Open court. This term may mean either a court which has been formally convened and declared open for the transaction of its proper judicial business, or a court which is freely open to the approach of all decent and orderly persons in the character of spectators. Conover v. Bird, 56 N.J.Law, 228, 28 A. 428. Gomes v. Ulibarri, 23 N.M. 501, 169 P. 301, 302; U. S. v. Ginsberg, 243 U.S. 472, 37 S.Ct. 422, 425, 61 L.Ed. 853; Gillham v. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas, Tex. Civ.App., 241 S.W. 512, 514.

Open doors. In Scotch law. "Letters of open doors" are process which empowers the messenger, or officer of the law, to break open doors of houses or rooms in which the debtor has placed his goods. Bell.

Open-end agreement. An agreement between employer and injured employee for compensation for indefinite period, approved by the labor commissioner, having effect of judgment so long as facts on which the award was predicated continue. Healey's Case, 124 Me. 54, 126 A. 21, 22.

Open fields, or meadows. In English law. Fields which are undivided, but belong to separate owners; the part of each owner is marked off by boundaries until the crop has been carried off, when the pasture is shared promiscuously by the joint herd of all the owners. Elton, Commons, 31; Sweet.

Open law. The making or waging of law. Magna Charta, c. 21.

Open mortgage clause. See Union Mortgage Clause.

Open sea. The expanse and mass of any great body of water, as distinguished from its margin or coast, its harbors, bays, creeks, inlets. The Cuzco, D.C.Wash., 225 F. 169, 176.

Open season. That portion of the year wherein the laws for the preservation of game and fish permit the killing of a particular species of game or the taking of a particular variety of fish.

Open shop. In trade union cant, one where non-union men are employed. George J. Grant Const. Co. v. St. Paul Bldg. Trades Council, 136 Minn. 167, 161 N.W. 520, 521. A shop in which union and non-union workmen are employed indiscriminately. Shinn v. Fox Bros. Mfg. Co., 156 F. 357, 86 C.C.A. 311. The term is frequently used in a depreciatory sense, as implying that the operator of such a shop, by employing nonunion men, is in effect discriminating against trade unions, and hampering their advancement.

Open theft. In Saxon law. The same with the Latin "furtum manifestum," (q. v.).

OPENING. In American practice. The beginning; the commencement; the first address of the counsel.

OPENING STATEMENT OF COUNSEL. Outline of anticipated proof. Speer v. Shipley, 149 Kan. 15, 85 P.2d 999, 1001. Its purpose is to advise the jury of facts relied upon and of issues involved, and to give jury a general picture of the facts and the situations so that jury will be able to understand the evidence. State v. Erwin, 101 Utah 365, 120 P.2d 285, 313.

OPENTIDE. The time after corn is carried out of the fields.

OPERA. A composition of a dramatic kind, set to music and sung, accompanied with musical instruments, and enriched with appropriate costumes, scenery, etc. The house in which operas are represented is termed an "opera-house." Rolland v. Kleber, 1 Pittsb.R. (Pa.) 71.

OPERARII. Such tenants, under feudal tenures, as held some little portions of land by the duty of performing bodily labor and servile works for their lord.

OPERATE. This word, when used with relation to automobiles, signifies a personal act in working the mechanism of the automobile; that is, the driver operates the automobile for the owner, but the owner does not operate the automobile unless he drives it himself. Beard v. Clark, Tex.Civ.App., 83 S.W.2d 1023, 1025.

Similarly, as used in some statutes authorizing substituted service on the nonresident owner of an automobile, the word "operate" is limited to the personal act of the owner; but under other statutes, substituted service is authorized when the automobile was being operated by another with the owner's consent, whether express or implied. Blashfield, Cyc. of Automobile Law and Prac., Perm.Ed., § 5914. In the context of some automobile liability policies, the word "operate" may be construed as describing the personal act of the insured owner in working the mechanism of the automobile. Id., § 3941.

As used in accident policies insuring against injuries while operating a motor vehicle "operate" does not contemplate a constant and unceasing motion but includes those stops which an automobile driver ordinarily makes, such as a stop to change or repair a tire. Id., § 4127.

OPERATIO. One day's work performed by a tenant for his lord.

OPERATION. Exertion of power; the process of operating or mode of action; an effect brought about in accordance with a definite plan; action; activity. Little Rock v. Parish, 36 Ark. 166; Fleming Oil Co. v. South Penn Oil Co., 37 W.Va. 653, 17 S.E. 203, National Exchange Bank and Trust Co. of Steubenville v. New York Life Ins. Co., D.C.Pa., 19 F.Supp. 790, 791. In surgical practice, the term is of indefinite import, but may be approximately defined as an act or succession of acts performed upon the body of a patient, for his relief or restoration to normal conditions, either by manipulation or the use of surgical instruments or both, as distinguished from therapeutic treatment by the administration of drugs or other remedial agencies. See Akridge v. Noble, 114 Ga. 949, 41 S.E. 78.

Operation of law. This term expresses the manner in which rights, and sometimes liabilities, devolve upon a person by the mere application to the particular transaction of the established rules of law, without the act or co-operation of the party himself.

OPERATIVE. A workman; a laboring man; an artisan; particularly one employed in factories. Cocking v. Ward, Tenn.Ch.App., 48 S.W. 287; In re City Trust Co., 121 F. 706, 58 C.C.A. 126.

OPERATIVE PART. That part of a conveyance, or of any instrument intended for the creation or transference of rights, by which the main object of the instrument is carried into effect. It is distinguished from introductory matter, recitals, formal conclusion, etc.

OPERATIVE WORDS, in a deed or lease, are the words which effect the transaction intended to be consummated by the instrument.

OPERIS NOVI NUNTIATIO. Lat. In the civil law. A protest or warning against [of] a new work. Dig. 39, 1.

OPETIDE. The ancient time of marriage, from Epiphany to Ash-Wednesday.

OPHTHALMOLOGIST. One who is skilled in, or practices, ophthalmology. Practice of "oculists" and "ophthalmologists" has relation to practice of medicine and surgery in treatment of diseases of eye, while practice of "optometry" relates to measurement of powers of vision and adaptation of lenses for aid thereof. New Jersey State Board of Optometrists v. S. S. Kresge Co., 113 N.J.L. 287, 174 A. 353, 357. See Oculist.

OPINIO EST DUPLEX, SCILICET, OPINIO VULGARIS, ORTA INTER GRAVES ET DISCRETOS, ET QUIE VULTUM VERITATIS HABET; ET OPINIO TANTUM ORTA INTER LEVES ET VULGARES HOMINES, ABSQUE SPECIE VERITATIS. 4 Coke, 107. Opinion is of two kinds, namely, common opinion, which springs up among grave and discreet men, and which has the appearance of truth, and opinion which springs up only among light and foolish men, without the semblance of truth.

OPINIO QUIE FAVET TESTAMENTO EST TENENDA. The opinion which favors a will is to be followed. 1 W. B1. 13, arg.

OPINION. A document prepared by an attorney for his client, embodying his understanding of the law as applicable to a state of facts submitted to him for that purpose.

The statement by a judge or court of the decision reached in regard to a cause tried or argued before them, expounding the law as applied to the case, and detailing the reasons upon which the judgment is based. Craig v. Bennett, 158 Ind. 9, 62 N.E. 273; Coffey v. Gamble, 117 Iowa, 545, 91 N.W. 813.

The words “decision” and “opinion” do not have same meaning, a “decision” of a court being its judgment, and its “opinion” being reasons given for judgment. Robertson v. Vandergrift, 119 W.Va. 219, 193 S.E. 62, 63; In re Brown’s Guardianship, 6 Wash.2d 215, 107 P.2d 1104, 1106, 1107, 1108; Mosley v. Magnolia Petroleum Co., 45 N.M. 230, 114 P.2d 740, 747.

Concurring opinion. An opinion, separate from that which embodies the views and decision of the majority of the court, prepared and filed by a judge who agrees in the general result of the decision, and which either reinforces the majority opinion by the expression of the particular judge’s own views or reasoning, or (more commonly) voices his disapproval of the grounds of the decision or the arguments on which it was based, though approving the final result.

Dissenting opinion. A separate opinion in which a particular judge announces his dissent from the conclusion held by a majority of the court, and expounds his own views.

Per curiam opinion. One concurred in by the entire court, but expressed as being “per curiam” or “by the court,” without disclosing the name of any particular judge as being its author.

OPINION EVIDENCE. Evidence of what the witness thinks, believes, or infers in regard to facts in dispute, as distinguished from his personal knowledge of the facts themselves; not admissible except (under certain limitations) in the case of experts. Britt v. Caro! na Northern R. Co., 148 N.C. 37, 61 S.E. 601, 603. That which is given by a person of ordinary capacity who has by opportunity for practice acquired special knowledge outside limits of common observation, of value in elucidating a matter under consideration. Crosby v. Wells, 73 N.J.L. 790, 67 A. 295, 298.

In the law of evidence, opinion is an inference or conclusion drawn by a witness from facts some of which are known to him and others assumed, or drawn from facts which, though lending probability to the inference, do not evolve it by a process of absolutely necessary reasoning. Lipscomb v. State, 75 Miss. 559, 23 So. 210.

An inference necessarily involving certain facts may be stated without the facts, the inference being an equivalent to a specification of the facts; but, when the facts are not necessarily involved in the inference (e. g., when the inference may be sustained upon either of several distinct phases of fact, neither of which it necessarily involves,) then the facts must be stated. Whart.Ev. § 510.

OPIUM JOINT. A “joint” is usually regarded as a place of meeting or resort for persons engaged in evil and secret practices of any kind, as a tramps’ joint, such a place as is usually kept by Chinese for the accommodation of persons addicted to the habit of opium smoking, and where they are furnished with pipes, opium, etc., for that purpose, and called an “opium joint,” or, generally speaking, a rendezvous for persons of evil habits and practices. State v. Shoaf, 179 N.C. 744, 102 S.E. 705, 706, 9 A.L.R. 426.

OPPORTET QUOD CERTA RES DEDUCATUR IN DONATIONEM. It is necessary that a certain thing be brought into the gift, or made the subject of the conveyance. Bract. fol. 15b.

OPPORTET QUOD CERTA RES DEDUCATUR IN JUDICIJUM. Jenk.Cent. 84. A thing certain must be brought to judgment.

OPPORTET QUOD CERTA SIT RES QUIE VENDITUR. It is necessary that there should be a certain thing which is sold. To make a valid sale, there must be certainty as to the thing which is sold. Bract. fol. 61b.

OPORTET QUOD CERTIE PERSONAE, TERRIE, ET CERTI STATUS COMPREHENDANTUR IN DECLARATIONE USUUM. 9 Coke, 9. It is necessary that given persons, lands, and estates should be comprehended in a declaration of uses.

OPPIGNERARE. Lat. In the civil law. To pledge. Calvin.

OPPOSER. An officer formerly belonging to the greenwax in the exchequer.

OPPOSITE. An old word for "opponent."

OPPOSITE PARTY. Within statutes providing that opposite party shall be incompetent to testify as to matters equally within knowledge of deceased is one whose personal and financial interests, either immediate or remote, are antagonistic to like interests of protected party. Salsbury v. Sackrider, 284 Mich. 493, 280 N.W. 926.

OPPOSITION. Act of opposing or resisting; antagonism; state of being opposite or opposed; antithesis; also, a position confronting another or placing in contrast; that which is or furnishes an obstacle to some result; political party opposed to ministry or administration; or might be construed to include peaceful and orderly opposition to government. People v. Mintz, 106 Cal.App. 725, 290 P. 93, 97.

In Bankruptcy Practice. Opposition is the refusal of a creditor to assent to the debtor’s discharge under the bankrupt law.

In French law. A motion to open a judgment by default and let the defendant in to a defense.

OPPRESSOR. A public officer who unlawfully uses his authority by way of oppression, (q. v.).
OPPROBRIUM. In the civil law. Ignominy; shame.

OPTICIAN. Persons engaged in optometry, who confine themselves entirely to the work of making lenses in accordance with prescriptions given by physicians or oculists, are known as "opticians"; others, who manufacture the lenses, either according to their own judgment or the prescription of physicians, and also examine the eyes to ascertain whether there are any such defects visible as can be corrected by the application of lenses, are known as "optometrists." Martin v. Baldy, 249 Pa. 253, 94 A. 1091, 1092.

OPTIMA EST LEGIS INTERPRES CONSUETUD. Custom is the best interpreter of the law. Dig. 1, 3, 37; Broom, Max. 931; Lofft, 237.

OPTIMA EST LEX QUE MINIMUM RELINQUIT ARBITRIO JUDEX; OPTIMUS JUDEX QUI MINIMUM SIBI. That law is the best which leaves least to the discretion of the judge; that judge is the best who leaves least to his own. Bac. Aphorisms, 46; 2 Dwar.St. 782. That system of law is best which confides as little as possible to the discretion of the judge; that judge the best who relies as little as possible on his own opinion. Broom, Max. 84; 1 Kent, Comm. 478.

OPTIMA STATUTI INTERPRETATRIX EST (OMNIBUS PARTICULIS EJUSDEM INSPECTIS) IPSUM STATUTUM. The best interpreter of a statute is (all its parts being considered) the statute itself. Wing.Max. p. 239, max. 68; 8 Coke, 117b.

OPTIMACY. Nobility; men of the highest rank.

OPTIMAM ESSE LEGEM, QUE MINIMUM RELINQUIT ARBITRIO JUDEX; ID QUOD CERTITUDO EJUS PRIESTAT. That law is the best which leaves the least discretion to the judge; and this is an advantage which results from its certainty. Bac.Aphorisms, 8.

OPTIMUM INTERPRES RERUM USUS. Use or usage is the best interpreter of things. 2 Inst. 282; Broom, Max. 917, 930, 931.

OPTIMUM INTERPRETANDI MODUS EST SIC LEGES INTERPRETARI UT LEGES LEGIBUS CONCORDANT. 8 Coke, 169. The best mode of interpretation is so to interpret laws that they may accord with each other.

OPTIMUS JUDEX, QUI MINIMUM SIBI. He is the best judge who relies as little as possible on his own discretion. Bacon, Aph. 46; Broom, Max. 84.

OPTIMUS LEGUM INTERPRES CONSUESTUDO. 4 Inst. 75. Custom is the best interpreter of the laws.

OPTION. In English ecclesiastical law. A customary prerogative of an archbishop, when a bishop is consecrated by him, to name a clerk or chaplain of his own to be provided for by such suffragan bishop; in lieu of which it is now usual for the bishop to make over by deed to the archbishop, his executors and assigns, the next presentation of such dignity or benefice in the bishop's disposal within that see, as the archbishop himself shall choose, which is therefore called his "option." 1 Bl.Comm. 381; 3 Steph.Comm. 63, 64; Cowell.

In contracts. A privilege existing in one person, for which he has paid money, which gives him the right to buy certain merchandise or certain specified securities from another person, if he chooses, at any time within an agreed period, at a fixed price, or to sell such property to such other person at an agreed price and time. U the option gives the choice of buying or not buying, it is denominated a "call." If it gives the choice of selling or not, it is called a "put." If it is a combination of both these, and gives the privilege of either buying or selling or not, it is called a "straddle" or a "spread eagle." These terms are used on the stock-exchange. Plank v. Jackson, 128 Ind. 424, 26 N.E. 568; Osgood v. Bauder, 75 Iowa, 550, 39 N.W. 887, 1 L.R.A. 655.

A continuing offer or contract by which owner stipulates with another that latter shall have right to buy property at fixed price within certain time, and an agreement is only an "option" when no obligation rests on party 'to make any payment except such as may be agreed on between parties as consideration to support option until he has made up his mind within time specified to complete purchase. Gibbs v. Piper, Del., 153 A. 674, 676.

It is but continuing offer, which is merged in contract resulting from acceptance thereof. Helvering v. Bartlett, C.C.A. 4, 71 F.2d 598, 599.

OPTIONAL WRIT. In old England practice. That species of original writ, otherwise called a "proce- cipe," which was framed in the alternative, commanding the defendant to do the thing required, or show the reason wherefore he had not done it. 3 Bl.Comm. 274.

OPTOMETRIST. One who is skilled in, or practices, optometry. Webster, Diet. See Oculist.

OPUS. Lat. Work; labor; the product of work or labor.

OPUS LOCATUM. The product of work let for use to another; or the hiring out of work or labor to be done upon a thing.

OPUS MANIFICUM. In old English law. Labor done by the hands; manual labor; such as making a hedge, digging a ditch. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 48, § 3.

OPUS NOVUM. In the civil law. A new work. By this term was meant something newly built upon land, or taken from a work already erected. He was said to have made a "opus novum facere" (to make a new work) who, either by building or by taking anything away, changed the former appearance of a work. Dig. 39, 1, 1, 11. 1245
OR, n. A term used in heraldry, and signifying gold; called "sol" by some heralds when it occurs in the arms of princes, and "topaz" or "carbuncle" when borne by peers. Engravers represent it by an indefinite number of small points. Wharton.

ORAL. A disjunctive particle used to express an alternative or to give a choice of one among two or more things. It is also used to clarify what has already been said, and in such cases, means "in other words," "to-wit," or "that is to say." Peck v. Board of Directors of Public Schools for Parish of Catahoula, 137 La. 334, 68 So. 629, 630; Travelers' Protective Ass'n v. Jones, 75 Ind. App. 29, 127 N.E. 783, 785.

ORAL PLEADING. Pleading by word of mouth, in the actual presence of the court. This was the ancient mode of pleading in England, and continued to the reign of Edward III. Steph.Pl. 23-26.

ORANDO PRO REGE ET REGNO. An ancient writ which issued, while there was no standing collect for a sitting parliament, to pray for the peace and good government of the realm.

ORANGEMEN. A party in Ireland who keep alive the views of William of Orange. Wharton.

ORATOR. The plaintiff in a cause or matter in chancery, when addressing or petitioning the court, used to style himself "orator," and, when a woman, "oratrix." But these terms have long gone into disuse, and the customary phrases now are "plaintiff" or "petitioner."

In Roman law, the term denoted an advocate.

ORATRIX. A female petitioner; a female plaintiff in a bill in chancery was formerly so called.

ORATION. Deprivation of one's parents or children, or privation in general. Little used.

ORCINUS LIBERTUS. Lat. In Roman law. A freedman who obtained his liberty by the direct operation of the will or testament of his deceased master was so called, being the freedman of the deceased, (orcinus,) not of the hceres. Brown.

ORDAIN. To institute or establish; to make an ordinance; to enact a constitution or law. State v. Dallas City, 72 Or. 337, 143 P. 1127, 1131, Ann. Cas. 1916B, 855. To confer on a person the holy orders of priest or deacon. Gibb v. Antram, 4 Conn. 134.

ORDAINERS. An elected body of 21 members appointed by Parliament in 1310 to make ordinances for the good of the realm. The whole administration passed into their hands. Stubbs, Early Plantagenets.

ORDEAL. The most ancient species of trial, in Saxon and old English law, being peculiarly distinguished by the appellation of "judicium Dei," or "judgment of God," it being supposed that supernatural intervention would rescue an innocent person from the danger of physical harm to which he was exposed in this species of trial. The ordeal was of two sorts,—either fire ordeal or water ordeal; the former being confined to persons of higher rank, the latter to the common people. 4 Bl.Comm. 342.

Fire ordeal. The ordeal by fire or red-hot iron, which was performed either by taking up in the hand a piece of red-hot iron, of one, two, or three pounds weight, or by walking barefoot and blindfolded over nine red-hot plowshares, laid lengthwise at unequal distances. 4 Bl.Comm. 343; Cowell.

Water Ordeal

In Saxon and old English law. The ordeal or trial by water. The hot-water ordeal was performed by plunging the bare arm up to the elbow in boiling water, and escaping unhurt thereby. The cold-water ordeal was performed by casting the person suspected into a river or pond of cold water, when, if he floated therein, without any action of swimming it was deemed an evidence of his guilt; but, if he sunk, he was acquitted. 4 Bl.Comm. 343.

ORDEFFE, or ORDELFE. A liberty whereby a man claims the ore found in his own land; also, the ore lying under land. Cowell.

ORDELS. In old English law. The right of administering oaths and adjudging trials by ordeal within a precinct or liberty. Cowell.

ORDENAMIENTO. In Spanish law. An order emanating from the sovereign, and differing from...
ORDER

a cédula only in form and in the mode of its promulgation. Schm.Civil Law, Introd. 93, note.

ORDENAMIENTO DE ALCALÁ. A collection of Spanish law promulgated by the Cortes in the year 1348. Schm.Civil Law, Introd. 75.

ORDER. A mandate, precept; a command or direction authoritatively given; a rule or regulation. Brady v. Interstate Commerce Commission, D.C. W.Va., 43 F.2d 847, 850.

The distinction between "order" and "requisition" is that the first is a mandatory act, the latter a request. Mills v. Martin, 19 Johns. (N.Y.) 7.

An informal bill of exchange or letter of request whereby the party to whom it is addressed is directed to pay or deliver to a person therein named the whole or part of a fund or other property of the person making the order, and which is in the possession of the drawee. People v. Smith, 112 Mich. 192, 70 N.W. 466, 67 Am.St.Rep. 392; State v. Nevins, 23 Vt. 521. A designation of the person to whom a bill of exchange or negotiable promissory note is to be paid.

It is also used to designate a rank, class, or division of men; as the order of nobles, order of knights, order of priests, etc.

Orders are also issued by subordinate legislative authorities. Such are the English orders in council, or orders issued by the privy council in the name of the king, either in exercise of the royal prerogative or in pursuance of an act of parliament. The rules of court under the judicature act are grouped together in the form of orders, each order dealing with a particular subject-matter. Sweet.

In French law. The name order (ordre) is given to the operation which has for its object to fix the rank of the preferences claimed by the creditors in the distribution of the price [arising from the sale] of an immovable affected by their liens. Dalloz, mot "Ordre."

Practice

Every direction of a court or judge made or entered in writing, and not included in a judgment. An application for an order is a motion. Code Civ. Proc.Cal. § 1003; Code N.Y. § 400 (Civil Practice Act, § 113). Tyvand v. McDonne, 37 N.D. 251, 164 N.W. 1, 3; First Nat. Bank v. Poling, 42 Idaho 636, 248 P. 19, 20.

General

Agreed order. See Agreed.

Charging order. The name bestowed, in English practice, upon an order allowed by St. 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, § 14, and 3 & 4 Vict. c. 82, to be granted to a judgment creditor, that the property of a judgment debtor in government stock, or in the stock of any public company in England, corporate or otherwise, shall (whether standing in his own name or in the name of any person in trust for him) stand charged with the payment of the amount for which judgment shall have been recovered, with interest. 3 Steph.Comm. 587, 588.

Decretal order. In chancery practice. An order made by the court of chancery, in the nature of a decree, upon a motion or petition. Thompson v. McKim, 6 Har. & J. Md. 319; Bissell Carpet Sweep., er Co. v. Goshen Sweeper Co., 19 C.C.A. 25, 72 F. 545. An order in a chancery suit made on motion or otherwise not at the regular hearing of a cause, and yet not of an interlocutory nature, but finally disposing of the cause, so far as a decree could then have disposed of it. Mozley & Whiteley.

Final order. One which either terminates the action itself, or decides some matter litigated by the parties, or operates to divest some right; or one which completely disposes of the subject-matter and the rights of the parties. Salem King's Products Co. v. La Follette, 100 Or. 11, 196 P. 416, 417; Stockham v. Knollenberg, 133 Md. 337, 105 A. 305, 307; Marchant & Taylor v. Mathews County, 139 Va. 723, 124 S.E. 420, 423.

General orders. Orders or rules of court, promulgated for the guidance of practitioners and the regulation of procedure in general, or in some general branch of its jurisdiction; as opposed to a rule or an order made in an individual case; the rules of court.

Interlocutory order. An order which decides not the cause, but only settles some intervening matter relating to it; as when an order is made, on a motion in chancery, for the plaintiff to have an injunction to quiet his possession till the hearing of the cause. Termes de la Ley; Gas & Electric Securities Co. v. Manhattan & Queens Traction Corporation, C.C.A.N.Y., 266 F. 625, 632; Johnson v. Roberson, 171 N.C. 194, 88 S.E. 231; Theo. Hirsch Co. v. Scott, 87 Fla. 336, 100 So. 157, 158; Salmons v. Rugyeri, 103 N.J.Law, 596, 137 A. 568, 569; Simons v. Morris, 325 Ill. 199, 156 N.E. 280; Joyce v. Nona Mills Co., 142 La. 934, 77 So. 854.

Money order. See Money.

Restraining order. In equity practice. An order which may issue upon the filing of an application for an injunction forbidding the defendant to do the threatened act until a hearing on the application can be had. Though the term is sometimes used as a synonym of "injunction," a restraining order is properly distinguishable from an injunction, in that the former is intended only as a restraint upon the defendant until the propriety of granting an injunction, temporary or perpetual, can be determined, and it does no more than restrain the proceedings until such determination. Wetzstein v. Boston, etc., Min. Co., 25 Mont. 135, 63 P. 1043. Mason v. Milligan, 185 Ind. 319, 114 N.E. 3; Labbitt v. Bunston, 80 Mont. 293, 260 P. 727, 730. In English law, the term is specially applied to an order restraining the Bank of England, or any public company, from allowing any dealing with some stock or shares specified in the order. It is granted on motion or petition. Hunt., Eq. p. 216.

Speaking order. An order which contains matter which is explanatory or illustrative of the mere direction which is given by it is sometimes thus called. Duff v. Duff, 101 Cal. 1, 35 P. 437.

Stop order. The meaning of a stop order given to a broker is to wait until the market price of the particular security reaches a specified figure, and: then to "stop" the transaction by either selling or buying, as the case may be, as well as possible. Porter v. Wormser, 94 N.Y. 431.

ORDER

Order and disposition of goods and chattels. When goods are in the "order and disposition" of a bankrupt, they go to his trustee, and have gone so since the time of James L Wharton.

Order nisi. A provisional or conditional order, allowing a certain time within which to do some required act, on failure of which the order will be made absolute.

Order of discharge. In England. An order made under the bankruptcy act of 1869, by a court of bankruptcy, the effect of which is to discharge a bankrupt from all debts, claims, or demands provable under the bankruptcy.

Order of filiation. An order made by a court or judge having jurisdiction, fixing the paternity of a bastard child upon a given man, and requiring him to provide for its support.

Order of revivor. In English practice. An order as of course for the continuance of an abated suit. It superseded the bill of revivor.

ORDERS. The directions as to the course and purpose of a voyage given by the owner of the vessel to the captain or master. For other meanings, see Order.

ORDERS OF THE DAY. Any member of the English house of commons who wishes to propose any question, or to "move the house," as it is termed, must, in order to give the house due notice of his intention, state the form or nature of his motion on a previous day, and have it entered in a book termed the "order-book;" and the motions so entered, the house arranges, shall be considered on particular days, and such motions or matters, when the day arrives for their being considered, are then termed the "orders of the day." Brown. A similar practice obtains in the legislative bodies of this country.

ORDINANCE. A rule established by authority; a permanent rule of action; a law or statute. In a more limited sense, the term is used to designate the enactments of the legislative body of a municipal corporation. State v. Swindell, 146 Ind. 527, 45 N.E. 700, 58 Am.St.Rep. 375; Bills v. Goshen, 117 Ind. 221, 20 N.E. 115, 3 L.R.A. 261.

The name has also been given to certain enactments, more general in their character than ordinary statutes, and serving as organic laws, yet not exactly to be called "constitutions." Such was the "Ordinance for the government of the Northwest Territory," enacted by congress in 1787.

Strictly, a bill or law which might stand with the old law, and did not alter any statute in force at the time, and which became complete by the royal assent on the parlia-ment, without any statute. Hale, Com. Law. An ordinance was otherwise distinguished from a statute by the circumstance that the latter required the threefold assent of king, lords, and commons, while an ordinance might be ordained by one or two of these constituent bodies. See 4 Stat. 25.

ORDINANCE OF 1647. A law passed by the Colony of Massachusetts, still in force, in a modified form, whereby the state owns the great ponds within its confines, which are held in trust for public uses. Watuppa Reservoir Co. v. Fall River, 147 Mass. 548, 18 N.E. 465, 1 L.R.A. 466.

ORDINANCE OF 1787. A statute for the government of the Northwest Territory. Religious and legal freedom, encouragement of education, just treatment of the Indians, the future division into States, and the exclusion of slavery were ordained. Webster, Dict.

ORDINANCE OF THE FOREST. In English law. A statute made touching matters and causes of the forest. 33 & 34 Edw. 1.

ORDINANCES OF EDWARD I. Two laws and ordinances published by Edward I. in the second year of his reign, at Hastings, relating to admiralty jurisdiction. These are said to have been the foundation of a consistent usage for a long time. See Bened. Adm. § 55.

ORDINANDI LEX. Lat. The law of procedure, as distinguished from the substantial part of the law.

ORDINARIUS ITA DICITUR QUTA HABET ORDINARIAM JURISDICTIONEM, IN JURE PROPRIO, ET NON PROPTER DEPUTATIONEM. Co.Litt. 96. The ordinary is so called because he has an ordinary jurisdiction in his own right, and not a deputed one.

ORDINARY, n. At common law. One who has exempt and immediate jurisdiction in causes ecclesiastical. Also a bishop; and an archbishop is the ordinary of the whole province, to visit and receive appeals from inferior jurisdictions. Also a commissary or official of a bishop or other ecclesiastical judge having judicial power; an archdeacon; officer of the royal household. Wharton.

In American law. A judicial officer, in several of the states, clothed by statute with powers in regard to wills, probate, administration, guardianship, etc. Darrow v. Darrow, 201 Ala. 477, 78 So. 383, 384. A public house where food and lodging are furnished to the traveler and his beast, at fixed rates, open to whoever may apply for accommodation, and where intoxicating liquor is sold at retail. Talbott v. Southern Seminary, 131 Va. 576, 109 S.E. 440, 441, 19 A.L.R. 534; City of Chicago v. R. & X. Restaurant, 369 Ill. 65, 15 N.E.2d 725, 727, 117 A.L.R. 1313.
In Scotch law. A single judge of the court of session, who decides with or without a jury, as the case may be. Brande.

In the civil law. A judge who has authority to take cognizance of causes in his own right, and not by deputation. Murden v. Beath, 1 Mill. Const., S.C., 269.

Ordinary of assize and sessions. In old English law. A deputy of the bishop of the diocese, ancien-\-tly appointed to give malefactors their\• neck-\-verses, and judge whether they read or not; also to perform divine services for them, and assist in preparing them for death. Wharton.

Ordinary of Newgate. The clergyman who is attendant upon condemned malefactors in that prison to prepare them for death; he records the behavior of such persons. Formerly it was the custom of the ordinary to publish a small pamph\-let upon the execution of any remarkable criminal. Wharton.

ORDINARY, adj. Regular; usual; normal; com-\-mon; often recurring; according to established or-\-der; settled; customary; reasonable; not charac-\-terized by peculiar or unusual circumstances; be-\-longing to, exercised by, or characteristic of, the normal or average individual. Ordinary dangers incident to employment. Those commonly and usually pertaining to and in-\-cident to it, which a reasonably prudent person might anticipate, and do not include danger by acts of negligence, unless habitual and known to the servant. Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co. v. Smith, Tex. Civ.App., 197 S.W. 614, 618.

Ordinary expense. An expense is "ordinary" if it is in an ordinary class, if in the ordinary course of the transaction of municipal business or the maintenance of municipal property it may and is likely to become necessary; and it will be assumed that if by law a specific duty is imposed, and the mode of performance is prescribed, so that no discretion is left with the officer, the expense nece-\-ssarily incurred in discharging the duty is a "necessary expense." Dexter Horton Trust & Savings Bank v. Clearwater County, D.C.Idaho, 235 F. 743, 750; Arthur v. Horwege, 28 Cal.App. 738, 153 P. 980, 981; State v. Carter, 31 Wyo. 401, 226 P. 690, 693.

Ordinary handling. As in a railroad's baggage tariff, providing that cases marked "Fragile" and likely to be damaged by ordinary handling will not be accepted, except at owner's risk, means merely ordinary wear and tear necessarily inci-\-dental to transportation of such articles, where reasonable care is used. Perkins v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co., 232 Mass. 336, 122 N.E. 306, 307.

Ordinary hazards of occupation. Those arising without negligence on part of master. Chesape-\-ake & O. Ry. Co. v. Coleman, 220 Ky. 64, 294 S.W. 809, 810.

OUT OF BENEFIT

OUT OF BENEFIT. A term descriptive of insurance policy holders who have been suspended for nonpayment of premiums. American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Otis, 122 Ark. 219, 183 S.W. 183, 184, L.R.A. 1916E, 875.

OUT OF COURT. He who has no legal status in court is said to be "out of court," i.e., he is not before the court. Thus, when the plaintiff in an action, by some act of omission or commission, shows that he is unable to maintain his action, he is frequently said to put himself "out of court." Brown. The expression is colloquially applied to a litigant party when his case breaks down, equivalent to saying, "he has not a leg to stand on;" Moz. & W.

The phrase is also used with reference to agreements and transactions in regard to a pending suit which are arranged or take place between the parties or their counsel privately and without being referred to the judge or court for authorization or approval. Thus, a case which is compromised, settled, and withdrawn by private agreement of the parties, after its institution, is said to be settled "out of court." So attorneys may make agreements with reference to the conduct of a suit or the course of proceedings therein; but if these are made "out of court," that is, not made in open court or with the approval of the judge, it is a general rule that they will not be noticed by the court unless reduced to writing. Welsh v. Blackwell, 14 N. J. Law, 345.

Also called out-of-pocket loss rule.

OUT OF REPAIR. In a West Virginia statute relating to streets, sidewalks, and the like, this term means unsafe for reasonable use in the ordinary modes of travel by day or night, whether the danger exists overhead or on the surface.

OUT OF TERM. At a time when no term of the court is being held; in the vacation or interval which elapses between terms of the court. See McNeill v. Hodges, 99 N.C. 248, 6 S.E. 127.

OUT OF THE STATE. In reference to rights, liabilities, or jurisdictions arising out of the common law, this phrase is equivalent to "beyond sea," which see.

OUT OF TIME. A mercantile phrase applied to a ship or vessel that has been so long at sea as to justify the belief of her total loss. In another sense, a vessel is said to be "out of time" when, computed from her known day of sailing, the time that has elapsed exceeds the average duration of similar voyages at the same season of the year. The phrase is identical with "missing ship." 2 Duer, Ins. 469.

OUTAGE. A tax or charge formerly imposed by the state of Maryland for the inspection and marking of hogheads of tobacco intended for export. Turner v. Maryland, 2 S.Ct. 44, 107 U.S. 38, 27 L. Ed. 370.

OUTCAST. This term, applied to a person, has been held to be libelous per se, because it represents him as being a degraded and disgraced character. Herald Pub. Co. v. Feltner, 158 Ky. 35, 164 S.W. 370, 372.

OUTCROP. In mining law. The edge of a stratum which appears at the surface of the ground; that portion of a vein or lode which appears at the surface or immediately under the soil and surface debris. Duggan v. Davey, 4 Dak. 110, 26 N.W. 887; Stevens v. Williams, 23 Fed.Cas. 40. The term is not, in itself, definitive of quantity or area in respect of the mineral involved. Sloss-Sheffield Iron & Steel Co. v. Payne, 186 Ala. 341, 64 So. 617, 618.

OUTER BAR. In the English courts, barristers at law have been divided into two classes, viz., king's counsel, who are admitted within the bar of the courts, in seats specially reserved for themselves, and junior counsel, who sit without the bar; and the latter are thence frequently termed barristers of the "outer bar," or "utter bar," in contradistinction to the former class. Brown.

OUTER DOOR. In connection with the rule, statutory or otherwise, forbidding an officer to break open the outer door to serve civil process, this term designates the door of each separate apartment, where there are different apartments having a common outer door. Fourette v. Griffin, 92 Conn. 388, 103 A. 123, 124, L.R.A.1918D, 876; Schork v. Calloway, 205 Ky. 346, 265 S.W. 807, 808.

OUTER HOUSE. The name given to the great hall of the parliament house in Edinburgh, in which the lords ordinary of the court of session sit as single judges to hear causes. The term is used colloquially as expressive of the business done there in contradistinction to the "Inner House," the name given to the chambers in which the first and second divisions of the court of session hold their sittings. Bell.

OUTFANGTHEF. A liberty or privilege in the ancient common law, whereby a lord was enabled to call any man dwelling in his manor, and taken for felony in another place out of his fee, to judgment in his own court. Du Cange. See Infang-enthef.
OUTFIT. Originally, as applying to ships, those objects connected with a ship which were necessary for the sailing of her, and without which she would not in fact be navigable. But in ships engaged in whaling voyages the word has acquired a much more extended signification. Macy v. Whaling Ins. Co., 9 Metc. (Mass.) 364.

An allowance made by the United States government to one of its diplomatic representatives, as an ambassador, a minister plenipotentiary, or charge d'affaires, but not a consul, for the expense of his equipment on going from the United States to any foreign country.

OUTGO. In taxation, a flow of disservice (negative service) or negative income;—distinguished from "income," or the flow of capital service. U. S. v. Guggenheim Exploration Co., D.C.N.Y., 238 F. 231, 234.

OUTHEST, or OUTHOM. A calling men out to the army by sound of horn. Jacob.

OUTHOUSE. Any house necessary for the purposes of life, in which the owner does not make his constant or principal residence. State v. O'Brien, 2 Root (Conn.) 516. A building subservient to, yet distinct from, the principal mansion-house, located either within or without the curtilage. State v. Brooks, 4 Conn. 446; Jones v. Hungerford, 4 Gill. & J. (Md.) 402, 2 Cr. & D. 479. Parks v. State, 22 Ga.App. 621, 96 S.E. 1050, 1051.

A smaller or subordinate building connected with a dwelling, usually detached from it and standing at a little distance from it, not intended for persons to live in, but to serve some purpose of convenience or necessity; as a barn, a dairy, a toolhouse, and the like.

Under statutes, such a building may be subservient to and adjoin a business building as well as a dwelling house. State v. Marks, 45 Idaho, 92, 260 P. 697, 698.

OUTLAND. The Saxon thanes divided their hereditary lands into inland, such as lay nearest their dwelling, which they kept to their own use, and outland, which lay beyond the demesnes, and was granted out to tenants, at the will of the lord, like copyhold estates. This outland they subdivided into two parts. One part they disposed among those who attended their persons, called "theodans," or lesser thanes; the other part they allotted to their husbandmen, or churls. Jacob.

OUTLAW. In English law. One who is put out of the protection or aid of the law. 22 Viner, Abr. 316; Bacon Abr. Outlaury; 2 Sell.Pr. 277; Doctr. Plac. 331; 3 Bla.Comm. 283, 284.

OUTLAWRY. In English law. A process by which a defendant or person in contempt on a civil or criminal process was declared an outlaw. If for treason or felony, it amounted to conviction and attainder. Stim.Law Gloss. See Respublica v. Doan, 1 Dall. (Pa.) 86, 1 L.Ed. 47; Dale County v. Gunter, 46 Ala. 138; Drew v. Drew, 37 Me. 391; 3 Bla.Comm. 283; Co.Litt. 128. Outlawry for a misdemeanor does not amount to a conviction for the offense itself. 4 Steph.Com. 317. The "minor outlawry" for "trespasses" did not involve sentence of death; otherwise of the higher crimes. 2 Poll. & Maitl. 581.

In the United States, the process of outlawry seems to be unknown, at least in civil cases. Dane, Abr. ch. 193 a, 34; Hall v. Lanning, 91 U.S. 160, 23 L.Ed. 271; 37 Harvard Law Review, 799.

OUTLINE. The line which marks the outer limits of an object or figure; an exterior line or edge; contour. Taggart v. Great Northern Ry. Co., D.C. Wash., 208 F. 455, 456.

OUTLOT. In early American land law, (particularly in Missouri,) a lot or parcel of land lying outside the corporate limits of a town or village but subject to its municipal jurisdiction or control. Kissell v. St. Louis Public Schools, 16 Mo. 592; St. Louis v. Toney, 21 Mo. 243; Eberle v. St. Louis Public Schools, 11 Mo. 265; Vasquez v. Ewing, 42 Mo. 256.

OUTPARTERS. Stealers of cattle. Cowell.

OUTPUTERS. Such as set watches for the robbing of any manor-house. Cowell.

OUTRAGE. A grave injury; injurious violence; in general, any species of serious wrong offered to the person, feelings, or rights of another. McKinley v. Railroad Co., 44 Iowa, 314, 24 Am.Rep. 748; Aldrich v. Howard, 8 R.I. 246; Mosnat v. Snyder, 105 Iowa, 500, 75 N.W. 356. Synonyms are affront, insult, and abuse. State ex rel. and to Use of Donelon v. Deuser, 345 Mo. 628, 134 S.W.2d 132, 133.

OUTRIDERS. In English law. Bailiffs-errant employed by sheriffs or their deputies to ride to the extremities of their counties or hundreds to summon men to the county or hundred court. Wharton.

OUTRIGHT. Free from reserve or restraint; direct; positive; down-right; altogether; entirely; openly. Hughes v. First State Bank of Wagoner, 106 Okl. 146, 235 P. 1097, 1099.

OUTROPER. A person to whom the business of selling by auction was confined by statute. 2 H. Bl. 557.

OUTS. In banking parlance, are conditions or warranties, failure to comply with which by the prospect give the banker a right to escape from a contract and to terminate negotiations. Cray, McFawn & Co. v. Hegarty, Conroy & Co., D.C.N.Y., 27 F.Supp. 93, 100.

OUTSETTER. In Scotch law. Publisher. 3 How. State Tr. 603.

OUTSIDE. To the exterior of; without; outward from. Union Fishermen's Co-operative Packing OUTSTANDING

Existing as an adverse claim or pretension; not united with, or merged in, the title or claim of the party; as an outstanding title.

OUTSTANDING AND OPEN ACCOUNT. In legal and commercial transactions it is an unsettled debt arising from items of work and labor, goods sold and delivered, and other open transactions, not reduced to writing, and subject to future settlement and adjustment and usually disclosed by account books of the owner of the demand and does not include express contracts or obligations which have been reduced to writing such as bonds, bills of exchange, or notes. Lee v. De Forest, 22 Cal.App.2d 351, 71 P.2d 285, 291. Checotah Hardware Co. v. House, 169 Okl. 112, 35 P.2d 966, 967.

OUTSTANDING CROP. One not harvested or gathered. It is outstanding from the day it commences to grow until gathered and taken away. Sullins v. State, 53 Ala. 474.

OUTSTANDING TERM. A term in gross at law, which, in equity, may be made attendant upon the inheritance, either by express declaration or by implication.

OUTSTROKE. To mine by outstroke is to take out mineral from adjoining property through the tunnels and shafts of the demised premises. Percy La Salle Mining & Power Co. v. Newman Mining, Milling & Leasing Co., D.C.Colo., 300 F. 141, 142.

OUTSUCCEN MULTURES. In Scotch law. Out-town multures; multures, duties, or tolls paid by persons voluntarily grinding corn at any mill to which they are not thirled, or bound by tenure. 1 Forb.Inst. pt. 2, p. 140.

OUVERTURE DES SUCCESSIONS. In French law. The right of succession which arises to one upon the death, whether natural or civil, of another.

OVE. L. Fr. With. Modern French avec.

OVELL. L. Fr. Equal.

OVELTY. In old English law. Equality.

In conveyancing. The word is used to denote a contingent limitation intended to take effect on the failure of a prior estate. Thus, in what is commonly called the “name and arms clause” in a will or settlement there is generally a proviso that if the devisee fails to comply with the condition the estate is to go to some one else. This is a limitation or gift over. Wats.Comp.Eq. 1110; Sweet.

OVER. Beyond the sea; outside the limits of the state or country. Gustin v. Brattle, Kirby, Conn. 300. See Beyond Sea.

OVERAWE. To subjugate or restrain by awe, or profound reverence. Collum v. State, 21 Ala.App. 220, 107 So. 35.

OVERBREAK. In blasting, that portion of material removed which is outside and beyond slopes indicated by slope stakes. Porter v. State, 141 Wash. 51, 250 P. 449.

OVERCOME. As used in a statute providing that a presumption may be overcome by other evidence, this term is not synonymous with overbalance or outweigh, but requires merely that such evidence counterbalance the presumption, where the party relying on it has the burden of proof. Hansen v. Oregon-Washington R. & Na² Co., 97 Or. 190, 191 P. 655, 656.

OVERCYTED, or OVERCYHSED. Proved guilty or convicted. Blount.

OVERDRAFT. The act of checking out more money than one has on deposit in a bank. Bank of Jeanerette v. Druilhet, 149 La. 505, 89 So. 674, 678; State v. Larson, 119 Wash. 259, 205 P. 373, 374. It is in the nature of a loan made at the request of the depositor, and implies a promise to pay. Becker v. Fuller, 99 Misc.Rep. 672, 164 N.Y.S. 495.

OVERDRAW. To draw upon a person or a bank, by bills or checks, to an amount in excess of the funds remaining to the drawer’s credit with the drawee, or to an amount greater than what is due. See State v. Jackson, 21 S.D. 494, 113 N.W. 880, 16 Ann.Cas. 87.
The term has a definite and well-understood meaning. Money is drawn from the bank by him who draws the check, not by him who receives the money; and it is drawn upon the account of the individual by whose check it is drawn, though it be paid to and for the benefit of another. No one can draw money from bank upon his own account, except by means of his own check or draft, nor can he overdraw his account with the bank in any other manner. State v. Stimson, 24 N.J.Law, 478, 484.

OVERDUE. Due and more than due; delayed or unpaid. Bliss v. California Co-op. Producers, Cal. App., 156 P.2d 259, 260.

A negotiable instrument or other evidence of debt is overdue when the day of its maturity is past and it remains unpaid. La Due v. First Nat. Bank, 31 Minn. 33, 16 N.W. 426.

A vessel is said to be overdue when she has not reached her destination at the time when she might ordinarily have been expected to arrive.

OVERFLOWED LANDS. Those that are covered by nonnavigable waters (not including lands between high and low water mark of navigable streams or bodies of water, nor lands covered and uncovered by ordinary daily ebb and flow of normal tides of navigable waters). Miller v. Bay-To-Gulf, 141 Fla. 452, 193 So. 425, 427.

OVERHAUL. To inquire into; to review; to disturb. "The merits of a judgment can never be overhauled by an original suit." 2 H.B1. 414.

To examine thoroughly, as machinery, with a view to repairs. Holloway v. Wheeler, Tex.Civ. App., 261 S.W. 467, 468.

OVERHEAD. All administrative or executive costs incident to the management, supervision, or conduct of the capital outlay, or business;—distinguished from "operating charges," or those items that are inseparably connected with the productive end and may be seen as the work progresses, and are the subject of knowledge from observation. Lytle, Campbell & Co. v. Somers, Fitler & Todd Co., 276 Pa. 409, 120 A. 409, 410, 27 A.L.R. 41. Continuous expenses of a business: the expenses and obligations incurred in connection with operation; expenses necessarily incurred in organization, office expenses, engineering, inspection, supervision, and management during construction; and general expenditures in financial or industrial enterprise which cannot be attributed to any one department or product, excluding cost of materials, labor, and selling. Guillon v. State Highway Commission of Montana, 102 Mont. 149, 56 P.2d 1072, 1075.

"Overhead charges" is a term which, as applied to a public service corporation, includes the expense that would necessarily be incurred in the reproduction of the property; the legal expenses of organization and expenses for office, engineering, inspection, supervision, and management during construction; fire and casualty insurance, taxes and interest during the period, contractors profits, and other minor expenses of like chart ter. Bonbright v. Geary, D.C.Ariz., 210 F. 44, 54.

OVERHERNISSA. In Saxon law. Contumacy or contempt of court. Leg. IEthel, c. 25.

OVER-INSURANCE. See Double Insurance.

OVERISSUE. To issue in excessive quantity; to issue in excess of fixed legal limits. Thus, "over-issued stock" of a private corporation is capital stock issued in excess of the amount limited and prescribed by the charter or certificate of incorporation. Hayden v. Charter Oak Driving Park, 63 Conn. 142, 27 A. 232.

OVERLIVE. To survive; to live longer than another. Finch, Law, b. 1, c. 3, no. 58; 1 Leon. 1.

OVERLOAD. To cause to bear too heavy a burden; to load too heavily. But to say of a business, such as an insurance business, that it is overloaded, implies nothing defamatory on its face in the sense of imputing dishonesty, lack of fair dealing, want of fidelity, integrity, or business ability. Talbot v. Mack, 41 Nev. 245, 169 P. 25, 29.

OVERLYING RIGHT. Right of owner of land to take water from ground underneath for use on his land within basin or watershed. Right is based on ownership of land and is appurtenant thereto. City of Pasadena v. City of Alhambra, 207 P.2d 17, 28, 33 Cal.2d 908.

OVERPLUS. What is left beyond a certain amount; the residue; the surplus; the remainder of a thing. Lyon v. Tomkies, 1 Mees. & W. 521.

OVERRATE. In its strictest signification, a rating by way of excess and not one which ought not to have been made at all. 2 Ex. 352.

OVERREACHING CLAUSE. In a resettlement, a clause which saves the powers of sale and leasing annexed to the estate for life created by the original settlement, when it is desired to give the tenant for life the same estate and powers under the resettlement. The clause is so called because it provides that the resettlement shall be overreached by the exercise of the old powers. If the resettlement were executed without a provision to this effect, the estate of the tenant for life and the annexed powers would be subject to any charges for portions, etc., created under the original settlement. 3 DaV Conv. 489; Sweet.

OVERRIDING ROYALTY. As applied to an existing oil and gas lease is a given percentage of the gross production payable to some person other than the lessor or persons claiming under him. Homestake Exploration Corporation v. Schoregge, 81 Mont. 604, 264 P. 388, 392. An interest carved out of the lessee's share of the oil. Wright v. Brush, C.C.A.Kan., 115 F.2d 265, 267.

OVERRULE. To supersede; annul; make void; reject by subsequent action or decision. A judicial decision is said to be overruled when a later decision, rendered by the same court or by a superior court in the same system, expresses a judgment upon the same question of law directly opposite to that which was before given, thereby depriving the earlier opinion of all authority as a precedent. The term is not properly applied to conflicting decisions on the same point by co-ordinate or independent tribunals. It also signifies that a majority of the judges of a court have decided against the opinion of the minority, in which case the minority judges are said to be overruled.

To refuse to sustain, or recognize as sufficient, an objection made in the course of a trial, as to the introduction of particular evidence, etc.

OVERS. In the meat packing business, the increase in the weight of meat resulting from salt put on it. G. H. Hammond Co. v. Joseph Mercantile Co., 144 Ark. 108, 222 S.W. 27, 28.

OVERSAMESSA. In old English law. A forfeiture for contempt or neglect in not pursuing a malefactor. 3 Inst. 116.

OVERSEER. A superintendent or supervisor; a public officer whose duties involve general superintendence of routine affairs.

OVERSEERS OF HIGHWAYS. The name given, in some of the states, to a board of officers of a city, township, or county, whose special function is the construction and repair of the public roads or highways.

OVERSEERS OF THE POOR. Persons appointed or elected to take care of the poor with moneys furnished to them by the public authority. Their duties are regulated by local statutes.

OVERSMAN. In Scotch law. An umpire appointed by a submission to decide where two arbiters have differed in opinion, or he is named by the arbiters themselves, under powers given them by the submission. Bell.

OVERT. Open; manifest; public; issuing in action, as distinguished from that which rests merely in intention or design. Commonwealth v. Barnes, 107 Pa.Super. 46, 162 A. 670, 675.

Market Overt. See Market.

An overt act which will justify the exercise of the right of self-defense is such as would manifest to the mind of a reasonable person a present intention to kill him or do him great bodily harm. Cooke v. State, 18 Ala.App. 416, 93 So. 86, 88.

An overt act which completes crime of conspiracy to violate federal law is something apart from conspiracy and is an act to effect the object of the conspiracy, and need be neither a criminal act, nor crime that is object of conspiracy, but must accompany or follow agreement and must be done in furtherance of object of agreement. Marino v. United States, C.C.A.Cal., 91 F.2d 691, 694, 695, 113 A.L.R. 976.

OVERTAKE. To come or catch up with in a course of motion. Ringwald v. Beene, 170 Tenn. 116, 92 S.W.2d 411, 413.

OVERTIME. After regular working hours; beyond the regular fixed hours. Ferguson v. Port Huron & Sarnia Ferry Co., D.C.Mich., 13 F.2d 489, 492; Goodman v. Moss, 43 N.Y.S.2d 381, 385.

OVERTIME WAGE. Portion of wages paid employee for services rendered beyond regularly fixed working hours. Goodman v. Moss, 43 N.Y.S.2d 381, 385.

OVERTURE. An opening; a proposal.

OWE. To be bound to do or omit something, especially to pay a debt. Robinson v. Ramsey, 161 Ga. 1, 129 S.E. 837, 839; Humphreys v. County Court, 90 W.Va. 315, 110 S.E. 701, 703.

OWELTY. Equality; an equalization charge. Bagg v. Osborn, 169 Minn. 126, 210 N.W. 862, 863.

This word is used in law in several compound phrases, as follows:

Owalty of exchange. A sum of money given, when two persons have exchanged lands, by the owner of the less valuable estate to the owner of the more valuable, to equalize the exchange.

Owalty of partition. A sum of money paid by one of two coparceners or co-tenants to the other, when a partition has been effected between them, but, the land not being susceptible of division into exactly equal shares, such payment is required to make the portions respectively assigned to them of equal value. Littleton, § 251; Co. Litt. 169a; Long v. Long, 1 Watts (Pa.) 265; 16 Viner, Abr. 223, pl. 3. Reed v. Deposit Co., 113 Pa. 578, 6 A. 163. The power to grant owalty has been exercised by the courts of equity from time immemorial. Town of Morganton v. Avery, 179 N.C. 551, 103 S.E. 138.

Owalty of services. In the feudal law, the condition obtaining when there is lord, mesne, and tenant, and the tenant holds the mesne by the same service that the mesne holds over the lord above him. Tomlins.

OWING. Unpaid. A debt, for example, is owing while it is unpaid, and whether it be due or not. Tomlins.

OWLING. In English law. The offense of transporting wool or sheep out of the kingdom. Coquard v. Bank of Kansas City, 12 Mo.App. 261; Musselman v. Wise, 84 Ind. 248; Jones v. Thompson, 1 El., Bl. & El. 64; Succession of Guidry, 40 La.Ann. 671, 4 So. 893.

OWLERS. In English law. Persons who carried wool or sheep out of the kingdom; so called from its being usually carried on in the night. 4 Bl. Comm. 154.

The term is, however, a nomen generalissimum, and its meaning is to be gathered from the connection in which it is used, and from the subject-matter to which it is applied. Warren v. Lower Salt Creek Drainage Dist. of Logan County, 316 Ill. 345, 147 N.E. 248, 249. The primary meaning of the word as applied to land is one who owns the fee and who has the right to dispose of the property, but the term also includes one having a possessory right to land or the person occupying or cultivating it. Dunbar v. Texas Irr. Co., Tex.Civ.App., 195 S.W. 614, 616; McCarthy v. Hansel, 4 Ohio App. 425; Thompson v. Thompson, 79 Or. 513, 155 P. 1190, 1191; McLevis v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 165 Minn. 468, 206 N.W. 940, 942; Great Northern Ry. Co. v. Oakley, 135 Wash. 279, 237 P. 990, 992; In re Opinon of the Justices, 234 Mass. 597, 127 N.E. 525, 529. Sometimes it includes a lessee; Tobin v. Gartiez, 44 Nev. 179, 191 P. 1063, 1064; but not always; Smith v. Improvement Dist. No. 14 of Texarkana, 108 Ark. 141, 156 S.W. 455, 456, 44 L.R.A.N.S., 696. A mortgagee may be deemed an "owner"; Lindholm v. Hamilton, 159 Minn. 81, 198 N.W. 289, 290; Blaine County Bank v. Noble, 55 Okl. 361, 155 P. 532, 534; Burrill Nat. Bank v. Edminster, 119 Me. 367, 111 A. 423, 424; Merriman v. City of New York, 227 N.Y. 279, 125 N.E. 500, 502; but under different statutes or circumstances, an opposite result may be reached; Huebner v. Lashley, 236 P. 627, 628; Foster v. American Union Line, 118 Me. 34, 105 A. 405, 407; Texas Bank & Trust Co. v. Allen v. State, 94 Tex.Cr.R. 646, 252 S.W. 505; Carson v. State, 30 Okl.Cr. 438, 236 P. 627, 628.

In theft and burglary cases, the "owner" is the person in possession, having care, control, and management at the time. Cantrell v. State, 105 Tex.Cr.R. 560, 289 S.W. 406, 407; Allen v. State, 94 Tex.Cr.R. 646, 252 S.W. 505; Carson v. State, 30 Okl.Cr. 438, 236 P. 627, 628.

In embezzlement, the principal to whom an agent looks for authority, under whose control he acts, and from whom he receives compensation and takes direction, is the owner within the meaning of statute. Coney v. State, 100 Tex.Cr.R. 380, 272 S.W. 197, 199.

Equitable owner. One who is recognized in equity as the owner of property, because the real and beneficial use and title belong to him, although the bare legal title is vested in another. e.g., a trustee for his benefit. One who has a present title in land which will ripen into legal ownership.
upon the performance of conditions subsequent. Hawkins v. Stiles, Tex.Civ.App., 158 S.W. 1011, 1021. There may therefore be two "owners" in respect of the same property, one the nominal or legal owner, the other the beneficial or equitable owner. In re Fulham's Estate, 96 Vt. 308, 119 A. 433, 437.

General owner. He who has the primary or residuary title to it; as distinguished from a special owner, who has a special interest in the same thing, amounting to a qualified ownership, such, for example, as a bailee's lien. Farmers' & Mechanics' Nat. Bank v. Logan, 74 N.Y. 581. One who has both the right of property and of possession.

General and beneficial owner. The person whose interest is primarily one of possession and enjoyment in contemplation of an ultimate absolute ownership;—not the person whose interest is primarily in the enforcement of a collateral pecuniary claim, and does not contemplate the use or enjoyment of the property as such. Ex parte State, 206 Ala. 375, 90 So. 896.

Joint owners. Two or more persons who jointly own and hold title to property, e.g., joint tenants, and also partners and tenants in common. In re Huggins' Estate, 96 N.J.Eq. 275, 125 A. 27, 30. In its most comprehensive sense, the term embraces all cases where the property in question is owned by two or more persons regardless of the special nature of their relationship or how it came into being. Halferty v. Karr, 188 Mo.App. 241, 175 S.W. 146, 147.

An estate by entirety is a "joint ownership" of a husband and wife as at common law notwithstanding legislative enactments touching joint tenancy. Cullum v. Rice, 236 Mo.App. 1113, 162 S.W. 2d 342, 344.

Legal owner. One who is recognized and held responsible by the law as the owner of property. In a more particular sense, one in whom the legal title to real estate is vested, but who holds it in trust for the benefit of another, the latter being called the "equitable" owner.

Part owners. Joint owners; co-owners; those who have shares of ownership in the same thing, particularly a vessel.

Real owners. Those who must be joined in actions of scire facias sur mortgage under Pennsylvania statutes are the present owners of the title under which the mortgagor claimed when he executed the mortgages, and do not include persons claiming by titles antagonistic to the mortgagor. Orient Building & Loan Ass'n v. Gould, 239 Pa. 335, 86 A. 863.

Record owner. This term, particularly used in statutes requiring notice of tax delinquency or sale, means the owner of record, not the owner described in the tax roll; Okanogan Power & Irrigation Co. v. Quackenbush, 107 Wash. 651, 182 P. 618, 619, 5 A.L.R. 966; the owner of the title at time of notice; Hunt v. State, 110 Tex. 204, 217 S. W. 1034, 1035.

Reputed owner. One who has to all appearances the title to, and possession of, property; one who, from all appearances, or from supposition, is the owner of a thing. Lowell Hardware Co. v. May, 59 Colo. 475, 149 P. 831, 832. He who has the general credit or reputation of being the owner or proprietor of goods. Santa Cruz Rock PaV. Co. v. Lyons, 5 Cal.Unrep.Cas. 260, 43 P. 601.

This phrase is chiefly used in English bankruptcy practice, where the bankrupt is styled the "reputed owner" of goods lawfully in his possession, though the real owner may be another "person. The word "reputed" has a much weaker sense than its derivation would appear to warrant; importing merely a supposition or opinion derived or made up from outward appearances, and often unsupported by fact. The term "reputed owner" is frequently employed in this sense. 2 Steph.Comm. 206.

Riparian owner. See Riparian.

Sole and unconditional owner. An expression commonly used in fire insurance policies, in which the word "sole" means that no one else has any interest in the property as owner, and "unconditional" means that the quality of the estate is not limited or affected by any condition. Globe & Rutgers Fire Ins. Co. v. Creekmere, 69 Okl. 238, 171 P. 874, 876; Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. McCain, 141 Miss. 394, 106 So. 529. To be "unconditional and sole," the interest or ownership of the insured must be completely vested, not contingent or conditional, nor in common or jointly with others, but of such nature that the insured must alone sustain the entire loss if the property is destroyed; and this is so whether the title is legal or equitable. Soccero v. National Union Fire Ins. Co. of Pittsburgh, Pa., 90 Fla. 820, 106 So. 879; Livingston v. Boston Ins. Co., 255 Pa. 1, 99 A. 212, 213.

Special owner. One who has a special interest in an article of property, amounting to a qualified ownership of it, such, for example, as a bailee's lien; as distinguished from the general owner, who has the primary or residuary title to the same thing. Frazier v. State, 18 Tex.App. 441. Some person holding property with the consent of, and as representative of, the actual owner. Mathieu v. Roberts, 31 N.M. 469, 247 P. 1066, 1068.

OWNERSHIP. Collection of rights to use and enjoy property, including right to transmit it to others. Trustees of Phillips Exeter Academy v. Exeter, 92 N.H. 473, 33 A.2d 665, 673. The complete dominion, title, or proprietary right in a thing or claim. The entirety of the powers of use and disposal allowed by law. See Property.

The right of one or more persons to possess and use a thing to the exclusion of others. Civ. Code Cal. § 654. The right by which a thing belongs to some one in particular, to the exclusion of all other persons. Civ. Code La. art. 488. The exclusive right of possession, enjoyment, and disposal; Thompson v. Kreutzer, 112 Miss. 165, 72 So. 891; involving as an essential attribute the right to control, handle, and dispose; Hardinge v. Empire Zinc Co., 17 Ariz. 75, 148 P. 306, 310.

Ownership is divided into perfect and imperfect. Ownership is perfect when it is perpetual, and when the thing is unincumbered with any real right towards any other person than the owner. On the contrary, ownership is imperfect when it is to terminate at a certain time or on a condition, or if the thing which is the object of it, being an immovable, is charged with any real right towards a third person; as a usufruct, use, or servitude. When an immovable is subject to a usufruct, the owner of it is said to possess the naked ownership. Civ. Code La. art. 490; Maestri v. Board of Assessors, 110 La. 517, 34 So. 658.

Exclusive ownership. See Exclusive Ownership.

OXFILD. A restitution anciently made by a hundred or county for any wrong done by one that was within the same. Lamb. Arch. 125.

See Librata Terrae.

OYER. In Old Practice. Hearing; the hearing a deed read, which a party sued on a bond, etc., might pray or demand, and it was then read to him by the other party; the entry on the record being, "et ei legitur in hcec verba," (and it is read to him in these words). Steph. Pl. 67, 68; 3 Bl. Comm. 299; 3 Salk. 119.

In Modern practice. A copy of a bond or specialty sued upon, given to the opposite party, in lieu of the old practice of reading it.

OYER AND TERMINER. A half French phrase applied in England to the assizes, which are so called from the commission of oyer and terminer directed to the judges, empowering them to "inquire, hear, and determine" all treasons, felonies, and misdemeanors. This commission is now issued regularly, but was formerly used only on particular occasions, as upon sudden outrage or insurrection in any place. In the United States, the higher criminal courts are called "courts of oyer and terminer." Burrill.

OYER DE RECORD. A petition made in court that the judges, for better proof's sake, will hear or look upon any record. Cowell.

OYEZ. Hear ye. A word used in courts by the public crier to command attention when a proclamation is about to be made. Usually pronounced "0 yes." 4 Bla. Comm. 340, n.

PACIFICATION. The act of making peace between two hostile or belligerent states; reestablishment of public tranquillity.

PACIFIST. One who seeks to maintain peace and to abolish war; one who refuses or is unwilling for any purpose to bear arms because of conscientious considerations, and who is disposed to encourage others in such refusal. U. S. v. Schwimer, Ill., 49 S.Ct. 448, 451, 279 U.S. 644, 73 L.Ed. 889.

PACK. To deceive by false appearances; to counterfeit; to delude; to put together in sorts with a fraudulent design. To pack a jury is to use unlawful, improper, or deceitful means to have the jury made up of persons favorably disposed to the party so contriving, or who have been or can be improperly influenced to give the verdict he seeks. The term imports the improper and corrupt selection of a jury sworn and impaneled for the trial of a cause. Mix v. Woodward, 12 Conn. 289.

PACK OF WOOL. A horse load, which consists of seventeen stone and two pounds, or two hundred and forty pounds weight. Fleta, L 2, c. 12; Cowell.

PACKAGE. A bundle put up for transportation or commercial handling; a thing in form to become, as such, an article of merchandise or delivery from hand to hand. A parcel is a small package; "parcel" being the diminutive of "package." Each of the words denotes a thing in form suitable for transportation or handling, or sale from hand to hand. Haley v. State, 42 Neb. 556, 60 N.W. 962, 47 Am.St.Rep. 718; State v. Parsons, 124 Mo. 436, 27 S.W. 1102, 46 Am.St.Rep. 457. As ordinarily understood in the commercial world, it means a shipping package. Noble v. People, 67 Colo. 429, 180 P. 562, 563. Where a bale of cotton was held not a package; contra, Lamb v. Transp. Co., 2 Daly (N. Y.) 454.

In old English law. One of various duties charged in the port of London on the goods imported and exported by aliens, or by denizens the sons of aliens. Tomlins. Now abolished. Whart. Lex.

Original package. See Original.

PACKED PARCELS. The name for a consignment of goods, consisting of one large parcel made up of several small ones, (each bearing a different address,) collected from different persons by the immediate consignor, (a carrier,) who unites them into one for his own profit, at the expense of the railway by which they are sent, since the railway company would have been paid more for the carriage of the parcels singly than together. Wharton.

PACKER. A person employed in England by merchants to receive and (in some instances) to select goods from manufacturers, dyers, calenders, etc., and pack the same for exportation. Arch. Bankr., 11th ed. 37.

In the United States, one engaged in the business of slaughtering and packing cattle, sheep, and hogs, and preparing their products for sale. See Williams v. Schehl, 84 W.Va. 499, 100 S.E. 280, 282.

PACT. A bargain; compact; agreement. This word is used in writings on Roman law and on PACTUM

PACTO ALIQUOD LICITUM EST, QUOD SINE PACTO NON ADMITTITUR. Co. Litt. 166. By special agreement things are allowed which are not otherwise permitted.

PACTUM. Lat.

In the civil law. A pact. An agreement or convention without specific name, and without consideration, which, however, might, in its nature, produce a civil obligation. Heinecc. Elem. lib. 3, tit. 14, § 775; Merlin, Rep. Pacte.

In Roman law. With some exceptions, those agreements that the law does not directly enforce, but which it recognizes only as a valid ground of defense, were called "pacta." Those agreements that are enforced, in other words, are supported by actions, are called "contractus." The exceptions are few, and belong to a late period. Hunter, Rom. Law, 546.

Nudum Pactum. A bare or naked pact or agreement; a promise or undertaking made without any consideration for it, and therefore not enforceable.

PACTUM COMMISSORIUM. An agreement of forfeiture. See Lex Commissoria.

PACTUM CONSTITUTIE PECUNIZE. In the civil law. An agreement by which a person appointed to his creditor a certain day, or a certain time, at which he promised to pay; or it may be defined simply an agreement by which a person promises a creditor to pay him. There is a striking conformity between the pactum constitutie pecuniae, as above defined, and our indebitatus assumpsit. 4 Co. 91, 95. See 1 H.Bla. 550, 850; Brooke, Abr. Action sur le Case (Pl. 7, 69, 72); 4 B. & B. 295; 1 Chitty, Pl. 89.

PACTUM DE NON ALIENANDO. A pact or agreement binding the owner of property not to alienate it, intended to protect the interests of another; particularly an agreement by the mortgagee of real estate that he will not transfer the title to a third person until after satisfaction of the mortgage. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 461. A clause inserted in mortgages in Louisiana to secure the mortgage creditor the right to foreclose his mortgage by executory process directed solely against the mortgagee, and to give him the right to seize and sell the mortgaged property, regardless of any subsequent alienations. Avegno v. Schmidt, 35 La.Ann. 585; Shields v. Schiff, 124 U.S. 355, 8 S.Ct. 510, 31 L.Ed. 445.

PACTUM DE NON PETENDO. In the civil law. An agreement not to sue. A simple convention whereby a creditor promises the debtor that he will not enforce his claim. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 542.
PACTUM DE QUOTA LITIS. In the civil law.
An agreement by which a creditor promised to pay a portion of a debt difficult to recover to a person who undertook to recover it. Wharton.

PAD. To stuff or furnish with padding. A charge that a contractor padded his pay roll would imply a charge of deceit or artifice. Smith v. Aultman, 30 Ga.App. 507, 118 S.E. 459.

PAINE FORTE ET DURE. See Peine Forte et Dure.

PAIRED-OFF. In the practice of legislative bodies, a species of negative proxies, by which two members, who belong to opposite parties or are on opposite sides with regard to a given question, mutually agree that they will both be absent from voting, either for a specified period or when a division is had on the particular question. By this mutual agreement a vote is neutralized on each side of the question, and the relative numbers on the division are precisely the same as if both members were present. May, Parl. Pr. 370. It is said to have originated in the house of commons in Cromwell's time.

PAIS, PAYS. Fr. The country; the neighborhood.
A trial per pais signifies a trial by the country; that is, by jury.
An assurance by matter in pais is an assurance transacted between two or more private persons "in the country;" that is, upon the very spot to be transferred.

PALINGMAN. In old English law. A merchant denizen; one born within the English pale. Blount.

PALLIO COOPERIRE. In old English law. An ancient custom, where children were born out of wedlock, and their parents afterwards intermarried. The children, together with the father and mother, stood under a cloth extended while the marriage was solemnized. It was in the nature of adoption. The children were legitimate by the civil, but not by the common, law. Jacob. They were called “mantle children” in Germany, France, and Normandy. 2 Poll. & Maitl. 397. The custom existed in Scotland almost to our own time. Bryce, Studies in Hist. etc., Essay xvi.

PALM OFF. To impose by fraud; to put off by unfair means. Sayre v. McGill Ticket Punch Co.. D.C.Ill., 200 F. 771, 773.
PALMARIUM. In civil law. A conditional fee for professional services in, addition to the lawful charge.

PALMER ACT. A name given to the English statute 19 & 20 Vict. c. 16, enabling a person accused of a crime committed out of the jurisdiction of the central criminal court, to be tried in that court.

PALMING OFF DOCTRINE. Rule of law itself by which it is determined whether a given state of facts constitutes "unfair competition." Soft-Lite Lens Co. v. Ritholz, 301 Ill.App. 100, 21 N.E. 2d 835, 838.

PALMISTRY. The practice of telling fortunes by a feigned interpretation of the lines and marks on the hand. Also, a trick with the hand. 2 Exch. Div. 268.

PAMPHLET LAWS. The name given in some states, such as Pennsylvania, to the publication, in pamphlet or book form, containing the acts passed by the state legislature at each of its biennial sessions.

PANDECTS. A compilation of Roman law, consisting of selected passages from the writings of the most authoritative of the older jurists, methodically arranged, prepared by Tribonian with the assistance of sixteen associates, under a commission from the emperor Justinian. This work, which is otherwise called the "Digest," because in his compilation the writings of the jurists were reduced to order and condensed quasi digestive, comprises fifty books, and is one of the four great works composing the Corpus Juris Civilis. It was first published in A. D. 533, when Justinian gave to it the force of law.

PANDERER. One who solicits for prostitute or lewd woman. Lutes v. Commonwealth, 236 Ky. 549, 33 S.W.2d 620, 622, 74 A.L.R. 304.

PANDEXTS. A compilation of Roman law, consisting of selected passages from the writings of the most authoritative of the older jurists, methodically arranged, prepared by Tribonian with the assistance of sixteen associates, under a commission from the emperor Justinian. This work, which is otherwise called the "Digest," because in his compilation the writings of the jurists were reduced to order and condensed quasi digestive, comprises fifty books, and is one of the four great works composing the Corpus Juris Civilis. It was first published in A. D. 533, when Justinian gave to it the force of law.

PAPER

PAPER. A manufactured substance composed of fibres (whether vegetable or animal) adhere together in forms consisting of sheets of various sizes and of different thicknesses, used for writing or printing or other purposes to which flexible sheets are applicable. .4 H. & N. 470.

A written or printed document or instrument. A document filed or introduced in evidence in a suit at law, as, in the phrase "papers in the case" and in "papers on appeal." Any writing or printed document, including letters, memoranda, legal or business documents, and books of account, as in the constitutional provision which protects the people from unreasonable searches and seizures in respect to their "papers" as well as their houses and persons. A written or printed evidence of debt, particularly a promissory note or a bill of exchange, as in the phrases "accommodation paper" and "commercial paper."

Books are not paper within the meaning of the tariff act; Pott v. Arthur, 104 U.S. 735, 26 L.Ed. 909.

The term "papers" does not mean newspapers or perhaps even include them within the meaning of a statute, the object of which is to prevent a jury from receiving any evidence, papers, or documents not authorized by the court. State v. Jackson, 9 Mont. 508, 24 P. 216. But the word includes photographs of deceased showing the nature of his wounds. People v. Balestieri, 23 Cal.App. 708, 139 P. 821, 823.

Generally, the words "documents" and "papers" refer to particular instruments and writings bearing upon specific transactions, whereas "books of accounts" and "records" have reference to serial, continuous, and more permanent memorials of a concern’s business and affairs. Cudahy Packing Co. v. U. S., C.C.A.Ill., 15 F.2d 133, 136.

In English practice. The list of causes or cases intended for argument, called "the paper of causes." 1 Tidd, Pr. 504. See Paper Days.

Paper office. In English law. An ancient office in the palace of Whitehall, where all the public writings, matters of state and council, proclamations, letters, intelligences, negotiations of the queen’s ministers abroad, and generally all the papers and dispatches that pass through the offices of the secretaries of state, are deposited. Also an office or room in the court of queen’s bench where the records belonging to that court are deposited; sometimes called "paper-mill." Wharton.

Paper title. See Title.

PAPIAN POPP1EAN LAW. See Lex Papia Poppea.

PAPIST. One who adheres to the communion of the Church of Rome. The word seems to be considered by the Roman Catholics themselves as a nickname of reproach, originating in their maintaining the supreme ecclesiastical power of the pope. Wharton.

PAR. In commercial law. Equal; equality. An equality subsisting between the nominal or face value of a bill of exchange, share of stock, etc., and its actual selling value. When the values are thus equal, the instrument or share is said to be "at par;" if it can be sold for more than its nominal worth, it is "above par;" if for less, it is "below par." Conover v. Smith, 83 Cal.App. 227, 256 P. 835, 838; Town of Buffalo v. Walker, 126 Okt. 6, 257 P. 766, 770; Boston & M. R. R. v. U. S., C.C. A.Mass., 265 F. 578, 579.

Par of exchange. In mercantile law. The precise equality or equivalency of any given sum or quantity of money in the coin of one country, and the like sum or quantity of money in the coin of any other foreign country into which it is to be exchanged, supposing the money of such country to be of the precise weight and purity fixed by the mint standard of the respective countries. Story, Bills, § 30. Murphy v. Kastner, 50 N.J.Eq. 220, 24 A. 564; Blue Star S. S. Co. v. Keyser, D.C.Fla., 81 F. 510; Delafield v. Illinois, 26 Wend., N.Y., 224. The par of the currencies of any two countries means the equivalence of a certain amount of the currency of the one in the currency of the other, supposing the currency of both to be of the precise weight and purity fixed by their respective mints. The exchange between the two countries is said to be at par when bills are negotiated on this footing; i.e., when a bill for £100 drawn on London sells in Paris for 2,520 frs., and vice versa. Bowen, Pol. Econ. 284, 11 East, 267.

PAR. Lat. Equal.

Par delictum. Equal guilt. “This is not a case of par delictum. It is oppression on one side and submission on the other. It never can be predicated as par delictum when one holds the rod and the other bows to it.” 6 Maule & S. 165. See In Pari Delicto.

Par oneri. Equal to the burden or charge, or to the detriment or damage.

PAR IN PAREM IMPERIUM NON HABET. Jenk.Cent. 174. An equal has no dominion over an equal.

PARAGRAPH. A distinct part of a discourse or writing, any section or subdivision of writing or condition among nobles, or persons holding by a noble tenure. Thus, when a fief is divided among brothers, the younger hold their part of the elder by parage; e., without any homage or service. Also the portion which a woman may obtain on partition of an inheritance between co-heirs. Co. Litt. 166b. More properly, however, an equality of condition among nobles, or persons holding by a noble tenure. Thus, when a fief is divided among brothers, the younger hold their part of the elder by parage; e., without any homage or service. Also the portion which a woman may obtain on her marriage. Cowell.

PARAPHERNALIA. The separate property of a married woman, other than that which is included in her dowry, or dos.

PARAPHERNALIA. The separate property of a married woman, other than that which is included in her dowry, or dos.

PARAPHERNALIA. The separate property of a married woman, other than that which is included in her dowry, or dos.
PARAPHERNALIA

There can be no such thing as paratiperal property prior to marriage; Le Boeuf v. Melancon, 131 La. 148, 59 So. 102.

Those goods which a woman is allowed to have, after the death of her husband, besides her dower, consisting of her apparel and ornaments, suitable to her rank and degree. 2 Bl. Comm. 436.

Those goods which a wife could bequeath by her testament. 2 Poll. & Maitl. 427.

PARAPHERNAUX, BIENS. Fr. In French law. All the wife’s property which is not subject to the regime dotal; and of these articles the wife has the entire administration; but she may allow the husband to enjoy them, and in that case he is not liable to account. Brown.

PARASCEVE. The sixth day of the last week in Lent, particularly called “Good Friday.” In English law, it is a dies non juridicus.

PARASYNEXIS. In the civil law. A conventicle, or unlawful meeting.

PARATITLA. In the civil law. Notes or abstracts prefixed to titles of law, giving a summary of their contents. Cod. 1, 17, 1, 12. An abbreviated explanation of some titles or books of the Code or Digest.

PARATUM HABEO. Lat. I have him in readiness. The return by the sheriff to a capias ad respondendum, signifying that he has the defendant in readiness to be brought into court. This was a fiction, where the defendant was at large. Afterwards he was required, by statute, to take bail from the defendant, and he returned cepi corpus and bailbond. But still he might be ruled to bring in the body; White v. Filler, 7 Pa. 533.

PARAVAIL. Inferior; subordinate. Tenant paravail signified the lowest tenant of land, being the tenant of a mesne lord. He was so called because he was supposed to make “avail” or profit of the land for another. Cowell; 2 Bl. Comm. 60.

PARCEL, n. To divide an estate. Bac. Abr. Conditions (0).

PARCEL, v. A small package or bundle. See Package.

The word “parcel” is not a sufficient description of the property alleged in an indictment to have been stolen. The prisoner was indicted for stealing “one parcel, of the value of one shilling, of the goods,” etc. The parcel in question was taken from the hold of a vessel, out of a box broken open by the prisoner. Held an insufficient description; 7 Cox, C. C. 13.

PARCEL MAKERS. Two officers in the exchequer who formerly made the parcels or items of the escheaters’ accounts, wherein they charged them with everything they had levied for the king during the term of their office. Cowell.

PARCELLA TERME. A parcel of land.

PARCELS. A description of property, formally set forth in a conveyance, together with the boundaries thereof, in order to its easy identification.

PARCELS, BILL OF. An account of the items composing a parcel or package of goods, transmitted with them to the purchaser. See, further, Bill of Parcels under “Bill,” 8.

PARNARY. The state or condition of holding title to lands jointly by parencers, before the common inheritance has been divided. Center v. Kramer, 112 Ohio St. 269, 147 N.E. 602, 605.

