FINORS. Those that purify gold and silver, and part them by fire and water from coarser metals; and therefore, in the statute of 4 Hen. VII. c. 2, they are also called "porters." Termes de la Ley.

FIRDFARE. Sax. In old English law, a summoning forth to a military expedition, (indictio ad profectioem militarem.) Spelman.

FIRDIRINGA. Sax. A preparation to go into the army. Leg. Hen. I.

FIRDSOCNE. Sax. In old English law, exemption from military service. Spelman.

FIRDWITE. In old English law, a fine for refusing military service (mulcta detrectantis militiam.) Spelman. A mulct or penalty imposed on military tenants for their default in not appearing in arms or coming to an expedition. Cowell.

A fine imposed for murder committed in the army; an acquittance of such fine. Fleta, lib. 1, c. 47.

FIRE. The effect of combustion. The juridical meaning of the word does not differ from the vernacular. 1 Pars.Mar.Law, 231, et seq.

The word "fire," as used in insurance policies, does not have the technical meaning developed from analysis of its nature, but more nearly the popular meaning, being an effect rather than an elementary principle, and is the effect of combustion, being equivalent to ignition or burning, but heat is not fire, though fire may proximately cause loss from heat. Lavitt v. Hartford County Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 105 Conn. 729, 136 A. 572.

The ordinary meaning of the word as used in an insurance policy includes the idea of visible heat or light. Security Ins. Co. of New Haven, Conn., v. Choctaw Cotton Oil Co., 149 Okl. 140, 299 P. 882, 884. Damage to wool by spontaneous combustion with smoke and great heat, but without any visible flame or glow, is held not to be fire. The "fire is always caused by combustion, but combustion does not always cause fire." Western Woolen Mill Co. v. Assurance Co., Kan., 139 F. 637, 72 C.C.A. 1.

Under a fire policy it must be a "hostile fire," that is one which becomes uncontrollable or breaks out from where it was intended to be and becomes a hostile element. Mode, Limited, v. Fireman’s Fund Ins. Co., 62 Idaho 270, 110 P.2d 840, 842, 133 A.L.R. 791.

FIRE AND SWORD, LETTERS OF. In old Scotch law, letters issued from the privy council in Scotland, addressed to the sheriff of the county, authorizing him to call for the assistance of the county to dispossess a tenant retaining possession, contrary to the order of a judge or the sentence of a court. Wharton; Bell, Dict.

FIREBARE. A beacon or high tower by the seaside, wherein are continual lights, either to direct sailors in the night, or to give warning of the approach of an enemy. Cowell.

FIREBOTE. Allowance of wood or estovers to maintain competent firing for the tenant. A sufficient allowance of wood to burn in a house. 1 Washb. Real Prop. 99.

FIREBUG. A popular phrase referring to persons guilty of the crime of arson; commonly understood to mean an incendiary or pyromaniac. Blechner v. Kraser, Co.Ct., 157 N.Y.S. 256.

FIRE DAMP. "Fire damp" consists of light carburated hydrogen, and is so called from its tendency to explode when mixed with atmospheric air and brought into contact with flame. Wells' Adm'r v. Sutherland Coal & Coke Co., 116 Va. 1003, 83 S.E. 384, 385.

FIRE DISTRICT. One of the districts into which a city may be (and commonly is) divided for the purpose of more efficient service by the fire department in the extinction of fires. Des Moines v. Gilchrist, 67 Iowa 210, 25 N.W. 136. Under a statute, a territorial subdivision of the state, established to provide protection against fire within its limits, maintain street lights, etc., and, although composed of one or more towns, it is in substance a quasi municipal corporation of definitely restricted powers, and as such it may raise money by taxation for its legitimate uses. President, etc., of Williams College v. Inhabitants of Town of Williamstown, 219 Mass. 219, 596; or one which is of the kind commonly regarded as fire-proof; Knoxville Fire Ins. Co. v. Hird, 4 Tex.Civ.App. 82, 23 S.W. 393.

FIRE FIGHTING MACHINE. An instrument of public utility designed and used exclusively for putting out fires; the average or normal fire-fighting machine is in all its parts essentially designed for that purpose. American-La France Fire Engine Co. v. Riordan, C.C.A.N.Y., 6 F.2d 964, 966.

FIRE INSURANCE. See Insurance.

FIRE ORDEAL. See Ordeal.

FIRE-PROOF. Incombustible; not in danger from the action of fire.

To say of a building that it is fire-proof excludes the idea that it is of wood, and necessarily implies that it is of some substance fitted for the erection of fire-proof buildings. To say of a certain portion of a building that it is fire-proof warrants conclusion that it is of a different material. Hickey v. Morrell, 102 N.Y. 459, 7 N.E. 321, 55 Am. Rep. 824. A "fire-proof safe" within an insurance policy is one which, in the judgment of prudent men in locality of property insured, is sufficient. National Liberty Ins. Co. of America v. Sparler, 172 Ark. 715, 290 S.W. 594, 596; or one which is of the kind commonly regarded as fire-proof; Knoxville Fire Ins. Co. v. Hird, 4 Tex.Civ.App. 82, 23 S.W. 393.

FIRE RAISING. In Scotch law, the wilfully setting on fire buildings, growing or stored cereals, growing wood, or coalheughs. Ersk.Pr. 577, See Arson.

FIRE WALL. This term, as used in a municipal building code, has been held to refer to a wall that is noncombustible, and to require that such quality adhere to the openings in the wall as well as the solid wall itself. Robeson v. Turner, 199 Ky. 642, 251 S.W. 857, 860.

FIRE-WOOD. Wood suitable for fuel, not including standing or felled timber which is suitable and valuable for other purposes. Hogan v. Hogan, 102 Mich. 641, 61 N.W. 73.

FIREWORKS. Contrivances of inflammable and explosive materials combined of various proportions for purpose of producing in combustion beautiful or amusing scenic effects, or to be used as night signal, on land or sea or for various purposes in war. Henderson v. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co., 337 Mo. 1, 84 S.W.2d 922, 925.

FIRKIN. A measure of capacity, equal to nine gallons. The word is also used to designate a weight, used for butter and cheese, of fifty-six pounds avoirdupois.

FIRLOT. A Scotch measure of capacity, containing two gallons and a pint. Spelman.

FIRM. The word "firm" is conventional term, applicable only to persons who are members of firm on particular occasion when name is used, and means name, title, or style under which a company transacts business, a partnership of two or more persons, or a commercial house, and is synonymous with "company", "house", "partnership", and "concern". Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. v. Webb, 207 Ark. 820, 182 S.W.2d 941, 943; 1 Chitty, Bailm. 49.

FIRM NAME. The name or title of a firm in business.

FIRMA. In old English law, the contract of lease or letting; also the rent (or farm) reserved upon a lease of lands, which was frequently payable in provisions, but sometimes in money, in which latter case it was called "alba firma," white rent. Spelman, Gloss.; Cunningham, Law Dict.

A messuage with the house, garden, or lands, etc., connected therewith. Co.Litt. 5 a; Shepp. Touchst. 93.

A banquet; supper; provisions for the table. Du Cange.

A tribute or custom paid towards entertaining the king for one night. Domensay; Cowell.

FIRMA BURGI. The right, in medieval days, to take the profits of a borough, paying for them a fixed sum to the crown or other lord of the borough. 2 Holdsw.Hist.E.L. 276.

FIRMA FEODI. In old English law, a farm or lease of a fee; a fee-farm.

FIRMAN. A Turkish word denoting a decree or grant of privileges, or passport to a traveler. A passport granted by the Great Mogul to captains of foreign vessels to trade within the territories over which he has jurisdiction; a permit.

FIRMARATIO. The right of a tenant to his lands and tenements. Cowell.

FIRMARIUM. In old records, a place in monasteries, and elsewhere, where the poor were received and supplied with food. Spelman. Hence the word "infirmary."

FIRMARIUS. L. Lat. A fermor. A lessee of a farm or grant of privileges, or passport to a traveler.

FIRMurat. The right, in medieval days, to take the profits of a borough, paying for them a fixed sum to the crown or other lord of the borough. 2 Holdsw.Hist.E.L. 276.

FIRMATIO. The doe season. Also a supplying with food. Cowell.

FIRME. In old records, a farm.

FIRMIOR ET POTENTIOR EST OPERATIO LEGIS QUAM DISPOSITIO HOMINIS. The operation of the law is firmer and more powerful [or efficacious] than the disposition [or will] of man. Co.Litt. 102a.

FIRMITAS. In old English law, an assurance of some privilege, by deed or charter.

FIRMLY. A statement that an affiant "firmly believes" the contents of the affidavit imports a strong or high degree of belief, and is equivalent to saying that he "verily" believes it. Bradley v. Eccles, 1 Browne, Pa., 258; Thompson v. White, 4 Serg. & R., Pa., 137. The operative words in a bond or recognizance, that the obligor is held and "firmly bound," are equivalent to an acknowledgment of indebtedness and promise to pay. Shattuck v. People, 5 Ill. 477.

FIRMURA. In old English law, liberty to scour and repair a mill-dam, and carry away the soil, etc. Blount.

FIRST. Preceding all others; foremost; used as an ordinal of one, as earliest in time or succession or foremost in position; in front of or in advance of all others. Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Co. v. U. S., C.C.A.Del., 130 F.2d 913, 915; Initial; leading; chief; entitled to priority or preference above others. Redman v. Railroad Co., 33 N.J.Eq. 165; Thompson v. Grand Gulf R. & B. Co., 3 How. Miss. 247, 34 Am.Dec. 81; Hapgood v. Brown, 102 Mass. 452.

The word commonly, but not necessarily, connotes precedence. Hill v. Prior, 79 N.H. 188, 106 A. 641; Beckley v. Ailing, 91 Conn. 362, 99 A. 1034, 1035. Thus, under a contract that, if the purchaser should "first" make payment, the vendor would convey, payment was to precede the execution of the conveyance. Walker v. Hewitt, 109 Or. 366, 220 P. 147, 151, 35 A.L.R. 100. But in a will the word "first" may not import precedence of one bequest over another. Everett v. Carr, 59 Me. 330; Swasey v. American Bible Society, 57 Me. 523.

As to first "Cousin," "Distress," and "Mortgage," see those titles.

FIRST BLUSH. By the phrase "first blush," within the rule that damages, to justify reversal, must be so great as to strike the mind at first blush as having been superinduced by passion or prejudice on the part of the jury, is meant that immediately the judicial mind is shocked and surprised at the great disproportion of the size of the verdict to what the facts of the case would authorize. Cole & Crane v. May, 185 Ky. 135, 214 S.W. 885, 887.

FIRST-CLASS. Of the most superior or excellent grade or kind; belonging to the head or chief or numerically precedent of several classes into which the general subject is divided. See Pacific Feed Co. v. Kennel, 63 Cal.App. 108, 108 P. 274, 275.

FIRST-CLASS MAIL-MATTED. In the postal laws, all mailable matter containing writing and all else that is sealed against inspection.

FIRST-CLASS. In English law. Under the prisons act (28 & 29 Vict. c. 126, § 67) prisoners in the county, city, and borough prisons convicted of misdemeanor, and not sentenced to hard labor, are divided into two classes, one of which is called the "first division;" and it is in the discretion of the court to order that such a prisoner be treated as a misdemeanant of the first division, usually called "first-class misdemeanant," and as such not to be deemed a criminal prisoner, i.e., a prisoner convicted of a crime.

FIRST-CLASS TITLE. A marketable title, shown by a clean record, or at least not depending on pre-sumptions that must be overcome or facts that are uncertain. Vought v. Williams, 120 N.Y. 253, 24 N.E. 195, 8 L.R.A. 591, 17 Am.St.Rep. 634.

FIRST DEGREE BURN. One which produces an inflammation of the outer layer of the skin, like a sunburn. Smith v. Beard, 56 Wyo. 375, 110 P. 2d 260, 261, 262.

FIRST DEVISEE. The person to whom the estate is first given by the will, term "next devisee" referring to the person to whom the remainder is given. Young v. Robinson, 5 N.J.L. 689; Wilcox v. Heywood, 12 R.I. 198.

FIRST DOMESTIC PROCESSING. Refining or saponification of coconut oil is a "processing" or use thereof, and if the refining or saponification is the first processing or use of the oil in the United States, and occurs in the course of the manufacture or production of any article intended for sale, it is the "first domestic processing" within the statute taxing the first domestic processing. Revenue Act of 1934, § 602/2(a), 26 U.S.C.A. § 2470(a). Cincinnati Soap Co. v. U. S., D.C.Ohio, 22 F.Supp. 141.

FIRST FRUITS. In English ecclesiastical law, the first year's whole profits of every benefice or spiritual living, anciently paid by the incumbent to the pope, but afterwards transferred to the fund called "Queen Anne's Bounty," for increasing the revenue from poor livings.

In feudal law, one year's profits of land which belonged to the king on the death of a tenant in capite; otherwise called "primer seisin." One of the incidents to the old feudal tenures. 2 Bl. Comm. 66, 67.

FIRST HEIR. The person who will be first entitled to succeed to the title to an estate after the termination of a life estate or estate for years. Winter v. Perratt, 5 Barn. & C. 48.

FIRST IMPRESSION. First examination. First presentation to a court for examination or decision. A case is said to be "of the first impression" when it presents an entirely novel question of law for the decision of the court, and cannot be governed by any existing precedent.

FIRST IN, FIRST OUT RULE. It is not a rule of law nor of logic, but a rule of thumb. It is a presumption of fact and really a regulation of the burden of proof. What is first sold is presumed to be what was first bought. Ninth Bank & Trust Co. v. U. S., D.C.Pa., 15 F.Supp. 951, 952.

FIRST INVENTOR. Within the meaning of that phrase as used in the fourth paragraph of Rev.St. § 4920 (35 U.S.C.A. § 69), providing that it shall be a defense to a suit for infringement that the patentee was not the original or first inventor, a person who perfects his invention, the only evidence of such perfected invention ordinarily derivable from any patent being a union of disclosure and claim. Davis-Bournonville Co. v. Alexander Milburn Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 1 F.2d 227, 232.

FIRST LIEN. One which takes priority or precedence over all other charges or incumbrances upon the same piece of property, and which must be satisfied before such other charges are entitled to participate in the proceeds of its sale.

FIRST MEETING. As used in a statute providing that, for insulting words or conduct to reduce homicide to manslaughter, killing must occur immediately or at "first meeting" after slayer is informed thereof, quoted words mean first time parties are in proximity under such circumstances as would enable slayer to act in the premises. Smith v. State, 288 S.W. 458, 462, 105 Tex.Cr.R. 327.

FIRST OF EXCHANGE. Where a set of bills of exchange is drawn in duplicate or triplicate, for greater safety in their transmission, all being of the same tenor, and the intention being that the exception and payment of any one of them (the first to arrive safely) shall cancel the others of the set, they are called individually the "first of exchange," "second of exchange," etc. See Bank of Pittsburgh v. Neal, 22 How. 96, 110, 16 L.Ed. 323.

FIRST PURCHASER. In the law of descent, this term signifies the ancestor who first acquired (in any other manner than by inheritance) the estate which still remains in his family or descendants. Blair v. Adams, C.C.Tex., 59 F. 247.

FIRST RETURN. The "first return", within statute as to depletion deduction is a first return listing items of gross income and deductions arising out of the property. Commissioner of Internal Revenue v. Alta Mines, C.C.A.10, 139 F.2d 580, 582.

FIRST TRIAL. Under a statute providing when a case at law is tried by a jury, and the successful party excepts to the granting of a new trial for insufficiency of the evidence, and the evidence is certified, the appellate court, if there have been two trials below, shall first look to the evidence and proceedings on the first trial, and, if the setting aside of the first verdict was error, all proceedings subsequent thereto shall be annulled, and judgment rendered thereon, the "first trial" means the first at-which exceptions to the granting of a new trial were taken. Chesapeake & O. Ry. Co. v. Parker’s Adm’r, 116 Va. 368, 82 S.E. 183, 187.
FISC

FISC. A treasury of a kingdom or state; a money chest. Daly v. Beery, 45 N.D. 287, 178 N.W. 104, 109. An Anglicized form of the Latin "fiscus," (which see.)

FISCAL AGENT. This term does not necessarily imply a depository of the public funds, so as, by the simple use of it in a statute, without any directions in this respect, to make it the duty of the state treasurer to deposit with him any moneys in the treasury. State v. Dubuclet, 27 La.Ann. 29.

FISCAL COURT. A ministerial and executive body in some states. Stone v. Winn, 165 Ky. 9, 176 S.W. 933, 941.

FISCAL JUDGE. A public officer named in the laws of the Riparians and some other Germanic peoples, apparently the same as the "Graf," "reeve," "comes," or "count," and so called because charged with the collection of public revenues, either directly or by the imposition of fines. See Spelman, voc. "Grafo."

FISCAL OFFICERS. Those charged with the collection and distribution of public money, as, the money of a state, county, or municipal corporation.

FISCAL YEAR. The year by or for which accounts are reckoned, or the year between one annual time of settlement or balancing of accounts and another. People ex rel. Pollastrini v. Wheelan, 353 Ill. 500, 187 N.E. 491, 494. An accounting period of 12 months. U. S. v. Mabel Elevator Co. D.C.Minn., 17 F.2d 109, 110; U. S. v. Carroll Chain Co., D.C.Ohio, 8 F.2d 529, 530. A period of twelve months (not necessarily concurrent with the calendar year) with reference to which appropriations are made and expenditures authorized, and at the end of which accounts are made up and the books balanced. Shaffner v. Lipinsky, 194 N.C. 1, 138 S.E. 418, 419.

FISCUS. Roman law. The treasury of the prince or emperor, as distinguished from "cerarium," which was the treasury of the state. Spelman; Paillet, Droit Public, 21, n. This distinction was not observed in France. In course of time the Fiscus absorbed the cerarium and became the treasury of the state. Gray, Nature and Sources of Law 58. See Law 10, ff. De jure Fisci.

The treasury or property of the state, as distinguished from the private property of the sovereign.

English law. The king's treasury, as the repository of forfeited property.

The treasury of a noble, or of any private person. Spelman.

The object to be removed from oil well is known as a "fish." Raymond v. Wickersham, Cust. & Pat.App., 110 F.2d 863, 864.

FISH COMMISSIONER. A public officer of the United States, created by act of congress of February 9, 1871, R.S. § 4395, whose duties principally concerned the preservation and increase throughout the country of fish suitable for food. Office of Commissioner of Fisheries was abolished and functions were transferred to the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service, 16 U.S.C.A. § 241 notes.

FISH POT. Contrivances in the nature of screens and traps, placed at the junction of low dams or walls extending out from each shore and somewhat down stream, in such a way as to collect the water and send it through the pot, so that fish may be screened out there. Middlekauff v. Le Compte, 149 Md. 621, 132 A. 48.

Cf. Pound Net.

FISH ROYAL. These were the whale and the sturgeon, which, when thrown ashore or caught near the coast of England, became the property of the king by virtue of his prerogative and in recompense for his protecting the shore from pirates and robbers. Brown; 1 Bl.Comm. 290. Arnold v. Mundy, 6 N.J.L. 86, 10 Am.Dec. 356. Some authorities include the porpoise. Hale, De Jure Mar. pt. 1, c. 7; Plowd. 305; Bracton, L 3, c. 3.

FISHERY. A place prepared for catching fish with nets or hooks. This is commonly applied to the place of drawing a seine or net. Hart v. Hill, 1 Whart., Pa., 131, 132.

A right or liberty of taking fish; a species of incorporeal hereditament, anciently termed "piscary," of which there are several kinds. 2 Bl. Comm. 34, 39; 3 Kent, Comm. 409-418; Arnold v. Mundy, 6 N.J.L. 22, 10 Am.Dec. 356; Gould v. James, 6 Cow., N.Y., 376; Hart v. Hill, 1 Whart., Pa., 124.

Common fishery. A fishing ground where all persons have a right to take fish. Bennett v. Costar, 8 Taunt. 183; Albright v. Park Com'n, 68 N.J.L. 523, 53 A. 612. Not to be confounded with "common of fishery," as to which see Common, n.

Free fishery. A franchise in the hands of a subject, existing by grant or prescription, distinct from an ownership in the soil. It is an exclusive right, and applies to a public navigable river, without any right in the soil. 3 Kent, Comm. 410. Arnold v. Mundy, 6 N.J.L. 87, 10 Am. Dec. 356.

Right of fishery. The general and common right of the citizens to take fish from public waters, such as the sea, great lakes, etc. Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U.S. 1, 14 S.Ct. 548, 38 L. Ed. 331.

Several fishery. A fishery of which the owner is also the owner of the soil, or derives his right from the owner of the soil. 2 BI.Com. 39, 40; 1 Steph.Corr. 671, note. One by which the party claiming it has the right of fishing, independently of all other, so that no person can have a coextensive right with him in the object claimed; but a partial and independent right in another, or a limited liberty, does not derogate from the right of the owner. 3 Burr. 2814.

FISHERY LAWS. A series of statutes passed in England for the regulation of fishing, especially to prevent the destruction of fish during the breeding season, and of small fish, spawn, etc., and the employment of improper modes of taking fish. 3 Steph. Comm. 165.

FISHGARTH. A dam or weir in a river for taking fish. Cowell.

Where purpose of proposed examination of witness was to examine books and records to determine status of an account on which petitioner expected to sue, the proceeding was a "fishing expedition". State ex rel. Pitcher v. District Court of Fifth Judicial Dist. in and for Madison County, 114 Mont. 128, 133 P. 2d 350, 353.

FISK. In Scotch law, the fiscus or fist. The revenue of the crown. Generally used of the personal estate of a rebel which has been forfeited to the crown. Bell.

FISTUCA, or FESTUCA. In old English law, the rod or wand, by the delivery of which the property in land was formerly transferred in making a feoffment. Called, also, "baculum," "virga," and "ltustis." Spelman. See Festuca.

FISTULA. In the civil law, a pipe for conveying water. Dig. 8, 2, 18.

FIT, n. In medical jurisprudence, an attack or spasm of muscular convulsions, generally attended with loss of self-control and of consciousness; particularly, such attacks occurring in epilepsy. In a more general sense, the period of an acute attack of any disease, physical or mental, as, a fit of insanity. See Gunter v. State, 83 Ala. 96, 3 So. 600. Also used in the plural, in which sense it is a layman's term for epilepsy. Westphal' v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 27 Cal. App. 734, 151 P. 159, 162.

FITZ. A Norman word, meaning "son." It is used in law and genealogy; as Fitzherbert, the son of Herbert; Fitzjames, the son of James; Fitzroy, the son of the king. It was originally applied to illegitimate children.

FIVE-MILE ACT. An act of parliament, passed in 1665, against non-conformists, whereby ministers of that body who refused to take the oath of non-resistance were prohibited from coming within five miles of any corporate town, or place where they had preached or lectured since the passing of the act of oblivion in 1660, nullified by act of 1689. Brown.

To liquidate or render certain. To fasten a liability upon one. To transform a possible or contingent liability into a present and definite liability. Zimmerman v. Canfield, 42 Ohio St. 468; Polk v. Minnehaha County, 5 Dak. 129, 37 N. W. 93; Logansport & W. V. Gas Co. v. Peru, C. C. Ind., 89 F. 187.

FIX UP. A promise by a debtor to visit his creditor and "fix it up" with him was not a sufficient promise to pay to toll the statute of limitations, as the expression "fix it" would ordinarily be understood as meaning "make some kind of agreement or adjustment that may dispose of it." Shaw v. Bubier, 119 Me. 83, 109 A. 373, 374.

FIXED. In a charter entered into by the captain of a ship, containing the condition, "Provided ship not fixed previously," "fixed" was equivalent to "tied up," "closed," "not free." Richichi v. James B. Drake & Sons, D. C. Me., 280 F. 421, 424.

Prices are "fixed" when they are agreed upon. United States v. Masonite Corporation, N. Y., 316 U. S. 265, 62 S. Ct. 1070, 1076, 86 L. Ed. 1461.

FIXED ASSET. An asset essential to continuance of undertaking and proper operation of business. Ruden v. City of Platte, 62 S. D. 175, 252 N. W. 32.

FIXED LIABILITIES. Those certain and definite as to both obligation and amount. National Commercial Title & Mortgage Guaranty Co. v. City of Newark, 18 N.J.Misc. 186, 11 A.2d 759, 763.

FIXED OPINION. A conviction, prejudgment, disqualifying juror to impartially consider whole evidence and apply free from bias law as given in charge by court. Peterson v. State, 227 Ala. 361, 150 So. 156, 159.

FIXED SALARY. One which is definitely ascertained and prescribed as to amount and time of payment, and does not depend upon the receipt of fees or other contingent emoluments; not necessarily a salary which cannot be changed by competent authority. Sharpe v. Robertson, 5 Grat., Va., 518; Hedrick v. U. S., 16 Ct.Cl. 101. Established or settled, to remain for a time. Board of Sup’rs of Yavapai County v. Stephens, 177 P. 261, 262, 20 Ariz. 115.

FIXING BAIL. In practice, rendering absolute the liability of special bail.

A. thing is deemed to be affixed to land when it is attached to it by roots, imbedded in it, permanently resting upon it, or permanently attached to it; whatever is therein permanent, as by means of cement, plaster, nails, bolts, or screws. Civ.Code Cal. § 660; Big Sespe Oil Co. v. Cochran, C.C.A.Cal., 276 F. 216, 225.

Ordinarily, requisites are actual annexation to reality, or something appurtenant thereto, appropriation to use or purpose of reality, and intention to make article permanent accession to frehold as gathered from nature of articles affixed, relation and situation of person making annexation, and purpose or use for which it has been made. Bankers Life Ins. Co. v. Ohr, 131 Neb. 858, 270 N.W. 497, 502.

It has been said, however, that a “fixture” formerly meant any chattel which on becoming affixed to the soil became a part of the reality; but it now means those things which formed an exception to that rule and can be removed by the person who affixed them to the soil, L.R. 4 Ex. 328; if they can be taken away without material injury to the reality. Boise Ass’n of Credit Men v. Ellia, 26 Idaho, 438, 144 P. 6, 9, L.R.A.1915E, 917.

It has also been said that it is generally understood to comprehend any article which a tenant has the power to remove. Sheen v. Rickie, 5 Mees. & W. 174; Rogers v. Gilgower, 30 Pa. 185, 189, 72 Am. Dec. 694.

The general result seems to be that three views have been taken. One is that “fixture” means something which has been affixed to the reality, so as to become a part of it; it is fixed, irremovable. An opposite view is that “fixture” means something which appears to be a part of the reality, but is not fully so; it is only a chattel fixed to it, but removable. An intermediate view is that “fixture” means a chattel annexed, affixed, to the reality, but imports nothing as to whether it is removable; that is to be determined by considering its circumstances and the relation of the parties. Abbott; New Castle Theater Co. v. Ward, 57 Ind.App. 473, 104 N.E. 522, 527; Brown v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co., 133 Minn. 213, 158 N.W. 39, 40.

Things fixed or affixed to other things. The rule of law regarding them is that which is expressed in the maxim, “accessio cedit principali,” “the accessory goes with, and as part of, the principal subject-matter.” Brown.

That which is fixed or attached to something permanently as an appendage, and not removable. Webster. Something fixed or immovable. Winchester.

A piece of metal having the same function as a jig, excepting a signal, does not necessarily mean the actual use of a flag, but by figure of speech the word is used in the secondary sense and signifies a signal given as with a flag, that is to say, as by a waving of the hand for the purpose of communicating information. Bevans v. Kansas City Rys. Co., 285 Mo. 654, 227 S.W. 106, 110.

FLAG. A place covered with standing water.

FLAG. A national standard on which are certain emblems; ark ensign; a banner.

It is carried by soldiers, ships, etc., and commonly displayed at forts and many other suitable places.

In common parlance, the word “flag,” when used as denoting a signal, does not necessarily mean the actual use of a flag, but by figure of speech the word is used in the secondary sense and signifies a signal given as with a flag, that is to say, as by a waving of the hand for the purpose of communicating information. Bevans v. Kansas City Rys. Co., 285 Mo. 654, 227 S.W. 106, 110.

FLAG, DUTY OF THE. This was an ancient ceremony in acknowledgment of British sovereignty over the British seas, by which a foreign vessel struck her flag and lowered her top-sail on meeting the British flag.

FLAG, LAW OF. In maritime law. The law of that nation or country whose flag is flown by a particular vessel.

A shipowner who sends his vessel into a foreign port gives notice by his flag to all who enter into contracts with the master that he intends the law of that flag to regulate such contracts, and that they must either submit

FLAG OF THE UNITED STATES. By the act entitled "An act to establish the flag of the United States," (Rev.St. §§ 1791, 1792), it was provided "that, from and after the fourth day of July next, the flag of the United States be thirteen horizontal stripes, alternate red and white; that the union be twenty stars, white in a blue field; that, on the admission of every new state into the Union, one star be added to the union of the flag; and that such addition shall take effect on the fourth day of July then next succeeding such admission." See Act July 30, 1947, c. 389, §§ 1, 2, 61 Stat.. 641; 4 U.S.C.A. §§ 1, 2.

Ordinary and extraordinary floods. Extraordinary or unprecedented floods are floods which are of such unusual occurrence that they could not have been foreseen by men of ordinary experience and prudence. Ordinary floods are those, the occurrence of which may be reasonably anticipated from the general experience of men residing in the region where such floods happen. Soules v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co., 34 N.D. 7, 157 N.W. 823, 830, L.R.A.1917A, 501; Elkland v. Casey, C.C.A.Alaska, 12 A.L.R. 179, 266 F. 821, 823; Clements v. Phoenix Utility Co., 119 Kan. 190, 237 P. 1062, 1065.
FLOOD WATERS. Waters which escape from stream or other body of water and overflow adjacent territory, Poole v. Sun Underwriters Ins. Co. of New York, 65 S.D. 422, 274 N.W. 658, 660; under conditions which do not usually occur. Thomson v. Public Service Commission, 241 Wis. 243, 5 N.W.2d 769, 771; Everett v. Davis, 18 Cal. 2d 389, 115 P.2d 821, 823, 824.

Where a stream coming out of the mouth of a canyon has left a cone of detritus and flows down one side thereof, but in a time of high water it breaks out of its channel to flow down the other slope of the cone, such waters are "flood waters", it being immaterial that the escaping waters have made for themselves a channel or follow some natural channel, gulley, or depression. Horton v. Goodenough, 184 Cal. 451, 194 P. 34, 35; Motl v. Boyd, 116 Tex. 82, 286 S.W. 458, 468; Herminghaus v. Southern California Edison Co., 200 Cal. 81, 252 P. 607, 610.

The word "floor" may mean the mere bottom plane of an inclosure or artificial structure, the surface on which we walk, ride, or travel, or it may mean such surface or plane, together with the timbers, framework, and materials which enter into and form part of its construction. So of the word "flooring," if used without reference to a structure in its completed form, it would ordinarily convey the idea of materials suitable for use in constructing a floor, or in a narrower sense the boards or planks for covering the framework of a floor. When used with reference to a completed structure, it may mean either the materials of which the floor is composed, or the completed floor structure. When not attempting to speak with technical exactness, the words "floor" and "flooring" may be, and often are, used as synonymous or interchangeable terms. Cedar Rapids Mfg. Co. v. City of Cedar Rapids, 173 Iowa 386, 152 N.W. 842; Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Holt, C.C.A. Ark. 293 P. 155, 157.

A term used metaphorically, in parliamentary practice, to denote the exclusive right to address the body in session.

A member who has been recognized by the chairman, and who is in order, is said to "have the floor," until his remarks are concluded. Similarly, the "floor of the house" means the main part of the hall where the members sit, as distinguished from the galleries, or from the corridors or lobbies.

In England, the floor of a court is that part between the judge's bench and the front row of counsel. Litigants appearing in person, in the high court or court of appeal, are supposed to address the court from the floor.

FLOOR PLAN. A horizontal section drawing showing the thickness of walls and partitions, arrangement of passages, apartments, and openings at any floor of a building. Webster.

FLOOR PLAN RULE. Rule by which an owner who has placed an automobile on the floor of a retail dealer's showroom for sale is estopped to deny the title of an innocent purchaser from such dealer in the ordinary retail dealing, without knowledge of any conflicting claim. National Guaranty & Finance Co. v. Russell, Ohio App., 36 N.E.2d 1015, 1018.

FLOOR PLAN SERVICE. The buying and financing of automobiles by finance company and placing them on the floor of the dealer, so that dealer may resell automobiles to his retail trade. Associates Discount Corporation v. Haynes Garage, 304 Mass. 526, 24 N.E.2d 685, 687.

FLOORED. In automobile law. An automobile is floored when it is financed under a trust receipt or similar title retention document, whereby retail dealer obtains possession of automobile from distributor for exhibition and sale through payment to distributor by finance company. FOGAGIUM. In old English law, foggage or fog; a kind of rank grass of late growth, and not eaten in summer. Spelman; Cowell.

FOL. In French feudal law, faith; fealty. Guyot, Inst.Feod. c. 2.

FOINESSUN. In old English law, the fawning of deer. Spelman.

FOIRFAULT. In old Scotch law, to forfeit. 1 How.State Tr. 927.

FOERTHOCHT. In old Scotch law, forethought; premeditated. 1 Pitc.Crim.Tr. pt. 1, p. 90.

FOITERERS. Vagabonds. Blount.

FOLC-GENOT. (spelled, also, folkmote, folcmote, folkgemote; from folc, people, and gemote, an assembly). In Saxon law, a general assembly of the people in a town or shire.

It appears to have had judicial functions of a limited nature, and also to have discharged political offices, such as deliberating upon the affairs of the commonwealth or complaining of misgovernment, and probably possessed considerable powers of local self-government. The name was also given to any sort of a popular assembly. See Spelman; Manwood; Cunningham.

FOLC-LAND. In Saxon law, land of the folk or people. Land belonging to the people or the public.

Folc-land was the property of the community. It might be occupied in common, or possessed in severally; and, in the latter case, it was probably parceled out to individuals in the folc-gemote or court of the district, and the grant sanctioned by the freemen who were there present. But, while it continued to be folc-land, it could not be alienated in perpetuity; and therefore, on the expiration of the term for which it had been granted, it reverted to the community, and was again distributed by the same authority. It was subject to many burdens and exactions from which boc-land was exempt. Wharton.

FOLC-MOTE. A general assembly of the people, under the Saxons. See Folc-Gemote.

FOLC-RIGHT. The common right of all the people. 1 Bl.Comm. 65, 67.

The jus commune, or common law, mentioned in the laws of King Edward the Elder, declaring the same equal right, law, or justice to be due to persons of all degrees. Wharton.

FOLD-COURSE. In English law, land to which the sole right of folding the cattle of others is appurtenant. Sometimes it means merely such right of folding. The right of fording on another's land, which is called "common foldage." Co.Litt. 6a, note 1.

FOLD-SOKE. A feudal service which consisted in the obligation of the tenant not to have a fold of his own but to have his sheep lie in the lord's fold.

He was said to be consuetus ad foldam, tried to his lord's fold. The basis of his service is thus expressed by a recent writer: "It is manure that the lord wants; the demand for manure has played a large part in the history of the human race." Maitland, Domesday Book 76. In East Anglia the peasants had sheep enough to make this an important social institution; id. 442.

FOLDAGE. A privilege possessed in some places by the lord of a manor, which consists in the right of having his tenant's sheep to feed on his fields, so as to manure the land. The name of foldage is also given in parts of Norfolk to the customary fee paid to the lord for exemption at certain times from this duty. Elton, Com. 45, 46.

FOLGARII. Menial servants; followers. Bract.

FOLGERE. In old English law, a freeman, who has no house or dwelling of his own, but is the follower or retainer of another, (heorthfcest,) for whom he performs certain predial services.

FOLGERS. Menial servants or followers. Cowell.

FOLGOTH. Official dignity.

FOLIE BRIGHTIQUE, See Insanity.

FOLIE CIRCULAERE, See Insanity.

FOLIO. A leaf. In the ancient lawbooks it was the custom to number the leaves, instead of the pages; hence a folio would include both sides of the leaf, or two pages. The references to these books are made by the number of the folio, the letters "a" and "b" being added to show which of the two pages is intended; thus "Bracton, fol. 100a."

A large size of book, the page being obtained by folding the sheet of paper once only in the binding. Many of the ancient lawbooks are folios.

When used in connection with legal documents, it means a certain number of words varying from 72 to 100, but generally in the United States consisting of 100. Reed v. Sackett, 135 Okl. 69, 273 P. 1002, 1004.

In pleading denying allegations of a specified folio, it refers to a division in a document for purpose of measurement or reference. Mahin v. Mahin, 131 Fla. 546, 179 So. 651.

FOLK-LAND; FOLK-MOTE. See Folc-Land; Folc-Gemote.

FOLLOW. To conform to, comply with, or be fixed or determined by; as in the expressions "costs follow the event of the suit;" "the situs of personal property follows that of the owner;" "the offspring follows the mother," (partus sequitur ventrem).
To walk in, to attend upon closely, as a profession or calling. Spears v. Ford, 247 S.W. 713, 197 Ky. 575.

FOLLOWS THE PROPERTY. Synonymous with "adheres to the property." Tonopah Mining Co. of Nevada v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.3, 127 F.2d 239, 244.

FONDS PERDUS. In French law, a capital is said to be invested a fonds perdu when it is stipulated that in consideration of the payment of an amount as interest, higher than the normal rate, the lender shall be repaid his capital in this manner. The borrower, after paying the interest during the period determined, is free as regards the capital itself. Arg.Fr.Merc.Law, 560.

Belonging to, exercising authority or functions within; as, where one describes himself as "a notary public in and for the said county."

It connotes the end with reference to which anything is, acts, serves, or is done. Bates v. Schillinger, 128 Me. 14, 145 A. 395, 399. In consideration of which, in view of which, or with reference to which, anything is done or takes place.

FOR AT LEAST. As applied to a number of days required for notice this phrase includes either the first or last day, but not both. Stroud v. Water Co., 56 N.J.L. 422, 28 A. 578.

FOR CAUSE. Means for reasons which law and public policy recognize as sufficient warrant for removal and such cause is "legal cause" and not merely a cause which the appointing power in the exercise of discretion may deem sufficient. State ex rel. Nagle v. Sullivan, 98 Mont. 425, 40 P.2d 995, 998, 99 A.L.R. 321.

FOR COLLECTION. A form of indorsement on a note or check where it is not intended to transfer title to it or to give it credit or currency, but merely to authorize the transferee to collect the amount of it. Central R. Co. v. Bank, 73 Ga. 383; Sweeney v. Easter, 1 Wall. 166, 17 L.Ed. 681. But see In re Ziegenhein, Mo.App., 187 S.W. 893, 895.

FOR HIRE OR REWARD. To transport passengers or property of other persons than owner or operator of the vehicle for a reward or stipend, to be paid by such passengers, or persons for whom such property is transported, to owner or operator. Michigan Consol. Gas Co. v. Sohio Petroleum Co., 32 N.W.2d 353, 356, 321 Mich. 102.

FOR THAT. In pleading, words used to introduce the allegations of a declaration. "For that" is a positive allegation; "For that whereas" is a recital. Ham. N.P. 9.

FOR THAT WHEREAS. In pleading, formal words introducing the statement of the plaintiff's case, by way of recital, in his declaration, in all actions except trespass. 1 Inst.Cler. 170; 1 Burrill, Pr. 127. In trespass, where • there was no recital, the expression used was, "For that." Id.; 1 Inst.Cler. 202.

FOR USE. (1) For the benefit or advantage of another. Thus, where an assignee is obliged to sue in the name of his assignor, the suit is entitled "A. for use of B. v. C." (2) For enjoyment or employment without destruction.

A loan "for use" is one in which the bailee has the right to use and enjoy the article, but without consuming or destroying it, in which respect it differs from a loan "for use and enjoy the article, but without consuming or destroying it, in which respect it differs from a loan "for consumption." In re Houk's Estate, 186 Cal. 643, 200 P. 417, 418.

FOR VALUE. See Holder.

FOR VALUE RECEIVED. See Value Received.

FOR WHOM IT MAY CONCERN. Phrase creates presumption of intention on part of named insured to cover any persons who may have an insurable interest in the property. Allemannc Fire Ins. Co. v. Winding Gulf Colliers, D.C.W. Va., 60 F.Supp. 65, 68.

FORAGE. Hay and straw for horses, particularly in the army. Jacob.

FORAGIUM. Straw when the corn is threshed out. Cowell.

FORANEUS. One from without; a foreigner; a stranger. Calvin.

FORATHE. In forest law, one who could make oath, i.e., bear witness for another. Cowell; Spelman.

FORBALCA. In old records, a forebalk; a balk (that is, an unplowed piece of land) lying forward or next the highway. Cowell.

FORBANNITUS. A pirate; an outlaw; one banished.

FORBARRER. L.Fr. To bar out; to preclude; hence, to stop.

FORBATUDUS. In old English law, the aggressor slain in combat. Jacob.

Refraining from action. The term is used in this sense in general jurisprudence, in contradistinction to "act."

Within usury law, term signifies contractual obligation of lender or creditor to refrain, during given period of time, from requiring borrower or debtor to repay loan or debt then due and payable. Hafer v. Spaeth, 22 Wash.2d 378, 156 P.2d 408, 411.

FORCE. Power dynamically considered, that is, in motion or in action; constraining power, compulsion; strength directed to an end. Usually the word occurs in such connections as to show that unlawful or wrongful action is meant. Watson v. Railway Co., 7 Misc.Rep. 562, 28 N.Y.S. 84; Plank
FORCE

Unlawful violence. It is either simple, as entering upon another's possession, without doing any other unlawful act; compound, when some other violence is committed, which of itself alone is criminal; or implied, as in every trespass, rescous, or disseisin. Lambert v. Helena Adjustment Co., 69 Mont. 510, 222 P. 1057, 1058.