PARECNER. A joint heir; one who, with others, holds an estate in co-parcenary, (q. v.). Gibson v. Johnson, 331 Mo. 1198, 56 S.W.2d 783, 88 A.L.R. 369.

PARCHMENT. Sheep-skins dressed for writing, so called from Pergamus, Asia Minor, where they were invented. Used for deeds, and used for writs of summons in England previous to the judicature act, 1875. Wharton.

The skin of a lamb, sheep, goat, young calf, or other animal, prepared for writing on; also, any of various papers made in imitation thereof. Webster, Dict.

PARCO FRACTO. Pound-breach; also the name of an old English writ against one who violently breaks a pound and takes beasts which, for some trespass done, or some other just cause, were lawfully impounded.

PARCUS. A park, (q. v.). A pound for stray cattle. Spelman.

PARDON. An act of grace, proceeding from the power intrusted with the execution of the laws, which exempts the individual on whom it is bestowed from the punishment the law inflicts for a crime he has committed. tr. S. v. Wilson, 7 Pet. 160, 8 L.Ed. 640; Ex parte Garland, 4 Wall. 380, 18 L.Ed. 366; Ex parte Wells, 18 How. 307, 15 L.Ed. 421; Moore v. State, 43 N.J.Law, 241, 39 Am. Rep. 558; Ex parte Rice, 72 Tex.Cr.R. 587, 162 S.W. 891, 899; People v. Hale, 64 Cal.App. 523, 222 P. 148, 151; Ex parte Miers, 124 Tex.Cr.R. 592, 64 S.W.2d 778.

A “pardon” releases the offender from the entire punishment prescribed for the offense, and from all the disabilities consequent on his conviction, while *by a “parole” a convict is merely released before the expiration of his term, to remain subject during the remainder thereof to supervision by the public authority, and to return to imprisonment on violation of the condition of the parole. Board of Prison Com’rs v. De Moss, 157 Ky. 289, 163 S.W. 183, 187.

A pardon, to be effective, must be accepted; Burdick v. U. S., 35 S.Ct. 267, 268, 236 U.S. 59, 60, 861, 729, 39 L.Ed. 476; but a commutation is merely a cessation of the exercise of sovereign authority, and does not obliterate guilt nor restore rather of philological interest than of legal importance. while a “pardon” avoids or terminates punishment for commutation is merely a cessation of the exercise of sovereign authority, and does not obliterate guilt nor restore rather of philological interest than of legal importance. while a “pardon” avoids or terminates punishment for substitution of a less penalty for the one originally imposed; State v. District Court of Eighteenth Judicial Dist. 183, 187.

The distinction between amnesty and pardon is one rather of philological interest than of legal importance. Knote v. U. S., 95 U. S. 149, 153, 24 L.Ed. 422, 443. This is so as to their ultimate effect, but there are incidental differences of importance. They are of different character and have different purposes. The one overlooks offenses; the other remits punishment. The first is usually addressed to crimes against the sovereignty of the state, to wrongs, or offenses, forgiven by the sovereign for its own expediency for the public welfare than prosecution and punishment. The second condones infractions of the peace of the state. Amnesty is usually general, addressed to classes or even communities—a legislative act, or under legislative or constitutional or statutory-the act of the supreme magistrate. There may or may not be distinct acts of acceptance. If other rights are dependent upon it and are asserted, there is affirmative evidence of acceptance. Burdick v. U. S., 35 S.Ct. 267, 236 U.S. 79, 271, 59 L.Ed. 476. “Pardon” applies only to the individual, releases him from the punishment fixed by law for his specific offense, but does not affect the criminality of the same or similar acts when performed by other persons or repeated by the same person.

Absolute or Unconditional Pardon. One which frees the criminal without any condition whatever. That which reaches both the punishment prescribed for the offense and the guilt of the offender. It obliterates in legal contemplation the offense itself. Ex parte Collins, 32 Okl.Cr. 6, 239 P. 693, 696. It goes no further than to restore the accused to his civil rights and remit the penalty imposed for the particular offense of which he was convicted in so far as it remains unpaid. State v. Cullen, 14 Wash.2d 105, 127 P.2d 257, 259.

Conditional Pardon. One to which a condition is annexed, performance of which is necessary to the validity of the pardon. Ex parte Hunt, 10 Ark. 284; State v. Fuller, 1 McCord, S.C., 178. A pardon which does not become operative until the grante has performed some specific act, or where it becomes void when some specific event transpires. Ex parte Collins, 32 Okl.Cr. 6, 239 P. 693, 697. One granted on the condition that it shall only endure until the voluntary doing of some act by the person pardoned, or that it shall be revoked by a subsequent act on his part, as that he shall leave the state and never return. Ex parte Janes, 1 Nev. 319; State v. Wolfer, 53 Minn. 135, 54 N.W. 1065, 19 L.R.A. 783, 39 Am.St. Rep. 582; State v. Barnes, 32 S.C. 14, 10 S.E. 611, 6 L.R.A. 743, 17 Am.St.Rep. 832; People v. Burns, 77 Hun, 92, 28 N.Y.S. 300.

Full pardon. One freely and unconditionally absolving party from all legal consequences, direct and collateral, of crime and conviction. Warren v. State, 127 Tex.Cr.R. 71, 74 S.W.2d 1006, 1008.

Executive pardon. See Executive Pardon.

General Pardon. One granted to all the persons participating in a given criminal or treasonable offense (generally political), or to all offenders of a given class or against a certain statute or within certain limits of time. But “amnesty” is the more appropriate term for this. It may be expressed, as when a general declaration is made that all offenders of a certain class shall be pardoned, or implied, as in case of the repeal of a penal statute. Roberts v. State, 2 Over. (Tenn.) 423.

Partial pardon. That which remits only portion of punishment or absolves from only portion of legal consequences of crime. Warren v. State, 127 Tex.Cr.R. 71, 74 S.W.2d 1006, 1008.

PARDONERS. In old English law. Persons who carried about the pope’s indulgences, and sold them to any who would buy them.

PARENS. Lat. In Roman law. A parent; originally and properly only the father or mother of the person spoken of; but also, by an extension of its meaning, any relative, male or female, in the line of direct ascent.

"PARENS" EST NOMEN GENERALE AD OMNE GENUS COGNATIONIS. "Parent" is a name general for every kind of relationship. Co. Litt. 80; Littleton § 108; Mag. Cart. Joh. c. 50.

PARENS PATRILE. Father of his country; parent of the country. In England, the king. In the United States, the state, as a sovereign-referring to the sovereign power of guardianship over persons under disability; In re Turner, 94 Kan. 63, 145 P. 871, 872, Ann.Cas.1916E, 1022; such as minors, and insane and incompetent persons; McIntosh v. Dill, 86 Okl. 1, 205 R 917, 925.

This word is distinguished from "ancestors" in including only the immediate progenitors of the person, while the latter embraces his more remote relatives in the ascending line. The word “parents” should therefore not ordinarily be construed to include grandparents. In re Spooner’s Estate, 172 Wis. 174, 177 N.W. 598, 600. But by the civil law, grandfathers and grandmothers, and other ascendants, were, in certain cases, considered parents. Dic. de Jur. Parents; Corn. v. Anderson, 1 Ashm. (Pa.) 55; 2 Kent 199; 5 East 223.

The term literally can apply only to a father or mother related by blood, including the parent of an illegitimate child; Commonwealth v. Wisn.ber, 73 Pa.Sup.Civ.Ct. 349, 351; and excluding a stepfather or stepmother or one standing in loco parentis; State v. District Court of Second Judicial Dist. of Montana in and for Silver Bow County, 66 Mont. 427, 213 P. 802, 804; State v. Barger, 14 Ohio App. 127, 128; In re Remskie, 95 Misc. 330, 160 N.Y.S. 715, 716; Coakley v. Coakley, 216 Mass. 71, 102 N.E. 930, 932, Ann.Cas.1915A, 867. In statutes, however, the word is commonly construed as including a stepmother; State v. Juvenile Court of Ramsey County, 163 Minn. 312, 204 N.W.

PARENTIELA. The sum of those persons who trace descent from one ancestor. 2 Poll. & Maitl. 296.

In old English law. Parentela, or de parentela se tollere, signified a renunciation of one's kindred and family. This was, according to ancient custom, done in open court, before the judge, and in the presence of twelve men, who made oath that they believed it was done for a just cause. We read of it in the laws of Henry I. After such abjuration, the person was incapable of inheriting anything from any of his relations, etc. Enc. Lond.

PARENTHESIS. Part of a sentence occurring in the middle thereof, and inclosed between marks ( ), the omission of which part would not injure the grammatical construction of the rest of the sentence. Wharton; In re Schilling, 53 Fed. 81, 3 C.C.A. 440. A word, phrase, or sentence, by way of comment or explanation, inserted, in or attached to, a sentence which would be grammatically complete without it. State v. Morgan, 133 La. 1033, 63 So. 509, 512.

PARENTICIDE. One who murders a parent; also the crime so committed.

PARENTUM EST LIBEROS ALERE ATIAM NOTHOS. It is the duty of parents to support their children even when illegitimate. Loft, .222.

PARERGON. One work executed in the intervals attached to, a sentence which would be grammatically complete without it. State v. Morgan, 133 La. 1033, 63 So. 509, 512.

PARES. Lat. A person's peers or equals; as the jury for the trial of causes, who were originally the vassals or tenants of the lord, being the equals or peers of the parties litigant; and, as the lord's vassals judged each other in the lord's courts, so the sovereign's vassals, or the lords themselves, judged each other in the sovereign's courts. 3 Bl. Comm. 349.

PARES CURIE. Peers of the court. Vassals who were bound to attend the lord's court.

PARESIS. In medical jurisprudence. Progressive general paralysis, involving or leading to the form of insanity known as "dementia paralytica." Popularity, but not very correctly, called "softening of the brain." See Insanity.

The term is applied to a group of mental and bodily symptoms, developing usually late in life and as a result of previous syphilis. The condition differs from the various insanities, in that definite alterations of the surface of the brain and its membranes are found, in the form of chronic inflammation. Loss of memory, passionate outbursts, delusions of grandeur, restless and insonmia, with final absolute dementia, are the chief mental symptoms, while physically muscular weakness, tremor, particularly of the lips and tongue, ataxia, and various convulsive seizures are seen. Losh v. Winters Nat. Bank & Trust Co., Ohio App., 46 N.E.2d 443, 448.

PARI CAUSA. Lat. With equal right; upon an equal footing; equivalent in rights or claims.

PARI DELICTO. Lat. In equal fault; in a similar offense or crime; equal in guilt or in legal fault. See In Pari Delicto.

PARI MUTUEL. A mutual stake or wager; a betting pool. Utah State Fair Ass'n v. Green, 68 Utah, 251, 249 P. 1016, 1028. See, also, Pompano Horse Club v. State, 93 Fla. 415, 111 So. 813, 52 A.L.R. 51. A form of betting on horses or dogs in which those who bet on winner share total stakes less a small percent to the management. Donovan v. Eastern Racing Ass'n, 324 Mass. 393, 86 N.E.2d 903, 906.

PARI PASSU. Lat. By an equal progress; equally; ratably; without preference. Coote, Mortg. 56. Used especially of creditors who, in marshaling assets, are entitled to receive out of the same fund without any precedence over each other.

PARI PASSU BONDS. A name given in Scotland to certain bonds secured upon lands which share an equal benefit of the security. Where several securities are created over the same lands by separate bonds and dispositions in security, they would ordinarily have priority according to the date of registration of the sasine or bond, as the case may be. If it is intended to have them rank as pari passu, it is usual to insert a clause in each bond declaring that they shall be so-ranked without regard to their priority of registration. 9 Jurid. Rev. 74.

PARIA COPULANTUR PARIBUS. Like things unite with like. Bac. Max.

PARIBUS SENTENTIS REUS ABSOLVITUR. Where the opinions are equal, [where the court is equally divided,] the defendant is acquitted. 4 Inst. 64.

PARIES. Lat. In the civil law. A wall. Parius est, sive murus, sive maceria est. Dig. 50, 16, 157.

PARIES COMMUNIS. A common wall; a party-wall. Dig. 29, 2, 39.

PARIS, DECLARATION OF. See Declaration.

PARISH. In English ecclesiastical law. A circuit of ground, committed to the charge of one parson or vicar, or other minister having cure of souls therein. 1 Bl. Comm. 111. Wilson v. State, 34 Ohio St. 199. The precinct of a parish church, and the particular charge of a secular priest. Cowell. An ecclesiastical division of a town or district, subject to the ministry of one pastor. Brande.

In New England. A division of a town, originally territorial, but which now constitutes a quasi-corporation, consisting of those connected with a certain church. Weston v. Hunt, 2 Mass. 501. Synonymous with church and used in the same sense as society. Ayres v. Weed, 16 Conn. 299. A corporation established for the maintenance of public worship, which may be coterminous with a town, or include only part of it. A precinct or parish is a corporation established solely for the purpose of maintaining public worship, and its powers are limited to that object. It may raise money for building and keeping in repair its meetinghouse and supporting its minister, but for no other purpose. A town is a civil and political corporation, established for municipal purposes. They may both subsist together—in the same territory, and be composed of the same persons. Milford v. Godfrey, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 91.

In Pennsylvania the term has no legal significance and is used merely in its general sense. If used there in ecclesiastical divisions, it has just such importance and significance as may be given it under ecclesiastical regulations. In re St. Casimir’s Polish Roman Catholic Church of Shenandoah, 273 Pa. 494, 117 A. 219, 220.

PARISH APPRENTICE. In English law. The children of parents unable to maintain them may, by law, be apprenticed, by the guardians or overseers of their parish, to such persons as may be willing to receive them as apprentices. Such children are called “parish apprentices.” 2 Steph. Comm. 230.

PARISH CHURCH. This expression has various significations. It is applied sometimes to a select body of Christians, forming a local spiritual association, and sometimes to the building in which the public worship of the inhabitants of, a parish is celebrated; but the true legal notion of a parochial church is a consecrated place, having attached to it the rights of burial and the admini-PARLE HILL, or PARLING HILL. A hill where courts were anciently held. Cowell.

PARLIAMENT. The supreme legislative assembly of Great Britain and Ireland, consisting of the king or queen and the three estates of the realm, viz., the lords spiritual, the lords temporal, and the commons. 1 Bl. Comm. 153.

High Court of Parliament. In English law, the English parliament, as composed of the/house of peers and house of commons; or the house of lords sitting in its judicial capacity.

PARLIAMENTARY. Relating or belonging to, connected with, enacted by or proceeding from, or characteristic of, the English parliament in particular, or any legislative body in general.

PARLIAMENTARY AGENTS. Persons who act as solicitors in promoting and carrying private bills through parliament. They are usually attorneys or solicitors, but they do not usually confine their practice to this particular department. Brown.

PARLIAMENTARY COMMITTEE. A committee of members of the house of peers or of the house of commons, appointed by either house for the purpose of making inquiries, by the examination of witnesses or otherwise, into matters which could not be conveniently inquired into by the whole house. Wharton.

PARLIAMENTARY LAW. The general body of enacted rules and recognized usages which governs the procedure of legislative assemblies and other deliberative bodies.

PARLIAMENTARY TAXES. See Tax.

PARLIAMENTUM. L. Lat. A legislative body in general or the English parliament in particular.

PARLIAMENTUM DIABOLICUM. A parliament held at Coventry, 38 Hen. VI., wherein Edward, Earl of March, (afterwards King Edward IV.,) and many of the chief nobility were attainted, was so called; but the acts then made were annulled by the succeeding parliament. Jacob.

PARLIAMENTUM INDOCTUM. Unlearned or lack-learning parliament. A name given to a parliament held at Coventry in the sixth year of Henry IV. under an ordinance requiring that no lawyer should be chosen knight, citizen, or Burgess; "by reason whereof," says Sir Edward Coke, "this parliament was fruitless, and never a good law made thereat." 4 Inst. 48; 1 Bl. Comm. 177.

PARLIAMENTUM INSANUM. A parliament assembled at Oxford, 41 Hen. III., so styled from the madness of their proceedings, and because the lords came with armed men to it, and contentions grew very high between the king, lords, and commons, whereby many extraordinary things were done. Jacob.

PARLIAMENTUM RELIGIOSORUM. In most convents there has been a common room into which the brethren withdrew for conversation; conferences there being termed "parliament." Likewise, the societies of the two temples, or inns of court, call that assembly of the benchers or governors wherein they confer upon the common affairs of "their several houses a "parliament." Jacob.

PAROCHIA EST LOCUS QUO DEGIT POPULUS ALCIJUS ECCLESIZE. 5 Coke, 67. A parish is a place in which the population of a certain church resides.

PAROCHIAL. Relating or belonging to a parish.
PAROCHIAL CHAPELS. In English law. Places of public worship in which the rites of sacrament and sepolture are performed.

PAROL. A word; speech; hence, oral or verbal; expressed or evidenced by speech only; not expressed by writing; not expressed by sealed instrument.

The pleadings in an action are also, in old law French, denominated the "parol," because they were formerly actual viva voce pleadings in court, and not mere written allegations, as at present. Brown.

PAROL EVIDENCE. Oral or verbal evidence; that which is given by word of mouth; the ordinary kind of evidence, given by witnesses in court. 3 Bl.Comm. 369. In a particular sense, and with reference to contracts, deeds, wills, and other writings, parol evidence is the same as extraneous evidence or evidence aliunde. See, also, Aliunde; Extraneous Evidence; Oral Evidence.

PAROL EVIDENCE RULE. Under this rule, when parties put their agreement in writing, all previous oral agreements merge in the writing and a contract as written cannot be modified or changed by parol evidence, in the absence of a plea of mistake or fraud in the preparation of the writing. Russell v. Halteman's Adm'x, 287 Ky. 404, 153 S.W.2d 899, 904. But rule does not forbid a resort to parol evidence not inconsistent with the matters stated in the writing. Elkins v. Super-Cold Southwest Co., Tex.Civ.App., 157 S.W.2d 946, 947.

Under this rule, parol or extrinsic evidence is not admissible to add to, subtract from, vary or contradict judicial or official records or documents, or written instruments which dispose of property or are contractual in nature, and which are valid, complete, unambiguous and unaffected by accident or mistake. Wheeler, Kelly & Hagny Inv. Co. v. Curts, 158 Kan. 312, 147 P.2d 737, 740.

PAROLE. In military law. A promise given by a prisoner of war, when he has leave to depart from custody, that he will return at the time appointed, unless discharged. Webster.

An engagement by a prisoner of war, upon being set at liberty, that he will not again take up arms against the government by whose forces he was captured, either for a limited period or while hostilities continue.

In criminal law. A conditional release; condition being that, if prisoner makes good, he will receive an absolute discharge from balance of sentence, but, if he does not, he will be returned to serve unexpired time. In re Eddinger, 236 Mich. 668, 211 N.W. 54, 55; Crooks v. Sanders, 123 S.C. 28, 115 S.E. 760, 762, 28 A.L.R. 940; Board of Prison Com'rs v. De Moss, 157 Ky. 289, 163 S.W. 183, 187; Duehay v. Thompson, C.C.A. Wash., 223 F. 305, 307; In re Sutton, 50 Mont. 88, 145 P. 6, 8, Ann.Cas.1917A, 1223. Release of convict from imprisonment on certain conditions to be observed by him, and suspension of sentence during liberty thus granted. Ex parte Foster, 60 Okl.Cr.App. 50, 61 P.2d 37, 39.

PAROLS DE LEY. L. Fr. Words of law; technical words.

PAROLS FONT PLEA. Words make the plea. 5 Mod. 458.

PARQUET. In French law. The magistrates or judges of a court, and not mere written allegations, as at present. Brown.

PARS RATIONABILIS. That part of a man's goods which the law gave to his widow and children. 2 Bl.Comm. 492.

PARS VISCERUM MATRIS. Part of the bowels of the mother; i. e., an unborn child.

PARSON. The rector of a church; one that has full possession of all the rights of a parochial church. The appellation of "parson," however it may be depreciated by familiar, clownish, and indiscriminate use, is the most legal, most beneficial, and most honorable title that a parish priest can enjoy, because such a one, Sir Edward Coke observes, and he only, is said vicem seu personam ecclesie gerere, (to represent and bear the person of the church.) 1 Bl.Comm. 384.

PARSON IMPARSONEE. In English law. A clerk or parson in full possession of a benefice. Cowell.

PARSON MORTAL. A rector instituted and inducted for his own life. But any collegiate or conventional body, to whom a church was forever appropriated, was termed "persona immortalis." Wharton.

PARSONAGE. A certain portion of lands, tithes, and offerings, established by law, for the maintenance of the minister who has the cure of souls. Tomlins.

The word is more generally used for the house set apart for the residence of the minister. Moz-
PART

An integral portion, something essentially belonging to a larger whole; that which together with another or others makes up a whole. First-Mechanics Nat. Bank of Trenton v. Norris, 134 N.J.Eq. 229, 34 A.2d 746, 749. A portion, share, or purport. One of two duplicate originals of a conveyance or covenant, the other being called "counterpart." Also, in composition, partial or incomplete; as part payment, part performance. Cairo v. Bross, 9 Ill.App. 406.

PART AND PERTINENT. In the Scotch law of conveyancing. Formal words equivalent to the English "appurtenances." Bell.

As to part "Owner," "Payment," and "Performance," see those titles.

PARTAGE. In French law. A division made between co-proprietors of a particular estate held by them in common. It is the operation by means of which the goods of a succession are divided among the co-heirs; while licitation (q. v.) is an adjudication to the highest bidder of objects which are not divisible. Duverger.

PARTE INAUDITA. Lat. One side being unheard. Spoken of any action which is taken ex parte.

PARTE NON COMPARENTE. Lat. The party not having appeared. The condition of a cause called "default."

PARTE QUACUMQUE INTEGRANTE SUB-LATA, TOLLITUR TOTUM. An integral part being taken away, the whole is taken away. 8 Coke, 41.

PARTEM ALIQUAM RECTE INTELLIGERE NEMO POTEST, ANTEQUAM TOTUM, ITERUM ATQUE ITERUM, PERLEGENTIR. 3 Coke, 52. No one can rightly understand any part until he has read the whole again and again.

PARTES FINIS NIHIL HABUERUNT. In old pleading. The parties to the fine had nothing; that is, had no estate which could be conveyed by it. A plea to a fine which had been levied by a stranger. 2 Bl.Comm. 357; 1 P.Wms. 520.

PARTIAL. Relating to or constituting a part; not complete; not entire or universal; not general or total. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Baker, Tex.Civ.App., 65 S.W.2d 344, 346.

PARTIAL ACCOUNT. An account of an executor, administrator, guardian, etc., not exhibiting his entire dealings with the estate or fund from his appointment to final settlement, but covering only a portion of the time or of the estate. Marshall v. Coleman, 187 Ill. 556, 58 N.E. 628.

PARTIAL DEPENDENCY. Test as to existence of such dependency for purpose of workmen’s compensation is whether contributions were relied on by claimants to aid and maintain them in present position in life and whether they were to substantial degree depending on support or aid of employer at time of death. Ritzman v. Industrial Commission, 353 Ill. 34, 186 N.E. 545, 546. Federal Underwriters Exchange v. Hinkle, Tex.Civ.App., 187 S.W.2d 122, 124.

PARTIAL EVICTION. That which takes place when the possessor is deprived of only a portion of his rights in the premises.

PARTIAL EVIDENCE. That which goes to establish a detached fact, in a series tending to the fact in dispute.

It may be received, subject to be rejected as incompetent, unless connected with the fact in dispute by proof of other facts; for example, on an issue of title to real property, evidence of the continued possession of a remote occupant is partial, for it is of a detached fact, which may or may not be afterwards connected with the fact in dispute. Code Civ.Proc.Cal. § 1834; Or. Laws 1920, § 696 (Code 1930, § 9-111).

PARTIAL INSANITY. Mental unsoundness always existing, although only occasionally manifest; monomania. 3 Add. 79.

PARTIAL LOSS. A loss of a part of a thing or of its value, or any damage not amounting (actually or constructively) to its entire destruction; as contrasted with total loss.

Partial loss is one in which the damage done to the thing insured is not so complete as to amount to a total loss, either actual or constructive. In every such case the underwriter is liable to pay such proportion of the sum which would be payable on total loss as the damage sustained by the subject of insurance bears to the whole value at the time of insurance. 2 Steph.Comm. 132, 133; Crump. Ins. § 331; Mozley & Whiteley. Partial loss implies a damage sustained by the ship or cargo, which falls upon the respective owners of the property so damaged; and, when happening from any peril insured against by the policy, the owners are to be indemnified by the underwriters, unless in cases excepted by the express terms of the policy. Padelford v. Boardman, 4 Mass. 548; Globe Ins. Co. v. Sherlock, 25 Ohio St. 65; Willard v. Insurance Co., 30 Mo. 35.

PARTIAL PAYMENT. See Payment.

PARTIAL VERDICT. See Verdict.

PARTIARIUS. Lat. In Roman law. A legatee to receive a share or portion of the inheritance left to the heir.

PARTIBLE LANDS. Lands which might be divided; lands held in gavelkind. See 2 Poll. & Maitl. 268, 271; Gavelkind.

PARTICEPS. Lat. A participant; a sharer; an accomplice. One who shares or co-operates in a criminal offense, tort, or fraud. Alberger v. White, '117 Mo. 347, 23 S.W. 92; Statct v. Fox, 70 N.J.L. 353, 57 A. 270.

PARTICIPATE. To receive or have a part or share of; to partake of; experience in common with others; to have or enjoy a part or share in common with others; partake; as to "participate" in a discussion. To take a part in; as to participate in joys or sorrows. Bew v. Travelers' Ins. Co., 95 N.J.L. 533, 112 A. 859, 860, 14 A.L.R. 983. To take equal shares and proportions; to share or divide. 6 Ctl. 696. Participate in an estate. To take as tenants in common. 28 Bea. 266.

PARTICIPES PLURES SUNT QUASI UNUM CORPUS IN EO QUOD UNUM JUS HABENT, ET OPORTEM QUOD CORPUS SIT INTEGRUM, ET QUODS IN NULLA PARTE SIT DEFECTUS, Co. Litt. 4. Many parceners are as one body, inasmuch as they have one right, and it is necessary that the body be perfect, and that there be a defect in no part.

PARTICULAR. Relating to a part or portion of anything; separate; sole; single; individual; specific; local; comprising a part only; partial in character; special. Many parceners are as one body, inasmuch as they have one right, and it is necessary that the body be perfect, and that there be a defect in no part.

PARTICULAR STATEMENT. This term, in use in Pennsylvania, denotes a statement which a defendant may be required to file, exhibiting in detail the items of his claim, (or its nature, if single,) with the dates and sums. It is a species of declaration, but is informal and not required to be methodical. Dixon v. Sturgeon, 6 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 28.

PARTICULARITY, in a pleading, affidavit, or the like, is the detailed statement of particulars.

PARTICULARS. The details of a claim, or the separate items of an account. When these are stated in an orderly form, for the information of a defendant, the statement is called a "bill of particulars," (q. v.).

PARTICULARS OF BREACHES AND OBJECTIONS. In an action brought, in England, for the infringement of letters patent, the plaintiff is bound to deliver with his declaration (now with his statement of claim) particulars (i. e., details) of the breaches which he complains of. Sweet.

PARTICULARS OF CRIMINAL CHARGES. A prosecutor, when a charge is general, is frequently ordered to give the defendant a statement of the acts charged, which is called, in England, the "particulars" of the charges.

PARTICULARS OF SALE. When property such as land, houses, shares, reversions, etc., is to be sold by auction, it is usually described in a document called the "particulars," copies of which are distributed among intending bidders. They should fairly and accurately describe the property. Dart, Vend. 113; 1 Da. Con. 511.

PARTIDA. Span. Part; a part. See Las Partidas.

PARTIES. The persons who take part in the performance of any act, or who are directly interested in any affair, contract, or conveyance, or who are actively concerned in the prosecution and defense of any legal proceeding. U. S. to Use of Edward Hines Lumber Co. v. Henderlong, C.C.Ind., 102 F. 2; Robbins v. Chicago, 4 Wall. 672, 18 L. Ed. 427; Green v. Bogue, 15 S.Ct. 975, 158 U.S. 478, 39 L.Ed. 1061; Hughes v. Jones, 116 N.Y. 67, 22 N. E. 446, 5 L.R.A. 637, 15 Am.St.Rep. 386. See also Party.

In the Roman civil law, the parties were designated as "actor" and "recess." In the common law, they are called "plaintiff" and "defendant;" in real actions, "demandant" and "tenant;" in equity, "complainant" or "plaintiff" and "defendant;" in Scotch law, "pursuer" and "defender;" in admiralty practice, "libelant" and "respondent;" in appeals, "appellant" and "respondent," sometimes, "plaintiff in error" and "defendant in error;" in criminal proceedings, "prosecutor" and "prisoner."

Classification

Formal, or proper parties are those who have no interest in the controversy between the immediate litigants, but have an interest in the subject-matter which may be conveniently settled in the suit, and thereby prevent further litigation; they may be male parties or not, at the option of the complainant. Chadbourne v. Coe, 2 C.C.A. 327, 51 F. 479; Sexton v. Sutherland, 37 N.D. 500, 28 N.W. 278, 281; Consolidated Gas Co. of New York v. Newton, D.C.N.Y., 256 F. 238, 245; State v. Municipal Savings & Loan Co., 111 Ohio St. 178, 144 N.E. 736, 740. Necessary parties are those parties who have such an interest in the subject-matter of a suit in equity, or whose rights are so involved in the controversy, that no complete and effective decree can be made, disposing of the matters in issue and dispensing complete justice, unless they are before the court in such a manner as to entitle them to be heard in vindication or protection of their interests. Chandler v. Ward, 188 Ill. 322, 58 N.E. 919; Chadbourne v. Coe, 2 C.C.A. 327, 51 F. 480; Burrill v. Guest, 19 R.I. 38, 31 A. 436; Castle v. Madison, 113 Wis. 346, 89 N. W. 156; Iowa County Sup'rs v. Mineral Point R.
PARTIES

Co., 24 Wis. 132. Nominal parties are those who are joined as plaintiffs or defendants, not because they have any real interest in the subject-matter or because any relief is demanded as against them, but merely because the technical rules of pleading require their presence on the record. It should be noted that some courts make a further distinction between "necessary" parties and "indispensable" parties. Thus, it is said that the supreme court of the United States divides parties in equity suits into three different classes: (1) Formal parties, who have no interest in the controversy between the immediate litigants, but have an interest in the subject-matter as may be conveniently settled in the suit, and thereby prevent further litigation; (2) necessary parties, who have an interest in the controversy, but whose interests are separable from those of the parties before the court, and will not be directly affected by a decree which does complete and full justice between them; (3) indispensable parties, who not only have an interest in the subject-matter of the controversy, but an interest of such a nature that a final decree cannot be made without either affecting their interests or leaving the controversy in such a condition that its final determination may be wholly inconsistent with equity and good conscience. Hicklin v. Marco, 6 C.C.A.10, 56 F. 552, citing Shields v. Barrow, 17 How. 139, 15 L.Ed. 158; Ribon v. Railroad Co., 16 Wall. 450, 21 L.Ed. 367; Williams v. Bankhead, 19 Wall. 571, 22 L.Ed. 184; Kendig v. Dean, 97 U.S. 425, 24 L.Ed. 1061; Barmore v. Darragh, Tex.Civ.App., 227 S.W. 522, 523; Jones v. Bryant, 204 Ill.App. 609; Sexton v. Sutherland, 37 N.D. 500, 164 N.W. 278, 281; Hughes v. Yates, 195 Ind. 182, 144 N.E. 863, 864; Hyams v. Old Dominion Co., 113 Me. 357, 93 A. 899; Tupelo Townsite Co. v. Cook, 52 Okl. 703, 153 P. 164, 167; Shedd v. American Maize Products Co., 60 Ind. App. 146, 108 N.E. 610, 621.

PARTIES AND PRIVIES. Parties to a deed or contract are those with whom the deed or contract is actually made or entered into. By the term "privies," as applied to contracts, is frequently meant those between whom the contract is mutually binding, although not literally parties to such contract. Thus, in the case of a lease, the lessor and lessee are both parties and privies, the contract being literally made between the two, and also being mutually binding; but, if the lessee assign his interest to a third party, then a privity arises between the assignee and the original lessee, although such assignee is not literally a party to the original lease. Brown.

PARTIES IN INTEREST. Under General Order 6 (11 U.S.C.A. § 53) respecting transfer of bankruptcy proceedings for the greatest convenience of "parties in interest," the term "parties in interest" includes not only general creditors, but prior and secured creditors as well, and also the bankrupt and every other party, whose pecuniary interest is affected by the proceedings. In re Devonian Mineral Spring Co, D.C. Ohio, 272 F. 527, 532.

PARTITIO. Lat. In the civil law. Partition; division. This word did not always signify dimidium, a dividing into halves. Dig. 50, 16, 164, 1.

PARTITIO LEGATA. A testamentary partition. This took place where the testator, in his will, directed the heir to divide the inheritance and deliver a designated portion thereof to a named legatee. See Mackeld. Rom. Law, §§ 781, 785.

rARTITION. The dividing of lands held by joint tenants, coparceners, or tenants in common, into distinct portions, so that they may hold them in severalty. And, in a less technical sense, any division of real or personal property between co-owners or co-proprieters. Meacham v. Meacham, 91 Tenn. 532, 19 S.W. 757; Hudgins v. Sansom, 72 Tex. 229, 10 S.W. 104; Weiser v. Weiser, 5 Watts., Pa., 279, 30 Am.Dec. 313; Thompson v. Thompson, 123 Okl. 218, 253 P. 99, 102; Gillespie v. Jackson, 153 Tenn. 150, 281 S.W. 929, 932.

Partition does not create or convey a new or additional title or interest but merely severs the unity of possession. Noble v. Beach, 21 Cal.2d 91, 130 P.2d 426, 430. Cleveland v. Milner, 141 Tex. 120, 170 S.W.2d 472, 475.

Owlety of partition. See Owlety.

Partition, deed of. In conveyancing. A species of primary or original conveyance between two or more joint tenants, coparceners, or tenants in common, by which they divide the lands so held among them in severalty, each taking a distinct part. 2 Bl.Comm. 323, 324.

Partition of a Succession. The partition of a succession is the division of the effects of which the succession is composed, among all the co-heirs, according to their respective rights. Partition is voluntary or judicial. It is voluntary when it is made among all the co-heirs present and of age, and by their mutual consent. It is judicial when it is made by the authority of the court, and according to the formalities prescribed by law. Every partition is either definite or provisional. Definitive partition is that which is made in a permanent and irrevocable manner. Provisional partition is that which is made provisionally, either of certain things before the rest can be divided, or even of everything that is to be divided, when the parties are not in a situation to make an irrevocable partition. Civ. Code La. art. 1293, et seq.

PARTNER. A member of copartnership or firm; one who has united with others to form a partnership in business. See Partnership.

Parties intending to do a thing which in law constitutes partnership are "partners," whether their purpose was to create or avoid relation. Pearl Bowling & Co. v. Hensley & Hensley, 259 Ky. 651, 83 S.W.2d 31, 32.

Dormant Partners

Those whose names are not known or do not appear as partners, but who nevertheless are silent partners, and partake of the profits, and thereby become partners, either absolutely to all intents and purposes, or at all events in respect to third parties. Dormant partners, in strictness of language, mean those who are merely passive in the firm, whether known or unknown, in con-trast to those who are active and conduct the business of the firm, as principals. Story, Partn. § 80; Rowland v. Estes, 190 Pa. 111, 42 A. 528; National Bank of Salem v. Thomas, 47 N.Y. 15; Metcalf v. Officer, C.C.Iowa, 2 F. 640; Pooley v. Driver, 5 Ch.Div. 458.

Liquidating Partner
The partner who, upon the dissolution or insolvency of the firm, is appointed to settle its accounts, collect assets, adjust claims, and pay debts.

Nominal Partner
One whose name appears in connection with the business as a member of the firm, but who has no real interest in it.

Ostensible Partner
One whose name appears to the world as such, or who is held out to all persons having dealings with the firm in the character of a partner, whether or not he has any real interest in the firm. Civ. Code Ga. 1910, § 3157.

Quasi Partners
Partners of lands, goods, or chattels who are not actual partners are sometimes so called. Poth. de Societe, App. no. 184.

Secret Partner
A dormant partner; one whose connection with the firm is really or professedly concealed from the world. In re Victor, D.C.Ga., 246 F. 727, 731.

Silent Partner, Sleeping Partner
Popular names for dormant partners or special partners.

Solvent Partner
This term does not mean one who has assets sufficient to pay his debts, but one who is not in bankruptcy, so that his property is open to joint creditors' appropriation by legal action and not subject to distribution in bankruptcy proceedings. Robinson v. Security Co., 87 Conn. 268, 87 A. 879, 881, Ann.Cas. 1915C, 1170.

Special Partner
A member of a limited partnership, who furnishes certain funds to the common stock, and whose liability extends no further than the fund furnished. A partner whose responsibility is restricted to the amount of his investment. 3 Kent, Comm. 34.

Surviving Partner
The partner who, on the dissolution of the firm by the death of his copartner, occupies the position of a trustee to settle up its affairs.

PARTNERSHIP. A voluntary contract between two or more competent persons to place their money, effects, labor, and skill, or some or all of them, in lawful commerce or business, with the understanding that there shall be a proportional sharing of the profits and losses between them. Story, Partn. § 2; Colly. Partn. § 2; 3 Kent, Comm. 23. Preston v. State Industrial Accident Commission, 174 Or. 553, 149 P.2d 957, 961, 962. An association of two or more persons to carry on as co-owners a business for profit. Uniform Partnership Act, § 6(1). Schleicker v. Krier, 218 Wis. 376, 261 N.W. 413. A synallagmatic and commutative contract made between two or more persons for the mutual participation in the profits which may accrue from property, credit, skill, or industry, furnished in determined proportions by the parties. Civ. Code La. art. 2801.

Partnership is where two or more persons agree to carry on any business or adventure together, upon the terms of mutual participation in its profits and losses. Mozley & Whitley. And see Macomber v. Parker, 13 Pick., Mass., 181; Bucknam v. Barnum, 15 Conn. 71; Farmers' Ins. Co. v. Ross, 29 Ohio St. 431; In re Gibb's Estate, 157 Pa. 59, 27 A. 383, 22 L.R.A. 276; Wild v. Davenport, 48 N.J.L. 129, 7 A. 295, 57 Am.Rep. 552; Morse v. Pacific Ry. Co., 191 Ill. 356, 61 N.E. 104. It is in effect a contract of mutual agency, each partner acting as a principal in his own behalf and as agent for his copartners, and general rules of law applicable to agents apply with equal force in determining rights and liabilities of partners. Lindley v. Seward, Ind. App., 5 N.E. 998, 1006.

Commercial partnership. Trading partnership (q. v.).

General partnership. A partnership in which the parties carry on all their trade and business, whatever it may be, for the joint benefit and profit of all the parties concerned, whether the capital stock be limited or not, or the contributions thereto be equal or unequal. Story, Partn. § 74; Bigelow v. Elliot, 3 Fed.Cas. 351; Eldridge v. Troost, 3 Abb.Prac., N.S. (N.Y.) 23.

Limited partnership. A partnership consisting of one or more general partners, jointly and severally responsible as ordinary partners, and by whom the business is conducted, and one or more special partners, contributing in cash payments a specific sum as capital to the common stock, and who are not liable for the debts of the partnership beyond the fund so contributed. 1 Rev.St.N.Y. 764; Moorhead v. Seymour (City Ct. N.Y.) 77 N.Y.S. 1054; Taylor v. Webster, 39 N.J.Law, 104.

Mining partnership. See that title.

Particular partnership. One existing where the parties have united to share the benefits of a single individual transaction or enterprise. Spencer v. Jones, Tex. Civ.App., 47 S.W. 665.

Partnership assets. Property of any kind belonging to the firm as such (not the separate property of the individual partners) and available to the recourse of the creditors of the firm in the first instance.

Partnership at will. One designed to continue for no fixed period of time, but only during the pleasure of the parties, and which may be dissolved by any partner without previous notice.

Partnership debt. One due from the partnership or firm as such and not (primarily) from one of the individual partners.
PARTNERSHIP

Partnership in commendam. A partnership formed by a contract by which one person or partnership agrees to furnish another person or partnership a certain amount, either in property or money, to be employed by the person or partnership to whom it is furnished, in his or their own name or firm, on condition of receiving a share in the profits, in the proportion determined by the contract, and of being liable to losses and expenses to the amount furnished and no more. Civ. Code La. art. 2839.

Secret partnership. One where the existence of certain persons as partners is not avowed to the public by any of the partners. Deering v. Flanders, 49 N.H. 225.

Subpartnership. One formed where one partner in a firm makes a stranger a partner with him in his share of the profits of that firm.

Trading partnership. See that title.

Universal partnership. One in which the partners jointly agree to contribute to the common fund of the partnership the whole of their property, of whatever character, and future, as well as present. Poth. Societe, 29; Civ. Code La. art. 2829.

PARTURITION. The act of giving birth to a child.

PARTUS. Lat. Child; offspring; the child just before it is born, or immediately after its birth.

PARTUS EX LEGITIMO THORO NON CERTIUS NOSCIT MATREM QUAM GENITOREM SUUM. Fortes. 42. The offspring of a legitimate bed knows not his mother more certainly than his father.

PARTUS SEQUITUR VENTREM. The offspring follows the mother; the brood of an animal belongs to the owner of the dam; the offspring of a slave belongs to the owner of the mother, or follow the condition of the mother. A maxim of the civil law, which has been adopted in the law of England in regard to animals, though never allowed in the case of human beings. 2 Bl.Comm. 390, 94; Fortes. 42.

PARTY, n. A person concerned or having or taking part in any affair, matter, transaction, or proceeding, considered individually. See Parties.

"Party" is a technical word, and has a precise meaning in legal parlance. By it is understood he or they by or against whom a suit is brought, whether in law or equity; the party plaintiff or defendant, whether composed of one or more individuals, and whether natural or legal persons, (they are parties in the writ, and parties on the record;) and all others who may be affected by the suit, indirectly or consequentially, are persons interested, but not parties. Merchants' Bank v. Cook, 4 Pick. 465.

"Party" is not restricted to strict meaning of plaintiff or defendant in a lawsuit, being defined as one concerned in or privy to a matter as in the relation of accessory or confidant, and again a partial person, one who takes sides. State v. Orr, 53 Idaho 452, 24 P.2d 679.

Party aggrieved. Under statutes permitting any party aggrieved to appeal, one whose right has been directly and injuriously affected by action of court. Freeman v. Thompson, 216 N.C. 484, 5 S.E.2d 434, 436. Singer v. Allied Factors, 216 Minn. 443, 13 N.W.2d 378, 380.

Party and party. This phrase signifies the contending parties in an action; e., the plaintiff and defendant, as distinguished from the attorney and his client. It is used in connection with the subject of costs, which are differently taxed between party and party and between attorney and client. Brown.

Party injured. As used in divorce statute giving right of action only to party injured means party wronged by action of the other. Byers v. Byers, 223 N.C. 85, 25 S.E.2d 466, 469.

Party to be charged. A phrase used in the statute of frauds, meaning the party against whom the contract is sought to be enforced. Dominion Oil Co. v. Pou, Tex.Civ.App., 253 S.W. 317, 320; Kingfisher Mill & Elevator Co. v. Westbrook, 79 Okl. 188, 192 P. 209, 212. The party to be charged in the action—that is, the defendant. Jones v. School Dist. No. 48, 137 Ark. 414, 208 S.W. 798, 799; Graham v. Henderson Elevator Co., 60 Ind.App. 697, 111 N.E. 332, 335; Also, the vendor. Henry v. Reeser, 153 Ky. 8, 154 S.W. 371, 373; Kaiser v. Jones, 157 Ky. 607, 163 S.W. 741, 742; The owner of the realty rather than the party attempted to be charged or held liable in an action based on the memorandum. Lusky v. Keiser, 128 Tenn. 705, 164 S.W. 777, 778, L.R.A.1915C, 400.

Real party. In statutes requiring suits to be brought in the name of the "real party in interest," this term means the person who is actually and substantially interested in the subject-matter, as distinguished from one who has only a nominal, formal, or technical interest in it or connection with it. Hoagland v. Van Etten, 22 Neb. 681, 35 N.W. 870; Gruber v. Baker, 20 Nev. 453, 23 P. 858, 9 L.R.A. 302; Chew v. Brumagen, 13 Wall. 504, 20 L.Ed. 663. Gay v. Jackson County Board of Education, 205 Ky. 277, 265 S.W. 772, 773; Taylor v. Hurst, 186 Ky. 71, 216 S.W. 95, 96; Rothwell v. Knight, 37 Wyo. 11, 258 P. 576, 582.

Third parties. A term used to include all persons who are not parties to the contract, agreement, or instrument of writing by which their interest in the thing conveyed is sought to be affected. Morrison v. Trudeau (La.) 1 Mart., N.S., 384. But it is difficult to give a very definite idea of third persons; for sometimes those who are not parties to the contract, but who represent the rights of the original parties, as executors, are not to be considered third persons. 1 Bouvier, Inst. n. 1335. In statutes the words may have special meanings, and are often used to refer to creditors. Flemming v. Drake, 163 Ga. 872, 137 S.E. 268, 270; For other uses, see Behr v. Soth, 170 Minn. 278, 212 N.W. 461, 463; In re Thomas, D.C.N.Y., 283 F. 676; Cartwright v. Ennis, 215 Ky. 3, 284 S.W. 87; Oakdale Bank & Trust Co. v. Young & Leggett, 2 La. App. 586, 589; Bogdon v. Fort, 75 Colo. 231, 225 P. 247, 248; Churchill v. Stephens, 91 N.J.Law, 195, 102 A. 657, 658.

PARTY, adj. Relating or belonging to, or composed of, two or more parts or portions, or two or more persons or classes of persons.

Party jury. A jury de medietate lingue; (which title see.)

Party structure. A structure separating buildings, stories, or rooms which belong to different owners, or which are approached by distinct staircases or separate entrances from without, whether the same be a partition, arch, floor, or other structure. (St. 18 & 19 Viet. c. 122, § 3.) Mozley & Whiteley.

Party-wall. A wall built partly on the land of one owner, and partly on the land of another, for the common benefit of both in supporting timbers used in the construction of contiguous buildings. Brown v. Werner, 40 Md. 19. In the primary and most ordinary meaning of the term, a party-wall is (1) a wall of which the two adjoining owners are tenants in common. But it may also mean (2) a wall divided longitudinally into two strips, one belonging to each of the neighboring owners; (3) a wall which belongs entirely to one of the adjoining owners, but is subject to an easement or right in the other to have it maintained as a dividing wall between the two tenements, (the term is so used in some of the English building acts;) or (4) a wall divided longitudinally into two moieties, each moiety being subject to a cross-easement in favor of the owner of the other moiety. Sweet. Gates v. Friedman, 83 W.Va. 710, 98 S. E. 892, 893; 'Carroll Blake Const. Co. v. Boyle, 140 Tenn. 166, 203 S.W. 945, 946; Smoot v. Heyl, 33 S. Ct. 336, 337, 227 U.S. 518, 57 L.Ed. 621; Feder v. Solomon, 3 N.J.Misc. 1189, 131 A. 290; Freedman v. Kensico Realty Co., 99 N.J.Eq. 115, 131 A. 916, 917.

PARUM. Lat. Little; but little.

PARUM CAVISSE VIDETUR. Lat. In Roman law. He seems to have taken too little care; he seems to have been incautious, or not sufficiently upon his guard. A form of expression used by the judge or magistrate in pronouncing sentence of death upon a criminal. Festus, 325; Tayl. Civil Law, 81; 4 Bl.Comm. 362, note.

PARUM DIFFERUNT QUIE RE CONCORDANT. 2 Bulst. 86. Things which agree in substance differ but little.

PARUM EST LATAM ESSE SENTENTIAM NISI MANDETUR EXECUTIONI. It is little Cor to little purpose that judgment be given unless it be committed to execution. Co. Litt. 289.

PARUM PROFICIT SCIRE QUID FIERI DEBET, SI NON COGNOSCAS QUOMODO SIT FACTURUM. 2 Inst. 503. It profits little to know what ought to be done, if you do not know how it is to be done.

PARVA SERJEANTIA. Petty serjeanty (q. v.).

PARVISE. An afternoon’s exercise or moot for the instruction of young students, bearing the same name originally with the Parvisice (little-go) of Oxford. Wharton.

PARVUM CAPE. See Petit Cape.

PAS. In French. Precedence; right of going foremost.

PASCH. The passover; Easter.

PASCUA. A particular meadow or pasture land set apart to feed cattle.

PASCUA SILVA. In the civil law. A feeding wood; a wood devoted to the feeding of cattle. Dig. 50, 16, 30, 5.

PASCUAGE. The grazing or pasturage of cattle.

PASS, v. In practice. To utter or pronounce; as when the court passes sentence upon a prisoner. Also to proceed; to be rendered or given; as when judgment is said to pass for the plaintiff in a suit.

In legislative parlance, a bill or resolution is said to pass when it is agreed to or enacted by the house, or when the body has sanctioned its adoption by the requisite majority of votes; in the same circumstances, the body is said to pass the bill or motion.

When an auditor appointed to examine into any accounts certifies to their correctness, he is said to pass them; i.e., they pass through the examination without being detained or sent back for inaccuracy or imperfection. Brown.

The term also means to examine into anything and then authoritatively determine the disputed questions which it involves. In this sense a jury is said to pass upon the rights of issues in litigation before them.
PASS

In the language of conveyancing, the term means to move from one person to another; to be transferred or conveyed from one owner to another; as in the phrase "the word 'heirs' will pass the fee."

To publish; utter; transfer; circulate; impose fraudulently. This is the meaning of the word when the offense of passing counterfeit money or a forged paper is spoken of.

"Pass," "utter," "publish," and "sell" are in some respects convertible terms, and, in a given case, "pass" may include utter, publish, and sell. The words "uttering" and "passing," used of notes, do not necessarily import that they are transferred as genuine. The words include any delivery of a note to another for value, with intent that it shall be put into circulation as money. U. S. v. Nelson, 1 Abb. 135, Fed. Cas. No. 15,861; Smith v. State, 13 Ga.App. 663, 79 S.E. 764, 766.

Passing a paper is putting it off in payment or exchange. Using it in the sense of acceptance. To publish; utter; transfer; circulate; impose counterfeit money or a forged paper is spoken of.

PASS, n. Permission to pass; a license to go or come; a certificate, emanating from authority, wherein it is declared that a designated person is permitted to go beyond certain boundaries which, without such authority, he could not lawfully pass. Also a ticket issued by a railroad or other transportation company, authorizing a designated person to travel free on its lines, between certain points or for a limited time.

PASSAGE. A way over water; an easement giving the right to pass over a piece of private water. Travel by sea; a voyage over water; the carriage of passengers by water; money paid for such carriage.

Enactment; the act of carrying a bill or resolution through a legislative or deliberative body in accordance with the prescribed forms and requisites; the emergence of the bill in the form of a law, or the motion in the form of a resolution. Passage may mean when bill has passed both houses of legislature or when it is signed by Governor. People v. Coffin, 279 Ill. 401, 117 N.E. 85, 87; Board of Education of School Dist. No. 41 v. Morgan, 316 Ill. 143, 147 N.E. 34; Jemison v. Town of Ft. Deposit, 21 Ala.App. 331, 108 So. 396.

PASSAGE COURT. An ancient court of record in Liverpool, once called the "mayor's court of pays sage," but now usually called the "court of the passage of the borough of Liverpool." This court was formerly held before the mayor and two bailiffs of the borough, and had jurisdiction in actions where the amount in question exceeded forty shillings. Mozley & Whitley.

PASSAGE MONEY. The fare of a passenger by sea; money paid for the transportation of persons in a ship or vessel; as distinguished from "freight" or "freight-money," which is paid for the transportation of goods and merchandise.

PASSAGIO. An ancient writ addressed to the keepers of the ports to permit a man who had the king's leave to pass over sea. Reg. Orig. 193.

PASSAGIUM REGIS. A voyage or expedition to the Holy Land made by the kings of England in person. Cowell.

PASSATOR. He who has the interest or command of the passage of a river; or a lord to whom a duty is paid for passage. Wharton.

PASS-BOOK. A book in which a bank or banker enters the deposits made by a customer, and which is retained by the latter. Also a book in which a merchant enters the items of sales on credit to a customer, and which the latter carries or keeps with him.

One carried for hire, or reward, as distinguished from a "guest" who is one carried gratuitously, that is, without any financial return except such slight benefit as is customary as part of the ordinary courtesy of the road. Duncan v. Hutchinson, 139 Ohio St. 185, 39 N.E.2d 140, 142.

A passenger train is one which carries passengers, their baggage, mail and express only, while a freight train is one which carries freight alone, having a caboose attached for the use of the crew. Arizona Eastern R. Co. v. State, 29 Ariz. 446, 242 P. 870, 871.

PASSIAGIARIUS. A ferryman. Jacob.
PASSLM (Lat). Everywhere. Often used to indicate a very general reference to a book or legal authority.

PASSING-TICKET. In English law. A kind of note or check which the toll-clerks on some canals give to the boatmen, specifying the lading for which they have paid toll. Wharton.

PASSIO. Pannage; a liberty for hogs to run in forests or woods to feed upon mast. Mon. Angl. 1, 682.

PASSIVE. As used in law, this term means inactive; permissive; consisting in endurance or submission, rather than action; and in some connections it carries the implication of being subjected to a burden or charge.

As to passive "Debt," "Negligence," "Title," "Trust," and "Use," see those titles.

PASSPORT. Maritime. A document issued to a neutral merchant vessel, by her own government, during the progress of a war, to be carried on the voyage, to evidence her nationality and protect her against the cruisers of the belligerent powers. This paper is otherwise called a "pass," "sea-pass," "sea-letter," "sea-brief." It usually contains the captain's or master's name and residence, the name, property, description, tonnage, and destination of the ship, the nature and quantity of the cargo, the place from whence it comes, and its destination, with such other matters as the practice of the place requires.

In international law. A license or safe-conduct, issued during the progress of a war, authorizing a person to remove himself or his effects from the territory of one of the belligerent nations to another country, or to travel from country to country without arrest or detention on account of the war.

In American law. A special instrument intended for the protection of American vessels against the Barbary powers, usually called a "Mediterranean pass." Jac. Sea Laws, 69. Also a document addressed to foreign powers, which certifies that the person therein described is a citizen of the United States and which requests for him while abroad permission to come and go as well as lawful aid and protection. United States v. Browder, C.C.A.N.Y., 113 F.2d 97, 98.

In Modern law. A warrant of protection and authority to travel, granted by the competent officer to persons moving from place to place. Brande.

PASTO. In Spanish law. Feeding; pasture; a right of pasture. White, New Recop. b. 2, tit. 1, c. 6, § 4.

PASTOR. Lat. A shepherd. Applied to a minister of the Christian religion, who has charge of a congregation or parish, hence called his "flock." First Presbyterian Church v. Myers, 5 Okl. 809, 50 P. 70, 38 L.R.A. 687; Griswold v. Quinn, 97 Kan. 611, 156 P. 761, 762; Dupont v. Pelletier, 120 Me. 114, 113 A. 11, 13.

PASTURE. Ground for the grazing of domestic animals, and includes also the grass growing upon the ground. State v. Cornett, 199 N.C. 634, 155 S. E. 451, 452. Also the right of pasture. Co. Litt. 4b.

PASTUS. In feudal law. The procuration or provision which tenants were bound to make for their lords at certain times, or as often as they made a progress to their lands. It was often converted into money.

PATEAT UNIVERSIS PER PRIESENTES. Know all men by these presents. Words with which letters of attorney anciently commenced. Reg. Orig. 305b, 306.

PATENT, adj. Open; manifest; evident; unsealed. Used in this sense in such phrases as "patent ambiguity," "patent writ," "letters patent."

Letters patent. Open letters, as distinguished from letters close. An instrument proceeding from the government, and conveying a right, authority, or grant to an individual, as a patent for a tract of land, or for the exclusive right to make and sell a new invention. Familiarly termed a "patent." International Tooth Crown Co. v. Hanks Dental Ass'n, C.C.N.Y., 111 F. 918; Ulman v. Thompson, 57 Ind.App. 126, 106 N.E. 611, 613.

Patent ambiguity. See Ambiguity.

Patent defect. In sales of personal property, one which is plainly visible or which can be discovered by such an inspection as would be made in the exercise of ordinary care and prudence. Lawson v. Baer, 52 N.C. 461.

PATENT, n. A grant of some privilege, property, or authority, made by the government or sovereign of a country to one or more individuals. Phil. Pat. 1.

In American law. The instrument by which a state or government grants public lands to an individual. Bovey-Shute Lumber Co. v. Erickson, 41 N.D. 365, 170 N.W. 628, 630; McCarty v. Helbling, 73 Or. 356, 144 P. 499, 503. A grant made by the government to an inventor, conveying and secur-

In English law. A grant by the sovereign to a subject or subjects, under the great seal, conferring some authority, title, franchise, or property; termed "letters patent" from being delivered open, and not closed up from inspection.

General

Land patent. A muniment of title issued by a government or state for the conveyance of some portion of the public domain.

Patent bill office. The attorney general's patent bill office is the office in which were formerly prepared the drafts of all letters patent issued in England, other than those for inventions. The draft patent was called a "bill," and the officer who prepared it was called the "clerk of the patents to the queen's attorney and solicitor general." Sweet.

Patent of precedence. Letters patent granted, in England, to such barristers as the crown thinks fit to honor with that mark of distinction, whereby they are entitled to such rank and precedence as are assigned in their respective patents, which is sometimes next after the attorney general, but more usually next after her majesty's counsel then being. These rank promiscuously with the king's (or queen's) counsel, but are not the sworn servants of the crown. 3 Bl.Comm. 28; 3 Steph.Comm. 274.

Patent-office. In the administrative system of the United States, this is one of the bureaus of the department of commerce. It has charge of the issuing of patents to inventors and of such business as is connected therewith.

Patent-right dealer. Any one whose business it is to sell, or offer for sale, patent-rights. 14 St. at Large, 118.

Patent rolls. The official records of royal charters and grants; covering from the reign of King John to recent times. They contain grants of offices and lands, restitutions of temporalities to ecclesiastical persons, confirmations of grants made to bodies corporate, patents of creation of peers, and licenses of all kinds. Hubbard Succ. 617; 32 Phila. Law Lib. 429.

Pioneer patent. A patent for an invention covering a function never before performed, or a wholly novel device, or one of such novelty and importance as to mark a distinct step in the progress of the art, as distinguished from a mere improvement or perfecting of what has gone before. Westinghouse v. Boyden Power-Brake Co., 18 S.Ct. 707, 170 U.S. 537, 42 L.Ed. 1136; Yancey v. Enright, C.C.A.La., 230 F. 641, 645; Spengler Core Drilling Co. v. Spencer, D.C.Cal., 10 F.2d 579, 582.

Reissued patent. A patent securing rights of an inventor more definitely in some particular where-in the original patent was defective. Ingersoll v. Holt, 104 F. 682, 683.

PATENTABLE. Suitable to be patented; entitled by law to be protected by the issuance of a patent. Heath Cycle Co. v. Hay, C.C.Ind., 67 F. 246; Maier v. Bloom, C.C.N.J., 95 F. 166; Boyd v. Cherry, C.C. Iowa, 50 F. 282; Providence Rubber Co. v. Good-year, 9 Wall. 796, 19 L.Ed. 566. And to be "patentable," a device must embody some new idea or principle not before known, and it must be a discovery as distinguished from mere mechanical skill or knowledge. Hobart Mfg. Co. v. Landers, Frary & Clark, D.C.Conn., 26 F.Supp. 198, 202; In re Herthel, Cust. & Pat.App., 104 F.2d 824, 826.

PATENTEE. He to whom a patent has been granted. The term is usually applied to one who has obtained letters patent for a new invention.

PATER. Lat. A father; the father. In the civil law, this word sometimes included avus, (grandfather.) Dig. 50, 16, 201.

PATER PATRILE. Father of the country. See Parens

PATER IS EST QUEM NUPTILE REMONSTRAT. The father is he whom the marriage points out. 1 Bl.Comm. 446; Tate v. Penne, 7 Mart. (N. S. La.) 548, 553; Dig. 2, 4, 5; Broom, Max. 516.

PATERFAMILIAS. The father of a family.

In Roman law. The head or master of a family.

This word is sometimes employed, in a wide sense, as equivalent to sui juris. A person sui juris is called "paterfamilias" even when under the age of puberty. In the narrower and more common use, a paterfamilias is any one invested with potestas over any person. It is thus as applicable to a grandfather as to a father. Hunter, Rom. Law, 49.
PATERNA PATERNIS. Lat. Paternal estates to paternal heirs. A rule of the French law, signifying that such portion of a decedent's estate as came to him from his father must descend to his heirs on the father's side.

PATERNAL. That which belongs to the father or comes from him.

PATERNAL LINE. A line of descent or relationship between two persons which is traced through the father.

PATERNAL POWER. The authority lawfully exercised by parents over their children. This phrase is also used to translate the Latin "patria potestas," (q. v.).

PATERNAL PROPERTY. That which descends or comes to one from his father, grandfather, or other ascendant collateral on the paternal side of the house.

PATERNITY. The state or condition of a father; the relationship of a father.

The Latin "paternitas" is used in the canon law to denote a kind of spiritual relationship contracted by baptism. Heinecc. Elem. lib. 1, tit. 10, § 161, note.

PATIBULARY. Belonging to the gallows.

PATIBULATED. Hanged on a gibbet.

PATIENS. Lat. One who suffers or permits; the passive party in a transaction.

PATIENT. One who has been committed to the asylum and has remained there for care and treatment. Edwards v. West Texas Hospital, Tex.Civ. App., 89 S.W.2d 801, 811.

PATRIA. Lat. The country, neighborhood, or vicinage; the men of the neighborhood; a jury of the vicinage. Synonymous, in this sense, with "patria potestas."

PATRICIDE. One who has killed his father. As to the punishment of that offense by the Roman law, see Sandars' Just.Inst. (5th Ed.) 496.

PATRICIUS. In the civil law. A title of the highest honor, conferred on those who enjoyed the chief place in the emperor's esteem.

PATRIMONIAL. Pertaining to a patrimony; inherited from ancestors, but strictly from the direct male ancestors.

PATRIMONY. Any kind of property. Such estate as has descended in the same family; estates which have descended or been devised in a direct line from the father, and, by extension, from the mother or other ancestor. It has been held that the word is not necessarily restricted to property inherited directly from the father. 5 fr. Ch.Rep. 525.

PATRICIUS. In old ecclesiastical law. A godfather. Spelman.

PATRON. In ordinary usage one who protects, countenances, or supports some person or thing; one who habitually extends material assistance; a regular customer; a protector or benefactor. State v. Board of Trust of Vanderbilt University, 129 Tenn. 279, 164 S.W. 1151, 1170; Carroll v. Lee-Mon Special School Dist., 175 Ark. 274, 299 S.W. 11, 12.

PATRON. In ordinary usage one who protects, countenances, or supports some person or thing; one who habitually extends material assistance; a regular customer; a protector or benefactor. State v. Board of Trust of Vanderbilt University, 129 Tenn. 279, 164 S.W. 1151, 1170; Carroll v. Lee-Mon Special School Dist., 175 Ark. 274, 299 S.W. 11, 12.
In ecclesiastical law. He who has the right, title, power, or privilege of presenting to an ecclesiastical benefice.

In Roman law. The former master of an emancipated slave.

In French marine law. The captain or master of a vessel.

PATRONAGE. In English ecclesiastical law. The right of presentation to a church or ecclesiastical benefice; the same with advowson (q.v.). 2 Bl.Comm. 21. The right of appointing to office, considered as a perquisite, or personal right; not in the aspect of a public trust.

PATRONATUS. Lat.

In Roman law. The condition, relation, right, or duty of a patron.

In ecclesiastical law. Patronage, (q.v.).

PATRONIZE. To act as a patron, extend patronage, countenance, encourage, favor. State v. Board of Trust of Vanderbilt University, 129 Tenn. 279, 164 S.W. 1151, 1170.

PATRONUM FACIUNT DOS, ZEDIFICATIO, FUNDUS. Dod. Adv. 7. Endowment, building, and land make a patron.

PATRONUS (Lat.).

In Roman law. A modification of the Latin word pater, father. A denomination applied by Romulus to the first senators of Rome, and which they always afterwards bore. A person who stood in the relation of protector to another who was called his "client." One who advised his client in matters of law, and advocated his causes in court. Gilb. Forum Rom. 25.

PATROON. The proprietors of certain manors created in New York in colonial times were so called.

PATRUELIS. Lat. In the civil law. A cousin-german by the father's side; the son or daughter of a father's brother. Wharton.

PATRUUS. Lat. An uncle by the father's side; a father's brother.

PATRUUS MAGNUS. A grandfather's brother; granduncle.

PATRUUS MAJOR. A great-grandfather's brother.

PATRUUS MAXIMUS. A great-grandfather's father's brother.

PAUPER. A person so poor that he must be supported at public expense; also a suitor who, on account of poverty, is allowed to sue or defend without being chargeable with costs. In re Hoffen's Estate, 70 Wis. 522, 36 N.W. 407; Hutchings v. Thompson, 10 Cush., Mass., 238; Charleston v. Groveland, 15 Gray, Mass., 15; Lee County v. Lackie, 30 Ark. 764; Allegheny County v. City of Pittsburgh, 281 Pa. 300, 127 A. 72, 73. For "Family," see that title.

Dispauper. To deprive one of the status of a pauper and of any benefits incidental thereto: particularly, to take away the right to sue in forma pauperis because the person so suing, during the progress of the suit, has acquired money or property which would enable him to sustain the costs of the action.

PAUPERIES. Lat. In Roman law. Damage or injury done by an irrational animal, without active fault on the part of the owner, but for which the latter was bound to make compensation. Inst. 4, 9; Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 510.

PAVAGE. Money paid towards paving the streets or highways.

PAVE. To cover with stone, brick, concrete, or any other substantial matter, making a smooth and level surface. A sidewalk is paved when it is laid or flagged with flat stones, as well as when paved with brick, as is frequently done. In re Phillips, 60 N.Y. 22; Buell v. Ball, 20 Iowa 282; Harrisburg v. Segelbaum, 151 Pa. 172, 24 A. 1070, 20 L.R.A. 834.

PAWN, n. To deliver personal property to another in pledge, or as security for a debt or sum borrowed.

PAWN, v. To deliver personal property to another in pledge, or as security for a debt or engagement; a pledge. Story, Bailm. § 7; Coggs v. Bernard, 2 Ld.Raym. 913; Commercial Bank v. Flowers, 116 Ga. 219, 42 S.E. 474; Jacobs v. Grossman, 310 Ill. 247, 141 N.E. 714, 715.

Paw, or pledge, is a bailment of goods by a debtor to his creditor, to be kept till the debt is discharged. Wharton. In common usage pawn means a pledge of chattels as distinguished from pledges of choses in action, and in more limited sense means a deposit of personal property made to a pawnbroker as security for a loan; that sort of bailment when goods or chattels are delivered to another as security to him for money borrowed of him by the bailor. In re Rogers, D.C.W.Va., 20 F.Supp. 120, 126.

Also the specific chattel delivered to the creditor as a pledge.

In the law of Louisiana, pawn is known as one species of the contract of pledge, the other being antichresis; but the word "pawn" is sometimes used as synonymous with "pledge," thus including both species. Civ.Code La. art. 3134.

PAWNBROKER. A person whose business is to lend money, usually in small sums, on security of personal property deposited with him or left in pawn. Schaul v. Charlotte, 118 N.C. 733, 24 S.E. 526; Chicago v. Hulbert, 118 Ill. 632, 8 N.E. 812, 59 Am.Rep. 400.

Any person engaged in the business of lending money on deposit or pledges of personal property or other valuable thing, other than securities or printed evidence of indebtedness, or in the business of purchasing personal property, or choses in action, or other valuable thing, and selling or agreeing to sell the same back to the seller at a price other than the original price of purchase, or in the business of purchasing personal property such as articles containing gold, silver, platinum or other precious metals of... jewels for the purpose of reducing or smelting them into a different form and reselling the product. Gen. Code Ohio, 16338.

PAWNOR. The person pawning goods or delivering goods to another in pledge.

PAX ECCLESII. E. Lat. In old English law. The peace of the church. A particular privilege attached to a church; sanctuary (q. v.). Crabb, Eng. Law, 41; Cowell.

PAX REGIS. Lat. The peace of the king; that is, the peace, good order, and security for life and property which it is one of the objects of government to maintain, and which the king, as the personification of the power of the state, is supposed to guaranty to all persons within the protection of the law.

This name was also given, in ancient times, to a certain privileged district or sanctuary. The

The term, however, is sometimes limited to discharging an indebtedness by the use of money. Krahn v. Goodrich, 164 Wis. 600, 160 N.W. 1072, 1075. In re Bailey’s Estate, 276 Pa. 147, 119 A. 907, 909.

PAYABLE. Capable of being paid; suitable to be paid; admitting or demanding payment; justly due; legally enforceable. In re Advisory Opinion to the Governor, 74 Fla. 250, 77 So. 102, 103.

A sum of money is said to be payable when a person is under an obligation to pay it. “Payable” may therefore signify an obligation to pay at a future time, but, when used without qualification, “payable” means that the debt is payable at once, as opposed to “owing.” Sweet. And see First Nat. Bank v. Greenville Nat. Bank, 84 Tex. 40, 19 S.W. 334; Easton v. Hyde, 13 Minn. 91, Gil. 83.

PAYABLE ON DEMAND. A bill payable on demand is payable on its date or within a reasonable time without grace. Waggoner Banking Co. v. Gray County State Bank, Tex.Civ.App., 165 S.W. 922, 925.

At common law an instrument is payable on demand where no time for payment is expressed, unless the circumstances show a different intention. Coleman v. Page’s Estate, 202 S.C. 486, 25 S.E.2d 559.

PAYEE. In mercantile law. The person in whose favor a bill of exchange, promissory note, or check is made or drawn; the person to whom or to whose order a bill, note, or check is made payable. 3 Kent, Comm. 75; Thomson v. Findlater Hardware Co., Tex.Civ.App., 156 S.W. 301, 303.

PAYER, or PAYOR. One who pays, or who is to make a payment; particularly the person who is to make payment of a bill or note. Correlative to "payee."

PAYING QUANTITIES. This phrase, as used in oil and gas leases, when applied to the production of oil, means such a quantity as will pay a profit on the cost of operating the well. Pine v. Webster, 118 Okl. 12, 246 P. 429, 430; Waring v. Lockheed, Tex.Civ.App., 118 S.W.2d 1000. Sufficient quantities to pay a reasonable profit on the whole sum required to be expended, including the cost of drilling, equipping, and operating the well. Pelham Petroleum Co. v. North, 78 Okl. 39, 188 P. 1069, 1073; Aycock v. Paraffine Oil Co., Tex. Civ.App., 210 S.W. 851, 853.

If the well pays a profit, even small, over operating expenses, it produces in paying quantities, though it may never repay its cost, and the operation as a whole may prove unprofitable. Gypsy Oil Co. v. Marsh, 121 Okl. 135, 248 P. 329, 333, 48 A.L.R. 876; Masterson v. Amarillo Oil Co., Tex.Civ.App., 253 S.W. 908, 915.

PAYMASTER. An officer of the army or navy whose duty is to keep the pay-accounts and pay the wages of the officers and men. Any official charged with the disbursement of public money.

PAYMASTER GENERAL. In English law. The officer who makes the various payments out of the public money required for the different departments of the state by issuing drafts on the Bank of England. Sweet. In American law, the officer at the head of the pay corps of the army is so called, also the naval officer holding corresponding office and rank with reference to the pay department of the navy.

PAYMENT. The fulfillment of a promise, or the performance of an agreement.

A discharge of an obligation or debt, and part payment, if accepted, is a discharge pro tanto. Hattrem v. Burdick, 138 Or. 660, 6 P.2d 18, 19.

In a more restricted legal sense payment is the performance of a duty, promise, or obligation, or discharge of a debt or liability, by the delivery of money or other value by a debtor to a creditor, whether the money or other valuable thing is tendered and accepted as extinguishing debt or obligation in whole or in part. Also the money or other thing so delivered. Root v. Kelley, 39 Misc. 530, 80 N.Y.Supp. 482; Moulton v. Robison, 27 N.H. 554; Clay v. Lakenan, 101 Mo.App. 563, 74 S.W. 391; Roberts v. Vonnegut, 58 Ind.App. 142, 104 N.E. 321, 326; Buhl Highway Dist. v. Allred, 41 Idaho 54, 238 P. 298, 304.

“Payment” implies discharge of an obligation according to its terms or by something given or received of agreed value equal to the debt or liability. Crutchfield v. Johnson & Latimer, 243 Ala. 73, 8 So.2d 412, 414. “Payment” of a debt involves both tender by debtor with intention to pay debt, and acceptance by creditor. In re McElmurray, D.C. S.C., 47 F.Supp. 15, 19. Anything delivered and accepted in discharge of obligation is payment of debt. Barrett v. Clarke, 226 Ky. 109, 9 S.W.2d 1091, 1093.

Though “payment” in a broad sense includes money or anything else of value which the creditor accepts in satisfaction of his debt, it means in its restricted sense full satisfaction paid by money and not by exchange or compromise or by an accord and satisfaction. Roach v. McDonald, 187 Ala. 64, 65 So. 823. "Payment" is generally understood to mean a discharge by a compliance with the terms of the obligation or its equivalent, while in an "accord and satisfaction" the discharge is effected by the performance of terms other than those originally agreed on. Barcus v. J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co., Tex.Com.App., 197 S.W. 478, 480.

The execution and delivery of negotiable papers is not payment unless it is accepted by the parties in that sense. Seaman v. Muir, 72 Or. 583, 144 P. 121, 123; Cleve v. Craven Chemical Co., C.C.A.N.C., 18 F.2d 711, 712, 52 A.L.R. 980; Morrison v. Chapman, 155 App. Div. 509, 140 N.Y.S. 700, 702; Reid v. Topper, 22 Ariz. 381, 259 P. 397, 399; People v. Davis, 257 Mich. 165, 211 N.W. 36, 37.

Pleading. When the defendant alleges that he has paid the debt or claim laid in the declaration, this is called a "plea of payment."

General

Part payment. The reduction of any debt or demand by the payment of a sum less than the whole amount originally due. Young v. Perkins, 29 Minn. 173, 12 N.W. 515; Moffitt v. Carr, 48 Neb. 403, 67 N.W. 150, 58 Am.St.Rep. 696.

Partial payments. The United States rule of partial payments is to apply the payment, in the first place, to the discharge of the interest then due. If the payment exceeds the interest, the surplus goes toward discharging the principal, and the subsequent interest is to be computed on the balance of principal remaining due. If the payment be less than the interest, the surplus of the interest must not be taken to augment the principal; but interest continues on the former principal until the period of time when the payments, taken together, exceed the interest then due, to discharge which they are applied, and the surplus, if any, is to be applied towards the discharge of the principal, and the interest is to be computed on the balance as aforesaid, and this process continues until final settlement. Langton v. Kops, 41 N.D. 442, 171 N.W. 334, 336.

Payment into court. In practice. The act of a defendant in depositing the amount which he admits to be due, with the proper officer of the court, for the benefit of the plaintiff and in answer to his claim.

Voluntary payment. A payment made by a debtor of his own will and choice, as distinguished from one exacted from him by process of execution or other compulsion. Redmond v. New York, 125 N.Y. 632, 26 N.E. 727; Rumford Chemical Works v. Ray, 19 R.I. 456, 34 A. 814; St. Johns Electric Co. v. City of St. Augustine, 81 Fla. 588, 88 So. 387; Greene v. E. H. Taylor, Jr. & Sons, 184 Ky. 739, 212 S.W. 925, 928. Payments may be voluntary which are made unwillingly as a choice of evils. Singer Sewing Mach. Co. v. Teasley, 198 Ala. 673, 73 So. 969, 971. But money paid under a mistake of the facts is not ordinarily treated as falling within the rule that money paid with full knowledge of all the facts relating to the claim paid constitutes a voluntary payment, and cannot be recovered back. Strong & Jarvis v. Oldsmobile Co. of Vermont, 96 Vt. 355, 120 A. 100, 102.

PAYS. Fr. Country. Trial per pays, trial by jury, (the country.) See Pais.

PEACE. The concord or final agreement of a land. 18 Edw. I. modus levandi finis.

The tranquility enjoyed by a political society, internally by the good order which reigns among its members, and externally by the good understanding it has with all other nations. Applied to the internal regulations of a nation, peace imports, in a technical sense, not merely a state of repose and security as opposed to one of violence or warfare, but likewise a state of public order and decorum. Hamm.N.P. 139; 12 Mod. 566; People v. Johnson, 86 Mich. 175, 48 N.W. 870, 13 L.R.A. 163, 24 Am.St.Rep. 116; State v. Reighman, 135 Tenn. 685, 188 S.W. 597, 601, Ann.Cas. 1918B, 889; Catlette v. U. S., C.C.A.W.Va., 132 F.2d 902, 906.

Articles of the peace. See Articles.

Bill of peace. See Bill.

Breach of peace. See Breach.

Conservator of the peace. See Conservator.

Justice of the peace. See that title.

Peace and quietude. Public tranquillity and order to law, and that public order and security which is commanded by the laws of a particular sovereign, lord or superior. Weakley v. State, 168 Ark. 1087, 273 S.W. 374, 377.

Peace of God. The words, "in the peace of God and the said commonwealth, then and there being," as used in indictments for homicide and in the definition of murder, mean merely that it is not murder to kill an alien enemy in time of war, provided such killing occur in the actual exercise of war. Whart.Cr.Law, § 310; State v. Gut, 13 Minn. 341 (Gil. 315).

Peace of God and the church. In old English law. That rest and cessation which the king's subjects had from trouble and suit of law between the terms and on Sundays and holidays. Cowell; Spelman.

Peace of the state. The protection, security, and immunity from violence which the state undertakes to secure and extend to all persons within its jurisdiction and entitled to the benefit of its laws. This is part of the definition of murder, it being necessary that the victim should be "in the peace of the state," which now practically includes all persons except armed public enemies. See Murder. And see State v. Dunkley, 25 N.C. 121.

Peace officers. This term is variously defined by statute in the different states; but generally it includes sheriffs and their deputies, constables, marshals, members of the police force of cities, and other officers whose duty is to enforce and preserve the public peace. People v. Clinton, 28 App.Div. 478, 51 N.Y.S. 115; Jones v. State, Tex.Cr.App., 65 S.W. 92.

Public peace. The peace or tranquillity of the community in general; the good order and repose of the people composing a state or municipality. State v. Mancini, 91 Vt. 507, 101 A. 581, 583; State ex rel. Pollock v. Becker, 289 Mo. 660, 233 S.W. 641, 649. That invisible sense of security which every man feels so necessary to his comfort, and for which all governments are instituted. Redfield, J., in State v. Benedict, 11 Vt. 236, 34 Am.Dec. 688.

Public peace and quiet. Peace, tranquillity, and order and freedom from agitation or disturbance, the security, good order, and decorum guaranteed by civil society and by the law. State v. Brooks, 146 La. 325, 83 So. 637, 639.

PEACEABLE. Free from the character of force, violence, or trespass; as, a "peaceable entry" on lands. "Peaceable possession" of real estate such as is acquired in by all other persons, including rival claimants, and not disturbed by any forcible attempt at ouster nor by adverse suits to recover the possession or the estate. Stanley v. Schwalby, 13 S.Ct. 418, 147 U.S. 508, 37 L.Ed. 259; Allaire v. Ketcham, 55 N.J.Eq. 168, 35 Am. 900; North Fort Worth Townsite Co. v. Taylor, Tex.Civ.App., 262 S.W. 505; Mascal v. Murray, 76 Or. 637, 149 P. 517, 519.

PECCATA CONTRA NATURAM SUNT GRAVISSTEME Owing (even upon a moral obligation) upon a person, or on the property of the father or master, and in the personal disposal of the owner.

PECULIUM CASTRENSE. In Roman law. That property as might be held by a slave, wife, or son (of course) to a stipulatio.

PECCATIO, adj. Particular or special. Wolf v. Mallinckrodt Chemical Works, 336 Mo. 746, 81 S. W.2d 323, 330.

PECULIAR, n. In ecclesiastical law. A parish or church in England which has jurisdiction of ecclesiastical matters within itself, and independent of the ordinary, and is subject only to the metropolitan.

PECULIARS, COURT OF. In English law. A branch of and annexed to the court of arches. It has a jurisdiction over all those parishes dispersed through the province of Canterbury, in the midst of other dioceses, which are exempt from the ordinary’s jurisdiction, and subject to the metropolitan only.

PECULIUM. Lat. In Roman law. Such private property as might be held by a slave, wife, or son who was under the patria potestas, separate from the property of the father or master, and in the personal disposal of the owner.

PECULIUM CASTRENSE. In Roman law. That kind of peculium which a son acquired in war, or from his connection with the camp, (castrum.) Heinecc. Elem. lib. 2, tit. 9, § 474.

PECUNIA. Lat. Originally and radically, property in cattle, or cattle themselves. So called because the wealth of the ancients consisted in cattle.

PECUNIA CONTRA NATURAM SUNT GRAVIS-SIMA. 3 Inst. 20. Crimes against nature are subject only to the metropolitan.

PECUNIA CONSTITUTA. In Roman law. Money owed (even upon a moral obligation) upon a day being fixed (constituta) for its payment, became recoverable upon the implied promise to pay on that day, in an action called "de pecunia constituta," the implied promise not amounting (of course) to a stipulatio. Brown.

PECUNIA DICTITUR A PECUS, OMNES ENIM VETERUM DIVITIZE IN ANIMALIBUS CON-SISTEBANT. Co.Litt. 207. Money (pecunia) is so called from cattle, (pecus,) because all the wealth of our ancestors consisted in cattle.

PECUNIA NON NUMERATA. In the civil law. Money not paid. The subject of an exception or plea in certain cases. Inst. 4, 13, 2.
PECUNIA

PECUNIA NUMERATA. Money numbered or counted out; e., given in payment of a debt.

PECUNIA SEPULCHRALIS. Money anciently paid to the priest at the opening of a grave for the good of the deceased’s soul.

PECUNIA TRAJECTITIA. In the civil law. A loan in money, or in wares which the debtor purchases with the money to be sent by sea, and whereby the creditor, according to the contract, assumes the risk of the loss from the day of the departure of the vessel till the day of her arrival at her port of destination. Interest does not necessarily arise from this loan, but when is stipulated for it is termed “naucicum fenues,” (maritime interest,) and, because of the risk which the creditor assumes, he is permitted to receive a higher interest than usual. Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 433.

PECUNIARY. Monetary; relating to money; financial; consisting of money or that which can be valued in money. El Paso Electric Ry. Co. v. Benjamin, Tex.Civ.App., 202 S.W. 996, 998; In re Foster’s Will, 143 Misc. 191, 256 N.Y.S. 383, 387.

As to pecuniary “Consideration,” “Damages,” and “Legacy,” see those titles.

PECUNIARY BENEFITS. Include such things only as can be valued in money. Dallas Ry. & Terminal Co. v. Moore, Tex.Civ.App., 52 S.W.2d 104.

PECUNIARY CAUSES. In English ecclesiastical practice. Causes arising from the withholding of ecclesiastical dues, or the doing or neglecting some act relating to the church whereby some damage accrues to the plaintiff. 3 B1.Comm. 88.

PECUNIARY CONDITION. Within statute relative to obtaining goods by false pretenses, comprehends, not only money in hand, but property and all other assets of value constituting an existing fact that go to make up financial responsibility as a basis of credit. Dennis v. State, 16 Ala. App. 115, 75 So. 707, 708.

PECUNIARY LOSS. A loss of money, or of something by which money or something of money value may be acquired. Green v. Hudson River R. Co., 32 Barb. (N.Y.) 33.

As applied to a defendant’s loss from death pecuniary loss means the reasonable expectation of pecuniary benefit from the continued life of the deceased, to be inferred from proof of assistance by way of money, services, or other material benefits rendered prior to death. Standard Forgings Co. v. Holmstrom, 58 Ind.App. 306, 104 N.E. 872, 875; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Holloway’s Adm’t, 168 Ky. 262, 181 S.W. 1126, 1129. “Pecuniary loss” is a term employed judicially to discriminate between a material loss which is susceptible of pecuniary valuation, and that estimable loss of the society and companionship of the deceased relative upon which, in the nature of things, it is not possible to set a pecuniary valuation. Michigan Cent. R. Co. v. Vreeland, 33 S.Ct. 192, 196, 227 U.S. 59, 57 L.Ed. 417, Ann.Cas.1914C, 176.

PECUS. Lat. In Roman law. Cattle; a beast. Under a bequest of pecudes were included oxen and other beasts of burden. Dig. 32, 81, 2.

PECURUS. Lat. In Roman law. Cattle; a beast. Under a bequest of pecures were included oxen and other beasts of burden. Dig. 32, 81, 2.

PEDAGE. In old English law. A toll or tax paid by travelers for the privilege of passing, on foot or mounted, through a forest or other protected place. Spelman.

PEDAGIUM. L. Lat. Pedage, (q. v.)

PEDANEUS. Lat. In Roman law. At the foot, in a lower position; on the ground. See Judex Pedaneus.

PEDDLER. An itinerant trader; a person who sells small wares, which he carries with him in traveling about from place to place. In re Wilson, 19 D.C. 341, 12 L.R.A. 624; Hall v. State, 39 Fla. 637, 23 So. 119; Graffty v. Rushville, 107 Ind. 502, 8 N.E. 609, 57 Am.Rep. 128; In re Pringle, 67 Kan. 364, 72 P. 864; State ex rel. Brittain v. Hayes, 143 La. 39, 78 So. 143, 144; De Witt v. State, 155 Wis. 249, 144 N.W. 253. Persons, except those peddling newspapers, Bibles, or religious tracts, who sell, or offer to sell, at retail, goods, wares, or other commodities, traveling from place to place, in the street, or through different parts of the country are peddlers. 12 U.S. St. at Large, p. 458, § 27.

Distinguished from “trader” who has goods for sale and sells them in a fixed place of business. Commonwealth v. Bergeron, 296 Mass. 60, 5 N.E.2d 31, 32.

PEDE PULVEROSUS. In old English and Scotch law. Dusty-foot. A term applied to itinerant merchants, chapmen, or peddlers who attended fairs.

PEDERASTY. In criminal law. The unnatural carnal copulation of male with male, particularly of a man with a boy; a form of sodomy, (q. v.)

The rule admitting hearsay evidence in matters of “pedigree” embraces, not only descent and relationship, but also facts and dates of birth, marriage, and death. Lincoln Reserve Life Ins. Co. v. Morgan, 126 Ark. 615, 191 S.W. 236; In re Paulsen’s Estate, 179 Cal. 528, 178 P. 143, 145; Tuite v. Supreme Forest Woodmen Circle, 193 Mo. App. 619, 187 S.W. 137, 140.

PEDIS ABSCISSIO. Lat. In old criminal law. The cutting off a foot; a punishment anciently inflicted instead of death. Fleta, lib. 1, c. 38.

PEDIS POSITIO. Lat. In the civil and old English law. A putting or placing of the foot. A term used to denote the possession of lands by actual corporal entry upon them. Waggoner v. Hastings, 5 Pa. 303.

PEDIS POSSESSIO. Lat. A foothold; an actual possession. To constitute adverse possession there must be pedis possessio, or a substantial enclosure. 2 Bouv.Inst. no. 2193; Bailey v. Irby, 2 Nott &McC. (S.C.) 343, 10 Am.Dec. 609.

PEDONES. Foot-soldiers.

PEEPING TOM. A person who makes it a habit of sneaking up to windows and peeping in, for the purpose generally of seeing the women of the household in the nude. Browder v. Cook, D.C. Idaho, 59 F.Supp. 225, 231.

PEERAGE. The rank or dignity of a peer or nobleman. Also the body of nobles taken collectively.

PEERESS. A woman who belongs to the nobility, which may be either in her own right or by right of marriage.

PEERS. In feudal law. The vassals of a lord who sat in his court as judges of their co-vassals, and were called “peers,” as being each other’s equals, or of the same condition. The nobility of Great Britain, being the lords temporal having seats in parliament, and including dukes, marquises, earls, viscounts, and barons.

Equals; those who are a man’s equals in rank and station; thus “trial by a jury of his peers” means trial by jury of citizens. In re Grilli, 110 Misc. 45, 179 N.Y.S. 795, 797. For “judgment of his peers,” see Judgment.

PEERS OF FEES. Vassals or tenants of the same lord, who were obliged to serve and attend him in his courts, being equal in function. These were termed “peers of fees,” because holding fees of the lord, or because their business in court was to sit and judge, under their lords, of disputes arising upon fees; but, if there were too many in one lordship, the lord usually chose twelve, who had the title of peers, by way of distinction; whence, it is said, we derive our common juries and other peers. Cowell.

PEINE FORTE ET DURE. L. Fr. In old English law. A special form of punishment for those who, being arraigned for felony, obstinately “stood mute,” that is, refused to plead or to put themselves upon trial. It is described as a combination of solitary confinement, slow starvation, and crushing the naked body with a great load of iron. This atrocious punishment was vulgarly called “pressing to death.” See 4 BL.Comm. 324-328; Britt. cc. 4, 22; 2 Reeve, Eng.Law 134; Cowell.

PELA. A peal, pile, or fort. Cowell.

PELES. Issues arising from or out of a thing. Jacob.

PELF, or PELFRE. Booty; also the personal effects of a felon convict. Cowell.

PELLAGE. The custom or duty paid for skins of leather.

PELLEX. Lat. In Roman law. A concubine. Dig. 50, 16, 144.

PELLICIA. A pitch or surplice. Spelman.

PELLIPARIUS. A leather-seller or skinner. Jacob.

PELLOTA. The ball of a foot. 4 Inst. 308.

PELLE. A pilch or surplice. Spelman.

PELFRE. Booty; also the personal effects of a felon convict. Cowell.

PELLAG. The custom or duty paid for skins of leather.

PENAL ACTION. In practice. An action upon a penal statute; an action for the recovery of a penalty given by statute. 3 Steph. 535, 536; Smith Engineering Works v. Custer, 194 Okl. 318, 151 P.2d 404, 407, 408. An action which involves a forfeiture or penalty for transgressing the law. The term "penal" is broader than "criminal," and relates to actions which are not necessarily criminal as well. The term "penalty" in its broad sense is a generic term which includes fines as well as other kinds of punishment, but in its narrowest sense is the amount recovered for violation of the statute law of the state or a municipal ordinance, which violation may or may not be a crime, and the term applies mostly to a pecuniary punishment. The word "forfeiture" is frequently used in civil as well as criminal law, and it is also used in actions for a penalty, although the action is a civil one. Silberman v. Skouras Theatres Corporation, 11 N.J.Misc. 907, 169 A. 170, 171.

Distinguished from a popular or qui tam action, in which the action is brought by the informer, to whom part of the penalty goes. A penal action or information is brought by an officer, and the penalty goes to the king. 1 Chit. Gen.Pr. 25, note; 2 Archb. Pr. 188. But in American law, the term includes actions brought by informers or other private persons, as well as those instituted by governments or public officers. In a broad sense, the term has been made to include all actions in which there may be a recovery of exemplary or vindictive damages, as suits for libel and slander, or in which special, double, or treble damages are given by statute, such as actions to recover money paid as usury or lost in gaming. See Bailey v. Dean, 5 Barb., N.Y., 303; Ashley v. Frame, 4 Kan.App. 265, 45 P. 927; Cole v. Groves, 134 Mass. 472. But in a more particular sense it means (1) an action on a statute which gives a certain penalty to be recovered by any person who will sue for it. Gawthrop v. Fairmont Coal Co., 74 W.Va. 39, 81 S.E. 560, 561; McNeely v. City of Natchez, 148 Miss. 268, 114 So. 484, 487, or (2) an action in which the judgment against the defendant is in the nature of a fine or is intended as a punishment, and the recovery is to be compensatory in its purpose and effect not being penal actions but civil suits, though they may carry special damages by statute. Moller v. U. S., 6 C.C.A. 45, 57 F. 490; Atlanta v. Chattanooga Foundry & Pipe Works, 61 C.C.A. 387, 127 F. 23, 64 L.R.A. 721.
PENAL

PENAL BILL. An instrument formerly in use, by which a party bound himself to pay a certain sum or sums of money, or to do certain acts, or, in default thereof, to pay a certain specified sum by way of penalty; thence termed a "penal sum." These instruments have been superseded by the use of a bond in a penal sum, with conditions. Brown.

PENAL BOND. A promise to pay a named sum of money, the penalty, with a condition underwritten that, if a stipulated collateral thing, other than the payment of money, be done or forborne, the obligation shall be void. Maryland Casualty Co. v. Kansas City, Mo., C.C.A.Mo., 128 F.2d 998, 1004.

PENAL LAWS. Those which prohibit an act and impose a penalty for the commission of it. 2 Cro.Jac. 415. Strictly and properly speaking, a penal law is one imposing a penalty or punishment (and properly a pecuniary fine or mulct) for some offense of a public nature or wrong committed against the state. Kilton v. Providence Tool Co., 22 R.I. 605, 48 A. 1039; Wellman v. Mead, 93 Vt. 322, 107 A. 396, 397; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. State, 73 Fla. 609, 74 So. 595, 600. Strictly speaking, statutes giving a private action against a wrongdoer are not penal in their nature, neither the liability imposed nor the remedy given being penal. If the wrong done is to the individual, the law giving him a right of action is remedial, rather than penal, though the sum to be recovered may be called a "penalty" or may consist in double or treble damages. See Huntington v. Attrill, 13 S.Ct. 224, 146 U.S. 657, 36 L.Ed. 1123; Diversey v. Smith, 103 Ill. 390, 42 Am.Rep. _14; Cullinan v. Burkhard, 41 Misc. 321, 84 N.Y.S. 825; Credit Men's Adjustment Co. v. Vickery, 62 Colo. 214, 161 P. 297, 298.

Where a statute is both penal and remedial, as where it is penal in one part and remedial in the other, it should be considered as a "penal statute" when it is sought to enforce the penalty, and as a "remedial statute" when it is sought to enforce the remedy. Collins v. Kidd, D.C.Tex., 38 F.Supp. 634, 637.

PENAL SERVITUDE. In English criminal law, is a punishment which consists in keeping an offender in confinement, and compelling him to labor. Steph.Crim.Dig. 2.

PENAL STATUTES. See Penal Laws.

PENAL SUM. A sum agreed upon in a bond, to be forfeited if the condition of the bond is not fulfilled.

To constitute a "punishment" or "penalty" there must be a deprivation of property or some right, such as the enjoyment of liberty. State v. Cowen, 231 Iowa 1117, 3 N.W.2d 176, 179, 182.

PENANCE. In ecclesiastical law. An ecclesiastical punishment inflicted by an ecclesiastical court for some spiritual offense. Ayl.Par. 420.

PENCIL. An instrument made of plumbago, red chalk, or other suitable substance, for writing without ink.

PENDENCY. Suspending; the state of being pendend; the state of an action, etc., pending suit.

PENDENTE LITE. Lat. Pending the suit; during the actual progress of a suit; during litigation. In re Morrissey's Will, 91 N.J.Eq. 289, 107 A. 70, 71.

PENDENTE LITE NIHIL INNOVETUR. Co. Litt. 344. During a litigation nothing new should be introduced.

PENDENTES. In the civil law. The fruits of the earth not yet separated from the ground; the fruits hanging by the roots. Ersk.Inst. 2, 2, 4.

PENDICLE. In Scotch law. A piece or parcel of ground.
PENDING. Begun, but not yet completed; duning; before the conclusion of; prior to the completion of; unsettled; undetermined; in process of settlement or adjustment. Thus, an action or pletion of; unsettled; undetermined; in process vention of final judgment. Midkiff v. Colton, C.C.
Va., 242 F. 373, 381; Ex parte Craig, C.C.A.
Y., 274 F. 177, 187; United States v. 2,049.85
Acres of Land, More or Less, in Nueces County, Tex., D.C.Tex., 49 F.Supp. 20, 22. A criminal case is pending, in the sense that a court may correct its records, until the judgment is fully satisfied.

The term "pending appeal" may refer to the time before appeal, and while an appeal is impending. Cincinnati, H. & D. Ry. Co. v. McCul-
, 183 Ind. 556, 109 N.E. 206, 209, Ann.Cas.1917E,

PENITENTIARY. A prison or place of punishment. Cincinnati, H. & D. Ry. Co. v. McCul-lom, 183 Ind. 556, 109 N.E. 206, 209, Ann.Cas.1917E,

PENITENTIALS. A compilation or list of sins and other penances, compiled in the Eastern
Church and in the extreme west about the sixth century. Stubbs, Canon Law, in 1 Sel.Essays in Anglo-Am. L. H. 252.

PENETRATION. A term used in criminal law, and denoting (in cases of alleged rape) the insertion of the male part into the female parts to however slight an extent; and by which insertion the offense is complete without proof of emis-

PENITENTIALS. A compilation or list of sins
and other penances, compiled in the Eastern
Church and in the extreme west about the sixth century. Stubbs, Canon Law, in 1 Sel.Essays in Anglo-Am. L. H. 252.

PENNY. An English coin, being the twelfth part of a shilling. It was also used in America during the colonial period.

PENNYWEIGHT. A Troy weight, equal to twenty-four grains, or one-twentieth part of an ounce.

PENSAM. The full weight of twenty ounces.

PENSIO. Lat. In the civil law. A payment, properly, for the use of a thing. A rent; a payment for the use and occupation of another's house.

PENSION. A stated allowance out of the public treasury granted by government to an individual, or to his representatives, for his valuable services to the country, or in compensation for loss or damage sustained by him in the public service.
L.Ed. 657; State ex rel. Wander v. Kimmel, 256
Mo. 611, 165 S.W. 1067, 1072; Dickey v. Jackson, 181 Iowa, 1155, 165 N.W. 387, 389; Hawkins v.
Randolph, 149 Ark. 124, 231 S.W. 556, 559.

"Pensions" are in the nature of bounties of the government, which it has the right to give, withhold, distribute, or recall at its discretion. Pecoy v. City of Chicago, 265

PENITTEN DR. A peremptory order against a member of an inn of court who is in arrear for his pensions, (that is, for his periodical dues), or for other duties. Cowell.

PENSION Writ. A peremptory order against a member of an inn of court who is in arrear for his pensions, (that is, for his periodical dues),
or for other duties. Cowell.

PENSIONARY PARLIAMENT. A parliament of Charles II which was prolonged for nearly 18 years.

PENSIONER. One who is supported by an allowance at the will of another; a dependent. It is usually applied (in a public sense) to those who receive pensions or annuities from government, who are chiefly such as have retired from places of honor and emolument. Jacob.

Persons making periodical payments are sometimes so called. Thus, resident undergraduates of the university of Cambridge, who are not on the foundation of any college, are spoken of as "pensioners." Mozley & Whiteley.

The head of one of the Inns of Court, otherwise the Treasurer. Pension was used to designate meetings of the Benchers in Gray's Inn.

PENT-ROAD. A road shut up or closed at its terminal points. Wolcott v. Whitcomb, 40 Vt. 41.

PENTECOSTALS. In ecclesiastical law. Pious oblations made at the feast of Pentecost by parishioners to their priests, and sometimes by inferior churches or parishes to the principal mother churches. They are also called "Whitsun farthings." Wharton.

PEON. In Mexico. A debtor held by his creditor in a qualified servitude to work out the debt; a serf. Webster.

In India. A footman; a soldier; an inferior of-cer; a servant employed in the business of the revenue, police, or judicature.

PEONAGE. The state or condition of a peon as above defined; a condition of enforced servitude, or to his representatives, for his valuable services to the country, or in compensation for loss or damage sustained by him in the public service.
L.Ed. 657; State ex rel. Wander v. Kimmel, 256
Mo. 611, 165 S.W. 1067, 1072; Dickey v. Jackson, 181 Iowa, 1155, 165 N.W. 387, 389; Hawkins v.
Randolph, 149 Ark. 124, 231 S.W. 556, 559.

"Pensions" are in the nature of bounties of the government, which it has the right to give, withhold, distribute,
or recall at its discretion. Pecoy v. City of Chicago, 265

In civil, Scotch, and Spanish law. A rent; an annual rent.

In English practice. An annual payment made by each member of the inns of court. Cowell; Holthouse. Also an assembly of the members of the society of Gray's Inn, to consult of their affairs.

PENSION OF CHURCHES. In English ecclesiastical law. Certain sums of money paid to clergymen in lieu of tithes. A spiritual person may sue in the spiritual court for a pension originally granted and confirmed by the ordinary, but, where it is granted by a temporal person to a clerk, he cannot; as, if one grant an annuity to a parson, he must sue for it in the temporal courts. Cro.
Eliz. 675.

PENSION WRIT. A peremptory order against a member of an inn of court who is in arrear for his pensions, (that is, for his periodical dues),
or for other duties. Cowell.
PEONIA. In Spanish law. A portion of land which was formerly given to a simple soldier on the conquest of a country. It is now a quantity of land of different size in different provinces. In the Spanish possessions in America it measured fifty feet front and one hundred feet deep. 2 White, N.Rec. 49; Strother v. Lucas, 12 Pet., U.S. 444, 9 L.Ed. 1137. See Caballeria.

In a more restricted sense, and as generally used in constitutional law, the entire body of those citizens of a state or nation who are invested with political power for political purposes, that is, the qualified voters or electors. Koehler v. Hill, 60 Iowa 543, 15 N.W. 609; Boyd v. Nebraska, 12 S.Ct. 375, 143 U.S. 135, 36 L.Ed. 103; In re Incuriing of State Debts, 19 R.I. 610, 37 A. 14; In re Opinion of the Justices, 226 Mass. 607, 115 N.E. 921, 922; State v. City of Albuquerque, 31 N.M. 576, 249 P. 242, 247.

In neutrality laws, a government recognized by the United States. The Three Friends, D.C.Fla., 78 F. 175.

The word "people" may have various significations according to the connection in which it is used. When we speak of the rights of the people, or of the government of the people by law, or of the people as a non-political aggregate, we mean all the inhabitants of the state or nation, without distinction as to sex, age, or otherwise. But when reference is made to the people as the repository of sovereignty, or as the source of governmental power, or to popular government, we are in fact speaking of that selected and limited class of citizens to whom the constitution accords the elective franchise and the right of participation in the offices of government. Black, Const. Law 3d Ed. p. 30.

PEPPERCORN. A dried berry of the black pepper. In English law, the reservation of a merely nominal rent, on a lease, is sometimes expressed by a stipulation for the payment of a peppercorn.

PER. Lat. By, through, or by means of. Lea v. Helgerson, Tex.Civ.App., 228 S.W. 992, 993. When a writ of entry is sued out against the alienee of the intruder or disseisor, or against his heir to whom the land has descended, it is said to be brought "in the per," because the writ then states that the tenant had not entry but by (per) the original wrong-doer. 3 B1.Comm. 181.

Words "by," "per," "pro," used to signature and adding description thereto, such as agent, shows that person signed official name alone and not personally. Agricultural Bond & Credit Corporation v. Courtenay Farmers' Co-op Ass'n, 64 N.D. 253, 251 N.W. 881.

PER IES ET LIBRAM. Lat. In Roman law. The sale per ces et libram (with copper and scales) was a ceremony used in transferring res mancipei, in the emancipation of a son or slave, and in one of the forms of making a will. The parties having assembled, with a number of witnesses, and one who held a balance or scales, the purchaser struck the scales with a copper coin, repeating a formula by which he claimed the subject-matter of the transaction as his property, and handed the coin to the vendor.

PER ALLUVIONEM. Lat. In the civil law. By alluvion, or the gradual and imperceptible increase arising from deposit by water.

PER ALLUVIONEM ID VIDETUR ADJICI QUOD ITA PAULATIM ADJICITUR UT INTELIGERE NON POSSUMUS QUANTUM QUOQUO MOMENTO TEMPORIS ADJICIATUR. That is said to be added by alluvion which is so added little by little that we cannot tell how much is added at any one moment of time. Dig. 41, 1, 7, 1; Fleta, 1. 3, c. 2, § 6.

PER AND CUL When a writ of entry is brought against a second alienee or descendant from the disseisor, it is said to be in the per and cui, because the form of the writ is that the tenant had entry but by and under a prior alienee, to whom the intruder himself demised it, 3 B1. Comm. 181.

PER AND POST. To come in in the per is to claim by or through the person last entitled to an estate; as the heirs or assigns of the grante. To come in in the post is to claim by a paramount and prior title; as the lord by escheat.

PER AUTRE VIE. L. Fr. For or during another's life; for such period as another person shall live.

PER AVERSIONEM. Lat. In the civil law. By turning away. A term applied to that kind of sale where the goods are taken in bulk, and not by weight or measure, and for a single price; or where a piece of land is sold as containing in gross, by estimation, a certain number of acres. Poth.Cont.Sale, nn. 256, 309. So called because the buyer acts without particular examination or discrimination, turning his face, as it were, away. Calvin.

PER BOUCHE. L. Fr. By the mouth; orally. 3 How. State Tr. 1024.

PER CAPITA. Lat. By the heads or polls; according to the number of individuals; share and share alike. This term, derived from the civil law, is much used in the law of descent and distribution, and denotes that method of dividing an intestate estate by which an equal share is given to each of a number of persons, all of whom stand in equal degree to the decedent, without reference to their stocks or the right of representation. It is the antithesis of per stirpes, (q. v.). Buxton v. Noble, 146 Kan. 671, 73 P.2d 43, 47, MacGregor v. Roux, 198 Ga. 520, 32 S.E.2d 289, 291.

PER CENT. An abbreviation of the Latin "per centum," meaning by the hundred, or so many parts in the hundred, or so many hundredths. Blakeslee v. Mansfield, 66 Ill.App. 119.

PER CONSIDERATIONEM CURVE. Lat. In old practice. By the consideration (judgment) of the court. Yearb. M. 1 Edw. II. 2.

PER CURIAM. Lat. By the court. A phrase used in the reports to distinguish an opinion of the whole court from an opinion written by any one judge. Sometimes it denotes an opinion written by the chief justice or presiding judge. Clarke v. Western Assur. Co., 146 Pa. 561, 23 A. 248, 15 L.R.A. 127, 28 Am.St.Rep. 821.

PER DIEM. By the day; an allowance or amount of so much per day. Webster.

Generally, as used in connection with compensation, wages or salary, means pay for a day’s service. Scroggie v. Scarborough, 162 S.C. 218, 160 S.E. 596, 599.

Constitution held to limit compensation which any legislature may fix for its successors to mileage and "per diem"; hence, statute authorizing allowance of personal expenses to legislature was unconstitutional. Galliano v. Long, 214 Iowa 805, 243 N.W. 719, 725.

Per diem is sometimes and by some courts held to be included in the term fees and sometimes otherwise, and the two terms are not always synonymous. Anderson v. Beadle County, 51 S.D. 6, 211 N.W. 968, 969.

Term "per diem" as used in constitutional provision fixing compensation of members is synonymous with salary. Peay v. Nolan, 157 Tenn. 222, 7 S.W.2d 815, 817, 60 A.L.R. 408.

PER EUNDEM. Lat. By the same. This phrase is commonly used to express "by, or from the mouth of, the same judge." So "per eundem in eadem" means "by the same judge in the same case."

PER EXTENSUM. Lat. In old practice. At length.

PER FORMAM DONI. L. Lat. In English law. By the form of the gift; by the designation of the giver, and not by the operation of law. 2 Bl. Comm. 113, 191.

PER FRAUDEM. Lat. By fraud. Where a plea alleges matter of discharge, and the replication avers that the discharge was fraudulently obtained and is therefore invalid, it is called a "replication per fraudem."

PER INCURIAM. Lat. Through inadvertence. 35 Eng. Law & Eq. 302.

PER INDUSTRIAM HOMINIS. Lat. In old English law. By human industry. A term applied to the reclaiming or taming of wild animals by art, industry, and education. 2 Bl.Comm. 391.

PER INFORTUNIUM. Lat. By misadventure: In criminal law, homicide per infortunium is committed where a man, doing a lawful act, without any intention of hurt, unfortunately kills another. 4 Bl.Comm. 182. See Homicide.

PER LEGEM ANGLIÆ. Lat. By the law of England; by the curtesy. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 54, § 18.

PER MTER LE DROIT. L. Fr. By passing the right. One of the modes by which releases at common law were said to inure was "per mitter le droit," as where a person who had been disseised released to the disseisor or his heir or feoffee. In such case, by the release, the right which was in the releasor was added to the possession of the releasee, and the two combined perfected the estate. Miller v. Emans, 19 N.Y. 387.

PER MITTER L’ESTATE. L. Fr. By passing the estate. At common law, if two or more are seised, either by deed, devise, or descent, as joint tenants or coparceners of the same estate, and one of them releases to the other, this is said to inure by way of "per mitter l’estate." Miller v. Emans, 19 N.Y. 388.

PER MY ET PER TOUT. L. Fr. By the half and by the whole. A phrase descriptive of the mode in which joint tenants hold the joint estate, the effect of which, technically considered, is that for purposes of tenure and survivorship each is the holder of the whole, but for purposes of alienation each has only his own share, which is presumed in law to be equal. 1 Washb.Real Prop. 406.

PER PALS, TRIAL. Trial by the country; i. e., by jury.

PER PROCURATION. By proxy; by one acting as an agent with special powers; as under a letter of attorney. These words "give notice to all persons that the agent is acting under a special and limited authority." 10 C.B. 689. The phrase is commonly abbreviated to "per proc.," or "p. p.," and is more used in the civil law and in England than in American law.

PER QUIE SERVITIA. Lat. A real action by which the grantee of a seigniory could compel the tenants of the grantor to attorn to himself. It was abolished by St. 3 & 4 Wm. IV, c. 27, § 35.

PER QUOD. Lat. Whereby. When the declaration in an action of tort, after stating the acts complained of, goes on to allege the consequences of those acts as a ground of special damage to the plaintiff, the recital of such consequences is prefaced by these words, "per quod," whereby; and sometimes the phrase is used as the name of that clause of the declaration.

Words "actionable per quod" are those not actionable per se upon their face, but are only actionable in consequence of extrinsic facts showing circumstances under which they were said or the damages resulting to slandered party therefrom. Smith v. Mustain, 210 Ky. 445, 276 S.W. 154, 155, 44 A.L.R. 386.

PER QUOD CONSORTIUM AMISIT. Lat. In old pleading. Whereby he lost the company [of his wife.] A phrase used in the old declarations in actions of trespass by a husband for beating or ill using his wife, descriptive of the special damage he had sustained. 3 Bl.Comm. 140; Cro.Jac. 501, 538; Crocker v. Crocker, C.C.Mass., 98 F. 703.

PER QUOD SERVITIUM AMISIT. Lat. In old pleading. Whereby he lost the service [of his servant.] A phrase used in the old declarations in actions of trespass by a master, for beating or ill using his servant, descriptive of the special damage he had himself sustained. 3 Bl.Comm. 142; 9 Coke, 113a; Callaghan v. Lake Hopatcong Ice Co., 69 N.J.Law, 100, 54 A. 223. This action is commonly brought by the father for the seduction of his daughter, in which case very slight evidence of the relation of master and servant is necessary; but still some loss of service, or some expense, must be shown; 5 B. & P. 466; 5 Price, 641; Kendrick v. McCrary, 11 Ga. 603; Phelin v. Kenderdine, 20 Pa. 354.

PER RATIONES PERVENITUR AD LEGITIMAM RATIONEM. Litt. § 386. By reasoning we come to true reason.

PER RERUM NATURAM FACTUM NEGANTIS NULLA PROBATIO EST. It is in the nature of things that he who denies a fact is not bound to give proof.

PER SALTUM. Lat. By a leap or bound; by a sudden movement; passing over certain proceedings. 8 East, 511.

PER SAMPLE. By sample. A purchase so made is a collateral engagement that the goods shall be of a particular quality. 4 B. & Ald. 387.

PER SE. Lat. By himself or itself; in itself; taken alone; inherently; in isolation; unconnected with other matters. Findley v. Wilson, 115 Okl. 280, 242 P. 565, 568; Rowan v. Gazette Printing Co., 74 Mont. 326, 239 P. 1035, 1037.

PER STIRPES. Lat. By roots or stocks; by representation. This term, derived from the civil law, is much used in the law of descents and distribution, and denotes that method of dividing an intestate estate where a class or group of distributing parties take the share which their deceased would have been entitled to, taking thus by their right of representing such ancestor, and not as so many individuals. In re Shoch's Estate, 271 Pa. 165, 114 A. 505, 506; Petition of Gee, 44 R.I. 132, 115 A. 716, 717; Buxton v. Noble, 146 Kan. 671, 73 P.2d 43, 47.

PER TOUT ET NON PER MY. L. Fr. By the whole, and not by the moiety. Where an estate in fee is given to a man and his wife, they cannot take the estate by moieties, but both are seised of the entirety, per tout et non per my. 2 Bl.Comm. 182.

PER UNIVERSITATEM. Lat. In the civil law. By an aggregate or whole; as an entirety. The term described the acquisition of an entire estate by one act or fact, as distinguished from the acquisition of single or detached things.

PER VARIOS ACTUS LEGEM EXPERIENCI FACIT. By various acts experience frames the law. 4 Inst. 50.

PER VERBA DE FUTURO. Lat. By words of the future [tense.] A phrase applied to contracts of marriage. 1 Bl.Comm. 439; 2 Kent, Comm. 87.

PER VERBA DE PRAZESANTI. Lat. By words of the present [tense.] A phrase applied to contracts of marriage. 1 Bl.Comm. 439.

PER VISUM ECCLESII. Lat. In old English law. By view of the church; under the supervision of the church. The disposition of intestates' goods per visum ecclesiae was one of the articles confirmed to the prelates by King John's Magna Charta. 3 Bl.Comm. 96.

PER VIVAM VOCEM. Lat. In old English law. By the living voice; the same with viva voce. Bract. fol. 95.

PER YEAR, in a contract, is equivalent to the word "annually." Curtiss v. Howell, 39 N.Y. 211; Larson v. Augustana Colonization Ass'n of North America, 155 Minn. 1, 192 N.W. 108.

PERAMBULATION. The act or custom of walking over the boundaries of a district or piece of land, either for the purpose of determining them or of preserving evidence of them. Thus, in many parishes in England, it is the custom for the parishioners to perambulate the boundaries of the parish in rogation week in every year. Such a custom entitles them to enter any man's land and abate nuisances in their way. Phillim.Ecc. Law, 1867; Hunt, Bound. 103; Sweet; Greenville v. Mason, 57 N.H. 385.

The custom has now largely fallen into disuse. Cent. Dict.

PERAMBULATIONE FACIENDA, WRIT DE. In English law. The name of a writ which is sued by consent of both parties when they are in doubt as to the bounds of their respective estates. It is directed to the sheriff to make perambulation, and to set the bounds and limits between them in certainty. Fitzh.Nat.Brev. 133.
PERCA. A perch of land; sixteen and one-half feet. See Perch.

PERCEPTION. Taking into possession. Thus, perception of crops or of profits is reducing them to possession. Used of money, it means the counting out and payment of a debt. Also used for food due to soldiers. Vicat, Voc.Jur.

PERCEPTURA. In old records. A wear; a place in a river made up with banks, dams, etc., for the better convenience of preserving and taking fish. Cowell.

PERCH. A measure of land containing five yards and a half, or sixteen feet and a half in length; otherwise called a "rod" or "pole." Cowell.

As a unit of solid measure, a perch of masonry or stone or brick work contains, according to some authorities and in some localities, sixteen and one-half cubic feet, but elsewhere, or according to others, twenty-five. Unless defined by statute, it is a very indefinite term and must be explained by evidence. Harris v. Rutledge, 19 Iowa 388, 87 Am. Dec. 441; Sullivan v. Richardson, 33 Fla. 1, 14 So. 692.

PERCOLATE. As used in the cases relating to the right of land-owners to use water on their premises, designates any flowage of sub-surface water other than that of a running stream, open, visible, clearly to be traced. Mosier v. Caldwell, 7 Nev. 363.

PERCOLATING WATERS. See Water.

PERDONATIO UTLAGARLZE. L. Lat. A pardon for a man who, for contempt in not yielding obedience to the process of a court, is outlawed, and afterwards of his own accord surrenders. Reg.Orig. 28.

PERDUELLIO. Lat. In Roman law. Hostility or enmity towards the Roman republic; traitorous conduct on the part of a citizen, subversive of the authority of the laws or tending to over-throw the government. Calvin; Vicat.

PERDURABLE. As applied to an estate, perdurable signifies lasting long or forever. Thus, a disseisor or tenant in fee upon condition has as high and great an estate as the rightful owner or tenant in fee-simple absolute, but not so perdurable. The term is chiefly used with reference to the extinguishment of rights by unity of seisin, which does not take place unless both the right and the land out of which it issues are held for equally high and perdurable estates. Co.Litt. 313a, 313b; Gale Easem. 582; Sweet.

PEREGRINI. Lat. The name given to aliens in Rome. The class of peregrine embraced at the same time both those who had no capacity in law (capacity for rights or jural relations,) namely, the slaves, and the members of those nations which had not established amicable relations with the Roman people. Sa2. Dr. Rom. § 66.

PEREMPT. In ecclesiastical procedure, to waive or bar an appeal by one's own act so as partially to comply with or acquiesce in a sentence of a court. Phil.Eccl.L. 1275; Rog.Eccl.L. 47.

PEREMPTION. A nonsuit; also a quashing or killing.

PEREMPTORIUS. Lat. In the civil law. That which takes away or destroys forever; hence, exceptio peremptoria, a plea which is a perpetual bar. Calvin.

PEREMPTORY. Imperative; absolute; conclusive; positive; not admitting of question, delay, or reconsideration. Positive; final; 'decisive; not admitting of any alternative. Self-determined; arbitrary; not requiring any cause to be shown. Wolfe v. State, 147 Tex.Cr.R. 62, 178 S.W.Zd 274, 279.

PEREMPTORY DAY. A day assigned for trial or hearing in court, absolutely and without further opportunity for postponement.

PEREMPTORY EXCEPTIONS. In the civil law. Any defense which denies entirely the ground of action. Those exceptions which tend to the dismissal of the action.

PEREMPTORY PAPER. A list of the causes which were enlarged at the request of the parties, or which stood over from press of business in court.

PEREMPTORY RULE. In practice. An absolute rule; a rule without any condition or alternative of showing cause.

PEREMPTORY UNDERTAKING. An undertaking by a plaintiff to bring on a cause for trial at the next sittings or assizes. Lush, Pr. 649.

As to perfect "Equity," "Obligation," "Ownership," "Title," and "Usufruct," see those titles.

PERFECT ATTESTATION CLAUSE. One that asserts performance of all acts required to be done to make valid testamentary disposition. In re Johnson’s Will, Prerog., 115 N.J.Eq. 249, 171 A. 307, 309.
PERFECT CONDITION. In a statement of the rule that, when two claims exist in "perfect condition" between two persons, either may insist on a set-off, this term means that state of a demand when it is of right demandable by its terms. Taylor v. New York, 82 N.Y. 17.

PERFECT INSTRUMENT. An instrument such as a deed or mortgage is said to become perfect when recorded (or registered) or filed for record, because it then becomes good as to all the world. Wilkins v. McCorkle, 112 Tenn. 688, 80 S.W. 834.

PERFECT MACHINE. In patent law. A perfected invention; not a perfectly constructed machine, but a machine so constructed as to embody all the essential elements of the invention, in a form that would make them practical and operative so as to accomplish the result.

But it is not necessary that it should accomplish that result in the most perfect manner, and be in a condition where it was not susceptible of a higher degree of perfection in its mere mechanical construction. American Hide, etc., Co. v. American Tool, etc., Co., 4 Fish.Pat.Cas. 299, 1 Ped. Cas. 647.

PERFECT TRUST. An executed trust, (q. v.).

PERFECTING BAIL. Certain qualifications of a property character being required of persons who tender themselves as bail, when such persons have justified, i. e., established their sufficiency by satisfying the court that they possess the requisite qualifications, a rule or order of court is made for their allowance, and the bail is then said to be perfected, i. e., the process of giving bail is finished or completed. Brown.

PERFECTUM EST CIUI NIHL DEEST SECUNDUM SIVE PERFECTIONIS VEL NATURE MODUM. That is perfect to which nothing is wanting, according to the measure of its perfection or nature. Hob. 151.

PERFYDY. The act of one who has engaged his faith to do a thing, and does not do it, but does the contrary. Wolff, Inst. § 390. Faithlessness, treachery, violation of a promise or vow or a trust reposed. Streeter v. Emmons County Farmers' Press, 57 N.D. 438, 222 N.W. 455, 458.

PERFORM. To perform an obligation or contract is to execute, fulfill, or accomplish it according to its terms. This may consist either in action on the part of the person bound by the contract or in omission to act, according to the nature of the subject-matter; but the term is usually applied to any action in discharge of a contract other than payment.

PERFORMANCE. The fulfillment or accomplishment of a promise, contract, or other obligation according to its terms.

Part Performance. The doing some portion, yet not the whole, of what either party to a contract has agreed to do. Borrow v. Borrow, 34 Wash. 684, 76 P. 305.

The "part performance" necessary to take oral contract to sell realty out of the statute of frauds must be of such character that it is impossible or impracticable to place the parties in status quo and payment in full is not sufficient. Rork v. Orcutt, 53 N.Y.S.2d 354, 356. The possession necessary to constitute "part performance" which will take an oral agreement, purporting to convey an interest in land, out of the operation of the statute of frauds must be unequivocal and in consequence of the contract. Guckenberg v. Shank, 110 Ind.App. 442, 37 N.E.2d 708, 714.

Specific Performance. Performance of a contract in the specific form in which it was made, or according to the precise terms agreed upon. This is frequently compelled by a bill in equity filed for the purpose. 2 Story, Eq.P1. § 712, et seq. The actual accomplishment of a contract by a party bound to fulfill it. Guadalupe County Board of Education v. O'Bannon, 26 N.M. 606, 195 P. 801, 803; Municipal Gas Co. v. Lone Star Gas Co., Tex. Civ.App., 259 S.W. 684, 689. The doctrine of specific performance is that, where damages would be an inadequate compensation for the breach of an agreement, the contractor will be compelled to perform specifically what he has agreed to do.Sweet. As the exact fulfillment of an agreement is not always practicable, the phrase may mean, in a given case, not literal, but substantial performance. Waterm.Spec.Perf. § 1.

PERICARDITIS. In medical jurisprudence. An inflammation of the lining membrane of the heart.

PERICULOSUM EST RES NOVAS ET INUSITATAS INDUCERE. Co.Litt. 379a. It is perilous to introduce new and untried things.

PERICULOSUM EXISTIMO QUOD BONORUM VIRORUM NON COMPROBATUR EXEMPLO. 9 Coke, 97b. I consider that dangerous which is not approved by the example of good men.

PERICULOSUS. Lat. Dangerous; perilous.

PERICULUM. Lat. In the civil law. Peril; danger; hazard; risk.

PERICULUM REI VENDITA, NONDUM TRADIME, EST EMPTORIS. The risk of a thing sold, and not yet delivered, is the purchaser's. 2 Kent, Comm. 498, 499.

PERIL. The risk, hazard, or contingency insured against by a policy of insurance.

PERILS OF THE LAKES. As applied to navigation of the Great Lakes, this term has the same meaning as "perils of the sea." See infra.

PERILS OF THE SEA. In maritime and insurance law. Natural accidents peculiar to the sea, which do not happen by the intervention of man, nor are to be prevented by human prudence. 3 Kent, Comm. 216. Hence to recover on marine policy insuring against loss by perils of sea, vessel must be seaworthy when it is sent to sea. Read v. Agricultural Ins. Co., 219 Wis. 580, 263
PERMANENT

N.W. 632. Perils of the sea are from (1) storms and waves; (2) rocks, shoals, and rapids; (3) other obstacles, though of human origin; (4) changes of climate; (5) the confinement necessary at sea; (6) animals peculiar to the sea; (7) all other dangers peculiar to the sea. Civ. Code Cal. § 2199. All losses caused by the action of wind and water acting on the property insured under extraordinary circumstances, either directly or mediately, without the intervention of other independent active external causes, are losses by perils of the sea or other perils and dangers, within the meaning of the usual clause in a policy of marine insurance. Evidence of Perils of Sea. Bailey, Perils of Sea, 6. In an enlarged sense, all losses which occur from maritime adventure may be said to arise from the perils of the sea; but underwriters are not bound to this extent. They insure again against losses from extraordinary occurrences only; such as stress of weather, winds and waves, lightning, tempests, etc. These are understood to be meant from their natural, silent influence upon the fabric of the vessel; casualties which may, and not consequences which must, occur. Pillsbury Flour Mills Co. v. Becker S. S. Co., D.C.N.Y., 49 F.2d 648, 650.

PERINDE VALERE. A dispensation granted to a clerk, who, being defective in capacity for a benefice or other ecclesiastical function, is de facto admitted to it. Cowell.

PERIOD. Any point, space, or division of time.

The word has its etymological meaning, but it also has a distinct connotation, according to the subject with which it may be used in connection. It may mean any portion of complete time, from a thousand years or less to the period of a day; and when used to designate an act to be done or to be begun, though its completion may take an uncertain time, as, for instance, the act of exportation, it must mean the day on which the exportation commences, or it would be an unmeaning and useless word in its connection in the statute. Sampson v. Peaslee, 20 How. 579, 15 L. Ed. 1022.

PERIODICAL. Recurring at fixed intervals; to be made or done, or to happen, at successive periods separated by determined intervals of time; as periodical payments of interest on a bond.

PERIPHERASIS. Circumlocution; use of many words to express the sense of one.

PERISH. To come to an end; to cease to be; to die.

PERISHABLE. Subject to speedy and natural decay. But, where the time contemplated is necessarily long, the term may embrace property liable merely to material depreciation in value from other causes than such decay. Callahan v. Danziger, 172 Cal. 738, 158 P. 760, 761; Marston v. Rue, 92 Wash. 129, 159 P. 111, 113; In re Pedlow, C.C.A. A.N.Y., 209 F. 841, 842; Falmouth Co-op. Marketing Ass’n v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 237 Mich. 406, 212 N.W. 84, 85.

PERISHABLE COMMODITY. A relative term used ordinarily by courts and lawyers to describe a product, like fruit or fresh vegetables, which quickly deteriorates in quality and value. In re Rosenbaum Grain Corporation, C.C.A.111. 83 F.2d 391, 393.

PERISHABLE GOODS. Goods which decay and lose their value if not speedily put to their intended use. Kleinpeter v. Ferrara, 179 La. 193, 153 So. 689.

PERIURI SUNT QUI SERVATIS VERBIS JURAMENTI DECIPIUNT AURES EORUM QUI ACQUIPIUNT. 3 Inst. 166. They are perjured, who, preserving the words of an oath, deceive the ears of those who receive it.

PERJURY. In criminal law. The willful assertion as to a matter of fact, opinion, belief, or knowledge, made by a witness in a judicial proceeding as part of his evidence, either upon oath or in any form allowed by law to be substituted for an oath, whether such evidence is given in open court, or in an affidavit, or otherwise, such assertion being material to the issue or point of inquiry and known to such witness to be false. 2 Whart. Crim. Law, § 1244; People v. Glenn, 294 Ill. 333, 128 N.E. 532, 533; Mathes v. State, 15 Okl.Cr. 382, 177 P. 120; Commonwealth v. Hinkle, 177 Ky. 22, 197 S.W. 455, 456; People v. Rendigs, 123 Misc.Rep. 32, 205 N.Y.S. 133, 136.

To constitute "perjury" an oath must be administered by one authorized to do so. People v. Gade, City Ct., 6 N.Y.S.2d 1018, 1021.

Perjury shall consist in willfully, knowingly, absolutely, and falsely swearing, either with or without laying the hand on the Holy Evangelist of Almighty God, or affirming, in a matter material to the issue or point in question, in some judicial proceeding, by a person to whom a lawful oath or affirmation is administered. Code Ga. 1882, § 4460 (Pen. Code 1910, § 259). Every person who, having taken an oath, that he will testify, declare, depose, or certify truly before any competent tribunal, officer, or person, in any of the cases in which such an oath may by law be administered, willfully, and contrary to such oath, states as truth any material matter which he knows to be false, is guilty of perjury. Pen. Code Cal. § 118. The willful giving, under oath, in a judicial proceeding or course of justice, of false testimony material to the issue or point of inquiry. 2 Bish.Crim. Law, § 1015. Perjury, at common law, is the "taking of a willful false oath by one who, being lawfully sworn by a competent court to depose the truth in any judicial proceeding, swears absolutely and falsely in a matter material to the point in issue, whether he believed or not." Comm. v. Powell, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 10; Cothran v. State, 39 Miss. 541. It will be observed that, at common law, the crime of perjury can be committed only in the course of a suit or judicial proceeding. But statutes have very generally extended both the definition and the punishment of this offense to willful false swearing in many different kinds of affidavits and depositions, such as those required to be made in tax returns, pension proceedings, transactions at the custom house, and various other administrative or non-judicial proceedings.

PERMANENT. Fixed, continuing, lasting, stable, enduring, abiding, not subject to change. Generally opposed in law to "temporary," but not

As to permanent "Alimony," "Injunction," and "Trespass," see those titles.

PERMANENT ABODE. A domicile or fixed home, which the party may leave as his interest or whim may dictate, but which he has no present intention of abandoning. Moffett v. Hill, 131 Ill. 239, 22 N.E. 821; Berry v. Wilcox, 44 Neb. 82, 62 N.W. 249, 48 Am.St.Rep. 706.

PERMANENT BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATION. One which issues its stock, not all at once or in series, but at any time when application is made therefor. Cook v. Equitable B. & L. Ass'n, 104 Ga. 814, 30 S.E. 911.

PERMANENT DISABILITY. Within insurance policies does not mean that disability must continue throughout life of insured, but it connotes idea that disability must be something more than temporary, and at least presumably permanent. Commonwealth Life Ins. Co. v. Ovesen, 257 Ky. 622, 78 S.W.2d 745, 746; Equitable Life Ins. Co. of Iowa v. Gerwick, 50 Ohio App. 277, 197 N.E. 923, 926; Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of U. S. v. Preston, 253 Ky. 459, 70 S.W.2d 18.

PERMANENT EMPLOYMENT. Provided for by contract, means only that employment is to continue indefinitely and until either party wishes to sever relation for some good reason. Speegle v. Board of Fire Underwriters of Pacific, Cal.App., 158 P.2d 426, 429; Alabama Mills v. Smith, 237 Ala. 296, 186 So. 699, 701.

PERMISSION. A license to do a thing; an authority to do an act which, without such authority, would have been unlawful.

PERMISSIONS. Negations of law, arising either from the law's silence or its express declaration. Ruth.Inst. b. 1, C. 1.

PERMISSIVE. Allowed; allowable; that which may be done.

PERMISSIVE USE. See Use.

PERMISSIVE WASTE. See Waste.

PERMIT, v. To suffer, allow, consent, let; to give leave or license; to acquiesce, by failure to prevent, or to expressly assent or agree to the doing of an act. State v. Waxman, 93 N.J.Law, 27, 107 A. 150; State v. Peters, 112 Ohio St. 249, 147 N.E. 81, 84; Little Falls Fibre Co. v. Henry Ford & Son, 126 Misc. 126, 212 N.Y.S. 630, 634; Lemery v. Leonard, 99 Or. 670, 196 P. 376, 378; Armstrong's Adm'r v. Sumne & Ratterman Co., 211 Ky. 750, 278 S.W. 111, 113; Atwater v. Lober, 133 Misc. 652, 233 N.Y.S. 309, 313.

PERMIT, n. A license or instrument granted by the officers of excise (or customs), certifying that the duties on certain goods have been paid, or se-
PERPETUAL SUCCESSION. That continuous existence which enables a corporation to manage its affairs, and hold property without the necessity of perpetual conveyances, for the purpose of transmitting it. By reason of this quality, this ideal and artificial person remains, in its legal and personal identity, the same, though frequent changes may be made of its members. Field, Corp. § 58; Scanlan v. Crawshaw, 5 Mo.App. 340.

PERPETUATING TESTIMONY. A proceeding for taking and preserving the testimony of witnesses, which otherwise might be lost before the trial in which it is intended to be used. It is usually allowed where the witnesses are aged and infirm or are about to remove from the state. 3 Bl.Comm. 450.

PERPETUITY. Any limitation or condition which may take away or suspend the power of alienation for a period beyond life or lives in being and 21 years thereafter. Loud v. St. Louis Union Trust Co., 298 Mo. 148, 249 S.W. 629, 634; Barton v. Thaw, 246 Pa. 348, 92 A. 312, 313, Ann. Cas. 1916D, 570; True Real Estate Co. v. True, 115 Me. 533; 99 A. 627, 630; Melvin v. Hoffman, 290 Mo. 464, 235 S.W. 107, 115. Any limitation tending to take the subject of it out of commerce for a longer period than a life or lives in being, and twenty-one years beyond, and, in case of a posthumous child, a few months more, allowing for the term of gestation. Rand.Perp. 48. Such a limitation of property as renders it unalienable beyond the period allowed by law. Gilb. Uses, (Sugd. Ed.) 260. Ould v. Washington Hospital, 95 U.S. 303, 24 L.Ed. 450; Duggan v. Siocum, 34 C.C.A. 676, 92 F. 806; Stevens v. Annex Realty Co., 173 Mo. 511, 73 S.W. 505; Griffin v. Graham, 8 N.C. 130, 9 Am.Dec. 619; In re John's Will, 30 Or. 494, 47 P. 341, 36 L.R.A. 242. See, also, Rule Against Perpetuities.

PERPETUITY OF THE KING. That fiction of which may take away or suspend the power of the reigning monarch may die, yet by this fiction the king never dies, i.e., the office is supposed to be reoccupied for all political purposes immediately on his death. Brown.

PERQUISITES. Anything obtained by industry or purchased with money, different from that which descends from a father or ancestor. Bract. l. 2, c. 30, n. 3.

Profits accruing to a lord of a manor by virtue of his court-baron, over and above the yearly profits of his land; also other things that come casually and not yearly. Mozley & Whiteley.

In Modern Use. Emoluments or incidental profits attaching to an office or official position, beyond the salary or regular fees. Harris County v. Hammond, Tex.Civ.App., 203 S.W. 445, 448; Christopherson v. Reeves, 44 S.D. 634, 184 N.W. 1015; State v. Reeves, 44 S.D. 568, 184 N.W. 993, 998.

PERQUISITOR. In old English law. A purcaser; one who first acquired an estate to his family; one who acquired an estate by sale, by gift, or by any other method, except only that of descent. 2 Bl.Comm. 220.

PERSECUTIO. Lat. In the civil law. A following after; a pursuing at law; a suit or prosecution. Properly that kind of judicial proceeding before the preetor which was called "extraordinary." In a general sense, any judicial proceeding, including not only "actions," (actiones,) properly so called, but other proceedings also. Calvin.

PERSEQUI. Lat. In the civil law. To follow after; to pursue or claim in form of law. An action is called a "jus persequendi."

PERSON. A man considered according to the rank he holds in society, with all the right to which the place he holds entitles him, and the duties which it imposes. People v. R. Co., 134 N.Y. 506, 31 N.E. 873.

The word in its natural and usual signification includes women as well as men. Commonwealth v. Welosky, 276 Mass. 398, 177 N.E. 656.

It has been held that when the word person is used in a legislative act, natural persons will be intended unless something is said in the context to show that artificial persons, Blair v. Worley, 1 S.Cam., Ill., 178; Appeal of Fox, 112 Pa. 337; 4 A. 149; but as a rule corporations will be considered persons within the statutes unless the legislature manifests a manifest intention to exclude them. Stribbling v. Bank, 5 Rand., Va., 132.

A county is a person in a legal sense, Lancaster Co. v. Trimble, 34 Neb. 752, 52 N.W. 711; but a sovereign is not. In re Fox, 52 N.Y. 535, 11 Am.Rep. 751, U. S. v. Fox, 94 U.S. 24 L.Ed. 192, but contra within the meaning of a statute, providing for a penalty for 'the fraudulent alteration of a public record with intent that any "person" be de- frauded, Martin v. State, 24 Tex. 61; and within the meaning of a covenant for quiet and peaceful possession against all and every person or persons; Giddings v. Holter, 19 Mont. 263, 48 P. 8. An Indian is a person, U. S. v. Crook, 5 Dill. 459, Fed.Cas.No.14,891; and a slave was so considered, See v. Hackett, 34 Mich. 283, 22 Am.Rep. 529.

Where the statute prohibited any person from pursuing his usual vocation on the Lord's Day, it was held to apply to a judge holding court. Bass v. Irvin, 49 Ga. 436. A child en ventre sa mere is not a person. Dietrich v. Northampton, 138 Mass. 14, 52 Am.Rep. 422; but an infant is so considered; Madden v. Springfield, 131 Mass. 141.

In the United States bankruptcy act of 1898, is is provided that "persons" shall include corporations, except where otherwise specified, and officers, partnerships, and women, and, when used with reference to the commission of acts which are therein forbidden, shall include persons who are participants in the forbidden acts, and the agents, officers, and members of the board of directors or trustees, or their controlling bodies, of corporations. 11 U.S.C.A. § 25.

Persons are the subject of rights and duties; and, as a subject of a right, the person is the object of the correlative duty, and conversely. The subject of a right has been called by Professor Holland, the person of inherence; the subject of a duty, the person of incidencc. "Entitled" and "bound" are the terms in common use in English and for most purposes they are adequate. Every full citizen is a person; other human beings, namely, subjects who are not citizens, may be persons. But not every human being is necessarily a person, for a person is capable of rights and duties, and there may well be human beings having no legal rights, as was the case with slaves in English law.

A person is such, not because he is human, but because rights and duties are ascribed to him. The person is the legal subject or substance of which the rights and duties are attributes. An individual human being considered as such is not in conflict with the 11th Amendment; Pembina Consol. S. M. & M. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 8 S.Ct. 737, 125 U.S. 181, 189, 31 L.Ed. 650.

"Persons" are of two kinds, natural and artificial. A natural person is a human being. Artificial persons in law are a collection or succession of natural persons forming a corporation; a collection of property to which the law attributes the capacity of having rights and duties. The latter class of artificial persons is recognized only to a limited extent in our law. Examples are the estate of a bankrupt or deceased person. Hogan v. Greenfield, 58 Wyo. 13, 122 P.2d 850, 853.

In the civil law. Character, in virtue of which certain rights belong to a man and certain duties are imposed upon him. Thus one man may unite many characters, (personae,) as, for example, the characters of father and son, of master and servant. Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 129.

In Ecclesiastical Law. The rector of a church instituted and induced, for his own life, was called "persona mortalis;" and any collegiate or conventual body, to whom the church was forever appropriated, was termed "persona immortalis." Jacob.

PERSONA CONJUNCTA 2EQUIPARATUR INTERESSE PROPRIO. A personal connection [literally, a united person, union with a person] is equivalent to one's own interest; nearness of blood is as good a consideration as one's own interest. Bac.Max. 72, reg.

PERSONA DESIGNATA. A person pointed out or described as an individual, as opposed to a person ascertained as a member of a class, or as filling a particular character.

PERSONA ECCLES\L. The parson or personation of the church.

PERSONA EST HOMO CUM STATU QUODAM CONSIDERATUS. A person is a man considered with reference to a certain status. Heinecc. Elem. 1. 1, tit. 3, § 75.

PERSONA NON GRATAM. In international law and diplomatic usage, a person not acceptable (for reasons peculiar to himself) to the court or government to which it is proposed to accredit him in the character of an ambassador or minister.

PERSONA REGIS MERTIGTUR PERSONA DUCIS. Jenk.Cent. 160. The person of a duke merges in that of king.

PERSONA STANDI IN JUDICIO. Capacity of standing in court or in judgment; capacity to be a party to an action; capacity or ability to sue.

PERSONABLE. Having the rights and powers of a person; able to hold or maintain a plea in court; also capacity to take anything granted or given.

PERSONIE VICE FUNGITUR MUNICIPIUM ET DECURIA. Towns and boroughs act as if persons. Warner v. Beers. 23 Wend., N.Y., 103, 144.

PERSONAL. Appartaining to the person; belonging to an individual; limited to the person; having the nature or partaking of the qualities of human beings, or of movable property. In re Steines' Estate, 150 Misc. 279, 270 N.Y.S. 339.

PERSONAL Et tACTS. Articles associated with person, as property having more or less intimate relation to person of possessor; "effects" meaning movable or chattel property of any kind. Ettlinger v. Importers' & Exporters' Ins. Co. of New York, 138 Misc. 743, 247 N.Y.S. 260, 261.

Term when used in will, includes only such tangible property as attended the person, or such tangible property as is worn or carried about the person. In re Sorensen's Estate, 46 Cal.App.2d 35, 115 P.2d 241, 243.

PERSONAL LAW. As opposed to territorial law, is the law applicable to persons not subject to the law of the territory in which they reside.

PERSONAL LIABILITY. The liability of the stockholders in corporations, under certain statutes, by which they may be held individually responsible for the debts of the corporation, either to the extent of the par value of their, respective holdings of stock, or to twice that amount, or without limit, or otherwise, as the particular statute directs.

PERSONAL THINGS CANNOT BE DONE BY ANOTHER. Finch, Law, b. 1, c. 3, n. 14.

PERSONAL THINGS CANNOT BE GRANTED OVER. Finch, Law, b. 1, c. 3, n. 15.

PERSONAL THINGS DIE WITH THE PERSON. Finch, Law, b. 1, c. 3, n. 16.

PERSONALIA PERSONAM SEQUUNTUR. Personal things follow the person. Flanders v. Cross, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 516.

PERSONALIS ACTIO. Lat.

In the civil law. A personal action; an action against the person, (in personam.) Dig. 50, 16, 178, 2.

In old English law. A personal action. In this sense, the term was borrowed from the civil law by Bracton. The English form is constantly used as the designation of one of the chief divisions of civil actions.

PERSONALILYTER. In old English law. Personally; in person.

PERSONALITY. In modern civil law. The incidence of a law or statute upon persons, or that quality which makes it a personal law rather than a real law. "By the personality of laws, foreign jurists generally mean all laws which concern the condition, state, and capacity of persons." Story, Conn. Laws, § 16.

PERSONALITY. Personal property; movable property; chattels.

In old practice, an action was said to be in the personality, where it was brought against the right person or the person against whom in law it lay. Old Nat.Brev. 92; Cowell.

Quasi personality. Things which are movable in point of law, though fixed to things real, either actually, as emblements, (fructus industriales,) fixtures, etc.; or fictitiously, as chattels-real, leases for years, etc.

PERSONATE. In criminal law. To assume the person (character) of another, without his consent or knowledge, in order to deceive others, and, in such feigned character, to fraudulently do some act or gain some advantage, to the harm or prejudice of the person counterfeited. 2 East, P.C. 1010. To pass one's self off as another having a certain identity. Lane v. U. S., C.C.A. Ohio, 17 F.2d 923.

PERSONERO. In Spanish law. An attorney. So called because he represents the person of another, either in or out of court. Las Partidas, pt. 3, tit. 5, l. 1.

PERSONNE. Fr. A person. This term is applicable to men and women, or to either. Civ.Code Lat. art. 3556, par. 23.

PERSPICUA VERA NON SUNT PROBANDA. Co.Litt. 16. Plain truths need not be proved.

PERSUADE. To induce one by argument, entreaty, or expostulation into a determination, decision, conclusion, belief, or the like; to win over by certain identity. Lane v. U. S., C.C.A. Ohio, 17 F.2d 536, 538.

PERSUASION. The act of persuading; the act of influencing the mind by arguments or reasons offered, or by anything that moves the mind or passions, or inclines the will to a determination. Marx v. Threet, 131 Ala. 340, 30 So. 831. For "Fair Persuasion," see that title.

PERTAIN. To belong or relate to, whether by nature, appointment, or custom. People v. Chicago Theological Seminary, 174 Ill. 177, 51 N.E. 198.

PERTENENCIA. In Spanish law. The claim or right which one has to the property in anything; the territory which belongs to any one by way of jurisdiction or property; that which is accessory or consequent to a principal thing, and goes with the ownership of it. Escriche, Castillero v. United States, 2 Black. 17, 17 L.Ed. 360.

PERTICULAS. A pittance; a small portion of alms or victuals. Also certain poor scholars of the Isle of Man. Cowell.
PERTINENT. Applicable; relevant. Evidence is called "pertinent" when it is directed to the issue or matters in dispute, and legitimately tends to prove the allegations of the party offering it; otherwise it is called "impertinent." A pertinent hypothesis is one which, if sustained, would logically influence the issue. Whitaker v. State, 106 Ala. 30, 17 So. 456; Vaughn v. State, 136 Tex.Cr.R. 455, 125 S.W.2d 568, 570.

PERTINENTS. In Scotch law. Appurtenances. "Parts and pertinents" are formal words in old deeds and charters. 1 Forb. Inst. pt. 2, pp. 112, 118.

PERTURBATION. In the English ecclesiastical courts, a "suit for perturbation of seat" is the technical name for an action growing out of a disturbance or infringement of one's right to a pew or seat in a church. 2 Phillim.Ecc.Law, 1813.

PERTURBATRIX. A woman who breaks the peace.

PERVERSE VERDICT. A verdict whereby the jury refuse to follow the direction of the judge on a point of law. Callahan v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co., 161 Wis. 288, 154 N.W. 449, 452.

PERVISE, PARVISE. In old English law. The court or yard of the king's palace at Westminster. Also an afternoon exercise or moot for the instruction of students. Cowell; Blount.

PESA. A weight of two hundred and fifty-six pounds. Cowell.

PESAGE. In England. A toll charged for weighing avoirdupois goods other than wool. 2 Chit. Com.Law, 16.

PESQUISIDOR. In Spanish law. Coroner.

PESA. A weight of two hundred and fifty-six pounds. Cowell.

PETRENS. Lat. In old English law. A demandant; the plaintiff in a real action. Bract. fols. 102, 106b.

PETER-PENCE. An ancient levy or tax of a penny on each house throughout England, paid to the pope. It was called "Peter-pence," because collected on the day of St. Peter, ad vinctula; by the Saxons it was called "Romfoeh," "Rome-scot," and "Rome-pennyng," because collected and sent to Rome; and, lastly, it was called "hearth money," because every dwelling-house was liable to it, and every religious house, the abbey of St. Albans alone excepted. Wharton.

PETIT. Fr. Small; minor; inconsiderable. Used in several compounds, and sometimes written "petty." People v. Sprado, 72 Cal.App. 582, 237 P. 1087, 1089.

PETIT CAPE. A judicial writ, issued in the old actions for the recovery of land, requiring the sheriff to take possession of the estate, where the tenant, after having appeared in answer to the summons, made default in a subsequent stage of the proceedings.

PETITE ASSIZE. Used in contradistinction from the grand assize, which was a jury to decide on questions of property. Petite assize, a jury to decide on questions of possession. Britt. c. 42; Glan. lib. 2, cc. 6, 7.

PETITIO. Lat.

In the civil law. The plaintiff's statement of his cause of action in an action in rem. Calvin.

In old English law. Petition or demand; the count in a real action; the form of words in which a title to land was stated by the demandant, and which commenced with the word "peto." 1 Reeve, Eng.Law, 176.

PETITIO PRINCIPII. In logic. Begging the question, which is the taking of a thing for true or for granted, and drawing conclusions from it as such, when it is really dubious, perhaps false, or at least wants to be proved, before any inferences ought to be drawn from it.

PETITION. A written address, embodying an application or prayer from the person or persons preferring it, to the power, body, or person to whom it is presented, for the exercise of his or their authority in the redress of some wrong, or for the grant of some favor, privilege, or license. Enderson v. Hildenbrand, 52 N.D. 533, 204 N.W. 356; Benton Coal Mining Co. v. Industrial Commission, 321 Ill. 208, 151 N.E. 520, 522; In re L. M. Axle Co., C.C.A.Ohio, 3 F.2d 581, 582; State v. American Sugar Refining Co., 138 'La. 1005, 71 So. 137, 140.

In practice. An application made to a court ex parte, or where there are no parties in opposition, praying for the exercise of the judicial powers of the court in relation to some matter which is not the subject for a suit or action, or for authority to do some act which requires the sanction of the court; as for the appointment of a guardian, for leave to sell trust property, etc.

The word "petition" is generally used in judicial proceedings to describe an application in writing, in contradistinction to a motion, which may be viva voce. Bergen v. Jones, 4 Metc., Mass., 371. The principal distinction between motions and petitions lies in the fact that motions, though usually made in writing, may sometimes be made orally, while a petition is always in writing. So, also, motions can usually be made only by a party to the record, while petitions may in some cases be presented by persons not parties. Gibbs v. Ewing, 94 Fla. 236, 113 So. 730, 735.

In the practice of some of the states, the word "petition" is adopted as the name of that initiatory pleading in an action which is elsewhere called a "declaration" or "complaint."

In equity practice. An application in writing for an order of the court, stating the circumstanc-PETITORY ACTION. A droitural action; that is, one in which the plaintiff seeks to establish and enforce, by an appropriate legal proceeding, his right of property, or his title, to the subject-matter in dispute; as distinguished from a possessory action, where the right to the possession is the point in litigation, and not the mere right of property. The term is chiefly used in admiralty. 1 Kent, Comm. 371; The Tilton, 5 Mason, 465, Fed.Cas.No.14,054.

In Louisiana, an action brought by an alleged owner out of possession against one having possession to determine ownership, in which plaintiff must recover on strength of his own title, not on weakness of defendant's title. Saucier v. Crichton, C.C.A.La., 147 F.2d 430, 433.

PIPE. A roll in the exchequer; otherwise called the 'great roll.' A liquid measure containing two hogsheads.

PIPE LINE. A connected series of pipes for the transportation of oil, gas, or water.

PIPE ROLLS. These were the Great Rolls of the Exchequer and contained the account of the king's profits and rents in all the counties of England. They exist in a continuous series (676 rolls) from 1156 to 1833 (except 1216 and 1403). The Chancellor's Roll from 1255 to 1833 is a duplicate of the Pipe Rolls. A single roll of Henry I, but not complete, is extant. 2 Holdsw. Hist.E.L. 129. The Pipe Rolls are our earliest records; id. 138.

There is a distinction between the offense of piracy, as known to the law of nations, which is justiciable anywhere, and offenses created by statutes of particular nations, cognizable only before the municipal tribunals of such nations. Dole v. Insurance Co., 2 Cliff. 394, 418, Fed.Cas.No.3,966.

The term is also applied to the illicit reprinting or reproduction of a copyrighted book or print or to unlawful plagiarism from it.

PIRACY. In criminal law. A robbery or forcible depredation on the high seas, without lawful authority, done animo furandi, in the spirit and intention of universal hostility. United States v. Palmer, 3 Wheat. 610, 4 L.Ed. 471. This is the definition of this offense by the law of nations. 1 Kent, Cozm. 183. And see Talbot v. Johnson, 3 Dougall, 152, 1 L.Ed. 540; U. S. v. The Ambrose Light, D.C.N.Y., 25 F. 408; Davison v. Seal-skins, 7 Fed.Cas. 192.

Pirates are common sea-rovers, without any fixed place of residence, who acknowledge no sovereign and no law, and support themselves by pillage and depredations at sea; but there are instances wherein the word 'pirata' has been formerly taken for a sea-captain. Spelman.

PIRATICA EST HOSTIS HUMANI GENERIS. 3 Inst. 113. A pirate is an enemy of the human race.

PIRATE. A person who lives by piracy; one guilty of the crime of piracy. A sea-robber, who, to enrich himself, by subtlety or open force, seizes upon merchants and others trading by sea, depleting them of their loading, and sometimes being on the high seas is piracy; but to constitute the offense the taking must be felonious. Consequently the quo animo may be inquired into. Davison v. Seal-skins, 2 Paine, 324, Fed.Cas.No.3,661.

Piscary. The right of fishing. Thus, common of piscary is the right of fishing in waters belonging to another person.
PISTAREEN. A small Spanish coin. It is not made current by the laws of the United States. United States v. Gardner, 10 Pet. 618, 9 L.Ed. 556.

PISTOL. A short firearm, intended to be aimed and fired from one hand. Campbell v. Commonwealth, 295 Ky. 511, 174 S.W.2d 778, 779.

PIT. In old Scotch law. An excavation or cavity in the earth in which women who were under sentence of death were drowned.

A cavity or hole in the ground, natural or artificial; a large hole from which some mineral deposit is dug or quarried, as a gravel pit, a stone pit. Walker v. Dwelle, 187 Iowa, 1384, 175 N.W. 964.

PIT AND GALLOWS. In Scotch law. A privilege of inflicting capital punishment for theft, given by King Malcolm, by which a woman could be drowned in a pit, (fossa,) or a man hanged on a gallows, (furca.) Bell.

PITCHING—PENCE. In old English law. Money, commonly a penny, paid for pitching or setting down every bag of corn or pack of goods in a fair or market. Cowell.

PITTANCE. A slight repast or refection of fish or flesh more than the common allowance; and the pittancer was the officer who distributed this at certain appointed festivals. Cowell.

PIX. A mode of testing coin. The ascertaining whether coin is of the proper standard is in England called "pixing" it; and there are occasions on which resort is had for this purpose to an ancient mode of inquisition called the "trial of the pix," before a jury of members of the Goldsmiths' Company. 2 Steph.Comm. 540, note.

PIX JURY. A jury consisting of the members of the corporation of the goldsmiths of the city of London, assembled upon an inquisition of very ancient date, called the "trial of the pix." Such juries were abolished in 1930.

PLACARD. An edict; a declaration; a manifesto. Also an advertisement or public notification.

PLACE. An old form of the word "pleas." Thus the "Court of Common Pleas" was sometimes called the "Court of Common Place."

PLACE. This word is a very indefinite term. It is applied to any locality, limited by boundaries, however large or however small. It may be used to designate a country, state, county, town, or a very small portion of a town. The extent of the locality designated by it must generally be determined by the connection in which it is used. Robinson v. State, 143 Miss. 247, 108 So. 903, 905; Hammell v. State, 198 Ind. 45, 152 N.E. 161, 163; State v. Cahalan, 204 Iowa, 410, 214 N.W. 612, 613. In its primary and most general sense means locality, situation, or site, and it is also used to designate an occupied situation or building. Burns v. McDaniel, Fla., 140 So. 314, 316.

PLACE LANDS. Lands granted in aid of a railroad company which are within certain limits on each side of the road, and which become instantly fixed by the adoption of the line of the road. There is a well-defined difference between place lands and "indemnity lands." See Indemnity. See Jackson v. La Moure County, 1 N.D. 238, 46 N.W. 449.

PLACE OF CONTRACT. The place (country or state) in which a contract is made, and whose law must determine questions affecting the execution, validity, and construction of the contract. Scudder v. Union Nat. Bank, 91 U.S. 412, 23 L.Ed. 245.

PLACE OF DELIVERY. The place where delivery is to be made of goods sold. If no place is specified in the contract, the articles sold must, in general, be delivered at the place where they are at the time of the sale. Hatch v. Standard Oil Co., 100 U.S. 134, 25 L.Ed. 554.

PLACE OF EMPLOYMENT. Within the safe place statutes, a place where active work, either temporary or permanent, is being conducted in connection with a business for profit, that is, where some process or operation related to such industry, trade or business is carried on and where any person is directly or indirectly employed by another. Padley v. Village of Lodi, 233 Wis. 661, 290 N.W. 136, 137.

PLACE WHERE. A phrase used in the older reports, being a literal translation of locus in quo (q. v.).

PLACEMAN. One who exercises a public employment, or fills a public station.

The distinction between an officer and a placeman is that the former must take an oath of office, the latter not. Worthy v. Barrett, 63 N.C. 199.

PLACER. In mining law. A superficial deposit of sand, gravel, or disintegrated rock, carrying one or more of the precious metals, along the course of a water-course, ancient or current, or along the shore of the sea. Under the acts of congress, the term includes all forms of mineral deposits, except veins of quartz or other rock in place. 30 U.S.C.A. § 35. Montana Coal & Coke Co. v. Livingston, 21 Mont. 59, 52 P. 780; Gregory v. Pershbaker, 73 Cal. 109, 14 P. 401; Duffield v. San Francisco Chemical Co., C.C.A. Idaho, 205 F. 480, 484; San Francisco Chemical Co. v. Duffield, C.C.A.Wyo., 201 F. 830, 835.

PLACER CLAIM. A mining claim located on the public domain for the purpose of placer mining, that is, ground within the defined boundaries which contains mineral in its earth, sand, or gravel; ground which includes valuable deposits not "in place," that is, not fixed in rock, or which are in a loose state. U. S. v. Iron Silver Min. Co., 9 S.Ct. 195, 128 U.S. 673, 32 L.Ed. 571; Clipper Min. Co. v. Eli Min. Co., 24 S.Ct. 632., 194 U.S. 220, 48 L.Ed. 944; U. S. v. Ohio Oil Co., D.C.Wyo., 240 F. 996, 999; Duffield v. San Francisco Chemical Co., C.C.A.Idaho, 205 F. 480, 483.

PLACER LOCATION. A placer claim located and occupied on the public domain.
PLACET. (Fr.) The name of a document in French practice requesting an audience of the court. Outside of Paris the request is made orally, in Paris the avoué of the plaintiff sends his request to the clerk of the court who puts the case on the list.

PLACIT, or PLACITUM. Decree; determination.

PLACITA. See Placitum.

PLACITA COMMUNIA. Common pleas. All civil actions between subject and subject. 3 Bl. Comm. 38, 40.

A judicial decision; the judgment, decree, or sentence of a court. Calvin.

In old English law. A public assembly at which the king presided, and which comprised men of all degrees, met for consultation about the great affairs of the kingdom. Cowell.

A court; a judicial tribunal; a lord's court. Placita was the style or title of the courts at the beginning of the old nisi prius record.

A suit or cause in court; a judicial proceeding; a trial. Placita were divided into placita corone (crown cases or pleas of the crown, 4. e., criminal actions) and placita communia, (common cases or common pleas, i. e., private civil actions.)

A fine, mulct, or pecuniary punishment.

A pleading or plea. In this sense, the term was not confined to the defendant's answer to the declaration, but included all the pleadings in the cause, being nomen generalissimum. 1 Saund. 388, n. 6.

In the old reports and abridgments, "placitum" was the name of a paragraph or subdivision of a title or page where the point decided in a cause was set out separately. It is commonly abbreviated, "pl."

PLACITUM ALIUD PERSONALE, ALIUD REALE, ALIUD MIXTUM. Co.Litt. 284. Pleas [f.e., actions] are personal, real, and mixed.

PLACITUM FRACTUM. A day past or lost to the defendant. 1 Hen. I. c. 59.

PLACITUM NOMINATUM. The day appointed to arrange best a cause. Spelman.

PLAGIARISM. The act of appropriating the literary composition of another, or parts or passages of his writings, or the ideas or language of the same, and passing them off as the product of one's own mind.

To be liable for "plagiarism" it is not necessary to exactly duplicate another's literary work, it being sufficient if unfair use of such work is made by lifting of substantial portion thereof, but even an exact counter-part of another's work does not constitute "plagiarism" if such counterpart was arrived at independently. O'Rourke v. RKO Radio Pictures, D.C.Mass., 44 F.Supp. 480, 482, 483.

PLAGIARIST, or PLAGIARY. One who publishes the thoughts and writings of another as his own.

PLAGIARIUS. Lat. In the civil law. A man-stealer; a kidnapper. Dig. 48, 15, 1; 4 Bl.Comm. 219.

PLAGIUM. Lat. In the civil law. Man-stealing; kidnapping. The offense of enticing away and stealing men, children, and slaves. Calvin. The persuading a slave to escape from his master, or the concealing or harboring him without the knowledge of his master. Dig. 48, 15, 6.

PLAGUE. Pestilence; a contagious and malignant fever.

PLAIDER. Fr. An obsolete term for an attorney who pleaded the cause of his client; an advocate.

PLAINT. In civil law. A complaint; a form of action, particularly one for setting aside a testament alleged to be invalid. This word is the English equivalent of the Latin "querela."

In English practice. A private memorial tendered in open court to the judge, wherein the party injured sets forth his cause of action. A proceeding in inferior courts by which an action is commenced without original writ. 3 Bl.Comm.
PLAINTIFF. A person who brings an action; the party who complains or sues in a personal action and is so named on the record. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Scott, Tex.Civ.App., 28 S.W. 458; Cramody v. Land, 207 La. 625, 21 So.2d 764, 768.