It may mean either exact pressure times exact area to which the pressure is applied, or it may mean simply an operative physical power without taking account of the exact quantity applied. Hydraulic Press Corporation v. Coo, 77 U.S.App.D.C. 251, 134 F.2d 49, 56.

Such display of physical power as is reasonably calculated to inspire fear of physical harm to those opposing possession of premises by trespasser. Smith v. Sinclair Refining Co., Tex.Civ.App., 77 S.W.2d 894, 895.

Terms "violence" and "force" are synonymous when used in relation to assault. People v. James, 9 Cal.App.2d 162, 48 P.2d 1011, 1012.

Power statically considered; that is at rest, or latent, but capable of being called into activity upon occasion for its exercise. Efficacy; legal validity. This is the meaning when we say that a statute or a contract is "in force."

In old English law, a technical term applied to a species of accessory before the fact.

In Scotch law, coercion; duress. Bell.

—Of force. See that title.

FORCE AND ARMS. A phrase used in declarations of trespass and in indictments, but now unnecessary in declarations, to denote that the act complained of was done with violence. 2 Chit.P1. 846, 850.

FORCE AND FEAR, called also "vi metuque," means that any contract or act extorted under the pressure of force (vis) or under the influence of fear (metus) is voidable on that ground, provided, of course, that the force or the fear was such as influenced the party. Brown.

FORCE MAJESTURE. Includes lightnings, earthquakes, storms, flood, sunstrokes, freezing, etc., wherein latter two can be considered hazards in contemplation of employer within Compensation Act. Fogg v. Van Saun Coal Co., N.J.Dept. Labor, 12 N.J.Misc. 680, 174 A. 419, 420.

FORCE MAJEURE. Fr. In the law of insurance, superior or irresistible force. Emerig. Tr. des Ass. c. 19

FORCED HEIRS. Those persons whom the testator or donor cannot deprive of the portion of his estate reserved for them by law, except in cases where he has a just cause to disinherit them. Civil Code La. art. 1495. And see Crain v. Crain, 17 Tex. 90; Hagerty v. Hagerty, 12 Tex. 456; Miller v. Miller, 105 La. 257, 29 So. 802.

FORCED SALE. In practice, a sale made at the time and in the manner prescribed by law, in virtue of execution issued on a judgment already rendered by a court of competent jurisdiction; a sale made under the process of the court, and in the mode prescribed by law. Sampson v. Williamson, 6 Tex. 110, 55 Am.Dec. 762.

A sale against the consent of the owner. The term should not be deemed to embrace a sale under a power in a mortgage. Patterson v. Taylor, 15 Fla. 336.

FORCES. The military and naval power of the country.

FORCHEAPUM. Pre-emption; forestalling the market. Jacob.

FORCIBLE DETAINER. Exists where one originally in rightful possession of realty refuses to surrender it at termination of his possessory right. Sayers & Muir Service Station v. Indian Refining Co., 266 Ky. 779, 100 S.W.2d 687, 689.

The offense of violently keeping possession of lands and tenements, with menaces, force, and arms, and without the authority of law. 4 Bl.Comm. 148; 4 Steph.Comm. 280.

Forcible detainer may ensue upon a peaceable entry, as well as upon a forcible entry; but it is most commonly spoken of in the phrase "forcible entry and detainer."

Every person is guilty of forcible entry who either (1) by breaking open doors, windows, or other parts of a house, or by any kind of violence or circumstance of terror, enters upon or into any real property; or (2) who, after entering peaceably upon real property, turns out by force, threats, or menacing conduct the party in possession. Code Civil Proc.Cal. § 1159.

In many states, an entry effected without consent of rightful owner, or against his remonstrance, or under circumstances which amount to no more than a mere trespass, is now technically considered “forcible,” while a detainer of the property consisting merely in the refusal to surrender possession after a lawful demand, is treated as a “forcible” detainer, the “force” required at common law being now supplied by a mere fiction. See Vernon’s Tex. Ann.Civ.St. art. 3975; Goldsberry v. Bishop, 2 Duv., Ky., 144; Wells v. Darby, 13 Mont. 504, 34 P. 1092; Willard v. Warren, 17 Wend., N.Y. 261; California Products v. Mitchell, 52 Cal.App. 312, 198 P. 646.

FORCIBLE ENTRY AND DETAINER. A summary proceeding for restoring to possession of land one who is wrongfully kept out or has been wrongfully deprived of the possession. Wein v. Albany Park Motor Sales Co., 312 Ill.App. 357, 38 N.E.2d 556, 559.

The title cannot be inquired into for any purpose. Davis v. Robinson, 374 Ill. 553, 30 N.E.2d 52, 54. The inquiry is confined to the actual and peaceable possession of the plaintiff and the unlawful or forcible ouster or detention by defendant; the object of the law being to prevent the disturbance of the public peace by the forcible assertion of a private right. Gore v. Altice, 33 Wash. 335, 74 P. 556; Eveleth v. Gill, 97 Me. 315, 54 A. 757; Harris v. Harris, 190 Ala. 619, 67 So. 465, 466; Long v. Bagwell, 38 Okl. 312, 133 P. 90, 51.

FORCIBLE TRESPASS. In North Carolina, this is an invasion of the rights of another with respect to his personal property, of the same character, or under the same circumstances, which would constitute a "forcible entry and detainer" of real property at common law. It consists in taking or seizing the personal property of another by force, violence, or intimidation or in forcibly injuring it. State v. Lawson, 123 N.C. 740, 31 S.E. 667, 68 Am.St.Rep. 844; State v. Holder, 188 N.C. 561, 125 S.E. 113, 114.

There must be actual violence used, or such demonstration of force as is calculated to intimidate or tend to a breach of the peace. It is not necessary that the person be actually put in fear. State v. Stinnett, 167 S.E. 63, 64, 203 N.C. 829.

FORDA. In old records, a ford or shallow, made by damming or penning up the water. Cowell.

FORDAL. A butt or headland, jutting out upon other land. Cowell.

FORDANNO. In old European law, he who first assaulted another. Spelman.

FORDIKA. In old records, grass or herbage growing on the edge or bank of dykes or ditches. Cowell.

FORE—MATRON. In a jury of women this word corresponds to the foreman of a jury. She was sworn in separately; 8 Carr. & P. 264.

FORE—OATH. Before the Norman Conquest, an oath required of the complainant in the first instance (in the absence of manifest facts) as a security against frivolous suits. Pollock, 1 Sel. Essays Anglo-Am. Leg. Hist. 93.

FOREBALK. See Headland.

FORECLOSE. To shut out; to bar; to terminate. State v. Darling, 39 S.D. 558, 165 N.W. 536, 537.

A process in chancery by which all further right existing in a mortgagor to redeem the estate is defeated and lost to him, and the estate becomes the absolute property of the mortgagee, being applicable when the mortgagor has forfeited his estate by non-payment of the money due on the mortgage at the time appointed, but still retains the equity of redemption. 2 Washb. Real Prop. 237. Goodman v. White, 26 Conn. 322; Trustees of Schools v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 296 Ill. 99, 129 N.E. 567, 568.

The term is also loosely applied to any of the various methods, statutory or otherwise, known in different jurisdictions, of enforcing payment of the debt secured by a mortgage, by taking and selling the mortgaged estate. Dikeman v. Jewel Gold Mining Co., C.C.A.Alaska, 13 F.2d 118; Realty Mortgage Co. v. Moore, 80 Fla. 2, 85 So. 155, 156.

Foreclosure is also applied to proceedings founded upon some other liens; thus there are proceedings to foreclose a mechanic's lien. Insurance Co. of North America v. Cheatem, 221 Ky. 668, 299 S.W. 545, 547. It is a proceeding in court or out of court, when provided for by a valid contract, to subject property or part thereof covered by a lien to payment of debt secured by the lien, and it has effect of extinguishing all right, title, or interest, if any, of defendants in the property. Southwestern Peanut Growers Ass'n v. Womack, Tex.Civ.App., 179 S.W.2d 371, 373.

Statutory foreclosure. The term is sometimes applied to foreclosure by execution of a power of sale contained in the mortgage, without recourse to the courts, as it must conform to the provisions of the statute regulating such sales. See Mowry v. Sanborn, 11 Hun, N.Y., 548.

Strict foreclosure. A decree of strict foreclosure of a mortgage finds the amount due under the mortgage, orders its payment within a certain limited time, and provides that, in default of such payment, the debtor's right and equity of redemption shall be forever barred and foreclosed its effect is to vest the title of the property absolutely in the mortgagee, on default in payment, without any sale of the property. Champion v. Hinkle, 45 N.J. Eq. 162, 16 A. 701; Lightcap v. Bradley, 186 Ill. 510, 58 N.E. 221; Warner Bros. Co. v. Freud, 138 Cal. 651, 72 P. 345.

FORECLOSURE DEGREE. Properly speaking, a decree ordering the strict foreclosure of a mortgage, at the term, is also loosely and conventionally applied to a decree ordering the sale of the mortgaged premises and the satisfaction of the mortgage out of the proceeds. Hanover F. Ins. Co. v. Brown, 77 Md. 64, 25 A. 989, 39 Am.St. Rep. 386.

FORECLOSURE SALE. A sale of mortgaged property to obtain satisfaction of the mortgage out of the proceeds, whether authorized by a decree of the court or by a power of sale contained in the mortgage. Johnson v. Cook, 96 Mo.App. 442, 70 S.W. 526.

FOREFAULT. In Scotch law, to forfeit; to lose.

FOREGIFT. A premium for a lease.

FOREGOERS. Royal purveyors. 26 Edw. III. c. 5.

FOREHAND RENT. In English law, rent payable in advance; or, more properly, a species of premium or bonus paid by the tenant on the making of the lease, and particularly on the renewal of leases by ecclesiastical corporations.

FOREIGN. Belonging to another nation or country; belonging or attached to another jurisdiction; made, done, or rendered in another state or jurisdiction; subject to another jurisdiction; operating or solvable in another territory; extrinsic; outside; extraordinary. Nonresident.
FOREIGN

FOREIGN ANSWER. In old English practice, an answer which was not triable in the county where it was made. (St. 15 Hen. VI. c. 5.) Blount.

FOREIGN APPOSER. An officer in the exchequer who examines the sheriff's estreats, comparing them with the records, and apposeth (interrogates) the sheriff what he says to each particular sum therein. 4 Inst. 107; Blount; Cowell.

FOREIGN BOUGHT AND SOLD. A custom in London which, being found prejudicial to sellers of cattle in Smithfield, was abolished. Wharton.

FOREIGN COINS. Coins issued as money under the authority of a foreign government. As to their valuation in the United States, see 46 Stat. 739, 31 U.S.C.A. § 372.

FOREIGN COURTS. The courts of a foreign state or nation. In the United States, this term is frequently applied to the courts of one of the states when their judgments or records are introduced in the courts of another.

FOREIGN DOMINION. In English law this means a country which at one time formed part of the dominions of a foreign state or potentate, but which by conquest or cession has become a part of the dominions of the British crown. 5 Best & S. 290.

FOREIGN ENLISTMENT ACT. The statute 59 Geo. III. c. 69, prohibiting the enlistment, as a soldier or sailor, in any foreign service. 4 Steph. Comm. 226. A later and more stringent act is that of 33 & 34 Vict. c. 90.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE. Drafts drawn on a foreign state or country.

FOREIGN—GOING SHIP. By the English merchant shipping act, 1854, (17 & 18 Vict. c. 104.) § 2, any ship employed in trading, going between some place or places in the United Kingdom and some place or places situate beyond the following limits, that is to say: The coasts of the United Kingdom, the islands of Guernsey, Jersey, Sark, Alderney, and Man, and the continent of Europe, between the river Elbe and Brest, inclusive. Home-trade ship includes every ship employed in trading and going between places within the last-mentioned limits.

FOREIGN JUDGMENT. See Judgment.

FOREIGN JURISDICTION. Any jurisdiction foreign to that of the forum. Also the exercise by a state or nation of jurisdiction beyond its own territory, the right being acquired by treaty or otherwise.

FOREIGN LAWS. The laws of a foreign country, or of a sister state. People v. Martin, 38 Misc. Rep. 67, 76 N.Y.S. 953; Bank of Chillicothe v. Dodge, 8 Barb., N.Y., 233. Foreign laws are often the suggesting occasions of changes in, or additions to, our own laws, and in that respect are called "jus receptum." Brown.

FOREIGN MATTER. In old practice, matter triable or done in another county. Cowell.

FOREIGN OFFICE. The department of state through which the English sovereign communicates with foreign powers. A secretary of state is at its head. Till the middle of the last century, the functions of a secretary of state as to foreign and home questions were not disunited.

FOREIGN SERVICE, in feudal law, was that whereby a mesne lord held of another, without the compass of his own fee, or that which the tenant performed either to his own lord or to the lord paramount out of the fee. (Kitch. 299.) Foreign service seems also to be used for knight's service, or escuage uncertain. (Perk. 650.) Jacob.

FOREIGN TRADE. Commercial interchange of commodities from different countries; export and import trade. Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey v. United States, 29 Cust. & Pat.App. 82, 120 F.2d 340, 342.

FOREIGN WILL. Will of person not domiciled within state at time of death. De Tray v. Hardgrove, Tex.Com.App., 52 S.W.2d 239, 240. •

FOREIGNER. In old English law, this term, when used with reference to a particular city, designated any person who was not an inhabitant of that city. According to later usage, it denotes a person who is not a citizen or subject of the state or country of which mention is made, or any one owing allegiance to a foreign state or sovereign.

For the distinctions, in Spanish law, between "domiciliated" and "transient" foreigners, see Yates v. lams, 10 Tex. 168.

FOREIN. An old form of foreign (q. v.). Blount.

FOREJUDGE. In old English law and practice, to expel from court for some offense or misconduct. When an officer or attorney of a court was expelled for any offense, or for not appearing to an action by bill filed against him, he was said to be forejudged the court. Cowell.

To deprive or put out of a thing by the judgment of a court. To condemn to lose a thing.

To expel or banish.

FOREJUDGER. In English practice, a judgment by which a man is deprived or put out of a thing; a judgment of expulsion or banishment.
FOREMAN. The presiding member of a grand or petit jury, who speaks or answers for the jury.

FORENSIC. Belonging to courts of justice.

FORENSIC MEDICINE, or medical jurisprudence, as it is also called, is "that science which teaches the application of every branch of medical knowledge to the purposes of the law; hence its limits are, on the one hand, the requirements of the law, and, on the other, the whole range of anatomy, physiology, medicine, surgery, chemistry, physics, and botany lend their aid as necessity arises; and in some cases all these branches of science are required to enable a court of law to arrive at a proper conclusion on a contested question affecting life or property." Tayl. Med. Jur. 1.

FORENSIS. In Civil law, belonging to or connected with a court; forensic. Forensis homo, an advocate; a pleader of causes; one who practices in court. Calvin.

In old Scotch law, a strange man or stranger; an out-dwelling man; an "unfreeman," who dwells not within burgh.

FORESTALLER. In old English law, obstruction; hindrance; the offense of stopping the highway; the hindering a tenant from coming to his land; intercepting a deer before it can regain the forest. Also one who forestalls; one who commits the offense of forestalling. 3 Bl. Comm. 170; Cowell.

FORESTALLING. Obstructing the highway. Intercepting a person on the highway.

FORESTALLING THE MARKET. Securing control of commodities on way to market. Raney v. Montgomery County Com'rs, 170 Md. 183, 183 A. 548, 551.

The act of the buying or contracting for any merchandise or provision on its way to the market, with the intention of selling it again at a higher price; or the dissuading persons from bringing their goods or provisions there; or persuading them to enhance the price when there. 4 Bl. Comm. 158. Barton v. Morris, 10 Phila., Pa., 361. This was formerly an indictable offense in England, but is now abolished by St. 7 & 8 Vict. c. 24. 4 Steph.Comm. 291, note.

FORESTARIUS.

In English law, a forester. An officer who takes care of the woods and forests. De forestario apponendo, a writ which lay to appoint a forester to prevent further commission of waste when a tenant in dower had committed waste. Bract. 316; Du Cange.

In Scotch law, a forester or keeper of woods, to whom, by reason of his office, pertains the bark and the hewn branches. And, when he rides through the forest, he may take a tree as high as his own head. Skene de Verb. Sign.

FORESTER. A sworn officer of the forest, appointed by the king's letters patent to walk the forest, watching both the vert and the venison, attaching and presenting all trespassers against them within their own bailiwick or walk. These letters patent were generally granted during good behavior; but sometimes they held the office in fee. Blount.

FORETIDOUTH FELONY. In Scotch law, murder committed in consequence of a previous design. Ersk. Inst. 4, 4, 50; Bell.

FORFANG. In old English law, the taking of provisions from any person in fairs or markets before the royal purveyors were served with necessaries for the sovereign. Cowell. Also the seizing and rescuing of stolen or strayed cattle from the hands of a thief, or of those having illegal possession of them; also the rewardfixed for such rescue.

FORFEIT. To lose, or lose the right to, by some error, fault, offense, or crime, or to subject, as property, to forfeiture or confiscation. State v. Cowen, 231 Iowa 1117, 3 N.W.2d 176, 180. To lose, in consequence of breach of contract, neglect of duty, or offense, some right, privilege, or property to another or to the State. United States v. Chavez, C.C.A.N.M., 87 F.2d 16, 19.

To incur a penalty; to become liable to the payment of a sum of money, as the consequence of a certain act. Sands v. Holbert, 93 W.Va. 574, 117 S.E. 896, 899; Ford v. Ellison, 287 Mo. 683, 230 S.W. 637, 640.

To lose an estate, a franchise, or other property belonging to one, by the act of the law, and as a consequence of some misfeasance, negligence, or omission. Cassell v. Crothers, 193 Pa. 359, 44 A. 446; State v. De Gress, 72 Tex. 242, 11 S.W. 1029; State v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., 12 Gill & L., Md., 432, 38 Am.Dec. 319. The further ideas connoted by this term are that it is a deprivation, (that is, against the will of the losing party,) and that the property is either transferred to another or resumed by the original granter.

FORFEITABLE. Liable to be forfeited; subject to forfeiture for non-user, neglect, crime, etc.

FORFEITURE. Something to which the right is lost by the commission of a crime or fault or the losing of something by way of penalty. Ridge way v. City of Akron., Ohio App., 42 N.E.2d 724, 726. A deprivation or destruction of a right in consequence of the nonperformance of some obligation or condition. Connelan v. Federal Life & Casualty Co., 134 Me. 104, 182 A. 13, 14.

2. The loss of land by a tenant to his lord, as the consequence of some breach of fidelity. 1 Steph.Cornm. 166.

4. The loss of goods or chattels, as a punishment for some crime or misdemeanor in the past, forfeiting, and as a compensation for the offense and injury committed against him to whom they are forfeited. 2 Bl.Comm. 420.

5. The loss of office by abuser, non-user, or refusal to exercise it. City of Williamsburg v. Weesner, 164 Ky. 769, 176 S.W. 224, 225.

6. The loss of a corporate franchise or charter in consequence of some illegal act, or of malfeasance or misfeasance. Murphy v. Missouri & Kansas Land & Loan Co., 28 N.D. 519, 149 N.W. 957, 959; Village of Fredonia v. Fredonia Natural Gas Light Co., 87 Misc. 592, 149 N.Y.S. 964, 965.

7. The loss of the right to life, as the consequence of the commission of some crime to which the law has affixed a capital penalty. In re New Jersey Court of Pardons, 97 N.J. Eq. 555, 129 A. 624, 630.

8. The incurring liability to pay a definite sum of money as the consequence of violating the provisions of some statute, or refusal to comply with some requirement of law. State v. Marion County Com'r, 85 Ind. 493.

10. In mining law, the loss of a mining claim held by location on the public domain (unpatented) in consequence of the failure of the holder to make the required annual expenditure upon it within the time allowed. McKay v. McDougall, 25 Mont. 258, 64 P. 669, 87 Am.St.Rep. 393; St. John v. Kidd, 26 Cal. 271.

FORFEITURE OF BOND. A failure to perform the condition upon which obligor was to be excused from the penalty in the bond. Hall v. Browning, 71 Ga.App. 835, 32 S.E.2d 424, 427.

FORFEITURE OF MARRIAGE. A penalty incurred by a ward in chivalry who married without the consent or against the will of the guardian. See Duplex Valor Maritagi.

FORFEITURE OF SILK, supposed to lie in the small reserved rent in money. Jacob.

FORGABULUM, or FORGAVEL. A quit-rent; a small reserved rent in money. Jacob.

FORGABULUM, or FORGAVEL. A quit-rent; a small reserved rent in money. Jacob.

FORGER. To fabricate by false imitation. Carter v. State, 135 Tex.Cr.R. 457, 116 S.W.2d 371, 377. To fabricate, construct, or prepare one thing in imitation of another thing, with the intention of substituting the false for the genuine, or otherwise deceiving and defrauding by the use of the spurious article. To counterfeit or make falsely. Especially, to make a spurious written instrument with the intention of fraudulently substituting it for another, or of passing it off as genuine; or to fraudulently alter a genuine instrument to another's prejudice; or to sign another person's...