Plaintiff in error. The party who sues out a writ of error to review a judgment or other proceeding at law.

Use plaintiff. One for whose use (benefit) an action is brought in the name of another. Thus, where the assignee of a chose in action is not allowed to sue in his own name, the action would be entitled "A. B. (the assignor) for the use of C. D. (the assignee) against E. F." In this case, C. D. is called the "use plaintiff."

PLAN. A delineation; a design; a draft, a form or representation; the representation of anything drawn on a plane, as a map or chart; a scheme; a sketch; also a method of action, procedure, or arrangement. Shainwald v. City of Portland, 153 Or. 167, 55 F.2d 1151, 1156; Jenney v. Des Moines, 103 Iowa, 347, 72 N.W. 550.

PLANE. Surface in which, if any two points are taken, straight line that joins them lies wholly in that surface. In re Vincent, Cust. & Pat.App., 40 F.2d 573, 574.

PLAZA. A Spanish word, meaning a public square in a city or town. Sachs v. Towanda, 79 Ill.App. 441; Kelly v. Town of Hayward, 192 Cal. 242, 219 P. 749.

PLEA. Common-law practice. A pleading; any one in the series of pleadings. More particularly, the first pleading on the part of the defendant. In the strictest sense, the answer which the defendant in an action at law makes to the plaintiff's declaration, and in which he sets up matter of fact as defense, thus distinguished from a demurrer, which interposes objections on grounds of law.

Equity. A special answer showing or relying upon one or more things as a cause why the suit should be either dismissed or delayed or barred. Mitf.Eq.P1. 219; Coop.Eq.P1. 223.

A short statement, in response to a bill in equity, of facts which, if inserted in the bill, would render it demurrable; while an answer is a complete statement of the defendant's case, and contains answers to any interrogatories the plaintiff may have administered. Hunt, Eq. pt. 1, c. 3.

Old English Law

A suit or action.

Thus, the power to "hold pleas" is the power to take cognizance of actions or suits; so "common pleas" are actions or suits between private persons. And this meaning of the word still appears in the modern declarations, where it is stated, e. g., that the defendant "has been summoned to answer the plaintiff in a plea of debt."

General

Affirmative plea. One which sets up a single fact, not appearing in the bill, or sets up a number of circumstances all tending to establish a single fact, which fact, if existing, destroys the complainant's case. Potts v. Potts, N.J.Ch., 42 A. 1055.

Anomalous plea. One which is partly affirmative and partly negative. Baldwin v. Elizabeth, 42 N.J.Eq. 11, 6 A. 275; Potts v. Potts, N.J.Ch., 42 A. 1055.

Bad plea. One which is unsound or insufficient in form or substance, or which .does not technically answer or correspond with the pleading which preceded it in the action.

Common pleas. Common causes or suits; civil actions brought and prosecuted between subjects or citizens, as distinguished from pleas of the crown or criminal cases.

Counter-plea. A plea to some matter incidental to the main object of the suit, and out of the direct line of pleadings. In the more ancient system of pleading, counter-plea was applied to what was, in effect, a replication to aid prayer, q. v.; that is, where a tenant for life or other limited interest in land, having an action brought against him in respect to the title to such land, prayed in aid of the lord or reversioner for his better defense, that which the demandant alleged against either request was called a "counter-plea." Cowell.

Dilatory pleas. See Dilatory.

Double plea. One having the technical fault of duplicity; one consisting of several distinct and independent matters alleged to the same point and requiring different answers.

False plea. A sham plea; (which title see infra.)

Foreign plea. A plea objecting to the jurisdiction of a judge, on the ground that he had not cognizance of the subject-matter of the suit. Cowell.

Negative plea. One which does not undertake to answer the various allegations of the bill, but specifically denies some particular fact or matter the existence of which is essential to entitle the complainant to any relief. Potts v. Potts, N.J. Ch., 42 A. 1056.

Peremptory pleas. "Pleas in bar" are so termed in contradistinction to that class of pleas called "dilatory pleas." The former, viz., peremptory pleas, are usually pleaded to the merits of the action, with the view of raising a material issue between the parties; while the latter class, viz., dilatory pleas, are generally pleaded with a view of retarding the plaintiff’s proceedings, and not for the purpose of raising an issue upon which the parties may go to trial and settle the point in dispute. Peremptory pleas are also called "pleas in bar," while dilatory pleas are said to be in abatement only. Brown.

Plea in abatement. In practice. A plea which, without disputing justice of plaintiff’s claim, objects to place, mode, or time of asserting it; it allows plaintiff to renew suit in another place or form, or at another time, and does not assume to answer the various allegations of the bill, but set forth a release subsequently executed by the party authorized to release the claim. Landis v. Morrissey, 69 Cal. 258.

Plea of nolo contendere. One which admits the cause of action, but sets forth a release subsequently executed by the party authorized to release the claim. Landis v. Morrissey, 69 Cal. 258.

Plea of release. One which admits the cause of action, but sets forth a release subsequently executed by the party authorized to release the claim. Landis v. Morrissey, 69 Cal. 258.

Plea side. The plea side of a court is that branch or department of the court which entertains or takes cognizance of civil actions and suits, as distinguished from its criminal or crown department. Thus the court of king’s bench is said to have a plea side and a crown or criminal side; the one branch or department of it being devoted to the cognizance of civil actions, the other to criminal proceedings and matters peculiarly concerning the crown. So the court of exchequer is said to have a plea side and a crown side; the one being appropriated to civil actions, the other to matters of revenue. Brown.

Pleas not pure are so called in contradistinction to pure pleas; they are sometimes also denominated negative pleas. 4 Bouvier, Inst. n. 4275.

Sham plea. A false plea; a plea of false or fictitious matter, subtly drawn so as to entrap an opponent, or create delay. 3 Chit.Pr. 729, 730. A vexatious or false defense, resorted to under the old system of pleading for purposes of delay and annoyance. Steph.P1. 383.

Mr. Chitty defines sham pleas to be pleas so palpably and manifestly untrue that the court will assume them to be so; pleas manifestly absurd. When answers or defenses admit of lawyer-like argument, such as courts should listen to, they are not "sham," in the sense of the statute. When it needs argument to prove that an answer or demurrer is frivolous, it is not frivolous, and should not be stricken off. To warrant this summary mode of disposing of a defense, the mere reading of the pleadings should be sufficient to disclose, without deliberation and without a doubt, that the defense is sham or irrelevant. Cottrill v. Cramer, 40 Wis. 559. A "sham plea" is one good on its face, but false in fact. In re Bean, 93 N.J.Eq. 593, 117 A. 613, 614. At common law a plea was considered sham when it was palpably or inherently false, and from the plain or concealed facts in the case must have been known to the party interposing it to be false. Fidelity Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Wilkes Barre & H. R. Co., 98 N.J.Law, 507, 120 A. 734, 735.

Special plea. A special kind of plea in 'bar, distinguished by this name from the general issue, and consisting usually of some new affirmative matter, though it may also be in the form of a traverse or denial. Steph.P1. 52, 162; Allen v. New Haven & N. Co., 49 Conn. 245.

Special plea in bar. One which advances new matter. It differs from the general, in this; that the latter denies some material allegation, but never advances new matter. Gould, Pl. c. 2, § 38.

PLEAD. To make, deliver, or file any pleading; to conduct the pleadings in a cause. To interpose any pleading in a suit which contains allegations of fact; in this sense the word is the antithesis of "demur." More particularly, to deliver in a formal manner the defendant's answer to the plaintiff's declaration, or to the indictment, as the case may be.

To appear as a pleader or advocate in a cause; to argue a cause in a court of justice. But this meaning of the word is not technical, but colloquial.

PLEAD A STATUTE. Pleading a statute is stating the facts which bring the case within it; and "counting" on it, in the strict language of pleading, is making express reference to it by apt terms to show the source of right relied on. McCullough v. Colfax County, 4 Neb. (Unof.) 543, 95 N.W. 31.

PLEAD ISSUABLY. This means to interpose such a plea as is calculated to raise a material issue, either of law or of fact.

PLEAD OVER. To pass over, or omit to notice, a material allegation in the last pleading of the opposite party; to pass by a defect in the pleading of the other party without taking advantage of it. In another sense, to plead the general issue, after one has interposed a demurrer or special plea which has been dismissed by a judgment of respondeat ouster.

PLEAD TO THE MERITS. This is a phrase of long standing and accepted usage in the law, and distinguishes those pleas which answer the cause of action and on which a trial may be had from all pleas of a different character. Rahn v. Gunnison, 12 Wis. 529.

PLEADED. Alleged or averred, in form, in a judicial proceeding.

It more often refers to matter of defense, but not invariably. To say that matter in a declaration or replication is not well pleaded would not be deemed erroneous. Abbott.

PLEADER. A person whose business it is to draw pleadings. Formerly, when pleading at common law was a highly technical and difficult art, there was a class of men known as "special pleaders not at the bar," who held a position intermediate between counsel and attorneys. The class is now almost extinct, and the term "pleaders" is generally applied, in England, to junior members of the common-law bar. Sweet.

Special pleader. In English practice. A person whose professional occupation is to give verbal or written opinions upon statements made verbally or in writing, and to draw pleadings, civil or criminal, and such practical proceedings as may be out of the usual course. 2 Chit.Pr. 42.

Special pleaders were not necessarily at the bar; but those that were not required to take out annual certificates under 33 & 34 Vict. c. 97, §§ 60, 63; Moz. & W.

PLEADING. The peculiar science or system of rules and principles, established in the common law, according to which the pleadings or responsive allegations of litigating parties are framed, with a view to preserve technical propriety and to produce a proper issue.

The process performed by the parties to a suit or action, in alternately presenting written statements of their contention, each responsive to that which precedes, and each serving to narrow the field of controversy, until there evolves a single point, affirmed on one side and denied on the other, called the "issue," upon which they then go to trial.

The act or step of interposing any one of the pleadings in a cause, but particularly one on the part of the defendant; and, in the strictest sense, one which sets up allegations of fact in defense to the action.

The name "a pleading" is also given to any one of the formal written statements of accusation or defense presented by the parties alternately in an action at law; the aggregate of such statements filed in any one cause are termed "the pleadings."

The oral advocacy of a client's cause in court, by his barrister or counsel, is sometimes called "pleading;" but this is a popular, rather than technical, use.

Chancery Practice

It consists in making the formal written allegations or statements of the respective parties on the record to maintain the suit, or to defeat it, of which, when contested in matters of fact, they propose to offer proofs, and in matters of law to offer arguments to the court. Story, Eq.P1. § 4, note.
PLEAING

In General

Articulated pleading. The stating of particulars of the petition. Newspaper Feature

With respect to the subsequent pleadings, the mandate, allege several distinct matters, by any one declaration must not, in support of a single demeaning with respect to the former is that the such pleading tends to several issues in respect of a single claim. Wharton.

Special pleading. When the allegations (or "pleadings," as they are called) of the contending parties in an action are not of the general or ordinary form, but are of a more complex or special character, they are denominated "special pleadgings;" and, when a defendant pleads a plea of this description, (i. e., a special plea,) he is said to plead specially, in opposition to pleading the general issue. These terms have given rise to the popular denomination of that science which, though properly called "pleading," is generally known by the name of "special pleading." Brown.

The allegation of special or new matter in opposition or explanation of the last previous averments on the other side, as distinguished from a direct denial of matter previously alleged by the oppo-

PLEADINGS. The formal allegations by the parties of their respective claims and defenses, for the judgment of the court. Smith v. Jacksonville Oil Mill Co., 21 Ga.App. 679, 94 S.E. 900, 901; Wilkinson v. Stone, 82 Okl. 296, 200 P. 196, 199; Tread-

The individual allegations of the respective parties to an action at common law, proceeding from them alternately, in the order and under the distinctive names following: The plaintiff's declaration, the defendant's plea, the defendant's replication, the defendant's rejoinder, the plaintiff's su-rejoinder, the defendant's rebutter, the plaintiff's surrebutter; after which they have no distinctive names. Burrill.

The term "pleadings" has a technical and well-defined meaning. Pleadings are written allegations of what is affirmed on the one side, or denied on the other, disclosing to the court or jury having 'to try the cause the real matter in dispute between the parties. Desnoyer v. Hereux, 1 Minn. 17 (Gil. 1).

PLEBANUS. In old English ecclesiastical law. A rural dean. Cowell.

PLEBEOIAN. One who is classed among the common people, as distinguished from the nobles.

PLEBEITY, or PLEBITY. The common or meaner sort of people; the plebeians.

PLEBLYOS. In Spanish law. Commons; those who exercise any trade, or who cultivate the soil. White, New Recop. b. 1, tit. 5, c. 3, § 6, and note.

PLEBIANA. In old records. A mother church.

PLEBISCITE. In modern constitutional law, the name "plebiscite" has been given to a vote of the entire people, (that is, the aggregate of the enfranchised individuals composing a state or nation,) expressing their choice for or against a proposed law or enactment, submitted to them, and which, if adopted, will work a radical change in the constitution, or which is beyond the powers of the regular legislative body. The proceeding is extraordinary, and is generally revolutionary in its character; an example of which may be seen in the plebiscites submitted to the French people by Louis Napoleon, whereby the Second Empire was established. But the principle of the plebiscite has been incorporated in the modern Swiss constitution, (under the name of "referendum," ) by which a revision of the constitution must be undertaken when demanded by the vote of fifty thousand Swiss citizens. Maine Popular Govt. 40, 96.

PLEBISCITUM. Lat. In Roman law. A law (i.e., "plebiscite") to be decided by the plebs or commonalty, (that is, the citizens, with the exception of the patricians and senators,) at the request or on the proposition of a plebian magistrate, such as a "tribune." Inst. 1, 2, 4.

PLEBS. Lat. In Roman law. The commonalty or citizens, exclusive of the patricians and senatorists. Inst. 1, 2, 4.

PLEDABLE. L. Fr. That may be brought or conducted; as an action or "plea," as it was formerly called. Britt. c. 32.

PLEDGE. In the law of bailment. A bailment of goods to a creditor as security for some debt or engagement. A bailment or delivery of goods by a debtor to his creditor, to be kept till the debt be discharged. Story, Bailm. § 7; Civ. Code La. art. 3133; 2 Kent, Comm. 577; Stearns v. Marsh, 4 Denio, N.Y., 229, 47 Am.Dec. 248; Sheri-

The necessary elements to constitute a contract one of "pledge" are: Possession of the pledged property must pass from the pledgor to the pledgee; the legal title to the property must remain in the pledgor; and the pledgee must have a lien on the property for the payment of a debt or the performance of an obligation due him by the pledgor or some other person—while, in a "chat-tel mortgage," the legal title passes to the mortgagee subject to a defeasance. Rice v. Garnett, 17 Ala.App. 239, 84 So. 557, 558; Campbell v. Red-
A bailment of personal property as security for a debt or other obligation. Thoen v. First Nat. Bank, 199 Minn. 47, 271 N.W. 111, 112; Travers v. Stevens, 108 Fla. 11, 145 So. 851, 854.

The specific article delivered to the creditor in security is also called a "pledge" or "pawn."

There is a clear distinction between mortgages and pledges. In a pledge the legal title remains in the pledgor; in a mortgage it passes to the mortgagee. In a mortgage the mortgagee need not have possession; in a pledge the pledgee must have possession, though it be only constructive. In a mortgage, at common law, the property on non-payment of the debt passes wholly to the mortgagee; in a pledge the property is sold, and only so much of the proceeds as will pay his debt passes to the pledgor. A mortgage is a conditional conveyance of property, which becomes absolute unless redeemed at a specified time. A pledge is not strictly a conveyance at all, nor need any day of redemption be appointed for it. A mortgagee can sell and deliver the thing mortgaged, subject only to the right of redemption. A pledgor cannot sell and deliver his pawn until the debt is due and payment denied. Bouvier.

There are two varieties of the contract of pledge known to the law of Louisiana, viz., pawn and antichresis; the former relating to chattel securities, the latter to landed securities. Civ.Code La. art. 3134; and see those titles.

PLEDGE. The party delivering goods in pledge; or delivered in pledge. Story, Bailm. § 287.

PLEDGERY. Suretyship, or an undertaking or guarantee for a debt or other obligation. Thoen v. First Nat. Bank, 199 Minn. 47, 271 N.W. 111, 112; Travers v. Stevens, 108 Fla. 11, 145 So. 851, 854.

PLEDGES. In pledging. Those persons who became sureties for the prosecution of the suit. Their names were anciently appended at the foot of the declaration. In time it became purely a formal matter, because the plaintiff was no longer liable to be amerced for a false claim, and the fictitious persons John Doe and Richard Roe became the universal pledges, or they might be omitted altogether, 1 Tidd, Pr. 455; Archb. Civ. Pl. 171; or inserted at any time before judgment; they are now omitted.

PLEDGES TO RESTORE. In England, before the plaintiff in foreign attachment can issue exec- ecution against the property in the hands of the garnishee, he must find "pledges to restore," consisting of two householders, who enter into a recognizance for the restoration of the property, as a security for the protection of the defendant; for, as the plaintiff's debt is not proved in any stage of the proceedings, the court guards the rights of the absent defendant by taking security on his behalf, so that if he should afterwards disprove the plaintiff's claim he may obtain restitution of the property attached. Brand. For. At- tachm. 93; Sweet.

PLEDGOR. The party delivering goods in pledge; the party pledging. Story, Bailm. § 287.

PLEGIALIS. In old English law. That may be pledged; the subject of pledge or security. Fleta, lib. 1, c. 20, § 98.

PLEGII DE PROSEQUENDO. Pledges to prose- cute with effect an action of replevin.
PLENIPOTENTIARY. One who has full power to do a thing; a person fully commissioned to act for another. A term applied in international law to ministers and envoys of the second rank of public ministers. Wheat. Hist. Law Nat. 266.

PLENUM DOMINIUM. Lat. In the civil law. Full ownership; the property in a thing united with the usufruct. Calvin.

PLEVIN. A warrant, or assurance.

PLIGHT. In old English law. An estate, with the habit and quality of the land; extending to a rent charge and to a possibility of dower. Co. Litt. 221b; Cowell.

PLOK-PENNIN. A kind of earnest used in public sales at Amsterdam. Wharton.

PLOTTAGE. A term used in appraising land values and particularly in eminent domain proceedings, to designate the additional value given to city lots by the fact that they are contiguous, which enables the owner to utilize them as large blocks of land. Erlanger v. New York Theatre Co., 206 App.Div. 148, 200 N.Y.S. 696, 698; People ex rel. Frederick Loeser & Co. v. Goldfogle, 220 App.Div. 326, 221 N.Y.S. 342, 346.

PLOW-ALMS. The ancient payment of a penny to the church from every plow-land. 1 Mon. Angl. 256.

PLOW-BOTE. An allowance of wood which tenants are entitled to, for repairing their plows and other implements of husbandry.

PLOW-LAND. A quantity of land "not of any certain content, but as much as a plow can, by course of husbandry, plow in a year." Co. Litt. 69a.

PLOW-MONDAY. The Monday after twelfth-day.

PLOW-SILVER. Money formerly paid by some tenants, in lieu of service to plow the lord’s lands.

PLUMBATURA. Lat. In the civil law. Soldering. Dig. 6, 1, 23, 5.

PLUMBER. A tradesman who furnishes, fits, and repairs gas, water and soil pipes, cisterns, tanks, baths, water closets, their fittings, and other sanitary and fire protection apparatus for a house or other building, including junctions to mains and sewers. Com. v. Dougherty, 156 Pa.Super. 520, 40 A.2d 902, 903; People v. Osborne, 149 Misc. 676, 269 N.Y.S. 409.

PLUMBUM. Lat. In the civil law. Lead. Dig. 50, 16, 242, 2.

PLUNDER, v. To take property from persons or places by open force, and this may be in course of a lawful war, or by unlawful hostility, as in the case of pirates or banditti. The term is also used to express the idea of taking property from a person or place, without just right, but not expressing the nature or quality of the wrong done. Carter v. Andrews, 16 Pick., Mass., 9; U. S. v. Stone, C.C.Tenn., 8 F. 246; U. S. v. Pitman, 27 Fed.Cas. 540.

PLUNDER, n. Personal property belonging to an enemy, captured and appropriated on land; booty. Also the act of seizing such property. See Booty; Prize.

PLUNDERAGE. In maritime law. The embezzlement of goods on board of a ship is so called.

PLURAL. Containing more than one; consisting of or designating two or more. Webster.

PLURAL MARRIAGE. See Marriage.

PLURALIS NUMERUS EST DUOBUS CONTEN-TUS. 1 Rolle, 476. The plural number is satisfied by two.

PLURALITER. In the plural. 10 East, 158, arg.

PLURALITY. In the law of elections. The excess of the votes cast for one candidate over those cast for any other. Where there are only two candidates, he who receives the greater number of the votes cast is said to have a majority; when there are more than two competitors for the same office, the person who receives the greatest number of votes has a plurality, but he has not a majority unless he receives a greater number of votes than those cast for all his competitors combined, or, in other words, more than one-half of the total number of votes cast.

In ecclesiastical law, “plurality” means the holding two, three, or more benefices by the same incumbent; and he is called a “pluralist.” pluralities are now abolished, except in certain cases. 2 Steph.Comm. 691, 692.

PLURES COHIEREDES SUNT QUASI UNUM CORPUS PROPTER UNITATEM JURIS QUOD HABENT. Co. Litt. 163. Several co-heirs are, as it were, one body, by reason of the unity of right which they possess.

PLURES PARTICIPES SUNT QUASI UNUM CORPUS, IN EO QUOD UNUM JUS HABENT. Co. Litt. 164. Several parceners are as one body, in that they have one right.

PLURES. Lat. Often; frequently. When an original and alias writ have been issued and proved ineffectual, a third writ, called a “plures writ,” may frequently be issued. It is to the same effect as the two former, except that it contains the words, “as we have often commanded you,” (“sicut pluries prcecepimus,”) after the usual commencement, “We command you.” 3 Bl. Comm. 283; Archb. Pr. 585.
PLURIES FI. FA. A writ issued where other commands of the court have proved ineffectual. U. S. v. Bd of Dir., C.C.A.La., 229 F. 1, 3.

PLURIS PETITIO. Lat. In Scotch practice. A demand of more than is due. Bell.

PLUS EXEMPLA QUAM PECCATA NOCENT. Examples hurt more than crimes.

PLUS PECCAT AUTHOR QUAM ACTOR. The originator or instigator of a crime is a worse offender than the actual perpetrator of it. Applied to the crime of subornation of perjury. 5 Coke, 99a.

PLUS PETITIO. In Roman law. A phrase denoting the offense of claiming more than was just in one's pleadings. This more might be claimed in four different respects, viz.: (1) Re, i. e., in amount, (e. g., £50 for £5); (2) loco, i. e., in place (e. g., delivery at some place more difficult to effect than the place specified); (3) tempore, i. e., in time, (e. g., claiming payment on the 1st of August of what is not due till the 1st of September;) and (4) causa, e., in quality, (e. g., claiming a dozen of champagne, when the contract was only for a dozen of wine generally.) Prior to Justinian's time, this offense was in general fatal to the action; but, under the legislation of the emperors Zeno and Justinian, the offense (if re, loco, or causa) exposed the party to the punishment of three times the damage, if any, sustained by the other side, and (if tempore) obliged him to postpone his action for double the time, and to pay the costs of his first action before commencing a second. Brown.

PLUS VALET CONSUETU DO QUAM CONCES- SIO. Custom is more powerful than grant.

PLUS VALET UNUS OCULATUS TESTIS QUAM AURITI DECEM. One eye-witness is of more weight than ten ear-witnesses, [or those who speak from hearsay.] 4 Inst. 279.

PLUS VIDET OCULI QUAM OCULUS. Several eyes see more than one. 4 Inst. 160.

PO. LO. SUO. An old abbreviation for the words "ponit loco suo," (puts in his place,) used in warrants of attorney. Townsh. Pl. 431.

POACHING. In English criminal law. The unlawful entry upon land for the purpose of taking or destroying game; the taking or destruction of game upon another's land, usually committed at night. Steph. Crim. Law 119, et seq.; 2 Steph. Comm. 82.

POBLADOR. In Spanish law. A colonizer; he who peoples; the founder of a colony.

POCKET. This word is used as an adjective in several compound legal phrases, carrying a meaning suggestive of, or analogous to, its signification as a pouch, bag, or secret receptacle. For these phrases, see "Borough," "Judgment," "Record," "Sheriff," and "Veto."

PLENA. Lat. Punishment; a penalty. Inst. 4, 6, 18, 19.

POD NET. See Pound Net.

PLENA AD PAUCOS, METUS AD OMNES PERVERNIAT. If punishment be inflicted on a few, a dread comes to all.

P(ENA CORPORALIS. Corporal punishment.

PCENA EX DELICTO HIERES TEMERI NON DEBET. The heir ought not to be bound by a penalty arising out of the wrongful act of the deceased. 2 Inst. 198.

PLENA NON POTEST, CULPA PERENNIS ERIT. Punishment cannot be, crime will be, perpetual. 21 Vin. Abr. 271.

PCENA PILLORALIS. In old English law. Punishment of the pillory. Fleta, lib. 1, c. 38, § 11.

PCENA SUOS TENERE DEBACT DEACTORES ET NON ALIOS. Punishment ought to bind the guilty, and not others. Bract. fol. 380b.

PLENA TOLLI POTEST, CULPA PERENNIS ERIT. The punishment can be removed, but the crime remains. 1 Park.Cr.Rep. (N.Y.) 241.

PCENZE POTIUS MOLLIEZE QUAM EXAS- PARANDIE SUNT. 3 Inst. 220. Punishments should rather be softened than aggravated.

PENCE SINT RESTRINGENDIE. Punishments should be restrained. Jenk. Cent. 29.

PCENIE SUOS TENERE DEBACT DEACTORES ET NON ALIOS. Punishment ought to be inflicted upon the guilty, and not upon others. Bract 380b; Fleta, 1. 1, c. 38, § 12; 1. 4, c. 17, § 17.

PCENALIS. Lat. In the civil law. Penal; imposing a penalty; claiming or enforcing a penalty. "Actiones peneales," penal actions. Inst. 4, 6, 12.

PCENITENTIA. Lat. In the civil law. Repentance; reconsideration; changing one's mind; drawing back from an agreement already made, or rescinding it.

Locus peneitentice. Room or place for repentance or reconsideration; an opportunity to withdraw from a negotiation before finally concluding the contract or agreement. Also, in criminal law, an opportunity afforded by the circumstances to a person who has formed an intention to kill or to commit another crime, giving him a chance to reconsider and relinquish his purpose.

POINDING. The process of the law of Scotland which answers to the distress of the English law. Poinding is of three kinds:

Real poinding or poinding of the ground. This is the action by which a creditor, having a security on the land of his debtor, is enabled to... appropriate the rents of the land, and the goods of the debtor or his tenants found thereon, to the satisfaction of the debt.

Personal poinding. This consists in the seizure of the goods of the debtor, which are sold under the direction of a court of justice, and the net amount of the sales paid over to the creditor in satisfaction of his debt; or, if no purchaser appears, the goods themselves are delivered.

Poinding of stray cattle, committing depredations on corn, grass, or plantations, until satisfaction is made for the damage. Bell.

POINT RESERVED. When, in the progress of the trial of a cause, an important or difficult point of law is presented to the court, and the court is not certain of the decision that should be given, it may reserve the point, that is, decide it provisionally as it is asked by the party, but reserve its more mature consideration for the hearing on a motion for a new trial, when, if it shall appear that the first ruling was wrong, the verdict will be set aside. The point thus treated is technically called a "point reserved."

POINTS. The distinct propositions of law, or chief heads of argument, presented by a party in his paper-book, and relied upon on the argument of the cause. Also the marks used in punctuation. Duncan v. Kohler, 37 Minn. 379, 34 N.W. 594; Commonwealth Ins. Co. v. Pierro, 6 Minn. 570 (Gil. 404).

POISON. In medical jurisprudence. A substance having an inherent deleterious property which renders it, when taken into the system, capable of destroying life. 2 Whart. & S. Med. Jur. § 1.

A substance which, on being applied to the human body, internally or externally, is capable of destroying the action of the vital functions, or of placing the solids and fluids in such a state as to prevent the continuance of life. Wharton. Boswell v. State, 114 Ga. 40, 39 S.E. 897; United States Mut. Ace. Ass'n v. Newman, 84 Va. 52, 3 S.E. 805.

POLAR STAR RULE. The rule that the intent of the maker of a written document, as gathered from its four corners, shall prevail unless such intent conflicts with some statutory provision within the jurisdiction, or is against public policy. Hanks v. McDanell, 307 Ky. 243, 210 S.W.2d 784, 786.

POLE. A measure of length, equal to five yards and a half.

POLICE. The function of that branch of the administrative machinery of government which is charged with the preservation of public order and tranquillity, the promotion of the public health, safety, and morals, and the prevention, detection, and punishment of crimes. State v. Hine, 59 Conn. 50, 21 A. 1024, 10 L.R.A. 83; People v. Squire, 107 N.Y. 593, 14 N.E. 820, 1 Am.St.Rep. 893.

The police of a state, in a comprehensive sense, embraces its whole system of internal regulation, by which the state seeks not only to preserve the public order and to prevent offenses against the state, but also to establish for the intercourse of citizen with citizen, those rules of good manners and good neighborhood which are calculated to prevent a conflict of rights, and to insure to each the uninterrupted enjoyment of his own, so far as is reasonably consistent with a like enjoyment of rights by others. Cooley, Const.Lim. §72. It is defined by Jeremy Bentham in his works: "Police is in general a system of precaution, either for the prevention of crime or of calamities. Its business may be distributed into eight distinct branch es; (1) police for the prevention of offenses; (2) police for the prevention of calamities; (3) police for the prevention of epidemic diseases; (4) police of charity; (5) police of interior communications; (6) police of public amusements; (7) police for recent intelligence; (8) police for registration." Canal Com'rs v. Willamette Transp. Co., 6 Or. 222.

The term "police" has also been divided into "administrative police", which has for its object to maintain constantly public order in every part of the general administration, and "judiciary police" which is intended principally to prevent crimes by punishing the criminals. Its object is to punish crimes which the administrative police has not been able to prevent. Green v. City of Bennettsville, 197 S.C. 313, 15 S.E.2d 334, 337.

POLICE COURT. The name of a kind of inferior court in several of the states, which has a summary jurisdiction over minor offenses and misdemeanors of small consequence, and the powers of a commiting magistrate in respect to more serious crimes, and, in some states, a limited jurisdiction of civil cases. The name is derived from English law. Courts in which stipendiary magistrates, chosen from barristers of a certain standing, sit for the dispatch of business. Their general duties and powers are the same as those of the unpaid magistracy, except that one of them may usually act in cases which would require to be heard before two other justices. Wharton.

POLICE JURY. In Louisiana. The governing bodies of the "parishes," which are political subdivisions of the state, comparable to counties in other states. National Liberty Ins. Co. of America v. Police Jury of Natchitoches Parish, 'C.C.A. La., 96 F.2d 261, 262.

POLICE JUSTICE. A magistrate charged exclusively with the duties incident to the common-law office of a conservator or justice of the peace; the prefix "police" serving merely to distinguish them from justices having also civil jurisdiction. Wenzler v. People, 58 N.Y. 530.

POLICE MAGISTRATE. An inferior judicial officer having jurisdiction of minor criminal offenses, breaches of police regulations, and the like; so called to distinguish them from magistrates who have jurisdiction in civil cases also, as justices of the peace. People v. Curley, 5 Colo. 416; McDermont v. Dinnie, 6 N.J. 278, 69 N.W. 295.
POLICE OFFICER. One of the staff of men employed in cities and towns to enforce the municipal police, i. e., the laws and ordinances for preserving the peace and good order of the community. Otherwise called "policeman."

POLICE POWER. The power vested in a state to establish laws and ordinances for the regulation and enforcement of its police as above defined. The power vested in the legislature to make, ordain, and establish all manner of wholesome and reasonable laws, statutes, and ordinances, either with penalties or without, not repugnant to the constitution, as they shall judge to be for the good and welfare of the commonwealth, and of the subjects of the same. Corn. v. Alger, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 85. An authority conferred by the American constitutional system upon the individual states, through which they are enabled to establish a special department of police; adopt such regulations as tend to prevent the commission of fraud, violence, or other offenses against the state; aid in the arrest of criminals; and secure generally the comfort, health, and prosperity of the state, by preserving the public order, preventing a conflict of rights in the common intercourse of the citizens, and insuring to each an uninterrupted enjoyment of all the privileges conferred upon him by the laws of his country. Lalor, Pol. Enc. s. v.

That inherent and plenary power in state over persons and property which enables the people to prohibit all things inimical to comfort, safety, health, and welfare of society. Drysdale v. Prudden, 195 N.C. 722, 143 S.E. 530, 536.

It is true that the legislation which secures to all protection in their rights, and the equal use and enjoyment of their property, embraces an almost infinite variety of subjects. Whatever affects the peace, good order, morals, and health of the community comes within its scope; and every one must use and enjoy his property subject to the restrictions which such legislation imposes. What is termed the "police power" of the state, which, from the language often used respecting it, one would suppose to be an undefined and irresponsible element in government, can only interfere with the conduct of individuals in their intercourse with each other, and in the use of their property, so far as may be required to secure these objects. Munn v. Illinois, 94 U.S. 145, 24 L.Ed. 77. For other definitions, see Slaughterhouse Cases, 16 Wall. 62, 21 L.Ed. 394; Stone v. Mississippi, 101 U.S. 818, 25 L.Ed. 1079; Thorpe v. Rutland & B. R. Co., 27 Vt. 140, 62 Am.Dec. 625; People v. Steele, 231 Ill. 340, 83 N.E. 236, 14 L.R.A., N.S., 361, 121 Am.St.Rep. 321; In re Clark, 65 Conn. 17, 31 A. 522, 28 L.R.A. 242; Mathews v. Board of Education, 127 Mich. 330, 86 N.W. 1036, 54 L.R.A. 736; In re Main, 162 Okt. 65, 19 P.2d 153, 156.

POLICE REGULATIONS. Laws of a state, or ordinances of a municipality, which have for their object the preservation and protection of public peace and good order, and of the health, morals, and security of the people. Ex parte Bourgeois, 60 Miss. 663, 45 Am.Rep. 420; Sonora v. Curtin, 137 Cal. 583, 137 Cal. 583, 70 P. 674; Roanoke Gas Co. v. Roanoke, 88 Va. 810, 14 S.E. 665.

POLICE SUPERVISION. In England, subjection to police supervision is where a criminal offender is subjected to the obligation of notifying the place of his residence and every change of his residence to the chief officer of police of the district, and of reporting himself once a month to the chief officer or his substitute. Offenders subject to police supervision are popularly called "habitual criminals." Sweet.

POLICIES OF INSURANCE, COURT OF. A court established in pursuance of the statutes 43 Eliz. c. 12, and 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 23. Composed of the judge of the admiralty, the recorder of London, two doctors of the civil law, two common lawyers, and eight merchants; any three of whom, one being a civilian or a barrister, could determine in a summary way causes concerning policies of assurance in London, with an appeal to chancery. No longer in existence. 3 Bl.Comm. 74.

POLICY. The general principles by which a government is guided in its management of public affairs, or the legislature in its measures.

This term, as applied to a law, ordinance, or rule of law, denotes its general purpose or tendency considered as directed to the welfare or prosperity of the state or community.

In gaming. A species of "lottery" whereby the chance is determined by numbers; "numbers game" also being a lottery. People v. Hines, 258 App.Div. 466, 17 N.Y.S.2d 141, 142.

Policy of a statute, or legislature. As applied to a penal or prohibitive statute, means -the intention of discouraging conduct of a mischievous tendency. See L.R. 6 P.C. 134; 5 Barn. & Ald. 335; Pol. Cont. 235.

Policy of the law. By this phrase is understood the disposition of the law to discourage certain classes of acts, transactions, or agreements, or to refuse them its sanction, because it considers them immoral, detrimental to the public welfare, subversive of good order, or otherwise contrary to the plan and purpose of civil regulations.

Public policy. That principle of the law which holds that no subject can lawfully do that which has a tendency to be injurious to the public against the public good. 4 H. L. Cas. 1; Greenh. Pub. Pol. 2. The principles under which the freedom of contract or private dealings is restricted by law for the good of the community. Wharton. The term "policy," as applied to a statute, regulation, rule of law, course of action, or the like, refers to its probable effect, tendency, or object, considered with reference to the social or political well-being of the state. Thus, certain classes of acts are said to be "against public policy," when the law refuses to enforce or recognize them, on the ground that they have a mischievous tendency, so as to be injurious to the interests of the state, apart from illegality or immorality. Sweet Egerton v. Earl Brownlow, 4 H.L.Cas. 235; Smith v. Railroad Co., 115 Cal. 584, 47 P. 582; Workmen's Compensation Board of Kentucky v. Abbott, 212 Ky. 123, 278 S.W. 533, 536, 47 A.L.R. 789; Driver v. Smith, 89 N.J.Eq. 339, 104 A. 717, 725; Nashville Ry. & Light Co. v. Lawson, 144 Tenn. 78, 229 S.W. 741, 743; American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Coates, 112 Tex. 267, 246 S.W. 356, 359;
People v. Herrin, 284 Ill. 368, 120 N.E. 274, 275; Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland v. Moore, D. C. Or., 3 F.2d 652, 653.

POLICY OF INSURANCE. A mercantile instrument in writing, by which one party, in consideration of a premium, engages to indemnify another against a contingent loss, by making him a payment in compensation, whenever the event shall happen by which the loss is to accrue. 2 Steph. Comm. 172. Contract whereby insurer, in return for premiums, engages, on happening of designated event, to pay certain sum as provided. In re O’Neill’s Estate, 143 Misc. 733, 255 N.Y.S. 767, 771.

The written instrument in which a contract of insurance is set forth, Civ. Code Cal. § 2586.

Blanket policy. A policy of fire insurance which contemplates that the risk is shifting, fluctuating, or varying, and is applied to a class of property rather than to any particular article or thing. Insurance Co. v. Baltimore Warehouse Co., 93 U.S. 541, 23 L.Ed. 868; Insurance Co. v. Landau, 62 N.J.Eq. 73, 49 A. 738.

The term “specific” as applied in insurance phraseology is frequently used in contrast with “blanket insurance” and denotes coverage of a particular piece of property or property at a specific location, as contrasted with blanket insurance which covers the same and other property in several different locations. Davis Yarn Co. v. Brooklyn Yarn Dye Co., 293 N.Y. 236, 56 N.E.2d 564, 571.

Class of life insurance policies. Those policies issued in the same calendar year, upon the lives of persons of the same age, and on the same plan of insurance. Miller v. New York Life Ins. Co., 179 Ky. 246, 200 S.W. 482, 484.

Endowment policy. In life insurance. A policy the amount of which is payable to the assured himself at the end of a fixed term of years, if he is then living, or to his heirs or a named beneficiary if he shall die sooner.

Floating policy. A policy of fire insurance not applicable to any specific described goods, but to any and all goods which may at the time of the fire be in a certain building.

Interest policy. One where the assured has a real, substantial, and assignable interest in the thing insured; as opposed to a wager policy.

Mixed policy. A policy of marine insurance in which not only the time is specified for which the risk is limited, but the voyage also is described by its local termini; as opposed to policies of insurance for a particular voyage, without any limits as to time, and also to purely time policies, in which there is no designation of local termini at all. 1 V1 ozley & Whittley. And see Wilkins v. Tobacco Ins. Co., 30 Ohio, 340, 27 Am.Rep. 455.

Open policy. One in which the value of the subject insured is not fixed or agreed upon in the policy, as between the assured and the underwriter, but is left to be estimated in case of loss. The term is opposed to “valued policy,” in which the value of the subject insured is fixed for the purpose of the insurance, and expressed on the face of the policy. Mozley & Whittley. Riggs v. Fire Protection Ass’n, 61 S.C. 448, 39 S.E. 614; Cox v. Insurance Co., 3 Rich. Law, 331, 45 Am.Dec. 771; Insurance Co. v. Butler, 38 Ohio St. 128. But this term is also sometimes used in America to describe a policy in which an aggregate amount is expressed in the body of the policy, and the specific amounts and subjects are to be indorsed from time to time. London Assur. Corp. v. Paterson, 106 Ga. 538, 32 S.E. 650.

Paid-up policy. In life insurance. A policy on which no further payments are to be made in the way of annual premiums.

Time policy. In fire insurance, one made for a defined and limited time, as, one year. In marine insurance, one made for a particular period of time, irrespective of the voyage or voyages upon which the vessel may be engaged during that period. Wilkins v. Tobacco Ins. Co., 30 Ohio St. 339, 27 Am.Rep. 455; Greenleaf v. St. Louis Ins. Co., 37 Mo. 29.

Voyage policy. A policy of marine insurance effected for a particular voyage or voyages of the vessel, and not otherwise limited as to time. Wilkins v. Tobacco Ins. Co., 30 Ohio St. 339, 27 Am.Rep. 455.

Wager policy. An insurance upon a subject-matter in which the party assured has no real, valuable, or insurable interest. A mere wager policy is that in which the party assured has no interest in the thing assured, and could sustain no possible loss by the event insured against, if he had not made such wager. Gambs v. Insurance Co., 50 Mo. 47; Moving Picture Co. of America v. Scottish Union & National Ins. Co. of Edinburgh, 244 Pa. 358, 90 A. 642, 644; Avery v. Mechanics’ Ins. Co. of Philadelphia, Mo.App., 295 S. W. 509, 512.
POLITIZE LEGIBUS NON LEGES POLITHS ADAPTANIVIE. Politics are to be adapted to the laws, and not the laws to politics. Hob. 154.

POLITICAL. Pertaining or relating to the policy or the administration of government, state or national. People v. Morgan, 90 Ill. 558. Pertaining to, or incidental to, the exercise of the functions vested in those charged with the conduct of government; relating to the management of affairs of state; as political theories; of or pertaining to exercise of rights and privileges or the influence by which individuals of a state seek to determine or control its public policy; having to do with organization or action of individuals, parties, or interests that seek to control appointment or action of those who manage affairs of a state. State ex rel. Maley v. Civic Action Committee, 238 Iowa 851, 28 N.W.2d 467, 470.

POLITICAL ARITHMETIC. An expression sometimes used to signify the art of making calculations on matters relating to a nation; the revenues, the value of land and effects; the produce of lands and manufactures; the population, and the general statistics of a country. Wharton.

POLITICAL COMMITTEE. Exists whenever three or more persons co-operate to bring about election or defeat of candidate or proposition at election. Empire City Job Print v. Harbord, 148 Misc. 331, 265 N.Y.S. 450.

POLITICAL CORPORATION. A public or municipal corporation; one created for political purposes, and having for its object the administration of governmental powers of a subordinate or local nature. Auryansen v. Hackensack Imp. Com'n, 45 N.J.L. 115; Curry v. District Tp., 62 Iowa 102, 17 N.W. 191.

POLITICAL ECONOMY. The science which describes the methods and laws of the production, distribution, and consumption of wealth, and treats of economic and industrial conditions and laws, and the rules and principles of rent, wages, capital, labor, exchanges, money, population, etc. The science which determines what laws men ought to adopt in order that they may, with the least possible exertion, procure the greatest abundance of things useful for the satisfaction of their wants, may distribute them justly, and consume them rationally. De Laveleye, Pol. Econ. The science which treats of the administration of the revenues of a nation, or the management and regulation of its resources, and productive property and labor. Wharton.

POLITICAL LAW. That branch of jurisprudence which treats of the science of politics, or the organization and administration of government.

POLITICAL LIBERTY. See Liberty.

POLITICAL OFFENSES. As a designation of a class of crimes usually excepted from extradition treaties, this term denotes crimes which are incidental to and form a part of political disturbances; but it might also be understood to include offenses consisting in an attack upon the political order of things established in the country where committed, and even to include offenses committed to obtain any political object. 2 Steph. Crim. Law, 70.

POLITICAL OFFICE. See Office.

POLITICAL PARTY. A number of persons united in opinion and organized in the manner usual to the then existing political parties. Swindall v. State Election Board, 168 Okl. 97, 32 P.2d 691, 695. An unincorporated, voluntary association of persons sponsoring certain ideas of government or maintaining certain political principles or beliefs in public policies of government, not a governmental agency or instrumentality. Robinson v. Holman, 181 Ark. 428, 26 S.W.2d 66, 68, 70 A.L.R. 1480.

POLITICAL QUESTIONS. Questions of which the courts of justice will refuse to take cognizance, or to decide, on account of their purely political character, or because their determination would involve an encroachment upon the executive or legislative powers; e.g., what sort of government exists in a state, whether peace or war exists, whether a foreign country has become an independent state, etc. Kenneth v. Chambers, 14 How. 38, 14 L.Ed. 316.

POLITICAL RIGHTS. Those which may be exercised in the formation or administration of the government. People v. Morgan, 90 Ill. 563. Rights of citizens established or recognized by constitutions which give them the power to participate directly or indirectly in the establishment or administration of government. People v. Barrett, 203 Ill. 99, 67 N.E. 742, 96 Am.St.Rep. 296; Winnett v. Adams, 71 Neb. 817, 99 N.W. 684.

POLITICS. The science of government; the art or practice of administering public affairs.

POLITY. The form of government; civil constitution.

POLL, v. In practice. To single out, one by one, of a number of persons. To examine each juror separately, after a verdict has been given, as to his concurrence in the verdict. 1 Burrill, Pr. 239; State v. Boger, 202 N.C. 702, 163 S.E. 877, 878.

POLL, n. A head; an individual person; a register of persons. In the law of elections, a list or register of heads or individuals who may vote in an election; the aggregate of those who actually cast their votes at the election, excluding those who stay away. De Soto Parish v. Williams, 49 La.Ann. 422, 21 So. 647, 37 L.R.A. 761. See, also, Polls.

POLL, adj. Cut or shaved smooth or even; cut in a straight line without indentation. A term anciently applied to a deed, and still used, though with little of its former significance. 2 Bl.Comm. 296.

have any such connection with any public waters that fish could pass from one to the other. If pond was so connected with public waters that time of high water, fish could go in and out, it was not "private pond" from which defendants could seize fish whether fish might go out same day or next season. State v. Lowder, 198 Ind. 234, 153 N.E. 399, 400.

PONDERANTUR TESTES, NON NUMERANTUR. Witnesses are weighed, not counted. 1 Starkie, Ev. 554; Best, Ev. p. 426, § 389; Bakeman v. Rose, 14 Wend. (N.Y.) 105, 109.

PONDUS. In old English law. Poundage; e., a duty paid to the crown according to the weight of merchandise, PONDUS REGIS. The king's weight; the standard weight appointed by the king. Cowell.

PONE. In English practice. An original writ formerly used for the purpose of removing suits from the court-baron or county court into the superior courts of common law. It was also the proper writ to remove all suits which were before the sheriff by writ of justices. But this writ is now in disuse, the writ of certiorari being the ordinary process by which at the present day a cause is removed from a county court into any superior court. Brown.

PONE PER VADIUM. In English practice. An obsolete writ to the sheriff to summon the defendant to appear and answer the plaintiff's suit, on his putting in sureties to prosecute. It was so called from the words of the writ, "pone per vadium et salvos plegios," "put by gage and safe pledges, A. B., the defendant."

PONENDIS IN ASSISIS. An old writ directing a sheriff to impanel a jury for an assize or real action.

PONENDUM IN BALLIUM. A writ commanding that a prisoner be bailed in casesailable. Reg. Orig. 133.

PONENDUM SIGILLUM AD EXCEPTIONEM. A writ by which justices were required to put their seals to exceptions exhibited by a defendant against a plaintiff's evidence, verdict, or other proceedings, before them, according to the statute Westm. 2, (13 Edw. I. St. 1, c. 31).

PONERE. Lat. To put, place, lay, or set. Often used in the Latin terms and phrases of the old law.

PONIT SE SUPER PATRIAM. Lat. He puts himself upon the country. The defendant's plea of not guilty in a criminal action is recorded, in English practice, in these words, or in the abbreviated form "po. se."

PONTAGE. In old English law. Duty paid for the reparation of bridges; also a due to the lord of the fee for persons or merchandises that pass over rivers, bridges, etc. Cowell.

PONTIBUS REPARANDIS. An old writ directed to the sheriff, commanding him to charge one or more to repair a bridge.

POOL. A combination of persons or corporations engaged in the same business, or for the purpose of engaging in a particular business or commercial or speculative venture, where all contribute to a common fund, or place their holdings of a given stock or other security in the hands and control of a managing member or committee, with the object of eliminating competition as between the several members of the pool, or of establishing a monopoly or controlling prices or rates by the weight and power of their combined capital, or of raising or depressing prices on the stock market, or simply with a view to the successful conduct of an enterprise too great for the capital of any member individually, and on an agreement for the division of profits or losses among the members, either equally or pro rata. Also, a similar combination not embracing the idea of a pooled or contributed capital, but simply the elimination of destructive competition between the members by an agreement to share or divide the profits of a given business or venture, as, for example, a contract between two or more competing railroads to abstain from "rate wars" and (usually) to maintain fixed rates, and to divide their earnings from the transportation of freight in fixed proportions. Green v. Higham, 161 Mo. 333, 61 S.W. 798; Mollyneaux v. Wittenberg, 39 Neb. 547, 58 N.W. 205; Kilbourn v. Thompson, 103 U.S. 195, 26 L.Ed. 377; American Biscuit Co. v. Klotz, C.C.La., 44 F. 725; U. S. v. Trans-Missouri Freight Ass'n, 7 C.C.A. 15, 58 F. 65, 24 L.R.A. 73; Georgia Fruit Exchange v. Turnipseed, 9 Ala. App. 123, 62 So. 542, 546.

In various methods of gambling, a "pool" is a sum of money made up of the stakes contributed by various persons, the whole of which is then wagered as a stake on the event of a race, game, or other contest, and the winnings (if any) are divided among the contributors to the pool pro rata. Or it is a sum similarly made up by the contributions of several persons, each of whom then makes his guess or prediction as to the event of a future contest or hazard, the successful better taking the entire pool. Ex parte Powell, 43 Tex.Cr.R. 391, 66 S.W. 298; Com. v. Ferry, 146 Mass. 203, 15 N.E. 484; Lacey v. Palmer, 93 Va. 159, 24 S.E. 930, 31 L.R.A. 822, 57 Am.St.Rep. 795; People v. Mulcahy, 87 App.Div. 72, 83 N.Y.S. 1088; Commonwealth v. Sullivan, 218 Mass. 281, 105 N.E. 895, Ann.Cas.1916B, 98.

A body of standing water, without a current or issue, accumulated in a natural basin or depression in the earth, and not artificially formed. Stephens v. State, 81 Tex.Cr.R. 177, 194 S.W. 400, 401. See Pond.

POOLING CONTRACTS. Agreements between competing railways for a division of the traffic, or for a pro rata distribution of their earnings united into a "pool" or common fund. 15 Fed. 667, note. See Pool.
POOLROOM. A room in which pools on races are sold. In another sense, a room where the game of pool is played. Town of Eros v. Powell, 137 La. 342, 68 So. 632, 634.

POOR. As used in law, this term denotes those who are so destitute of property or of the means of support, either from their own labor or the care of relatives, as to be a public charge, that is, dependent either on the charity of the general public or on maintenance at the expense of the public. The term is synonymous with "indigent persons" and "paupers." State v. Osawkee Tp., 14 Kan. 421, 19 Am.Rep. 99; In re Hoffen's Estate, 70 Wis. 522, 36 N.W. 407; Polk County v. Owen, 187 Iowa 220, 174 N.W. 99, 107.

POOR DEBTOR'S OATH. An oath allowed, in some jurisdictions, to a person who is arrested for debt. On swearing that he has not property enough to pay the debt, he is set at liberty.

POOR LAW. That part of the law which relates to the public or compulsory relief of paupers.

POOR-LAW BOARD. The English official body appointed under St. 10 & 11 Vict. c. 109, passed in 1847, to take the place of the poor-law commissioners, under whose control the general management of the poor, and the funds for their relief throughout the country, had been for some years previously administered. The poor-law board is now superseded by the local government board, which was established in 1871 by St. 34 & 35 Vict. c. 70. 3 Steph.Comm. 49.

POOR-LAW GUARDIANS. See Guardians of the Poor.

POPE NICHOLAS' TAXATION. The first fruits (primitice or annates) were the first year's profits of all the spiritual preferments in the kingdom according to a rate made by Walter, bishop of Norwich, in the time of Pope Innocent II., and afterwards advanced in value in the time of Pope Nicholas IV. This last valuation was begun A. D. 1288, and finished 1292, and is still preserved in the exchequer. The taxes were regulated by it till the survey made in the twenty-sixth year of Henry VIII. 2 Steph.Comm. 567.

POPERY. The religion of the Roman Catholic Church, comprehending doctrines and practices.

POPULACE, or POPULACY. The vulgar; the multitude.

POPULAR ACTION. An action for a statutory penalty or forfeiture, given to any such person or persons as will sue for it; an action given to the people in general. 3 Bl.Comm. 161.

POPULAR SENSE. In reference to the construction of a statute, this term means that sense which people conversant with the subject-matter with which the statute is dealing would attribute to it. 1 Exch.Div. 248; Westerlund v. Black Bear Mining Co., C.C.A.Colo., 203 F. 599, 605.

POPULISCITUM. Lat. In Roman law. A law enacted by the people; a law passed by an assembly of the Roman people, in the comitia centuria-ta, on the motion of a senator; differing from a plebiscitum, in that the latter was always proposed by one of the tribunes.

POPULUS. Lat. In Roman law. The population; the multitude; a multitude.

PORCION. In Spanish law. A part or portion; a lot or parcel; an allotment of land. Downing v. Diaz, 80 Tex. 436, 16 S.W. 49.

PORNOGRAPHIC. That which is of or pertaining to obscene literature; obscene; licentious. People on Complaint of Savery v. Gotham Book Mart, 158 Misc. 240, 285 N.Y.S. 563, 567.

PORRECTING. Producing for examination or taxation, or porrecting a bill of costs, by a proctor.

PORT. A place for the lading and unlading of the cargoes of vessels, and the collection of duties or customs upon imports and exports. A place, either on the seacoast or on a river, where ships stop for the purpose of loading and unloading, from whence they depart, and where they finish their voyages. Devato v. Barrels of Plumbago, D.C.N.Y., 20 F. 515; Petrel Guano Co. v. Jarnette, C.C.N.C., 45 F. 675.

While Rev.St. § 1 4178, 4334 (46 U.S.C.A. 47, 287), declare that the word "port" may mean the place where a vessel is built, or where one or more of the owners reside, a "port," in ordinary significance, is a place where strips are accustomed to load and unload goods, or to take on and let off passengers, and where persons and merchandise are allowed to pass into and out of the realm, and implies that it is something more than a roadstead; therefore a place on the high seas, fixed by latitude and longitude, where vessels were to be met and provisioned and coaled, is not a port. Hamburg-American Steam Packet Co. v. United States, C.C.A.N.Y., 250 F. 747, 759.

French Maritime Law

Burden, (of a vessel;) size and capacity.

General

Foreign port. One exclusively within the jurisdiction of a foreign nation, hence one without the United States. Bigley v. New York & P. R. S. S. Co., D.C.N.Y., 105 F. 74. But the term is also applied to a port in any state other than the state where the vessel belongs or her owner resides. The Canada, D.C.Or., 7 F. 124; The Lulu, 10 Wall. 200, 19 L.Ed. 906; Negus v. Simpson, 99 Mass. 393.

Home port. The port at which a vessel is registered or enrolled or where the owner resides.

Port-greve. The chief magistrate of a sea-port town is sometimes so called.

Port of delivery. In maritime law. The port which is to be the terminus of any particular voyage, and where the vessel is to unload or deliver her cargo, as distinguished from any port at which she may touch, during the voyage, for other purposes. The Two Catharines, 24 Fed. Cas. 429.

Port of departure. As used in the United States statutes requiring a ship to procure a bill of health from the consular officer at the place of departure, is not the last port at which the ship stops while bound for the United States, but the port from which she cleared. The Dago, 10 C.C.A. 224, 61 F. 986.

Port of destination. In maritime law and marine insurance, the term includes both ports which constitute the termini of the voyage, the home port and the foreign port to which the vessel is consigned as well as any usual stopping places for the receipt or discharge of cargo. Gookin v. New England Mut. Marine Ins. Co., 12 Gray, Mass., 501, 74 Am.Dec. 609.

Port of discharge, in a policy of marine insurance, means the place where the substantial part of the cargo is discharged, although there is an intent to complete the discharge at another basin. Bramhall v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 104 Mass. 510, 6 Am.Rep. 261.

Port of entry. One of the ports designated by law, at which a custom-house or revenue office is established for the execution of the laws imposing duties on vessels and importations of goods. Cross v. Harrison, 16 How. 164, 14 L.Ed. 889.

Port-reeve, or port-warden. An officer maintained in some ports to oversee the administration of the local regulations; a sort of harbor-master.

Port toll. The toll paid for bringing goods into a port.

PORTATICA. In English law. The generic name for port duties charged to ships. Harg.Law Tract, 64.

PORTEOUS. In old Scotch practice. A roll or catalogue containing the names of indicted persons, delivered by the justice-clerk to the coroner, to be attached and arrested by him. Otherwise called the "Porteous Roll." Bell.

PORTER. In old English law, this title was given to an officer of the courts who carried a rod or staff before the justices.

A person who keeps a gate or door; as the door-keeper of the houses of parliament.

One who carries or conveys parcels, luggage, etc., particularly from one place to another in the same town.

PORTERAGE. A kind of duty formerly paid at the English custom-house to those who attended the water-side, and belonged to the package-office; but it is now abolished. Also the charge made for sending parcels.

PORTIO LEGITIMA. Lat. In the civil law. The birthright portion; that portion of an inheritance to which a given heir is entitled, and of which he cannot be deprived by the will of the decedent, without special cause, by virtue merely of his relationship to the testator.

PORTION. The share falling to a child from a parent's estate or the estate of any one bearing a similar relation. Lewis's Appeal, 108 Pa. 136; In re Miller's Will, 2 Lea, Tenn., 57; Stubbs v. Abel, 114 Or. 610, 233 P. 852, 857. An allotted part; a share, a parcel; a division in a distribution; a share of an estate or the like, received by gift or inheritance. Lecompte v. Davis' Ex'tr, 285 Ky. 433, 148 S.W.2d 292, 295.

Portion is especially applied to payments made to younger children out of the funds comprised in their parents' marriage settlement, and in pursuance of the trusts there-of. Mozley & Whiteley.

PORTION DISPONIBLE. Fr. In French law. That part of a man's estate which he may bequeath to other persons than his natural heirs. A parent leaving one legitimate child may dispose of one-half only of his property; one leaving two, one-third only; and one leaving three or more, one-fourth only; and it matters not whether the disposition is inter vivos or by will.

PORTIONER.

Old English law. A minister who serves a benefice, together with others; so called because he has only a portion of the tithes or profits of the living; also an allowance which a vicar commonly has out of a rectory or impropriation. Cowell.

Scotch law. The proprietor of a small feu or portion of land. Bell.

PORTONIBUS. Is properly employed to mean a portion of the tithes of one parish claimed by the rector of another parish. 4 CL & F. 1.

PORTIONIST. One who receives a portion; the allottee of a portion. One of two or more incumbents of the same ecclesiastical benefice.

PORTMEN. The burgesses of Ipswich and of the Cinque Ports were so called.
PORTMOTE. In old English law. A court held in ports or haven towns, and sometimes in inland towns also. Cowell; Blount.

PORTORIA. In the civil law. Duties paid at city gates. Tolls for passing over bridges.

PORTOSKA, or PORTSOKEN. The suburbs of a city, or any place within its jurisdiction. Somner; Cowell.

PORTUS EST LOCUS IN QUO EXPORTANTUR MERCES. 2 Inst. 148. A port is a place where goods are exported or imported.

PORTUSALE. In old English law. An auction; a public sale of goods to the highest bidder; also a sale of fish as soon as it is brought into the haven. Cowell.

PORTSITE, or PORTSITE. The suburbs of a city, or any place within its jurisdiction. Sonner; Cowell.

POSITIVE. Laid down, enacted, or prescribed. Express or affirmative. Direct, absolute, explicit.

POSSE. Lat. A possibility. A thing is said to be in seisin when it may possibly be; in esse when it actually is. Guidry v. Caire, 181 La. 895, 160 So. 622.

POSSE COMITATUS. Lat. The power or force of the county. The entire population of a county above the age of fifteen, which a sheriff may summon to his assistance in certain cases; as to aid him in keeping the peace, in pursuing and arresting felons, etc. 1 Bl.Comm. 343; Com. v. Martin, 7 Pa. Dist.R. 224.

POSSESS. To occupy in person; to have in one's actual and physical control; to have the exclusive detention and control of; to have and hold as property; to have a just right to; to be master of; to own or be entitled to. Fuller v. Fuller, 84 Me. 475, 24 A. 946; Bingham's Administratrix v. Commonwealth, 196 Ky. 318, 244 S.W. 781, 785; Davis v. State, 102 Tex.Cr.R. 546, 278 S.W. 848, 849; Ex parte Okahara, 191 Cal. 353, 216 P. 614, 617; Melvin v. Scowley, 213 Ala. 414, 104 So. 817, 820; Nevin v. Louisville Trust Co., 258 Ky. 187, 79 S.W. 2d 688, 689.

POSSESSED. This word is applied to the right and enjoyment of a termor, or a person having a term, who is said to be possessed, and not seised. Bac.Tr. 335; Poph. 76; Dyer, 369.

"Possessed" is a variable term in the law, and has different meanings as it is used in different circumstances. It sometimes implies a temporary interest in lands; as we say a man is possessed, in contradistinction to being seised. It sometimes implies the corporal having; as we say a man is seised and possessed. But it sometimes implies no more than that one has a property in a thing; that he has it as owner; that it is his. Thompson v. Moran, 44 Mich. 603, 7 N.W. 180; In re Dillingham's Estate, 196 Cal. 525, 238 P. 367, 369; O'Connor v. Halpin, 161 Iowa, 101, 147 N.W. 185, 186; United States Trust Co. v. Gulick, 179 N.Y.S. 769, 771, 107 Misc. 316; Thomson v. Fidelity Trust Co., 268 Pa. 203, 110 A. 770, 773.

POSSER. To occupy in person; to have in his actual and physical control; to have the exclusive detention, usufruct or control of; to have and hold as his property; to have a just right to; to be master of; to own or be entitled to. Fuller v. Fuller, 84 Me. 475, 24 A. 946; Bingham's Administratrix v. Commonwealth, 196 Ky. 318, 244 S.W. 781, 785; Davis v. State, 102 Tex.Cr.R. 546, 278 S.W. 848, 849; Ex parte Okahara, 191 Cal. 353, 216 P. 614, 617; Melvin v. Scowley, 213 Ala. 414, 104 So. 817, 820; Nevin v. Louisville Trust Co., 258 Ky. 187, 79 S.W. 2d 688, 689.

POSSESSIO. Lat.

Civil Law

That condition of fact under which one can exercise his power over a corporeal thing at his pleasure, to the exclusion of all others. This condition of fact is called "detention," and it forms the substance of possession in all its varieties. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 238.

"Possession," in the sense of "detention," is the actual exercise of such a power as the owner has a right to exercise. The term "possessio" occurs in the Roman jurists in various senses. There is possessio simply, and possessio civilis; and possessio naturalis. Possessio denoted, originally, bare detention. But this detention, under certain conditions, becomes a legal state, inasmuch as it leads to ownership, through usucapio. Accordingly, the word "possessio," which required no qualification so long as there was no other notion attached to possessio, requires such qualification when detention becomes a legal state. This detention, then, when it has the conditions necessary to usucapio, is called "possesssio civilis;" and all other possessio as opposed to civilis is naturalis. Sandars, Just.Inst. 274. Wharton.

Old English law. Possession; seisin. The detention of a corporeal thing by means of a physical act and mental intent, aided by some support of right. Bract. fol. 38b.

General

Pedis possessio. A foothold; an actual possession of real property, implying either actual occupancy or enclosure and use. Lawrence v. Fulton, 19 Cal. 690; Porter v. Kennedy, 1 McMul., S.C., 357.

Possessio bona fide. Possession in good faith. Possessio mala fide, possession in bad faith. A possessor bona fide is one who believes that no other person has a better right to the possession than himself. A possessor mala fide is one who knows that he is not entitled to the possession. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 243.

Possessio bonorum. In the civil law. The possession of goods. More commonly termed "bonorum possessio." (q. v.).

Possessio civilis. In Roman law. A legal possession, i.e., a possessing accompanied with the intention to be or to thereby become owner; and, as so understood, it was distinguished from "possessio naturalis," otherwise called "nuda detentio," which was a possessing without any such intention. Possessio civilis was the basis of usucapio or of longi temporis possessio, and was usually (but not necessarily) adverse possession. Brown.

Possessio fratris. The possession or seisin of a brother; that is, such possession of an estate by a brother as would entitle his sister of the whole blood to succeed him as heir, to the exclusion of a half-brother. Hence, derivatively, that doctrine of the older English law of descent which shut out the half-blood from the succession to estates; a doctrine which was abolished by the descent act, 3 & 4 Wn. IV. c. 106. 1 Steph.Comm. 385; Broom, Max. 532.

Possessio longi temporis. See Usucapio.

Possessio naturalis. See Possessio Civilis.

POSSESSIO EST QUASI PEDIS POSITIO. Possession is, as it were, the position of the foot. 3 Co. 42.

POSSESSIO FRATRIS DE FEODO SIMPLICI FACIT SOROREM ESSE IUEREDEM. The brother's possession of an estate in fee-simple makes the sister to be heir. 3 Coke, 41; Broom, Max. 532.

POSSESSION. The detention and control, or the manual or ideal custody, of anything which may be the subject of property, for one's use and enjoyment, either as owner as the proprietor of a qualified right in it, and either held personally or by another who exercises it in one's place and name. Act or state of possessing. That condition of facts under which one can exercise his power over a corporeal thing at his pleasure to the exclusion of all other persons. Starits v. Avery, 204 Iowa 401, 213 N.W. 769, 771; Schenk v. State, 106 Tex.Cr.R. 564, 293 S.W. 1101, 1102; State v. Compton, Mo.App., 297 S.W. 413, 414; Nevin v. Louisville Trust Co., 258 Ky. 187, 79 S.W.2d 688, 689.

In the older books, "possession" is sometimes used as the synonym of "seisin;" but, strictly speaking, they are entirely different terms. "The difference between possessio and seisin is: Lessee for years is possessed, and yet the lessor is still seised; and therefore the terms of law are that of chattels a man is possessed, whereas in foemments, gifts in tail, and leases for life he is described as 'seised.'" Noy. Max. 64.

"Possession" is used in some of the books in the sense of property. "A possession is an hereditament or chattel." Finch, Law, b. 2, c. 3.

Possession of liquor which is made unlawful is possession under some claim of right, control, or dominion, with the knowledge of facts. Schwartz v. State, 192 Wis. 414, 212 N.W. 664, 665. Taking a drink of intoxicating liquor on invitation of owner thereof does not constitute criminal possession." Colbaugh v. U.S., C.C.A.Okl., 15 F.2d 929, 931; State v. Williams, 117 Or. 238, 243 P. 563; Sizemore v. Commonwealth, 202 Ky. 273, 259 S.W. 337, 342; Brazeale v. State, 133 Miss. 171, 97 So. 525, 526; Harness v. State, 130 Miss. 673, 95 So. 64; State v. McAllister, 187 N.C. 400, 121 S.E. 739, 740; People v. Leslie, 239 Mich. 334, 214 N.W. 128.

Actual possession. Exists where the thing is in the immediate occupancy of the party. Simpson v. Blount, 14 N.C. 34; Field Furniture Co. v. Community Loan Co., 257 Ky. 825, 79 S.W.2d 211, 215.

Adverse possession. The actual, open, and notorious possession and enjoyment of real property, or of any estate lying in grant, continued for a certain length of time, held adversely and in denial and opposition to the title of another claimant, or under circumstances which indicate an assertion or color of right or title on the part of the person maintaining it, as against another person who is out of possession. Hall v. Lavat, 301 Mo. 675, 257 S.W. 108, 111; W. T. Carter & Bro. v. Richardson, Tex.Civ.App., 225 S.W. 816, 817; Baxter v. Girard Trust Co., 258 Pa. 356, 135 A. 620, 621, 49 A.R. 1011; Mendel v. Poland, 200 Mich. 571, 166 N.W. 910, 912.

Chose in possession. A thing (subject of personal property) in actual possession, as distinguished from a "chase in action," which is not presently in the owner's possession, but which he has a right to demand, receive, or recover by suit.

Civil possession. In modern civil law and in the law of Louisiana, that possession which exists when a person ceases to reside in a house or on the land which he occupied, or to detain the movable which he possessed, but without intending to abandon the possession. It is the detention of a thing by virtue of a just title and under the conviction of possessing as owner. Civ.Code La. art. 3429 et seq. A fiction resulting from the registry of the title of the original owner. Baldwin Lumber Co. v. Dalferes, 138 La. 507, 70 So. 493, 499; Maisonneuve v. Dalferes, 138 La. 527, 70 So. 500, 501.

Constructive possession. Possession not actual but assumed to exist, where one claims to hold by virtue of some title, without having the actual occupancy, as, where the owner of a tract of land, regularly laid out, is in possession of a part, he is constructively in possession of the whole. Fleming v. Maddox, 30 Iowa 241.

Corporeal possession. The continuing exercise of a claim to the exclusive use of a material thing. The elements of this possession are first, the mental attitude of the claimant, the intent to possess, to appropriate to oneself; and second, the effective realization of this attitude. All the authorities agree that an intent to exclude others must coexist with the external facts, and must be fulfilled in the external physical facts in order to constitute possession. State v. Wagoner, 123 Kan. 591, 256 P. 957, 958.

Derivative possession. The kind of possession of one who is in the lawful occupation or custody of the property, but not under a claim of title of his own, but under a right derived from another, as, for example, a tenant, bailee, licensee, etc.

Dispossession. The act of ousting or removing one from the possession of property previously held by him, which may be tortious and unlawful, as in the case of a forcible amotion, or in pursuit or attempt at secrecy, or without being covered up in the name of a third person, or otherwise attempted to be withdrawn from sight, but in such a manner that any person interested can ascertain who is actually in possession by proper observation and inquiry. See Bass v. Pease, 79 Ill.App. 318

Peaceable possession. See Peaceable.

Pedal possession. In establishing title by adverse possession this means actual possession; that is, living upon or actually occupying the land, or placing improvements directly upon it. Schaeffer v. Williams, Tex., 208 S.W. 220, 224.

Possession money. In English law. The man whom the sheriff puts in possession of goods taken under a writ of fieri facias is entitled, while he continues so in possession, to a certain sum of money per diem, which is hence termed "possession money." The amount is 3s. 6d. per day if he is boarded, or 5s. per day if he is not boarded. Brown.

Possession, writ of. Where the judgment in an action of ejectment is for the delivery of the land claimed, or its possession, this writ is used to put the plaintiff in possession. It is in the nature of execution.

Quasi possession. Is to a right what possession is to a thing, it is the exercise or enjoyment of the right, not necessarily the continuous exercise, but such an exercise as shows an intention to exercise it at any time when desired. Sweet.

Scrambling possession. By this term is meant a struggle for possession on the land itself, not such a contest as is waged in the courts, or possession gained by an act of trespass, such as building a fence. Lobdell v. Keene, 85 Minn. 90, 88 N.W. 426.

Unity of possession. Joint possession of two rights by several titles, as where a lessee of land acquires the title in fee-simple, which extinguishes the lease. The term also describes one of the essential properties of a joint estate, each of the tenants having the entire possession as well of every parcel as of the whole. 2 Bl.Comm. 182.

Vacant possession. An estate which has been abandoned, vacated, or forsaken by the tenant. The abandonment must be complete in order to make the possession vacant, and, therefore, if the tenant have goods on the premises it will not be so considered. 2 Chitty, Bail. 177; 2 Stria. 1064.

POSSESSION IS A GOOD TITLE WHERE NO BETTER TITLE APPEARS. 20 Vin.Abbr. 278.

POSSESSION IS NINE-TENTHS OF THE LAW. This adage is not to be taken as true to the full extent, so as to mean that the person in possession can only be ousted by one whose title is nine times better than his, but it places in a strong light the legal truth that every claimant must succeed by the strength of his own title, and not by the weakness of his antagonist's. Wharton.

POSSSESSION VAUT TITRE. Fr. In English law, as in most systems of jurisprudence, the fact of possession raises a prima facie title or a presumption of the right of property in the thing possessed. In other words, the possession is as good as the title (about.) Brown.
POSSESSOR. One who possesses; one who has possession.

POSSESSOR BONA FIDE. He is a bona fide possessor who possesses as owner by virtue of an act sufficient in terms to transfer property, the defects of which he was ignorant of. He ceases to be a bona fide possessor from the moment these defects are made known to him, or are declared to him by a suit instituted for the recovery of the thing by the owner. Civ.Code La. art. 503.

POSSESSOR MALA FIDE. The possessor in bad faith is he who possesses as master, but who assumes this quality, when he well knows that he has no title to the thing, or that his title is vicious and defective. Civ.Code La. art. 3452.

POSSESSORY. Relating to possession; founded on possession; contemplating or claiming possession.

Possessory action. See next title.

Possessory claim. The title of a pre-emptor of public lands who has filed his declaratory statement but has not paid for the land. Enoch v. Spokane Falls & N. Ry. Co., 6 Wash. 393, 33 P. 966.

Possessory judgment. In Scotch practice. A judgment which entitles a person who has uninterruptedly been in possession for seven years to continue his possession until the question of right be decided in due course of law. Bell.

Possessory lien. A lien is possessory where the creditor has the right to hold possession of the specific property until satisfaction of the debt.

One which attaches to such articles of another's as may be at the time in the possession of the lienor, as, for example, an attorney's lien on the papers and documents of the client in his possession. Wood Sewing Mach. Co. v. Boutelle, 56 Vt. 570, 48 Am. Rep. 821.

POSSESSORY ACTION. An action which has for its immediate object to obtain or recover the actual possession of the subject-matter; as distinguished from an action which merely seeks to vindicate the plaintiff's title, or which involves the bare right only; the latter being called a "petitory" action.

An action founded on possession. Trespass for injuries to personal property is called a "possessory" action, because it lies only for a plaintiff who, at the moment of the injury complained of, was in actual or constructive, immediate, and exclusive possession. 1 Chit.PL. 168, 169.

Admiralty practice. One which is brought to recover the possession of a vessel, had under a claim of title. The Tilton, 5 Mason, 465, Fed.Cas. No.14,054; 1 Kent, Comm. 371.

Louisiana. An action by which one claims to be maintained in the possession of an immovable property, or of a right upon or growing out of it, when he has been disturbed, or to be reinstated to that possession, when he has been divested or evicted. Code Prac.La. art. 6.

Old English law. A real action which had for its object the regaining possession of the freehold, of which the demandant or his ancestors had been unjustly deprived by the present tenant or possessor thereof.

Scotch law. An action for the vindication and recovery of the possession of heritable or movable goods; e. g., the action of molestation. Paters. Comp.

POSSIBILITAS. Lat. Possibility; a possibility. Possibilitas post dissolutionem executionis nund quam reviviscatur, a possibility will never be revived after the dissolution of its execution. 1 Rolle, 321. Post executionem status, lex non patitur possibilitatem, after the execution of an estate the law does not suffer a possibility. 3 Bulst. 108.

It is either near, (or ordinary,) as where an estate is limited to one after the death of another, or remote, (or extraordinary,) as where it is limited to a man, provided he marries a certain woman, and that she shall die and he shall marry another.

Bare possibility. The same as a "naked" possibility. See infra.

Naked possibility. A bare chance or expectation of acquiring a property or succeeding to an estate in the future, but without any present right in or to it which the law would recognize as an estate or interest. Rogers v. Felton, 98 Ky. 148, 32 S.W. 406.

Possibility coupled with an interest. An expectation recognized in law as an estate or interest, such as occurs in executory devises and shifting or springing uses: such a possibility may be sold or assigned.

Possibility of reverter. This term denotes no estate, but only a possibility to have the estate at a future time. Of such possibilities there are several kinds, of which two are usually denoted by the term under consideration, (1) the possibility that a common-law fee may return to the grantor by breach of a condition subject to which it was granted, (2) the possibility that a common-law fee other than a fee simple may revert to the grantor by the natural determination of the fee. Sorrel v. McNally, 89 Fla. 457, 105 So. 106, 109; Des Moines City Ry. Co. v. City of Des Moines, 183 Iowa, 1261, 159 N.W. 450, 452, L.R.A.1918D, 839; Trustees of Calvary Presbyterian Church of Buffalo v. Putnam, 221 App.Div. 502, 224 N.Y.S. 651, 654.

Possibility on a possibility. A remote possibility, as if a remainder be limited in particular to A.'s son John, or Edward, it is bad if he have no son of that name, for it is too remote a possibility that he should not only have a son, but a son of that particular name. 2 Coke, 51.
POSSIBLE. Capable of existing, happening, being, becoming or coming to pass; feasible, not contrary to nature of things; neither necessitated nor precluded; free to happen or not; contrasted with necessary and impossible. In another sense, the word denotes extreme improbability, without excluding the idea of feasibility. It is also sometimes equivalent to "practicable" or "reasonable," as in some cases where action is required to be taken "as soon as possible." Norris v. Elmdale Elevator Co., 216 Mich. 548, 185 N.W. 696, 698; Miller v. Southern Express Co., 99 S.C. 333, 83 S. E. 449, 451; National Enameling & Stamping Co. v. Zirkovics, C.C.A.Mo., 251 F. 184, 189. Guidry v. Caire, 181 La. 895, 150 So. 622.

POST. Lat. After; occurring in a report or a text-book, is used to send the reader to a subsequent part of the book.

POST, n. A conveyance for letters or dispatches. The word is derived from "positi," the horses carrying the letters or dispatches being kept or placed at fixed stations. The word is also applied to the person who conveys the letters to the houses where he takes up and lays down his charge, and to the stages or distances between house and house. Hence the phrases, post-boy, post-horse, post-house, etc. Wharton.

POST-ACT. An after-act; an act done afterwards.

POST CONQUESTUM. After the Conquest. Words inserted in the king's title by King Edward I., and constantly used in the time of Edward III. Tomlins.

POST-DATE. To date an instrument as of a time later than that at which it is really made.

POST-DATED CHECK. One delivered prior to its date, generally payable at sight or on presentation on or after day of its date. It differs from an ordinary check by carrying on its face implied notice that there is no money presently on deposit available to meet it, but with implied assurance that such funds will exist when check becomes due. Lovell v. Eaton, 99 Vt. 255, 133 A. 742, 743; State v. Langer, 46 N.D. 462, 177 N.W. 408, 419.

POST DIEM. After the day; as, a plea of payment post diem, after the day when the money became due. Com.Dig. "Pleader," 2.

Old Practice. The return of a writ after the day assigned. A fee paid in such case. Cowell.

POST DISSEISIN. In English law. The name of a writ, which lies for him who, having recovered lands and tenements by force of a novel disseisin, is again disseised by a former disseisor. Jacob.

POST ENTRY. When goods are weighed or measured, and the merchant has got an account thereof at the custom-house, and finds his entry already made too small, he must make a post or additional entry for the surplusage, in the same manner as the first was done. As a merchant is always in time, prior to the clearing of the vessel, to make his post, he should take care not to over-enter, to avoid as well the advance as the trouble of getting back the overplus. McCul.Dict.

POST EXCHANGE. A voluntary association of companies, detachments, or other army units at military posts, permitted by a special regulation of the War Department for the purpose of conducting for the benefit of the members of such units what is in effect a co-operative store and place of entertainment. Keane v. U. S., C.C.A.Va., 272 F. 577, 578.

POST EXECUTIONEM STATUS LEX NON PATTUR POSSIBILITATEM. 3 Bulst. 108. After the execution of the estate the law suffers not a possibility.

POST FACTO. After the fact. See Ex Post Facto.

POST-FACTUM, or POSTFACTUM. An after-act; an act done afterwards; a post-act.

POST-FINE. In old conveyancing. A fine or sum of money, (otherwise called the "king's silver") formerly due on granting the licentia concordandi, or leave to agree, in levying a fine of lands. It amounted to three-twentieths of the supposed annual value of the land, or ten shillings for every five marks of land. 2 Bl.Comm. 350.

POST HAC. Lat. After this; after this time; hereafter.

POST LITEM MOTAM. Lat. After suit moved hereafter.

POST ENTRY. When goods are weighed or measured, and the merchant has got an account thereof at the custom-house, and finds his entry already made too small, he must make a post or additional entry for the surplusage, in the same manner as the first was done. As a merchant is always in time, prior to the clearing of the vessel, to make his post, he should take care not to over-enter, to avoid as well the advance as the trouble of getting back the overplus. McCul.Dict.

POST NATUS. Born afterwards. A term applied by old writers to a second or younger son. It is used in private international law to designate a person who was born after some historic event, (such as the American Revolution or the act of union between England and Scotland,) and whose rights or status will be governed or affected by the question of his birth before or after such event.

POST-NOTES. A species of bank-notes payable at a distant period, and not on demand.

They are a species of obligation resorted to by banks when the exchanges of the country, and especially of the banks, have become embarrassed by excessive speculations. Much concern is then felt for the country, and through the newspapers it is urged that post-notes be issued by the banks "for aiding domestic and foreign exchanges," as a "mode of relief," or a "remedy for the distress," and to take the place of the southern and foreign exchanges. And so presently this is done. Post-notes are therefore intended to enter into the circulation of the country as a 'mode of relief,' or a 'remedy for the distress,' and to avoid a compulsory suspension. They are under seal, or without seal, and at long or short dates, at more or less interest, or without interest, as the necessities of the bank may require. Appeal of Hogg, 22 Pa. 488.

POST-NUPTIAL. After marriage. Thus, an agreement entered into by a father after the marriage of his daughter, by which he engages to make a provision for her, would be termed a "post-nuptial agreement." Brown.

POST-NUPTIAL SETTLEMENT. A settlement made after marriage upon a wife or children; otherwise called a "voluntary" settlement. 2 Kent, Comm. 173.

POST-OBIT. (Lat.) An agreement by which the obligor borrows a certain sum of money and promises to pay a larger sum, exceeding the lawful rate of interest, upon the death of a person from whom he has some expectation, if the obligor be then living. Boynton v. Hubbard, 7 Mass. 119; 6 Madd. 111; 5 Ves. 57; 19 Ves. 628.

POST OBIT BOND. A bond given by an expectancy, to become due on the death of a person from whom he will have property. A bond or agreement given by a borrower of money, by which he undertakes to pay a larger sum, exceeding the legal rate of interest, on or after the death of a person from whom he has expectations, in case of surviving him. Crawford v. Russell, 62 Barb., N.Y., 92; Boynton v. Hubbard, 7 Mass. 119.

POST-OFFICE. A bureau or department of government, or under governmental superintendence, whose office is to receive, transmit, and deliver letters, papers, and other mail-matter sent by post. Also the office established by government in any city or town for the local operations of the postal system, for the receipt and distribution of mail from other places, the forwarding of mail there deposited, the sale of postage stamps, etc.

POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT. The name of one of the departments of the executive branch of the government of the United States, which has charge of the transmission of the mails and the general postal business of the country.

POST-OFFICE ORDER. A letter of credit furnished by the government, at a small charge, to facilitate the transmission of money.

POST PROLEM SUSCITATAM. After issue born, (raised.) Co.Litt. 19b.

POST ROADS. The roads or highways, by land or sea, designated by law as the avenues over which the mails shall be transported. Railway Mail Service Cases, 13 Ct.C1. 204. A "post route," on the other hand, is the appointed course or prescribed line of transportation of the mail. U. S. v. Kochersperger, 26 Fed.Cas. 803; Blackham v. Gresham, C.C.N.Y., 16 Fed. 611.

POST-TERMINAL SITTINGS. Sittings after-term. See Sittings.

POST TERMINUM. After term, or post-term. The return of a writ not only after the day assigned for its return, but after the term also, for which a fee was due. Cowell.

POST, WRIT OF ENTRY IN. In English law. An abolished writ given by statute of Marlbridge, 52 Hen. III. c. 30, which provided that when the number of alienations or descents exceeded the usual degrees, a new writ should be allowed, without any mention of degrees at all.

POSTAGE. The fee charged by law for carrying letters, packets, and documents by the public mails.

POSTAGE STAMP. A ticket issued by govern- ment, to be attached to mail-matter, that repre- sents the postage or fee paid for the transmission of such matter through the public mails.

POSTAL. Relating to the mails; pertaining to the post-office.

POSTAL CURRENCY. During a brief period following soon after the commencement of the civil war in the United States, when specie change was scarce, postage stamps were popularly used as a substitute; and the first issues of paper representatives of parts of a dollar, issued by authority of congress, were called "postal currency." This issue was soon merged in others of a more permanent character, for which the later and more appropriate name is "fractional currency." Abbott.

POSTAL SAVINGS DEPOSITORIES. The act of congress of June 25, 1910, c. 386, 36 Stat. 814 (39 U.S.C.A. § 751 et seq.), created a board of trustees (the postmaster general, the secretary of the treasury, and the attorney general) to establish such depositories. Deposits may be made by any person of ten years or over, in his or her name, or by a married woman in her own name and free from her husband's control. Deposits may be made of $1 or multiples thereof, and any person may purchase for 10 cents "postal savings stamps" and attach them to a card furnished for the purpose, and a card with ten stamps affixed will be accepted as a deposit of $1, or may be redeemed in cash. Interest at the rate of 2 per cent. a year is paid, but not on fractions of a dollar. No balance shall exceed $2,500.

Deposits may be withdrawn, in whole or in part, on demand. A depositor may surrender his deposit in sums of $20, $40, $60, $80, $100, and multiples of $100 and of $500, and receive United States bonds of corresponding denominations, bearing interest at 21/2 per cent. per annum, payable half-yearly and redeemable at the pleasure of the United States after one year, and payable in gold at the end of twenty years.

By 39 U.S.C.A. § 766, "the faith of the United States is solemnly pledged to the payment of the deposits."

POSTAL UNION. A treaty made at Berne in October, 1874, for the regulation of rates of post-age and other matters connected with the post-office between England and various other countries. See 38 & 39 Vict. c. 22; 1 Hall.Int.L. 286. Several international conferences have since been held on the subject: Paris, 1878; Lisbon, 1885; Vienna, 1891; Washington, 1897; Rome, 1906.

POSTEREA. In the common-law practice, a formal statement, indorsed on the nisi prius record, which gives an account of the proceedings at the trial of the action. Smith, Act. 167.

POSTED WATERS. In Vermont. Waters flowing through or lying upon inclosed or cultivated lands, which are preserved for the exclusive use of the owner or occupant by his posting notices (according to the statute) prohibiting all persons from shooting, trapping, or fishing thereon, under a prescribed penalty. See State v. Theriault, 70 Vt. 617, 41 A. 1030, 43 L.R.A. 290, 67 Am.St.Rep. 695.

POSTERIORA DEROGANT PRIORIBUS. Posterior things derogate from things prior. 1 Bouv. Inst. n. 90.

POSTERIORES. Lat. This term was used by the Romans to denote the descendants in a direct line beyond the sixth degree.

POSTeriority. This is a word of comparison and relation in tenure, the correlative of which is the word "priority." Thus, a man who held lands or tenements of two lords was said to hold of his more ancient lord by priority, and of his less ancient lord by posteriority. Old Nat.Brev. 94. It has also a general application in law consistent with its etymological meaning, and, as so used, it is likewise opposed to priority. Brown.

POSTERITY. All the descendants of a person in a direct line to the remotest generation. Breckinridge v. Denny, 8 Bush (Ky.) 527.

POSTHUMOUS CHILD. One born after the death of its father; or, when the Caesarean operation is performed, after that of the mother.

Quasi-posthumous child. In civil law. One who, born during the life of his grandfather or other male ascendant, was not his heir at the time he made his testament, but who by the death of his father became his heir in his lifetime. Inst. 2, 13, 2; Dig. 28, 3, 13.

POSTHUMOUS PRO NATO HABETUR. A posthumous child is considered as though born, [at the parent's death.] Hall v. Hancock, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 258, 26 Am.Dec. 598.

POSTHUMOUS WORK. Work on which original copyright has been taken out by someone to whom literary property passed before publication. Shapiro, Bernstein & Co. v. Bryan, C.C.A.N.Y., 123 F.2d 697, 699.

POSTLIMINIUM. Lat. In the civil law. A doctrine or fiction of the law by which the restoration of a person to any status or right formerly possessed by him was considered as relating back to the time of his original loss or deprivation; particularly in the case of one who, having been taken prisoner in war, and having escaped and returned to Rome, was regarded, by the aid of this fiction, as having never been abroad, and was thereby reinstated in all his rights. Inst. 1, 12, 5.

The term is also applied, in international law, to the recapture of property taken by an enemy, and its consequent restoration to its original owner.

POSTLIMINIUM FINGIT EUM QUI CAPTOS EST IN CIVITATE SEMPER FUISSE. Postliminy feigns that he who has been captured has never left the state. Inst. 1, 12, 5; Dig. 49, 51.

POSTLIMINY. See Postliminium.

POSTMAN. A senior barrister in the court of exchequer, who has precedence in motions, so called from the place where he sits. 2 Bl.Com. 28. A letter-carrier.

POSTMASTER. An officer of the United States, appointed to take charge of a local post-office and transact the business of receiving and forwarding the mails at that point, and such other business as is committed to him under the postal laws.

POSTMASTER GENERAL. The head of the post-office department. He is one of the president's cabinet.

POSTNATI. Those born after. See Post Natus.

POSTPONE. To put off; defer; delay; continue; adjourn; as when a hearing is postponed. Also to place after; to set below something else; as when an earlier lien is for some reason postponed to a later lien.

The word "postpone" carries with it the idea of deferring the doing of something or the taking effect of something until a future or later time. Gartner v. Roth, Cal., 157 P.2d 361, 363.

The word "postponement," in speaking of legal proceedings, is nearly equivalent to "continuance;" except that the former word is generally preferred when describing an adjournment of the cause to another day during the term, and the latter when the case goes over to another term. State v. Underwood, 76 Mo. 639; State v. Nathaniel, 82 La. Ann. 558, 26 So. 1008.

POSTREMO-GENITURE. Borough-English (q.v.).

POSTULATIO. Lat. Old English ecclesiastical law. A species of petition for transfer of a bishop.

Roman law. A request or petition. This was the name of the first step in a criminal prosecution, corresponding somewhat to "swearing out a warrant" in modern criminal law. The accuser appeared before the praetor, and stated his desire to institute criminal proceedings against a designated person, and prayed the authority of the magistrate therefor.

POSTULATIO ACTION’S. In Roman law. The demand of an action; the request made to the prior or plaintiff for an action or formula of suit; corresponding with the application for a writ in old English practice. Or, as otherwise explained, the actor’s asking of leave to institute his action, on appearance of the parties before the praetor. Hallifax, Civil Law, b. 3, c. 9, no. 12.

POTABLE. Suitable for drinking; drinkable.

POTENTATE. A person who possesses great power or sway; a prince, sovereign, or monarch.

By the naturalization law of the United States, an alien is required to renounce all allegiance to any foreign "prince, potentate, or sovereign whatever."

POTENTIAL. Existing in possibility but not in act; naturally and probably expected to come into existence at some future time, though not now existing; for example, the future product of grain or trees already planted, or the successive future installments or payments on a contract or engagement already made. Things having a "potential existence" may be the subject of mortgage, assignment, or sale. Campbell v. Grant Co., 36 Tex. Civ.App. 641, 82 S.W. 796; Dickey v. Waldo, 97 Mich. 255, 56 N.W. 608, 23 L.R.A 449; Long v. Hines, 40 Kan. 220, 19 P. 796, 10 Am.St.Rep. 192; Carter v. Rector, 88 Okl. 12, 210 P. 1035, 1037.

POTEST QUIS RENUNCIARE PRO SE ET SUIS JURI QUOD PRO SE INTRODUCTUM EST. Bract. 20. One may relinquish for himself and his heirs a right which was introduced for his own benefit.

POTESTAS. Lat. In the civil law. Power; authority; domination; empire. Imperium, or the jurisdiction of magistrates. The power of the father over his children, patria potestas. The authority of masters over their slaves. Inst. 1, 9, 12; Dig. 2, 1, 13, 1; Dig. 14, 1; Dig. 14, 4, 1, 4.

POTESTAS SUPREMA SEIPSUM DISSOLVERE POTEST, LIGARE NON POTEST. Supreme power can dissolve [unloose] but cannot bind itself. Branch, Princ.; Bacon.

POTIOR EST CONDITIO POSsidENTIS. Better is the condition of the possessor. Broom, Max. 215, n. 719; 6 Mass. 84; 21 Pick., Mass., 140.

POTT'S FRACTURE. A fracture of the lower part of the fibula, accompanied with injury to the ankle joint, so that the foot is dislocated outward.

POULTERY COUNTER. The name of a prison formerly existing in London. See Counter.

POUND. A place, inclosed by public authority, for the temporary detention of stray animals. Chenango County Humane Soc. v. Polmatier, 188 App.Div. 419, 177 N.Y.S. 101, 103.

A pound-overt is said to be one that is open overhead; a pound-covert is one that is close, or covered over, such as a stable or other building.

"There is no more ancient institution in the country than the Village Pound. It is far older than the King's Bench, and probably older than the kingdom." Maine, Early Hist. of Inst., p. 263.

A measure of weight. The pound avoirdupois contains 7,000 grains; the pound troy 5,760 grains.
POUND

In New York, the unit or standard of weight from which all other weights shall be derived and ascertained, is declared to be the pound, of such magnitude that the weight of a cubic foot of distilled water, at its maximum density, weighed in a vacuum with brass weights, shall be equal to sixty-two and a half such pounds. 1 Rev.St.N.Y. p. 617, 8.

Name of a denomination of English money, containing twenty shillings. It was also used in the United States, in computing money, before the introduction of the federal coinage.

POUND BREACH. The act or offense of breaking a pound, for the purpose of taking out the cattle or goods impounded. 3 Bl.Comm. 12, 146; State v. Young, 18 N.H. 544.

POUND NET. A kind of fishing net also known as a "dutch" net and sometimes, formerly, as a "pod" net. N. Car. G. S. § 113-278; Hetrick v. Page, 82 N.C. 65; Rea v. Hampton, 7 S.E. 649, 101 N.C. 51, 9 Am.St.Rep. 21. It is a wall net with wings, and a leader, together with a pocket, bowl, pot, or pound, into which the fish are guided by the wings and the leader, which is an upright net extended in a straight line to the shore. The wings are in many cases a thousand yards in length. Cent. Dict.

POUND OF LAND. An uncertain quantity of land, said to be about fifty-two acres.

See Librata Terre.

POUNDAGE. Old English law. A subsidy to the value of twelve pence in the pound, granted to the king, of all manner of merchandise of every merchant, as well denizen as alien, either exported or imported. Cowell.

Practice. An allowance to the sheriff of so much in the pound upon the amount levied under an execution. Bow v. Campbell, 2 Civ.Proc.R., N.Y., 234. The money which an owner of animals impounded must pay to obtain their release.

POUNDKEEPER. An officer charged with the care of a pound, and of animals confined there.

POUR ACQUIT. Fr. In French law. The formula which a creditor prefixes to his signature when he gives a receipt.

POUR APPUYER. For the support of, or "in the support of." Collins v. Collins, 193 So. 702, 703, 194 La. 446.

POUR APPUYER NOUVELLE DEMANDE. In support of his new action. Collins v. Collins, 194 La. 446, 193 So. 702, 703.

POUR COMPTE DE QUI IL APPARTIENT. Fr. For account of whom it may concern.

POUR FAIRE PROCLAIMER: L. Fr. An ancient writ addressed to the mayor or bailiff of a city or town, requiring him to make proclamation concerning nuisances, etc. Fitzh.Nat.Brev. 176.

POUR SEJISIR TERRES. L. Fr. An ancient writ whereby the crown seized the land which the wife of its deceased tenant, who held in capite, had for her dower, if she married without leave. It was grounded on the statute De Prerrogativa Regis, 7 (17 Edw. II. St. 1, c. 4). It is abolished by 12 Car. II. c. 24.

POURPARLER. Fr. In French law. The preliminary negotiations or bargainings which lead to a contract between the parties. As in English law, these form no part of the contract. when completed. The term is also used in this sense in international law and the practice of diplomacy.

POURPARTY. To make pourparty is to divide and sever the lands that fall to parceners, which, before partition, they held jointly and pro indiviso. Cowell.

POURPRESTURE. An inclosure. Anything done to the nuisance or hurt of the public desmesnes, or the highways, etc., by inclosure or building, endeavoring to make that private which ought to be public. The difference between a pourpresture and a public nuisance is that pourpresture is an invasion of the jus privatum of the crown; but where the jus publicum is violated it is a nuisance. Skene makes three sorts of this offense: (1) Against the crown; (2) against the lord of the fee; (3) against a neighbor. 2 Inst. 38; 1 Reeve, Eng.Law, 156.

POURSUIVANT. The king's messenger; a royal or state messenger. In the h...als' college, a functionary of lower rank than a herald, but discharging similar duties, called also "poursuivant at arms."

POURVEYANCE. In old English law. The providing corn, fuel, victuals, and other necessaries for the king's house. Cowell.

POURVEYOR, OR PURVEYOR. A buyer; one who provided for the royal household.

POUSTIE. In Scotch law. Power. See Liege Poustie. A word formed from the Latin "potestas."

POVERTY AFFIDAVIT. An affidavit, made and filed by one of the parties to a suit, that he is not able to furnish security for the final costs. The use of the term is confined to a few states. Cole v. Hoeburg, 36 Kan. 263, 13 P. 275.

In a restricted sense a "power" is a liberty or authority reserved by, or limited to, a person to dispose of real or personal property, for his own benefit, or benefit of others, or enabling one person to dispose of interest which is vested in another. In re Vanatta's Estate, 99 N.J.Eq. 339, 131 A. 515, 518; Hupp v. Union Coal & Coke Co., 284 Pa. 529, 131 A. 364, 365; Security Trust & Safe Deposit Co. v. Ward, 10 Del.Ch. 408, 93 A. 385, 388.

Real property law. An authority to do some act in relation to real property, or to the creation or “Power” is sometimes used in the same sense as “right,” as when we speak of the powers of user and disposition which the owner of property has over it, but, strictly speaking, a power is that which creates a special or exceptional right, or enables a person to do something which he could not otherwise do. Sweet.

Technically, an authority by which one person enables another to do some act for him. 2 Lil. Abr. 339.

An authority enabling a person to dispose, through the medium of the statute of uses, of an interest, vested either in himself or in another person. Sugd. Powers, 82. An authority expressly reserved to a grantor, or expressly given to another, to be exercised over lands, etc., granted or conveyed at the time of the creation of such power. Watk. Conv. 157. A proviso, in a conveyance under the statute of uses, giving to the grantor or grantee, or a stranger, authority to revoke or alter by a subsequent act the estate first granted. 1 Steph. Comm. 505; Burleigh v. Clough, 52 N. H. 267, 13 Am. Rep. 23; Griffith v. Maxfield, 66 Ark. 513, 51 S. W. 832, Bouton v. Doty, 69 Conn. 531, 37 A. 1064; Law Guarantee & Trust Co. v. Jones, 103 Tenn. 245, 58 S. W. 219.

There is a clear distinction between a power and a trust, since “powers” are never imperative, but leave the act to be done at the will of the donee of the power, while “trusts” are always imperative, and are obligatory on the conscience of the trustee. People v. Kaiser, 306 Ill. 313, 137 N. E. 826, 828; Hirschmann v. Gant, 136 S. C. 1, 134 S. E. 230, 231.

General

Appendant or appurtenant powers. Those existing where the donee of the power has an estate in the land and the power is to take effect wholly or in part out of that estate, and the estate created by its exercise affects the estate and interest of the donee of the power. Baker v. Wilmert, 288 Ill. 434, 123 N. E. 627, 629; Taylor v. Phillips, 147 Ga. 761, 95 S. E. 289.

Collateral powers. Those in which the donee of the power has no interest or estate in the land which is the subject of the power. Also called “naked powers.” 2 Washb. R. P. 305; Baker v. Wilmert, 288 Ill. 434, 123 N. E. 627, 629.

Executive power. See Executive Power.

Exclusive power. See Exclusive Power.

General and special powers in trust. A general power is in trust when any person or class of persons other than the grantee of such power is designated as entitled to the proceeds or any portion of the proceeds or other benefits to result from the alienation. A special power is in trust (1) when the disposition or charge which it authorizes is limited to be made to any person or class of persons other than the holder of the power, or (2) when any person or class of persons other than the holder is designated as entitled to any benefit from the disposition or charge authorized by the power. Cutting v. Cutting, 20 Hun (N. Y.) 360; Dana v. Murray, 122 N. Y. 612, 26 N. E. 23; 60 O. K. St. Ann. §§ 191, 192.

Inherent powers. Those which are enjoyed by the possessors of natural right, without having been received from another. Such are the powers of a people to establish a form of government, of a father to control his children. Some of these are regulated and restricted in their exercise by law, but are not technically considered in the law as powers.

Ministerial powers. A phrase used in English conveyancing to denote powers given for the good, not of the donee himself exclusively, or of the donee himself necessarily at all, but for the good of several persons, including or not including the donee also. They are so called because the donee of them is as a minister or servant in his exercise of them. Brown.

Naked power. One which is simply collateral and without interest in the donee, which arises when, to a mere stranger, authority is given of disposing of an interest, in which he had not before, nor has by the instrument creating the power, any estate whatsoever. Bergen v. Bennett, 1 Caines Cas. (N. Y.) 15, 2 Am. Dec. 281; Hunt v. Ennis, 12 Fed. Cas. 915; Atzinger v. Berger, 151 Ky. 800, 152 S. W. 971, 972, 50 L. R. A., N. S., 622.

Power of revocation. A power which is to divest or abridge an, existing estate. Distinguished from those of appointment; but the distinction is of doubtful exactness, as every new appointment must divest or revoke a former use. Sanders, Uses 154.

Power of visitation. A power vested by the founder in an appointed visitor, or the trustees or governors of an institution, to regulate its internal affairs and to appoint professors, elect scholarysters, officers, and the like. In re Norton, 97 Misc. Rep. 289, 161 N. Y. S. 710, 717.

Powers in gross. Those which give a donee of the power, who has an estate in the land, authority to create such estates only as will not attach on the interest limited to him or take effect out of his interest, but will take effect after donee’s estate has terminated. Baker v. Wilmert, 288 Ill. 434, 123 N. E. 627; Taylor v. Phillips, 147 Ga. 761, 95 S. E. 289, 290.

Constitutional Law

The right to take action in respect to a particular subject-matter or class of matters, involving more or less of discretion, granted by the constitutions to the several departments or branches of the government, or reserved to the people.
POWER

Powers in this sense are generally classified as legislative, executive, and judicial. See those titles.

Implied powers are such as are necessary to make available and carry into effect those powers which are expressly granted or conferred, and which must therefore be presumed to have been within the intention of the constitutional or legislative grant. First M. E. Church v. Dixon, 178 Ill. 260, 52 N.E. 887; In re Board of Com'rs of Cook County, 146 Minn. 103, 177 N.W. 1013, 1014;
Skelly Oil Co. v. Pruitt & McCrory, 94 Okl. 232, 221
P. 709, 710; Citizens' Electric Illuminating Co. v.
465, 467.

Law of Corporations

The right or capacity to act or be acted upon in a particular manner or in respect to a particular subject; as, the power to have a corporate seal, to sue and be sued, to make by-laws, to carry on a particular business or construct a given work. See Freiligh v. Saugeerties, 70 Hun, 589, 24
N.Y.S. 182; In re Lima & H. F. Ry. Co., 68 Hun, 252, 22 N.Y.S. 967.

For other compound terms, such as "Power of Appointment," "Power of Sale," etc., see the following titles.

POWER COUPLED WITH AN INTEREST. A right or power to do some act, together with an interest in the subject-matter on which the power is to be exercised. It is distinguished from a naked power, which is a mere authority to act, not accompanied by any interest of the donee in the subject-matter of the power. Arcweld Mfg. Co. v.
Burney, 12 Wash.2d 212, 121 P.2d 350, 355.

Is it an interest in the subject on which the power is to be exercised, or is it an interest in that which is produced by the exercise of the power? We hold it to be clear that the interest which can protect a power after the death of a person who creates it must be an interest in the thing itself.
In other words, the power must be engraven on an estate in the thing. The words themselves would seem to import this meaning. "A power coupled with an interest" is a power which accompanies or is connected with an interest. The power and the interest are united in the same person. But, if we are to understand by the word "interest" an interest in that which is to be produced by the exercise of the power, then they are never united.

The power to produce the interest must be exercised, and by its exercise is extinguished. The power ceases when the interest commences, and therefore cannot, in accurate law language, be said to be "coupled" with it. And see Min-sour v. Walker, 8 S.Ct. 929, 125 U.S. 339, 31 L.Ed. 769; Griffith v. Maxfield, 66 Ark. 513, 51 S.W. 832; Hunt v.
Ennis, 12 Fed.Cas. 915; Chase Nat. Bank of New York v.
582, 130 S.E. 276, 278.

POWER OF APPOINTMENT. A power or authority conferred by one person by deed or will upon another (called the 'donee') to appoint, that is, to select and nominate, the person or persons who are to receive and enjoy an estate or an income therefrom or from a fund, after the testator's death, or the donee's death, or after the termination of an existing right or interest. Heine-Kaiser, 306 Ill. 313, 137 N.E. 826, 828.

The distinction between a "will" and a "power of appointment" is that a will concerns the estate of the testator, while an appointment under a power concerns that of the donor of the power. Thompson v. Pew, 214 Mass. 520, 102 N.E. 122, 125.

Powers are either: Collateral, which are given to strangers; i. e., to persons who have neither a present nor future estate or interest in the land. These are also called simply "collateral," or powers not coupled with an interest. These powers are generally classified as powers relating to the land. These are called "appendant" or "appurtenant," because they strictly depend upon the estate limited to the person to whom they are given. Thus, what is an estate for life is limited to a particular person who had an interest in the estate at the execution of the deed creating the power, or to whom an estate is given by the deed, but which enabled him to create such estates only as will not attach on the interest limited to him. Of necessity, therefore, if a man seised in fee settles his estate on others, reserving to himself only a particular power, the power is in gross.

A power to a tenant for life to appoint the estate after his death among his children, a power to jointure a wife after his death, a power to raise a term of years to commence from his death among his younger children, for securing younger children portions, are all powers in gross. An important distinction is established between general and particular powers. By a general power we understand a right to appoint to whomsoever the donee pleases. By a particular power it is meant that the donee is restricted to some objects designated in the deed creating the power, as to his own children. Wharton.

A general power is beneficial when no person other than the grantee has, by the terms of its creation, any interest in its execution. A general power is in trust when any person or class of persons, other than the grantee of such power, is designated as entitled to the proceeds, or any portion of the proceeds, or other benefits to result from the

When a power of appointment among a class requires that each shall have a share, it is called a "distributive" or "non-exclusive" power; when it authorizes, but does not grant, an interest in that which is produced by the exercise of the power, it is called an "exclusive" power, and is also distributive; when it gives the power of appointing to a certain number of the class, but not to all, it is exclusive only as to the number of those in whose favor the appointing the donee either to give the whole to one of a class or to give it equally among such of them as he may select (but not to give one a larger share than the others) is called a 'mixed' power. Sugg.Powers, 448. Sweet.

POWER OF ATTORNEY. An instrument authorizing another to act as one's agent or attor-Burney, 12 Wash.2d 212, 121 P.2d 350, 354; Olive-Sternenberg Lumber Co. v. Gordon, Tex.Civ.App., 143 S.W.2d 694, 698. See Attorney.

POWER OF DISPOSITION. Every power of disposition is deemed absolute, by means of which the donee of such power is enabled in his life-time to dispose of the entire fee for his own benefit; and, where a general and beneficial power to devise the inheritance is given to a tenant for life or years, it is absolute, within the meaning of the statutes of some of the states. See Power of Appointment.

POWER OF SALE. A clause sometimes inserted in mortgages and deeds of trust, giving the mortgagee (or trustee) the right and power, on default in the payment of the debt secured, to advertise and sell the mortgaged property at public auction (but without resorting to a court for authority), satisfy the creditor out of the net proceeds, convey by deed to the purchaser, return the surplus, if any, to the mortgagor, and thereby divest the latter's estate entirely and without any subsequent right of redemption. Capron v. Attleborough Bank, 11 Gray (Mass.) 493; Appeal of Clark, 70 Conn. 195, 39 A. 155.

POYNDING. See Pointing.

POYNINGS' ACT. An act of parliament, made in Ireland, (10 Hen. VII. c. 22, A.D. 1495; ) so called because Sir Edward Poynings was lieutenant there when it was made, whereby all general statutes before then made in England were declared of force in Ireland, which, before that time, they were not. 1 Broom & H. Comm. 112.

PRACTICABLE, PRACTICABLY. Practicable is that which may be done, practiced, or accomplished, that which is performable, feasible, possible; and the adverb practicably means in a practicable manner. Streeter v. Streeter, 43 Ill. 165; Lauck v. Reis, 310 Mo. 184, 274 S.W. 827, 832; Unverzag v. Preksta, 339 Pa. 141, 13 A.2d 46, 48.

PRACTICAL. A practical construction of a constitution or statute is one determined not by judicial decision, but practice sanctioned by general consent. Bloxham v. Consumers' Electric Light, etc., Co., 36 Fla. 519, 18 So. 444, 29 L.R.A. 507, 51 Am. St. Rep. 44.

PRACTICE. Repeated or customary action; habitual performance; a succession of acts of similar kind; habit; custom; usage; application of science to the wants of men; the exercise of any art or profession. Marker v. Cleveland, 212 Mo. App. 467, 252 S.W. 95, 96; Columbia Life Ins. Co. v. Tousey, 152 Ky. 447, 153 S.W. 767, 768.

The form or mode or proceeding in courts of justice for the enforcement of rights or the redress of wrongs, as distinguished from the substantive law which gives the right or denounced the wrong. The form, manner, or order of instituting and conducting a suit or other judicial proceeding, through its successive stages to its end, in accordance with the rules and principles laid down by law or by the regulations and precedents of the courts. The term applies as well to the conduct of criminal actions as to civil suits, to proceedings in equity as well as at law, and to the defense as well as the prosecution of any proceeding. Wells Lamont Corp. v. Bowles, Em. App., 149 F.2d 364, 366.

Practice of a profession implies a continuing occupation, and a practitioner of veterinary science is one who habitually held himself out to the public as such. Beaver Brook Resort Co. v. Stevens, 76 Colo. 133, 230 P. 121, 122.

It may include pleading, but is usually employed as excluding both pleading and evidence, and to designate all the incidental acts and steps in the course of bringing matters pleaded to trial and proof, and procuring and enforcing judgment on them.

Practice of law. Not limited to appearing in court, or advising and assisting in the conduct of litigation, but embracing the preparation of pleadings, and other papers incident to actions and special proceedings, conveyancing, the preparation of legal instruments of all kinds, and the giving of all legal advice to clients. State v. Chamberlain, 132 Wash. 539, 232 P. 337, 338. It embraces all advice to clients and all actions taken for them in matters connected with the law. Rhode Island Bar Ass'n v. Lesser, 68 R.I. 14, 26 A.2d 6, 7.

Practice of medicine. The discovery of the cause and nature of disease, and the administration of remedies, or the prescribing of treatment therefor. State v. Heffernan, 40 R.I. 121, 100 A. 55, 60. Statutes, regulating the "practice of medicine" and providing penalties for failure to comply therewith, include all who practice the art of healing, State v. Collins, 178 Iowa, 73, 159 N.W. 604, 607, and diagnosing, prescribing and treating ailments are constituent parts of "practice of medicine." People v. T. Wah Hing, 79 Cal. App. 286, 249 P. 229, 230.

PRACTICE COURT. In English law. A court attached to the court of king's bench, which heard and determined common matters of business and ordinary motions for writs of mandamus, prohibition, etc. It was usually called the "bail court." It was held by one of the puisne justices of the king's bench.

PRACTICES. A succession of acts of a similar kind or in a like employment.

PRACTICKS. In Scotch law. The decisions of the court of session, as evidence of the practice or custom of the country. Bell.

PRACTITIONER. He who is engaged in the exercise or employment of any art or profession.

PRIECEPTORES. Lat. Masters. The chief clerks in chancery were formerly so called, because they had the direction of making out remedial writs. 2 Reeve, Eng. Law, 251.

PRIECEPTORES. In feudal law. A kind of benefices, so called because they were possessed by the more eminent templars whom the chief master by his authority created and called "Prceceptores Templi."

PRIECIPE. Lat. In practice. An original writ, drawn up in the alternative, commanding the defendant to do the thing required, or show the reason why he had not done it. 3 Bl. Comm. 274.

A slip of paper upon which the particulars of a writ are written. It is lodged in the office out of which the required writ is to issue. Wharton. Dict.

Also an order, written out and signed, addressed to the clerk of a court, and requesting him to issue a particular writ.

PRIECIPE IN CAPITE. When one of the king's immediate tenants in capite was deforced, his writ of right was called a writ of "prcecipe in capite."

PRIECIPE QUOD REDDAT. Command that he render. A writ directing the defendant to restore the possession of land, employed at the beginning of a common recovery.

PRIECIPE QUOD TENEAT CONVENTIONEM. The writ which commenced the action of covenant in fines, which are abolished by 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 74.

PRIECIPE, TENANT TO THE. A person having an estate of freehold in possession, against whom the precipe was brought by a tenant in tail, seeking to bar his estate by a recovery.

PRIECIPIITUM. The punishment of casting headlong from some high place.

PRIECIPUT CONVENTIONNEL. In French law. Under the regime en communautaé, when that is of the conventional kind, if the surviving husband or wife is entitled to take any portion of the common property by a paramount title and before partition thereof, this right is called by the somewhat barbarous title of the conventional "préciput," from "præcere," before, and "capere," to take. Brown.

PRIECO. Lat. In Roman law. A herald or crier.

PRIECOGNITA. Things to be previously known in order to the understanding of something which follows. Wharton.

PRIEDIA. In the civil law. Lands; estates; tenements; properties. See Predium.

PRIEDIA BELLICA. Booty. Property seized in war.

PRIEDIA STIPENDIARIA. In the civil law. Provincial lands belonging to the people.

PRIEDIA TRIBUTARIA. In the civil law. Provincial lands belonging to the emperor.

PRIEDIA VOLANTIA. In the duchy of Brabant, certain things movable, such as beds, tables, and other heavy articles of furniture, were ranked among immovables, and were called "prædia volantia," or "volatile estates." 2 Bl.Comm. 428.

PRIEDIAL. That which arises immediately from the ground: as, grain of all sorts, hay, wood, fruits, herbs, and the like.

PRIEDIAL SERVITUTE. A right which is granted for the advantage of one piece of land over another, and which may be exercised by every possessor of the land entitled against every possessor of the servient land. It always presupposes two pieces of land (præedia) belonging to different proprietors; one burdened with the servitude, called "præedium serviens," and one for the advantage of which the servitude is conferred, called "præedium dominans." Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 314.

PRIEDIAL TITHES. Such as arise merely and immediately from the ground; as, grain of all sorts, hops, hay, wood, fruit, herbs. 2 Bl.Comm. 23; 2 Steph.Comm. 722.

PRZEDICTUS. Lat. Aforesaid. Hob. 6. Of the three words, "tidem," "prædictus," and "præfatus," "idem" was most usually applied to plaintiffs or demandants; "prædictus," to defendants or tenants, places, towns, or lands; and "præfatus," to persons named, not being actors or parties. Townsh.Pl. 15. These words may all be rendered in English by "said" or "aforesaid."

PRIEDIO. Lat. In the civil law. Land; an estate; a tenement; a piece of landed property. Dig. 50, 16, 115.

PRIEDIO DOMINANS. In the civil law. The name given to an estate to which a servitude is due; the dominant tenement. Morgan v. Mason, 20 Ohio, 409, 55 Am.Dec. 464.

PRIEDIO RUSTICUM. In Roman law. A rustic or rural estate. Primarily, this term denoted an estate lying in the country, i.e., beyond the limits of the city, but it was applied to any landed estate or heritage other than a dwelling-house, whether in or out of the town. Thus, it included gardens, orchards, pastures, meadows, etc. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 316. A rural or country estate; an estate or piece of land principally destined or devoted to agriculture; an empty or vacant space of ground without buildings.

PRIEDIO SERVIENS. In the civil law. The name of an estate which suffers a servitude or easement to another estate; the servient tenement. Morgan v. Mason, 20 Ohio, 409, 55 Am.Dec. 464.

PRIEDIO SERVIT PRIEDIO. Land is under servitude to land, i.e., servitudes are not personal rights, but attach to the dominant tenement. Tray. Lat. Max. 455.

PRIEDIO URBANUM. In the civil law. A building or edifice intended for the habitation and use of man, whether built in cities or in the country. Colq. Rom. Civil Law, § 937.

PRIEDO. Lat. In Roman law. A robber. Dig. 50, 17, 126.

PRIEFATUS. Lat. Aforesaid. Sometimes abbreviated to "præfet," and "p. fat."

PRIEFECTI APOSTOLICI. Officers of the same character as the Vicarius Apostolicus (q.v.), but without the power of exercising episcopal functions. 2 Phill.Int.L. 529.

PRIEFECTURIE. In Roman law. Conquered towns, governed by an officer called a "prefect," who was chosen in some instances by the people, in others by the praetors. Butl.Hor.Jur. 29.

PRIEFECTUS URBI. Lat. In Roman law. An officer who, from the time of Augustus, had the superintendence of the city and its police, with jurisdiction extending one hundred miles from the city, and power to decide both civil and criminal cases. As he was considered the direct representative of the emperor, much that previously belonged to the prætor urbanus fell gradually into his hands. Colq.Rom. Civil Law, § 2395.

PRÆFECTUS VIGILUM. Lat. In Roman law. The chief officer of the night watch. His jurisdiction extended to certain offenses affecting the public peace, and even to larcenies; but he could inflict only slight punishments. Colq. Rom. Civil Law, § 2395.

PRÆFECTUS VILLÆ. The mayor of a town.

PRÆFINE. The fee paid on suing out the writ of covenant, on levying fines, before the fine was passed. 2 Bl.Comm. 350.

PRÆJURAMENTUM. In old English law. A preparatory oath.

PRAZELEGATUM. Lat. In Roman law. A pay-ment in advance of the whole or part of the share which a given heir would be entitled to receive out of an inheritance; corresponding generally to "advancement" in English and American law. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 762.

PRÆMIUM EMANCIPATIONIS. In Roman law. A reward or compensation anciently allowed to a father on emancipating his child, consisting of one-third of the child's separate and individual property, not derived from the father himself. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 605.

PRÆMIUM PUDICITIE. The price of chastity; or compensation for loss of chastity. A term applied to bonds and other engagements given for the benefit of a seduced female. Sometimes called "premium pudoris." 2 vels. 339, 340.

PRÆMUNIRE. In English law. An offense against the king and his government, though not subject to capital punishment. So called from the words of the writ which issued preparatory to the prosecution: "Præmunire facias A. B. quod sit coram nobis," etc.; "Cause A. B. to be forewarned that he appear before us to answer the contempt with which he stands charged." The statutes establishing this offense, the first of which was made in the thirty-first year of the reign of Edward I., were framed to encounter the papal usurpations in England; the original meaning of the offense called "præmunire" being the introduction of a foreign power into the kingdom, and creating imperium in imperio, by paying that obedience to papal process which constitutionally belonged to the king alone. The penalties of præmunire were afterwards applied to other heinous offenses. 4 Bl.Comm. 103-117; 4 Steph. Comm. 215-217.

PRÆNOMEN. Lat. Forename, or first name. The first of - the three names by which the Romans were commonly distinguished. It marked the individual, and was commonly written with one letter; as "A." for "Aulus;" "C." for "Caius,' etc. Adams, Rom.Ant. 35.

PRÆPOSITUS. In old English law. An officer next in authority to the alderman of a hundred, called "præpositus regius;" or a steward or bailiff of an estate, answering to the "wicere."

Also the person from whom descents are traced under the old canons.

PRÆPOSITUS ECCLESIZE. A church-reeve, or warden. Spelman.

PRÆPOSITUS VILLÆ. A constable of a town, or petty constable.

PRÆPROPERA CONSILIA RARO SUNT PROSPERÆA. 4 Inst. 57. Hasty counsels are rarely prosperous.

PRÆSCRIPTIO. Lat. In the civil law. That mode of acquisition whereby one becomes proprietor of a thing on the ground that he has for a long time possessed it as his own; prescription. Dig. 41, 3. It was anciently distinguished from "usucapio," (q. v.,) but was blended with it by Justinian.

PRÆSCRIPTIO EST TITULUS EX USU ET TEMPORE SUBSTANTIAM CAPIENS AB AUCTORITATE LEGIS. Co.Litt. 113. Prescription is a title by authority of law, deriving its force from use and time.

PRÆSCRIPTIONES. Lat. In Roman law. Forms of words (of a qualifying character) inserted in the formulæ in which the claims in actions were expressed; and, as they occupied an early place in the formulæ, they were called by this name, i. e., qualifications preceding the claim. For example, in an action to recover the arrears of an annuity, the claim was preceded by the words "so far as the annuity is due and unpaid," or words to the like effect, ("cujus rei dies fuit.") Brown.

PRIÉSENTARE NIHIL ALIUD EST QUAM PRIESTO DARE SEU OFFERS. To present is no more than to give or offer on the spot. Co.Litt. 120.

PRIÉSENTIA CORPORIS TOLLIT ERROREM NOMINIS; ET VERITAS NOMINIS TOLLIT ERROREM DEMONSTRATIONIS. The presence of the body cures error in the name; the truth of the name cures an error of description. Broom, Max. 637, 639, 640.
PRIESES. Lat. In Roman law. A president or governor. Called a “nomen generale,” including pro-consuls, legates, and all who governed provinces.

PRIESTARE. Lat. In Roman law. “Prcestare” meant to make good, and, when used in conjunction with the words “dare,” “facere,” “oportere,” denoted obligations of a personal character, as opposed to real rights.

PRZESTAT CAUTELA QUAM MEDELA. Prevention is better than cure. Co.Litt. 304b.

PRIESTITA ROLLS. In these were entered the sums of money which issued out of the royal treasury, by way of imprest, advance, or accommodation, in the 12th year of King John; also roll of the 7th, and one of the 14th, 15th and 16th years of the same reign. See Record Commission (1844).

PRIESTITUR PRO JUSTITIA SENTENTLzE. The presumption should be in favor of the justice of a sentence. Best, Ev. Introd. 42.

PRIESTITUR PRO LEGITIMATIONE. The presumption is in favor of legitimacy. 1 Bl. Comm. 457; 5 Coke, 98b.

PRIESTUM PRO NEGANTE. It is presumed for the negative. The rule of the house of lords when the numbers are equal on a motion. Wharton.

PRIESUMPTIO. Lat. Presumption; a presumption. Also intrusion, or the unlawful taking of anything.

PRIESUMPTIO FORTIOR. A strong presumption; a presumption of fact entitled to great weight. One which determines the tribunal in its belief of an alleged fact, without, however, excluding the possibility of its being otherwise; the effect of which is to shift the burden of producing evidence to the opposite party, and, if this proof be not made, the presumption is held for truth. Hub.PrEel.J.C. lib. 22, tit. 3, n. 16; Burrill, Circ.Ev. 66.

PRIESUMPTIO HOMINIS. The presumption of the man or individual; that is, natural presumption unfettered by strict rule.

PRIESUMPTIO JURIS. A legal presumption or presumption of law; that is, one in which the law assumes the existence of something until it is disproved by evidence; a conditional, inconclusive, or rebuttable presumption. Best, Ev. § 43.

PRIESUMPTIO JURIS ET DE JURE. A presumption of law and of right; a presumption which the law will not suffer to be contradicted; a conclusive or irrebuttable presumption.

PRIESUMPTIO MUCIANA. In Roman law. A presumption of law that property in the hands of a wife came to her as a gift from her husband and was not acquired from other sources; available only in doubtful cases and until the contrary is shown. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 560.

PRIESUMPTIO VIOLENTA PIENA PROBATIO. Co.Litt. 6b. Strong presumption is full proof.

PRZES1UMPTIONES SUNT CONJECTURIE EX SIGNO VERISIMILI AD PROBANDUM AS- SUMPTZE. Presumptions are conjectures from probable proof, assumed for purposes of evidence. J. Voet, Com. ad Pand. 1. 22, tit. 3, n. 14.

PRYETERITIO. Lat. A passing over or omission. Used in the Roman law to describe the act of a testator in excluding a given heir from the inheritance by silently passing him by, that is, neither instituting nor formally disinheriting him. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 711.

PEZETEXTU LICITI NON DEBET ADMITTI ILLICITUM. Under pretext of legality, what is illegal ought not to be admitted. Wing. Max. p. 728, max. 196.

PEZETEXTUS. Lat. A pretext; a pretense or color. Prætextu cujus, by pretense, or under pretext whereof. 1 Ld.Raym. 412.

PRZETOR. Lat. In Roman law. A municipal officer of the city of Rome, being the chief judicial magistrate, and possessing an extensive equitable jurisdiction.

PRIETOR FIDEI–COMMISSARIUS. In the civil law. A special praetor created to pronounce judgment in cases of trusts or fidei-commissa. Inst. 2, 23, 1.

PRIETORIAN LAW. See Lex Pretoria.

PRZEVARICATOR. Lat. In the civil law. One who betrays his trust, or is unfaithful to his trust. An advocate who aids the opposite party by betraying his client’s cause. Dig. 47, 15, 1.

PRIEVENTO TERMINO. In old Scotch practice. A form of action known in the forms of the court of session, by which a delay to discuss a suspension or advocacy was got the better of. Bell.

PRAGMATIC SANCTION. In French law. A solemn ordinance or decree of a sovereign dealing with matters of primal importance and regarded as constituting a part of the fundamental law of the land. It originated in the Byzantine Empire; in later European history it was especially used to designate an ordinance—of Charles VI, emperor of Germany, issued April, 1713, to settle the succession on his daughter, Maria Theresa. It was ratified by the Great Powers. On the death of the emperor, it was repudiated by Prussia, France and others, which led to the War of the Austrian Succession. Int. Encycl.
In the civil law. The answer given by the emperor on questions of law, when consulted by a corporation or the citizens of a province or of a municipality. Leç. El. Dr. Rom. § 53.

PRAGMATICA. In Spanish colonial law. An order emanating from the sovereign, and differing from a cedula only in form and in the mode of promulgation. Schm. Civil Law, Introd. 93, note.

PRAIRIE. An extensive tract of level or rolling land, destitute of trees, covered with coarse grass, and usually characterized by a deep, fertile soil. Webster. Buxton v. Railroad Co., 58 Mo. 45; Brunell v. Hopkins, 42 Iowa, 429.

PRATIQUE. A license for the master of a ship to traffic in the ports of a given country, or with the inhabitants of a given port, upon the lifting of quarantine or production of a clean bill of health.

PRAY IN AID. In old English practice. To call upon for assistance. In real actions, the tenant might pray in aid or call for assistance of another, to help him to plead, because of the feebleness or imbecility of his own estate. 3 Bl. Comm. 300.

PRAYER. The request contained in a bill in equity that the court will grant the process, aid, or relief which the complainant desires. Also, by extension, the term is applied to that part of the bill which contains this request.

It is not essential part of act, and neither enlarges nor confers powers. Portland Van & Storage Co. v. Hoss, 139 Or. 434, 9 P.2d 122, 126, 81 A.L.R. 1136.

PREAPPOINTED EVIDENCE. The kind and degree of evidence prescribed in advance (as, by statute) as requisite for the proof of certain facts or the establishment of certain instruments. It is opposed to casual evidence, which is left to grow naturally out of the surrounding circumstances.

PREAUDIENCE. The right of being heard before another. A privilege belonging to the English bar, the members of which are entitled to be heard in their order, according to rank, beginning with the king’s attorney general, and ending with barristers at large. 3 Steph. Comm. 387, note.

PREBEND. In English ecclesiastical law. A stipend granted in cathedral churches; also, but improperly, a prebendary. A simple prebend is merely a revenue; a prebend with dignity has some jurisdiction attached to it. The term "prebend" is generally confounded with "canonicate;" but there is a difference between them. The former is the stipend granted to an ecclesiastic in consideration of his officiating and serving in the church; whereas the canonicate is a mere title or spiritual quality which may exist independently of any stipend. 2 Steph. Comm. 674, note.

PREBENDARY. An ecclesiastical person serving on the staff of a cathedral, and receiving a stated allowance or stipend from the income or endowment of the cathedral, in compensation for his services.

PRECARIZE, or PRECES. Day-work which the tenants of certain manors were bound to give their lords in harvest time. Magna precaria was a great or general reaping day. Cowell.

PRECARIOUS. Liable to be returned or rendered up at the mere demand or request of another; hence held or retained only on sufferance or by permission; and by an extension of meaning, doubtful, uncertain, dangerous, very liable to break, fail, or terminate.

PRECARIOUS CIRCUMSTANCES. The circumstances of an executor are precarious, within the meaning and intent of a statute, only when his character and conduct present such evidence of improvidence or recklessness in the management of the trust-estate, or of his own, as in the opinion of prudent and discreet men endangers its security. Shields v. Shields, 60 Barb. (N.Y.) 56.

PRECARIOUS LOAN. A bailment by way of loan which is not to continue for any fixed time, but may be recalled at the mere will and pleasure of the lender.

PRECARIOUS POSSESSION. In modern civil law, possession is called "precarious" which one enjoys by the leave of another and during his pleasure. Civ. Code La. art. 3556, subd. 25.

PRECARIOUS RIGHT. The right which the owner of a thing transfers to another, to enjoy the same until it shall please the owner to revoke it.

PRECARIOUS TRADE. In international law. Such trade as may be carried on by a neutral between two belligerent powers by the mere suff erance of the latter.

PRECATORY. Having the nature of prayer, request, or entreaty; conveying or embodying a recommendation or advice or the expression of a wish, but not a positive command or direction. United States v. 15,883.55 Acres of Land in Spartanburg County, S. C., D.C.S.C., 40 F.Supp. 558, 561.

PRECATORY TRUST. A trust created by certain words, which are more like words of entreaty and permission than of command or certainty. Examples of such words, which the courts have held sufficient to constitute a trust, are "wish and request," "have fullest confidence," "heartily beseech," and the like. Rapalje & Lawrence. Keplinger v. Keplinger, 185 Ind. 81, 113 N.E. 292, 293; Simpson v. Corder, 185 Mo.App. 398, 170 S.W. 357, 358. Thomas v. Reynolds, 234 Ala. 212, 174 So. 753, 757.

PRECATORY WORDS. Words of entreaty, request, desire, wish, or recommendation, employed in wills, as distinguished from direct and imperative terms. 1 Williams, Ex'rs, 88, 89, and note; Pratt v. Miller, 23 Neb. 496, 37 N.W. 263; Wemme v. First Church of Christ, Scientist, of Portland, 110 Or. 179, 219 P. 618, 627.

PRECAUTION. Previous action; proven foresight; care previously employed to prevent mischief or to secure good result; or a measure taken beforehand; an active foresight designed to ward off possible evil or secure good results. Fegan v. Lykes Bros. S. S. Co., 198 La. 312, 3 So.2d 632, 635; Rincon v. Berg Co., Tex.Civ.App., 60 S.W.2d 811, 813.

PRECEDENCE, or PRECEDENCY. The act or state of going before; adjustment of place. The right of being first placed in a certain order.

PRECEDENCE, PATENT OF. In English law. A grant from the crown to such barristers as it thinks proper to honor with that mark of distinction, whereby they are entitled to such rank and pre- eminence as are assigned in their respective patents. 3 Steph.Comm. 274.

PRECEPT. An adjudged case or decision of a court of justice, considered as furnishing an example or authority for an identical or similar case afterwards arising or for an identical question of law.

It means that a principle of law actually presented to a court of authority for consideration and determination has, after due consideration, been declared to serve as a rule for future guidance in the same or analogous cases, but matters which merely lurk in the record and are not directly advanced or expressly decided are not precedents. Empire Square Realty Co. v. Chase Nat. Bank of City of New York, 43 N.Y.S.2d 470, 473, 181 Misc. 752; Kvos, Inc. v. Associated Press, 299 U.S. 269, 279, 57 S.Ct. 197, 81 L. Ed. 185.

A draught of a conveyance, settlement, will, pleading, bill, or other legal instrument, which is considered worthy to serve as a pattern for future instruments of the same nature.

PRECEDENT CONDITION. Such as must happen or be performed before an estate can vest or be enlarged. See Condition Precedent.

PRECEDENTS SUB SILENTIO. Silent uniform course of practice, uninterrupted though not supported by legal decisions. Calton v. Bragg, 15 East, 226; Thompson v. Musser, 1 Dall. 464, 1 L. Ed. 222.

PRECEDENTS THAT PASS SUB SILENTIO ARE OF LITTLE OR NO AUTHORITY. 16 Vin. Abr. 499.

PRECEPARTIUM. The continuance of a suit by consent of both parties. Cowell.

PRECEPT. In English and American law. An order or direction, emanating from authority, to an officer or body of officers, commanding him or them to do some act within the scope of their powers. A commandment in writing, sent out by a justice of the peace or other like officer, for the bringing of a person or record before him. Cowell. The direction formerly issued by a sheriff to the proper returning officers of cities and boroughs within his jurisdiction for the election of members to serve in parliament. 1 BI.Comm. 178. The direction by the judges or commissioners of assize to the sheriff for the summoning a sufficient number of jurors. 3 Steph.Comm. 516. The direction issued by the clerk of the peace to the overseers of parishes for making out the jury lists. 3 Steph.Comm. 516, note.

Precept is not to be confined to civil proceedings, and is not of a more restricted meaning than "process." It includes warrants and processes in criminal as well as civil proceedings. Adams v. Vose, 1 Gray, Mass., 51, 58.

In old English criminal law. Instigation to commit a crime. Bract. fol. 138b; Cowell.

In Scotch law. An order, mandate, or warrant to do some act. The precept of seisin was the order of a superior to his bailie, to give infeftment of certain lands to his vassal. Bell.

In old French law. A kind of letters issued by the king in subversion of the laws, being orders to the judges to do or tolerate things contrary to law.

PRECEPT OF CLARE CONSTAT. A deed in the Scotch law by which a superior acknowledges the title of the heir of a deceased vassal to succeed to the lands.

PRECES IN English ecclesiastical law. A right of the crown to name to the title of the heir of a deceased vassal to succeed to the lands.

PRECINS. A constable's or police district. The immediate neighborhood of a palace or court. A small geographical unit of government. An election district created for convenient localization.
of polling places. Union Pac. Ry. Co. v. Ryan, 5
S.Ct. 601, 113 U.S. 516, 28 L.Ed. 1098; Railway Co.
v. Oconto, 50 Wis. 189, 6 N.W. 607, 36 Am.Rep.
840; Rich v. Industrial Commission, 80 Utah,
511, 15 P.2d 641, 645.

PRECIE. Another form of the name of the writ-tions to the clerk of court; also spelled "preceipe," (q. v.).

PRECEPE. Another form of the name of the writ-

PRECIPITATION. Hastening occurrence of event or causing to happen or come to crisis suddenly, unexpectedly or too soon. Knock v. Industrial Acc. Commission of California, 200 Cal. 456, 253
P. 712, 714.

PRECEPITIN TEST. Precipitins are formations in the blood of an animal induced by repeated injections into its veins of the blood-serum of an animal of another species; and their importance in diagnosis lies in the fact that when the bloodserum of an animal so treated is mixed with that of any animal of the second species (or a closely related species) and the mixture kept at a temperature of about 98 degrees for several hours, a visible precipitate will result, but not so if the second ingredient of the mixture is drawn from an animal of an entirely different species. In medico-legal practice, therefore, a suspected stain or clot having been first tested by other methods and demonstrated to be blood, the question whether it is the blood of a human being or of other origin is resolved by mixing a solution of it with a quantity of blood-serum taken from a rabbit or some other small animal which has been previously prepared by injections of human blood-serum.
After treatment as above described, the presence of a precipitate will furnish strong presumptive evidence that the blood tested was of human origin. The test is not absolutely conclusive, for the reason that blood from an anthropoid ape would produce the same result, in this experiment, as human blood. But if the alternative hypothesis presented attributed the blood in question to some animal of an unrelated species (as, a dog, sheep, or horse) the precipitin test could be fully relied on, as also in the case where no precipitate resulted.

PRECIPUT. In French law. A portion of an estate or inheritance which falls to one of the coheirs over and above his equal share with the rest, and which is to be taken out before partition is made.

PRECISE. Having determinate limitations. Wall

PRECLUDE. Estop. Morris Plan Bank of Fort Worth v. Continental Nat. Bank of Fort Worth,

PRECLUDI NON. Lat. In pleading. The commencement of a replication to a plea in bar, by which the plaintiff "says that, by reason of anything in the said plea alleged, he ought not to be barred from having and maintaining his aforesaid action against him, the said defendant, because he says," etc. Steph.Pl. 440.

PRECOGNITION. In Scotch practice. Preliminary examination. The investigation of a criminal case, preliminary to committing the accused for trial. 2 Alis.Crim.Pr. 134.

PRECOGNOSCE. In Scotch practice. To examine beforehand. Arkley, 232.

PRECONIZATION. Proclamation.

PRECONTRACT. A contract or engagement made by a person, which is of such a nature as to preclude him from lawfully entering into another contract of the same nature. 1 Bish.Mar. & Div.
§§ 112, 272.

PREDECESSOR. One who goes or has gone before; the correlative of "successor." One who has filled an office or station before the present incumbent. Applied to a body politic or corporate, in the same sense as "ancestor" is applied to a natural person. Lorillard Co. v. Peper, C.C.
Mo., 65 F. 597, 598.

In Scotch law. An ancestor. 1 Kames, Eq. 371.

PREDIAL SERVITUDE. A charge laid on an estate for the use and utility of another estate belonging to another owner. Civil Code La. art.
647. See PrEedial Servitude.

PREDICATE. In logic. That which is said concerning the subject in a logical proposition; as,
"The law is the perfection of common sense."
"Perfection of common sense," being affirmed concerning the law, (the subject,) is the predicate or thing predicated. Wharton, Bourland v. Hildreth, 26 Cal. 232.

PREDOMINANT. Something greater or superior in power and influence to others with which it is connected or compared. Matthews v. Bliss, 22
Pick. (Mass.) 53.

PRE–EMPTION. In international law. The right of pre-emption is the right of a nation to detain the merchandise of strangers passing through her territories or seas, in order to afford to her subjects the preference of purchase. 1 Chit.Com.
Law, 103.

According to general modern usage the doctrine of pre-emption, as applied in time of war rests upon the distinction between articles which are contraband (q. v.) universally, and those which are contraband only under the particular circumstances of the case. The carrying of the former class entails the penalty of confiscation, either of ship or cargo or both. The latter class, while confiscable according to strict law, are sometimes merely subjected to the milder belligerent right of pre-emption, which is regarded as a fair compromise between the right of the belligerent to seize, and the claim of the neutral to export his native commodities, though immediately subservient to the purpose of hostility; 3 Phill.Int.L. 450; 1 C.Rob. 241.
The right of pre-emption is said to be rather a waiver of a greater right than a right itself; an indulgence to the neutral rather than a right of the belligerent; Ward, Contraband 196.

In ,English law. The first buying of a thing.
A privilege formerly enjoyed by the crown, of buying up provisions and other necessaries, by the intervention of the king's purveyors, for the use of his royal household, at an appraised valuation, in preference to all others, and even without consent of the owner. 1 Bl. Comm. 287; Garcia v. Callender, 125 N.Y. 307, 26 N.E. 283.

In the United States. A privilege accorded by the government to the actual settler upon a certain limited portion of the public domain, to purchase such tract at a fixed price to the exclusion of all other applicants. Nix v. Allen, 5 S.Ct. 70, 112 U.S. 129, 28 L.Ed. 675.

PRE-EMPTION CLAIMANT. One who has settled upon land subject to pre-emption, with the intention to acquire title to it, and has complied, or is proceeding to comply, in good faith, with the requirements of the law to perfect his right to it. Hosmer v. Wallace, 97 U.S. 575, 581, 24 L.Ed. 1130.

PRE-EMPTION ENTRY. See Entry.

PRE-EMPTION RIGHT. The right given to settlers upon the public lands of the United States to purchase them at a limited price in preference to others.

PRE-EMPTER. One who, by settlement upon the public land, or by cultivation of a portion of it, has obtained the right to purchase a portion of the land thus settled upon or cultivated, to the exclusion of all other persons. Dillingham v. Fisher, 5 Wis. 480; Doe v. Beck, 108 Ala. 71, 19 So. 802.

PREFECT. In French law. The name given to the public functionary who is charged in chief with the administration of the laws, in each department of the country. Merlin, Repert. See Crespin v. U.S., 18 S.Ct. 53, 168 U.S. 208, 42 L.Ed. 438. The term is also used, in practically the same sense, in Mexico. But in New Mexico, a prefect is a probate judge.

PREFER. To bring before; to prosecute; to try; to proceed with. Thus, preferring an indictment signifies prosecuting or trying an indictment.

To give advantage, priority, or privilege; to select for first payment, as to prefer one creditor over others.

PREFERENCE. The paying or securing to one or more of his creditors, by an insolvent debtor, the whole or a part of their claim, to the exclusion of the rest. The act of an insolvent debtor who, in distributing his property or in assigning it for the benefit of his creditors, pays or secures to one or more creditors the full amount of their claims or a larger amount than they would be entitled to receive on a pro rata distribution. Citizens' State Bank of Chautauqua v. First Nat. Bank of Sedan, 98 Kan. 109, 157 P. 392, 394, L.R.A. 1917A, 696. Jackson v. Coons, 285 Ky. 154, 147 S.W.2d 45, 47, 132 A.L.R. 1403. It imports the relation of existing creditors having equal equities at the time of the transfer whereby the rights of one are advanced over those of another. Adams v. City Bank & Trust Co. of Macon, Ga., C.C.A.Ga., 115 F.2d 453, 454.

The trustee in bankruptcy, to establish a recoverable "preference" under the Federal Bankruptcy Act, must show a transfer of property or money to the creditor, during insolvency and within four months of bankruptcy, that the creditor had reasonable grounds for believing that the bankrupt was then insolvent, and that the effect of the transfer was to give the creditor a greater percentage of his debt than other creditors of the same class. Walker v. Wilkinson, C.C.A.Tex., 296 F. 850, 852. There must be a parting with the bankrupt's property for the benefit of the creditor and a subsequent diminution of his estate; Continental & Commercial T. & S. Bk. v. Trust Co., 33 S.Ct. 829, 229 U.S. 435, 57 L.Ed. 1268; N. Bk. of Newport v. Bank, 32 S.Ct. 633, 225 U.S. 178, 56 L.Ed. 1042.

Also the right held by a creditor, in virtue of some lien or security, to be preferred above others (i.e., paid first) out of the debtor's assets constituting the fund for creditors. Chadbourne v. Harding, 80 Me. 580, 16 A. 248; In re Ratliff, D.C. N.C., 107 F. 80: In re Stevens, 38 Minn. 432, 38 N.W. 111.

PREFERENCE SHARE. One giving its holder a preference, either as to receipt of dividends, as to payment in case of winding up, or both. In re Schaffer Stores Co., 229 N.Y.S. 735, 739, 224 App. Div. 268.

A term used in English law to designate a new issue of shares of stock in a company, which, to facilitate the disposal of them, are accorded a priority or preference over the original shares.

PREFERENTIAL ASSIGNMENT. An assignment of property for the benefit of creditors, made by an insolvent debtor, in which it is directed that a preference (right to be paid first in full) shall be given to a creditor or creditors therein named.

PREFERENTIAL DEBTS. In bankruptcy. Those which are prior to all others; as, wages of a clerk, servant, or workman, rates due and taxes. Brett, Comm. 890.

PREFERRED. Possessing or accorded a priority, advantage, or privilege. Generally denoting a prior or superior claim or right of payment as against another thing of the same kind or class. State v. Cheraw & C. R. Co., 16 S.C. 528.

PREFERRED DEBT. A demand which has priority; which is payable in full before others are paid at all.

PREFERRED DIVIDEND. See Dividend.

PREFERRED DOCKETS. Lists of preference cases prepared by the clerks when the cases are set for trial. King v. New Orleans Ry. & Light Co., 140 La. 843, 74 So. 168, 169.

PREFERRED STOCK. See Stock.

PREFET. In French law. A chief officer invested with the superintendence of the administration of the laws in each department. Merlin, Repert.

PREGNANCY. In medical jurisprudence. The state of a female who has within her ovary or womb a fecundated germ. Dungl. Med. Dict. The existence of the condition beginning at the moment of conception and terminating with delivery of the child. State v. Loomis, 90 N.J. Law, 216, 100 A. 160, 161.
Extra uterine or ectopic pregnancy is the development of the ovum outside of the uterine cavity, as in the Fallopian tubes or ovary. Extra uterine pregnancy commonly terminates by rupture of the sac, profuse internal hemorrhage, and death if not relieved promptly by a surgical operation.

PREGNANCY, PLEA OF. A plea which a woman capitally convicted may plead in stay of execution; for this, though it is no stay of judgment, yet operates as a respite of execution until she is delivered. Brown.

PREGNANT NEGATIVE. See Negative Pregnant.

PREJUDICE. A forejudgment; bias; preconceived opinion. A leaning towards one side of a cause for some reason other than a conviction of its justice. Tegeler v. State, 130 P. 1164, 1167, 9 Okl.Cr. 138; Taylor v. F. W. Woolworth Co., 146 Kan. 841, 73 P.2d 1102, 1103.

Of judge. That which disqualifies judge is condition of mind, which sways judgment and renders judge unable to exercise his functions impartially in particular case. Evans v. Superior Court in and for Los Angeles County, 107 Cal. App. 372, 290 P. 662, 665. It refers to mental attitude or disposition of the judge toward a party to the litigation, and not to any views that he may entertain regarding the subject matter involved. State ex rel. Mitchell v. Sage Stores Co., 157 Kan. 622, 143 P.2d 652, 655.

Without prejudice. Where an offer or admission is made "without prejudice," or a motion is denied or a bill in equity dismissed "without prejudice," it is meant as a declaration that no rights or privileges of the party concerned are to be considered as thereby waived or lost, except in so far as may be expressly conceded or decided. See, also, Dismissal Without Prejudice.

PRELATE. A clergyman of a superior order, as an archbishop or a bishop, having authority over the lower clergy; a dignitary of the church. Webster.

PRELEVEMENT. Fr. In French law. A preliminary deduction; particularly, the portion or share which one member of a firm is entitled to take out of the partnership assets before a division of the property is made between the partners.

PRELIMINARY. Introductory; initiatory; preceding; temporary and provisional; as preliminary examination, injunction, articles of peace, etc.

PRELIMINARY ACT. In English admiralty practice. A document stating the time and place of a collision between vessels, the names of the vessels, and other particulars, required to be filed by each solicitor in actions for damage by such collision, unless the court or a judge shall otherwise order. Wharton.

PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION OR HEARING. See Hearing.

PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION. See Injunction.

PRELIMINARY PROOF. In insurance. The first proof offered of a loss occurring under the policy, usually sent in to the underwriters with the notification of claim.

PREMATURE LABOR. See Miscarriage.

PREMEDITATE. To think of an act beforehand, to contrive and design; to plot or lay plans for the execution of a purpose. See Deliberate.

PREMEDITATED DESIGN. In homicide cases. The mental purpose, the formed intent, to take human life. Radej v. State, 152 Wis. 503, 140 N.W. 21, 22.

PREMEDITATEDLY. Thought of beforehand, for any length of time, however short. State v. Johnson, 92 Kan. 441, 140 P. 839, 840.

PREMEDITATION. The act of meditating in advance; deliberation upon a contemplated act; plotting or contriving; a design formed to do something before it is done. State v. Spivey, 132 N.C. 989, 43 S.E. 475; Parker v. State, 24 Wyo. 491, 161 P. 552, 554.

A prior determination to do an act, but such determination need not exist for any particular period before it is carried into effect. Commonwealth v. Dreher, 274 Pa. 325, 118 A. 215, 216.

Premeditation differs essentially from will, which constitutes the crime; because it supposes, besides an actual will, a deliberation, and a continued persistence.

PREMIER. A principal minister of state; the prime minister.

PREMIER SERJEANT, THE QUEEN'S. This officer, so constituted by letters patent, has pre-audience over the bar after the attorney and solicitor general and queen's advocate. 3 Steph. Comm. (7th Ed.) 274, note.

PREMISES. That which is put before; that which precedes; the foregoing statements. Thus, in logic, the two introductory propositions of the syllogism are called the "premises," and from them the conclusion is deduced. So, in pleading, the expression "in consideration of the premises" means in consideration of the matters hereinbefore stated. Alaska Imp. Co. v. Hirsch, 119 Cal. 249, 47 P. 124; Meese v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co., C.C.A.Wash., 211 F. 254, 259.

In conveyancing. That part of a deed which precedes the habendum, in which are set forth the names of the parties with their titles and additions, and in which are recited such deeds, agreements, or matters of fact as are necessary to explain the reasons upon which the present transaction is founded; and it is here, also, the consideration on which it is made is set down.

In equity pleading. The stating part of a bill. It contains a narrative of the facts and circumstances of the plaintiff's case, and the wrongs of which he complains, and the names of the persons by whom done and against whom he seeks redress. Story, Eq. Pl. § 27.

In estates. Lands and tenements; an estate; land and buildings thereon; the subject-matter of and the certainty of the thing granted. 2 Bl. Comm. 298. Liles v. Pitts, 145 La. 650, 82 So. 735, 738.

It contains a narrative of the facts and circumstances of the plaintiff's case, and the wrongs of which he complains, and the names of the persons by whom done and against whom he seeks redress. Story, Eq. Pl. § 27.

In granting a lease, part of the rent is sometimes capitalized and paid in a lump sum at the time the lease is granted. This is called a "premiuim." When the market price exceeds the nominal or face value. Boston & M. R. R. Co. v. Salter, 104 Conn. 728, 134 A. 220, 222.

PREPARE. To provide with necessary means; to make ready; to provide with what is appropriate or necessary. Brennan v. Northern Electric Co., 72 Mont. 35, 231 P. 388, 389.

PREPONDERANCE. Greater weight of evidence, or evidence which is more credible and convincing to the mind. Button v. Metcaif, 80 Wis. 193, 49 N.W. 809. That which best accords with reason and probability. U. S. v. McCaskill, D.C.Fla., 200 F. 332. The word "preponderance" means something more than "weight"; it denotes a superiority of weight, or outweighing. The words are not synonymous, but substantially different. There is generally a "weight" of evidence on each side in case of contested facts. But juries cannot properly act upon the weight of evidence, in favor of the one having the onus, unless it overbear, in some degree, the weight upon the other side. Mathes v. Aggler & Musser Seed Co., 178 P. 713, 715, 179 Cal. 697; Barnes v. Phillips, 184 Ind. 415, 111 N.E. 419. See, also, Weight of Evidence.

It rests with that evidence which, when fairly considered, produces the stronger impression, and has the greater weight, and is more convincing as to its truth when weighed against the evidence in opposition thereto. S. Yamamoto v. Puget Sound Lumber Co., 84 Wash. 411, 146 P. 861, 863; but it does not mean greater number of witnesses, but by the greater weight of all evidence, which does not necessarily mean the greater number of witnesses, but opportunity for knowledge, information possessed, and manner of testifying determines the weight of testimony. Garver v. Garver, 52 Colo. 227, 121 P. 165, 166, Ann.Cas.1913D, 674.

Preponderance of evidence may not be determined by the number of witnesses, but by the greater weight of all evidence, which does not necessarily mean the greater number of witnesses, but opportunity for knowledge, information possessed, and manner of testifying determines the weight of testimony. Garver v. Garver, 52 Colo. 227, 121 P. 165, 166, Ann.Cas.1913D, 674.

PREROGATIVE. An exclusive or peculiar privilege. The special power, privilege, immunity, or advantage vested in an official person, either generally, or in respect to the things of his office, or in an official body, as a court or legislature. Attorney General v. Blossom, 1 Wis. 317; Attorney General v. Eau Claire, 37 Wis. 443.

In English law. A power or will which is discretionary, and above and uncontrolled by any other will. That special pre-eminence which the king (or queen) has over and above all other persons, in right of his (or her) regal dignity. A term used to denote those rights and capacities which the sovereign enjoys alone, in contradistinction to others. 1 Bl.Comm. 239. It is sometimes applied by law writers to the thing over which the power or will is exercised, as fiscal prerogatives, meaning king's revenues; 1 Hallieck, Int. L. 147.

PREROGATIVE COURT. In English law. A court established for the trial of all testamentary causes, where the deceased left bona notabilia within two different dioceses; in which case the probate of wills belonged to the archbishop of the province, by way of special prerogative. And all causes relating to the wills, administrations, or legacies of such persons were originally cognizable herein, before a judge appointed by the archbishop, called the "judge of the prerogative court," from whom an appeal lay to the privy council. 3 Bl.Comm. 66; 3 Steph.Comm. 432.

In New Jersey the prerogative court is the court of appeal from decrees of the orphans' courts in the several counties of the state. The court is held before the chancellor, under the title of the "ordinary." Flanigan v. Guggenheim Smelting Co., 63 N.J.L. 647, 44 A. 762; Robinson v. Fair, 128 U.S. 53, 9 S.Ct. 30, 32 L. Ed. 415.

PREROGATIVE LAW. That part of the common law of England which is more particularly applicable to the king. Com. Dig. tit. "Ley," A.

PREROGATIVE WRITS. In English law, the name is given to certain judicial writs issued by the courts only upon proper cause shown, never as a mere matter of right, the theory being that they involve a direct interference by the government with the liberty and property of the subject, and therefore are justified only as an exercise of the extraordinary power (prerogative) of the crown. In America, a theory has sometimes been advanced that these writs should issue only in cases publici juris and those affecting the sovereignty of the state, or its franchises or prerogatives, or the liberties of the people. But their issuance is now generally regulated by statute, and the use of the term "prerogative," in describing them, amounts only to a reference to their origin and history. These writs are the writs of mandamus, procendo, prohibition, quo warranto, habeas corpus, and certiorari. Click v. Click, 98 W. Va. 419, 127 S.E. 194, 195.

PRES. L. Fr. Near. Cy pres, so near; as near. See Cy Pres.

PRESBYTER. Lat. In civil and ecclesiastical law. An elder; a presbyter; a priest. Cod. 1, 3, 6, 20; Nov. 6.

PRESBYTERIAN SYSTEM. That type of church organization in which the congregation is but a unit in a larger body which governs. Doughty v. Herr, 97 Ind.App. 427, 185 N.E. 657, 658.

PRESBYTERIUM. That part of the church where divine offices are performed; formerly applied to the choir or chancel, because it was the place appropriated to the bishop, priest, and other clergy, while the laity were confined to the body of the church. Jacob.

PRESCRIBABLE. That to which a right may be acquired by prescription.

PRESCRIBE. To assert a right or title to the enjoyment of a thing, on the ground of having hitherto had the uninterrupted and immemorial enjoyment of it.

To lay down authoritatively as a guide, direction, or rule; to impose as a peremptory order; to dictate; to point; to direct; to give as a guide, direction, or rule of action; to give law. State v. Truax, 130 Wash. 69, 226 P. 259, 260, 33 A.L.R. 1206; McMahon v. Devlin, 254 N.Y. 397, 173 N.E. 560, 561.

To direct; define; mark out. Field v. Marye, 83 Va. 882, 3 S.E. 707.

In modern statutes relating to matters of an administrative nature, such as procedure, registration, etc., it is usual to indicate in general terms the nature of the proceedings to be adopted, and to leave the details to be prescribed or regulated by rules or orders to be made for that purpose in pursuance of an authority contained in the act. Sweet. Mansfield v. People, 164 Ill. 611, 45 N.E. 976.

In a medical sense prescribe means to direct, designate, or order use of a remedy. State v. Whipple, 143 Minn. 403, 173 N.W. 801, 802.

PRESCRIPTION. A direction of remedy or remedies for a disease and the manner of using them; a formula for the preparation of a drug and medicine. People v. Cohen, 94 Misc. 355, 157 N.Y.S. 591, 593.
PRESCRIPTION

International Law

Acquisition of sovereignty over a territory through continuous and undisputed exercise of sovereignty over it during such a period as is necessary to create under the influence of historical development the general conviction that the present condition of things is in conformity with international order. State of Arkansas v. State of Tennessee, Ark. & Tenn., 60 S.Ct. 1026, 1030, 310 U.S. 563, 84 L.Ed. 1362.

Real Property Law

To create an easement by “prescription,” the use must have been open, continuous, exclusive, and under claim of right for statutory period. Burk v. Diers, 102 Neb. 721, 169 N.W. 263, 264.

“Prescription” is the term usually applied to incorporeal hereditaments, while “adverse possession” is applied to lands. Hindley v. Metropolitan EL R. Co., 85 N.Y.S. 561, 42 Misc. 56.

In Louisiana, prescription is defined as a manner of acquiring the ownership of property, or discharging debts, by the effect of time, and under the conditions regulated by law. Each of these prescriptive rights has its special and particular definition. The prescription by which the owner or property is acquired, is a right by which a mere possessor acquires the ownership of a thing which he possesses by the continuance of his possession during the time fixed by law. The prescription by which debts are released, is a peremptory and perpetual bar to every species of action, real or personal, when the creditor is regulated by law.

There is a distinction between title by “limitation” and a “prescriptive title,” in that the latter is based upon a presumptive grant to the property or use, while the former is not. Abel v. Love, 81 Ind. App. 328, 143 N.E. 515, 520, while the distinction between a highway by prescription and one by dedication is that “prescription” is an adverse holding under color of right, while a “dedication,” whether expressed or implied, rests upon the consent of the owner. Hatch Bros. Co. v. Black, 25 Wyo. 416, 171 P. 267, 270.

“Prescription” and “custom” are frequently confounded in common parlance, arising perhaps from the fact that immemorial usage was essential to both of them; but, strictly, they materially differ from one another, in that prescription is properly a local impersonal usage, such as borough-English, or postremogeniture, which is annexed to a given estate, while prescription is simply personal, as that a certain man and his ancestors, or those whose estate he enjoys, have immemorially exercised a right of pasture-common in a certain parish, and usage differs from both, for it may be either to persons or places. Again, prescription has its origin in a grant, evidenced by usage, and is allowed on account of its loss, either actual or supposed, and therefore only those things can be prescribed for which could be raised by a grant previously to 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, § 2; but this principle does not necessarily hold in the case of custom. Wharton; Olin v. Kingsbury, 168 N.Y.S. 766, 770, 181 App. Div. 348.

In General

Corporations by prescription. In English law. Those which have existed beyond the memory of man, and therefore are looked upon in law to be well created, such as the city of London.

Prescription act. The statute 2 & 3 Wm. IV. c. 71, passed to limit the period of prescription in certain cases.

Prescription in a quæ estate. A claim of prescription based on the immemorial enjoyment of the right claimed, by the claimant and those former owners “whose estate” he has succeeded to and holds. Donnell v. Clark, 19 Me. 182.

Time of prescription. The length of time necessary to establish a right claimed by prescription or a title by prescription. Before the act of 2 & 3 Wm. IV. c. 71, the possession required to constitute a prescription must have existed “time out of mind” or “beyond the memory of man,” that is, before the reign of Richard I.; but the time of prescription, in certain cases, was much shortened by that act. 2 Steph.Comm. 35.

PRESENCE

PRESENCE OF AN OFFICER. An offense is committed by “presence” or “view” of officer, within rule authorizing arrest without warrant, when officer sees act constituting it, though at distance, or when circumstances within his observation give probable cause for belief that defendant has committed offense, or when he hears disturbance created by offense and proceeds at once to scene, or if offense is continuing, or has not been fully consummated when arrest is made. Kennington-Saenger, Inc., V. Wicks, 168 Miss. 566, 151 So. 549, 551. Mantee v. State, 210 Wis. 1, 245 N.W. 683, 684.

PRESENCE OF THE COURT. A contempt is in the “presence of the court,” if it is committed in the ocular view of the court, or where the court has direct knowledge of the contempt. People v. Cochrane, 307 Ill. 126, 138 N.E. 291, 293.