To forge (a metaphorical expression, borrowed from the occupation of the smith) means, properly speaking, no more than to make or form, but in our law it is always taken in an evil sense. 2 East, P. C. p. 852, c. 19, § 1.

To forge is to make in the likeness of something else; to counterfeit is to make in imitation of something else, with a view to defraud by passing the false copy for genuine or original. Both words, "forged" and "counterfeit-ed," convey the idea of similitude. State v. McKenzie, 42 Me. 392.

In common usage, however, forgery is almost always predicated of some private instrument or writing, as a deed, note, will, or a signature; and counterfeiting denotes the fraudulent imitation of coined or paper money or some substitute therefor.

FORGERY.

Criminal Law

The false making or material altering, with intent to defraud, of any writing which, if genuine, might apparently be of legal efficacy or the foundation of a legal liability. People v. Routson, 354 Ill. 573, 188 N.E. 883, 885; 2 Bish. Crim. Law, § 522; 84 McConac. v. Central State Bank, 203 Iowa 833, 211 N.W. 542, 545, 52 A.L.R. 1297. A fraudulent making and alteration of writing to prejudice of another man's right, or a false making, a making malo animo of any instrument, for the purpose of fraud or deceit. Iberville Trust & Savings Bank v. City Cafe, La.App., 143 So. 73. See Forge.

The thing itself, so falsely made, imitated or forged; especially a forged writing. A forged signature is frequently said to be "a forgery."

Evidence

The fabrication or counterfeiting of evidence. The artful and fraudulent manipulation of physical objects, or the deceitful arrangement of genuine facts or things, in such a manner as to create an erroneous impression or a false inference in the minds of those who may observe them. See Burrill, Circ. Ev. 131, 420.

FORGERY ACT, 1870. The statute 33 & 34 Vict. c. 58, was passed for the punishment of forgers of stock certificates, and for extending to Scotland certain provisions of the forgery act of 1861. Mozley & Whitley.

FORHERDA. In old records, a herdland, headland, or foreland. Cowell.

FORT DISPUTATIONES. In the civil law, discussions or arguments before a court. 1 Kent, Comm. 530.

FORINSECUS. Lat. Foreign; exterior; outside; extraordinary.

Servitium forinsecum, the payment of aid, scutage, and other extraordinary military services. Forinsecum manerium, the manor, or that part of it which lies outside the bars or town, and is not included within the liberties of it. Cowell; Blount; Jacob; 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, 273.

FORINSIC. In old English law, exterior; foreign; extraordinary.

In feudal law, the term "forinsic services" comprehended the payment of extraordinary aids or the rendition of extraordinary military services, and in this sense was opposed to "intrinsic services." 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, 273.

FORIS. Lat. Abroad; out of doors; on the outside of a place; without; extrinsic.

FORISBANITUS. In old English law, banished.

FORISFACERE. Lat. To forfeit; to lose an estate or other property on account of some criminal or illegal act. To confiscate.

To act beyond the law, i. e., to transgress or infringe the law; to commit an offense or wrong; to do any act against or beyond the law. See Co. Litt. 59a; Du Cange; Spelman.

FORISFACERE, e., EXTRA LEGEM SEU CON-SUETUDINEM FACERE. Co. Litt. 59. Forisfacere, e., to do something beyond law or custom.

FORISFACTURA. A crime or offense through which property is forfeited.

A fine or punishment in money. Forfeiture. The loss of property or life in consequence of crime.

FORISFACTURA PLENA. A forfeiture of all a man's property. Things which were forfeited. Du Cange; Spelman.

FORISFACTUS. A criminal. One who has forfeited his life by commission of a capital offense. Spelman.

FORISFACTUS SERVUS. A slave who has been a free man, but has forfeited his freedom by crime. Du Cange.

FORISFAMILIARE. In old English and Scotch law, literally, to put out of a family (fortis familiae ponere). To portion off a son, so that he could have no further claim upon his father. Glanv. lib. 7, c. 3.

To emancipate, or free from paternal authority.

FORISFAMILIATED. In old English law, portioned off.

A son was said to be forisfamiliated (forisfamilari) if his father assigned him part of his land, and gave him seisin thereof, and did this at the request or with the free consent of the son himself, who expressed himself satisfied with such portion. 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, 42, 110.

FORISFAMILIATUS. In old English law, put out of a family; portioned off; emancipated; forisfamiliated. Bract. fol. 64.

FORISJUDICATIO. In old English law, forejudger. A forejudgment. A judgment of court whereby a man is put out of possession of a thing. Co. Litt. 100b.
FORISJUDICATUS. Forejudged; sent from court; banished. Deprived of a thing by judgment of court. Bract. fol. 250b; Co. Litt. 100b; Du Cange.

FORISJURARE. To forswear; to abjure; to abandon.

Provinciam forisjurare. To forswear the country. Spelman.

FORISJURARE PARENTILAM. To remove oneself from parental authority. The person who did this lost his rights as heir. Du Cange.

FORJUDGE. See Forejudge.

FORJURER. L. Fr. In old English law, to forswear; to abjure.

FORJURER ROYALME. To abjure the realm. Britt. cc. 1, 16.

FORLER-LAND. Land in the diocese of Hereford, which had a peculiar custom attached to it, but which has been long since disused, although the name is retained. But. Surv. 56.

FORM. A model or skeleton of an instrument to be used in a judicial proceeding, containing the principal necessary matters, the proper technical terms or phrases, and whatever else is necessary to make it formally correct, arranged in proper and methodical order, and capable of being adapted to the circumstances of the specific case.

In contradistinction to "substance," "form" means the legal or technical manner or order to be observed in legal instruments or juridical proceedings, or in the construction of legal documents or processes.

Common Form, Solemn Form. See Probate.

Forms of Action. This term is the general designation of the various species or kinds of personal actions known to the common law, such as trover, trespass, debt, assumpsit, etc. These differ in their pleadings and evidence, as well as in the circumstances to which they are respectively applicable. Truax v. Parvis, 7 Houst. (Del.) 330, 32 A. 227.

Matter of Form. In pleadings, in indictments, in affidavits, conveyances, etc., matter of form (as distinguished from matter of substance) is all that relates to the mode, form, or style of expressing the facts involved, the choice or arrangement of words, and other such particulars, without affecting the substantial validity or sufficiency of the instrument, or without going to the merits. Railway Co. v. Kurtz, 10 Ind.App. 60, 37 N.E. 303; Meath v. Mississippi Levee Com’rs, 109 U.S. 268, 3 S.Ct. 284, 27 L.Ed. 930; State v. Amidon, 58 Vt. 524, 2 A. 154.

Form of the Statute. This expression means the words, language, or frame of a statute, and hence the inhibition or command which it may contain; used in the phrase (in criminal pleading) "against the form of the statute in that case made and provided."

FORMA. Lat. Form; the prescribed form of judicial proceedings.

FORMA DAT ESSE. Form gives being. Called "the old physical maxim." Lord Henley, Ch., 2 Eden, 99.

FORMA ET FIGURA JUDICII. The form and shape of judgment or judicial action. 3 Bl. Comm. 271.

FORMA LEGALIS FORMA ESSENTIALIS. Legal form is essential form. 10 Coke, 100.

FORMA NON OBSERVATA, INFERTUR AUCTUS. Where form is not observed, a nullity of the act is inferred. 12 Coke, 7. Where the law prescribes a form, the non-observance of it is fatal to the proceeding, and the whole becomes a nullity. Best, Ev. Introd. § 59.

FORMA PAUPERIS. See In Forma Pauperis.

FORMAL. Relating to matters of form; as, "formal defects"; inserted, added, or joined pro forma. See Parties.

FORMALITIES. In England, robes worn by the magistrates of a city or corporation, etc., on solemn occasions. Enc. Lond.

FORMALITY. The conditions, in regard to method, order, arrangement, use of technical expressions, performance of specific acts, etc., which are required by the law in the making of contracts or conveyances, or in the taking of legal proceedings, to insure their validity and regularity. Succession of Seymour, 48 La.Ann. 993, 20 So. 217.

FORMATA. In canon law, canonical letters. Spelman.

FORMATA BREVIA. Formed writs; writs of form. See Brevia Formata.

FORMED ACTION. An action for which a set form of words is prescribed, which must be strictly adhered to. 10 Mod. 140, 141.

FORMEDesign. In criminal law, and particularly with reference to homicide, this term means a deliberate and fixed intention to kill, whether directed against a particular person or not. Mitchell v. State, 60 Ala. 33; Wilson v. State, 128 Ala. 17, 29 So. 569; Ake v. State, 30 Tex. 473.

FORMEDON. An ancient writ in English law which was available for one who had a right to lands or tenements by virtue of a gift in tail.

It was in the nature of a writ of right, and was the highest action that a tenant in tail could have; for he could not have an absolute writ of right, that being confined to such as claimed in fee-simple, and for that reason this writ of formedon was granted to him by the statute.
FORMEDON IN THE DESCENDER. A writ of formedon which lay where a gift was made in tail, and the tenant in tail aliened the lands or was disseised of them and died, for the heir in tail to recover them, against the actual tenant of the freehold. 3 Bl. Comm. 192.

FORMEDON IN THE REMAINDER. A writ of formedon which lay where a man gave lands to another for life or in tail, with remainder to a third person in tail or in fee, and he who had the particular estate died without issue inheritable, and a stranger intruded upon him in remainder, and kept him out of possession. In this case he in remainder, or his heir, was entitled to this writ. 3 Bl. Comm. 192.

FORMEDON IN THE REVERTER. A writ of formedon which lay where there was a gift in tail, and afterwards, by the death of the donee or his heirs without issue of his body, the reversion fell in upon the donor, his heirs or assigns. In such case, the reversioner had this writ to recover the lands. 3 Bl. Comm. 192.

FORMELLA. A certain weight of above 70 lbs., mentioned in 51 Hen. III. Cowell.

FORMER ACQUITTAL. See Autrefois.

FORMER ADJUDICATION. An adjudication in a former action. See Res Judicata.

FORMER JEOPARDY. Plea of "former jeopardy," that a man cannot be brought into danger of his life or limb for the same offense more than once, is fundamental common law and constitutional right of defend ant, affording protection against his being again tried for the same offense, and not against the peril of second punishment. State v. Fredlund, 200 Minn. 44, 273 N.W. 353, 355, 113 A.L.R. 215.

FORMER RECOVERY. Recovery in a former action. See Res Judicata.

FORMIDO PERICULI, Lat. Fear of danger. 1 Kent, Comm. 23.

FORMS OF ACTION. This term comprehends the various classes of personal action at common law, viz.: trespass, case, trover, detinue, replevin, covenant, debt, assumpsit, scire facias, and re-vivor, as well as the nearly obsolete actions of account and annuity, and the modern action of mandamus.

They are now abolished in England by the Judicature Acts of 1873 and 1875, and in many of the states of the United States, where a uniform course of proceeding under codes of procedure has taken their place. But the principles regulating the distinctions between the common-law actions are still found applicable even where the technical forms are abolished.

FORMULA. In common-law practice, a set form of words used in judicial proceedings.

In the civil law, an action. Calvin.

FORMULA DEAL. An agreement between motion picture distributors and independent or affiliated circuits to exhibit a feature in all theatres at specified percentage of national gross receipts realized from such feature by all theatres in the United States. U. S. v. Paramount Pictures, D.C. N.Y., 66 F.Supp. 323, 333, 347.

FORMULA INSTRUCTION. An instruction intended to be complete statement of law upon which jury may base verdict. Harvey v. Aceves, 115 Cal.App. 333, 1 P.2d 1043, 1045.

FORMULIE. In Roman law, when the legis actiones were proved to be inconvenient, a mode of procedure called "per formulas," (i.e., by means of formulce,) was gradually introduced, and eventually the legis actiones were abolished by the Lex Xbutia, B. C. 164, excepting in a very few exceptional matters.

The formulce were four in number, namely: (1) The Demonstratio, wherein the plaintiff stated, i.e., swayed, the facts out of which his claim arose; (2) the Intentio, where he made his claim against the defendant; (3) the Adjudicatio, wherein the judge was directed to assign or adjudicate the property or any portion or portions thereof according to the rights of the parties; and (4) the Condemnatio, in which the judge was authorized and directed to condemn or to acquit according as the facts were or were not proved. These formulæ were obtained from the magistrate, (in jure,) and were thereafter proceeded with before the judex, (in judicio). Brown. See Mackeld.Rom. Law, § 204.

FORMULARIES. Collections of formulæ, or forms of forensic proceedings and instruments used among the Franks, and other early continental nations of Europe. Among these the formulæ of Marculphus may be mentioned as of considerable interest. Bull. Co. Litt. note .77, lib. 3.

FORNAGIUM. The fee taken by a lord of his tenant, who was bound to bake in the lord's common oven (in furno domini), or for a commission to use his own.

FORNICATION. Unlawful sexual intercourse between two unmarried persons. Further, if one of the persons be married and the other not, it is fornication on the part of the latter, though adultery for the former. In some jurisdictions, however, by statute, it is adultery on the part of both persons if the woman is married, whether the man is married or not. Banks v. State, 96 Ala. 78, 11 So. 404; Hood v. State, 56 Ind. 263, 26 Am. Rep. 21; State v. Phillips, 26 N.D. 206, 144 N.W. 94, 95, 49 L.R.A.,N.S., 470, Ann.Cas.1916A, 320; State v. Ling, 91 Kan. 647, 138 P. 582, Ann.Cas. 1915D, 374.

FORNIX, Lat. A brothel; fornication.

FORNO. In Spanish law, an oven. Las Partidas, pt. 3, tit. 32, 1. 18.

FORO. In Spanish law, the place where tribunals hear and determine causes,—exercendarum litium locus.

FOROS. In Spanish law, emphyteutic rents. Schm. Civil Law, 309.

FORPRISE. An exception; reservation; excepted; reserved. Anciently, a term of frequent use in leases and conveyances. Cowell; Blount.

In another sense, the word is taken for any exaction.

FORSCHEL. A strip of land lying next to the highway.

FORSSES. Waterfalls. Camden, Brit.

FORSPEAKER. An attorney or advocate in a cause. Blount; Whishaw.

FORSPECA. In old English law, prolocutor; paranymphus.

FORT. This term means "something more than a mere military camp, post, or station. The term implies a fortification, or a place protected from attack by some such means as a moat, wall, or parapet." U. S. v. Tichenor, C.C.Or., 12 F. 424.

FORTALICE, or FORTELACE. A fortress or place of strength, which anciently did not pass without a special grant. 11 Hen. VII. c. 18.

FORTALITIUM. In old Scotch law, a fortalice; a castle. Properly a house or tower which has a battlement or a ditch or moat about it.

FORTAXED. Wrongly or extortionately taxed.

FORTHCOMING. In Scotch law, the action by which an arrestment (garnishment) is made effectual. It is a decree or process by which the creditor is given the right to demand that the sum arrested be applied for payment of his claim. 2 Kames, Eq. 288, 289; Bell.

FORTHCOMING BOND. A bond conditioned on the forthcoming of property to answer such judgment as may be entered. If the property be forthcoming, no liability ensues. U. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Sabath, 286 Ill.App. 320, 3 N.E.2d 330, 335.

A bond given to a sheriff who has levied on property, conditioned that the property shall be forthcoming, i.e., produced, when required. On the giving of such bond, the goods are allowed to remain in the possession of the debtor. Hill v. Manser, 11 Grat., Va., 522; Nichols v. Chittenden, 14 Colo.App. 49, 59 P. 954; Burnham-Munger-Roos Dry Goods Co. v. Strahl, 102 Neb. 142, 166 N.W. 266.

FORTHWITH. Immediately; without delay, directly, hence within a reasonable time under the circumstances of the case; promptly and with reasonable dispatch. State ex rel. Board of Education of City of Tulsa v. Morley, 168 Okl. 259, 34 P.2d 258, 261; 1 Chit. Archb. Pr. (12th Ed.) 164. Within such time as to permit that which is to be done, to be done lawfully and according to the practical and ordinary course of things to be performed or accomplished. Harris v. Stewart, 187 Miss. 489, 193 So. 339, 342. The first opportunity offered. Abbott v. State, 117 Neb. 350, 220 N.W. 578, 579.

FORTIA. Force. In old English law. Force used by an accessory, to enable the principal to commit a crime, as by binding or holding a person while another killed him, or by aiding or counseling in any way, or commanding the act to be done. Bract. fols. 138, 138b.

According to Lord Coke, fortia was a word of art, and properly signified the furnishing of a weapon of force to do the fact, and by force whereof the fact was committed, and he that furnished it was not present when the fact was done. 2 Inst. 182.

FORTIA FRISCA. Fresh force (q. v.).

FORTILITY. In old English law, a fortified place; a bulwark. Cowell; 11 Hen. VII. c. 18.

FORTIOR. Lat. Stronger. A term applied, in the law of evidence, to that species of presumption, arising from facts shown in evidence, which is strong enough to shift the burden of proof to the opposite party. Burrill, Circ.Ev. 64, 66.

FORTIOR EST CUSTODIA LEGIS QUAM HOMINIS. 2 Rolle, 325. The custody of the law is stronger than that of man.

FORTIOR ET POTENTIOR EST DISPOSITIO LEGIS QUAM HOMINIS. The disposition of the law is of greater force and effect than that of man. Co.Litt. 234a; Shep.Touch. 302; 15 East, 178. The law in some cases overrides the will of the individual, and renders ineffectual or futile his expressed intention or contract. Broom, Max. 697.

FORTIORI. See A Fortiori.

FORTIS. Lat. Strong. Fortis et sana, strong and sound; staunch and strong; as a vessel. Townsh.Pl. 227.

FORTLETT. A place or port of some strength; a little fort. Old Nat. Brev. 45.
FORTUIT. In French law, accidental; fortuitous. Cas fortuit, a fortuitous event. Fortuiitement, accidentally; by chance; casually.

FORTUITOUS EVENT. In the civil law, that which happens by a cause which cannot be resisted. An unforeseen occurrence, not caused by either of the parties, nor such as they could prevent. In French it is called "cads fortuit." Civ. Code La. art. 3556, no. 15. There is a difference between a fortuitous event, or inevitable accident, and irresistible force. By the former, commonly called the 'act of God,' is meant any accident produced by physical causes which are irresistible; such as a loss by lightning or storms, by the perils of the seas, by inundations and earthquakes, or by sudden death or illness. By the latter is meant such an interposition of human agency as is, from its nature and power, absolutely uncontrollable. Of this nature are losses occasioned by the inroads of a hostile army, or by public enemies. Story, Baffin. § 25. In Workmen's Compensation Acts fortuitous event is accidental happening, or accident that takes place without design or expectation, or thing that happens from irresistible cause. The term is expressly defined in several acts. Stolp v. Department of Labor and Industries, 138 Wash. 685, 245 P. 20, 21; Stertz v. Industrial Insurance Commission of Washington, 91 Wash. 588, 158 P. 256, 259, Ann.Cas.1918B, 354; Zappala v. Industrial Ins. Commission, 82 Wash. 314, 144 P. 54, L.R.A.1916A, 295.

FORTUNA. Lat. Fortune; also treasure-trove. Jacob.

FORTUNAM FACIUNT JUDICEM. They make the judge. Co. Litt. 167. Spoken of the process of making partition among coparceners by drawing lots for the several purparts.

In English law, persons pretending or professing to tell fortunes, and punishable as rogues and vagabonds or disorderly persons. 4 Bl.Comm. 62.

FORTUNIUM. In old English law, a tournament or fighting with spears, and an appeal to fortune therein.

FORTY. In land laws and conveyancing, in those regions where grants, transfers, and deeds are made with reference to the subdivisions of the government survey, this term means forty acres of land in the form of a square, being the tract obtained by quartering a section of land (640 acres) and again quartering one of the quarters. Lente v. Clarke, 22 Fla. 515, 1 So. 149.

FORTY–DAYS COURT. In old English forest law, the court of attachment in forests, or woodmote court.

FORUM. Lat. A court of justice, or judicial tribunal; a place of jurisdiction; a place of litigation. 3 Story, 347. Place where remedy is pursued. Rubin v. Gallagher, 294 Mich. 124, 292 N.W. 584, 586.

In Roman law, the market place, or public paved court, in the city of Rome, where such public business was transacted as the assemblies of the people and the judicial trial of causes, and where also elections, markets, and the public exchange were held.

FORUM ACTUS. The forum of the act. The forum of the place where the act was done which is now called in question.

FORUM BOVARIUM. See Bovarius.

FORUM CONTENTIOSUM. A contentious forum or court; a place of litigation; the ordinary court of justice, as distinguished from the tribunal of conscience. 3 Bl.Comm. 211.

FORUM CONTRACTUS. The forum of the contract; the court of the place where a contract is made; the place where a contract is made, considered as a place of jurisdiction. 2 Kent, Comm. 463.