PRESENCE OF THE TESTATOR. Will is at-tested in presence of testator if witnesses are present in presence of testator if witnesses are within range of testator’s senses. In re Demaris’ Estate, 166 Or. 36, 110 P.2d 571, 585, 586.

PRESENT, v. In English ecclesiastical law. To offer a clerk to the bishop of the diocese, to be instituted. 1 Bl.Comm. 389.

In criminal law. To find or represent judicially; used of the official act of a grand jury when they take notice of a crime or offense from their own knowledge or observation, without any bill of indictment laid before them. To lay before judge, magistrate, or governing body for action of Collsideration; submit as a petition or remonstrance for a decision or settlement to proper authorities. Haynes v. State, 108 Tex.Cr.R. 62, 299 S.W. 234, 235.

In the law of negotiable instruments. Primarily, to present is to tender or offer. Thus, to present a bill of exchange for acceptance or payment is to exhibit it to the drawee or acceptor, (or his authorized agent,) with an express or implied demand for acceptance or payment. Byles, Bills, 183, 201.

Claims are "presented" to the probate court when placed in the custody of the court, or filed or made a matter of record therein, State v. Probate Court of Hennepin County, 145 Minn. 344, 177 N.W. 354, 11 A.L.R. 242; and to present claim against city, within statute providing that claims for damages against the city must be "presented" to the city or town council and filed with the city or town clerk, means to hand to and leave with. Titus v. City of Montesano, 106 Wash. 608, 181 P. 43, 46.

PRESENT, n. A gift; a gratuity; anything presented or given.

PRESENT, adj. Now existing; at hand; relating to the present time; considered with reference to the present time.

Present conveyance. A conveyance made with the intention that it take effect at once and not at a future time. Prior v. Newsom, 144 Ark. 593, 223 S.W. 21, 22.

Present enjoyment. The immediate or present possession and use of an estate or property, as distinguished from such as is postponed to a future time.

Present estate. An estate in immediate possession; one now existing, or vested at the present time; as distinguished from a future estate, the enjoyment of which is postponed to a future time.

Present interest. One which entitles the owner to the immediate possession of the property.

Present time. A period of appreciable and generally considerable duration within which certain transactions are to take place. Corscot v. State, 178 Wis. 661, 190 N.W. 465, 468.

Present use. One which has an immediate existence, and is at once operated upon by the statute of uses.

PRESENTATION. In ecclesiastical law. The act of a patron or proprietor of a living in offering or presenting a clerk to the ordinary to be instituted in the benefice.

PRESENTATION OFFICE. The office of the lord chancellor’s official, the secretary of presentations, who conducts all correspondence having reference to the twelve canonicis and six hundred and fifty livings in the gift of the lord chancellor, and draws and issues the fiats of appointment. Sweet.

PRESENTATIVE ADVOWSON, See Advowson.

PRESENTEE. In ecclesiastical law. A clerk who has been presented by his patron to a bishop in order to be instituted in a church.

PRESENTER. One that presents.

PRESENTLY. Immediately; now; at once. A right which may be exercised "presently" is opposed to one in reversion or remainder.

PRESENTMENT.

Criminal Practice

The written notice taken by a grand jury of any offense, from their own knowledge or observation, without any bill of indictment laid before them at the suit of the government. 4 Bl. Comm. 301; Bennett v. Kalamazoo Circuit Judge, 183 Mich. 200, 150 N.W. 141, 142, Ann.Cas. 1916E, 223. Presentments are also made in courts-leet and courts-baron, before the stewards. Steph. Comm. 644.

In an extended sense, the term includes not only presentments properly so called, but also inquisitions of office and indictments found by a grand jury. 2 Hawk. Pl. Cr. c. 25, § 1.

An informal statement in writing, by the grand jury, representing to the court that a public offense has been committed which is triable in the county, and that there is reasonable ground for believing that a particular individual named or described therein has committed it. Eason v. State, 11 Ark. 482; State v. Kiefer, 90 Md. 165, 44 A. 1043. An accusation of crime, made by a grand jury from their own knowledge or from evidence furnished them by witnesses or by one or more of their members. In re Report of Grand Jury of Baltimore City, 152 Md. 616, 137 A. 370, 372.

The difference between a presentment and an inquisition is this: that the former is found by a grand jury authorized to inquire of offenses generally, whereas the latter is an accusation found by a jury specially returned to inquire concerning the particular offense. 2 Hawk.P1.Cr. c. 25, § 6.

An indictment differs from a presentment in that the former must be indorsed "A true bill," followed by the signature of the grand jury foreman, whereas a presentment is to be signed by all the grand jurors, and hence does not have to be indorsed "A true bill." Martin v. State, 127 Tenn. 324, 155 S.W. 129, 130.

The distinction between a special presentment and a bill of indictment, even under the old practice, was very thin; and in Georgia even this distinction has been abolished in practice for many years. The solicitor is not now required to frame any indictment on a special presentment, but the special presentment of the grand jury is returned into court, and upon it the defendant is arraigned and tried. It has the same force and effect as a bill of indictment. The only formal difference between the two is that a prosecutor prefers a bill of indictment, and a special presentment has no prosecutor, but, in theory, originates with the grand jury (Progress Club v. State, 12 Ga.App. 174, 76 S.E. 1029, 1030). Even this difference between a bill of indictment and a special presentment no longer exists, and the finding of the grand jury is prepared by the solicitor-general and called a bill of indictment, or a special presentment, at his will. Head v. State, 32 Ga.App. 331, 123 S.E. 34.

Negotiable Instruments

The production of a bill of exchange to the drawee for his acceptance, or to the drawer or acceptor for payment; or of a promissory note to the party liable, for payment of the same.
PRESENTS. The present instrument. The phrase "these presents" is used in any legal document to designate the instrument in which the phrase itself occurs.

PRESERVATION. Keeping safe from harm; avoiding injury, destruction, or decay. This term always presupposes a real or existing danger. State ex rel. Pollock v. Becker, 289 Mo. 660, 233 S.W. 641, 649. It is not creation, but the saving of that which already exists, and implies the continuance of what previously existed. McKeon v. Central Stamping Co., C.C.A.N.J., 264 F. 385, 387.

PRESERVE. With reference to foodstuffs, to prepare in such a manner as to resist decomposition or fermentation; to prevent from spoiling by the use of preservative substances with or without the use of the agency of heat. U. S. v. Dodson, D.C.Cal., 268 F. 397, 403. The word "preserved," when applied to meat, implies that it has been so processed that its preservation is of permanent character. U. S. v. Conkey & Co., 12 Ct.Cust.App. 552, 554.

PRESIDE. To occupy the place of authority or of president, chairman, moderator, etc., to direct, control or regulate proceedings as chief officer or to preside at public meetings, to preside over the senate. Drake v. Drake, 187 Ga. 423, 1 S.E.2d 573, 575. To preside over a court is to "hold" it,—to direct, control, and govern it as the chief officer. A judge may "preside" whether sitting as a sole judge or as one of several judges. Smith v. People, 47 N.Y. 334.

PRESIDENT. One placed in authority over others; a chief officer; a presiding or managing officer; a governor, ruler, or director. The chairman, moderator, or presiding officer of a legislative or deliberative body, appointed to keep order, manage the proceedings, and govern the administrative details of their business.

The chief executive magistrate of a state or nation, particularly under a democratic form of government; or of a province, colony, or dependency.

In the United States, the word is commonly used in reference to the private as well as public character of the nation's chief executive. U. S. v. Metzdorf, D.C.Mont., 252 F. 933, 937.

In English law. A title formerly given to the king's lieutenant in a province; as the president of Wales. Cowell.

This word is also an old though corrupted form of "precedent," (q. v.,) used both as a French and English word. Le president est rare. Dyer, 136.

PRESIDENT JUDGE. A title sometimes given to the presiding judge. It was formerly used in England and is now used in the courts of common pleas in Pennsylvania. So in the old Virginia court of appeals. The lord chief justice is now permanent president of the high court of justice in England. The title president is said to have a high Norman flavor. Inderwick, King's Peace 225.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL. In English law. A great officer of state; a member of the cabinet. He attends on the sovereign, proposes business at the council-table, and reports to the sovereign the transactions there. 1 Bl. Comm. 230.

PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES. The official title of the chief executive officer of the federal government in the United States.

PRESIDENTIAL ELECTORS. A body of electors chosen in the different states, whose sole duty it is to elect a president and vice-president of the United States. Each state appoints, in such manner as the legislature thereof may direct, a number of electors equal to the whole number of senators and representatives to which the state is entitled in congress. Const. U. S. art. 2, § 1; McPherson v. Blacker, 13 S.Ct. 3, 146 U.S. 1, 36 L.Ed. 869. The usual method of appointment is by general ballot, so that each voter in a state votes for the whole number of electors to which his state is entitled.

PRESIDING JUDGE. This term, in statutes requiring exceptions to be signed by the judge who presides at the trial, means the judge presiding at the trial of which a review is sought; hence exceptions saved at a first trial, contained in bill of exceptions signed by the judge presiding at a second trial, are not reviewable. Tucker v. Yandow, 100 Vt. 169, 135 A. 600, 601.

PRESS. In old practice. A piece or skin of parchment, several of which used to be sewed together in making up a roll or record of proceedings. 1 Bl. Comm. 183; Townsh. Pl. 486.

Metaphorically, the aggregate of publications issuing from the press, or the giving publicity to one's sentiments and opinions through the medium of printing; as in the phrase "liberty of the press."

PRESSING SEAMEN. See Impressment.

PRESSING TO DEATH. See Peine Forte et Dure.

PREST. In old English law. A duty in money to be paid by the sheriff upon his account in the exchequer, or for money left or remaining in his hands. Cowell.

PREST MONEY. A payment which binds those who receive it to be ready at all times appointed, being meant especially of soldiers. Cowell.

PRESTATION. In old English law. A presting or payment of money. Cowell. A payment or performance; the rendering of a service.

In international law. The term is sometimes used of a right by which neutral vessels may be appropriated by way of hire by a belligerent on payment of freight beforehand. In 1870 the Prussian troops sank six British vessels to obstruct... navigation in the river Seine. Indemnification was subsequently made. 1 Halleck, Int. L. Bak-er's Ed. 520.

PRESTATION MONEY. A sum of money paid by archdeacons yearly to their bishop; also purvey-ance. Cowell.

PRESTINARY, or PRESTIMONIA. In canon law. A fund or revenue appropriated by the founder for the subsistence of a priest, without being erected into any title or benefice, chapel, prebend, or priory. It is not subject to the ordi-nary; but of it the patron, and those who have a right from him, are the collators. Wharton.

PREVIOUSLY. Fit to be assumed as true in ad-ance of conclusive evidence; credibly deduced; fair to suppose; by reasonable presumption or inference; what appears to be entitled to belief without direct evidence. Kurth v. Continental Life Ins. Co., 234 N.W. 201, 202, 211 Iowa 736; Mitchell v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of U. S., 205 N.C. 726, 172 S.E. 495, 496.

PRESUME. To assume beforehand. Hickman v. Union Electric Light & Power Co., Mo.Sup., 226 S.W. 570, 576. In a more technical sense, to believe or accept upon probable evidence. It is not so strong a word as "infer"; Morford v. Peck, 46 Conn. 385; though often used with substantially the same meaning; State v. Schuck, 51 N.D. 873, 201 N.W. 342, 345.

PRESUMPTICO, See Presumption; Presumption.

PREJUDICE. Of fact. An inference affirmative or disaffirmative of the truth or falsehood of any proposition or fact drawn by a process of probable reasoning in the absence of actual cer-tainty of its truth or falsehood, or until such cer-tainty can be ascertained. Best, Pres. § 3.

An inference affirmative or disaffirmative of the existence of a disputed fact, drawn by a judicial tribunal, by a process of probable reasoning, from some one or more matters of fact, either admitted in the cause or otherwise satis-fied, is established. Best, Pres. § 12. An inference as to the existence of a fact not known, arising from its con-nection with the facts that are known, and founded upon a knowledge of human nature and the motives which are known to influence human conduct. Hawes v. State of Georgia, 42 S.Ct. 204, 258 U.S. 1, 66 L.Ed. 431. An infer-ence as to the existence of some fact drawn from the exist-ence of some other fact; an inference which common sense draws from circumstances usually occurring in such cases. 1 Phil.Ev. 436; 3 B. & Ad. 890. A strong probability or reasonable supposition. In re Van Tassell's Will, 196 N.Y.S. 491, 494, 119 Misc. 478. That which may be assumed without proof, or taken for granted as self-evident result of human reason and experience. Watkins v. Prudential Ins. Co. of America, 315 Pa. 497, 173 A. 644, 647, 95 A.L.R. 869.

Presumptions of fact are not the subject of fixed rules, but are merely natural presumptions, such as appear, from common experience, to arise from the particular circum-stances of any case. Some of these are "founded upon a knowledge of the human character, and of the motives, passions, and feelings by which the mind is usually in-fluenced." 1 Stark, Ev. 27. They may be said to be the conclusions drawn by the mind from the natural connec-tion of the circumstances disclosed in each case, or, In other words, from circumstantial evidence.

Of Law. A rule of law that courts and judges shall draw a particular inference from a particular fact, or from particular evidence, unless and un-till the truth of such inference is disproved. Steph. Ev. 4; Lane v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co., 132 Mo. 4, 33 S.W. 645. A rule which, in certain cases, either forbids or dispenses with any exterior inquiry. 1 Greenl. § 14.

A consequence which the law or the judge draws from a known fact to a fact unknown. In re Cowdry's Will, 77 Vt. 359, 60 A. 141, 142. A rule of law laid down by the judge and applying to evidence is known as a "fact certain in consequence" as to the duty of production of other evidence by the opponent. If the opponent does offer evidence to the contrary, the presumption disappears, and the case stands upon the facts and the reasonable inferences to be drawn therefrom. Kramer v. Nichols-Chandler Home Building & Brokerage Co., 103 Okl. 208, 229 P. 767, 768. A conclusion, which, in the absence of evidence upon the exact question, the law draws from other proof made or from facts judicially noticed or both, the burden of proof cast by it being satisfied by the presentation of evidence sufficient to con-vince the jury that the probabilities of truth are against the party upon whom the presumption relieves of the burden of proof. State ex rel. Detroit Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Ellison, 268 Mo. 239, 187 S.W. 23, 26. Presumptions of law are divided into conclusive presumptions and disputable presumptions.

A conclusive presumption, called also an "absolute" or "irrebuttable" presumption, is a rule of law determining the quantity of evidence requisite for the support of a particular averment which is not permitted to be overcome by any proof that the fact is otherwise. 1 Greenl.Ev. § 15; U. S. v. Clark, 5 Utah, 226, 14 P. 288. It is an inference which the court will draw from the proof, which no evi-dence, however strong, will be permitted to overturn. Lyon v. Guild, 5 Heisk. Tenn., 178, 182; Best, Pres. § 20.

A disputable presumption, called also an "inconclusive" or "rebuttal" presumption, is an inference of law which holds good until it is invalidated by proof or a stronger presumption. Best, Pres. § 29; Livingston v. Livingston, 4 Johns.Ch., N.Y., 287, 8 Am.Dec. 562.

Mixed. There are also certain mixed presumptions, or presumptions of fact recognized by law, or presumptions of mixed law and fact. These are certain presumptive inferences, which, from their strength, importance, or frequent occurrence, attract, as it were, the observation of the law. The presumption of a "lost grant" falls with-in this class. Best, Ev. 436. See Dickson v. Wilkin-son, 3 How. 57, 11 L.Ed. 491.

Distinction. The distinctions between presumptions of law and presumptions of fact are, first, that in regard to presumptions of law a certain in-ference must be made whenever the facts appear which furnish the basis of the inference; while in case of other presumptions a discretion more or less extensive is vested in the tribunal as to draw-ing the inference. 9 B. & C. 643. Second, in case. of presumptions of law, the court may draw the inference whenever the requisite facts are de-veloped in pleading; Steph. Pl. 382; while other pre-sumptions can be made only by the intervention of a jury. Presumptions of law are reduced to fixed rules, and form a part of the system of juris-prudence to which they belong; presumptions of fact are derived wholly and directly from the cir-cumstances of the particular case, by means of the common experience of mankind. 2 Stark. Ev. 684; Douglass v. Mitchell's Ex'r, 35 Pa. 440.

It has been suggested as the characteristic distinction between presumptions of law and presumptions of fact, either simple or mixed, that when the former are disregarded the new trial is granted as matter of right, but that the disregard of any of the latter, however strong and obvious, is only ground for a new trial at the discretion of the court; Chamb.Best, Ev. § 327; 1 Term 167; Turnley v. Black, 44 Ala. 159; Goggans v. Monroe, 31 Ga. 331. A presumption of law is a juridical postulate that a particular predicative is universally assignable to a particular subject. A presumption of fact is a logical argument from a fact to a fact; or, as the distinction is put, it is an argument which infers a fact otherwise doubtless from a fact which is proved. 2 Whart.Ev. § 1226; Smith v. Gardner, 36 Neb. 741, 55 N.W. 245.

Presumptions are divided into _presumptiones juris et de jure_, otherwise called "irrebuttable presumptions," (often, but not necessarily, fictitious,) which the law will not suffer to be rebutted by any counter-evidence; as, that an infant under seven years is not responsible for his actions; _presumptiones juris tantum_, which hold good in the absence of counter-evidence, but against which counter-evidence may be adduced; and _præsumptio hominis_, which are not necessarily conclusive, though no proof to the contrary be adduced. Mozley & Whiteley.

A natural presumption is that species of presumption, or process of probable reasoning, which is exercised by persons of ordinary intelligence, in inferring one fact from another, without reference to any technical rules. Otherwise called "præsumptio hominis." Burrrill, Circ. Ev. 11, 12, 22, 24.

Legitimate presumptions have been denominated "violent" or "probable," according to the amount of weight which attaches to them. Such are drawn from inadequate grounds are termed "light" or "rash" presumptions. Brown.

Evidence and Presumptions

Presumption of Innocence. Conclusion drawn by law in favor of one brought to trial on criminal charge, requiring acquittal unless guilt is established by sufficient evidence. Blin v. United States, C.C.A.II., 68 F.2d 484, 487.

Presumption of Survivorship. A presumption of fact, to the effect that one person survived another, applied for the purpose of determining a question of succession or similar matter, in a case where the two persons perished in the same catastrophe, and there are no circumstances extant to show which of them actually died first, except those on which the presumption is founded, viz., differences of age, sex, physical condition.

Presumptive. Resting on presumption; created by or arising out of presumption; inferred; assumed; supposed; as, "presumptive" damages, evidence, heir, notice, or title. See those titles.

Presumptive Evidence. This term has several meanings in law. 1 Wig. Evi. § 25, n. 3.
PRETEXT

(1) Any evidence which is not direct and positive; the proof of minor or other facts incidental to or usually connected with the fact sought to be proved which, when taken together, inferentially establish or prove the fact in question to a reasonable degree of certainty; evidence drawn by human experience from the connection of cause and effect and observation of human conduct; the proof of facts from which, with more or less certainty, according to the experience of mankind of their more or less universal connection, the existence of other facts can be deduced. In this sense the term is nearly equivalent to "circumstantial" evidence. See 1 Starkie, Ev. 558; 2 Saund. Pl. & Ev. 673; State v. Kornstett, 62 Kan. 221, 61 P. 805, 85 Kan. 192; Kibbey v. U. S., 132 F. 32; 2 & 3 Doug. 720; 7 & 8 Doug. 251; 17 & 18 Doug. 288, 810. Best says presumptive evidence is as original as direct, and that presumption of a fact is as good as any other proof when not with strict accuracy; for presumptive evidence is not necessarily and in all cases what is usually understood by circumstantial evidence. See 1 Stark.Ev. 478; Whart.Ev. 1, 2, 15. The word presumption imports an inference from facts known, based upon previous experience of the ordinary connection between the two, and, the word itself implies a certain relation between fact and inference. Circumstantial evidence, generally, necessarily leads to particular inferences; for the facts may be indisputable, and yet their relation to the principal fact may be only apparent, not real; and even where the connection is real, the deduction may be erroneous. Circumstantial and presumptive evidence differ therefore as genus and species. Will, Circ.Ev. 17.

(2) Evidence which must be received and treated as true and competent until rebutted by other testimony; as, where a, statute provides that certain facts shall be presumptive evidence of guilt, of title, etc. State v. Mitchell, 119 N.C. 784, 25 S.E. 783; State v. Intoxicating Liquors, 80 Me. 57, 13 A. 794.

(3) Also, it means evidence that admits of explanation or contradiction by other evidence, as distinguished from conclusive evidence. Burrell, Circ. Ev. 89. "Presumptive evidence" is synonymous with prima facie evidence. State v. Simon, 163 Minn. 317., 203 N.W. 989, 990; Watson v. Rollins, 18 Ala. App. 125, 90 So. 60, 61. See, also, Presumption; Prima Facie Evidence.

PR T. In French law. Loan. A contract by which one of the parties delivers an article to the other, to be used by the latter, on condition of his returning, after having used it, the same article in nature or an equivalent of the same species and quality. Duverger.

PRET A INTEAT. Loan at interest. A contract by which one of the parties delivers to the other a sum of money, or commodities, or other movable or fungible things, to receive for their use a profit determined in favor of the lender. Duverger.

PRAT A USAGE. Loan to use. A contract by which one of the parties delivers an article to the other, to be used by the latter, the borrower agrees to return the specific article after having used it. Duverger. A contract identical with the commodatum (q. v.) of the civil law.

PRIT DE CONSOMMATION. Loan for consumption. A contract by which one party delivers to the other a certain quantity of things, such as are consumed in the use, on the undertaking of the borrower to return to him an equal quantity of the same species and quality. Duverger. A contract identical with the mutuum (q. v.) of the civil law.

PRRTE—NOM. One who lends his name. Peterson v. Moresi, 191 La. 932, 186 So. 737, 739.

PRETEND. To feign or simulate; to hold that out as real which is false or baseless. Brown v. Perez, Tex.Civ.App., 25 S.W. 983; King v. U. S., C.C.A.Fl.a., 279 F. 103. As to the rule against the buying and selling of "any pretended right or title," see Pretended Right or Title.

PRETENSE. See False Pretenses.

PRETENDED, or PRETENDED, TITLE STATUTE. The English statute 32 Hen. VIII. c. 9, § 2. It enacts that no one shall sell or purchase any pretended right or title to land, unless the vendor has received the profits thereof for one whole year before such grant, or has been in actual possession of the land, or of the reversion or remainder, on pain that both purchaser and vendor shall each forfeit the value of such land to the king and the prosecutor. See 4 Broom & H. Comm. 150.

PRETENDED RIGHT or TITLE. Where one is in possession of land, and another, who is out of possession, claims and sues for it. Here the pretended right or title is said to be in him who so claims and sues for the same. Mod. Cas. 302.

False pretenses. See that title.

PRETENTION. In French law. The claim made to a thing which a party believes himself entitled to demand, but which is not admitted or adjudged to be his.

The words right, action, and pretention are usually joined; not that they are synonymous, for right is something positive and certain, action is what is demanded, while pretention is sometimes not even accompanied by a demand.

PRETER LEGAL. Not agreeable to law; exceeding the limits of law; not legal.

PRETERMIT. To "pretermit" is to pass by, to omit or to disregard, e. g., "failure of testator to mention his children in his will.

PRETERMITTED HEIR. A child or other descendent omitted by a testator. Where a testator unintentionally fails to mention in his will, or make provision for, a child, either living at the date of the execution of the will or born thereafter, a statute may provide that such child, or the issue of a deceased child, shall share in the estate as though the testator had died intestate. In re Price’s Estate, 56 Cal.App.2d 335, 132 P.2d 485.

PRETEXT. Ostensible reason or motive assigned or assumed as a color or cover for the real reason or motive; false appearance, pretense. State v. Ball, 27 Neb. 604, 43 N.W. 398.

In international law. A reason alleged as justificatory, but which is so only in appearance, or which is even absolutely destitute of all foundation. The name of "pretexes" may likewise be applied to reasons which are in themselves true and well-founded, but, not being of sufficient importance for undertaking a war, [or other internation of act,) are made use of only to cover ambitious views. Vatt. Law Nat. bk. 3, c. 3, § 32.

PRETIIUM. Lat. Price; cost; value; the price of an article sold.

PRETIIUM AFFECTIONIS. An imaginary value put upon a thing by the fancy of the owner, and growing out of his attachment for the specific article, its associations, his sentiment for the donor, etc. Bell; The H. F. Dimock, C.C.A.Mass., 77 F. 233, 23 C.C.A. 123; Burr v. Bloomsburg, 101 N.J. Eq. 615, 138 A. 876, 878.

PRETIIUM PERICULL The price of the risk, e. g. the premium paid on a policy of insurance; also the interest paid on money advanced on bottomy or respondentia.

PRETIIUM SEPULCHRI. A mortuary (q. v.).

PRETIIUM SUCCEDIT IN LOCUM REI. The price stands in the place of the thing sold. 1 Bouv. Inst. no. 939; 2 Bulst, 312.

PRETIIORII COURT. In the colony of Maryland, a court for the trial of capital crimes, consisting of the lord proprietor or his lieutenant-general, and the council. Also called Pretorial. Murray, New English Dict.

PRETIIORII, In Scotch law. A courthouse, or hall of justice. 3 How. State Tr. 425.

PREUVE. Fr. "Evidence" in the sense of the term in English law, and of probatio in the canon and civil law. The French word evidence, Latin evidentia, is commonly restricted to the testimony of the senses. 1 Best, Evid. § 11.

PREVAII. To be or become effective or effectual, to be in force, to obtain, to be in general use or practice, to be commonly accepted or adopted; to exist. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Gamble, 155 Fla. 678, 21 So.2d 348, 350.

PREVAILING PARTY. That one of the parties to a suit who successfully prosecutes the action or successfully defends against it, prevailing on the main issue, even though not to the extent of his original contention. Weston v. Cushing, 45 Vt. 531; Hawkins v. Nowland, 53 Mo. 329; Huggins v. Hill, Mo.Sup., 236 S.W. 1054, 1055.

The one in whose favor the decision or verdict is rendered and judgment entered. United States v. Minneapolis, St. P. & S. S. M. Ry. Co., D.C.Minn., 235 F. 951, 955; Dunne v. New York Telephone Co., 176 N.Y.S. 519, 520, 107 Misc. 439; O'Hare v. Peacock Dairies, 28 Cal.App.2d 562, 85 P.2d 37. The party ultimately prevailing when the matter is finally set at rest. Compare v. James Reading, Inc., 121 N.J.L. 591, 3 A.2d 802, 803. The party prevailing in interest, and not necessarily the prevailing party. Gertz v. Milwaukee Electric Ry. & Light Co., 153 Wis. 475, 140 N.W. 312, 316. To be such does not depend upon the degree of success at different stages of the suit, but whether, at the end of the suit, or other proceeding, the party who has made a claim against the other, has successfully maintained it. Bangor & P. R. Co. v. Chamberlain, 60 Me. 286. Thus, where the court grants defendant a new trial and verdict for plaintiff, defendant is the prevailing party on that trial, and entitled to costs, although the plaintiff again gets verdict on retrial. Klock Produce Co. v. Diamond Ice & Storage Co., 98 Wash. 676, 168 P. 476, 478.

PREVAILING PRICES. This term, as used in a contract for the sale of paper which had no market price, as it required special manufacture and came only from one source, means such prices as were set by that source in the usual course of business, without undue enlargement of cost, and with a reasonable profit in addition. New York Oversea Co. v. China, Japan & South American Trading Co., 200 N.Y.S. 449, 451, 206 App.Div. 242.

PREVARICATION. In the civil law. The acting with unfaithfulness and want of probity; deceitful, crafty, or unfaithful conduct; particularly, such as is manifested in concealing a crime. Dig. 47, 15, 6.

In English law. A collusion between an informer and a defendant, in order to a feigned prosecution. Cowell. Any secret abuse committed in a public office or private commission; willful concealment or misrepresentation of truth, by giving evasive or equivocating evidence.

PREVENT. To hinder, frustrate, prohibit, impede, or preclude; to obstruct; to intercept. Burr v. Williams, 20 Ark. 185; Orme v. Atlas Gas and Oil Co., 217 Minn. 27, 13 N.W.2d 757, 761. To stop or intercept the approach, access, or performance of a thing. Webster, Diet.; U. S. v. Souders, 27 Fed.Cas.1,269; Green v. State, 109 Ga. 536, 35 S. E. 97.

PREVENTION. In the civil law. The right of a judge to take cognizance of an action over which he has concurrent jurisdiction with another judge.

In canon law. The right which a superior person or officer has to lay hold of, claim, or transact an affair prior to an inferior one, to whom otherwise it more immediately belongs. Wharton.

PREVENTION OF CRIMES ACT. The statute 34 & 35 Vict. c. 112, passed for the purpose of securing a better supervision over habitual criminals. This act provides that a person who is for a second time convicted of crime may, on his second conviction, be subjected to police supervision for a period of seven years after the expiration of the punishment awarded him. Penalties are imposed on lodging-house keepers, etc., for harboring thieves or reputed thieves. There are also provisions relating to receivers of stolen property, and dealers in old metals who purchase the same in small quantities. This act repeals the habitual criminals act of 1869, (32 & 33 Vict. c. 99.) Brown.

PREVENTIVE JUSTICE. The system of measures taken by government with reference to the direct prevention of crime. It generally consists in obliging those persons whom there is probable ground to suspect of future misbehavior to give full assurance to the public that such offense as is apprehended shall not happen, by finding pledges or securities to keep the peace, or for their good behavior. 4 Bl. Comm. 251; 4 Steph. Comm. 290; Bradley v. Malen, 37 N.D. 295, 164 N.W. 24, 25.

PREVENTIVE SERVICE. The name given in England to the coast-guard, or armed police, forming a part of the customs service, and employed in the prevention and detection of smuggling.

PREVIOUS. Antecedent; prior. Webster, Dict. Sometimes limited in meaning to “next prior to”
PREVIOUS Intentions are judged by subsequent acts. Dumont v. Smith, 4 Denio (N.Y.) 319, 320.

Previous question. In parliamentary practice, the question whether a vote shall be taken on the main issue, or not, brought forward before the main or real question is put by the speaker and for the purpose of avoiding, if the vote is in the negative, the putting of this question. The motion is in the form “that the question be now put,” and the mover and seconder vote against it. It is described in Maundy. Parl. Prac, 277.

In the house of representatives of the United States and in many state legislatures the object of moving the previous question is to cut off debate and secure immediately a vote on the question under consideration. Hinds, Practice, 395.

Previously. An adverb of time, used in comparing an act or state named with another act or state, subsequent in order of time, for the purpose of asserting the priority of the first. Lebrecht v. Wilcoxon, 40 Iowa 94.

Previsors, statute of. A statute of 25 Edw. III. St. 6, for the protection of spiritual patrons against the pope. Maitl. Canon L. 69.

For “Fair Market Price,” see that title.

Sum of money which an article is sold for; but this is simply because property is generally sold for money, not because the term has a restricted meaning. Among writers on political economy, who use terms with philosophical accuracy, the word “price” is not always identical either with consideration. Oregon Home Builders v. Crowley, 87 Or. 517, 170 P. 718, 721; or with value, Chicago, K. & W.R. Co. v. Parsons, 51 Kan. 408, 32 P. 1083.

Price current. A list or enumeration of various articles of merchandise, with their prices, the duties, if any, payable thereon, when imported or exported, with the drawbacks occasionally allowed upon their exportation, etc. Wharton.

Price expectancy. In the moving picture industry, the minimum receipts which distributors expect to realize from the exhibition of pictures—used interchangeably with “minimum sale” and “exhibition value.” Export & Import Film Co. v. B. P. Schulberg Productions, 125 Misc, 756, 211 N.Y.S. 838, 839.

Pricking for sheriffs. In England, when the yearly list of persons nominated for the office of sheriff is submitted to the sovereign, he takes a pin, and to insure impartiality, as it is said, lets the point of it fall upon one of the three names nominated for each county, etc., and the person upon whose name it chances to fall is sheriff for the ensuing year. This is called “pricking for sheriffs.” Atk. Sher. 18.

Pricking Note. Where goods intended to be exported are put direct from the station of the warehouse into a ship alongside, the exporter fills up a document to authorize the receiving the goods on board. This document is called a “pricking note,” from a practice of pricking holes in the paper corresponding with the number of packages counted into the ship. Hamel, Cust. 181.

Pride gavel. A rent or tribute. Tayl. Gavelk. 112.

Priest. A minister of a church. A person in the second order of the ministry, as distinguished from bishops and deacons.

A pastor is a permanent official of a parish, and more than a priest, who holds a position of spiritual power without reference to locality. Dupont v. Pettéller, 120 Me. 114, 113 A. 11, 13.

Prima facie case. Such as will suffice until contradicted and overcome by other evidence. Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co. v. Wallace, 158 Or. 210, 75 P.2d 942, 947. A case which has proceeded upon sufficient proof to that stage where it will support finding if evidence to contrary is disregarded. In re Hoagland’s Estate, 126 Neb. 377, 253 N.W. 416.

A litigating party is said to have a prima facie case when the evidence in his favor is sufficiently strong for his opponent to be called on to answer it. A prima facie case, then, is one which is established by sufficient evidence, and can be overthrown only by rebutting evidence adduced on the other side. In some cases the only question to be considered is whether there is a prima facie case or no. Thus a grand jury are bound to find a true bill of indictment, if the evidence before them creates a prima facie case against the accused; and for this purpose, therefore, it is not necessary for them to hear the evidence for the defense. Moyer & Whitley. And see State v. Hardelein, 169 Mo. 579, 70 S.W. 130; State v. Lawlor, 28 Minn. 216, 9 N.W. 698.

Prima facie evidence. Evidence good and sufficient on its face; such evidence as, in the judgment of the law, is sufficient to establish a given fact, or the group or chain of facts constituting the party's claim or defense, and which if not rebutted or contradicted, will remain sufficient. State v. Burlingame, 146 Mo. 207, 48 S.W. 72.

Evidence which suffices for the proof of a particular fact until contradicted and overcome by other evidence. Dodson v. Watson, 110 Tex. 355, 220 S.W. 771, 772, 11 A.L.R. 583. Evidence which, standing alone and unexplained, would maintain the proposition and warrant the conclusion to support which it is introduced. Gilmore v. Modern Brotherhood of America, 186 Mo.App. 445, 171 S.W. 629, 632. An inference or presumption of law, affirmative or negative of a fact, in the absence of proof, or until proof can be obtained or produced to overcome the inference. People v. Thacher, 1 Thomp. & C., N.Y., 167. A litigating party is said to have a prima facie case when the evidence in his favor is sufficiently strong for his opponent to be called on to answer it. A prima facie case, then, is one which is established by sufficient evidence, and can be overthrown only by rebutting evidence adduced on the other side. Mozley & Whitley. State v. Lawlor, 28 Minn. 216, 9 N.W. 698. A 'prima facie case' is one which is apparently established by evidence adduced by plaintiff in support of his case up to the time such evidence stands unexplained and uncontradicted. Morrison v. Flowers, 308 Ill. 189, 139 N.E. 10, 12. A 'prima facie case' is one in which the evidence in favor of a proposition is sufficient to support a finding in its favor, if all of the evidence to the contrary be disregarded. Schallert v. Boggs, Tex.Civ.App., 204 S.W. 1061, 1062. See, also, Presumptive Evidence.

PRIMARIA ECCLESIA. The mother church. 1 Steph. Comm. (7th Ed.) 118.

PRIMARY ALLEGATION. The opening pleading in a suit in the ecclesiastical court. It is also called a "primary plea."

PRIMARY DISPOSAL OF THE SOIL. In acts of congress admitting territories as states, and providing that no laws shall be passed interfering with the primary disposal of the soil, this means the disposal of it by the United States government when it parts with its title to private persons or corporations acquiring the right to a patent or deed in accordance with law. See Oury v. Goodwin, 3 Ariz. 255, 26 P. 377; Topeka Commercial Security Co. v. McPherson, 7 Okl. 332, 54 P. 489.

PRIMARY EVIDENCE. That kind of evidence which, under every possible circumstance, affords the greatest certainty of the fact in question. Thus, a written instrument is itself the best possible evidence of its existence and contents.

Primary evidence means original or first-hand evidence; the best evidence that the nature of the case admits of; the evidence which is required in the first instance, and which must fail before secondary evidence can be admitted. That evidence which the nature of the case or question suggests as the proper means of ascertaining the truth. See Cross v. Baskett, 17 Or. 84, 21 P. 47; Scott v. State, 3 Tex. App. 103, 104. It is the particular means of proof which is the most natural and satisfactory of which the case admits, and includes the best evidence which is available to a party and procurable under the existing situation, and all evidence falling short of such standard, and which in its nature suggests there is better evidence of the same fact, is "secondary evidence." Best v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc., Mo.App., 299 S.W. 118, 120. See, also, Best Evidence.

PRIMARY POWERS. The principal authority given by a principal to his agent. It differs from "mediate powers." Story, Ag. § 58.

PRIMARY PURPOSE. That which is first in intention; which is fundamental. State v. Erickson, 44 S.D. 63, 182 N.W. 315, 317, 13 A.L.R. 1189. The principal or fixed intention with which an act or course of conduct is undertaken. Carlson v. Carpenter Contractors' Ass'n, 224 Ill.App. 430, 447.

PRIMATE. A chief ecclesiastic; an archbishop who has jurisdiction over his province, or one of several metropolitans presiding over others. Exarch comes nearest to it in the Greek church. Thus the archbishop of Canterbury is styled "Primate of all England;" the archbishop of York is "Primate of England." Wharton.

PRIME, n. In French law. The price of the risk assumed by an insurer; premium of insurance. Emerig. Traite des Assur. c. 3, § 1, nn. 1, 2.

PRIME, v. To stand first or paramount; to take precedence or priority of; to outrank; as, in the sentence "taxes prime all other liens."

PRIME MINISTER. The responsible head of a ministry or executive government, especially of a monarchical government. Webster, Dict. In England, he is the head of the cabinet, and usually holds the office of First Lord of the Treasury. The office was unknown to the law until 1906, when the prime minister was accorded a place in the order of precedence. Lowell, Gov. of Engl. 68. "He is the principal executive of the British constitution, and the sovereign a cog in the mechanism." Bagehot.

PRIME SERJEANT. In English law. The king's first serjeant at law.

PRIMER. A law French word, signifying first; primary.

PRIMER ELECTION. A term used to signify first choice; e. g., the right of the eldest co-partner to first choose a purpart.

PRIMER FINE. On suing out the writ or præcipe called a "writ of covenant," there was due to the crown, by ancient prerogative, a primer fine, or a noble for every five marks of land sued for. That was one-tenth of the annual value. 1 Steph. Comm. (7th Ed.) 560.

PRIMER SEISIN. See Seisin.

PRIMICERIUS. In old English law. The first serjeant at law.

PRIMO BENEFICIO. Lat. A writ directing a grant of the first benefice in the sovereign's gift. Cowell.

PRIMO EXECUTIENDA EST VERBI VIS, NE SERMONIS VITIO OBSTRUATUR ORATIO, SIVE LEX SINE ARGUMENTIS. Co. Litt. 68. The full meaning of a word should be ascertained at the outset, in order that the sense may not be lost by defect of expression, and that the law be not without reasons [or arguments].

PRIMO VENIENTI. Lat. To the one first coming. An executor anciently paid debts as they were presented, whether the assets were sufficient to meet all debts or not. Stim. Law Gloss.

PRIMOGENITUS. Lat. In old English law. A first-born among several children of the same parents; seniority by birth in the same family. The superior or exclusive right possessed by the eldest son, and particularly, his right to succeed to the estate of his ancestor, in right of his seniority by birth, to the exclusion of younger sons.

PRIMUM DECRETUM. Lat. In the canon law. The first decree; a preliminary decree granted on the non-appearance of a defendant, by which the plaintiff was put in possession of his goods, or of the thing itself which was demanded. Gilb. Forum Rom. 32, 33. In the courts of admiralty, this name is given to a provisional decree. Bacon, Abr. The Court of Admiralty (E).

PRINCE. In a general sense, a sovereign; the ruler of a nation or state. More particularly, the son of a king or emperor, or the issue of a royal family; as princes of the blood. The chief of any body of men. Webster; The Lucy H., D.C.Fla., 235 F. 610, 612.

Prince of Wales. A title given to the eldest son of the British sovereign or to the heir apparent to the crown. He is so created by letters patent, and is also created Earl of Chester. He is Duke of Cornwall by inheritance. Mary and Elizabeth, though each, at the time, was only heiress presumptive, were created Princesses of Wales by Henry VIII.

Princes and princesses of the royal blood. In English law. The younger sons and daughters of the sovereign, and other branches of the royal family who are not in the immediate line of succession.

PRINCEPS. Lat. In the civil law. The prince; the emperor.

PRINCEPS ET RESPUBLICA EX JUSTA CAUSA POSSUNT REM MEAM AUFERRE. 12 Coke, 13. The prince and the commonwealth, for a just cause, can take away my property.

PRINCEPS LEGIBUS SOLUTUS EST. The emperor is released from the laws; is not bound by the laws. Dig. 1, 3, 31; Halifax, Anal. pre Y. vii, note.

PRINCEPS MAVULT DOMESTICOS MILITES QUAM STIPENDIARIOS BELLICIS OPPONERE CASIBUS. Co. Litt. 69. A prince, in the chances of war, had better employ domestic than stipendiary troops.

PRINCESS ROYAL. In English law. The eldest daughter of the sovereign. 3 Steph. Comm. 450.

PRINCIPAL, adj. Chief; leading; most important or considerable; primary; original. Highest in rank, authority, character, importance, or degree. Bland v. Board of Trustees of Galt Joint Union High School Dist., 67 Cal.App. 784, 228 P. 395, 397.

Principal establishment. In the law concerning domicile, the principal domestic establishment. Mosely v. Dabezies, 142 La. 256, 76 So. 705, 706.

Principal fact. In the law of evidence. A fact sought and proposed to be proved by evidence of other facts (termed "evidentiary facts") from which it is to be deduced by inference. A fact which is the principal and ultimate object of an inquiry, and respecting the existence of which a definite belief is required to be formed. 3 Benth. Jud. Ev. 3; Burrill, Circ. Ev. 3, 119.

PRINCIPAL, n. The source of authority or right. A superintendent, as of a school district. Williams v. School Dist. No. 189, 104 Wash. 659, 177 P. 635, 636. The capital sum of a debt or obliga-
Criminal Law

A chief actor or perpetrator, or an alder and abettor actually or constructively present at the commission of the crime, as distinguished from an "accessory." At common law, a principal in the first degree is he that is the actor or absolute perpetrator of the crime; and, in the second degree, he who is present, aiding and abetting the fact to be done. 4 Bl. Comm. 34. Cooney v. Burke, 11 Neb. 258, 9 N.W. 57.

Neither a principal in the first degree nor one in the second degree need be actually present when the offense is consummated, Smith v. State, 21 Tex.App. 107, 17 S.W. 335; State v. McCarley, 126 Me. 358, 138 A. 474, 475; see People v. Wood, 56 Cal.App. 107, 206 P. 320, 321. Presence of a principal in the second degree may be merely constructive: e. g., where he stays outside and keeps watch or guard, Pierce v. State, 130 Tenn. 24, 168 S.W. 851, 855, Ann.Cas.1916B, 137. In misdemeanors, anyone present when committed, though not aiding therein, are principals. Stringfellow v. State, 111 Tex.Cr.R. 504, 14 S.W.2d 1031, 1032. A criminal offender is either a principal or an accessory. A principal is either the actor (e. g., the actual perpetrator of the crime) or else is present, aiding and abetting, the fact to be done; an accessory is he who is not the chief actor in the offense, nor yet present at its performance, but is some way concerned therein, either before or after the fact committed. 1 Hale, P.C. 613, 618; People v. Ah Gee, 37 Cal.App. 1, 174 P. 371, 372.

All persons acting together in commission of offense, and persons advising or agreeing to commission thereof and present when committed, though not aiding therein, are principals. Stringfellow v. State, 111 Tex.Cr.R. 504, 14 S.W.2d 1031, 1032. A criminal offender is either a principal or an accessory. A principal is either the actor (e. g., the actual perpetrator of the crime) or else is present, aiding and abetting, the fact to be done; an accessory is he who is not the chief actor in the offense, nor yet present at its performance, but is some way concerned therein, either before or after the fact committed. 1 Hale, P.C. 613, 618; People v. Ah Gee, 37 Cal.App. 1, 174 P. 371, 372.

All persons concerned in the commission of the crime, whether it be felony or misdemeanor, and whether they directly commit the act constituting the offense, or aid and abet in its commission, though not present, are principals. State v. Curtis, 30 Idaho 537, 165 P. 999, 1000. Some of these statutes, and other similar ones, expressly abrogate the common-law distinction between a principal and an accessory before the fact. People v. Wood, 56 Cal.App. 431, 205 P. 698. All persons are principals who are guilty of acting together in the commission of an offense. Vernon's Ann.P.C. art. 66. A principal is one who advises or agrees to the commission of an offense, and is present when it is done. Vernon's Ann.P.C. art. 69. See Pizana v. State, 81 Tex.Cr.R. 81, 193 S.W. 671, 673; Middleton v. State, 86 Tex.Cr.R. 307, 217 S.W. 1046, 1052. "Accomplice," by virtue of statute in Vernon's Ann.P.C. art. 70, means one who is not present at the commission of the offense. Serrato v. State, 74 Tex.Cr.R. 413, 171 S.W. 1133, 1144, and is practically synonymous with the common-law accessory before the fact. McKeen v. State, 7 Tex.Cr.R. 631; Strong v. State, 52 Tex.Cr.R. 133, 105 S.W. 785. But the ordinary meaning of "accomplice" includes all the participants crim. in principalis in the first or second degree or mere accessories. It means one who at common law might have been convicted either as principal or accessory before the fact. People v. Crossman, 241 N.Y. 138, 149 N.E. 330, 331.

Law of Agency

The employer or constitutor of an agent; the person who gives authority to an agent or attorney to do some act for him. Adams v. Whittlesey, 3 Conn. 567. Called also constituent or chief. Mech. Agency § 3. One who, being competent sui juris to do any act for his own benefit or on his own account, confides it to another person to do for him. 1 Domat, b. 1, tit. 15.

Law of Guaranty and Suretyship

The person primarily liable, for whose performance of his obligation the guarantor or surety has become bound. See Rollings v. Gunter, 211 Ala. 671, 101 So. 446, 448.

Old English Law

An heirloom, mortuary, or corse-present. Wharton.

Property Law

A term used as the correlative of "accessory" or "incident" to denote the more important or valuable subject, with which others are connected in a relation of dependence or subservience, or to which they are incident or appurtenant. Thus, it is said that the incident shall pass by the grant of the principal; but not the principal by the grant of the incident. Co. Litt. 152a.

General

Principal of the house. In, English law. The chief person in some of the inns of chancery.

Vice principal. In the law of master and servant, this term means one to whom the employer has confided the entire charge of the business or of a distinct branch of it, giving him authority to superintend, direct, and control the workmen and make them obey his orders, the master himself exercising no particular oversight and giving no particular orders, or one to whom the master has delegated a duty of his own, which is a direct, personal, and absolute obligation. Durkin v. Kingston Coal Co., 171 Pa. 193, 33 A. 237, 29 L.R. A. 808, 50 Am.St.Rep. 801.

The term "vice principal," as used in the fellow-servant law, includes any servant who represents the master in the discharge of those personal or absolute duties which every master owes to his servants; such duties being often referred to as the nonassignable duties of the master, among which are, providing suitable machinery and appliances, a safe place to work, the proper inspection and repair of premises and appliances, the selection and retention of suitable servants, the establishment of proper rules and regulations, and the instruction of servants as to the kind and manner of work to be done by them. International Cotton Mills v. Webb, 22 Ga.App. 309, 96 S.E. 16; Wolverine Oil Co. v. Kingsbury, 66 Okl. 271, 168 P. 1021, 1022. To make a servant a vice principal, it is only necessary that he have authority to direct and supervise the work and to hire and discharge subordinate servants engaged in the work. Modern Order of Praetorians v. Nelson, Tex.Civ.App., 162 S.W. 17, 18; Daggett v. American Car & Foundry Co., Mo.App., 284 S.W. 853, 856. However, a servant may be a vice principal, though he has no power to employ and discharge men under him. Wilson v. Counsel, 182 Ill.App. 79, 84.

PRINCIPALIS. Lat. Principal; a principal debtor; a principal in a crime.

PRINCIPALIS DEBET SEMPER EXCUTI AN, TEQUAM PERVENIATUR AD FIDEIUSSORES. The principal should always be exhausted before coming upon the sureties. 2 Inst. 19.

PRINCIPIA DATA SEQUUNTUR CONCOMI. TANTIA. Given principles are followed by their concomitants.
PRINCIPIA PROBANT, NON PROBANTUR. Principles prove; they are not proved. Fundamental principles require no proof; or, in Lord Coke's words, "they ought to be approved, because they cannot be proved." 3 Coke, 50a.

PRINCIPII OBSTA. Withstand beginnings; oppose a thing in its early stages, if you would cause they cannot be proved. 3 Coke, 50a.

PRINCIPIORUM NON EST RATIO. There is no rule of action, procedure, or legal determination. 2 Bulst. 239.

PRINCIPIUM EST POTISSIMA PARS CURJUSQUE REI. 10 Coke, 49. The principle of anything is its most powerful part.

PRINCIPLE. A fundamental truth or doctrine, as of law; a comprehensive rule or doctrine which furnishes a basis or origin for others; a settled rule of action, procedure, or legal determination. A truth or proposition so clear that it cannot be proved or contradicted unless by a proposition which is still clearer. That which constitutes the essence of a body or its constituent parts. 8 Term 107. That which pertains to the theoretical part of a science. Hemler v. Richland Parish School Board, 142 La. 133, 76 So. 585, 587.

In patent law. The principle of a machine is the particular means of producing a given result by a mechanical contrivance. Parker v. Stiles, 5 McLean 44, 63, Fed.Cas.No.10,749. It is the modus operandi, or that which applies, modifies, or combines mechanical powers to produce a certain result; and, so far, a principle, if new in its application to a useful purpose, may be patentable. Barrett v. Hall, 1 Mason, 470, Fed.Cas.No.1,047. The word "principles," as applied to inventions, designate those elements which in combination compose the claims. Schwyzer Electric & Mfg. Co. v. Regan Safety Devices Co., C.C.A. N.Y., 4 F.2d 970, 973.

PRINT, n. A term which includes most of the forms of figures or characters or representations, colored or uncolored, that may be impressed on a yielding surface. U. S. v. Harman, D.C.Kan., 38 F. 827, 829.

PRINT, v. To stamp by direct pressure as from the face of types, plates, or blocks covered with ink or pigments, or to impressed with transfereed characters or delineations by the exercise of force as with a press or other mechanical agency. Acme Coal Co. v. Northrup Nat. Bank of Iola, Kan., 23 Wyo. 66, 146 P. 593, L.R.A. 1915D, 1084.

The term properly refers to the mechanical work of production, whereas "publish" pertains to the issuance from the place where printed. In re Monrovia Evening Post, 199 Cal. 263, 248 P. 1017, 1018; In re McDonald, 187 Cal. 158, 201 P. 110, 111. But a finding that a newspaper is "published" in a certain county may be deemed sufficient to show that it was "printed" in such county. McCormick v. Higgins, 190 Ill.App. 241, 261. Similarly, a requirement that matter be "printed" in a particular county may be construed as a direction that it be "published" there. In re Publication of Docket of Supreme Court, Mo. Sup., 232 S.W. 454, 455.

Public printing. Such as is directly ordered by the legislature, or performed by the agents of the government authorized to procure it to be done. Ellis v. State, 4 Ind. 1.

PRIOR. Lat. The former; earlier; preceding; preferable or preferred.

Prior petens. The person first applying.

PRIOR, n. The chief of a convent; next in dignity to an abbot.

PRIOR, adj. Earlier; elder; preceding; superior in rank, right, or time; as, a prior lien, mortgage, or judgment. See Fidelity Insurance, Trust & Safe Deposit Co. v. Roanoke Iron Co., C.C.Va., 81 F. 439, 447.

Prior creditor. Generally, the creditor who is accorded priority in payment from the assets of his debtor. Richey v. Ferguson, 93 Kan. 152, 143 P. 497.

PRIOR LIEN. This term commonly denotes a first or superior lien, and not one necessarily antecedent in time. Titus v. United States Smelting, Refining & Mining Exploration Co., D.C.N.Y., 231 F. 205, 210.

PRIOR TEMPORE POTIOR JURE. He who is first in time is preferred in right. Co. Litt. 14a; Broom, Max. 354, 358; 2 P. Wms. 491; 1 Term 733; 9 Wheat. 24, 6 L.Ed. 23; 15 A. (Pa.) 730.

PRIORI PETENTI. To the person first applying. In probate practice, where there are several persons equally entitled to a grant of administration, (e. g., next of kin of the same degree,) the rule of the court is to make the grant priori pe-tenti, to the first applicant. Browne, Prob. Pr. 174; Coote, Prob. Pr. 173, 180.

PRIORITY. Precedence; going before. A legal preference or precedence. When two persons have similar rights in respect of the same subject-matter, but one is entitled to exercise his right to the exclusion of the other, he is said to have priority.

In old English law. An antiquity of tenure, in comparison with one not so ancient. Cowell.
PRISAGE

PRISAGE. An ancient hereditary revenue of the crown, consisting in the right to take a certain quantity from cargoes of wine imported into England. In Edward I.'s reign it was converted into a pecuniary duty called "butlerage." 2 Steph. Comm. 561.

PRISON. A public building or other place for the confinement or safe custody of persons, whether as a punishment imposed by the law or otherwise in the course of the administration of justice. Sturtevant v. Com., 158 Mass. 598, 33 N.E. 648; Copeland v. Commonwealth, 214 Ky. 209, 282 S.W. 1077.

The words "prison" and "penitentiary" are used synonymously to designate institutions for the imprisonment of persons convicted of the more serious crimes, as distinguished from reformatories and county or city jails. State v. Delmonto, 110 Conn. 298, 147 A. 825, 826.

Originally it was distinguished from jail, which was a place for confinement, not for punishment, and the popular modern tendency is to use the term in contradistinction to jail, to denote particularly a state penitentiary. Copeland v. Commonwealth, 282 S.W. 1077, 214 Ky. 209. But the term may also properly apply to a county jail. State v. Killian, 173 N.C. 792, 92 S.E. 499, 501.

As used in a statute pertaining to escapes, the word may include territory outside a state prison, where an inmate, when at work outside, is under the surveillance of prison guards. People v. Vanderburg, 67 Cal.App. 217, 227 P. 621.

PRISON BOUNDS. The limits of the territory surrounding a prison, within which an imprisoned debtor, who is out on bonds, may go at will. See Gaol.

PRISON BREAKING, OR BREACH. The common-law offense of one who, being lawfully in custody, escapes from the place where he is confined, by the employment of force and violence. This offense is to be distinguished from "rescue," (q. v.) which is a deliverance of a prisoner from lawful custody by a third person. 2 Bish. Crim. Law, § 1065.

PRISONAM FRANGENTIBUS, STATUTE DE. The English statute 1 Edw. II. St. 2, (in Rev. St. 23 Edw. I.) whereby it is felony for a felon to break prison, but misdemeanor only for a misdemeanor to do so. 1 Hale, P. C. 612.

PRISONER. One who is deprived of his liberty; one who is against his will kept in confinement or custody. U. S. v. Curran, C.C.A.N.Y., 297 F. 946, 950. A person restrained of his liberty upon any action, civil or criminal, or upon commandment. Cowell.

A person on trial for crime. "The prisoner at the bar." The jurors are told to "look upon the prisoner." The court, after passing sentence, gives order: to "remove the prisoner." Hairston v. Corn., 97 Va. 754, 32 S.E. 797.

PRISONER AT THE BAR. An accused person, while on trial before the court, is so called. One accused of crime, who is actually on trial, is in legal effect a "prisoner at the bar," notwithstanding he has given bond for his appearance at the trial. He is a "prisoner" if held in custody either under bond or other process of law, or when physically held under arrest, and when actually on trial he is a "prisoner at the bar." The term is as applicable to one on trial for a misdemeanor as for a felony. Allen v. State, 18 Ga.App. 1, 88 S.E. 100.

PRISONER OF WAR. One who has been captured in war while fighting in the army of the public enemy.

PRIST. L. Fr. Ready. In the old forms of oral pleading, this term expressed a tender or joinder of issue.

PRIUS VITIS LABORAVimus, NUNC LEGIBUS. 4 Inst. 76. We labored first with vices, now with laws.

PRIVACY, RIGHT OF. The right to be let alone, the right of a person to be free from unwarranted publicity. Holloman v. Life Ins. Co. of Virginia, 192 S.C. 454, 7 S.E.2d 169, 171, 127 A.L.R. 110. The right of an individual (or corporation) to withhold himself and his property from public scrutiny, if he so chooses. It is said to exist only so far as its assertion is consistent with law or public policy, and in a proper case equity will interfere, if there is no remedy at law, to prevent an injury threatened by the invasion of, or infringement upon, this right from motives of curiosity, gain, or malice. Federal Trade Commission v. American Tobacco Co., 44 S.Ct. 336, 264 U.S. 298, 68 L.Ed. 696, 32 A.L.R. 786.

PRIVATE BILL OFFICE. An office of the British parliament where the business of securing private acts of parliament is conducted.

PRIVATE EXAMINATION. An examination or interrogation, by a magistrate, of a married woman as applicable to one on trial for a misdemeanor as for a felony. Allen v. State, 18 Ga.App. 1, 88 S.E. 100.

PRIVATE INTERNATIONAL LAW. A name used by some writers to indicate that branch of the law which is now more commonly called "Conflict of Laws" (q. v.).
PRIVATE LAW. As used in contradistinction to public law, the term means all that part of the law which is administered between citizen and citizen, or which is concerned with the definition, regulation, and enforcement of rights in cases where both the person in whom the right inheres and the person upon whom the obligation is incident are private individuals. See Public Law.

PRIVATE PERSON. An individual who is not a citizen, or which is concerned with the definition, regulation, and enforcement of rights in cases where both the person in whom the right inheres and the person upon whom the obligation is incident are private individuals. See Public Law.

PRIVATE STREET. Literally speaking, this is a street. It may be one or the other, but not both. Greil v. Stollenwerck, 201 Ala. 303, 78 So. 79, 82.

PRIVATEER. A vessel owned, equipped, and armed by one or more private individuals, and duly commissioned by a belligerent power to go on cruises and make war upon the enemy, usually by preying on his commerce. A private vessel commissioned by the state by the issue of a letter of marque to its owner to carry on all hostilities by sea, presumably according to the laws of war. Formerly a state issued letters of marque to its own subjects, and to those of neutral states as well, but a privateresman who accepted letters of marque from both belligerents was regarded as a pirate. By the Declaration of Paris (April, 1856), privateering was abolished, but the United States, Spain, Mexico, and Venezuela did not accede to this declaration. It has been thought that the constitutional provision empowering Congress to issue letters of marque deprives it of the power to join in a permanent treaty abolishing privateering. 28 Am.L.Rev. 615; 24 Am.L.Rev. 902; 19 Law Mag. & Rev. 35.

 PRIVATIO PRIESUPPONIT HABITUM. 2 Royle, 419. A deprivation presupposes a possession.

PRIVATION. A taking away or withdrawing. Co. Litt. 239.

PRIVATIS PACTIONIBUS NON DUBIUM EST NON LIEDI JUS CIETERORUM. There is no doubt that the rights of others [third parties] cannot be prejudiced by private agreements. Dig. 2, 15, 3, pr.; Broom, Max. 697.

PRIVATORUM CONVENTIO JURI PUBLICO NON DEROGAT. The agreement of private individuals does not derogate from the public right. [law.] Dig. 50, 17, 45, 1; 9 Coke, 141; Broom, Max. 695.

PRIVATUM COMMODUM PUBLICO CEDIT. Private good yields to public. The interest of an individual should give place to the public good. Jenk. Cent. p. 223, case 80.

PRIVATUM INCOMMODUM PUBLICO BONO PENSATUR. Private inconvenience is made up for by public benefit. Jenk. Cent. p. 85, case 65; Broom, Max. 7.

PRIVEMENT ENCEINTE. Fr. Pregnant privately. A term used to signify that a woman is pregnant, but not yet quick with child.

PRIVIES. Those who are partakers or have an interest in any action or thing, or any relation to another. Harrington v. Harrington, 3 Miss. (2 How.) 701, 717; Brown v. Fidelity Union Trust Co., 126 N.J.Eq. 406, 9 A.2d 311, 326; Hamelik v. Sypek, 274 N.Y.S. 875, 152 Misc. 799. They are of six kinds:

1. Privies of blood; such as the heir to his ancestor.
2. Privies in representation; as executors or administrators to their deceased testator or intestate.
3. Privies in estate; as grantor and grante, lessor and lessee, assignor and assignee, etc.
4. Privies in respect to contract.
5. Privies in respect of estate and contract; as where the lessee assigns his interest, but the contract between lessor and lessee continues, the lessor not having accepted of the assignee.
6. Privies in law; as the lord by escheat, a tenant by the curtesy, or in dower, the incumbent of a benefice, a husband suing or defending in right of his wife, etc.

PRIVATE. A vessel owner, armed by one or more private individuals, and duly commissioned by a belligerent power to go on cruises and make war upon the enemy, usually by preying on his commerce. A private vessel commissioned by the state by the issue of a letter of marque to its owner to carry on all hostilities by sea, presumably according to the laws of war. Formerly a state issued letters of marque to its own subjects, and to those of neutral states as well, but a privateresman who accepted letters of marque from both belligerents was regarded as a pirate. By the Declaration of Paris (April, 1856), privateering was abolished, but the United States, Spain, Mexico, and Venezuela did not accede to this declaration. It has been thought that the constitutional provision empowering Congress to issue letters of marque deprives it of the power to join in a permanent treaty abolishing privateering. 28 Am.L.Rev. 615; 24 Am.L.Rev. 902; 19 Law Mag. & Rev. 35.

PRIVIGNA. Lat. In the civil law. A step-daughter.

PRIVIGNUS. Lat. In the civil law. A son of a husband or wife by a former marriage; a stepson. Calvin.

PRIVILEGE. A particular and peculiar benefit or advantage enjoyed by a person, company, or class, beyond the common advantages of other citizens. An exceptional or extraordinary power or exemption. A right, power, franchise, or immunity held by a person or class, against or beyond the course of the law. Watero Water Co. v. Village of Watero, 193 N.Y.S. 360, 362, 200 App.Div. 718; Colonial Motor Coach Corporation v. City of Oswego, 215 N.Y.S. 159, 163, 126 Misc. 829; Cope v. Flanery, 234 P. 845, 849, 70 Cal.App. 738; Bank of Commerce & Trust Co. v. Senter, 260 S.W. 144, 147, 149 Tenn. 569; State v. Betts, 24 N.J.L. 557.

An exemption from some burden or attendance, with which certain persons are indulged, from a supposition of law that the stations they fill, or the offices they are engaged in, are such as require all their time and care, and that, therefore, without this indulgence, it would be impracticable to execute such offices to that advantage which the public good requires. Dike v. State, 38 Minn. 366, 38 N.W. 95; International Trust Co. v. American L. & T. Co., 62 Minn. 501, 65 N.W. 78. State v. Gilman, 33 W.Va. 146, 10 S.E. 283, 6 L.R.A. 847. That which releases one from the performance of a duty or obligation, or exempts one from a liability which he would otherwise be required to perform,

Civil Law
A right which the nature of a debt gives to a creditor, and which entitles him to be preferred before other creditors. Civil Code La. art. 3186. It is merely an accessory of the debt which it secures, and falls with the extinguishment of the debt. A. Baldwin & Co. v. McCain, 159 La. 966, 106 So. 459, 460. The civil-law privilege became, by adoption of the admiralty courts, the admiralty lien. Howe, Stud. Civ. L. 89; The J. E. Rumbell, 148 U.S. 1, 13 S.Ct. 498, 37 L.Ed. 345.

Exclusive Privilege
See Exclusive Privilege or Franchise.

Law of Libel and Slander
An exemption from liability for the speaking or publishing of defamatory words concerning another, based on the fact that the statement was made in the performance of a duty, political, judicial, social, or personal. Privilege is either absolute or conditional. The former protects the speaker or publisher without reference to his motives or the truth or falsity of the statement. This may be claimed in respect, for instance, to statements made in legislative debates, in reports of military officers to their superiors in the line of their duty, and statements made by judges, witnesses, and jurors in trials in court. Conditional privilege (called also "qualified privilege") will protect the speaker or publisher unless actual malice and knowledge of the falsity of the statement is shown. This may be claimed where the communication related to a matter of public interest, or where it was necessary to protect one's private interest and was made to a person having an interest in the same matter. Hill v. Drainage Co., 79 Hun, 335, 29 N.Y.S. 427; Cooley v. Galyon, 109 Tenn. 1, 70 S.W. 607, 60 L.R.A. 139, 97 Am.St.Rep. 823.

"Absolute privilege" is confined to cases in which the public service or the administration of justice requires complete immunity from being called to account for language used. Taber v. Aransas Harbor Terminal Ry., Tex. Civ.App., 219 S.W. 860, 861. It is based upon the theory that the publication of defamatory matter must be protected in the interest of and for the necessities of society, even though it be both false and malicious. Light Pub. Co. v. Huntress, Tex.Div.App., 199 S.W. 1168, 1171.

"Qualified privilege" extends to all communications made in good faith upon any subject-matter in which the party communicating has an interest or in reference to which he has a duty to a person having a corresponding interest or duty, although the duty be not a legal one, but of a moral or social character of imperfect obligation and it arises from the necessity of full and unrestricted communication concerning a matter in which the parties have an interest or duty. Southern Ice Co. v. Black, 136 Tenn. 391, 189 S.W. 861, 863, Ann.Cas.1917E, 695.

Maritime Law
An allowance to the master of a ship of the same general nature with primage, being compen-

Privilege, or rather a gratuity, customary in certain trades, and which the law assumes to be a fair and equitable allowance, because the contract on both sides is made under the knowledge of such usage by the parties. 3 Chit. Commer. Law, 431,

Parliamentary Law
The right of a particular question, motion, or statement to take precedence over all other business before the house and to be considered immediately, notwithstanding any consequent interference with or setting aside the rules of procedure adopted by the house. The matter may be one of "personal privilege," where it concerns one member of the house in his capacity as a legislator, or of the "privilege of the house," where it concerns the rights, immunities, or dignity of the entire body, or of "constitutional privilege," where it relates to some action to be taken or some order of proceeding expressly enjoined by the constitution.

General
Privilege from arrest. A privilege extended to certain classes of persons, either by the rules of international law, the policy of the law, or the necessities of justice or of the administration of government, whereby they are exempted from arrest on civil process, and, in some cases, on criminal charges, either permanently, as in the case of a foreign minister and his suite, or temporarily, as in the case of members of the legislature, parties and witnesses engaged in a particular suit, etc. 1 Kent 243; 8 R. I. 43; 2 Stra. 985; 1 M. & W. 488; Parker v. Marco, 136 N.Y. 585, 32 N.E. 989, 20 L.R.A. 45, 32 Am.St.Rep. 770.

Privilege of transit. In railroading, the right of a shipper to have a car stopped at some intermediate point, the commodity shipped unloaded and treated or changed into some other form, and then reloaded and shipped to its destination as though it had been a continuous shipment and at the same rate as originally billed. Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co. v. Board of Railroad Comrs, 47 S.D. 395, 199 N.W. 453, 454.

Privilege tax. A tax on the privilege of carrying on a business for which a license or franchise is required. Southeastern Express Co. v. City of Charlotte, 186 N.C. 668, 120 S.E. 475, 477; Gulf & Ship Island R. Co. v. Hewes, 183 U.S. 66, 22 S. Ct. 26, 46 L.Ed. 86.

Privileges and immunities. Within the meaning of the 14th amendment of the United States constitution, such privileges as are fundamental, which belong to the citizens of all free governments and which have at all times been enjoyed by citizens of the United States. La Tourette v. McMastet, 104 S.C. 501, 89 S.E. 398, 399. They are only those which owe their existence to the federal government, its national character, its Constitution, or its laws. Ownbey v. Morgan, 256 U. S. 94, 41 S.Ct. 433, 65 L.Ed. 837, 17 A.L.R. 873; Prudential Ins. Co. of America v. Cheek, 25 U.S. 530, 22 S.Ct. 516, 520, 66 L.Ed. 1044, 27 A.L.R. 27; Rosenthal v. New York, 33 S.Ct. 27, 226 U.S. 260, 57 L.Ed. 212, Ann.Cas.1914B, 71.
Real privilege. In English law. A privilege granted to, or concerning, a particular place or locality.

Writ of privilege. A process to enforce or maintain a privilege; particularly to secure the release of a person arrested in a civil suit contrary to his privilege.

PRIVILEGED. Possessing or enjoying a privilege; exempt from burdens; entitled to priority or precedence.

PRIVILEGED COMMUNICATIONS. See Communication.

PRIVILEGED COPYHOLDS. See Copyhold.

PRIVILEGED DEBTS. Those which an executor or administrator, trustee in bankruptcy, and the like, may pay in preference to others; such as funeral expenses, servants' wages, and doctors' bills during last sickness, etc.

PRIVILEGED DEED. In Scotch law. An instrument, for example, a testament, in the execution of which certain statutory formalities usually required are dispensed with, either from necessity or expediency. Ersk.Inst. 3, 2, 22; Bell.

PRIVILEGED VESSEL. That one of two vessels which, as against the other, ordinarily has the right or duty to hold her course and speed. Under International Rules, arts. 20, 22 (33 U.S.C.A. §§ 105, 107), a sailing vessel, except when the overtaking vessel, is always the privileged vessel, as against a steamer. The Buenos Aires, C.C.A. N.Y., 5 F.2d 425, affirming, D.C.N.Y., The Windrush, 286 F. 251. But the fact that a vessel is privileged does not excuse her from failing to observe the rules, inattention to signals, or failure to answer where an answer is required, or from adopting such precautions as may be necessary to avoid a collision. The West Hartland, C.C.A.Wash., 2 F.2d 834.

PRIVILEGED VILLENAGE. In old English law. A species of villenage in which the tenants held by certain and determinate services; otherwise called "villein-socage." Bract. fol. 209. Now called "privileged copyhold," incuding the tenure in ancient demesne. 2 Bl.Comm. 99, 100.

PRIVILEGIA QUIE RE VERA SUNT IN PRZE-JUDICIUM REIPUBLICE, MAGIS TAMEN HABENT SPECIOSA FRONTISPICIA, ET BONI PUBLICI PRZETEXTUM, QUAM BONZE ET LE-GALES CONCESSIONES; SED PRZETEXTU LI-CIT NON DEBET ADMITTI ILLICIUM. 11 Coke, 88. Privileges which are truly in prejudice of public good have, however, a more specious front and pretext of public good than good and legal grants; but, under pretext of legality, that which is illegal ought not to be admitted.

PRIVILEGIUM. In Roman law. A special constitution by which the Roman emperor conferred on some single person some anomalous or irregular right, or imposed upon some single person some anomalous or irregular obligation, or inflicted on some single person some anomalous or irregular punishment. When such privilegia conferred anomalous rights, they were styled "favorable." When they imposed anomalous obligations, or inflicted anomalous punishments, they were styled "odious." Aust.Jur. § 748. A private law inflicting a punishment or compelling a reward. Calvinus, Lex.; Cicero, de Lege, 3, 19; pro Domo 17; Vicat, Voc.Jur.

In modern civil law. Every peculiar right or favor granted by the law, contrary to the common rule. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 197. A species of lien or claim upon an article of property, not dependent upon possession, but continuing until either satisfied or released. Such is the lien, recognized by modern maritime law, of seamen upon the ship for their wages. 2 Pars. Mar. Law, 561.

PRIVILEGIUM CLERICALE. The benefit of clergy, (q. v.).

PRIVILEGIUM EST BENIFICIUM PERSONALE, ET EXTINGUITUR CUM PERSONA. 3 Bulst. 8. A privilege is a personal benefit, and dies with the person.

PRIVILEGIUM EST QUASI PRIVATA LEX. 2 Bulst. 189. Privilege is, as it were, a private law.

PRIVILEGIUM NON VALET CONTRA REM-PUBLICAM. Privilege is of no force against the commonwealth. Even necessity does not excuse, where the act to be done is against the commonwealth. Bac. Max. p. 32, in reg. 5; Broom, Max. 18; Noy, Max., 9th ed. 34.

PRIVILEGIIUM, PROPERTY PROPTER. A qualified property in animals fere nature; e.g., a privilege of hunting, taking, and killing them, in exclusion of others. 2 Bl.Comm. 394; 2 Steph. Comm. 9.

Thus, the executor is in privity with the testator, the heir with the ancestor, the assignee with the assignor, the lessee with the lessor. Litchfield v. Crane, 8 S.Ct. 210, 123 U.S. 549, 31 L. Ed. 199.

Derivative interest founded on a growing out of, contract, connection, or bond of union between parties; mutuality of interest. Hodgson v. Midwest Oil Co., C.C.A.Wyo., 17 F.2d 71, 75.

Private knowledge; joint knowledge with another of a private concern; cognizance implying a consent or concurrence. Taylor v. Ferroman Properties, 103 Fla. 960, 139 So. 149, 150.

In a strict and technical sense a judgment creditor does not occupy such a relation to his debtor as to fall within the meaning of the word "privity," for there is no success-sion to the property of the debtor until a sale under execution is had and the judgment creditor has become vested with the title thereof. But a majority of the courts have enlarged the meaning of the word, and consequently have held that there is privity between the two before there is an actual devolution of the title of the property owned by the debtor. Buss v. Kemp Lumber Co., 23 N.M. 567, 170
P. 54, 56, L.R.A.1918C, 1015.

Privity of blood exists between an heir and his ancestor, (privity in blood inheritable,) and between coparceners. This privity was formerly of importance in the law of descent cast. Co. Litt.
271a, 242a; 2 Inst. 516; 8 Coke, 42b.

Privity of contract is that connection or relationship which exists between two or more contracting parties. It is essential to the maintenance of an action on any contract that there should subsist a privity between the plaintiff and defendant in respect of the matter sued on.
Brown.

Privity of estate is that which exists between lessee and lessee, tenant for life and remainder-man or reversioner, etc., and their respective assignees, and between joint tenants and coparceners. Privity of estate is required for a release by enlargement. Sweet.

PRIVY COUNCIL. In English law. The principal council of the sovereign, composed of the cabinet ministers, and other persons chosen by the king or queen as privy councillors. 2 Steph.
Comm. 479, 480. The judicial committee of the privy council acts as a court of ultimate appeal in various cases.

PRIVY COUNCILLOR. A member of the privy council.

PRIVY PURSE. In English law. The income set apart for the sovereign's personal use.

PRIVY SEAL. In English law. A seal used in making out grants or letters patent, preparatory to their passing under the great seal. 2 Bl.Comm.
347. A seal which the king uses to such grants or things as pass the great seal. Co. 2d Inst. 554. A seal of the British government which is affixed to documents not requiring the great seal. Encycl.
Br.

PRIVY SIGNET. In English law. The signet or seal which is first used in making out grants and letters patent, and which is always in the custody of the principal secretary of state. 2 Bl.Comm.
347.

PRIVY TOKEN. A false mark or sign, forged object, counterfeited letter, key, ring, etc., used to deceive persons, and thereby fraudulently get possession of property. St. 33 Hen. VIII. c. 1. A false privy token is a false privy document or sign, not such as is calculated to deceive men generally, but designed to defraud one or more individuals. Cheating by such false token was not indictable at common law. Pub. St. Mass. 1882,
p. 1294.

PRIVY VERDICT. In practice. A verdict given privily to the judge out of court, but which was of no force unless afterwards affirmed by a public verdict given openly in court. 3 Bl.Comm.
L.R.A. 432. Now generally superseded by the "sealed verdict," i.e., -one written out, sealed up, and delivered to the judge or the clerk of the court.

PRIZE. Anything offered as a reward of contest; a reward offered to the person who, among several persons or among the public at large, shall first (or best) perform a certain undertak-ning or accomplish certain conditions.

An award or recompense for some act done; some valua-table thing offered by a person for something done by others.
It is distinguished from a "bet" or "wager" in that it is known before the event who is to give either the premium or the prize, and there is but one operation until the accomplishment of the act, thing, or purpose for which it is In admiralty law. A vessel or cargo, belonging to one of two belligerent powers, apprehended or forcibly captured at sea by a war-vessel or privateer of the other belligerent, and claimed as enemy's property, and therefore liable to appropriation and condemnation under the laws of war. 1 C.Rob.Adm. 228. The apprehension and detention at sea of a ship or other vessel, by authority of a belligerent power, either with the design of appropriating it, with the goods and effects it contains, or with that of becoming master of the whole or a part of its cargo. 1 C.Rob. 228.

Captured property regularly condemned by the sentence of a competent prize court. 1 Kent, Comm. 102.

Goods taken on land from a public enemy are called "booty"; and the distinction between a prize and booty consists in this, that the former is taken at sea and the latter on land.

PRIZE COURTS. Courts having jurisdiction to adjudicate upon captures made at sea in time of war, and to condemn the captured property as prize if lawfully subject to that sentence. In England, the admiralty courts have jurisdiction as prize courts, distinct from the jurisdiction on the instance side. A special commission issues in time of war to the judge of the admiralty court, to enable him to hold such court. In America, the federal district courts have jurisdiction in cases of prize. 1 Kent, Comm. 101-103, 353-360. See Penhallow v. Doane, 3 Dall. 91, 1 L.Ed. 507.

PRIZE-FIGHT. A bout between two persons who fight each other by means of their fists, by consent, and who have an expectation of reward to be gained by the contest or competition, either to be won from the contestant or to be otherwise awarded, where there is an intent to inflict some degree of bodily harm on the contestant. Magness v. Isgrig, 145 Ark. 232, 225 S.W. 332, 334. An exhibition contest of pugilists for a stake or reward. Sampson v. State, 18 Okl.Cr. 191, 194 P. 2.79, 280; Fitzsimmons v. New York State Athletic Commission, Sup., 146 N.Y.S. 117, 120. It is not essential that the fight should be with the naked fist or hand. Sampson v. State, 18 Okl.Cr. 191, 194 P. 279, 280.

PRIZE GOODS. Goods which are taken on the high seas, jure belli, out of the hands of the enemy. The Adeline, 9 Cranch 244, 284, 3 L.Ed. 719.

PRIZE LAW. The system of laws and rules applicable to the capture of prize at sea; its condemnation, rights of the captors, distribution of the proceeds, etc. The Buena Ventura, D.C.Fla., 87 F. 927, 929.

PRO. For; in respect of; on account of; in behalf of. The introductory word of many Latin phrases.

PRO AND CON. For and against. A phrase descriptive of the presentation of arguments or evidence on both sides of a disputed question.

PRO BONO ET MALO. For good and ill; for advantage and detriment.

PRO BONO PUBLICO. For the public good; for the welfare of the whole.

PRO CONFESSO. For confessed; as confessed. A term applied to a bill in equity, and the decree founded upon it, where no answer is made to it by the defendant. 1 Barb.Ch.Pr. 96; The Richmond, D.C.Del., 2 F.2d 903.

PRO CONSILIO. For counsel given. An annuity pro consilio amounts to a condition, but in a feeblement or lease for life, etc., it is the consideration, and does not amount to a condition; for the state of the land by the feebment is executed, and the grant of the annuity is executory. Plowd. 412.

PRO CORPORATE REGNI. In behalf of the body of the realm. Hale, Corn. Law, 32.
that is, they are held undividedly, neither party being entitled to any specific portions of the land so held, but both or all having a joint interest in the undivided whole. Cowell; Bract. 1, 5.

PRO INTERESSE SUO. According to his interest; to the extent of his interest. Thus, a third party may be allowed to intervene in a suit pro interesse suo.

Examination pro interesse suo. When a person claims to be entitled to an estate or other property sequestered, whether by mortgage, judgment, lease, or otherwise, or has a title paramount to the sequestration, he should apply to the court to direct an inquiry whether the applicant has any, and what interest, in the property; and this inquiry is called an "examination pro interesse suo." Krippendorf v. Hyde, 4 S.Ct. 27, 110 U.S. 276, 28 L.Ed. 145; Hitz v. Jenks, 22 S.Ct. 598, 185 U.S. 155, 46 L.Ed. 851.

PRO LIESIONE FIDEL. For breach of faith. 3 Bl.Comm. 52.

PRO LEGATO. As a legacy; by the title of a legacy. A species of usucaption. Dig. 41, 8.

PRO MAJOR! CAUTELA. For greater caution; by way of additional security. Usually applied to some act done, or some clause inserted in an instrument, which may not be really necessary, but which will serve to put the matter beyond any question.

PRO NON SCRIPTO. As not written; as though it had not been written; as never written. Ambl. 139.

PRO OPERE ET LABORE. For work and labor. 1 Comyns, 18.

PRO PARTIBUS LIBERANDIS. An ancient writ for partition of lands between co-heirs. Reg. Orig. 316.

PRO POSSE SUO. To the extent of his power or ability. Bract. fol. 109.

PRO POSSESSIONE PRIESUMITUR DE JURE. From possession arises a presumption of law.

PRO POSSessor. As a possessor; by title of a possessor. Dig. 41, 5. See Id. 5, 3, 13.

PRO POSSESSORE HABETUR QUI DOLO INJURIAE DESIT POSSIDERE. He is esteemed a possessor whose possession has been disturbed by fraud or injury. Off. Exec. 166.

PRO QUERENTE. For the plaintiff; usually abbreviated pro quer.

Thus, the creditors (of the same class) of an insolvent estate are to be paid pro rata; that is, each is to receive a dividend bearing the same ratio to the whole amount of his claim that the aggregate of assets bears to the aggregate of debts.

PRO RE NATA. For the affair immediately in hand; for the occasion as it may arise; adapted to meet the particular occasion. Thus, a course of judicial action adopted under pressure of the exigencies of the affair in hand, rather than in conformity to established precedents, is said to be taken pro re nata.

PRO SALUTE ANIME. For the good of his soul. All prosecutions in the ecclesiastical courts are pro salute animae; hence it will not be a temporal damage founding an action for slander that the words spoken put any one in danger of such a suit. 3 Steph.Comm. (7th Ed.) 309n, 437; 4 Steph.Comm. 207.

PRO SE. For himself; in his own behalf; in person.

PRO SOCIO. For a partner; the name of an action in behalf of a partner. A title of the civil law. Dig. 17, 2; Cod. 4, 37.

PRO SOLIDO. For the whole; as one; jointly; without division. Dig. 50, 17, 141, 1.

PRO TANTO. For so much; for as much as may be; as far as it goes. Donley v. Hays, 17 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 400.

PRO TEMPORE. For the time being; temporarily; provisionally.

PROAMITA. Lat. In the civil law. A great paternal aunt; the sister of one's grandfather.

PROAMITA MAGNA. Lat. In the civil law. A great-great-aunt.

PROAVIA. Lat. In the civil law. A great-grandmother. Inst. 3, 6, 3; Dig. 38, 10, 1, 5.

PROAVUNCulus. Lat. In the civil law. A great-grandfather's or great-grandmother's brother. Inst. 3, 6, 3; Bract. fol. 68b; Ainsworth, Dict. 139.

PROAVUS. Lat. In the civil law. A great-grandfather. Inst. 3, 6, 1; Bract. fols. 67, 68. Employed in making genealogical tables.

PROBABILITY. Likelihood; appearance of reality or truth; reasonable ground of presumption; verisimilitude; consonance to reason. The likelihood of a proposition or hypothesis being true, from its conformity to reason or experience, or from superior evidence or arguments adduced in its favor. People v. O'Brien, 130 Cal. 1, 62 P. 297; Shaw v. State, 125 Ala. 80, 28 So. 390. Copinger v. Broderick, 39 Ariz. 473, 295 P. 780, 781. Inference; assumption; presumption. Ohio Bldg. Safety Vault Co. v. Industrial Board, 277 Ill. 96, 115 N.E. 149, 154. A condition or state created when there is more evidence in favor of the existence of a given proposition than there is against it. Harris v. State, 8 Ala.App. 33, 62 So. 477, 479.

High probability rule. A rule relating to the right of insured to abandon a vessel, by virtue of which the right of abandonment does not depend upon the certainty, but upon the high probability of a total loss, either of the property, or voyage, or both. The result is to act not upon certainties, but upon probabilities; and if the facts present a case of extreme hazard, and of probable expense, exceeding half the value of the ship, the insured may abandon, though it should happen that she was afterwards recovered at a less expense. Fireman’s Fund Ins. Co. v. Globe NaY. Co., C.C.A.Wash., 236 F. 618, 635. In re Salomon’s Estate, 287 N.Y.S. 814, 821, 159 Misc. 379.

PROBABLE. Having the appearance of truth; having the character of probability; appearing to be founded in reason or experience. State v. Thiele, 119 Iowa, 659, 94 N.W. 256. Having more evidence for than against; supported by evidence which inclines the mind to believe, but leaves some room for doubt; likely. Barrett v. Green River Sr. Rock Springs Live Stock Co., 28 Wyo. 379, 205 P. 742, 743. Apparently true, yet possibly false. Spadra Creek Coal Co. v. Harger, 130 Ark. 374, 197 S.W. 705.

In malicious prosecution the existence of such facts and circumstances as would excite the belief in a reasonable mind, acting on the facts within the knowledge of the prosecutor, that the person charged was guilty of the crime for which he was prosecuted. Linsford v. Dietrich, 86 Ala. 250, 5 So. 461, 11 Am.St.Rep. 37. A reasonable ground of suspicion, supported by circumstances sufficiently strong in themselves to warrant a prudent and cautious man to believe that the accused is guilty of the offense with which he is charged. Sanders v. Palmer, N.Y., 55 F. 217, 5 C.C. A. 77. Such a state of facts and circumstances known to the prosecutor personally or by information from others as would, in the judgement of the court, lead a man of ordinary caution, acting conscientiously in the light of such facts and circumstances, to believe that the person charged is guilty. Keebey v. Stiff, 145 Ark. 224 S. W. 396, 400. See, also, Galley v. Brennan, 216 N.Y. 118, 110 N.E. 179, 180. Where defendant in an action for malicious prosecution shows that before commencing the prosecution he, in good faith, consulted an attorney of good standing and made a full disclosure of all of the facts reasonably obtainable, and in good faith acted upon such advice, this of itself constitutes “probable cause.” Gustason v. Speak, 85 Cal.App. 725, 726; Treloar v. Harris, 66 Ind. App. 159, 117 N.E. 975, 976.

As justifying arrest without a warrant by one believed guilty of felony or to be engaged in commission of a felony, is a belief fairly arising out of facts and circumstances known to officer that a party is engaged in commission of a crime. Day v. U. S., C.C.A.Neb., 37 F.2d 80, 81.

For search warrant means reasonable ground of suspicion, supported by circumstances sufficiently strong to warrant cautious man in believing party is guilty of offense charged. Shore v. U. S., 49 F.2d 519, 521, 60 App.D. C. 137.

For arrest which must be shown as justification by defendants in action for false imprisonment is reasonable ground of suspicion supported by circumstances sufficient in themselves to warrant cautious man in believing accused to be guilty, but does not depend on actual state of case in point of fact, as it may turn out upon legal investigation, but on knowledge of facts which would be sufficient to induce reasonable belief in truth of accusation. Christ v. McDonald, 152 Or. 494, 52 P.2d 653, 658.

PROBABLE CONSEQUENCE. One that is more likely to follow its supposed cause than it is not to follow it. See, also, Collins v. Pecos & N. T. Ry. Co., 110 Tex. 577, 212 S.W. 477, 478.

PROBABLE EVIDENCE. Presumptive evidence is so called, from its foundation in probability.

PROBABLE FUTURE PAYMENTS. This expression in the Workmen’s Compensation Act, providing for commutation at an amount which will equal the total sum of the probable future payments capitalized at their present value upon the basis of interest calculated at 3 per cent. per annum, means such payments as would ordinarily become payable in the natural course of events, taking into consideration the expectancy of the beneficiary. H. W. Clark Co. v. Industrial Commission, 291 Ill. 561, 126 N.E. 579, 582.

PROBABLE GROUND. As used in the Illinois Quo Warranto Act, requiring the judge to be satisfied there is probable ground for the proceeding before granting leave to file the information in quo warranto, means a reasonable ground of presumption that a charge is or may be well founded. People v. Hartquist, 311 Ill. 127, 142 N.E. 475, 476.

PROBABLE REASONING. In the law of evidence. Reasoning founded on the probability of the fact or proposition sought to be proved or shown; reasoning in which the mind exercises a discretion in deducing a conclusion from premises. Burrell.

PROBABLY. In all probability; so far as the evidence shows; presumably; likely. In re Salomon’s Estate, 287 N.Y.S. 814, 820, 159 Misc. 379.

PROBANDI NECESSITAS INCUMBIT ILLI QUI AGIT. The necessity of proving lies with him who sues. Inst. 2, 20, 4. In other words, the burden of proof of a proposition is upon him who advances it affirmatively.

PROBARE. In Saxon law. To claim a thing as one’s own. Jacob.

In modern law language. To Make proof, as in the term “onus probandi,” the burden or duty of making proof.

PROBATE. Originally, relating to proof; afterwards, relating to the proof of wills.

The act or process of proving a will. Ross’ Estate v. Abrams, Tex.Civ.App., 239 S.W. 705, 707. The proof before an ordinary, surrogate, register, or other duly authorized person that a document produced before him for official recognition and registration, and alleged to be the last will and testament of a certain deceased person, is such in reality. A judicial act or determination of a court having competent jurisdiction establishing the validity of a will. Simpson v. Anderson, 305 Ill. 172, 137 N.E. 88, 89; Peterson v. Demmer, D. C.Tex., 34 F.Supp. 697, 700.

Also, the copy of the will, made out in parchment or due form, under the seal of the ordinary or court of probate; and usually delivered to the executor or administrator of the deceased, together with a certificate of the will’s having been proved.

In American law, now a general name or term used to include all matters of which probate courts have jurisdiction. Johnson v. Harrison, 47 Minn. 575, 50 N.W. 923, 28 Am.St.Rep. 382.

In the canon law, "probate" consisted of probatio, the proof of the will by the executor, and approbatio, the approbation given by the ecclesiastical judge to the proof. 4 Reeve, Eng. Law, 77. McCoy v. Clayton, 119 Pa. 133, 12 A. 860; Reno v. McCully, 65 Iowa 629, 22 N.W. 902; Appeal of Dawley, 16 R.I. 694, 19 A. 248.

The term is used, particularly in Pennsylvania, but not in a strictly technical sense, to designate the proof of his claim made by a non-resident plaintiff (when the same is on book-account, promissory note, etc.) who swears to the correctness and justness of the same, and that it is due, before a notary or other officer in his own state; also of the copy or statement of such claim filed in court, with the jurat of such notary attached. Stevens v. D. R. Dunlap Mercantile Co., 108 Miss. 690, 67 So. 160, 161.

Common and solemn form of probate. In English law, there are two kinds of probate, namely, probate in common form, and probate in solemn form. Probate in common form is granted in the registry, without any formal procedure in court, upon an ex parte application made by the executor. Probate in solemn form is in the nature of a final decree pronounced in open court, all parties interested having been duly cited. The difference between the effect of probate in common form and probate in solemn form is that probate in common form is revocable, whereas probate in solemn form is irrevocable, as against all persons who have been cited to see the proceedings, or who can be proved to have been privy to those proceedings, except in the case where a will of subsequent date is discovered, in which case probate of an earlier will, though granted in solemn form, would be revoked. Coote, Prob. Pr. (5th Ed.) 237-239; Mozley & Whitely. And see Luther v. Luther, 122 Ill. 558, 13 N.E. 166.

PROBATE BOND. One required by law to be given to the probate court or judge, as incidental to proceedings in such courts, such as the bonds of executors, administrators, and guardians. Thomas v. White, 12 Mass. 367.

PROBATE CODE. The body or system of law relating to all matters of which probate courts have jurisdiction. Johnson v. Harrison, 47 Minn. 575, 50 N.W. 923, 28 Am.St.Rep. 382.

PROBATE COURT. See Court of Probate.

PROBATE, DIVORCE, AND ADMIRALTY DIVISION. That division of the English high court of justice which exercises jurisdiction in matters formerly within the exclusive cognizance of the court of probate, the court for divorce and matrimonial causes, and the high court of admiralty. (Judicature Act 1873, § 34.) It consists of two judges, one of whom is called the "President." The existing judges are the judge of the old probate and divorce courts, who is president of the division, and the judge of the old admiralty court, and of a number of registrars. Sweet.

PROBATE DUTY. A tax laid by government on every will admitted to probate or on the gross value of the personal property of the deceased testator, and payable out of the decedent’s estate.

PROBATE HOMESTEAD. See Homestead.

PROBATE JUDGE. The judge of a court of probate.

PROBATE JURISDICTION. The exercise of the ordinary, generally understood power of a probate court, which includes the establishment of wills, settlement of decedents’ estates, supervision of guardianship of infants, control of their property, allotment of dower, and other powers pertaining to such subjects. Clark v. Carolina Homes, 189 N.C. 703, 128 S.E. 20, 25.

PROBATE PROCEEDING. A general designation of the actions and proceedings whereby the law is administered upon the various subjects within probate jurisdiction. Jackson v. Porter, 87 Okl. 112, 209 P. 430, 435. Specifically, a proceeding in rem for the determination of the disposition of decedents’ property. Lillard v. Tollier, 154 Tenn. 304, 285 S.W. 576, 578. A proceeding to contest the validity, as a will, of a paper which had been admitted to probate as such, or to have a paper probated as a will. Jackson v. Porter, 87 Okl. 112, 209 P. 430, 435.

PROBATIO. Lat. Proof ; more particularly direct, as distinguished from indirect or circumstantial evidence.

PROBATIO MORTUA. Dead proof; that is proof by inanimate objects, such as deeds or other written evidence.

PROBATIO PLENA. In the civil law. Full proof; proof by two witnesses, or a public instrument. Hallifax, Civil Law, b. 3, c. 9, no. 25; 3 Bl. Comm. 370.

PROBATIO SEMI-PLENA. In the civil law. Half-full proof; half-proof. Proof by one witness, or a private instrument. Hallifax, Civil Law, b. 3, c. 9, no. 25; 3 Bl.Comm. 370.

PROBATIO VIVA. Living proof; that is, proof by the mouth of living witnesses.
PROBATION. The evidence which proves a thing; the act of proving; proof. Trial; test; the time of novitiate. Used in the latter sense in the monastic orders, and sometimes in civil service laws and the like. People ex rel. Walter v. Woods, 168 App.Div. 3, 153 N.Y.S. 872.

In modern criminal administration, allowing a person convicted of some minor offense (particularly juvenile offenders) to go at large, under a suspension of sentence, during good behavior, and generally under the supervision or guardianship of a probation officer. People ex rel. Schindler v. Kaiser, 95 Misc. 681, 159 N.Y.S. 322, 325. An act of grace and clemency which may be granted by the trial court to a seemingly deserving defendant whereby such defendant may escape the extreme rigors of the penalty imposed by law for the offense of which he stands convicted. People v. Leach, 22 Cal.App.2d 525, 71 P.2d 594, 595.

PROBATION OFFICER. An officer or assistant of the court to assist in the exercise of the jurisdiction which courts of chancery have exercised from time immemorial to protect the financial, social, and moral welfare of infants within their jurisdiction, or to assist in the administration of the probation system for offenders against the criminal laws. State v. Monongalia County Court, 82 W.Va. 564, 96 S.E. 966, 968.

PROBATION SYSTEM. A system of administering the criminal laws, based on the effort to encourage good behavior in a convicted criminal by granting a deduction from his sentence or in case of its being his first offense, releasing him on condition that, for a stated period, he lead an orderly life.

PROBATIONER. One who is upon trial. A convicted offender who is allowed to go at large, under suspension of sentence, during good behavior.

PROBATIONES DEBENT ESSE EVIDENTES, ID EST, PERSPICUIE ET FACILES INTELLIGI. Co. Litt. 283. Proofs ought to be evident, that is, perspicuous and easily understood.

PROBATES EXTREMIS, PRAZESUMUNTUR MEDIA. The extremes being proved, the intermediate proceedings are presumed. 1 Greenl. Ev. § 20.

PROBATIVE. In the law of evidence. Having the effect of proof; tending to prove, or actually proving.

Testimony carrying quality of proof and having fitness to induce conviction of truth, consisting of fact and reason co-operating as co-ordinate factors. Globe Indemnity Co. v. Daviess, 243 Ky. 356, 47 S.W.2d 990, 992.

PROBATIVE FACTS. In the law of evidence. Facts which actually have effect of proving facts sought; evidentiary facts. 1 Benth. Ev. 18. Matters of evidence required to prove ultimate facts. Johnson v. Inter-Southern Life Ins. Co., 244 Ky. 83, 50 S.W.2d 16.

PROBATOR. In old English law. Strictly, an accomplice in felony who to save himself confessed the fact, and charged or accused any other as principal or accessory, against whom he was bound to make good his charge. It also signified an approver, or one who undertakes to prove a crime charged upon another. Jacob. See State v. Graham, 41 N.J.L. 16, 32 Am.Rep. 174.

PROBATORY TERM. In the practice of the English admiralty courts, the space of time allowed for the taking of testimony in an action, after issue formed. It is common to both parties, and either party may examine his witnesses. 2 Brown, Civ. Law 418.

PROBATEM EST. Lat. It is tried or proved.

PROBUS ET LEGALIS HOMO. Lat. A good and lawful man. A phrase particularly applied to a juror or witness who was free from all exception, and competent in point of law to serve on juries. Cro. Eliz. 654, 751; Cro. Jac. 635; Mart. & Y. 147; Bac. Abr. Juries (A) ; 3 Bl.Comm. 102. In the plural form: probi et legales homines.

PROCEDEndo. In practice. A writ by which a cause which has been removed from an inferior to a superior court by certiorari or otherwise is sent down again to the same court, to be proceed in there, where it appears to the superior court that it was removed on insufficient grounds. Cowell; Yates v. People, 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 446; 2 W.Bla. 1060; 6 Term 365.

A writ (procedendo ad judicium) which issued out of the common-law jurisdiction of the court of chancery, when judges of any subordinate court delayed the parties for that they would not give judgment either on the one side or on the other, when they ought so to do. In such a case, a writ of procedendo ad judicium was awarded, commanding the inferior court in the sovereign’s name to proceed to give judgment, but without specifying any particular judgment. Wharton. McCord v. Briggs and Turivas, 338 Ill. 158, 170 N. E. 320, 324. It was the earliest remedy for the refusal or neglect of justice on the part of the courts. In re Press Printers & Publishers, C.C.A. N.J., 12 F.2d 660, 664.

A writ by which the commission of a justice of the peace is revived, after having been suspended. 1 Bl.Comm. 353.

PROCEDEndo ON AID PRAYER. If one pray in aid of the crown in real action, and aid be granted, it shall be awarded that he sue to the sovereign in chancery, and the justices in the common pleas shall stay until this writ of procedendo de loquela come to them. So, also, on a personal action. New Nat. Brev. 154.

PROCEDURAL LAW. That which prescribes method of enforcing rights or obtaining redress for their invasion; machinery for carrying on a suit. Barker v. St. Louis County, 340 Mo. 986, 104 S.W.2d 371, 377, 378, 379.

As relating to crimes, that which provides or regulates the steps by which one who violates a criminal statute is punished. State v. Elmore, 179 La. 1057, 155 So. 896.

PROCEDURE. The mode of proceeding by which a legal right is enforced, as distinguished from the law which gives or defines the right, and which, by means of the proceeding, the court is to administer; the machinery, as distinguished from its product. Per Lush, L. J., in 7 Q. B. Div., 363. That which regulates the formal steps in an action or other judicial proceeding; a form, manner, and order of conducting suits or prosecutions. Mahoning Valley Ry. Co. v. Santoro, 93 Ohio St. 53, 112 N.E. 190, 191. The judicial process for enforcing rights and duties recognized by substantive law and for justly administering redress for infractions of them. Sims v. United Pacific Ins. Co., D.C.Idaho, 51 F.Supp. 433, 435.

This term is commonly opposed to the sum of legal principles constituting the substance of the law, and denotes the body of rules, whether of practice or of pleading, whereby rights are effectuated through the successful application of the proper remedies. It is also generally distinguished from the law of evidence. Brown; Sackheim v. Pigueron, 215 N.Y. 62, 109 N.E. 109, 111. Cochrane v. Ward, 3 Ind.App. 89, 29 N.E. 795, 31 N.E. 581, 51 Am.St.Rep. 229.

Procedure is the machinery for carrying on the suit, including pleading, process, evidence, and practice, whether in the trial court or the appellate court, or in the processes by which causes are carried to appellate courts for review, and in laying the foundation for such review. Jones v. Erie R. Co., 106 Ohio St. 408, 140 N.E. 366, 367. It not only embraces practice in courts, but regulation of the conduct of the court itself wherein such practice takes place. State v. Greenwald, 186 Ind. 321, 116 N.E. 296, 297.

The law of procedure is what is now commonly termed by jurists "adjective law," (q. v.)

PROCEDURE ACTS. Three acts of parliament passed in 1852, 1854, and 1860, for the amendment of procedure at common law. Moz. & W. They have been largely superseded by the Judicature Acts of 1873 and 1875. See Judicature Acts.

PROCEEDING. In a general sense, the form and manner of conducting judicial business before a court or judicial officer; regular and orderly progress in form of law; including all possible steps in an action from its commencement to the execution of judgment. Erwin v. U. S., D.C.Ga., 37 F. 470, 488, 2 L.R.A. 229. Sometimes, merely the record history of a case. See Uhe v. Railway Co., 3 S.D. 563, 54 N.W. 601.

An act which is done by the authority or direction of the court, express or implied; an act necessary to be done in order to obtain a given end; a prescribed mode of action for or in order to effect a legal right. Green v. Wyandotte Com'rs of Lincoln County, 126 Okl. 300, 259 P. 635, 637; Marblehead Land Co. v. Superior Court in and for Los Angeles County, 60 Cal.App. 644, 213 P. 718, 723. All the steps or modes adopted in the prosecution or defense of an action. Statter v. United States, C.C.A., 226 F.2d 819, 822. The word may be used synonymously with "action" or "suit" to describe the entire course of an action or suit in equity arising from the issuance of the writ or filing of the bill until the entry of a final judgment, or may be used to describe any act done by authority of a court of law and every step required to be taken in any cause by either party. Gonzales v. Gonzales, 240 Mass. 159, 133 N.E. 855, 856. The proceedings of a suit embrace all matters that occur in its progress judicially. Morewood v. Hollister, 6 N.Y. 320. For illustrative cases, see Venator v. Edwards, 126 Okl. 296, 259 P. 596, 599; Dixie Guano Co. v. Alpha Process Co., 5 Boyce (Del.) 277, 92 A. 1013, 1014; State v. Kerr, 117 Me. 254, 103 A. 585, 587. It is a prescribed mode of action for carrying into effect a legal right. Y. T. Tyler Co. v. Rebic, 118 Ohio St. 522, 161 N.E. 790, 791.

In a more particular sense, any application to a court of justice, however made, for aid in the enforcement of rights, for relief, for redress of injuries, for damages, or for any remedial object. See Coca-Cola Co. v. City of Atlanta, 152 Ga. 558, 110 S.E. 730, 732, 23 A.L.R. 1339. People v. Raymond, 186 Ill. 407, 57 N.E. 1066.

Collateral proceeding. One in which the particular question may arise or be involved incidentally, but which is not instituted for the very purpose of deciding such question; as in the rule that a judgment cannot be attacked, or a corporation's right to exist be questioned, in any collateral proceeding. Peyton v. Peyton, 28 Wash. 278, 68: P. 757.

Executory proceeding. In the law of Louisiana, a proceeding which is resorted to in the following cases: When the creditor's right arises from an act importing a confession of judgment, and which contains a privilege or mortgage in his favor; or when the creditor demands the execution of a judgment which has been rendered by a tribunal different from that within whose jurisdiction the execution is sought. Code Prac. La. art. 732.

Legal proceedings. See Legal Proceedings.

Ordinary proceedings. Those founded on the regular and usual mode of carrying on a suit by due course at common law.

Proceedings in bankruptcy. As used in Bankr. Act July 1, 1898, c. 541, §§ 23-25, 30 Stat. 552, 553 (11 U.S.C.A. §§ 74-76), this term covers questions between the alleged bankrupt or the receiver or trustee on the one hand and the general creditors as such on the other, commencing with the petition for adjudication and ending with the discharge, including matters of administration generally, and is distinguished from "controversies, at law and in equity arising in the course of bankruptcy proceedings," which involve questions between the receiver or trustee, representing the bankrupt and his general creditors as such, on the one hand, and adverse claimants, on the other, concerning property in the possession of the receiver or trustee or of the claimants, to be litigated in appropriate plenary suits, and not affecting directly administrative orders and judgments, but only the extent of the estate to be distributed ultimately among general creditors. In re Breyer Printing Co., C.C.A. Ill., 216 F. 878, 880.

The phrase "controversy arising in bankruptcy proceedings" includes those matters arising in the course of a bankruptcy proceeding which are not mere steps in the ordinary administration of the bankrupt estate, but present distinct and separable issues between the trustee and adverse claimants concerning the right and title to the bankrupt's estate. Gibbons v. Goldsmith, 222 F. 826, 828, 138 C.C.A. 252.

Special proceeding. This phrase has been used in the New York and other codes of procedure as a generic term for all civil remedies which are not ordinary actions. An action is an ordinary proceeding in a court of justice, by which one party prosecutes another party for the enforcement or protection of a right, the redress or prevention of a wrong, or the punishment of a public offence. Every other remedy is a special proceeding. State v. Rosenwald Bros. Co., 23 N.M. 578, 170 P. 42, 44.

Summary proceeding. Any proceeding by which a controversy is settled, case disposed of, or trial conducted, in a prompt and simple manner, without the aid of a jury, without presentment or indictment, or in other respects out of the regular course of the common law. In procedure, proceedings are said to be summary when they are short and simple in comparison with regular proceedings; e., in comparison with the proceedings which alone would have been applicable, either in the same or analogous cases, if summary proceedings had not been available. Sweet. And see Phillips v. Phillips, 8 N.J.L. 122.

Supplementary proceeding. A separate proceeding in an original action, in which the court where the action is pending is called upon to exercise its jurisdiction in aid of the judgment in the action. Bryant v. Bank of California, 7 Pac. 128, 130, 2 Cal.Unrep. 475. In a more particular sense, a proceeding in aid of execution, authorized by statute in some states in cases where no leviable property of the judgment debtor is found. It is a statutory equivalent in actions at law of the crew 1- forever. It is synonymous with avails, use, and profits. Wharton; Blackford v. Boak, 73 Or. 61, 143 P. 1136, 1137. Thus, goods purchased with money arising from the sale of other goods, or obtained on their credit, are proceeds of such goods. 2 Pars.Marit. L. 201; Bened.Adm. 290. Proceeds does not necessarily mean cash or money. Phelps v. Harris, 25 L.Ed. 855, 101 U.S. 380.

The word when applied to the income to be derived from real estate embraces the idea of issues, rents, profits, or produce. Gorin Sa. Bank v. Early, Mo.App., 260 S.W. 480, 483. It is synonymous with avails, use, and profits. In re Coughlin's Estate, 53 N.D. 188, 205 N.W. 14, 16.

PROCERES. Nobles; lords. The house of lords in England is called, in Latin, "Domus Procerum."

Formerly, the chief magistrates in cities. St. Armand, Hist. Eq. 88.

PROCÉS-VERBAL. In French law. A true relation in writing in due form of law, of what has been done and said verbally in the presence of a public officer, and what he himself does upon the occasion. It is a species of inquisition of office, and must be signed by the officer. Dalloz, Dict.; Hall v. Hall, 11 Tex. 526, 539.

A written report, which is signed, setting forth a statement of facts. This term is applied to the report proving the meeting and the resolutions passed at a meeting of shareholders, or to the report of a commission to take testimony. It can also be applied to the statement drawn up by a huissier in relation to any facts which one of the parties to a suit can be interested in proving; for instance the sale of a counterfeited object. Statements, drawn up by other competent authorities, of misdemeanors or other criminal acts, are also called by this name. Arg. Fr. Merc. Law, 570.

PROCESS. A series of actions, motions, or occurrences; progressive act or transaction; continuous operation; method, mode or operation, whereby a result or effect is produced; normal or actual course of procedure; regular proceeding, as, the process of vegetation or decomposition; a chemical process; processes of nature. Sokol v. Stein Fur Dyeing Co., 216 App.Div. 573, 216 N.Y.S. 167, 169; Kelley v. Coe, App.D.C., 99 F.2d 435, 441.

Patent Law

An art or method by which any particular result is produced. An act or series of acts performed upon the subject-matter to be transformed or reduced to a different state or thing. American Graphophone Co. v. Gimbel Bros. (D.C.) 234 F. 361, 368; Nestle Patent Holding Co. v. E. Frederics, Inc. (C.C.A.) 261 F. 780, 783. A means or method employed to produce a certain result or effect, or a mode of treatment of given materials to produce a desired result, either by chemical action, by the operation or application of some element or power of nature, or of one substance to another, irrespective of any machine or mechanical device; in this sense a "process" is patentable, though, strictly speaking, it is the art and not the process which is the subject of patent. Rohm v. Martin Dennis Co., D.C.N.J., 263 F. 106, 107.

Broadly speaking, a "process" is a definite combination of new or old elements, ingredients, operations, ways, or means to produce a new, improved or old result, and any substantial change therein by omission, to the same or better result, or by modification or substitution, or a different function, to the same or better result, is a new and patentable process. Minerals Separation v. Hyde, D.C. Mont., 207 F. 956, 960.
PROCESS

Mechanical process. A process involving solely the application of mechanism or mechanical principles; an aggregation of functions; not patent. Considered apart from the mechanism employed or the finished product of manufacture. Risdon Iron, etc., Works v. Medart, 15 S.Ct. 745, 158 U.S. 68, 39 L.Ed. 899; Cochrane v. Deener, 94 U.S. 780, 24 L.Ed. 139.

Practice

This word is generally defined to be the means of compelling the defendant in an action to appear in court; Gondas v. Gondas, 99 N.J.Eq. 473, 134 A. 615, 618; or a means whereby a court compels a compliance with its demands. Frank Adam Electric Co. v. Witman, 16 Ga.App. 574, 85 S.E. 819, 820. Stevens v. Associated Mortg. Co. of New Jersey, 107 N.J.Eq. 297, 152 A. 461, 462. And when actions were commenced by original writ, instead of, as at present, by writ of summons, the method of compelling the defendant to appear was by what was termed "original process," being founded on the original writ, and so called also to distinguish it from "mesne" or "intermediate" process, which was some writ or process issued during the progress of the suit. The word "process," however, as now commonly understood, signifies those formal instruments called "writs." The word "process" is in common-law practice frequently applied to the writ of summons, which is the instrument now in use for commencing personal actions. Farmers' Implement Co. v. Witman, 132 Minn. 389, 157 N.W. 642. But in its more comprehensive signification it includes not only the writ of summons, but all other writs which may be issued during the progress of an action. Those writs which are used to carry the judgments of the courts into effect, and which are termed "writs of execution" are also commonly denominated "final process," because they usually issue at the end of a suit. Anderson v. Dewey, 91 Conn. 510, 100 A. 99, 100.

A writ, summons, or order issued in a judicial proceeding to acquire jurisdiction of a person or his property, to require the performance or enforcement of a judgment. Royal Exchange Assurance of London v. Bennettsville & C. R. Co., 95 S.C. 375, 79 S.E. 104, 105. A writ or summons issued in the course of judicial proceedings. Radovich v. French, 36 Nev. 341, 135 P. 920, 921. The term in statutes may include all the acts of a court from the beginning to the end of its proceedings in a given cause; but more specifically it means the writ, summons, mandate, or other process which is used to inform the defendant of the institution of proceedings against him and to compel his appearance, in either civil or criminal cases. Blair v. Maxbass Security Bank of Maxbass, 44 N.D. 12, 176 N.W. 98, 100; In re Smith & Shuck, D.C. Iowa, 132 F. 301, 303.

Legal process. This term is sometimes used as equivalent to "lawful process." Cooley v. Davis, 34 Iowa 130. Thus, it is said that legal process means process not merely fair on its face, but in fact valid. State v. Wagoner, 123 Kan. 586, 256 P. 959, 960. But properly it means a writ, warrant, mandate, or other process issuing from a court of justice, such as an attachment, execution, injunction, etc. Grossman v. Weiss, 221 N. Y. S. 266, 267, 129 Misc. 234.

Mesne process. As distinguished from final process, this signifies any writ or process which includes or imports a confession of judgment and a privilege or lien in his favor, and also to enforce the execution of a judgment rendered in another jurisdiction. Code Prac. art. 732.

Final process. The last process in a suit; that is, writs of execution. Thus distinguished from mesne process, which includes all writs issued during the progress of a cause and before final judgment. Collier v. Blake, 16 Ga.App. 382, 85 S.E. 354. A distress warrant is final process, unless arrested by the interposition of a counter affidavit. Long v. Clark, 16 Ga.App. 355, 85 S.E. 358.

Irregular process. Sometimes defined to mean process absolutely void, and not merely erroneous and voidable; but that term is usually applied to all process not issued in strict conformity with the law, whether the defect appears upon the face of the process, or by reference to extrinsic facts, and whether such defects render the process absolutely void or only voidable. And see Bryan v. Congdon, 86 F. 221, 29 C.C.A. 670.

Judicial process. In a wide sense, this term may include all the acts of a court from the beginning to the end of its proceedings in a given cause; but more specifically it means the writ, summons, mandate, or other process which is used to inform the defendant of the institution of proceedings against him and to compel his appearance, in either civil or criminal cases. Blair v. Maxbass Security Bank of Maxbass, 44 N.D. 12, 176 N.W. 98, 100; In re Smith & Shuck, D.C. Iowa, 132 F. 301, 303.

Legal process. This term is sometimes used as equivalent to "lawful process." Cooley v. Davis, 34 Iowa 130. Thus, it is said that legal process means process not merely fair on its face, but in fact valid. State v. Wagoner, 123 Kan. 586, 256 P. 959, 960. But properly it means a writ, warrant, mandate, or other process issuing from a court of justice, such as an attachment, execution, injunction, etc. Grossman v. Weiss, 221 N. Y. S. 266, 267, 129 Misc. 234.

Mesne process. As distinguished from final process, this signifies any writ or process issued between the commencement of the action and the suing out of execution. 3 Bla.Comm. 279. This is substantially the meaning of the term as used in admiralty rule 1 (29 S.Ct. xxxix; 28 U.S.C.A. §§ 2071, 2073), providing that no mesne process shall issue until the libel shall be filed in the clerk's office. The City of Philadelphia, D.C.Pa., 263 F. 234, 235. "Mesne" in this connection may be defined as intermediate; intervening; the middle between two extremes. L. N. Dantzler Lumber Co. v. Texas & P. Ry. Co., 119 Miss. 328, 79 So. 770, 775, 49 A.L.R. 1669. Mesne process includes the writs of summons, (although that is now the usual commencement of actions,) because anciently that was preceded by the original writ. The writ of capias ad respondendum was called "mesne" to distinguish it, on the one hand, from the original process by which a suit was formerly commenced; and, on the other, from the final Original process. That by which a judicial proceeding is instituted; process to compel the appearance of the defendant. Distinguished from "mesne" process, which issues, during the progress of a suit, for some subordinate or collateral purpose; and from "final" process, which is process of execution. Appeal of Hotchkiss, 32 Conn. 353.

Process of interpleader. A means of determining the right to property claimed by each of two or more persons, which is in the possession of a third.

Process of law. See Due Process of Law.

Process roll. In practice. A roll used for the entry of process to save the statute of limitations. 1 Tidd, Pr. 161, 162.

Regular process. Such as is issued according to rule and the prescribed practice, or which emanates, lawfully and in a proper case, from a court or magistrate possessing jurisdiction.

Summary process. Such as is immediate or instantaneous, in distinction from the ordinary course, by emanating and taking effect without intermediate applications or delays. Gaines v. Travis, 8 N.Y.Leg.Obs. 49.

Trustee process. The name given in some states (particularly in New England) to the process of garnishment or foreign attachment.

Void process. Such as was issued without power in the court to award it, or which the court had not acquired jurisdiction to issue in the particular case, or which fails in some material respect to comply with the requisite form of legal process. Bryan v. Congdon, C.C.A.Kan., 86 F. 221, 223, 29 C.C.A. 670.

PROCESSION. To beat the bounds of (a parish, lands, etc.). Webster’s New Int. Dict. In some of the North American colonies (and still in the states of North Carolina and Tennessee), to make a procession around a piece of land in order formally to determine its bounds. Murray’s New English Dict.

The ceremony of perambulating the boundaries of a parish ("processioning," as it was commonly called in later times) is an extremely old one. Blomfield, Hist. Fritwell, quoted in Murray’s New English Dict. "Processioning" (q. v.).

PROCESSIONING. A survey and inspection of boundaries periodically performed in some of the American colonies by the local authorities. It was analogous in part to the English perambulation (q. v.), and was superseded by the introduction of the practice of accurate surveying and of recording. The term is still used of some official surveys in North Carolina and Tennessee. Cent. Dict. See Code Tenn.1858, § 2020 et seq.; Rhodes v. Ange, 173 N.C. 25, 91 S.E. 356.

PROCESSIONUS LEGIS EST GRAVIS VEXATIO; EXECUTIO LEGIS CORONAT OPUS. The process of the law is a grievous vexation; the execution of the law crowns the work. Co.Litt. .289b. The proceedings in an action while in progress are burdensome and vexatious; the execution, being the end and object of the action, crowns the labor, or rewards it with success.

PROCHEIN. L. Fr. Next. A term somewhat used in modern law, and more frequently in the old law; as prochein ami, prochein cousin. Co. Litt. 10.

PROCHEIN AMI. (Spelled, also, prochein amy and prochein amy.) Next friend. As an infant cannot legally sue in his own name, the action must be brought by his prochein ami; that is, some friend (not being his guardian) who will appear as plaintiff in his name.

PROCHEIN AVOIDANCE. Next vacancy. A power to appoint a minister to a church when it shall next become void.

PROCHRONISM: An error in chronology, consisting in dating a thing before it happened.

PROCINCTUS. Lat. In the Roman law. A girding or preparing for battle. Testamentum in pro-cinctu, a will made by a soldier, while girding himself, or preparing to engage in battle. Adams, Rom.Ant. 62; Calvin.

PROCCLAIM. To promulgate; to announce; to publish, by governmental authority, intelligence of public acts or transactions or other matters important to be known by the people. To give wide publicity to; to disclose. Simon v. Moore, D.C.Mo., 261 F. 638, 643.

PROCEDING. In English practice. A writ for the continuance of process after the death of the chief justice or other justices in the commission of oyer and terminer. Reg. Orig. 128.

PROCLEAR. To clear; to make void.

PROCLAIMATION. The act of proclaiming or publishing; a formal declaration; an avowal. Dickinson v. Page, 120 Ark. 377, 179 S.W. 1004, 1006; State v. Oregon-Washington R. & Na. Co., 128 Wash. 365, 223 P. 600, 608. The act of causing some state matters to be published or made generally known. A written or printed document in which are contained such matters, issued by proper authority. 3 Inst. 162; 1 Bl.Comm. 170.

Also, the public nomination made of any one to a high office; as, such a prince was proclaimed emperor.

In practice. The declaration made by the crier, by authority of the court, that something is about to be done.

It usually commences with the French word Oyez, do you hear, hear ye; in order to attract attention; it is particularly used on the opening of the court, and at its adjournment; it is also frequently employed to discharge persons who have been accused of crimes or misdemeanors.

In equity practice. Proclamation made by a sheriff upon a writ of attachment, summoning a defendant who has failed to appear personally to appear and answer the plaintiff’s bill. 3 Bl.Comm. 444.

PROCLAMATION BY LORD OF MANOR. A proclamation made by the lord of a manor (thrice repeated) requiring the heir or devisee of a deceased copyholder to present himself, pay the fine, and be admitted to the estate; failing which appearance, the lord might seize the lands quousque (provisionally.)

PROCLAMATION OF A FINE. The notice or proclamation which was made after the engrossment of a fine of lands, and which consisted in its being openly read in court sixteen times, viz., four times in the term in which it was made, and four times in each of the three succeeding terms, which, however, was afterwards reduced to one reading in each term. Cowell. See 2 Bl.Comm. 352.

PROCLAMATION OF EXIGENTS. In old English law. When an exigent was awarded, a writ of proclamation issued, at the same time, commanding the sheriff of the county wherein the defendant dwelt to make three proclamations thereof in places the most notorious, and most likely to come to his knowledge, a month before the outlawry should take place. 3 Bl.Comm. 284.

PROCLAMATION OF REBELLION. In old Englis law. A proclamation to be made by the sheriff commanding the attendance of a person who had neglected to obey a subpoena or attachment in chancery. If he did not surrender himself after this proclamation, a commission of rebellion issued. 3 Bl.Comm. 444.

PROCLAMATION OF RECURSANTS. A proclamation whereby recusants were formerly convicted, on non-appearance at the assizes. Jacob.

PROCLAMATOR. An officer of the English court of common pleas.

PRO—CONSUL. Lat. In the Roman law. Originally a consul whose command was prolonged after his office had expired. An officer with consular authority, but without the title of "consul." The governor of a province. Calvin.

PROCIMATION. The generation of children. It is said to be one of the principal ends of marriage. Inst. tit. 2, in pr.

PROCATION. Agency; proxy; the act of procuration takes place when an individual sees or perceives something or another or by his authority. The use of the word procuration (usually, per procuratione, or abbreviating to per proc. or p. p.) on a promissory note by an agent is notice that the agent has but a limited authority to sign. Neg.Instr.Act. § 21.

An express procuration is one made by the express consent of the parties. An implied or tacit procuration takes place when an individual sees another managing his affairs and does not interfere to prevent it. Dig. 17, 1, 6, 2; 50, 17, 60; Code 7, 32, 2. Procurations are also divided into those which contain absolute power, or a general authority, and those which give only a limited power. Dig. 3, 3, 58; 17, 1, 60, 4.

Also, the act or offence of procuring women for lewd purposes. Odgers, C.L. 214.

In ecclesiastical law. In the plural, the term denotes certain sums of money which parish priests pay yearly to the bishops or archdeacons, attonitio visitationis. Dig. 3, 39, 25; Aylliffe, Parerg. 429; 17 Viner, Abr. 544.

PROCURATION, FEE, OR MONEY. In English law. Brokerage or commission allowed to scriveners and solicitors for obtaining loans of money. 4 Bl.Comm. 157.
PROCURATIONEM ADVERSUS NULLA EST PROZESRIPTIO. Da. Ir. K. B. 6. There is no prescription against procuration.

PROCURATOR. In the civil law. A proctor; a person who acts for another by virtue of a procuration. Dig. 3, 3, 1.

In old English law. An agent or attorney; a bailiff or servant. A proxy of a lord in parliament.

In ecclesiastical law. One who collected the fruits of a benefice for another. An advocate of a religious house, who was to solicit the interest and plead the causes of the society. A proxy or representative of a parish church.

PROCURATOR FISCAL. In Scotch law, this is the title of the public prosecutor for each district, who institutes the preliminary inquiry into crime within his district. The office is analogous, in some respect, to that of "prosecuting attorney," "district attorney," or "state's attorney" in America.

PROCURATOR IN REM SUAM. Proctor (attorney) in his own affair, or with reference to his own property. This term is used in Scotch law to denote that a person is acting under a procuration (power of attorney) with reference to a thing which has become his own property. Ersk.Inst. 3, 5, 2.

PROCURATOR LITIS. In the civil law. One who by command of another institutes and carries on for him a suit. Vicat, Voc.Jur. Procurator is properly used of the attorney of actus (the plaintiff), defensor of the attorney of reus (the defendant). It is distinguished from advocatus, who was one who undertook the defence of persons, not things, and who was generally the patron of the person whose defence he prepared, the person himself speaking it. It is also distinguished from cognitor who conducted the cause in the presence of his principal, and generally in cases of citizenship; whereas the procurator conducted the cause in the absence of his principal. Calvinus, Lex.

PROCURATOR NEGOTORIUM. In the civil law. An attorney in fact; a manager of business affairs for another person.

PROCURATOR PROVINCIÆ. In Roman law. A provincial officer who managed the affairs of the revenue, and had a judicial power in matters that concerned the revenue. Adams, Rom.Ant. 178.

PROCURATORIUM. In old English law. The procuratory or instrument by which any person or community constituted or delegated their procurator or proctors to represent them in any judicial court or cause. Cowell.

PROCURATORY OF RESIGNATION. In Scotch law. A form of proceeding by which a vassal authorizes the feu to be returned to his superior. Bell. It is analogous to the surrender of copyholds in England.

PROCURATRIX. In old English law. A female agent or attorney in fact. Fleta, lib. 3, c. 4, § 4.

PROCURE. To initiate a proceeding; to cause a thing to be done; to instigate; to contrive, bring about, effect, or cause. Marcus v. Bernstein, 117 N.C. 31, 23 S.E. 38. Rosenbarger v. State, 154 Ind. 425, 56 N.E. 914. To persuade, induce, prevail upon, or cause. Hines v. State, 16 Ga.App. 411, 85 S.E. 452, 454. To obtain, as intoxicating liquor, for another. State v. Desmarais, 81 N.H. 199, 123 A. 582, 583. Compare, however, People v. Robertson, 284 Ill. 620, 120 N.E. 539, 541. To find or introduce;—said of a broker who obtains a customer. Low v. Paddock, Mo.App., 220 S.W. 969, 972. To bring the seller and the buyer together so that the seller has an opportunity to sell. Fritsch v. Hess, 162 P. 70, 71, 49 Utah, 75. See also, Miller v. Eldridge, Tex.Civ.App., 286 S.W. 999, 1000.

To "procure" an act to be done is not synonymous with, to "suffer" it to be done. 2 Ben. 196.

PROCURER. One who procures for another the gratification of his lusts; a pimp; a panderer; one who solicits trade for a prostitute or lewd woman. State v. Smith, 149 La. 700, 90 So. 28, 30. One that procures the seduction or prostitution of girls. The offense is punishable by statute in England and America. One who uses means to bring anything about, especially one who does so secretly and corruptly. U. S. v. Richmond, C.C.A. Pa., 17 F.2d 27, 30.

PROCURER. In French law. An attorney; one who has received a commission from another to act on his behalf. There were in France two classes of procureurs: Procureurs ad negotia, appointed by an individual to act for him in the administration of his affairs; persons invested with a power of attorney; corresponding to "attorneys in fact." Procureurs ad lites were persons appointed and authorized to act for a party in a court of justice. These corresponded to attorneys at law, (now called, in England, "solicitors of the supreme court.") The order of procureurs was abolished in 1791, and that of avous established in their place. Mozley & Whitley.

PROCUREUR DE LA REPUBLIQUE. (Formerly procureur du roi.) In French law. A public prosecutor, with whom rests the initiation of all criminal proceedings. In the exercise of his office (which appears to include the apprehension of offenders) he is entitled to call to his assistance the public force, (posse comitatus;) and the officers of police are auxiliary to him.

PROCUREUR GENERAL, or IMPERIAL. In French law. An officer of the imperial court, who either personally or by his deputy prosecuted every one who was accused of a crime according to the forms of French law. His functions were apparently confined to preparing the case for trial at the assizes, assisting in that trial, demanding the sentence in case of a conviction, and being present at the delivery of the sentence. He had a general superintendence over the officers of police and of the juges d'instruction, and he required from the procureur du roi a general report once in every three months. Brown.

A broker will be regarded as the "procuring cause" of a sale, so as to be entitled to commission, if his efforts are the foundation on which the negotiations resulting in a sale are begun. Cales v. Pattison, 189 Okl. 160, 114 P.2d 457, 458.

PRODES HOMINES. A term said by Tomlins to be frequently applied in the ancient books to the barons of the realm, particularly as constituting a council or administration or government. It is probably a corruption of "probi homines."

PRODIGAL. In civil law. A person who, though of full age, is incapable of managing his affairs, and of the obligations which attend them, in consequence of his bad conduct, and for whom a curator is therefore appointed. See Prodigus.

According to the Code Napoleon, a French subject of full age, who is of extravagant habits, when adjudged to be a "prodigal," is restrained from dealing with his movables without the consent of a legal adviser.

PRODIGUS. Lat. In Roman law. A prodigal; a spendthrift; a person whose extravagant habits manifested an inability to administer his own affairs, and for whom a guardian might therefore be appointed.

PRODIGATION. Treason; treachery.

PRODITOR. A traitor.

PRODITORIE. Reasonably. This is a technical word formerly used in indictments for treason, when they were written in Latin. Tomlins.

PRODUCE, n. The product of natural growth, labor, or capital. Articles produced or grown from or on the soil, or found in the soil. Neshoff Packing Co. v. Sharpe, 240 S.W. 1101, 1103, 146 Tenn. 293.

The produce of a farm has been held not to include beef raised and killed thereon. Philadelphia v. Davis, 6 Watts & S. (Pa.) 269. But see City of Higbee v. Burgin, 197 Mo. App. 682, 201 S. W. 558.

PRODUCE, v. To bring forward; to show or exhibit; to bring into view or notice; as, to present a play, including its presentation in motion pictures. Manners v. Morosco, D.C.N.Y., 254 F. 737, 740; to present testimony, In re McGuire's Will, 220 N.Y.S. 773, 776, 128 Misc. 679; to produce books or writings at a trial in obedience to a subpoena duces tecum.

To produce, for the purpose of use in a legal hearing, within the meaning of a subpoena ordering a witness to produce a public record, means more than an appearance with the document in his possession, and implies the handing of it to the tribunal for perusal, and, if that is not asked, the reading aloud of it by witness or counsel. Langley v. F. W. Woolworth Co., 46 R.I. 394, 129 A. 1, 2.

To make, originate, or yield, as gasoline. Gay OH Co. v. State, 170 Ark. 587, 280 S.W. 632, 634. To bring to the surface, as oil. Tedrow v. Shaffer, 23 Ohio App. 343, 155 N.E. 510, 511.

To yield, as revenue. Thus, sums are "produced" by taxation, not when the tax is levied, but when the sums are collected. Board of Education of Louisville v. Sea, 167 Ky. 772, 181 S.W. 670, 673.

PRODUCE BROKER. A person whose occupation it is to buy or sell agricultural or farm products. U. S. v. Simons, 1 Abb. (U.S.) 470, Fed.Cas. No.16,291.

PRODUCENT. The party calling a witness under the old system of the English ecclesiastical courts.

PRODUCING. Bring about, to cause to happen or take place, as an effect or result. Strong v. Aetna Casualty & Surety Co., Tex.Civ.App., 170 S.W.2d 786, 788.

PRODUCING CAUSE. Respecting broker's commission, is act which, continuing in unbroken chain of cause and effect, produces result. Schebesta v. Stewart, Tex.Civ.App., 37 S.W.2d 781, 786.

A producing cause of an employee's death for which compensation is sought is that cause which, in a natural and continuous sequence, produces the death, and without which death would not have occurred. Jones v. Traders & General Ins. Co., 140 Tex. 599, 169 S.W.2d 160, 162.

The "products" of a farm may include the increase of cattle on the premises. Case v. Ploutz, 154 N.Y.S. 914, 915, 90 Misc. 568.

PRODUCITO SECTLE. In old English law. Production of suit; the production by a plaintiff of his secta or witnesses to prove the allegations of his count. 3 Bl.Comm. 295.

PRODUCTION. That which is produced or made product; fruit of labor; as the productions of the earth, comprehending all vegetables and fruits; the productions of intellect, or genius, as poems and prose compositions; the productions of art, as manufactures of every kind. Dano v. R. Co., 27 Ark. 567.

In political economy. The creation of objects which constitute wealth. The requisites of production are labor, capital, and the materials and motive forces afforded by nature. Of these, labor and the raw material of the globe are primary and indispensable. Natural motive powers may be called in to the assistance of labor, and are a help, but not an essential, of production. The remaining requisite, capital, is itself the product of labor. Its instrumentality in production is therefore, in reality, that of labor in an indirect shape. Mill, Pol. Econ.; Wharton.

PRODUCTION OF SUIT. In pleading. The formula, "and therefore [or thereupon] he brings his suit," etc., with which declarations always conclude. Steph.P1. 428, 429. In old pleading, this referred to the production by the plaintiff of his secta or suit, i.e. persons prepared to confirm what he had stated in the declaration. The phrase has remained; but the practice from which it arose is obsolete. 3 Bla.Comm. 295.

PROFANE. Irreverent toward God or holy things; written or spoken; acting or acted in, manifest or implied contempt of sacred things. Town of Torrington v. Taylor, 59 Wyo. 109, 137 P.2d 621, 624; Duncan v. U. S., C.C.A.Or., 48 P.2d 128, 133. That which has not been consecrated. Dig. 11, 7, 2, 4.

PROFANE PLACE. A place which is neither saccrated nor sanctified nor religious. Dig. 11, 7, 2, 4.

PROFANELY. In a profane manner. In Penn-

PROFECTITIUS. Lat. In the civil law. That which descends to us from our ascendants. Dig. 23, 3, 5.

PROFER. In old English law. An offer or profer; an offer or endeavor to proceed in an action, by any man concerned to do so. A return made by a sheriff of his accounts into the exchequer; a payment made on such return. Cowell.

PROFERT IN CURIA. L. Lat: (Sometimes written profert in curiam.) He produces in court. In old practice, these words were inserted in a declaration, as an allegation that the plaintiff was ready to produce, or did actually produce, in court, the deed or other written instrument on which his suit was founded, in order that the court might inspect the same and the defendant hear it read. The same formula was used where the defendant pleaded a written instrument.

In modern practice. An allegation formally made in a pleading, where a party alleges a deed, that he shows it in court, it being in fact retained in his own custody. Steph.P1. 67. But by virtue of the allegation, the deed is then constructively in possession of the court. 6 M. & G. 277; Tucker v. State, 11 Md. 322; Germain v. Wilgus, 67 F. 597, 14 C.C.A. 561. The profert of any recorded instrument, as letters patent, is equivalent to annexing a copy. American Bell Tel. Co. v. Southern Tel. Co., C.C.Ark., 34 F. 803. This result does not occur, however, in the case of other documents, such as a note. Waterhouse v. Sterchi B’os. Furniture Co., 139 Tenn. 117, 201 S.W. 150, 151.

Profert and oyer are abolished in England by the Common Law Procedure Act, 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76; and a provision exists, 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, for allowing inspection of all documents in the possession or under the control of the party against whom the inspection is asked. 25 E. L. & E. 304. In many of the states profert has been abolished, and in some instances the instrument must be set forth in the pleading of the party relying upon it.

PROFESS. To make open declaration of, to make public declaration or avowal. Wristen v. Wristen, Tex.Civ.App., 119 S.W.2d 1104, 1106.

PROFESSION. A public declaration respecting something. Cod. 10, 41, 6.

A vocation, calling, occupation or employment involving labor, skill, education, special knowledge and compensation or profit, but the labor and skill involved is predominantly mental or intellectual, rather than physical or manual. Maryland Casualty Co. v. Crazy Water Co., Tex.Civ.App., 160 S.W.2d 102, 104. The method or means pursued by persons of technical or scientific training. Board of Sup’rs of Amherst County v. Boaz, 176 Va. 126, 10 S.E.2d 498, 499.

The term originally contemplated only theology, law, and medicine, but as applications of science and learning are extended to other departments of affairs, other vocations also receive the name, which implies professed attain-

In ecclesiastical law. The act of entering into a religious order. See 17 Vin.Abr. 545.

PROFESSIONAL. A term applied in the Immigration Law, 8 U.S.C.A. § 137c, to an alien instrumental musician who is of distinguished merit and ability or is a member of a musical organization of distinguished merit and is applying for admission as such. It is opposed to amateur, and as used in the statute refers to one who pursues an art and makes his living therefrom. U. S. ex rel. Liebmann v. Flynn, D.C.N.Y., 16 F.2d 1006, 1007; U. S. v. Commissioner of Immigration at Port of New York, C.C.A.N.Y., 298 F. 449, 450.

PROFESSIONAL EMPLOYMENT. Within the meaning of a statute authorizing actions for misconduct or neglect, professional services by an attorney are not limited to litigation, but include giving advice, managing a business, devising plans, and making collections, and the employment may be recognized as professional, although including services not ordinarily classed as professional services; whether the attorney is professionally employed depending on the relations and mutual understanding of what was said and done, and on all the facts and circumstances of PROFILE. In civil engineering, a drawing representing the elevation of the various points on the plan of a road, or the like, above some fixed elevation. Pub.St.Mass.1882, p. 1294. A side or sectional elevation, or a drawing showing a vertical section of the ground along a surveyed line or graded work. Also, an outline or contour. Taggart v. Great Northern Ry. Co., D.C.Wash., 208 F. 455, 456. As used in Act March 3, 1875, c. 152, § 1, 18 St. 482 (43 U.S.C.A. § 934), granting rights of way through the public lands to railroads, the term, in view of regulations of the general land office, may be deemed to mean a map of alignment or of definite location. Taggart v. Great Northern Ry. Co., C.C.A.Wash., 211 F. 288, 292.

The term "profit," as applied to a corporation, has a larger meaning than "dividends," and covers benefits of any kind, the excess of value over cost, acquisition beyond expenditure, gain or advance. Booth v. Gross, Kelley & Co., 30 N.M. 465, 238 P. 829, 831, 41 A.L.R. 868. Dividends are properly declared only from profits after they have been earned. Indiana Veneer & Lumber Co. v. Hageman, 57 Ind.App. 668, 105 N.E. 253, 256. This is a word of very extended signification. In commerce, it means the advance in the price of goods sold beyond the cost of purchase. In distinction from the wages of labor, it is well understood to imply the net return to the capital of stock employed, after deducting all the expenses, including not only the wages of those employed by the capitalist, but the wages of the capitalist himself for superintending the employment of his capital or stock. Columbus Mining Co. v. Ross, 218 Ky. 98, 290 S. W. 1052, 1053, 50 A.L.R. 1394. After indemnifying the capitalist for his outlay, there commonly remains a surplus, which is his profit, the net income from his capital. 1 Mill, Polit. Econ. c. 15.

Profits have been divided by writers on political economy into gross and net,—gross profits being the whole difference between the value of advances and the value of returns made by their employment, and net profits being so much of that difference as is attributable solely to the capital employed. Malthus, Political Econ.; M'Culloch, Political Econ. 563. For judicial criticism of the expression "gross profits," see the opinion of Jesse!, M. R., 10 App.Cas., 440. See, also, Buie v. Kennedy, 164 N. C. 290, 80 S.E. 445, 446.

The benefit, advantage, or pecuniary gain accruing to the owner or occupant of land from its actual use; as in the familiar phrase "rents, issues and profits," or in the expression "mesne profits."

A devise of the rents and profits of land is equivalent to a devise of the land itself, and will carry the legal as well as the beneficial interest therein. 2 B. & Ald. 42; Earl v. Rowe, 35 Me. 414, 58 Am.Dec. 714; 1 Bro.C.C. 310.

A division sometimes made of incorporeal hereditaments. 2 Steph.Comm. 2. Profits are divided into profits a prendre and profits a rendre. See those titles, infra.

Mesne profits. Intermediate profits; that is, profits which have been accruing between two given periods. Thus, after a party has recovered the land itself in an action of ejectment, he frequently brings another action for the purpose of recovering the profits which have been accruing or arising out of the land between the time when his title to the possession accrued or was raised and the time of his recovery in the action of ejectment, and such an action is thence termed an "action for mesne profits." Brown; New York, O. & W. Ry. Co. v. Livingston, 206 App.Div. 589, 201 N.Y.S. 629, 633.

Mesne profits, action of. An action of trespass brought to recover profits derived from land, while the possession of it has been improperly withheld; that is, the yearly value of the premises. Worthington v. Hiss, 70 Md. 172, 16 A. 534; Thompson v. Bower, 60 Barb. (N.Y.) 477.

Net profits. Theoretically all profits are "net." Buie v. Kennedy, 164 N.C. 290, 80 S.E. 445, 446. But as the expression "gross profits" is sometimes used to describe the mere excess of present value over former value, or of returns from sales over prime cost, the phrase "net profits" is appropriate to describe the gain which remains after the further deduction of all expenses, charges, costs, allowance for depreciation, etc.

Profit a prendre. Called also "right of common." A right exercised by one man in the soil of another, accompanied with participation in the profits of the soil thereof. A right to take a part of the soil or produce of the land. Gadow v. Hunkelitz, 160 Wis. 293, 151 N.W. 810, 811, Ann.Cas. 1917D, 91.

The term includes the right to take soil, gravel, minerals, and the like from another's land. Munsey v. Mills & Garittty, 115 Tex. 469, 283 S.W. 754, 759; Mathews Slate Co. of New York v. Advance Industrial Supply Co., 172 N.Y. 830, 832, 185 App.Div. 74; the right to take seaweed, Hill v. Lord, 48 Me. 100; and to take coal or timber, Huff v. McCauley, 53 Pa. 206, 91 Am.Dec. 203; the right to hunt, St. Helen Shooting Club v. Mogle, 234 Mich. 60, 207 N.W. 915, 917; or fish, Turner v. Hebron, 22 A. 951, 61 Conn. 175, 14 L.R.A. 386; and the right to cut grass, Baker v. Kenney, 145 Iowa 638, 124 N.W. 901, 139 Am.St.Rep. 456; but not the right to take running water, since it is not a product of the soil. Hill v. Ford, 48 Me. 83. Profits a prendre differ from easements, in that the former are rights of

In practice. The name of a writ issued by a superior court, directed to the judge and parties of a suit in an inferior court, commanding them to cease from the prosecution of the same, upon a suggestion that the cause originally, or some collateral matter arising therein, does not belong to that jurisdiction, but to the cognizance of some other court. 3 B1.Comm. 112; Alexander v. Crollott, 199 U.S. 580, 26 S.Ct. 161, 50 L.Ed. 317. It is only issued in cases of extreme necessity where the grievance cannot be redressed by ordinary proceedings at law, or in equity, or by appeal. Niagara Falls Power Co. v. Halpin, 45 N.Y.S.2d 421, 424, 181 Misc. 13, State ex rel. Levy v. Savorud, 143 Ohio St. 451, 55 N.E.2d 735, 736.

An extraordinary writ, issued by a superior court to an inferior court to prevent the latter from exceeding its jurisdiction, either by prohibiting it from assuming jurisdiction in a matter over which it has no control, or from going beyond its legitimate powers in a matter of which it has jurisdiction. State v. Medler, 19 N.M. 252, 142 P. 376, 377. An extraordinary judicial writ issuing out of a court of superior jurisdiction, directed to an inferior court or tribunal exercising judicial powers, for the purpose of preventing the inferior tribunal from usurping a jurisdiction with which it is not lawfully vested, State v. Stanfield, 11 Okl.Cr. 147, 143 P. 519, 522; from assuming or exercising jurisdiction over matters beyond its cognizance, Jackson v. Calhoun, 156 Ga. 756, 120 S.E. 114, 115; or from exceeding its jurisdiction in matters of which it has cognizance. Jackson v. Calhoun, 156 Ga. 756, 120 S.E. 114, 115.

The writ of prohibition is the counterpart of the writ of mandate. It arrests the proceedings of any tribunal, corporation, board, or person. Code Civ.Proc.Cal. § 1102. The writ of prohibition is a punishment, but does not render the marriage null. Bowyer, Mod. Civil Law, 44. See Impediments.

PROHIBITIVE IMPEDIMENTS. Those impediments to a marriage which are only followed by a punishment, but do not render the marriage null. Bowyer, Mod. Civil Law, 44. See Impediments.

PROJET DE LOI. A bill in a legislative body.

PROLEM ANTE MATRIMONIUM NATAM, ITA UT POST LEGITIMAM, LEX CIVILIS SUCEDERE FACIT IN HEREDITATE PARENTUM; SED PROLEM, QUAM MATRIMONIUM NON PARIT, SUCEDERE NON SINIT LEX ANGLORUM. Fortesc. c. 39. The civil law permits the offspring born before marriage, provided such...
PROLYTIE. In Roman law. A term applied to something; an extension of the time limited for prolongation. Time added to the duration of the office belongs to the lord chancellor by prescription; 3 Steph. Comm. 347.

PROLOCUTOR. In ecclesiastical law. The president or chairman of a convocation. The speaker of the house of lords is called the prolocutor. The office belongs to the lord chancellor by prescription; 3 Steph. Comm. 347.

PROLICIDE. In medical jurisprudence. A word used to designate the destruction of the human offspring. Jurists divide the subject into feticide, or the destruction of the fetus in utero, and infanticide, or the destruction of the newborn infant. Ry. Med. Jur. 280.

PROMATERTERA. Lat. In the civil law. A maternal great-aunt; the sister of one’s grandmother. Inst. 3. 6. 3; Dig. 38. 10. 10. 14.

PROMATERTERA MAGNA, Lat. In the civil law. A great-great-aunt.

PROMISE. A declaration which binds the person who makes it, either in honor, conscience, or law, to do or forbear a certain specific act, and which gives to the person to whom made a right to expect or claim the performance of some particular thing. Hoskins v. Black, 190 Ky. 98, 226 S.W. 384, 385. A declaration, verbal or written, made by one person to another for a good or valuable consideration, in the nature of a covenant by which the promisor binds himself to do or forbear some act, and gives to the promisee a legal right to demand and enforce a fulfillment. Scott v. S. H. Kress & Co., Tex. Civ. App., 191 S.W. 714, 716. An express undertaking, or agreement to carry out a purpose into effect. E. I. Du Pont De Nemours & Co. v. Claiborne-Reno Co., C.C.A. Iowa, 64 F.2d 224, 89 A.L.R. 238.

While a “promise” is sometimes loosely defined as a declaration by any person of his intention to do or forbear from anything at the request or for the use of another. Finlay v. Swirsy, 103 Conn. 624, 131 A. 420, 423; Beck v. Wilkins-Ricks Co., 186 N. E. 210, 119 S. E. 235, 236; it is to be distinguished, on the one hand, from a mere declaration of intention involving no engagement or assurance as to the future. Scott v. S. H. Kress & Co., Tex. Civ. App., 191 S.W. 714, 716. And, on the other, from “agreement,” which is an obligation arising upon reciprocal promises, or upon a promise founded on a consideration. Abbott.

Strictly speaking a promise is not a representation; the failure to make it good may give a cause of action, but it is not a false representation, which will authorize the rescission of a contract. Cunyus v. Guenther, 96 Ala. 564, 11 So. 649.

Fictitious promise. Sometimes called “implied promises,” or “promises implied in law,” occur in the case of those contracts which were invented to enable persons in certain cases to take advantage of the old rules of pleading peculiar to contracts, and which are not now of practical importance. Sweet.

Mutual promises. Promises simultaneously made by and between two parties; each promise being the consideration for the other. Anson Contr. 72; 14 M. & W. 855.

Naked promise. One given without any consideration, equivalent, or reciprocal obligation, and for that reason not enforceable at law. Arend v. Smith, 151 N.Y. 502, 45 N.E. 872.

New promise. An undertaking or promise, based upon and having relation to a former promise which, for some reason, can no longer be enforced, whereby the promisor recognizes and revives such former promise and engages to fulfill it.

Promise of marriage. A contract mutually entered into by a man and a woman that they will marry each other.

Promise to pay the debt of another. Within the statute of frauds, a promise to pay the debt of another is an undertaking by a person not before liable, for the purpose of securing or performing the same duty for which the party for PROMISEE. One to whom a promise has been made.

PROMISOR. One who makes a promise.

PROMISSOR. Lat. In the civil law. A promis- sor; properly the party who undertook to do a thing in answer to the interrogation of the other party, who was called the "stipulator."

PROMISSORY. Containing or consisting of a promise; in the nature of a promise; stipulating or engaging for a future act or course of conduct.

As to promissory "Oath," "Representation," and "Warranty," see those titles.

PROMISSORY ESTOPPEL. That which arises when there is a promise which promisor should or may reasonably expect to induce action or forbearance of a definite and substantial character on part of promisee, and which does induce such action or forbearance, and such promise is binding if injustice can be avoided only by enforcement of promise. New Eureka Amusement Co. v. Rosinsky, 126 Pa.Super. 444, 191 A. 412, 415.

To constitute "waiver without consideration," there must be promise or permission, express or implied in fact, supported only by action in reliance thereon, to excuse performance in future of condition or obligation not due at time when promise is made, or to give up defense not yet arisen, and such facts do not constitute "estoppel" because there is no misrepresentation of existing facts, but it may be called "promissory estoppel." Colbath v. H. B. Stebbins Lumber Co., 127 Me. 406, 144 A. 1, 5.

PROMISSORY NOTE. A promise or engagement, in writing, to pay a specified sum at a time therein limited, or on demand, or at sight, to a person therein named, or to his order, or bearer. Byles, Bills, 1, 4; Hall v. Farmer, 5 Denio, N.Y., 484. A written promise made by one or more to pay another, or order, or bearer, at a specified time, a specific amount of money, or other articles of value. Pryor v. American Trust & Banking Co., 15 Ga.App. 822, 84 S.E. 312, 314. An unconditional written promise, signed by the maker, to pay absolutely and at all events a sum certain in money, either to the bearer or to a person therein designated or his order, Benj. Chalm. Bills & N. art. 271; Harrison v. Beals, 111 Or. 563, 222 P. 728, 730; at a time specified therein, or at a time which must certainly arrive. Iowa State Savings Bank v. Wignall, 53 Okl. 641, 157 P. 725; Lanum v. Harrington, 267 Ill. 57, 107 N.E. 826, 828.

A written promise to pay a certain sum of money, at a future time, unconditionally. Brooks v. Owen, 112 Mo. 251, 19 S.W. 723, 20 S.W. 492. By the Uniform Negotiable Instruments Act, a negotiable promissory note is defined as an unconditional promise in writing made by one person to another signed by the maker engaging to pay on demand, or at a fixed or determinable future time, a sum certain in money to order or to bearer. Where a note is drawn to the maker's own order, it is not complete until indorsed by him. Section 184.

PROMOTE. To contribute to growth, enlargement, or prosperity of; to forward; to further; to encourage; to advance. People v. Augustine, 232 Mich. 29, 204 N.W. 747, 749.

Corporation Law

The persons who, for themselves or others, take the preliminary steps to the organization of a corporation. 1 Thompson on Corporations, § 81. McRee v. Quitman Oil Co., 16 Ga.App. 12, 84 S.E. 487; Alkire v. Acuff, 134 Okl. 43, 272 P. 405, 407. Those persons who first associate themselves together for the purpose of organizing the company, issuing its prospectus, procuring subscriptions to the stock, securing a charter, etc. See Dickerman v. Northern Trust Co., 20 S.Ct. 311, 176 U.S. 181, 44 L.Ed. 423.

Ecclesiastical Law

One who puts in motion an ecclesiastical tribunal, for the purpose of correcting the manners of any person who has violated the laws ecclesiastical; and one who takes such a course is said to "promote the office of the judge." See Mozley & Whiteley.

England

The term is also applied to persons or corporations at whose instance private bills are introduced into and passed through parliament, especially those who press forward bills for the taking of land for railways and other public purposes, who are then called promoters of the undertaking.

English Practice

Those persons who, in popular and penal actions, prosecute offenders in their own names and that of the king, and are thereby entitled to part of the fines and penalties for their pains. Brown.

PROMOVENT. A plaintiff in a suit of duplex querela (q. v.). 2 Prob.Div. 192.

PROMPT. To act immediately, responding on the instant. In re Peene's Will, 279 N.Y.S. 131, 155 Misc. 155.

"Testimony" is a more restricted term. For "Testimony," see that title.

PROMULGATE. To publish; to announce officially; to make public as important or obligatory. Price v. Supreme Home of the Ancient Order of Pilgrims, Tex.Com.App., 285 S.W. 310, 312.

PROMULGATION. The order given to cause a law to be executed, and to make it public; it differs from publication. 1 Bl.Comm. 45; Stat. 6 Hen. VI. c. 4. In modern practice, it is usually by publishing one or more volumes of the laws and circulating them among public officials and selling them. As to the practice in England at various times, see Record Com. in 7 Sel. Essays on Anglo-American. L. H. 168.

PROMUTUUM. Lat. In the civil law. A quasi contract, by which he who receives a certain sum of money, or a certain quantity of fungible things, which have been paid to him through mistake, contracts towards the payer the obligation of returning him as much. Poth, de l'Usure, pt. 3, s. 1, a. 1.

This contract is called promutuum, because it has much resemblance to that of mutuum. This resemblance consists in this: first, that in both a sum of money or some fungible things are required; second, that in both there must be a transfer of the property in the thing; third, that in both there must be returned the same amount or quantity of the thing received. But, though there is this general resemblance between the two, the mutuum differs essentially from the promutuum. The former is the actual contract of sale between the parties, made expressly, but the latter is a quasi contract, which is the effect of an error or mistake, 1 Bouvier, Inst. n. 1125.

PRONEPOS. Lat. In the civil law. A great-grandson. Inst. 3, 6, 1; Bract. fol. 67.

PRONEPTIS. Lat. In the civil law. A great-granddaughter, Inst. 3, 6, 1; Bract. fol. 67. Also, a niece's daughter. Ainsworth, Dict, 6.

PRONOTARY. First notary. See Prothonotary.

PRONOUNCE. To utter formally, officially, and solemnly; to declare or affirm; to declare aloud and in a formal manner. In this sense a court is bound to take notice. Wooden v. R. Co., Super., 18 N.Y.S. 768.

As to the rules of a railway company it means made known; brought to the attention of the service affected thereby, so that a servant is bound to take notice. Those v. Clements, Tex.Civ.App., 41 S.W.2d 1069, 1070; it is the effect of evidence. State v. Crutcher, 231 Iowa 418, 1 N.W. 2d 195, 198. Sims v. Clayton, 193 S.C. 98, 7 S.E.2d 724, 728.

"Testimony" is a more restricted term. For "Testimony," see that title.

Evidence and Proof Distinguished

"Proof" is the logically sufficient reason for assenting to the truth of a proposition advanced. In its juridical sense it is a term of wide import, and comprehends everything that may be adduced at a trial, with the legal rules, for the purpose of producing conviction in the mind of judge or jury, aside from mere argument; that is, everything that has a probative force intrinsically, and not merely as a deduction from, or combination of, original probative facts. But "evidence" is a narrower term, and includes only such kinds of proof as may be legally presented at a trial, by the act of the parties, and through the aid of such concrete facts as give birth to, or other documents. Thus, to urge a presumption of law in support of one's case is adding proof, but it is not offering evidence.

Belief is a subjective condition resulting from proof. It is a conviction of the truth of a proposition, existing in the mind, and induced by persuasion, proof, or argument addressed to the judgment.

The word "proof" seems properly to mean anything which serves, either immediately or mediate, to convince the mind of the truth of the proposition; it differs from "evidence" because it is not always used, as evidence, at all. Evidence and Proof Distinguished

PRONOTARY. First notary. See Prothonotary.

PRONOUNCE. To utter formally, officially, and solemnly; to declare or affirm; to declare aloud and in a formal manner. In this sense a court is said to "pronounce" judgment or a sentence. Griffin v. State, 12 Ga.App. 615(2), 618, 77 S.E. 1080; Sanders v. State, 18 Ga.App. 786, 90 S.E. 728.

PRONUNCIATION. L. Fr. A sentence or decree. Kelham.

PRONURUS. Lat. In the civil law. The wife of a grandson or great-grandson. Dig. 38, 10, 4, 6.

PROMULGARE. Lat. In Roman law. To make public; to make publicly known; to promulgate. To publish or make known a law after its enactment.

PROMULGATE. To publish; to announce officially; to make public as important or obligatory. Price v. Supreme Home of the Ancient Order of Pilgrims, Tex.Com.App., 285 S.W. 310, 312.

No material difference between terms exists for purposes of instruction. Merrick v. United Rys. & Electric Co. of Baltimore City, 163 Md. 641, 163 A. 816, 818.

Burden of proof. See that title.

Conclusive proof. As used in a statute providing for an action against a county for injury to cattle resulting from dipping for eradication of cattle ticks, it has been held to be equivalent to the expression, "to a moral certainty" or "beyond a reasonable doubt," meaning a higher degree of proof than by a preponderance of the evidence. Covington County v. Fite, 120 Miss. 421, 82 So. 308, 309.

Degree of proof. Refers to effect of evidence rather than medium by which truth is established, and in this sense expressions "preponderance of evidence" and "proof beyond reasonable doubt" are used. Sowle v. Sowle, 115 Neb. 795, 215 N.W. 122, 123.

Full proof. See Full.

Half proof. See Half.

Negative proof. See Positive Proof, infra.

Positive proof. Direct or affirmative proof; that which directly establishes the fact in question, as opposed to negative proof, which establishes the fact by showing that its opposite is not or cannot be true. Srack v. McKnight, 84 Pa. 30.

Preliminary proof. See Preliminary.

Proof beyond a reasonable doubt. Such proof as precludes every reasonable hypothesis except that which it tends to support and which is wholly consistent with defendant's guilt and inconsistent with any other rational conclusion. State v. McDonough, 129 Conn. 483, 29 A.2d 582, 583.

Proof evident or presumption great. As used in constitutional provisions that accused shall be bailable unless for capital offenses when the "proof is evident" or "presumption great," means evidence clear and strong, and which leads well guarded, dispassionate judgment to conclusion that accused committed offense and will be punished capitally. Ex parte Coward, 145 Tex.Cr.R. 593, 170 S.W.2d 754, 755. Ex parte Goode, 123 Tex.Cr.R. 492, 59 S.W.2d 841; Ex parte Tully, 70 Fla. 1, 66 So. 296, 297.

Proof of debt. The formal establishment by a creditor of his debt or claim, in some prescribed manner, (as, by his affidavit or otherwise,) as a preliminary to its allowance, along with others, against an estate or property to be divided, such as the estate of a bankrupt or insolvent, a deceased person or a firm or company in liquidation.

Proof of spirits. Testing the strength of alcoholic spirits, also the degree of strength; as high proof, first proof, second, third, and fourth proofs. In the internal revenue law it is used in the sense of degree of strength. Louisville P. W. Co. v. Collector of Customs, C.C.A.Ky., 49 F. 561, 1 C.C.A. 371, 6 U.S.App. 53.

Proof of will. A term having the same meaning as "probate," (q. v.), and used interchangeably with it.

PROP. An upright post wedged between the roof and the floor of a mine to support the roof. Big Branch Coal Co. v. Wrenchie, 160 Ky. 668, 170 S.W. 14, 16.

PROPATRUUS. Lat. In the civil law. A great-grandfather's brother. Inst. 3, 6, 3; Bract. fol. 68b.

PROPATRUUS MAGNUS. In the civil law. A great-great-uncle.

Peculiar; naturally or essentially belonging to a person or thing; not common; appropriate; one's own.

PROPER EVIDENCE. Such evidence as may be presented under the rules established by law and recognized by the courts. The Betsey, 49 Ct.C1. 125, 131.

PROPER FEUDS. In feudal law, the original and genuine feuds held by purely military service.

PROPER INDEPENDENT ADVICE. As to donor means that he had preliminary benefit of conferring upon subject of intended gift with a person who was not only competent to inform him correctly of its legal effect, but who was so disassociated from interests of donee as to be in position to advise with donor impartially and confidently as to consequences to donor of his proposed gift. Blume v. Blume, 90 N.J.Eq. 258, 106 A. 367, 368; Zwirz v. Dorl, 123 Okl. 284, 253 P. 75, 77.

PROPER LOOKOUT. Duty imposed on motorist to keep such lookout requires motorist to use care, prudence, watchfulness, and attention of an ordinarily prudent person under same or similar circumstances. Pazen v. Des Moines Transp.
PROPER

PROPER PARTY. As distinguished from a necessary party, is one who has an interest in the subject-matter of the litigation, which may be conveniently settled therein; one without whom a substantial decree may be made, but not a decree which shall completely settle all the questions which may be involved in the controversy and conclude the rights of all the persons who have any interest in the subject of the litigation. See Kelley v. Boettcher, C.C.A.Colo., 85 F. 55, 29 C.C.A. 14; Tatum v. Roberts, 59 Minn. 52, 60 N.W. 848.