FORUM CONVENIENS. Place where testamen-

FORUM DOMESTICUM. A domestic forum or tribunal. The visitatorial power is called a "forum domesticum," calculated to determine, sine stipitu, all disputes that arise within themselves. 1 W.B1. 82.

FORUM DOMICILII. The forum or court of the domicile; the domicile of a defendant, considered as a place of jurisdiction. 2 Kent, Comm. 463.

FORUM ECCLESIATICUM. An ecclesiastical court. The spiritual jurisdiction, as distinguished from the secular.

FORUM LIGEANTIZE REI. The forum of defendant's allegiance. The court or jurisdiction of the country to which he owes allegiance.

FORUM NON CONVENIENS. The doctrine is patterned upon the right of the court in the exercise of its equitable powers to refuse the imposition upon its jurisdiction of the trial of cases even though the venue is properly laid if it appears that for the convenience of litigants and witnesses and in the interest of justice the action should be instituted in another forum where the action might have been brought. Hayes v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., D.C.Minn., 79 F.Supp. 821, 824. The doctrine presupposes at least two forums in which the defendant is amenable to process and fur-

FORUM ORIGINIS. The court of one’s nativity. The place of a person’s birth, considered as a place of jurisdiction.

FORUM REGIUM. The king’s court. St. Westm. 2, c. 43.

FORUM REI. This term may mean either (1) the forum of the defendant, that is, of his residence or domicile; or (2) the forum of the res or thing in controversy, that is, of the place where the property is situated. The ambiguity springs from the fact that rei may be the genitive of either reus or res.

FORUM REI GESTAZE. The forum or court of a res fiesta (thing done;) the place where an act is done, considered as a place of jurisdiction and remedy. 2 Kent, Comm. 463.

FORUM REI SIT2E. The court where the thing in controversy is situated. The place where the subject-matter in controversy is situated, considered as a place of jurisdiction. 2 Kent, Comm. 463.

FORUM SECULARE. A secular, as distinguished from an ecclesiastical or spiritual, court.

FORURTH. In old records, a long slip of ground. Cowell.

FORWARDING MERCHANT, or FORWARDER. One who receives and forwards goods, taking up on himself the expenses of transportation, for which he receives a compensation from the owners, having no concern in the vessels or wagons by which they are transported, and no interest in, the freight, and not being deemed a common carrier, but a mere warehouseman and agent. Story, Bailm. §§ 502, 509. Schloss v. Wood, 11 Colo. 287., 17 P. 910; Bush v. Miller, 13 Barb. N.Y. 488.

FOSSA. In the Civil law, a ditch; a receptacle of water, made by hand. Dig. 43, 14, 1, 5.

In Old English law, a ditch. A pit full of water, in which women committing felony were drowned. A grave or sepulcher. Spelman.

FOSSAGIUM. In old English law, the duty levied on the inhabitants for repairing the moat or ditch round a fortified town.

FOSSATORUM OPERATIO. In old English law, fosse-work; or the service of laboring, done by inhabitants and adjoining tenants, for the repair and maintenance of the ditches round a city or town, for which some paid a contribution, called “fossagium.” Cowell.

FOSSATUM. A dyke, ditch, or trench; a place inclosed by a ditch; a moat; a canal.

FOSSE-WAY, or FOSSE. One of the four ancient Roman ways through England. Spelman.

FOSSELLUM. A small ditch. Cowell.

FOSTER PARENT. One who has performed the duties of a parent to the child of another by rearing the child as his own child; “foster child.” In re Norman’s Estate, 209 Minn. 19, 295 N.W. 63, 66.

FOSTERAGE. Care of a foster child, brother, sister, parent, etc.—one considered as holding the relationship indicated in consequence of nursing and rearing, though not related by blood. In re Norman’s Estate, 295 N.W. 66, 609 Minn. 19.

FOSTERING. A ancient custom in Ireland, in which persons put away their children to fosterers. Fostering was held to be a stronger alliance than blood, and the foster children participated in the fortunes of their foster fathers. Mozley & Whitely.

FOSTERLAND. Land given, assigned, or allotted to the finding of food or victuals for any person or persons; as in monasteries for the monks, etc, Cowell; Blount.

FOSTERLEAN. The remuneration fixed for the rearing of a foster child; also the jointure of a wife. Jacob.

FOUJDAR. In Hindu law, under the Mogul gov- ernment a magistrate of the police over a large district, who took cognizance of all criminal matters within his jurisdiction, and sometimes was employed as receiver general of the revenues. Wharton.

FOUJDARRY COURT. In Hindu law, a tribunal for administering criminal law.

FOUND. A person is said to be found within a state when actually present therein. Patient removed to a sanitarium in county was "found" in county. In re Cash, 383 Ill. 409, 50 N.E.2d 487, 490. But only if a person is in a place voluntarily and not by reason of plaintiff's fraud, artifice, or trick for purpose of obtaining service. Shields v. Shields, 115 Mont. 140, 139 P.2d 528, 530, 531. It does not necessarily mean physical presence: defendant who, after removal of action for breach of contract to federal court, entered general appearance, defended on the merits, and filed counterclaim, was "found" in the district. Freeman v. Bee Mach. Co., Mass., 319 U.S. 448, 63 S.Ct. 1146, 1149, 87 L.Ed. 1509.

As applied to a corporation it is necessary that it be doing business in such state through an officer or agent or by statutory authority in such manner as to render it liable then to suit and to construct or substituted service of process. Ro- maine v. Ins. Co., C.C.Tenn., 55 F. 751; Venner v. Pennsylvania Steel Co. of New Jersey, D.C.N.J., 250 F. 292, 295; Haskell v. Aluminum Co. of America, D.C.Mass., 14 F.2d 864, 867. And to such an extent that actual presence is established. West- tor Theatres v. Warner Bros. Pictures, D.C.N.J., 41 F.Supp. 757, 760.

FOUNDATION. The founding or building of a college or hospital. The incorporation or endowment of a college or hospital is the foundation; and he who endows it with land or other property is the founder. Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518; Seagrave’s Appeal, 125 Pa. 362, 17 A. 412; Union Baptist Ass’n v. Hunn, 7 Tex.Civ.App. 249, 26 S.W. 755.

FOUNDED ON. To serve as a base or basis for. Keen v. Mid-Continent Petroleum Corp., D.C.Iowa, 58 F.Supp. 915, 922.

FOUNDER. The person who endows an eleemosynary corporation or institution, or supplies the funds for its establishment. See Foundation.

FOUNDERS’ SHARES. In English Company Law, shares issued to the founders of (or ven- dors to) a public company as a part of the con- sideration for the business, or concession, etc., taken over, and not forming a part of, the ordinary capital. As a rule, such shares only participate in profits after the payment of a fixed minimum dividend on paid-up capital. Encyc. Dict.

FOUNDEROSA. Founderous; out of repair, as a road. Cro. Car. 366.

FOUNDLING. A deserted or exposed infant; a child found without a parent or guardian, its relatives being unknown. It has a settlement in the district where found. State ex rel. Wilson v. Pierre, 155 La. 510, 99 So. 421.

FOUNDLING HOSPITALS. Charitable institu- tions which exist in most countries for taking care of infants forsaken by their parents, such being generally the offspring of illegal connections. The foundling hospital act in England is the 13 Geo. II. c. 29.

FOUR. Fr. In old French law, an oven or bake- house. Four banal, an oven, owned by the seignior of the estate, to which the tenants were obliged to bring their bread for baking. Also the proprie- tary right to maintain such an oven.

FOUR CORNERS. The face of a written instru- ment.

That which is contained on the face of a deed (without any aid from the knowledge of the circumstances under which it is made) is said to be within its four corners, be- cause every deed is still supposed to be written on one en- tire skin, and so to have but four corners.

To look at the four corners of an instrument is to ex-amine the whole of it, so as to construe it as a whole, without reference to any one part more than another. 2 Smith, Lead.Cas. 295.

FOUR SEAS. The seas surrounding England. These were divided into the Western, including the Scotch and Irish; the Northern, or North sea; the Eastern, being the German ocean; the Southern, being the British channel.

FOURCHER. Fr. To fork. This was a method of delaying an action anciently resorted to by defendants when two of them were joined in the suit. Instead of appearing together, each would appear in turn and cast an essoin for the other, thus postponing the trial.

FOURTEENTH AMENDMENT. The Fourteenth Amendment of the constitution of the United States.

It became a part of the organic law July 28, 1868, and its importance entitles it to special mention. It creates or at least recognizes for the first time a citizenship of the United States, as distinct from that of the states; forbids the making or enforcement by any state of any law abridging the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States; and secures all "persons" against any state action which is either deprivation of life, liberty, or property without due process of law or denial of the equal protec- tion of the laws.

FOWLS OF WARREN. Such fowls as are pre- served under the game laws in warrens. According to Manwood, these are partridges and pheas- ants. According to Coke, they are partridges, rails, quails, woodcocks, pheasants, mallards, and herons. Co. Litt. 233.

FOX’S LIBEL ACT. In English law, this was the statute 52 Geo. III. c. 60, which secured to juries, upon the trial of indictments for libel, the right of pronouncing a general verdict of guilty or not guilty upon the whole matter in issue, and no longer bound them to find a verdict of guilty on proof of the publication of the paper charged to be a libel, and of the sense ascribed to it in the: indictment. Wharton.

FOY. L. Fr. Faith; allegiance; fidelity.

FR. A Latin abbreviation for "fragmentum," a fragment, used in citations to the Digest or Pan-dects in the Corpus Juris Civilis of Justinian, the several extracts from juristic writings of which It is composed being so called.

FRACTIO. Lat. A breaking; division; fraction; a portion of a thing less than the whole.

FRACTION. A breaking, or breaking up; a fragment or broken part; a portion of a thing, less than the whole. Jory v. Palace Dry Goods Co., 30
Or. 196, 46 P. 786.

FRACTION OF A DAY. A portion of a day. The dividing a day. Generally, the law does not allow the fraction of a day. 2 Bl.Comm. 141.

FRACTIONAL. As applied to tracts of land, particularly townships, sections, quarter sections, and other divisions according to the government survey, and also mining claims, this term means that the exterior boundary lines are laid down to include the whole of such a division or such a claim, but that the tract in question does not measure up to the full extent or include the whole acreage, because a portion of it is cut off by an overlapping survey, a river or lake, or some other external interference. Tolleston Club v. State, 38 N.E. 214, 141 Ind. 197; Parke v. Meyer, 28 Ark. 287; Goitermann v. Schiermeyer, 111 Mo. 404, 19 S.W. 487.
Any irregular division whether containing more or less than conventional amount of acreage. Gray-sonia-Nashville Lumber Co. v. Wright, 117 Ark.
151, 175 S.W. 405; South Florida Farms Co. v.
Goodno, 84 Fla. 532, 94 So. 672, 675.

FRACTIONEM DIEI NON RECIPIT LEX. Lofft, 572. The law does not take notice of a portion of a day.

FRACTURA NAVIUM. Lat. The breaking or wreck of ships; the same as naufragium, (q. v.)

FRAGMENTA. Lat. Fragments. A name sometimes applied (especially in citations) to the Digest or Pandects in the Corpus Juris Civilis of Justini-an, as being made up of numerous extracts or "fragments" from the writings of various jur-FRAIS. Fr. Expense; charges; costs. Frais d'un procès costs of a suit.

FRAIS DE JUSTICE. In French and Canadian law, costs incurred incidentally to the action.

FRAIS JUSQU'A BORD. Fr. In French commercial law, expenses to the board; expenses incurred on a shipment of goods, in packing, cartage, commissons, etc., up to the point where they are actually put on board the vessel. Bartels v. Redfield, C.C.N.Y., 16 F. 336.

FRAME-UP. Conspiracy or plot, especially for evil purpose, as to incriminate person on false evi-

FRAMED. When used to describe evidence, word is generally accepted as implying that willful perjurers, suborned by and conspiring with parties in interest to litigation, are swearing or have sworn to matters without any basis in fact. Tri-State Transit Co. of Louisiana v. Westbrook, 207

Ark. 270, 180 S.W.2d 121. 125.

FRANC. A French coin of the value of a little over eighteen cents. Levy v. Cleveland, C., C. &

FRANC ALEU. In French feudal law, an allod; free inheritance; an estate held free of any services except such as were due to the sovereign.

FRANC TENANCIER. In French law, a freeholder.

FRANCHILANUS. A freeman. Chart. Hen. IV.
A free tenant. Spelman.

FRANCHISE. A special privilege conferred by government on individual or corporation, and which does not belong to citizens of country generally of common right. Elliott v. City of Eugene, 135 Or. 108, 294 P. 358, 360. In England it is defined to be a royal privilege in the hands of a subject.

A "franchise," as used by Blackstone in defining quo warranto, (3 Corn. 262 [4th Am. Ed.] 322], had reference to a royal privilege or branch of the king’s prerogative subsisting in the hands of the subject, and must arise from the king’s grant, or be held by prescription, but today we understand a franchise to be some special privilege conferred by government on an individual, natural or artificial, which is not enjoyed by its citizens in general. State v.
Fernandez, 106 Fla. 779, 143 So. 638, 639, 86 A.L.R. 240.

In this country a franchise is a privilege or immunity of a public nature, which cannot be legally exercised without legislative grant. To be a corporation is a franchise.
The various powers conferred on corporations are franchises. The execution of a policy of insurance by an insurance company, and the issuing a bank-note by an incorporated bank, are franchises. People v. Utica Ins. Co., 15 Johns., N.Y., 387, 8 Am.Dec. 243. But it does not embrace the property acquired by the exercise of the fran-255, 4 Am. Rep. 63. Nor involve interest in land acquired by grantee. Whitbeck v. Funk, 140 Or. 70, 12 P.2d 1019, 1020. In a popular sense, the political rights of subjects and citizens are franchises, such as the right of suffrage, etc. Pierce v. Emery, 32 N.H. 484; State v. Black Diamond Co., 97 Ohio St. 24, 119 N.E. 195, 199, L.R.A.1918E, 352.

Elective Franchise. The right of suffrage; the right or privilege of voting in public elections.

Exclusive Franchise. See Exclusive Privilege or Franchise.

General and Special. The charter of a corporation is its "general" franchise, while a "special" franchise consists in any rights granted by the public to use property for a public use but with private profit. Lord v. Equitable Life Personal Franchise. A franchise of corporate existence, or one which authorizes the formation and existence of a corporation, is sometimes called a "personal" franchise, as distinguished from a "property" franchise, which authorizes a corporation so formed to apply its property to some particular enterprise or exercise some special privilege in its employment, as, for example, to construct and operate a railroad. See Sandham v. Nye, 9 Misc.Rep. 541, 30 N.Y.S. 552.

Secondary Franchises. The franchise of corporate existence being sometimes called the "primary" franchise of a corporation, its "secondary" franchises are the special and peculiar rights, privileges, or grants which it may receive under its charter or from a municipal corporation, such as the right to use the public streets, exact tolls, collect fares, etc. State v. Topeka Water Co., 61 Kan. 547, 60 P. 337; Virginia Canon Toll Road Co. v. People, 22 Colo. 429, 45 P. 398, 37 L.R.A. 711. The franchises of a corporation are divisible into (1) corporate or general franchises; and (2) "special or secondary franchises." The former is the franchise to exist as a corporation, while the latter are certain rights and privileges conferred upon existing corporations. Gulf Refining Co. v. Cleveland Trust Co., 166 Misc. 759, 108 So. 158, 160.

Special Franchises. See Secondary Franchises, supra.

FRANCHISE TAX. A tax on the franchise of a corporation, that is, on the right and privilege of carrying on business in the character of a corporation, for the purposes for which it was created, and in the conditions which surround it. In re Commercial Safe Deposit Co. of Buffalo, 148 Misc. 527, 266 N.Y.S. 626.

Though the value of the franchise, for purposes of taxation, may be measured by the amount of business done, or the amount of earnings or dividends, or by the total value of the capital or stock of the corporation in excess of its tangible assets, a franchise tax is not a tax on either property, capital, stock, earnings, or dividends. Home Ins. Co. v. New York, 134 U.S. 594, 10 S.Ct. 593, 33 L.Ed. 1025; Worth v. Petersburg R. Co., 89 N.C. 305; People v. Knight, 174 N.Y. 475, 67 N.E. 65, 63 L.R.A. 87; Greene v. Louisville & L.R. Co., 244 U.S. 499, 37 S.Ct. 673, 676, 61 L.Ed. 1280, Ann.Cas. 1917E, 88; American Refining Co. v. Staples, Tex.Com.App., 269 S.W. 420, 421. Nor a tax on franchise in technical sense, but on all intangible property of such a corporation, not otherwise taxed, used in state as component part of corporation’s entire system. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Weaver, D.C.Neb., 5 F.Supp. 493, 497.

It is tax on intangible values inhering to business and added value given to tangible property, being "ad valorem" and distinguished from "excise" or "privilege" tax. State Tax Commission v. Petroleum Exploration, 253 Ky. 119, 68 S.W.2d 777.

FRANCIGENA. A man born in France. A designation formerly given to aliens in England. See Frenchman.

FRANCUS. L. Lat. Free; a freeman; a Frank. See Frenchman.

FRANCUS BANCUS. Free bench (q. v.).

FRANCUS BANCUS. Free bench (q. v.).

FRANCUS HOMO. In old European law. A free man. Domesday.

FRANCUS PLEGIUS. In old English law, a frank pledge, or free pledge. See Frank-Pledge.

FRANCUS TENENS. A freeholder. See Frank-Tenement.

FRANK, V. To send matter through the public mails free of postage, by a personal or official privilege.

FRANK, adj. In old English law, free. Occurring in several compounds.

FRANK-ALMOIGNE. In English law, free alms. A spiritual tenure whereby religious corporations, aggregate or sole, held lands of the donor to them and their successors forever.

They were discharged of all other except religious services, and the trinoda necessitas. It differs from tenure by divine service, in that the latter required the performance of certain divine services, whereas the former, as its name imports, is free. This tenure is expressly excepted in the 12 Eth. II. c. 24, § 7. It therefore still subsists in some few instances. 2 Broom & H. Comm. 203.

FRANK BANK. In old English law, free bench. Litt. § 166; Co. Litt. 110b. See Free-Bench.

FRANK-CHASE. A liberty of free chase enjoyed by any one, whereby all other persons having ground within that compass are forbidden to cut down wood, etc., even in their own demesnes, to the prejudice of the owner of the liberty. Cowell. See Chase.

FRANK-FEE. Freehold lands exempted from all services, but not from homage; lands held otherwise than in ancient demesne. That which a man holds to himself and his heirs, and not by such service as is required in ancient demesne, according to the custom of the manor. Cowell.

FRANK FERM. In English law, a species of estate held in socage, said by Britton to be "lands and tenements whereof the nature of the fee is changed by foewiment out of chivalry for certain yearly services, and in respect whereof neither homage, ward, marriage, nor relief can be demanded." Britt. c. 66; 2 Bl.Comm. 80.

FRANK-FOLD. In old English law, free-fold; a privilege for the lord to have all the sheep of his tenants and the inhabitants within his seigniory, in his fold, in his demesnes, to manure his land. Keilw. 198.

FRANK-LAW. An obsolete expression signifying the rights and privileges of a citizen, or the liberties and civic rights of a freeman.

FRANK-MARRIAGE. A species of entailed estates, in English law, now grown out of use, but still capable of subsisting.

When tenements are given by one to another, together with a wife, who is a daughter or cousin of the donor, to hold in frank-marriage, the donees shall have the tenements to them and the heirs of their two bodies begotten, i.e., in special tail. For the word "frank-marriage," ex ur termini, both creates and limits an inheritance, not only supplying words of descent, but also terms of procreation. The donees are liable to no service except fealty, and a reserved rent would be void, until the fourth degree of consanguinity be passed between the issues of the donor and donee, when they were capable by the law of the church of intermarrying. Litt. § 19; 2 Bl.Comm. 115.

FRANK-PLEDGE. In old English law, a pledge or surety for freemen; that is, the pledge, or corporate responsibility, of all the inhabitants of a tithing for the general good behavior of each free-born citizen above the age of fourteen, and for his being forthcoming to answer any infrac tion of the law. Terms de la Ley; Cowell.
FRANK-TENANT. A freeholder. Litt. § 91.

FRANK-TENEMENT. In English law, a free tenement, freeholding, or freehold. 2 Bl.Comm. 61, 62, 104; 1 Step. Comm. 217; Bract. fol. 207. Used to denote both the tenure and the estate.

FRANKING PRIVILEGE. The privilege of sending certain matter through the public mails without payment of postage, in pursuance of a personal or official privilege.

FRANKLEYN (spelled, also, "Francling" and "Franklin"). A freeman; a freeholder; a gentleman. Blount; Cowell.

FRASSETUM. In old English law, a wood or wood-ground where ash-trees grow. Co. Litt. 4b.

FRATER. In the civil law, a brother. Frater consanguineus, a brother having the same father, but born of a different mother. Frater uterinus, a brother born of the same mother, but by a different father. Frater nutritius, a bastard brother.

FRATER FRATRI UTERINO NON SUCEDET IN HEREDITATE PATERNÆ. A brother shall not succeed a uterine brother in the paternal inheritance. 2 Bl.Comm. 223; Fortes de Laud. c. 5. A maxim of the common law of England, now superseded by the statute 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 106, 9. See Broom, Max. 530.

FRATERIA. In old records, a fraternity, brotherhood, or society of religious persons, who were mutually bound to pray for the good health and life, etc., of their living brethren, and the souls of those that were dead. Cowell.

FRATERNAL. Brotherly; relating or belonging to a fraternity or an association of persons formed for mutual aid and benefit, but not for profit. In re Mason Tire & Rubber Co., 56 App.D.C. 170, 11 F. 2d 556, 557.

FRATERNAL BENEFIT ASSOCIATION. One whose members have adopted the same, or a very similar, calling, avocation, or profession, or who are working in unison to accomplish some worthy object, and who for that reason have banded themselves together as an association or society to aid and assist one another, and to promote the common cause. Alpha Rho Alumni Ass’n v. City of New Brunswick, 126 N.J.L. 233, 18 A.2d 68, 70. An association having a representative form of work for the meeting of its chapters, or other subordinate bodies. Fain v. Feldman, 191 Ga. 519, 13 S.E.2d 179, 181. A society or voluntary association organized and carried on for the mutual aid and benefit of its members, not for profit; which ordinarily has a lodge system, a ritualistic form of work, and a representative government, makes provision for the payment of death benefits, and (sometimes) for benefits in case of accident, sickness, or old age, the funds therefor being derived from dues paid or assessments levied on the members. National Union v. Marlow, Mo., 74 F. 778, 21 C.C.A. 89; Walker v. Giddings, 103 Mich. 344, 61 N.W. 512.

FRATERNAL INSURANCE. The form of life (or accident) insurance furnished by a fraternal beneficial association, consisting in the payment to a member, or his heirs in case of death, of a stipulated sum of money, out of funds raised for that purpose by the payment of dues or assessments by all the members of the association.

FRATERNIA. A fraternity or brotherhood.

In American colleges, a student organization, either a nationally chartered society comprising many affiliated chapters or a single chapter in one institution formed chiefly to promote friendship and welfare among the members, and usually having secret rites and a name consisting of Greek letters. Woman’s Club of Little Falls v. Township of Little Falls, 20 N.J.Misc. 278, 26 A.2d 739, 741; Alpha Rho Alumni Ass’n v. City of New Brunswick, 126 N.J.L. 233, 18 A.2d 68, 71.

In old English law, “some people of a place united together in respect to a mystery or business into a company, and their laws and ordinances cannot bind strangers.” Cuddon v. Eastwick, 1 Salk. 192.

FRATRES CONJURATI. Sworn brothers or companions for the defense of their sovereign, or for other purposes. Hoved. 445.

FRATRES PYES. In old English law, certain friars who wore white and black garments. Walsingham, 124.

FRATRIAGE. A younger brother’s inheritance.

FRATRICIDE. One who has killed a brother or sister; also the killing of a brother or sister.

FRAUD. An intentional perversion of truth for the purpose of inducing another in reliance upon it to part with some valuable thing belonging to him or to surrender a legal right; a false representation of a matter of fact, whether by words or by conduct, by false or misleading allegations, presentation of a matter of fact, whether by words or by conduct, by false or misleading allegations, or by concealment of that which should have been disclosed, which deceives and is intended to deceive another so that he shall act upon it to his legal injury. Brainerd Dispatch Newspaper Co. v. Crow Wing County, 196 Minn. 194, 264 N.W. 779, 780. Any kind of artifice employed by one person to deceive another. Goldstein v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of U. S., 160 Misc. 364, 289 N.Y.S. 1064, 1067. A generic term, embracing all multifarious means which human ingenuity can devise, and which are resorted to by one individual to get advantage over another by false suggestions or by suppression of truth, and includes all surprise, trick, cunning, dissembling, and any unfair way by which another is cheated. Johnson v. McDonald, 170 Okl. 117, 39 P.2d 150. “Bad faith” and “fraud” are synonymous, and also synonyms of dishonesty, infidelity, faithlessness, perfidy, unfair-

It consists of some deceitful practice or willful device, resorted to with intent to deprive another of his right, or by his wrong to injure him in his property. As distinguished from negligence, it is always positive, intentional. Maher v. Hibernia Ins. Co., 67 N.Y. 292; Alexander v. Church, 53 Conn., 561, 4 A. 103; Studer v. Bleistein, 115 N.Y. 316, 21 N.E. 443; Testa v. Pouge, 212 La. 1026, 31 So. 2d 702; Southern States Finance Co., 191 N.C. 710, 133 S.E. 85, 88. It comprises all acts, omissions, and concealments involving a breach of a legal or equitable duty and resulting in damage to another. Coppo v. Coppo, 163 Misc. 249, 297 N.Y.S. 744, 750. And includes anything calculated to deceive, whether it be a single act or combination of circumstances, whether the suppression of truth or the suggestion of what is false, whether it be by direct false statements by innuendo, by speech or by silence, by word of mouth, or by look or gesture. People v. Gilmore, 345 Ill. 28, 177 N.E. 710, 717. Fraud, as applied to contracts, is the cause of an error bearing on the contents thereof. Joined v. Joiner, 3 Kan.App. 27, 269 Ill. 234, 109 N.E. 1035, 1038. Allen v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 190 N.C. 397, 130 S.E. 40, 43.

FRAUD ORDER. A name given to orders issued by the postmaster general, under Rev.St. §§ 3929, 4041, 39 U.S.C.A. §§ 259, 732, for preventing the use of the mails as an agency for conducting schemes for obtaining money or property by means of false or fraudulent pretences, etc.

They are not restricted to schemes which lack all the elements of an actual fraud, for they are preventive, and do not stop fraudulent acts after they have been committed. They may be issued at the request of a party or on the petition of the United States. They are not required to have the signature of the United States attorney. They forbid the postmaster to execute any order which may be entered upon the register of the postoffice. The fraud order is issued to the postmaster of the office involved, or to his authorized agent.

FRAUDULENT. Based on fraud; proceeding from or characterized by fraud; tainted by fraud; done, made, or effected with a purpose or design to carry out a fraud. For "False and Fraudulent" and "False or Fraudulent Claim," see those titles.

FRAUDULENT ALIENATION. In a general sense, the transfer of property with an intent to defraud creditors, lienors, or others. In a particular sense, the act of an administrator who wastes the assets of the estate by giving them away or selling at a gross undervalue. Rhame v. Lewis, 13 Rich.Eq., S.C., 269.

FRAUDULENT ALIENEE. One who knowingly receives from an administrator assets of the estate under circumstances which make it a fraudulent alienation on the part of the administrator. Rhame v. Lewis, 13 Rich.Eq., S.C., 269.

FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCE. A conveyance or transfer of property, the object of which is to defraud a creditor, or hinder or delay him, or to put such property beyond his reach. Seymour v. Wilson, 14 N.Y. 569; Lockyer v. De Hart, 6 N.J.L. 458; Surratt v. Eskridge, 131 Va. 325, 108 S.E. 677, 679; Dean v. Davis, 242 U.S. 438, 37 S.Ct. 130, 61 L.Ed. 419. Conveyance made with intent to avoid some duty or debt due by or incumbent on person making transfer. Farmers Elevator Co. v. Peck, 134 Neb. 305, 278 N.W. 499, 501.

FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCES, STATUTES OF. 13 Eliz. c. 5, made perpetual by 29 Eliz. c. 5; and the statute 27 Eliz. c. 4, made perpetual by 29 Eliz. c. 18.

FRAUDULENT OR DISHONEST ACT. One which involves bad faith, a breach of honesty, a want of integrity, or moral turpitude. Hartford Acc. & Indem. Co. v. Singer, 185 Va. 620, 39 S.E. 2d 505, 507, 508.

FRAUDULENT PREFERENCES. In English law, every conveyance or transfer of property or charge thereon made, every judgment made, every obligation incurred, and every judicial proceeding taken or suffered by any person unable to pay his debts as they become due from his own moneys, in favor of any creditor, with a view of giving such creditor a preference over other creditors, shall be deemed fraudulent and void if the debtor become bankrupt within three months. 32 & 33 Vict. c. 71, § 92.

FRAUDULENT REPRESENTATION. A false statement as to material fact, made with intent that another rely thereon, which is believed by other party and on which he relies and by which he is induced to act and does act to his injury, and statement is fraudulent if speaker knows statement to be false or if it is made with utter disregard of its truth or falsity. Osborne v. Simmons, Mo.App., 23 S.W.2d 1102, 1104.

As basis for law action, establishment of representation, falsity, scienter, deception, and injury, is required. Gray v. Shell Petroleum Corporation, 212 Iowa, 825, 237 N.W. 460, 463.

FRAUNC, FRAUNCH, FRAUNKE. See Frank.

FRAUNCHISE. L. Fr. A franchise.

FRAUS. Lat. Fraud. More commonly called, in the civil law, "dolus," and "dolus malus" (q. v.). A distinction, however, was sometimes made between "fraus" and "dolus;" the former being held to be of the most extensive import. Calvin.

FRAUS DANS LOCUM CONTRACTUI. A misrepresentation or concealment of some fact that is material to the contract, and had the truth regarding which been known the contract would not have been made as made, is called a "fraud dans locum contractui;" e., a fraud occasioning the contract, or giving place or occasion for the contract.

FRAUS EST CELARE FRAUDEM. It is a fraud to conceal a fraud. 1 Vern. 240; 1 Story, Eq. Jur. §§ 389, 390.

FRAUS EST ODIOSA ET NON PRIESUMENDA. Fraud is odious, and not to be presumed. Cro. Car. 550.

FRAUS ET DOLUS NEMINI PATROCINARI DEBENT. Fraud and deceit should defend or excuse no man. 3 Coke, 78; Fleta, lib. 1, c. 13, § 15; Id. lib. 6, c. 6, § 5.

FRAUS ET JUS NUNQUAM COHABITAN. Wing. 680. Fraud and justice never dwell together.

FRAUS LATET IN GENERALIBUS. Fraud lies hid in general expressions.

FRAUS LEGIS. Lat. In the civil law, fraud of law; fraud upon law. See In Fraudem Legis.
FRAUS MERETUR FRAUDEM. Plowd. 100. Fraud merits fraud.

FRAXINETUM. In old English law, a wood of ashes; a place where ashes grow. Co. Litt. 4b; Shep. Touch. 95.

FRAY. See Affray.

FRECTUM. In old English law, freight. Quod frectum navium suarum, as to the freight of his vessels. Blount.

FREDNITE. In old English law, a liberty to hold courts and take up the fines for beating and wounding. To be free from fines. Cowell.

FREDSTOLE. Sanctuaries; seats of peace.

FREDUM. A fine paid for obtaining pardon when the peace had been broken. Spelman; Blount.

A sum paid the magistrate for protection against the right of revenge.

FREDWIT, or FREDWITE. k liberty to hold courts and take up the fines for beating and wounding. Jacob, Law Dict.

FREE. Not subject to legal constraint of another.

Unconstrained; having power to follow the dictates of his own will. Not subject to the dominion of another. Not compelled to involuntary servitude. Used in this sense as opposed to "slave."

Not bound to service for a fixed term of years; in distinction to being bound as an apprentice.

Enjoying full civic rights.

Available to all citizens alike without charge; as a free school.

Available for public use without charge or toll; as a free bridge.

Not despotic; assuring liberty; defending individual rights against encroachment by any person or class; instituted by a free people; said of governments, institutions, etc. Webster.

Certain, and also consistent with an honorable degree in life; as free services, in the feudal law.

Confined to the person possessing, instead of being shared with others; as a free fishery.

Not engaged in a war as belligerent or ally; neutral; as in the maxim, "Free ships make free goods."

FREE ALMS. The name of a species of tenure. See Frank-almoigne.

FREE AND CLEAR (and like phrases). The title to property is said to be "free and clear" when it is not incumbered by any liens; but it is said that an agreement to convey land "free and clear" is satisfied by a conveyance passing a good title. Meyer v. Madreperla, 68 N.J.L. 258, 53 A. 477, 96 Am.St.Rep. 536; Smith v. Toth, 61 Ind.App. 42, 111 N.E. 442, 444; Grisso v. MiIsey, 104 Okl. 173, 230 P. 883, 889.

FREE AND EQUAL. As used in a constitutional provision that election shall be free and equal, the word "free" means that every one entitled to vote should have a reasonable opportunity to do so., a reasonable manner of doing so, etc., and the word "equal" means that every vote cast should have its decisive effect in the selection or choice to be made at the election. McKinney v. Barker, 180 Ky. 526, 203 S.W. 303, 304, L.R.A.1918E, 581. The term means that the voter shall not be physically restrained in the exercise of his right of franchise, by either civil or military authority, and that every voter shall have the same right as every other voter. Asher v. Arnett, 280 Ky. 347, 132 S.W.2d 772, 775.

A "free and equal" election is one at which every person entitled to vote may do so if he desires, although it can hardly be said that, if only a few are prevented from voting, the election is not free and equal in the constitutional sense. Wallbrecht v. Ingram, 164 Ky. 463, 175 S.W. 1022, 1026.

It is the essence of free elections that the right of suffrage be untrammeled and unfettered, and that the ballot represent and express the electors' own intelligent judgment and conscience, and there can be no "free election" unless there is freedom of opinion. An election to be free must be without coercion of any description or any deterrent from the elector's exercise of his free will by means of any intimidation or influence whatever, although there is no violence or physical coercion. Neelley v. Farr, 61 Colo. 485, 158 P. 458, 467; Ann.Cas.1918A, 23.

FREE BENCH. A widow's dower out of copyholds to which she is entitled by the custom of some manors. It is regarded as an excrescence growing out of the husband's interest, and is indeed a continuance of his estate. Wharton.

FREE BORD. In old records, an allowance of land over and above a certain limit or boundary, as so much beyond or without a fence. Cowell; Blount. The right of claiming that quantity. Termes de la Ley.

FREE BOROUGH MEN. Such great men as did not engage, like the frank-pledge men, for their decennier. Jacob.

FREE CHAPEL. In English ecclesiastical law, a place of worship, so called because not liable to the visitation of the ordinary. It is always of royal foundation, or founded at least by private persons to whom the crown has granted the privilege. 1 Burn, Ecc. Law, 298.

FREE COURSE. In admiralty law, a vessel having the wind from a favorable quarter is said to sail on a "free course," or said to be "going free" when she has a fair (following) wind and her yards braced in. The Queen Elizabeth, D.C.N.Y., 100 F. 876.

FREE ELECTION. Where each voter is allowed to cast his ballot as his own conscience dictates. Moran v. Bowley, 347 Ill. 148, 179 N.E. 526, 531.

See Free and Equal, supra.

FREE ENTRY, EGRESS, AND REGRESS. An expression used to denote that a person has the right to go on land again and again as often as may be reasonably necessary. Thus, in the case of a tenant entitled to emblements.

FREE FISHERY. See Fishery.

FREE ICE. All ice in navigable streams not included within that authorized to be appropriated is sometimes called "free" ice, and does not belong to the adjacent riparian owners, but to the person who first appropriates it. Hudson River Ice Co. v. Brady, 158 App.Div. 142, 142 N.Y.S. 819, 821.

FREE LAW. A term formerly used in England to designate the freedom of civil rights enjoyed by freemen. It was liable to forfeiture on conviction of treason or an infamous crime. McCafferty v. Guyer, 59 Pa. 116.

FREE MEN. Before the Norman Conquest, a free man might be a man of small estate dependent on a lord. Every man, not himself a lord, was bound to have a lord or be treated as unworthy of a free man's right. Among free men there was a difference in their estimation for Wergild. See Liber Homo.

FREE ON BOARD. Means that the subject of sale is to be loaded for shipment without expense to the buyer. Olsen v. McMaken & Pentzien, 139 Neb. 506, 297 N.W. 830, 832.

FREE SCHOOL. Where no charge is made for tuition. Vincent v. County Board of Education of Talladega County, 222 Ala. 216, 131 So. 893, 894.

FREE SERVICES. In feudal and old English law, such feudal services as were not unbecoming the character of a soldier or a freeman to perform; as to serve under his lord in the wars, to pay a sum of money, and the like. 2 Bl.Comm. 60, 61.

FREE SHAREHOLDERS. The free shareholders of a building and loan association are subscribers to its capital stock who are not borrowers from the association. Steinberger v. Independent B. & S. Ass'n, 84 Md. 625, 36 A. 439.

FREE SHIPS. In international law, ships of a neutral nation. The phrase "free ships shall make free goods" is often inserted in treaties, meaning that goods, even though belonging to an enemy, shall not be seized or confiscated, if found in neutral ships. Wheat. Int. Law, 507, et seq.

FREE SOCAGE. See Socage.

FREE TENURE. Tenure by free services; freehold tenure.

FREE WARREN. See Warren.

FREE WHITE PERSONS. "Free white persons" referred to in Naturalization Act, as amended by Act July 14, 1870, has meaning naturally given to it when first used in 1 Stat. 103, c. 3, meaning all persons belonging to the European races then commonly counted as white, and their descendants, including such descendants in other countries to which they have emigrated. It includes all European Jews, more or less intermixed with peoples of Celtic, Scandinavian, Teutonic, Iberian, Latin, Greek, and Slavic descent. It includes Magyars, Lapps, and Finns, and the Basques and Albanians. It includes the mixed Latin, Celtic-Iberian, and Moorish inhabitants of Spain and Portugal, the mixed Greek, Latin, Phoenician, and North African inhabitants of Sicily, and the mixed Slav and Tarter inhabitants of South Russia. It does not mean Caucasian race, Aryan race, or Indo-European races, nor the mixed Indo-European, Dravidian, Semitic and Mongolian peoples who inhabit Persia. A Syrian of Asiatic birth and descent will not be entitled to become a naturalized citizen of the United States as being a free white person. Ex parte Shahid, D.C.S.C., 205 F. 812, 813; United States v. Cartozian, D.C.Or., 6 F.2d 919, 921; Ex parte Dow, D.C.S.C., 211 F. 486, 487; In re En Sk Song, D.C.Cal., 271 F. 23. Nor a native-born Filipino. U.S. v. Javier, 22 F.2d 879, 880, 57 App.D.C. 303. Nor a native of India who belonged to Hindu race. Kharait Ram Samras v. United States, C.C.A.Cal., 125 F.2d 879, 881.

FREE WOMAN OF COLOR. Term, up to the time of the Civil War, applied to all persons not of the white race, including Indians. Sunseri v. Cassagne, 191 La. 209, 185 So. 1, 4.

FREEDMAN. In Roman law, one who was set free from a state of bondage; an emancipated slave. The word is used in the same sense in the United States, respecting negroes who were formerly slaves. Fairfield v. Lawson, 50 Conn. 513, 47 Am. Rep. 669; Davenport v. Caldwell, 10 S.C. 333.

FREEDOM. The state of being free; liberty; self-determination; absence of restraint; the opposite of slavery.

The power of acting, in the character of a moral personality, according to the dictates of the will, without other check, hindrance, or prohibition than such as may be imposed by just and necessary laws and the duties of social life.

The prevalence, in the government and constitution of a country, of such a system of laws and institutions as secure civil liberty to the individual citizen.

FREEDOM OF RELIGION. Embraces the concept of freedom to believe and freedom to act, the first of which is absolute, but the second of which remains subject to regulation for protection of society. Oney v. Oklahoma City, C.C.A.Okl., 120 F.2d 879, 881.

FREEDOM OF SPEECH AND OF THE PRESS. See Liberty.

FREEDOM OF THE CITY, In English law, this phrase signifies immunity from county jurisdiction, and the privilege of corporate taxation and self-government held under a charter from the crown. This freedom is enjoyed of right, subject to the provision of the charter, and is often conferred as an honor on princes and other distinguished individuals. The freedom of a city carries the parliamentary franchise. Encyc. Dict.

The rights and privileges possessed by theburgesses or freemen of a municipal corporation under the old English law; now of little importance, and conferred chiefly as a mark of honor. See 11 Chic. L. J. 357.

The phrase has no place in American law, and as frequently used in addresses of welcome — when the persons visiting an American city, particularly by mayors, distinguished individuals. The freedom of a city dictionary, and the privilege of corporate taxation to Andrew Hamilton of Philadelphia as quoted at large in FREEHOLD. An estate for life or in fee. Interstate Realty Co. v. Allen, 60 Idaho 228, 90 P. 2d 704, 706, 122 A.L.R. 647.

A "freehold estate" is a right of title to land Cohn v. Litwin, 311 Ill.App. 55, 35 N.E.2d 410, 413.

An estate in land or other real property, of uncertain duration; that is, either of inheritance or which may possibly last for the life of the tenant at the least, (as distinguished from a leasehold; ) and held by a free tenure, (as distinguished from copyhold or villeinage.) Nevitt v. Woodburn, 175 Ill. 376, 51 N.E. 593; Railroad Co. v. Hemphill, 35 Miss. 22;Ralston Steel Car Co. v. Ralston, 112 Ohio St. 306, 147 N.E. 513, 516, 39 A.L.R. 334; Lakeside Irr. Co. v. Markham Irr. Co., 116 Tex. 65, 285 S.W. 593, 596.

A 99-year lease renewable forever is a "freehold estate". Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Carman, 71 Ohio App. 508, 50 N.E.2d 358, 359.

Such an interest in lands of frank-tenement as may endure not only during the owner's life, but which is cast after his death upon the persons who successively represent him, according to certain rules elsewhere explained. Such persons are called "heirs," and here they are to represent the "ancestor." When the interest extends beyond the ancestor's life, it is called a "freehold of inheritance," and, when it only endures for the ancestor's life, it is a freehold not of inheritance.

An estate to be a freehold must possess these two qualities; (1) Immobility, that is, the property must be either land or some interest issuing out of or annexed to land; and (2) indeterminate duration, for, if the utmost period of time to which an estate can endure be fixed and determined, it cannot be a freehold. Wharton.

Freehold in deed is the real possession of land or tenements in fee, fee-tail, or for life. Freehold in law is the right to such tenements before entry. The term has also been applied to those offices which a man holds in fee or for life. Mozl. & W. Diet.; 1 Washb. R. P. 71, 637. See Gage v. Scales, 100 Ill. 221; State v. Ragland, 75 N.C. 12, L.R. 11 Eq. 454; Liberum Tenementum.

Determinable freeholds are estates for life, which may determine upon future contingencies before the life for which they are created expires, as if an estate be granted to a woman during her widowhood, or to a man until he be promoted to a benefice. In these and similar cases, whenever the contingency happens,—when the wife marries, or when the grantee obtains the benefit,—the respective estates are absolutely determined and gone. Yet, while they subsist, they are reckoned estates for life; because they may by possibility last for life, if the contingencies upon which they are to determine do not sooner happen. 2 Bl. Comm. 121.

Freehold in law is a freehold which has descended to a man, upon which he may enter at pleasure, but which he has not entered on. Termes de la Ley.

FREEHOLD LAND SOCIETIES. Societies in England designed for the purpose of enabling mechanics, artisans, and other workingmen to purchase at the least possible price a piece of freehold land of a sufficient yearly value to entitle the owner to the elective franchise for the county in which the land is situated. Wharton.

FREEMAN. A person in the possession and enjoyment of all the civil and political rights accorded to the people under a free government.

In the Roman law, it denoted one who was either born free or emancipated, and was the opposite of "slave." In feudal law, it designated an alodial proprietor, as distinguished from a vassal or feudal tenant. (And so in Pennsylvania colonial law. Fry's Election Case, 71 Pa. 308, 10 Am.Rep. 698.) In old English law, the word described a freeholder or tenant by free services; one who was not a villein. In modern legal phraseology, it is the appellation of a member of a city or borough having the right of suffrage, or a member of any municipal corporation invested with full civic rights.

FREEMAN'S ROLL. A list of persons admitted as burgesses or freemen for the purposes of the rights reserved by the municipal corporation act, (5 & 6 Wm. IV. c. 76.) Distinguished from the Burgess Roll. 3 Steph.Comm. 197. The term was used, in early colonial history, in some of the American colonies.

FREIGHT. Freight is properly the price or compensation paid for the transportation of goods by a carrier, at sea, from port to port. The Bill, D. C. Md., 55 F.Supp. 780, 783. But the term is also used to denote the hire paid for the carriage of goods on land from place to place, (usually by a railroad company, not an express company,) or on inland streams or lakes. The name is also applied to the goods or merchandise transported by any of the above means. Brittan v. Barnaby, 21 How. 533, 16 L.Ed. 177; Christie v. Davis Coal Co., D.C. N.Y., 95 F. 837, 838; Paradise v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 6- La.Ann. 596.

The sum agreed on for the hire of a ship, entirely or in part, for the carriage of goods from one port to another. 13 East. 300. All rewards or compensation paid for the use of ships. Giles v. Cynthia, 1 Pct.Adm. 206, Fed.Cas.No. 5,424.

The reward, if any, to be paid for its carriage is called "freightage;" the person who delivers the freight to the carrier is called the "consignor;" and the person to whom it is to be delivered is called the "consignee." Civil Code Cal. § 2110; Comp.Laws N.D.1913, § 6197; Comp.Laws S.D. 1929, § 1119.

Property carried is called "freight." Lyman-Richey Sand & Gravel Co. v. State, 123 Neb. 674, 243 N.W. 891, 893, 83 A.L.R. 1301.

"Dead freight" is money payable by a person who has chartered a ship and only partly loaded her, in respect of the loss of freight caused to the ship-owner by the deficiency of cargo. L.R. 2 H.L. Sc. 128; The Rosemary, C. C.A.Miss., 277 F. 674, 678.

FREIGHT CAR. A railroad car adapted to the transportation from one point to another of movable articles of every kind, character, and description, and a box car while so used is at least temporarily a car carrying freight. State v. Jones, 84 W.Va. 85, 99 S.E. 271, 274.

FREIGHT IS THE MOTHER OF WAGES. 2 Show. 283; 3 Kent, Comm. 196. Where a voyage is broken up by vis major, and no freight earned, no wages, eo nomine, are due.

FREIGHTER. In maritime law, the party by whom a vessel is engaged or chartered; otherwise called the "charterer." 2 Steph. Comm. 148. In French law, the owner of a vessel is called the "freighter" (frëteur); the merchant who hires it is called the "affreighter" (affrëteur). Emerig. Tr. des Ass. ch. 11, § 3.

FRENCHMAN. In early times, in English law, this term was applied to every stranger or "outlandish" man. Bract. lib. 3, tr. 2, c. 15.

FRENDLESMAN. Sax. An outlaw. So called because on his outlawry he was denied all help of friends after certain days. Cowell; Blount.

FRENDWITE. In old English law, a mulct or fine exacted from him who harbored an outlawed friend. Cowell; Tomlins.

FRENETICUS. In old English law, a madman, or person in a frenzy. Fleta, lib. 1, c. 36.

FREOBORGH. A free-surety, or free-pleage. Spelman. See Frank-Pledge.

FREOLING. (Sax. freoh, free, plus ling, progeny.) A freeman born. Wharton. See Frilingi.

FREQUENT. v. To visit often; to resort to often or habitually. Green v. State, 109 Ind. 175, 9 N.E. 781; Ex parte Werner, 46 R.I. 1, 124 A. 195, 196.

FREQUENTER. Any person not an employee who may go in or be in place of employment or public building under circumstances which render him other than trespasser. Tomlin v. Chicago, M., St. P. & P. Ry. Co., 220 Wis. 325, 265 N.W. 72.

FREVENTIA ACTUS MULTUM OPERATUR. The frequency of an act effects much. 4 Coke, 78; Wing. Max. p. 719, max. 192. A continual usage is of great effect to establish a right.

FRESCA. In old records, fresh water, or rain and land flood.

FRESH. Immediate; recent; following without any material interval.

FRESH DISSEISIN. By the ancient common law, where a man had been disseised, he was allowed to right himself by force, by ejecting the disseisor from the premises, without resort to law, provided this was done forthwith, while the disseisin was fresh, (fiagrante disseisina.) Bract. fol. 162b. No particular time was limited for doing this, but Bracton suggested it should be fifteen days. Id. fol. 163. See Britt. cc. 32, 43, 44, 65.

FRESH FINE. In old English law, a fine that had been levied within a year past. St. Westm. 2, c. 45; Cowell.

FRESH FORCE. Force done within forty days. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 7; Old Nat. Brev. 4. The heir or reversioner in a case of disseisin by fresh force was allowed a remedy in chancery by bill before the mayor. Cowell.

FRESH PURSUIT. A pursuit instituted immediately and with intent to reclaim or recapture, after an animal escaped, a thief flying with stolen goods, etc. People v. Pool, 27 Cal. 578; White v. State, 70 Miss. 253, 11 So. 632.

FRESH SUIT. In old English law, immediate and unremitting pursuit of an escaping thief. "Such a present and earnest following of a robber as never ceases from the time of the robbery until apprehension." Staundef, P. C. 3, cc. 10, 12; 1 Bl. Comm. 297.

FRETER. Fr. In French marine law, to freight a ship; to let it. Emerig. Tr. des Ass. c. 11, § 3.

FRETER. Fr. In French marine law, to freight a ship; to let it to the merchant. Emerig. Tr. des Ass. c. 11, § 3.

FREITUM, FRETECTUM. In old English law, the freight of a ship; freight money. Cowell.

FRETTUM. Lat. A strait.

FRETUM BRITANNICUM. The strait between Dover and Calais.

FRIARS. An order of religious persons, of whom there were four principal branches, viz.: (1) Minors, Grey Friars, or Franciscans; (2) Augustines; (3) Dominicans, or Black Friars; (4) White Friars, or Carmelites, from whom the rest descend. Wharton.

FRIBURGH. (Also, Frithborg, Frithborgh, Friborg, Froborg, and Freoburgh.) (Sax.) A kind of frank-pledge whereby the principal men were bound for themselves and servants. Fleta, lib. 1, cap. 47. Cowell says it is the same as frank-pledge.

FRIUSCULUM. In the civil law, a temporary separation between husband and wife, caused by a quarrel or estrangement, but not amounting to a divorce, because not accompanied with an intention to dissolve the marriage.

FRIDBORG, FRITHBORG. Frank-pledge. Cowell.

FRILDRECA. See Friends.

FRIMO. Sax. Peace, security, or protection.

This word occurs in many compound terms used in Anglo-Saxon law.

FRIRINGI. Persons of free descent, or freemen born; the middle class of persons among the Saxons. Spelman. See Freoling.

FRISK, v. The running of hands rapidly over another's person, as distinguished from "search," which is to strip and examine contents more particularly. Kalwin Business Men's Ass'n v. McLaughlin, 126 Misc. 698, 214 N.Y.S. 99, 102.

FRITH. Sax. Peace, security, or protection. This word occurs in many compound terms used in Anglo-Saxon law.

FRITHBORE. Frank-pledge. Cowell.

FRITHBOT. A satisfaction or fine, for a breach of the peace.

FRITHEBREACH. The breaking of the peace.

FRITHEGAR. The year of jubilee, or of meeting for peace and friendship.

FRITHEGILDA. Guildhall; a company or fraternity for the maintenance of peace and security; also a fine for breach of the peace. Jacob.

FRITHEMAN. A member of a company or fraternity.

FRITHESOCNE. Surety of defense. Jurisdiction of the peace. The franchise of preserving the peace. Also spelled "frithsoken."

FRITHSPLOT. A spot or plot of land, encircling some stone, tree, or well, considered sacred, and therefore affording sanctuary to criminals.

FRITHSTOOL. The stool of peace. A stool or chair placed in a church or cathedral, and which was the symbol and place of sanctuary to those who fled to it and reached it.

FRIVOLOUS. An answer is "frivolous" where it appears from bare inspection to be lacking in legal sufficiency, and, where in any view of the facts pleaded, it does not present a defense. Neefus v. Neefus, 209 Minn. 495, 296 N.W. 579, 581. Any pleading is called "frivolous" when it is clear-
As to time, after an examination of authorities, Washington, J., laid down the general principles to be deduced from them: (1) When time is computing from an act done, the day of its performance is inclusive; (2) when the words are from the date, if a present interest is to commence, the day is included; if a term is to commence 90 in Lord Rym. 84; and to a bond; Lysle v. Williams, 15 S. & R., Pa., 135; and the first proposition has been laid down with reference to the words "from and after the passage" v. U. S., 9 Craft, L. Ed. 671; U. S. v. Williams, 1 Paine 261, Fed.Cas.No. 16,723; contra, Lorent v. Ins. Co., 1 Nott. & McC., S.C., 505. See U. S. v. Heth, 3 Cra., U.S., 399, 2 L.Ed. 479. From is generally held a word of exclusion; Wilcox v. Wood, 9 Werd., N.Y., 346; Ordway v. Remington, 12 R.I. 319, 34 Am.Rep. 646. But a promise made November 1st, 1811, and sued November 1st, 1817, was held barred by statute of limitation; Presbrey v. Williams, 15 Mass. 193. Where an act was to be done in a given number of days from the time of the contract, the day on which the contract was made was included; Brown v. Buzan, 24 Ind. 194; but if the contract simply says in so many days from the day of date, and that is included; Blake v. Crowninshield, 9 N.H. 304. A fire policy from one given date to another includes the last day; whether the first is included with the others or not; in most cases when something is required to be done in a given number of days from the day on which an event has happened, that day is excluded in case of proving claim against the estate of a decedent or involvement; Wilcox v. Hull, 19 Conn. 376, 50 Am.Dec. 249; enrolling deeds, after execution; Seawell v. Williams, 5 Haw., Tenn., 283; appeal from arbitrators, afterward; Browne v. Browne, 3 S. & R., Pa., 496; issuing a scire facias to revive a judgment, after entry; Appeal of Green, 6 W. & S., Pa., 327; the time an execution runs, after its date; Homan v. Liswell, 6 Cow., N.Y., 659; redemption from execution before interest 518; allowing appeal from a justice; Ex parte Dean, 2 Cow., N.Y., 605, 14 Am.Dec. 521. The principle is thus well expressed. When time is to be computed from a particular day or a particular event, when an act is to be performed within a specified period from or after a named day, that day is excluded and the last day included; Sheets v. Selden, 2 Wall., U.S., 177, 17 L.Ed. 822. But it was held that in computing the quota of time from an act done, the day of its performance is included; Chiles v. Smith's Heirs, 13 B.Monr., Ky., 460. Six months from testator's death allowed a legatee to give security not to maintain a claim exclusive of testator's estate; Allen v. Effler, 144 Tenn. 685, 235 S.W. 67, 68; Martin v. Travelers Ins. Co., 310 Mo. 411, 276 S.W. 380, 382, 41 A.L.R. 1372; Piatt v. Flaherty, 96 Kan. 42, 149 P. 734.

FRIVOLOUS

As to whether the word was to be treated as inclusive or exclusive of a terminus a quo, whether of time or place, a critical writer formulated a rule that when referring to a certain point as a terminus a quo, though in vulgar acceptance it were capable of being taken indifferently, either inclusively or exclusively, yet in law it has obtained a certain fixed import and is always taken as exclusive of the terminus a quo. Powell, Powers 449. It generally excludes the day to which it relates, but the general rule will yield to the intent of parties; Kendall v. Kingsley, 120 Mass. 94. The views of Lord Mansfield, in Cowp. 714 (overruling his own decision of three years before, id. 189), was that it is either exclusive or inclusive according to context; and, as the court will construe it to effectuate the intent of parties and not to destroy it. Lowman v. Shotkoski, 106 Neb. 540, 184 N.W. 107, 108; Allen v. Efler, 144 Tenn. 685, 235 S.W. 67, 68; Martin v. Travelers Ins. Co., 310 Mo. 411, 276 S.W. 380, 382, 41 A.L.R. 1372; Piatt v. Flaherty, 96 Kan. 42, 149 P. 734.

A "frivolous appeal" is one presenting no justifiable question and so readily recognizable as devoid of merit on face of record that there is little prospect that it can ever succeed. Treat v. State ex rel. Mitton, 121 Fla., 509, 163 So. 883.

A sham plea is good on its face, but false in fact; it may, to all appearances, constitute a perfect defense, but is a pretense because false and because not pleaded in good faith. A sham plea may be perfectly true in its allegations, but yet is liable to be stricken out because totally insufficient in substance. Andrew v. Bandler, Sup., 56 N.Y. S. 614; Brown v. Jenison, 1 Code R.N.S., N.Y., 157; Sheets v. Ramer, 125 Minn. 98, 145 N.W. 787. See, further, Answer.

FROM, implies a starting point, whether it be of time, place, or condition; and meaning: Having a starting point of motion; noting the point of time, place, or condition; and meaning: Having a starting point of motion; noting the point of time, place, or condition; and meaning: Hav-designated; Gardner v. Collins, 2 Pet., U.S., 58, 86, 7 L.Ed. 347; but the words from the part of the father indicate a different intention, 16 East 240; L.R. 7 Q.B. 580, 702.

From the loading in a marine policy ordinarily means that the risk is covered after the goods are on board, but this meaning may be qualified by any words in the policy indicating a different intention, 16 East 240; L.R. 7 Q.B. 580, 702.

From day to day, in reference to adjournments, usually means to the next day but, under a statute authorizing the adjournment of a sale from day to day, a sale is good if made by adjournment to a day, certain, which did not immediately succeed the first, Burns v. Lyon, 4 Watts, Pa., 30. From henceforth in a lease means from the delivery of the premises.

From henceforth, 5 Co. 1; so also does one from March 25th last past (the execution being March 25th); 4 B. & C. 272; or one from an impossible date (as February 30th), or no date, but if it has a sensible date, the word date in other parts of it means date, not delivery; 4 B. & C. 908.

FROM ONE PLACE TO ANOTHER. From premises owned by one person to premises owned by another person in some legal subdivision or from one legal subdivision to another. Liquor Transportation Cases, 140 Tenn. 582, 205 S.W. 423, 426; Ready v. State, 155 Tenn. 15, 290 S.W. 28, 29; State v. White, 111 Kan. 196, 206 P. 903, 904.

FROM PERSON. Includes taking from presence of person assaulted as well as taking of property in actual contact with person of one robbed. People v. Kushib, 357 Ill. 531, 192 N.E. 543, 545.

FROM, THROUGH, OR UNDER. The term refers to origin or devolution of property, and unless some title to or interest therein has been derived by assignment or otherwise from party adverse to decedent's estate, statute barring testimony is inapplicable. In re Iwers' Estate, 225 Iowa 389, 280 N.W. 579, 582.

FROM TIME TO TIME. Occasionally, at intervals, now and then. Spade v. Hawkins, 60 Ind. App. 388, 110 N.E. 1010, 1012. See From.

FRONT. Forepart, as opposed to the back or rear. State v. Read, 162 Iowa, 572; 144 N.W. 310, 311; Howland v. Andrus, 81 N.J.Eq. 175, 86 A. 391, 393.

Any side or face of a building is a front, although the word is more commonly used to denote the entrance side. In re McInerney, 47 Wyo. 258, 34 P.2d 488, 489. As applied to a bare lot, it is that side of lot towards which, in ordinary circumstances, house, when built, will most likely face, and very general usage of building houses with their main entrance toward shorter street line results in common understanding that this is side intended when front of lot is referred to. Rhinehart v. Leitch, 107 Conn. 400, 140 A. 763.

FRONT FOOT. As respects assessment, synonymous with "abutting foot." Moberly v. Hogan, 131 Mo. 19, 32 S.W. 1014.

The rate of assessment is obtained by having the total cost of the work divided by the total number of square feet of paving done under the contract; and the quotient multiplied by one-half of the number of linear feet in the width of the pavement opposite the property lines. City of Crowley v. Police Jury of Acadia Parish, 138 La. 488, 70 So. 487, 488.

FRONT-FOOT RULE. One by which cost of improvement is to be apportioned among several properties in proportion to their frontage on improvement and without regard to benefits conferred. Davy v. McNeill, 31 N.M. 7, 240 P. 482, 488.

In English law a frontager is a person owning or occupying land which abuts on a highway, river, seashore, or the like. The term is ge rarely used with reference to the liability of frontagers of streets to contribute towards the expense of paving, drat ing, or other works on the highway carried out by a local authority, in proportion to the frontage of their respective tenements. Sweet.

The term is also in a similar sense in American law, the expense of local improvements made by municipal corporations (such as paving, curbing, and sewer ing) being generally assessed on abutting property owners in proportion to the "frontage" of their lots on the street or highway, and an assessment so levied being called a "frontage assessment." Neenan v. Smith, 50 Mo. 531; Lyon v. Tonawanda, C.C.N.Y., 98 F. 366; City of Youngstown v. Fishel, 89 Ohio St. 237, 104 N.E. 141, 143, 50 L.R.A., N.S., 921, Ann.Cas. 1915D, 1073; Standard Oil Co. of Indiana v. Kamrath, 319 Ill. 51, 149 N.E. 538, 539.

FRONTING AND ABUTTING. Very often, "fronting" signifies abutting, adjoining, or bordering on, depending largely on the context. Rom- bauer v. Compton Heights Christian Church, 328 Mo. 1, 40 S.W.2d 545, 551. As used in statutes relating to assessment for improvements, property between which and the improvement there is no intervening land. Oklahoma Ry. Co. v. Severns Paving Co., 67 Okl. 206, 170 P. 216-218, 10 A.L.R. 157; Flynn v. Chiappari, 191 Cal. 139, 215 P. 682, 686.

FRONTIER. In international law, that portion of the territory of any country which lies close along the border line of another country, and so "fronts" or faces it. The term means something more than the boundary line itself, and includes a tract or strip of country, of indefinite extent, contiguous to the line. Stoughton v. Mott, 15 Vt. 169.

FROZEN SNAKE. A term used to impute ingratitude and held libelous, the court taking judicial notice of its meaning without an innuendo. 12 Ad. & El. 624.

FRUCTUARIUS. Lat. In the civil law, one who had the usufruct of a thing; i.e., the use of the fruits, profits, or increase, as of land or animals. Inst. 2, 1, 36, 38. Bracton applies it to a lessee, fermo r, or farmer of land, or one who held lands ad firmam, for a farm or term. Bract. fol. 261.

FRUCTUS. Lat. In the civil law, fruit, fruits; produce; profit or increase; the organic productions of a thing.

The right to the fruits of a thing belonging to another.

The compensation which a man receives from another for the use or enjoyment of a thing, such as interest or rent. See Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 167; Inst. 2, 1, 35, 37; Dig. 7, 1, 33; Id. 5, 3, 29; Id. 22, 1, 34.

FRUCTUS AUGENT HAEREDITATEM. The yearly increase goes to enhance the inheritance. Dig. 5, 3, 20, 3.

FRUCTUS CIVILES. All revenues and recompenses which, though not fruits, properly speaking, are recognized as such by the law. The term includes such things as the rents and income of real property, interest on money loaned, and annuities. Civ. Code La. 1900, art. 545.

FRUCTUS FUNDI. The fruits (produce or yield) of land.

FRUCTUS INDUSTRIALES. Industrial fruits, or fruits of industry. Those fruits of a thing, as of land, which are produced by the labor and industry of the occupant, as crops of grain; as distinguished from such as are produced solely by the powers of nature. Emblements are so called in the common law. 2 Steph. Comm. 258; 1 Chit. Gen. Pr. 92. Sparrow v. Pond, 49 Minn. 412, 52 N.W. 36, 16 L.R.A. 103, 32 Am.St.Rep. 571; Clark v. Strohbeen, 190 Iowa 989, 181 N.W. 430, 433, 13 A.L.R. 1419.

FRUCTUS PECUDUM. The produce or increase of flocks or herds.

FRUCTUS PENDENTES. Hanging fruits; those not severed. The fruits united with the thing which produces them. These form a part of the principal thing.

FRUMENTA QUIE SATA SUNT SOLO CEDERE INTELLIGUNTUR. Grain which is sown is understood to form a part of the soil. Inst. 2, 1, 32.

FRUMENTUM. In the civil law, grain. That which grows in an ear. Dig. 50, 16, 77.

FRUMENTUM. In the civil law, grain. That which grows in an ear. Dig. 50, 16, 77.

FRUES. In the civil law, anything produced from vines, underwood, chalk-pits, stone- quarries. Dig. 50, 16, 77.

FRUIT. The produce of a tree or plant which contains the seed or is used for food. Klas v. Kuehl, 159 Wis. 561, 150 N.W. 973, 975.

This term, in legal acceptation, is not confined to the produce of those trees which in popular language are called "fruit trees," but applies also to the produce of oak, elm, and walnut trees. Bullen v. Denning, 5 Barn. & C. 847.

Fruit fallen. The produce of any possession detached therefrom, and capable of being enjoyed by itself. Thus, a next presentation, when a vacancy has occurred, is a fruit fallen from the advowson. Wharton.

FRUITS, FRUITS OF THE LAND. In replevy bond, "fruits" includes natural accession to livestock. Southern Surety Co. v. Adams, Tex. Civ. App., 278 S.W. 943, 946. Includes the increase and the clip of replevied goats and sheep; "offspring" and "that which is produced." Southern Surety Co. v. Adams, 119 Tex. 489, 34 S.W. 2d 789, 798. The right of a possessor to "fruits of the land" does not permit possessor to extract mineral oil and gas from land. Elder v. Ellerbe, 135 La. 990, 66 So. 337.

Civil fruits, in the civil law, (fructus civiles) are such things as the rents and income of real property, the interest on money loaned, and annuities. Civ. Code La. art. 545. Rents and revenues of an immovable. Posey v. Fargo. 187 La. 122, 174 So. 175, 179.

Natural fruits. The produce of the soil, or of fruit-trees, bushes, vines, etc., which are edible or otherwise useful or serve for the reproduction of their species. The term is used in contradistinction to "artificial fruits," i.e., such as by metaphor or analogy are likened to the fruits of the earth. Of the latter, interest on money is an example. See Civ. Code La. art. 545.

FRUMENTA QUIE SATA SUNT SOLO CEDERE INTELLIGUNTUR. Grain which is sown is understood to form a part of the soil. Inst. 2, 1, 32.

FRUMENTUM. In the civil law, grain. That which grows in an ear. Dig. 50, 16, 77.

FRUMGYLD. Sax. The first payment made to the kindred of a slain person in recompense for his murder. Blount.

FRUMSTOLL. Sax. In Saxon law, a chief seat, or mansion house. Cowell.
FRUSCA TERRA. In old records, uncultivated and desert ground. 2 Mon. Angl. 327; Cowell.

FRUSSURA. A breaking; plowing. Cowell.

FRUSTRA. Lat. Without effect, in vain, to no purpose, uselessly; without reason or cause, groundlessly; in error. Harpers' Lat. Dict.

FRUSTRA AGIT QUI JUDICIUM PROSEQUI NEQUIT CUM EFFECTU. He sues to no purpose who cannot prosecute his judgment with effect, [who cannot have the fruits of his judgment.] Fleta, lib. 6, c. 37, § 9.

FRUSTRA [VANA] EST POTENTIA QUIE NUNQUAM VENIT IN ACTUM. That power is to no purpose which never comes into act, or which is never exercised. 2 Coke, 51.

FRUSTRA EXPECTATUR EVENTUS CUIUS EFFECTUS NULLUS SEQUITUR. An event is vainly expected from which no effect follows.

FRUSTRA FIT PER PLURA, QUOD FIERI PODET TEST PER PAUCIORA. That is done to no purpose by many things which can be done by fewer. Jenk.Cent. p. 68, case 28. The employment of more means or instruments for effecting a thing than are necessary is to no purpose.

FRUSTRA LEGIS AUXILIUM INVOCAT QUI IN LEGEM COMMITTIT. He vainly invokes the aid of the law who transgresses the law. Fleta, lib. 4, c. 2, § 3; 2 Hale, P.C. 386; Broom, Max. 279, 297.

FRUSTRA PETIS QUOD MOX ES RESTITURUS. In vain you ask that which you will have immediately to restore. 2 Kames, Eq. 104; 5 Man. & G. 757.

FRUSTRA PETIS QUOD STATIM ALTERI REDDERE COGERIS. Jenk.Cent. 256. You ask in vain that which you might immediately be compelled to restore to another.

FRUSTRA PROBATUR QUOD PROBATUM NON RELEVAT. That proved to no purpose which, when proved, does not help. Halk.Lat.Max. 50.

FRUSTRATION. Where, from nature of contract and surrounding circumstances, parties from beginning must have known it could not be fulfilled unless, when time thereof arrived, some particular condition continued to exist, under doctrine of "frustration", in absence of warranty that such condition of things shall exist, contract is to be construed as subject to implied condition that parties shall be excused in case, before breach, performance becomes impossible or purpose frustrated from such condition ceasing to exist without default of either. Johnson v. Atkins, 53 Cal. App.2d 430, 127 P.2d 1027, 1028, 1029, 1030.

FRUSTRUM TERIVE. A piece or parcel of land lying by itself. Co.Litt. 5b.

FRUTECTUM. In old records, a place overgrown with shrubs and bushes. Spelman; Blount.

FRUTOS. In Spanish law, fruits; products; produce; grains; profits. White, New Recop. b. 1, tit. 7, c. 5, § 2.

FRYMITH. In old English law, the affording harbor and entertainment to any one.

FRYTHE. Sax. In old English law, a plain between woods. Co.Litt. 5b.

FUER. In old English law, flight. It is of two kinds: (1) Fuer in fait, or in facto, where a person does apparently and corporally flee; (2) fuer in ley, or in lege, when, being called in the county court, he does not appear, which legal interpretation makes flight. Wharton.

FUERO. In Spanish law, a law; a code.

FUEROS, FOUAGE, or FEUAGE. Hearth money. A tax laid upon each fire-place or hearth. An imposition of a shilling for every hearth, levied by Edward III. in the dukedom of Aquitaine. Spelman; 1 Bl.Comm. 324.

FURO. In old English law, flight. It is of two kinds: (1) Fuer in fait, or in facto, where a person does apparently and corporally flee; (2) fuer in ley, or in lege, when, being called in the county court, he does not appear, which legal interpretation makes flight. Wharton.

FUERO. In Spanish law, a law; a code.

A general usage or custom of a province, having the force of law. Strother v. Lucas, 12 Pet. 446, 9 L.Ed. 1137. Ir contra fuero, to violate a received custom.

A grant of privileges and immunities. Conceder fueros, to grant exemptions.

A charter granted to a city or town. Also designated as "cartas pueblas."

An act of donation made to an individual, a church, or convent, on certain conditions.

A declaration of a magistrate, in relation to taxation, fines, etc.

A charter granted by the sovereign, or those having authority from him, establishing the franchises of towns, cities, etc.

A place where justice is administered.

A peculiar forum, before which a party is amenable.

The jurisdiction of a tribunal, which is entitled to take cognizance of a cause; as fuero eclesiastico, fuero militar. See Schm.Civil Law, Introd. 64.

FUERO DE CASTILLA. The body of laws and customs which formerly governed the Castilians.

FUERO DE CORREOS Y CAMINOS. A special tribunal taking cognizance of all matters relating to the post-office and roads.

FUERO DE MARINA. A special tribunal taking cognizance of all matters relating to the navy and to the persons employed therein.
FUERO JUZGO. The Forum Judicium; a code of laws established in the seventh century for the Visigothic kingdom in Spain. Some of its principles and rules are found surviving in the modern jurisprudence of that country. Schm.Civil Law, Introd. 28.

FUERO MUNICIPAL. The body of laws granted to a city or town for its government and the administration of justice.

FUERO REAL. The title of a code of Spanish law promulgated by Alfonso the Learned, (el Sabio) A.D. 1255. It was the precursor of the Partidas. Schm.Civil Law, Introd. 67.

FUGACIA. A chase. Blount.

FUGAM FECIT. Lat. He has made flight; he fled. A clause inserted in an inquisition, in old English law, meaning that a person indicted for treason or felony had fled. The effect of this is to make the party forfeit his goods absolutely, and the profits of his lands until he has been pardoned or acquitted.

FUGATOR. In old English law, a privilege to hunt. Blount.

A driver. Fugatores carrucarum, drivers of wagons. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 78.

FUGITATE. In Scotch practice, to outlaw by the sentence of a court; to outlaw for non-appearance in a criminal case. 2 Alis. Crim. Pr. 350.

FUGITATION. When a criminal does not obey the citation to answer, the court pronounces sentence of fugitation against him, which induces a forfeiture of goods and chattels to the crown.

FUGITIVE. One who flees; always used in law with the implication of a flight, evasion, or escape from some duty or penalty or from the consequences of a misdeed.

To be regarded as a "fugitive from justice," it is not necessary that one shall have left the state for the very purpose of avoiding prosecution; it being sufficient that, having committed there an act constituting a crime, he afterwards has departed from its jurisdiction, and when sought to be prosecuted is found in another state. Hogan v. O'Neill, 255 U.S. 52, 41 S.Ct. 222, 65 L.Ed. 497; People ex rel. Gottschalk v. Brown, 237 N.Y. 483, 143 N.E. 653, 654, 32 A.L.R. 1164; State v. Hayes, 162 La. 917, 111 So. 327, 329 (one who did not flee).

No matter for what purpose or with what motive or under what belief he leaves state, and even though at time of leaving he had no belief he had violated criminal laws and did not contemplate fleeing from justice to avoid prosecution for crime with which he is charged. Ex parte Morris, 131 Tex.Cr.R. 596, 101 S.W.2d 259.

FUGITIVE OFFENDERS. In English law, where a person accused of any offense punishable by imprisonment, with hard labor for twelve months or more, has left that part of his majesty's dominions where the offense is alleged to have been committed, he is liable, if found in any other part of his majesty's dominions, to be apprehended and returned in manner provided by the fugitive offenders' act, 1881, to the part from which he is a fugitive. Wharton.

FUGITIVE OIL. Oil escaping from well which was out of control and flowing down creek to point 10 or 12 miles below the well where it was picked up was "fugitive" or "waste oil" and belonged to the first taker who might reduce it to his possession. Linkenhoger v. Brown, Tex.Civ. App., 128 S.W.2d 163, 164.

FUGITIVE SLAVE. One who, held in bondage, flees from his master's power.

FUGITIVE SLAVE LAW. An act of congress passed in 1793 (and also one enacted in 1850) providing for the surrender and deportation of slaves who escaped from their masters and fled into the territory of another state, generally a "free" state.

FUGITIVE'S GOODS. Under the old English Law, where a man fled for felony, and escaped, his own goods were not forfeited as bona fugitivorum until it was found by proceedings of record (e. g. before the coroner in the case of death) that he fled for the felony. Foxley's Case, 5 Co. 109 a.

FUGITIVUS. In the civil law, a fugitive; a runaway slave. Dig. 11, 4; Cod. 6, 1. See the various definitions of this word in Dig. 21, 1, 17.

FUGUES. Fr. In medical jurisprudence. Ambulatory automatism. See Automatism.

FULL ANSWER. In pleading, a complete and meritorious answer, not wanting in any essential requisite. Frizell v. Northern Trust Co. of Chicago, Ill., 144 Kan. 481, 61 P.2d 1344, 1345, 1346.

FULL BLOOD. Relations of the "full blood," "whole blood," or "entire blood" are those derived not only from the same ancestor, but from the Brothers and sisters of full blood are those who are born of the same father and mother, or, as Justianin calls them, “ex utroque parente conjuncti.” Nov. 118, cc. 2, 3; Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 145. The more usual term in modern law is “whole blood” (q. v.).

FULL COPY. In equity practice, a complete and unabridged transcript of a bill or other pleading, with all indorsements, and including a copy of all exhibits. Finley v. Hunter, 2 Strob. Eq., S. C., 210, note.

FULL COURT. In practice, a court in banc. A court duly organized with all the judges present.

Court containing permissible complement of judges, as distinguished from a quorum of two. Textile Mills Securities Corporation v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 314 U.S. 326, 62 S.Ct. 272, 277, 86 L.Ed. 249.

FUNCTIONAL DISEASE. In medical jurisprudence, one which prevents, obstructs, or interferes with the due performance of its special functions by any organ of the body, without anatomical defect or abnormality in the organ itself. See Higbee v. Guardian Mut. L. Ins. Co., 66 Barb., N.Y. 472. Distinguished from "organic" disease, which is due to some injury to, or lesion or malformation in, the organ in question.

FUNCTIONARY. A public officer or employee. An officer of a private corporation is also sometimes so called.

Funcatus officio. Lat. A task performed. Board of School Trustees of Washington City Administrative Unit v. Benner, 222 N.C. 566, 24 S.E.2d 259, 263.

Having fulfilled the function, discharged the office, or accomplished the purpose, and therefore of no further force or authority. Applied to an officer whose term has expired, and who has consequently no further official authority; and also to an instrument, power, agency, etc., which has fulfilled the purpose of its creation, and is therefore of no further virtue or effect. Blanton Banking Co. v. Taliaferro, Tex.Civ.App., 262 S.W. 196.

FUND, v. To capitalize with a view to the production of interest. Stephen v. Milnor, 24 N.J. Eq. 376. Also, to put into the form of bonds, stocks, or other securities, bearing regular interest, and to provide or appropriate a fund or permanent revenue for the payment thereof. Merrill v. Monticello, C.C.Ind., 22 F. 596. City of Long Beach v. Lisenby, 180 Cal. 52, 179 P. 198, 201.

To fund a debt is to pledge a specific fund to keep down the interest and reduce the principal.

Funded debt. As applied to states or municipal corporations, a funded debt is one for the payment of which (interest and principal) some fund is appropriated, either specifically, or by provision made for future taxation and the quasi pledging in advance of the public revenue. Ketchum v. Buffalo, 14 N.Y. 356; People v. Carpenter, 52 N.Y.S. 781, 31 App.Div. 603. As applied to the financial management of corporations (and sometimes of estates in course of administration or properties under receivership) funding means the borrowing of a sufficient sum of money to discharge a variety of floating or unsecured debts, or debts evidenced by notes or secured by bonds but maturing within a short time, and creating a new debt in lieu thereof, secured by a general mortgage, a series of bonds, or an issue of stock, generally maturing at a more remote period, and often at a lower rate of interest. The new debt thus substituted for the pre-existing debts is called the "funded debt." Ketchum v. Buffalo, 14 N.Y. 356; Lawrey v. Sterling, 41 Or. 518, 69 P. 460. This term is very seldom applied to the debts of a private individual; but when so used it must be understood as referring to a debt embodied in securities of a permanent character and to the payment of which certain property has been applied or pledged. Weln v. Wells, Super.N.Y. 24, N.Y.S. 874.

Funding system. The practice of borrowing money to defray the expenses of government, and creating a "sinking fund," designed to keep down interest, and to effect the gradual reduction of the principal debt. Merrill v. Monticello, C.C.Ind., 22 F. 596.

FUND, A generic term and all-embracing as compared with term "money," etc., which is specific. Bivins v. State, 47 Ga.App. 391, 170 S.E. 513, 516.

A sum of money set apart for a specific purpose, or available for the payment of debts or claims. State v. Finney, 141 Kan. 12, 40 P.2d 411, 421.

In its narrower and more usual sense, "fund" signifies "capital," as opposed to "interest" or "income;" as where we speak of a corporation funding the arrears of interest due on its bonds, or the like, meaning that the interest is capitalized and made to bear interest in its turn until it is repaid. Sweet.

In the plural, this word has a variety of slightly different meanings, as follows:

Moneys and much more, such as notes, bills, checks, drafts, stocks and bonds, and in broader meaning may include property of every kind. State v. Finney, 141 Kan. 12, 40 P.2d 411, 421.

Corporate stocks or government securities; in this sense usually spoken of as the "funds."

General fund. This phrase, in New York, is a collective designation of all the assets of the state which furnish the means for the support of government and for defraying the discretionary appropriations of the legislature. People v. Orange County Sup's, 27 Barb., N.Y., 575, 588. It has also been used in Delaware in the messages of the governor and other state papers to distinguish such funds as are available in the hands of the state treasurer for general purposes from assets of a special character, such as the school fund.

General revenue fund. As used in connection with municipal finances, the usual, ordinary, running, and incidental expenses of a municipality. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. City of Topeka, 95 Kan. 747, 149 P. 697.

No funds. This term denotes a lack of assets or money for a specific use. It is the return made by a bank to a check drawn upon it by a person who has no deposit to his credit there; also by an executor, trustee, etc., who has no assets for the specified purpose.

Public funds. An untechnical name for (1) the revenue or money of a government, state, or municipal corporation; (2) the bonds, stocks, or other securities of a national or state government. Money, warrants, or bonds, or other paper having a money value, and belonging to the state, or to any county, city, incorporated town or school district.

Revolving fund. Usually, a renewable credit over a defined period. In simple parlance it relates usually to a situation where a banker or merchant extends credit for a certain amount which can be paid off from time to time and then credit is again given not to exceed the same amount. It may also mean a fund, which, when reduced, is replenished by new funds from specified sources. U. S. v. Butterworth-Judson Corporation, C.C.A.N.Y., 297 F. 971, 979.

Sinking fund. The aggregate of sums of money (as those arising from particular taxes or sources of revenue) set apart and invested, usually at fixed intervals, for the extinguishment of the debt of a government or corporation, by the accumulation of interest. Elser v. Ft. Worth, Tex.Civ.App., 27 S.W. 740; Brooke v. Philadelphia, 162 Pa. 123, 29 A. 387, 24 L.R.A. 781. A fund arising from particular taxes, imposts, or duties, which is appropriated towards the payment of the interest due on a public loan and for the gradual payment of the principal. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Buffalo Co., 9 Neb. 453, 4 N.W. 53; Sidney Spitzer & Co. v. Commissioners of Franklin County, 188 N.C. 30, 123 S.E. 636, 639; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Pyne, 187 Ky. 341, 219 S.W. 187, 190; Revolving fund. A tax raised to be applied to the payment of interest on, and principal of public loan. Sidney Spitzer & Co. v. Commissioners of Franklin County, 188 N.C. 30, 123 S.E. 636, 639; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Pyne, C.C.N.Y., 30 F. 89.

Sinking fund tax. A tax raised to be applied to the payment of interest on, and principal of public loan. Sidney Spitzer & Co. v. Commissioners of Franklin County, 188 N.C. 30, 123 S.E. 636, 639; Union Pac. R. Co. v. York County, 10 Neb. 612, 7 N.W. 270.

FUNDAMENTAL ERROR. See Error.

FUNDAMENTAL LAW. The law which determines the constitution of government in a state, and prescribes and regulates the manner of its exercise; the organic law of a state; the constitution.

FUNDAMUS. We found. One of the words by which a corporation may be created in England. 1 Bl.Comm. 473; 3 Steph.Comm. 173.

FUNDATIO. Lat. A founding or foundation. Particularly applied to the creation and endowment of corporations.