PROPERTY. That which is peculiar or proper to any person; that which belongs exclusively to one; in the strict legal sense, an aggregate of rights which are guaranteed and protected by the government. Fulton Light, Heat & Power Co. v. State, 65 Misc.Rep. 263, 121 N.Y.S. 536. The term is said to extend to every species of valuable right and interest. McAllister v. Pritchard, 230 S.W. 66, 67, 287 Mo. 494. More specifically, ownership; the unrestricted and exclusive right to a thing; the right to dispose of a thing in every legal way, to possess it, to use it, and to exclude every one else from interfering with it. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 265. That dominion or indefinite right of use or disposition which one may lawfully exercise over particular things or subjects. Transcontinental Oil Co. v. Emmerson, 298 Ill. 394, 131 N.E. 645, 647, 16 A.L.R. 507. The exclusive right of possessing, enjoying, and disposing of a thing. Barnes v. Jones, 139 Miss. 675, 103 So. 773, 775, 43 A.L.R. 673; Tatum Bros. Real Estate & Investment Co. v. Watson, 92 Fla. 278, 109 So. 623, 626. The highest right a man can have to anything; being used for that right which one has to lands or tenements, goods or chattels, which no way depends on another man’s courtesy. Jackson ex dem. Pearson v. Housel, 17 Johns. 281, 283.

The right of property is that sole and despotic dominion which one has over the subject-matter of the litigation, which may be conveniently settled therein; one without whom a substantial decree may be made, but not a decree which shall completely settle all the questions which may be involved in the controversy and conclude the rights of all the persons who have any interest in the subject of the litigation. See Kelley v. Boettcher, C.C.A.Colo., 85 F. 55, 29 C.C.A. 14; Tatum v. Roberts, 59 Minn. 52, 60 N.W. 848.

The word is also commonly used to denote everything which is the subject of ownership, corporeal or incorporeal, tangible or intangible, visible or invisible, real or personal; everything that has an exchangeable value or which goes to make up wealth or estate. It extends to every species of valuable right and interest, and includes real and personal property, easements, franchises, and incorporeal hereditaments. Samet v. Farmers’ & Merchants’ Nat. Bank of Baltimore, C.C.A.Md., 247 F. 669, 671; Globe Indemnity Co. v. Bruce, C.C.A. Okl., 81 F.2d 143, 150.

Absolute property. In respect to chattels personal property is said to be “absolute” where a man has, solely and exclusively, the right and also the possession of movable chattels. 2 Bl.Comm. 389. In the law of wills, a bequest or devise “to be the absolute property” of the beneficiary may pass a title in fee simple. Fackler v. Berry, 93 Va. 565, 25 S.E. 887, 57 Am.St.Rep. 819. Or it may mean that the property is to be held free from any limitation or condition or free from any control or disposition on the part of others. Wilson v. White, 133 Ind. 614, 33 N.E. 361, 19 L.R.A. 581.

Common property. A term sometimes applied to lands owned by a municipal corporation and held in trust for the common use of the inhabitants. Also property owned jointly by husband and wife under the community system. See Community.

Community property. See that title.

General property. See that title.

Literary property. See Literary.

Mixed property. Property which is personal in its essential nature, but is invested by the law with certain of the characteristics and features of real property. Heirlooms, tombstones, monuments in a church, and title-deeds to an estate are of this nature. 2 Bl.Comm. 428, 3 Barn. & Adol. 174; 4 Bing. 106; Minot v. Thompson, 106 Mass. 585.

Personal property. In broad and general sense, everything that is the subject of ownership, not coming under denomination of real estate. A right or interest in things personal, or right or interest less than a freehold in realty, or any right or interest which one has in things movable. Elkton Electric Co. v. Perkins, 145 Md. 224, 125 A. 851, 858. The term is generally applied to property of a personal or movable nature, as opposed to property of a local or immovable character, (such as land or houses,) the latter being called "real property," but is also applied to the right or interest less than a freehold which a man has in realty. Boyd v. Selma, 96 Ala. 144, 11 So. 393, 16 L.R.A. 729; In re Bruckman’s Estate, 195 Pa. 363, 45 A. 1078.

That kind of property which usually consists of things temporary and movable, but includes all subjects of property not of a freehold nature, nor descendible to the heirs at law. 2 Kent, Comm. 340.

Personal property is divisible into (1) corporeal personal property, which includes movable and tangible things, such as animals, ships, furniture, merchandise, etc.; and (2) incorporeal personal property, which consists of such rights as personal annuities, stocks, shares, patents, and copyrights. Sweet.

Private property. As protected from being taken for public uses, is such property as belongs absolutely to an individual, and of which he has the exclusive right of disposition; property of a specific, fixed and tangible nature, capable of being in possession and transmitted to another, such as houses, lands, and chattels. Homochitto River Com'rs v. Withers, 29 Miss. 21, 64 Am.Dec. 126; Scranton v. Wheeler, 21 S.Ct. 48, 179 U.S. 141, 45 L.Ed. 126.

Property tax. In English law, this is understood to be an income tax payable in respect to landed property. In America, it is a tax imposed on property, whether real or personal, as distinguished from poll taxes, and taxes on successions, transfers, and occupations, and from license taxes. Garrett v. St. Louis, 25 Mo. 510, 69 Am.Dec. 475; In re Swift's Estate, 137 N.Y. 77, 32 N.E. 1096, 18 L.R.A. 709.

Public property. This term is commonly used as a designation of those things which are publici juris, (q. v.,) and therefore considered as being owned by "the public," the entire state or community, and not restricted to the dominion of a private person. It may also apply to any subject of property owned by a state, nation, or municipal corporation as such.

Qualified property. Property in chattels which is not in its nature permanent, but may at some times subsist and not at other times; such for example, as the property a man may have in wild animals which he has caught and keeps, and which are his only so long as he retains possession of them. 2 Bl.Comm. 389. Any ownership not absolute.

Real property. Land, and gentrany which is erected or, on or affixed to, land. Ln p r v. Glenn, 37 Minn. 4, 33 N.W. 10. Also rights issuing out of am3xes1 to, and expresible within or about land; a general term for lands, tenements, and hereditaments; property which, on the death of the owner intestate, passes to his heir. Ralston Steel Car Co. v. Ralston, 112 Ohio St. 306, 147 N.E. 513, 516, 39 A.L.R. 334. In respect to property, rf2LanciperssznalLssaresand very nearl the civil law. Guyot, Impert. Biens.

Separate property. See that title.

Special property. Property of a qualified, temporary, or limited nature; as distinguished from absolute, general, or unconditional property. Such is the property of a bailee in the article bailed, of a sheriff in goods temporarily in his hands under a levy, of the finder of lost goods while looking for the owner, of a person in wild animals which he has caught. Stief v. Hart, 1 N.Y. 20, 24.

PROPINQUI ET CONSANGUINEI. Lat. The nearest of kin to a deceased person.

PROPINQUIOR EXCLUDIT PROPINQUUM; PROPINQUUS REMOTUM; ET REMOTUS REMOTOREM. Co.Litt. 10. He who is nearer excludes him who is near; he who is near, him who is remote; he who is remote, him who is remoter.

PROPINQUITY. Kindred; parentage.

PROPIOR SOBRINO, PROPIOR SOBRINA. Lat. The son or daughter of a great-uncle or great-aunt, paternal or maternal. Inst. 3, 6, 3.

PROPIOS, PROPRIOS. In Spanish law. Certain portions of ground laid off and reserved when a town was founded in Spanish America as the unalienable property of the town, for the purpose of erecting public buildings, markets, etc., or to be used in any other way, under the direction of the municipality, for the advancement of the revenues or the prosperity of the place. 12 Pet. 442, note.

Thus, there are solares, or house lots of a small size, upon which dwellings, shops, stores, etc., are to be built. There are suertes, or sowing grounds of a larger size, for cultivating or planting; as gardens, vineyards, orchards, etc. There are ejidos, which are quite well described by our word "commons," and are lands used in common by the inhabitants of the place for pasture, wood, threshing ground, etc.; and particular names are assigned to each, according to its particular use. Sometimes additional ejidos were allowed to be taken outside of the town limits. There are also propios or municipal lands, from which revenues are derived to defray the expenses of the municipal administration. Hart v. Burnett, 15 Cal. 554.

PROPONE. In Scotch law. To state. To propose a defense is to state or move it. 1 Karnes, Eq. pref.

In ecclesiastical and probate law. To bring forward for adjudication; to exhibit as basis of a claim; to proffer for judicial action.

PROPOSAL. An offer; something proffered. An offer, by one person to another, of terms and conditions with reference to some work or undertaking, or for the transfer of property, the acceptance whereof will make a contract between them. Eppes v. Mississippi, G. & T. R. Co., 35 Ala. 33. Signification by one person to another of his willingness to enter into a contract with him on the terms specified in the offer. Salisbury v. Credit Service, Del.Super., 199 A. 674, 681.

In English practice. A statement in writing of some special matter submitted to the consideration of a chief clerk in the court of chancery, pursuant to an order made upon an application ex parte, or a decratal order of the court. It is either for maintenance of an infant, appointment of a guardian, placing a ward of the court at the university or in the army, or apprentice to a trade; for the appointment of a receiver, the establishment of a charity, etc. Wharton.
PROPOSITIO INDEFINITA ZEQUIPOLLET
VERSALL An indefinite proposition is equivalent to a general one.

PROPOSITUS. Lat. The person proposed; the person from whom a descent is traced.

PROPOUND. To offer; to propose. An executor or other person is said to propound a will when he takes proceedings for obtaining probate in solemn form. The term is also technically used, in England, to denote the allegations in the statement of claim, in an action for probate, by which the plaintiff alleges that the testator executed the will with proper formalities, and that he was of sound mind at the time. Sweet.

PROPRIETARY, n. A proprietor or owner; one who has the exclusive title to a thing; one who possesses or holds the title to a thing in his own right. The grantees of Pennsylvania and Maryland and their heirs were called the proprietaries of those provinces. Webster.

PROPRIETARY, adj. Belonging to ownership; belonging or pertaining to a proprietor; relating to a certain owner or proprietor. State v. F. W. Woolworth Co., 184 Minn. 51, 237 N.W. 817, 818.

Proprietary articles. Goods manufactured under some exclusive individual right to make and sell them. The term is chiefly used in the internal revenue laws of the United States. See Ferguson v. Arthur, 6 S.Ct. 861, 117 U.S. 482, 29 L. Ed. 979.

Proprietary chapel. See Chapel.

Proprietary duties. Those duties of a municipality which are not governmental duties. City of Miami v. Oates, 152 Fla. 21, 10 So.2d 721, 723. See Governmental Duties.

Proprietary governments. This expression is used by Blackstone to denote governments granted out by the crown to individuals, in the nature of feudalatory principalities, with inferior royalties and subordinate powers of legislation such as formerly belonged to the owners of counties palatine. 1 Bl.Comm. 108.

Proprietary rights. Those rights which an owner of property has by virtue of his ownership. When proprietary rights are opposed to acquired rights, such as easements, franchises, etc., they are more often called "natural rights." Sweet.

PROPRIETAS. Lat. In the civil and old English law. Property; that which is one's own; ownership.

Proprietario, full property, including not only the title, but the usufruct, or exclusive right to the use. Calvin.

Proprietario nuda, naked or mere property or ownership; the mere title, separate from the usufruct.

PROPRIETAS TOTIUS NAVIS CARINJE CAUS- ANI SEQUITUR. The property of the whole ship follows the condition of the keel. Dig. 6, 1, 61. If a man builds a vessel from the very keel with the materials of another, the vessel belongs to the owner of the materials. 2 Kent, Comm. 362.

PROPTER HONORIS RESPECTUM. On account of respect of honor or rank. See Challenge.

PROPTER IMPOTENTIAM. On account of helplessness. The term describes one of the grounds of a qualified property in wild animals, consisting in the fact of their inability to escape; as is the case with the young of such animals before they can fly or run. 2 Bl.Comm. 394.

PROPTER PRIVILEGIUM. On account of privilege. The term describes one of the grounds of a qualified property in wild animals, consisting in the special privilege of hunting, taking and killing them, in a given park or preserve, to the exclusion of other persons. 2 Bl.Comm. 394.

PRORATE. To divide, share, or distribute proportionately; to assess or apportion pro rata.

PRORATATION. Prolonging or putting off to another day. In English law, a prorogation is the continuance of the parliament from one session to another day. In the civil law. The giving time to do a thing beyond the term previously fixed. Dig. 2, 14, 27, 1.

PROROGA. To direct suspension of proceedings of parliament; to terminate a session.

PROROGATED JURISDICTION. In Scotch law. A power conferred by consent of the parties upon a judge who would not otherwise be competent.

PROROGATION. Prolonging or putting off to another day. In English law, a prorogation is the continuance of the parliament from one session to another, as an adjournment is a continuation of the session from day to day. Wharton.

In the civil law. The giving time to do a thing beyond the term previously fixed. Dig. 2, 14, 27, 1.

PROROGUE. To direct suspension of proceedings of parliament; to terminate a session.

PROSCRIBED. In the civil law. Among the Romans, a man was said to be "proscribed" when a reward was offered for his head; but the term was more usually applied to those who were sentenced to some punishment which carried with it the consequences of civil death. Cod. 9, 49.

PROSECUTE. To follow up; to carry on an action or other judicial proceeding; to proceed against a person criminally. To "prosecute" an action is not merely to commence it, but includes following it to an ultimate conclusion. Service & Wright Lumber Co. v. Sumpter Valley Ry. Co., 81 Or. 32, 152 P. 262, 264.

PROSECUTING ATTORNEY. The name of the public officer (in several states) who is appointed in each judicial district, circuit, or county, to conduct criminal prosecutions on behalf of the state or people. Holder v. State, 58 Ark. 473, 25 S.W. 279.

PROSECUTING WITNESS. The private person upon whose complaint or information a criminal accusation is founded and whose testimony is mainly relied on to secure a conviction at the trial; in a more particular sense, the person who was chiefly injured, in person or property, by the act constituting the alleged crime, (as in cases of robbery, assault, criminal negligence, bastardy, and the like,) and who instigates the prosecution and gives evidence.

PROSECUTOR. In practice. One who prosecutes another for a crime in the name of the government; one who instigates a prosecution by making affidavit charging a named person with the commission of a penal offense on which a warrant is issued or an indictment or accusation is based. State v. Snelson, 13 Okl.Cr. 88, 138 Okl. 444, 445; Ethridge v. State, 164 Ga. 53, 137 S.E. 784, 785. One who instigates the prosecution upon which an accused is arrested or who prefers an accusation against the party whom he suspects to be guilty. People v. Lay, 193 Mich. 476, 160 N.W. 467, 470. One who takes charge of a case

Private prosecutor. One who sets in motion the machinery of criminal justice against a person whom he suspects or believes to be guilty of a crime, by laying an accusation before the proper authorities, and who is not himself an officer of justice. Heacock v. State, 13 Tex.App. 129; State v. Millain, 3 Nev. 425.

Prosecutor of the pleas. This name is given, in New Jersey, to the county officer who is charged with the prosecution of criminal actions, corresponding to the “district attorney” or “county attorney” in other states.

Public prosecutor. An officer of government (such as a state’s attorney or district attorney) whose function is the prosecution of criminal actions, or suits partaking of the nature of criminal actions.

PROSECUTOR. A document published by a company or corporation, or by persons acting as its agents or assignees, setting forth the nature and objects of an issue of shares, debentures, or other securities created by the company or corporation, and inviting the public to subscribe to the issue.

PROSPECTIVE. Looking forward; contemplating the future.

PROSPECTIVE DAMAGES. See Damages.

PROSPECTIVE LAW. One applicable only to cases which shall arise after its enactment.

PROSPECTUS. A document published by a company or corporation, or by persons acting as its agents or assignees, setting forth the nature and objects of an issue of shares, debentures, or other securities created by the company or corporation, and inviting the public to subscribe to the issue. A prospectus is also usually published on the issue, in England, of bonds or other securities by the government. Broom, Max. 78.

In former times the name “protection” was also given to a certificate given to a sailor to show that he was exempt from impressment into the royal navy.

In mercantile law. The name of a document generally given by notaries public to sailors and other persons going abroad, in which it is certified that the bearer therein named is a citizen of the United States.

In public commercial law. A system by which a government imposes customs duties upon commodities of foreign origin or manufacture when imported into the country, for the purpose of stimulating and developing the home production of the same or equivalent articles, by discouraging the importation of foreign goods, or by raising the price of foreign commodities to a point at which the home producers can successfully compete with them.

PROTECTION OF INVENTIONS ACT. The statute 33 & 34 Vict. c. 27. By this act it is provided that the exhibition of new inventions shall not prejudice patent rights, and that the exhibition of designs shall not prejudice the right to registration of such designs.

PROTECTION OF THE LAWS. See Equal.

PROTECTION ORDER. In English practice. An order for the protection of the wife’s property, when the husband has willfully deserted her, issuable by the divorce court under statutes on that subject.

PROTECTIONIBUS DE. The English statute 33 Edw. I. St. 1, allowing a challenge to be entered against a protection, etc.
PROTECTIVE TARIFF. A law imposing duties on imports, with the purpose and the effect of discouraging the use of products of foreign origin, and consequently of stimulating the home production of the same or equivalent articles. R. E. Thompson, in Enc.Brit.

PROTECTOR OF SETTLEMENT. In English law. By the statute 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 74, § 32, power is given to any settlor to appoint any person or persons, not exceeding three, the "protector of the settlement." The object of such appointment is to prevent the tenant in tail from barring any subsequent estate, the consent of the protector being made necessary for that purpose.

PROTECTORATE. A state which has transferred the management of its more important international affairs to a stronger state. 1 Opp. 144; Salmond, Juris. 210. It implies only a partial loss of sovereignty, so that the protected state still retains a position in the family of nations. Moreover, the protected state remains so far independent of its protector that it is not obliged to be a party to a war carried on by the protector against a third state, nor are treaties concluded by the protector ipso facto binding upon the protected state; 1 Opp. 145-146.

The period during which Oliver Cromwell ruled in England. Also the office of protector.

PROTEST. A formal declaration made by a person interested or concerned in some act about to be done, or already performed, whereby he expresses his dissent or disapproval, or affirms the act against his will. The object of such a declaration is generally to save some right which would be lost to him if his implied assent could be made out, or to exonerate himself from some responsibility which would attach to him unless he expressly negatived his assent.

A notarial act, being a formal statement in writing made by a notary under his seal of office, at the request of the holder of a bill or note, in which it is declared that the bill or note described was on a certain day presented for payment, (or acceptance,) and that such payment or acceptance was refused, and stating the reasons, if any, given for such refusal, whereupon the notary protests against all parties to such instrument, and declares that they will be held responsible for all loss or damage arising from its dishonor. Ann.-vine Nat. Bank v. Kettering, 106 Pa. 531, 51 Am. Rep. 536; Dennistoun v. Stewart, 17 How. 607, 15 L.Ed. 228. It denotes also all the steps or acts accompanying dishonor necessary to charge an indemnity which cannot with propriety or safety be positive or entire. 3 Bl.Comm. 311. See Protestation.

The formal statement, usually in writing, made by a person who is called upon by public authority to pay a sum of money, in which he declares that he does not concede the legality or justice of the claim or his duty to pay it, or that he disputes the amount demanded; the object being to save his right to recover or reclaim the amount, which right would be lost by his acquiescence. Thus, taxes may be paid under "protest." Meyer v. Clark, 2 Daly (N.Y.) 509.

The name of a paper served on a collector of customs by an importer of merchandise, stating that he believes the sum charged as duty to be excessive, and that, although he pays such sum for the purpose of getting his goods out of the custom-house, he reserves the right to bring an action against the collector to recover the excess. U. S. v. Lian, C.C.A.N.Y., 10 F.2d 41, 42.

In maritime law. A written statement by the master of a vessel, attested by a proper judicial officer or a notary, to the effect that damage suffered by the ship on her voyage was caused by storms or other perils of the sea, without any negligence or misconduct on his own part. Marsh. Ins. 715. And see Cudworth v. South Carolina Ins. Co., 4 Rich.Law. S.C., 416, 55 Am.Dec. 692.

Notice of protest. A notice given by the holder of a bill or note to the drawer or indorser that the bill has been protested for refusal of payment or acceptance. First Nat. Bank v. Hatch, 78 Mo. 23; Roberts v. State Bank, 9 Port. (Ala.) 315.

Supra protest. In mercantile law. A term applied to an acceptance of a bill by a third person, after protest for nonacceptance by the drawer. 3 Kent, Comm. 87.

Waiver of protest. As applied to a note or bill, a waiver of protest implies not only dispensing with the formal act known as "protest," but also with that which ordinarily must precede it, viz., demand and notice of non-payment. Baker v. Scott, 29 Kan. 136, 44 Am.Rep. 628; First Nat. Bank v. Hartman, 110 Pa. 196, 2 A. 271.

PROTESTANDO. L. Lat. Protesting. The emphatic word formerly used in pleading by way of protestation. 3 Bl.Comm. 311. See Protestation.

PROTESTANTS. Those who adhered to the doctrine of Luther; so called because, in 1529, they protested against a decree of the emperor Charles V. and of the diet of Spires, and declared that they appealed to a general council. The name is now applied indiscriminately to all the sects, of whatever denomination, who have seceded from the Church of Rome. Enc.Lond. See Hale v. Everett, 53 N.H. 9, 16 Am.Rep. 82.

PROTESTATION. In pleading. The indirect affirmation or denial of the truth of some matter which cannot with propriety or safety be positively affirmed, denied, or entirely passed over. 3 Bl. Comm. 311. The exclusion of a conclusion. Co. Litt. 124.

In practice. An asseveration made by taking God to witness. A protestation is a form of as-severation which approaches very nearly to an oath. Wolff.Inst.Nat. § 375.

PROTOCOL. A record or register. Among the Romans, protocolum was a writing at the head of the first page of the paper used by the notaries or tabelliones. Nov. 44.

In France, "the minutes of notarial acts were formerly transcribed on registers, which were called "protocols." Toullier, Droit Civil Fr. liv. 3, Vin. Abr. Trebilcox v. McAlpine, 46 Hun, N.Y., 469; Whitney v. Hopkins, 19 A. 1075, 135 Pa. 246.

PROTOCOL. A record or register. Among the Romans, protocolum was a writing at the head of the first page of the paper used by the notaries or tabelliones. Nov. 44.

In France, "the minutes of notarial acts were formerly transcribed on registers, which were called "protocols." Toullier, Droit Civil Fr. liv. 3, t. 3, c. 6, s. 1, no. 413.

By the German law it signifies the minutes of any transaction. Encyc.Amer.

International Law
The first draft or rough minutes of an instrument or transaction; the original copy of a dispatch, treaty, or other document. Brande. A document serving as the preliminary to, or opening of, any diplomatic transaction.

Old Scotch Practice
A book, marked by the clerk-register, and delivered to a notary on his admission, in which he was directed to insert all the instruments he had occasion to execute; to be preserved as a record. Bell.

PROTOCOLIZE. A term in Cuban law meaning to copy in the records of a notary. In re Moran's Will, 39 N.Y.S.2d 929, 934, 180 Misc. 469.

PROCOLO. In Spanish law. The original draft or writing of an instrument which remains in the possession of the escribano, or notary. White, New Recop. lib. 3, tit. 7, c. 5, § 2.

The term "protocolo," when applied to a single paper, means the first draft of an instrument duly executed before a notary—the matrix,—because it is the source from which must be taken copies to be delivered to interested parties as their evidence of right; and it also means a bound book in which the notary places and keeps in their order instruments executed before him, from which copies are taken for the use of parties interested. Downing v. Diaz, 80 Tex. 436, 16 S.W. 53.

PROTUTOR. Lat. In the civil law. He who, not being the tutor of a minor, has administered his property or affairs as if he had been, whether he thought himself legally invested with the authority of a tutor or not. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 630. He who marries a woman who is tutor becomes, by the marriage, a protutor. The protutor is equally responsible with the tutor.

PROUT PATET PER RECORDUM. As appears by the record: In the Latin phraseology of pleading, this was the proper formula for making reference to a record.

PROVABLE. Susceptible of being proved. City Hall Building & Loan Ass'n of Newark v. Star Corporation, 110 N.J.L. 570, 166 A. 223, 224.

PROVE. To establish or make certain; to establish a fact or hypothesis as true by satisfactory and sufficient evidence. Blackstone Hall Co. v. Rhode Island Hospital Trust Co., 97 A. 484, 487, 39 R.I. 69.

To present a claim or demand against a bankrupt or insolvent estate, and establish by evidence or affidavit that the same is correct and due, for the purpose of receiving a dividend on it. Tibbetts v. Traifton, 80 Me. 264, 14 A. 71; In re California Pac. I.C. Co., 4 Fed.Cas. 1060; In re Bigelow, 3 Fed.Cas. 343.

To establish the genuineness and due execution of a paper, propounded to the proper court or officer, as the last will and testament of a deceased person. See Probate.

PROVEN TERRITORY. In oil prospecting "proven territory" means territory so situated with reference to known producing wells as to establish the general opinion that, because of its location in relation to them, oil is contained in it. Minchew v. Morris, Tex.Civ.App., 241 S.W. 215, 217.

PROVER. In old English law. A person who, on being indicted of treason or felony, and arraigned for the same, confessed the fact before plea pleaded, and appealed or accused others, his accomplices, in the same crime, in order to obtain his pardon. 4 Bl.Comm. 329, 330.

PROVIDED. The word used in introducing a proviso (which see.) Ordinarily it signifies or expresses a condition; but this is not invariable, for, according to the context, it may import a covenant, or a limitation or qualification, or a restraint, modification, or exception to something which precedes. Stanley v. Colt, 5 Wall. 166, 18 L.Ed. 502; Robertson v. Caw, 3 Barb., N.Y., 418; Attorney General v. City of Methuen, 129 N.E. 662, 665, 236 Mass. 564.

PROVIDED BY LAW. This phrase when used in a constitution or statute generally means prescribed or provided by some statute. Lawson v. Kanawha County Court, 80 W.Va. 612, 92 S.E. 786, 789.

PROVINCE. The district into which a country has been divided; as, the province of Canterbury, in England; the province of Languedoc, in France. A dependency or colony, as, the province of New Brunswick. Figuratively, power or authority, as, it is the province of the court to judge of the law; that of the jury to decide on the facts. 1 Bl.Comm. 111; Tomlins.

PROVINCIAL CONSTITUTIONS. The decrees of provincial synods held under divers archbishops of Canterbury, from Stephen Langton, in the reign of Henry III., to Henry Chichele, in the reign of Henry V., and adopted also by the province of York in the reign of Henry VL Wharton.
PROVINCIAL COURTS. In English law. The several archi-episcopal courts in the two ecclesiastical provinces of England.

PROVINCIALE. A work on ecclesiastical law, by William Lyndwode, official principal to Archbishops Chichele in the reign of Edward IV. 4 Reeve, Eng. Law, c. 25, p. 117.

PROVINCIALIS. Lat. In the civil law. One who has his domicile in a province. Dig. 50, 16, 190.

PROVING OF THE TENOR. In Scotch practice. An action for proving the tenor of a lost deed. Bell.

PROVISION. Foresight of the chance of an event happening, sufficient to indicate that any present undertaking upon which its assumed realization might exert a natural and proper influence was entered upon in full contemplation of it as a future possibility. Appeal of Blake, 95 Conn. 194, 110 A. 833, 834.

In commercial law. Funds remitted by the drawer of a bill of exchange to the drawee in order to meet the bill, or property remaining in the drawee's hands or due from him to the drawer, and appropriated to that purpose.

In ecclesiastical law. A nomination by the pope to an English benefice before it became void; the term was afterwards indiscriminately applied to any right of patronage exerted or usurped by the pope.

In French law. An allowance or alimony granted by a judge to one of the parties in a cause for his or her maintenance until a definite judgment is rendered. Dalloz.

In English history. A name given to certain statutes or acts of parliament, particularly those intended to curb the arbitrary or usurped power of the sovereign, and also to certain other ordinances or declarations having the force of law. See infra.

A term used in the reign of Henry III. to designate enactments of the King in Council, perhaps less solemn than statutes. The term "statutes" was a later term, with a changed conception of the solemnity of a statute, and is one that cannot easily be defined. It came into use in Edward I.'s reign, supplanting 'provisions,' which is characteristic of Henry III.'s reign, which had supplanted 'assize,' characteristic of the reigns of Henry II., Richard and John Maitland, 2 Sel. Essays in Anglo-Am. Leg. Hist. so.

Provisions of Merton. Another name for the statute of Merton. See Merton, Statute of.

Provisions of Oxford. Legislative provisions (1258) forbidding the Chancellor to issue writs, other than those "of course" without the approval of the executive council, as well as the king. Certain provisions made in the Parliament of Oxford, 1258, for the purpose of securing the execution of the provisions of Magna Charta, against the invasions thereof by Henry III. The government of the country was in effect committed by these provisions to a standing committee of twenty-four, whose chief merit consisted in their representative character, and their real desire to effect an improvement in the king's government. Brown.

Provisions of Westminster. A name given to certain ordinances or declarations promulgated by the barons in A.D. 1259, for the reform of various abuses.

PROVISIONAL. Temporary; preliminary; tentative; taken or done by way of precaution or ad interim.

PROVISIONAL ASSIGNEES. In the former practice in bankruptcy in England. Assignees to whom the property of a bankrupt was assigned until the regular or permanent assignees were appointed by the creditors.

PROVISIONAL COMMITTEE. A committee appointed for a temporary occasion.

PROVISIONAL COURT. A federal court with jurisdiction and powers governed by the order from which it derives its authority.

A provisional court established in conquered or occupied territory by military authorities, or the provisional government, is a federal court deriving its existence and all its powers from the federal government. 36 C.J.S., Federal Courts, § 320.

PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENT. One temporarily established in anticipation of and to exist and continue until another (more regular or more permanent) shall be organized and instituted in its stead. Chambers v. Fisk, 22 Tex. 535.

PROVISIONAL INJUNCTION. Sometimes, though not correctly, used for interlocutory injunction.

PROVISIONAL ORDER. In English law. Under various acts of parliament, certain public bodies and departments of the government are authorized to inquire into matters which, in the ordinary course, could only be dealt with by a private act of parliament, and to make orders for their regulation. These orders have no effect unless they are confirmed by an act of parliament, and are hence called "provisional orders." Several orders may be confirmed by one act. The object of this mode of proceeding is to save the trouble and expense of promoting a number of private bills. Sweet.

PROVISIONAL REMEDY. A remedy provided for present need or for the immediate occasion; one adapted to meet a particular exigency. Particularly, a temporary process available to a plaintiff in a civil action, which secures him against loss, irreparable injury, dissipation of the property, etc., while the action is pending. Such are the remedies by injunction, appointment of a receiver, attachment, or arrest. The term is chiefly used in the codes of practice. Snively v. Abbitt Buggy Co., 36 Kan. 106, 12 P. 522.

PROVISIONAL SEIZURE. A remedy known under the law of Louisiana, and substantially the same in general nature as attachment of property in other states. Code Prac. La. 284, et seq. Set Nolte v. His Creditors, 6 Mart. N. S. (La.) 168.
PROVISIONES. Lat. In English history. Those acts of parliament which were passed to curb the arbitrary power of the crown. See Provision.

PROVISO. A condition or provision which is inserted in a deed, lease, mortgage, or contract, and on the performance or nonperformance of which the validity of the instrument frequently depends; it usually begins with the word “provided.”

It always implies a condition, unless subsequent words change it to a covenant, Rich v. Awater, 16 Conn. 419; but when a proviso contains the mutual words of the parties to a deed, it amounts to a covenant. 2 Co. 72; Cro. Eliz. 242.

The word “proviso” is generally taken for a condition, but it differs from it in several respects; for a condition is usually created by the grantor or lessor, but a proviso by the grantee or lessee. Jacob.

The mere use of technical terms which ordinarily denote a limitation or a condition subsequent is an unsafe test of the true nature of the estate granted; the word “proviso” or “provided” itself being sometimes taken as a condition, sometimes as a limitation, and sometimes as a covenant. Stevens v. Galveston H. & S. A. Ry. Co., Tex.Com.App., 212 S.W. 639, 644.

A limitation or exception to a grant made or authority conferred, the effect of which is to declare that the one shall not operate, or the other be exercised, unless in the case provided. Clearwater Tp. v. Board of Sup’rs of Kalkaska County, 187 Mich. 516, 153 N.W. 824, 827.

A clause or part of a clause in a statute, the office of which is either to except something from the enacting clause, or to qualify or restrain its generality, or to exclude some possible ground of misinterpretation of its extent. Cox v. Hart, 260 U.S. 427, 43 S.Ct. 154, 157, 67 L.Ed. 332; Riley Pennsylvania Oil Co. v. Symmonds, 195 Mo.App. 111, 190 S.W. 1038, 1040. Strain v. East Bay Municipal Utility Dist., 21 Cal.App.2d 281, 69 P.2d 191, 193.

A proviso is sometimes misused to introduce independent pieces of legislation. Cox v. Hart, 43 S.Ct. 154, 157, 260 U.S. 427, 67 L.Ed. 332. Its proper use, however, is to qualify what is affirmed in the body of the act, section, or paragraph preceding it, or to except something from the act, but not to enlarge the enacting clause. State Public Utilities Commission v. Early, 285 Ill. 469, 121 N.E. 63, 66; and it cannot be held to enlarge the scope of the statute; Jordan v. Town of South Boston, 138 Va. 1038, 122 S.E. 265, 267.

While a proviso is commonly found at the end of the act or section, and is usually introduced by the word “provided” or “provided for,” the matter is in the form of the succeeding words controlling. Mackenzie v. Douglas County, 81 Or. 442, 159 P. 625, 627.

The proper use of provisos in drafting acts is explained by Coode on Legislative Construction. The early, and, as he thinks, the correct use, is by way of taking special cases out of general enactments and providing for them. The courts have generally assumed that such was the proper mode of using a proviso. It is incorrectly used to introduce mere exceptions to the operation of the enactment where no special provision is made for the exception; these are better expressed as exceptions.

Exception and proviso distinguished. See Exception.

PROVISO EST PROVIDERE PRAESENTIA ET FUTURA, NON PR1ETERITA. Coke, 72; Vaugh. 279. A proviso is to provide for the present or future, not the past.

PROVISO, TRIAL BY. In English practice. A trial brought on by the defendant, in cases where the plaintiff, after issue joined, neglects to proceed to trial; so called from a clause in the writ to the sheriff, which directs him, in case two writs come to his hands, to execute but one of them. 3 Bl. Comm. 357. The defendant may take out a venire facias to the sheriff, which hath in it these words, Proviso quod, etc., provided that if the plaintiff shall take out any writ to that purpose, the sheriff shall summon but one jury on them both. Jacob; Old Nat. Brev. 159.

PROVISOR. In old English law. A provider, or purveyor. Spelman. Also a person nominated to be the next incumbent of a benefice (not yet vacant) by the pope. 4 Bl.Comm. 111. He that hath the care of providing things necessary; but more especially one who sued to the court of Rome for a provision. Jacob; 25 Edw. III.

PROVISORS, STATUTE OF. A statute passed in 25 Edw. III. forbidding the Pope to nominate to benefices, and declaring that the election of bishops and other dignitaries should be free, and all rights of patrons preserved. Taswell-Langmead, Engl. Constit. Hist. 322. See Prov munire.

Such conduct or actions on the part of one person towards another as tend to arouse rage, resentment, or fury in the latter against the former, and thereby cause him to do some illegal act against or in relation to the person offering the provocation. State v. Byrd, 52 S.C. 480, 30 S.E. 482.

“Provocation” which will reduce killing to manslaughter must be of such character as will, in mind of average reasonable man, stir resentment likely to cause violence, obscure the reason, and lead to action from passion rather than judgment. Wooten v. State, 171 Tenn. 362, 103 S.W. 2d 324, 326. There must be a state of passion without time to cool placing defendant beyond control of his reason. Commonwealth v. Geld, 282 Pa. 434, 128 A. 77, 79. Provocation carries with it the idea of some physical aggression or some assault which suddenly arouses heat and passion in the person assaulted. State v. Hollis, 108 S.C. 442, 95 S.E. 74, 76.

PROVOKE. To excite; to stimulate; to arouse. To irritate, or enrage. State v. Milosovich, 42 Nev. 263, 175 P. 139, 141.

PROVOKING A DIFFICULTY. The law on this point arises only where deceased was the attacking party, and his attack was brought about by the words or acts of accused, intended to bring on the attack, in order that advantage might be taken thereof by him to slay his adversary and escape the consequences. Carter v. State, 87 Tex.Cr.R. 200, 220 S.W. 335, 336.
PROVOST. The principal magistrate of a royal burgh in Scotland. A governing officer of certain universities or colleges. The chief dignitary of a cathedral or collegiate church.

In France, this title was formerly given to some presiding judges.

PROVOST-MARSHAL. In English law, an officer of the royal navy who had the charge of prisoners taken at sea, and sometimes also on land.

In military law, the officer acting as the head of the military police of any post, camp, city or other place in military occupation, or district under the reign of martial law. He or his assistants may, at any time, arrest and detain for trial, persons subject to military law committing offenses, and may carry into execution any punishments to be inflicted in pursuance of a court martial.

PROXENETA. Lat. In the civil law. A broker; one who negotiated or arranged the terms of a contract between two parties, as between buyer and seller; one who negotiated a marriage; a match-maker. Calvin.; Dig. 50, 14, 3.

PROXIMATE CAUSE. That which, in a natural and continuous sequence, unbroken by any efficient intervening cause, produces the injury, and without which the result would not have occurred. Swayne v. Connecticut Co., 86 Conn. 439, 85 A. 634, 635; Lemos v. Madden, 28 Wyo. 1, 100 P. 791, 793. That which is nearest in the order of responsible causation. Butter v. R. Co., 37 W. Va. 180, 16 S.E. 457, 18 L.R.A. 519. That which stands next in causation to the effect, not necessarily in time or space but in causal relation. Cundiff v. City of Owensboro, 193 Ky. 168, 235 S.W. 15, 16; Carlock v. Dentor & R. G. R. Co., 55 Colo. 146, 133 P. 1103, 1104. The last negligent act contributory to an injury, without which such injury would not have resulted. Estep v. Price, 93 W.Va. 81, 115 S.E. 861, 863. The dominant cause. Ballagh v. Interstate Business Men’s Acc. Ass’n, 176 Iowa 110, 155 N.W. 241, 244, L.R.A.1917A, 1050; The moving or producing cause. Eberhardt v. Glasco Mut. Tel. Ass’n, 91 Kan. 763, 139 P. 416, 417, Buchanan v. Hurd Creamery Co., 215 Iowa 415, 246 N.W. 41. The efficient cause; the one that necessarily sets the other causes in operation. Balti-more & O. R. Co. v. Ranier, 84 Ind.App. 542, 149 N.E. 361, 364. The causes that are merely incidental or instruments of a superior or controlling agency are not the proximate causes and the responsible ones, though they may be nearer in time to the result. It is only when the causes are independent of each other that the nearest is, of course, to be charged with the disaster. Blythe v. Railway Co., 15 Colo. 333, 25 P. 702, 11 L.R.A. 615, 22 Am.St.Rep. 403; act or omission immediately causing or failing to prevent injury; act or omission occurring or concurring with another, which, had it not happened, injury would not have been inflicted. Herron v. Smith Bros., 116 Cal.App. 518, 122 S. E. 895, citing, among others, Insurance Co. v. Boon, 95 U. S. 117, 130, 24 L.Ed. 395; Terry Shipbuilding Corp. v. Grit-flan, 112 S.E. 374, 153 Ga. 390. Moreover, there may be two or more proximate causes, but only one proximate cause. Thomas v. Chicago Embossing Co., 307 Ill. 134, 138 N.E. 285, 287; American Stone Ballast Co. v. Marshall’s Adm’r, 206 Ky. 133, 266 S.W. 1051, 1052. But the two terms are sometimes used interchangeably. Wilczynski v. Milwaukee Electric Ry. & Light Co., 171 Wis. 508, 177 N.W. 876, 877; but see Wright v. Greenwood Telephone Co., 108 S.C. 84, 93 S.E. 398, 399; Knight v. Wessler, 67 Utah, 354, 248 P. 132, 133. See, also, Immediate Cause.

PROXIMATE CONSEQUENCE OR RESULT. One which succeeds naturally in the ordinary course of things. Swaim v. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co., 187 Iowa 466, 174 N.W. 384, 386. A consequence which, in addition to being in the train of physical causation, is not entirely outside the range of expectation or probability, as viewed by ordinary men. The Mars, D.C.N.Y., 9 F.2d 183, 184. One ordinarily following from the negligence complained of, unbroken by any independent cause, which might have been reasonably foreseen. One which a prudent and experienced man, fully acquainted with all the circumstances which, in fact existed, would, at time of the negligent act, have thought reasonably possible to follow, if it had occurred to his mind. Coast S. S. Co. v. Brady, C.C.A.Ala., 8 F.2d 16, 19. A mere possibility of the injury is not sufficient, where a reasonable man would not consider injury likely to result from the act as one of its ordinary and probable results.

PROXIMATE DAMAGES. See Damages.

PROXIMITY. Kindred between two persons. Dig. 38, 16, 8. Quality or state of being next in time, place, causation, influence, etc.; immediate nearness. Webster, Dict.

PROXIMUS EST CUI NEMO ANTECEDIT, SU-represent him and act for him, particularly in some meeting or public body. An agent representing and acting for principal. Also the instrument containing the appointment of such person. Manson v. Curtis, 223 N.Y. 313, 119 N.E. 559, 561, Ann.Cas.1918E, 247; Cliffs Corporation v. United States, C.C.A.Ohio, 103 F.2d 77, 80.

In ecclesiastical law. A person who is appointed to manage another man's affairs in the ecclesiastical courts; a judicial proctor.

Also an annual payment made by the parochial clergy to the bishop, on visitations. Tomlins.

PRUDENCE. Carefulness, precaution, attentiveness, and good judgment, as applied to action or conduct. That degree of care required by the exigencies or circumstances under which it is to be exercised. Cronk v. Railway Co., 52 N.W. 420, 3 S.D. 93. This term, in the language of the law, is commonly associated with "care" and "diligence" and contrasted with "negligence." See those titles.

PRUDENTER AGIT QUI PRZECEPTO LEGIS OBTEMPERAT. 5 Coke, 49. He acts prudently who obeys the command of the law.

PRUDENTIAL AFFAIRS. Within the meaning of a statute authorizing the making of by-laws by municipalities for the directing and managing of their prudential affairs, this term includes those matters for the necessary convenience of the inhabitants. Clarke v. City of Fall River, 219 Mass. 580, 107 N.E. 419, 421.

PRUDHOMMES, PRODES HOMMES. This word was used in early Norman times, and before, in a general sense to signify freeholders or respectable burgesses; sometimes a special body of such persons acting as magistrates or judges. Black Book of Adm. IV, 186. There were prudhommes of the sea; of merchants; of the corporation of Barcelona; and of the gild of coopers. Usually two sat.

PRYK. A kind of service of tenure. Blount says it signifies an old-fashioned spur with one point only, which the tenant, holding land by this tenure, was to find for the king. Wharton.

PSEUDOCYESIS. In medical jurisprudence. A frequent manifestation of hysteria in women, in which the abdomen is inflated, simulating pregnancy: the patient aiding in the deception.

PSEUDOGRAPH. False writing.

PSYCHO-DIAGNOSIS. In medical jurisprudence. A method of investigating the origin and cause of any given disease or morbid condition by examination of the mental condition of the patient, the application of various psychological tests, and an inquiry into the past history of the patient, with a view to its bearing on his present psychic state.

PSYCHOLOGICAL FACT. In the law of evidence. A fact which can only be perceived mentally; such as the motive by which a person is actuated. Burrill, Circ. Ev. 130, 131.

PSYCHONEUROSIS. See Insanity.

PSYCHOPATH. Person having mental disorder. More commonly, mental disorder not amounting to insanity or taking the specific form of a psychoneurosis, but characterized by a defect of character or personality, eccentricity, emotional instability, inadequacy or perversity of conduct, under conceit and suspiciousness, or lack of common sense, social feeling, self-control, truthfulness, energy, or persistence. Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Frost, C.C.A.R.I., 164 F.2d 542, 545.

Synonymous with "sociopathic personality".

PSYCHOSIS. A disease of the mind; especially, a functional mental disorder, that is, one unattended with structural changes in the brain. Davis v. State, 153 Ga. 154, 112 S.E. 280, 282. See Insanity.

PSYCHOTHERAPY. A method or system of alleviating or curing certain forms of disease, particularly diseases of the nervous system or such as are traceable to nervous disorders, by suggestion, persuasion, encouragement, the inspiration of hope or confidence, the discouragement of morbid memories, associations, or beliefs, and other similar means addressed to the mental state of the patient, without (or sometimes in conjunction with) the administration of drugs or other physical remedies.

PTOMAINE. In medical jurisprudence. An alkaloidal product of the decomposition or putrefaction of albuminous substances, as, in animal and vegetable tissues. Ptomaines are sometimes poisons, but not invariably. Examples of poisonous ptomaines are those occurring in putrefying fish and the tyrotoxicons of decomposing milk and milk products. They are sometimes found in a less harmful form in preserved vegetable matter. Drury v. Armour & Co., 140 Ark. 371, 216 S.W. 40, 42.

PUBERTY. The earliest age at which persons are capable of begetting or bearing children. Webster, Dict.

In the civil and common law, the age at which one becomes capable of contracting marriage. It is in boys fourteen, and in girls twelve years. Ayliffe, Pand. 63; Toullier, Dr. Civ. Fr. tom. 5, p. 100; Inst. 1, 22; Dig. 1, 7, 40, 1; Code 5, 60, 3;
PUBLIC, n. The whole body politic, or the aggregate of the citizens of a state, district, or municipality. Knight v. Thomas, 93 Me. 494, 45 A. 499. The inhabitants of a state, county, or community. People v. Turner, 184 Ill.App. 151, 155; Commonwealth v. Bosworth, 257 Mass. 212, 153 N.E. 455, 457. In one sense, everybody; and accordingly the body of the people at large; the community at large, without reference to the geographical limits of any corporation like a city, town, or county; the people. In another sense the word does not mean all the people, nor most of the people, nor very many of the people of a place, but so many of them as contradictistinguish them from a few. Accordingly, it has been defined or employed as meaning the inhabitants of a particular place; all the inhabitants of a particular place; the people of the neighborhood. People v. Powell, 280 Mich. 699, 274 N.W. 372, 373, 111 A.L.R. R. 721; State ex rel. Maher v. Baker, 88 Ohio St. 165, 102 N.E. 732, 736. Also, a part of the inhabitants of a community. Davis v. People, 79 Colo. 642, 247 P. 801, 802.

PUBLIC, adj. Pertaining to a state, nation, or whole community; proceeding from, relating to, or affecting the whole body of people or an entire community. Open to all; notorious. Common to all or many; general; open to common use. Morgan v. Creep 46 Vt. 786, 14 Am.Rep. 640; Crane v. Waters, C.C.Mass., 10 F. 621. Belonging to the people at large; relating to or affecting the whole people of a state, nation, or community; not limited or restricted to any particular class of the community. People v. Powell, 280 Mich. 699, 274 N.W. 372, 373, 111 A.L.R. 721.

A distinction has been made between the terms "public" and "general." They are sometimes used as synonymous. The former term is applied strictly to that which concerns all the citizens and every member of the state; while the latter includes a lesser, though still a large, portion of the community. 1 Greenl.Ev. § 128.

Public appointments. Public offices or stations which are to be filled by the appointment of individuals, under authority of law, instead of by election.

Public building. One of which the possession and use, as well as the property in it, are in the public. Pancost v. Troth, 34 N.J.Law. 383. Any building held, used, or controlled exclusively for public purposes by any department or branch of government, state, county, or municipal, without reference to the ownership of the building or of the realty upon which it is situated. Shepherd v. State, 16 Ga.App. 248, 85 S.E. 83. A building belonging to or used by the public for the transaction of public or quasi public business. Lewis v. Commonwealth, 197 Ky. 449, 247 S.W. 749, 750.

Public convenience. In a statute requiring the issuance of a certificate of public convenience and necessity by the Public Utilities Commission for the operation of a motorbus line, "convenience" is not used in its colloquial sense as synonymous with handy or easy of access, but in accord with its regular meaning of suitable and fitting, and "public convenience" refers to something fitting or suited to the public need. Abbott v. Public Utilities Commission, 48 R.I. 196, 136 A. 490, 491.

Public interest. Something in which the public, the community at large, has some pecuniary interest, or some interest by which their legal rights or liabilities are affected. It does not mean anything so narrow as mere curiosity, or as the interests of the particular localities, which may be affected by the matters in question. State v. Crockett, 86 Okl. 124, 206 P. 816, 817.

If by public permission one is making use of public property and he chances to be the only one with whom the public can deal with respect to the use of that property, his business is affected with a public interest which requires him to deal with the public on reasonable terms. Cooley, Const.Lim. 746. The circumstances which clothe a particular kind of business with a "public interest," as to be subject to regulation, must be such as to create a peculiarly close relation between the public and those engaged in it and raise implications of an affirmative obligation on their part to be reasonable in dealing with the public. One does not devote his property or business to a public use, or clothe it with a public interest, merely because he makes commodities for and sells to the public in common callings such as those of the butcher, baker, tailor, etc. Chas. Wolf Pack Co. v. Court of Industrial Relations of State of Kansas, 43 S.Ct. 630, 633, 262 U.S. 522, 67 L.Ed. 1103, 27 A.L.R. 1280. A business is not affected with a public interest merely because it is large, or because the public has concern in respect of its maintenance, or derives benefit, accommodation, ease, or enjoyment from it. Tyson & Bro.-United Theatre Ticket Offices v. Banton, 47 S.Ct. 426, 273 U.S. 418, 71 L.Ed. 718, 58 A.L.R. 1236.

Public lands. The general public domain; unappropriated lands; lands belonging to the United States and which are subject to sale or other disposal under general laws, and not reserved or held back for any special governmental or public purpose. Newhall v. Sanger, 92 U.S. 763, 23 L.Ed. 769; State v. Telegraph Co., 52 La.Ann. 1411, 27 So. 796. See Lands.

Public laundry. This term, in Labor Law, N. Y. § 296 (Consol. Laws, c. 31), includes a laundry doing laundry work that is ultimately distributed. to the public, and is not limited to laundry doing custom work only. Van Zandt’s, Inc., v. Department of Labor of State of New York, 129 Misc. 747, 222 N.Y.S. 450, 451.

Public lavatories. Such as are open to all who may choose to use them. Irvine v. Commonwealth, 124 Va. 817, 97 S.E. 769.

The term may, however, include a washroom in a lodging house for men guests only. City of Chicago v. McGuire, 185 Ill. App. 589, 590.

Public place. A place to which the general public has a right to resort; not necessarily a custom work only. Van Zandt’s, Inc., v. Department of Labor of State of New York, 129 Misc. 747, 222 N.Y.S. 450, 451.

Public passage. A right, subsisting in the public, to pass over a body of water, whether the land under it be public or owned by a private person. This term is synonymous with public highway, with this difference: by the latter is understood a right to pass over the land of another; by the former is meant the right of going over the water which is on another’s land. Carth. 1394.

Public place. A place to which the general public has a right to resort; not necessarily a place devoted solely to the uses of the public, but a place which is in point of fact public rather than private, a place visited by many persons and usually accessible to the neighboring public.

People v. Whitman, 178 App.Div. 193, 165 N.Y.S. 148, 149. Roach v. Eugene, 23 Or. 376, 31 P. 825. Any place so situated that what passes there can be seen by any considerable number of persons, if they happen to look. Steph. Cr. L. 115. Also, a place in which the public has an interest as affecting the safety, health, morals, and welfare of the community. A place exposed to the public, and where the public gather together or pass to and fro. Lewis v. Commonwealth, 197 Ky. 449, 247 S.W. 749, 750.

Public purpose. In the law of taxation, eminent domain, etc., this is a term of classification to distinguish the objects for which, according to settled usage, the government is to provide, from those which, by the like usage, are left to private interest, inclination, or liberality. People v. Salem Tp. Board, 20 Mich. 485, 4 Am.Rep. 400; Black, Const. Law (3d Ed.) p. 454, et seq.; Hagler v. Small, 307 Ill. 460, 138 N.E. 849, 854. The term is synonymous with governmental purpose. State v. Dixon, 66 Mont. 76, 213 P. 227, 231. As employed to denote the objects for which taxes may be levied, it has no relation to the urgency of the public need or to the extent of the public benefit which is to follow; the essential requisite being that a public service or use shall affect the inhabitants as a community, and not merely as individuals. Stevenson v. Port of Portland, 82 Or. 576, 162 P. 509, 511. A public purpose or public business has for its objective the promotion of the public health, safety, morals, general welfare, security, prosperity, and contentment of all the inhabitants or residents within a given political division, as, for example, a state, the sovereign powers of which are exercised to promote such public purpose or public business. Green v. Frazier, 44 N.D. 395, 176 N.W. 11, 17. See, also, City of Tombstone v. Macia, 30 Ariz. 218, 245 P. 677, 679, 46 A.L.R. 828.

Public service. A term applied in modern usage to the objects and enterprises of certain kinds of corporations, which specially serve the needs of the general public or conduce to the comfort and convenience of an entire community, such as railroad, gas, water, and electric light companies; and companies furnishing motor vehicle transportation. Harrison v. Big Four Bus Lines, 217 Ky. 119, 288 S.W. 1049. A public service or quasi public corporation is one private in its ownership, but which has an appropriate franchise from the state to provide for a necessity or convenience of the general public, incapable of being furnished by private competitive business, and dependent for its exercise on eminent domain or governmental agency. Attorney General v. Haverhill Gaslight Co., 215 Mass. 394, 101 N.E. 1061, 1063, Ann.Cas.1914C, 1266. It is one of a large class of private corporations which on account of special franchises conferred on them owe a duty to the public which they may be compelled to perform. State ex rel. Coco v. Riverside Irr. Co., 142 La. 10, 76 So. 216, 218.

Public service commission. A board or commission created by the legislature to exercise power of supervision or regulation over public utilities or public service corporations. Railroad Commission of Alabama v. Northern Alabama Ry. Co., 182 Ala. 357, 62 So. 749. Such a commission is a legal, administrative body, provided for the administration of certain matters within the police power, with power to make regulations as to certain matters when required for the public health and convenience and to determine the facts on which existing laws shall operate. Bessette v. Goddard, 87 Vt. 77, 88 A. 1, 3. People ex rel. New York Telephone Co. v. Public Service Commission, Public, true, and notorious. The old form by which charges in the allegations in the ecclesiastical courts were described at the end of each particular.

Public use, in constitutional provisions restricting the exercise of the right to take private property in virtue of eminent domain, means a use concerning the whole community as distinguished from particular individuals. But each and every member of society need not be equally interested in such use, or be personally and directly affected by it; if the object is to satisfy a great public want or exigency, that is sufficient. Rindge v. Los Angeles County, 43 S.Ct. 689, 692, 262 U.S. 700, 67 L.Ed. 1186. The term may be said to mean public usefulness, utility, or advantage, or what is productive of general benefit. Williams v. City of Normal, 85 Okl. 230, 205 P. 144, 148. But it is not synonymous with public benefit. Ferguson v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 202 Iowa, 508, 210 N.W. 604, 606. It may be limited to the inhabitants of a small or restricted locality, but must be in common, and not for a particular individual. Pocantico Water Works Co. v. Bird, 130 N.Y. 249, 29 N.E. 246. The use must be a needful one for the public, which cannot be surrendered without obvious general loss and inconvenience. Jeter v. Vinton-Roanoke Water Co., 114 Va. 769, 76 S.E. 921, 925, Ann.Cas.1914C, 1029.

In patent law, a public use is entirely different from a use by the public. Los Angeles Lime Co. v. Nye, C.C.A.Cal., 270 F. 155, 162. If an inventor allows his machine to be used by other persons generally, either with or without compensation, or if it is, with his consent, put on sale for such use, then it will be in "public use" and on public sale. David E. Kennedy v. United Cork Cos., C. C.A.N.Y., 225 F. 371, 372. Experimental use is never "public use" if conducted in good faith to test the qualities of the invention, and for no other purpose not naturally incidental. Union Sulphur Co. v. Freeport Texas Co., D.C.Del., 251 F. 634, 651.

PUBLIC UTILITY. A business or service which is engaged in regularly supplying the public with some commodity or service which is of public consequence and need, such as electricity, gas, water, transportation, or telephone or telegraph service. Gulf States Utilities Co. v. State, Tex.Civ.App., 46 S.W.2d 1018, 1021. Any agency, instrumentality, business industry or service which is used or conducted in such manner as to affect the community at large, that is which is not limited or restricted to any particular class of the community. State Public Utilities Commission v. Monarch Refrigerating Co., 267 Ill. 528, 108 N.E. 716, Ann.Cas. 1916A, 528. The test for determining if a concern is a public utility is whether it has held itself out as ready, able and willing to serve the public. Humbird Lumber Co. v. Public Utilities Commission, 39 Idaho, 505, 228 P. 271. The term implies a public use of an article, product, or service, carrying with it the duty of the producer or manufacturer, or one attempting to furnish the service, to serve the public and treat all persons alike, without discrimination. Highland Dairy Farms Co. v. Helvetia Milk Condensing Co., 308 Ill. 294, 139 N.E. 418, 420. It is synonymous with "public use," and refers to persons or corporations charged with the duty to supply the public with the use of property or facilities owned or furnished by them. Buder v. First Nat. Bank in St. Louis, C.C.A.Mo., 16 F.2d 990, 992. To constitute a true "public utility," the devotion to public use must be of such character that the public generally, or that part of it which has been served and which has accepted the service, has the legal right to demand that that service shall be conducted, so long as it is continued, with reasonable efficiency under reasonable charges. Richardson v. Railroad Commission of California, 191 Cal. 716, 218 P. 418, 420. The devotion to public use must be of such character that the product and service is available to the public generally and indiscriminately, or there must be the acceptance by the utility of public franchises or calling to its aid the police power of the state. Southern Ohio Power Co. v. Public Utilities Commission of Ohio, 110 Ohio St. 246, 143 N.E. 700, 701, 34 A.L.R. 171.

Line

Railroad or Other Carriers

A line is a series of public conveyances, as coaches, steamers, packets and the like passing to and fro between places with regularity. The word is broad enough to include line of motor freight trucks operating between fixed termini on regular schedule and route. "Stage line," "railroad line" and "automobile line" are expressions which are ordinarily understood to mean a regular line of vehicles for public use operating between distant points or between different cities. Bruce Transfer Co. v. Johnston, 227 Iowa 50, 287 N.W. 278, 280. A "line" is an operating unit under one management over a designated way or right of way. Regenhardt Const. Co. v. Southern Ry. in Kentucky, 297 Ky. 840, 181 S.W.2d 441, 444. A number of public conveyances, as carriages or vessels plying regularly under one management over a certain route, is a "line." Tuggle v. Parker, 159 Kan. 572, 156 P.2d 533, 534. Everything essential to the operation and maintenance of a railroad transportation system is a constituent part of the "line." City of Pocatello v. Ross, 51 Idaho
PUBLIC UTILITY

395, 6 P.2d 481, 482. The words "lines" and "property" are convertible terms. In re Central States Freight Corporation, C.C.A.Mich., 45 F.2d 73, 74.

Telephone or telegraph company's "lines" include not only wires and poles, but also right to have them supported by land to which they are attached. City of Fort Worth v. Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., C.C.A.Tex., 80 F.2d 972, 976.

Public ways. Highways (q. v.).

Public weigher. This term in a statute refers to the official who has been elected, appointed, or qualified and holding office. Interstate Compress Co. v. Colley, 88 Okl. 42, 211 P. 413, 414.

Public welfare. The prosperity, well-being, or convenience of the public at large, or of a whole community, as distinguished from the advantage of an individual or limited class. Shaver v. Starrett, 4 Ohio St. 499. It embraces the primary social interests of safety, order, morals, economic interest, and non-material and political interests.

State v. Hutchinson Ice Cream Co., 168 Iowa, 1, 147 N.W. 195, 199, L.R.A.1917 B, 198. In the development of our civic life, the definition of "public welfare" has also developed until it has been held to bring within its purview regulations for the promotion of economic welfare and public convenience. Pettis v. Alpha Alpha Chapter of Phi Beta Pi, 115 Neb. 525, 213 N.W. 835, 838.

PUBLICAN. In the civil law. A farmer of the public revenue; one who held a lease of some property from the public treasury. Dig. 39, 4, 1, 1; Dig. 39:4, 12, 3; Dig. 39, 4, 13.

In English law. A person authorized by license to keep a public house, and retail therein, for consumption on or off the premises where sold, all intoxicating liquors; also termed "licensed victualler." Wharton. A victualler; one who serves food or drink prepared for consumption on the premises. Friend v. Childs Dining Hall Co., 231 Mass. 65, 120 N.E. 407, 409, 5 A.L.R. 1100.

PUBLICANUS, Lat. In Roman law. A farmer of the customs; a publican. Calvin.

As descriptive of the publishing of laws and ordinances, it means printing or otherwise reproducing copies of them and distributing them in such a manner as to make their contents easily accessible to the public; it forms no part of the enactment of the law. "Promulgation," on the other hand, seems to denote the proclamation or announcement of the edict or statute as a preliminary to its acquiring the force and operation of law. But the two terms are often used interchangeably. Chicago v. McCoy, 136 Ill., 344, 26 N.E. 363, 11 L.R.A. 413; For the distinction between them, see Toullier, Dr. Civ. Fr. titre Preliminaire, n. 59.

In connection with the publication of rates, the term may include both the promulgation and the distribution of the rates in printed form. City of Pittsburg v. Pittsburg Rys. Co., 259 Pa. 558, 103 A. 372, 374.

Copyright Law

"Limited publication" is communication of a literary composition to a select number upon condition, express or implied, that it is not intended to be thereafter common property. To constitute "publication," within Copyright Law, there must be such a dissemination of the work of art itself among the public as to justify the belief that it took place with the intention of rendering such work common property. Copyright Law 1909, § 2, 17 U.S.C.A. a 2. Berry v. Hoffman, 125 Pa.Super. 261, 189 A. 516.

Law of Libel

The act of making the defamatory matter known publicly, of disseminating it, or communicating it to one or more persons. Wilcox v. Moon, 63 Vt. 481, 22 A. 80; Gambrill v. Schooley, 93 Md. 48, 48 A. 730, 52 L.R.A. 87, 86 Am.St.Rep. 414. The reduction of libelous matter to writing and its delivery to any one other than the person injuriously affected thereby.

Law of Wills

The formal declaration made by a testator at the time of signing his will that it is his last will and testament. 4 Kent, Comm. 515, and note. In re Simpson, 56 How.Prac. (N.Y.) 134; Compton v. Mitton, 12 N.J.Law, 70. The act or acts of the testator by which he manifests that it is his intention to give effect to the paper as his last will and testament; any communication indicating to the witness that the testator intends to give effect to the paper as his will, by words, sign, motion, or conduct. In re Spier's Estate, 99 Neb. 853, 157 N.W. 1014, 1016, L.R.A.1916 E, 692.

Practice

In the practice of the states adopting the reformed procedure, and in some others, publication of a summons is the process of giving it currency as an advertisement in a newspaper, under the conditions prescribed by law, as a means of giving notice of the suit to a defendant upon whom personal service cannot be made.

In equity practice. The making public the depositions taken in a suit, which have previously been kept private in the office of the examiner. Publication is said to pass when the depositions are so made public, or openly shown, and copies of them given out, in order to the. hearing of the cause. 3 Bl.Comm. 450.

PUBLICI JURIS. Lat. Of public right. The word "public" in this sense means pertaining to the people, or affecting the community at large; that which concerns a multitude of people; and the word "right," as so used, means a well-founded claim; an interest; concern; advantage; benefit. State v. Lyon, 63 Okl. 285, 165 P. 419, 420.

This term, as applied to a thing or right, means that it is open to or exercisable by all persons. It designates things which are owned by "the public;" that is, the entire state or community, and not by any private person. When a thing is common property, so that any one can make use of it who likes, it is said to be publici juris; as in the case of light, air, and public water. Sweet.

PUBLICIANA. In the civil law. The name of an action introduced by the prmtor Publicius, the object of which was to recover a thing which had been lost. Its effects were similar to those of our action of trover. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 298. See Inst. 4, 6, 4; Dig. 6, 2, 1, 16.

PUBLICIST. One versed in, or writing upon, public law, the science and principles of government, or international law.

PUBLICITY. The doing of a thing in the view of all persons who choose to be present.

PUBLICUM JUS. Lat. In the civil law. Public law; that law which regards the state of the commonwealth. Inst. 1, 1, 4.

PUBLISHER. One who by himself or his agent makes a thing publicly known. One whose business is the manufacture, promulgation, and sale of books, pamphlets, magazines, newspapers, or other literary productions. One who publishes, especially one who issues, or causes to be issued, from the press, and offers for sale or circulation matter printed, engraved, or the like. Brokaw v. Cottrel, 114 Neb. 858, 211 N.W. 184, 187.

PUERITIA. Lat. In the civil law. Childhood; infancy; the age from seven to fourteen. Calvinus, Lex. The age from birth to fourteen years in the male, and from birth to twelve in the female. State v. Smith, 198 Cal. 79, 247 Pac. 948. 3 Bl.Comm. 232, 233.

This term "pueritia," in its original signification, means "people" or "population," but is used in the sense of the English word "town." It has the indefiniteness of that term, and, like it, is sometimes applied to a mere collection of individuals residing at a particular place, a settlement or village, as well as to a regularly organized municipality. Trenouth v. San Francisco, 100 U.S. 251, 25 L.Ed. 626.

PUER. Lat. In the civil law. A child; one of the age from seven to fourteen, including, in this sense, a girl. But it also meant a "boy," as distinguished from a "girl;" or a servant. Dy. 337b; Hob. 33.

PUERI SUNT DE SANGUINE PARENTUM, SED PATER ET MATER NON SUNT DE SANGUINE PUERORUM. 3 Coke, 40. Children are of the blood of their parents, but the father and mother are not of the blood of the children.

PUERILITY. In the civil law. A condition intermediate between infancy and puberty, continuing in boys from the seventh to the fourteenth year of their age, and in girls from seven to twelve.

The ancient Roman lawyers divided puerility into proximus infantiae, as it approached infancy, and proximus pubertatis, as it became nearer to puberty. 6 Toullier, n. 100.

PUERITIA. Lat. In the civil law. Childhood; the age from seven to fourteen. 4 Bl.Comm. 22. The age from birth to fourteen years in the male, or twelve in the female. Calvinus, Lex. The age from birth to seventeen. Vicat, Voc. Jur.

PUIS. Fr. In law. Afterwards; since.

PUIS DARREIN CONTINUANCE. Since the last continuance. The name of a plea which a defendant is allowed to put in, after having already pleaded, where some new matter of defense arises after issue joined; such as payment, a release by the plaintiff, the discharge of the defendant under an insolvent or bankrupt law, and the like. 3 Bl.Comm. 316; Waterbury v. McMillan, 46 Miss. 640; Woods v. White, 97 Pa. 227.

PUISNE. L. Fr. Younger; junior; subordinate; associate. The title by which the justices and barons of the several common-law courts at Westminster are distinguished from the chief justice and chief baron.

PUISSANCE PATERNELLE. Fr. Paternal power. In the French law, the male parent has the following rights over the person of his child: (1) If child is under sixteen years of age, he may procure him to be imprisoned for one month or under. (2) If child is over sixteen and under twenty-one he may procure an imprisonment for six months or under with power in each case to procure a second period of imprisonment. The female parent, being a widow, may, with the approval of the two nearest relations on the father's side, do the like. The parent enjoys also the following rights over the property of his child, viz., a right to take the income until the child attains the age of eighteen years, subject to maintaining the child and educating him in a suitable manner. Brown.

PULLING. In terminology associated with oil wells, the withdrawing from the well of the casing placed therein, after it has been demonstrated that the well is a nonproducer. Texas Granite Oil Co. v. Williams, 199 Ky. 146, 250 S.W. 818, 820.

PUR TANT QUE. Forasmuch as; because; to the intent that. Kelham.

Quasi purchase. In the civil law. A purchase of property not founded on the actual agreement of the parties, but on conduct of the owner which is inconsistent with any other hypothesis than that he intended a sale.

Words of purchase. Words which denote the person who is to take the estate. Thus, if I grant land to A. for twenty-one years, and after the determination of that term to A.'s heirs, the word "heirs" does not denote the duration of A.'s estate, but the person who is to take the remainder on the expiration of the term, and is therefore called a "word of purchase." Williams, Real Prop.; Fearne, Rem. 76, et seq.

PURCHASE MONEY. The consideration in money paid or agreed to be paid by the buyer to the seller of property, particularly of land. It means money stipulated to be paid by a purchaser to his vendor, and does not include money the purchaser may have borrowed to complete his purchase. Purchase money, as between vendor and vendee only, is contemplated; as between purchaser and lender, the money is "borrowed money." Williams v. American Slicing Mach. Co., 148 Ga. 770, 98 S. E. 270, 271. As used with reference to part performance under statute of frauds comprehends consideration, whether it be money or property or services, for which lands are to be conveyed. Hall v. Haer, 160 Okl. 118, 16 P.2d 83, 84.

PURCHASE-MONEY MORTGAGE. See Mortgage.

PURCHASE PRICE. Price agreed upon as a consideration for which property is sold and purchased. Byrd v. Babin, 196 La. 902, 200 So. 294, 300.

PURCHASER. One who acquires real property in any other mode than by descent. One who acquires either real or personal property by buying it for a price in money; a buyer; vendee. Hodge Ship Bldg. Co. v. City of Moss Point, 144 Miss. 657, 110 So. 227, 229. Also, a successful bidder at judicial sale. In re Spokane Sa'y Bank, 198 Wash. 665, 89 P.2d 802, 806.
In the construction of registry acts, the term "purchaser" is usually taken in its technical legal sense. It means a complete purchaser, pr. in other words, one clothed with the legal title. Steele v. Spencer, 1 Pet. 552, 559, 7 L.Ed. 259.

Bona fide purchaser. See Bona Fide.

First purchaser. In the law of descent, this term signifies the ancestor who first acquired (in any other manner than by inheritance) the estate which still remains in his family or descendants.

Innocent purchaser. See Innocent.

Purchaser of a note or bill. The person who buys a promissory note or bill of exchange from the holder without his indorsement.

PURCHASER WITHOUT NOTICE IS NOT OBLIGED TO DISCOVER TO HIS OWN HURT. See 4 Bouv. Inst. note 4336.

PURE ACCIDENT. Implies that accident was caused by some unforeseen and unavoidable event over which neither party to the action had control, and excludes the idea that it was caused by carelessness or negligence of defendant. Maletis v. Portland Traction Co., 160 Or. 30, 83 P.2d 141, 142. Unavoidable accident synonymous. Brewer v. Berner, 15 Wash.2d 644, 131 P.2d 940, 942.

PURGATION. The act of cleansing or exonerating one's self of a crime, accusation, or suspicion of guilt, by denying the charge on oath or by ordeal.

Canonical purgation was made by the party's taking his own oath that he was innocent of the charge, which was supported by the oath of twelve compurgators, who swore they believed he spoke the truth. To this succeeded the mode of purgation by the single oath of the party himself, called the "oath ex officio," of which the modern defendant's oath in chancery is a modification. 3 Bl. Comm. 447; 4 Bl.Comm. 368.

Vulgar purgation consisted in ordeals or trials by hot and cold water, by fire, by hot irons, by battel, by corsesed, etc.

PURGE. To cleanse; to clear; to clear or exonerate from some charge or imputation of guilt, or from a contempt.

PURGE DES HYPOTHEQUES. Fr. In French law. An expression used to describe the act of freeing an estate from the mortgages and privileges with which it is charged, observing the formalities prescribed by law. Duverger.

PURGED OF PARTIAL COUNSEL. In Scotch practice. Cleared of having been partially advised. A term applied to the preliminary examination of a witness, in which he is sworn and examined whether he has received any bribe or promise of reward, or has been told what to say, or whether he bears malice or ill will to any of the parties. Bell.

PURGING A TORT. Is like the ratification of a wrongful act by a person who has power of himself to lawfully do the act. But, unlike ratification, the purging of the tort may take place even after commencement of the action. 1 Brod. & B. 282.

PURGING CONTEMPT. Atoning for, or clearing one's self from, contempt of court, (q. v.). It is generally done by apologizing and paying fees, and is generally admitted after a moderate time in proportion to the magnitude of the offense.

PURLIEU-MEN. Those who have ground within the purlieu to the yearly value of 40s. a year freehold are licensed to hunt in their own purlieus. Manw. c. 20, § 8.

PURLOIN. To steal; to commit larceny or theft. McCann v. U. S., 2 Wyo. 298.

PURPART. A share; a part in a division; that part of an estate, formerly held in common, which is by partition allotted to any one of the parties. The ward was anciently applied to the shares falling separately to co-parceners upon a division or partition of the estate, and was generally spelled "purparty;" but it is now used in relation to any kind of partition proceedings. Seiders v. Giles, 141 Pa. 93, 21 A. 514.

PURPARTY. That part of an estate which, having been held in common by parceners, is by partition allotted to any of them. To make purparty is to divide and sever the lands which fall to parceners. Old, N. B. 11. Formerly pourparty. See Jacob. The word purparty is commonly used to indicate a part of an estate in any connection.

PURPORT, n. Meaning; import; substantial meaning; substance; legal effect. The "purport" of an instrument means the substance of it as it appears on the face of the instrument, and is distinguished from "tenor," which means an exact copy. Dana v. State, 2 Ohio St. 93. Deskin v. U. S. Reserve Ins. Corporation, 221 Mo.App. 1151, 298 S.W. 103, 106.

PURPOSE. That which one sets before him to accomplish; an end, intention, or aim, object, plan, project. State v. Patch, 64 Mont. 565, 210 P. 748, 750; Macomber v. State, 137 Neb. 882, 291 N.W. 674, 680.

PURPRESTURE. An inclosure by a private party of a part of that which belongs to and ought to be open and free to the enjoyment of the public at large. It is not necessarily a public nuisance. A public nuisance must be something which subjects the public to some degree of inconvenience or annoyance; but a purpresture may exist without putting the public to any inconvenience whatever. Attorney General v. Evart Booming Co., 34 Mich. 462. And see Cobb v. Lincoln Park Com'rs, 202 Ill. 427, 67 N.E. 5, 63 L.R.A. 264, 95 Am.St.Rep. 258.

PURPRISE. L. Fr. A close or inclosure; as also the whole compass of a manor.

PURPURE, or PORPRIN. A term used in heraldry; the color commonly called "purple," expressed in engravings by lines in bend sinister. In the arms of princes it was formerly called "mercury," and in those of peers "amethyst."

Purse. Some valuable thing, offered by a person for the doing of something by others, into strife for which he does not enter; prize; premium. He has not a chance of gaining the thing offered; and, if he abide by his offer, that he must lose it and give it over to some of those contending for it is reasonably certain. Harris v. White, 81 N.Y. 539.

PURSER. The person appointed by the master of a ship or vessel, whose duty it is to take care of the ship's books, in which everything on board is inserted, as well the names of mariners as the articles of merchandise shipped. Roccus, Ins. note.

PUTS AND REFUSALS. In English law. Time-bargains, or contracts for the sale of supposed stock on a future day.

PUTTING IN FEAR. These words are used in the definition of a robbery from the person: The offense must have been committed by putting in fear the person robbed. 3 Inst. 68; 4 Bl. Comm. 243.

No matter how slight the cause creating the fear may be, if transaction is attended with such circumstances of terror, such threatening by word or gesture, as in common experience is likely to create an apprehension of danger and induce a man to part with his property for sake of his person, victim is put in fear. State v. Sawyer, 224 N.C. 61, 29 S.E.2d 34, 37.

PUTTING IN SUIT. As applied to a bond, or any other legal instrument, signifies bringing an action upon it, or making it the subject of an action.

PUTURE. In old English law. A custom claimed by keepers in forests, and sometimes by bailiffs of hundreds, to take man's meat, horse's meat, and dog's meat of the tenants and inhabitants within the perambulation of the forest, hundred, etc. The land subject to this custom was called "terra putura." Others, who call it "pulture," explain it as a demand in general; and derive it from the monks, who, before they were admitted, pulsa-bant, knocked at the gates for several days together. 4 Inst. 307; Cowell.

PYKE, PAIK. In Hindu law. A foot-passenger; a person employed as a night-watch in a village, and as a runner or messenger on the business of the revenue. Wharton.

PYKERIE. In old Scotch law. Petty theft. 2 Pitc. Crim. Tr. 43.

PYROMANIA. See Insanity.

PYX, TRIAL OF THE. Under the British Coinage Acts this occurs annually at Goldsmiths' Hall. The coins of the realm are assayed and weighed by a jury of goldsmiths over which the King's Remembrancer is usually appointed by the treasury to preside. Formerly the specimen coins put into the Pyx or box were produced at Westminster, from the treasure-house of the Abbey, where the Pyx was kept; the duty of presiding at the trial belonged to the office of the Remembrancer.

QUALE JUS. Lat. In old English law. A judicial writ, which lay where a man of religion had judgment to recover land before execution was made of the judgment. It went forth to the escheator between judgment and execution, to inquire what right the religious person had to recover, or whether the judgment were obtained by the collusion of the parties, to the intent that the lord might not be defrauded. Reg. Jud. 8.

QUALIFICATION. The possession by an individual of the qualities, properties, or circumstances, natural or adventitious, which are inherently or legally necessary to render him eligible to fill an office or to perform a public duty or function. Thus, the ownership of a freehold estate may be made the qualification of a voter; so the possession of a certain amount of stock in a corporation may be the qualification necessary to enable one to serve on its board of directors. Cummings v. Missouri, 4 Wall. 319, 18 L.Ed. 356; Hyde v. State, 52 Miss. 665.

Qualification for office is "endowment, or accomplishment that fits for an office ; having the legal requisites, endowed with qualities suitable for the purpose." State v. Seay, 64 Mo. 89, 27 Am.Rep. 206.

Also a modification or limitation of terms or language; usually intended by way of restriction of expressions which, by reason of their generality, would carry a larger meaning than was designed.

QUALIFIED. Adapted; fitted; entitled; susceptible; capable; competent; fitting; possessing legal power or capacity; eligible; as an elector to vote. Applied to one who has taken the steps to prepare himself for an appointment or office, as by taking oath, giving bond, etc. Gibbany v. Ford, 29 N.M. 621; 225 P. 577, 578; Board of Com'rs of Guadalupe County v. District Court of Fourth Judicial Dist., 29 N.M. 244, 223 P. 516, 522. Also limited; restricted; confined; modified; imperfect, or temporary.

The term is also applied in England to a person who is enabled to hold two benefices at once.

QUALIFIED ACCEPTANCE. See Acceptance.

See Qualified Voter.

QUALIFIED ESTATE. See Estate.

QUALIFIED FEE. See Fee.

QUALIFIED INDOREMENT. See Indorsement.

QUALIFIED OATH. See Oath.

QUALIFIED PRIVILEGE. In the law of libel and slander, the same as conditional privilege. See Privilege.

QUALIFIED PROPERTY. See Property.

QUALIFY. To make one's self fit or prepared to exercise a right, office, or franchise. To take the steps necessary to prepare oneself for an office or appointment, as by taking oath, giving bond, etc. Archer v. State, 74 Md. 443, 22 A. 8, 28 Am. St. Rep. 261. State v. Albert, 55 Kan. 154, 40 P. 286.

Also to limit; to modify; to restrict. Thus, it is said that one section of a statute qualifies another.

QUALITAS QUAE INESSE DEBET, FACILE PRLESUMITUR. A quality which ought to form a part is easily presumed.

QUALITY. In respect to persons, this term denotes comparative rank; state or condition in relation to others; social or civil position or class. In pleading, it means an attribute or characteristic by which one thing is distinguished from another.

QUALITY OF ESTATE. The period when, and the manner in which, the right of enjoying an estate is exercised. It is of two kinds: (1) The period when the right of enjoying an estate is conferred upon the owner, whether at present or in future; and (2) the manner in which the owner's right of enjoyment of his estate is to be exercised, whether solely, jointly, in common, or in coparcenary. Wharton.

QUAM LONGUM DEBET ESERE RATIONALIEM TEMPUS NON DEFINITUR IN LEGE, SED PENDET EX DISCRETIONE JUSTICIARIVM. Co. Litt. 56. How long a time ought to be is not defined by law, but depends upon the discretion of the judges.

QUAM RATIONABILIS DEBET ESERE FINIS, NON DEFINITUR, SED OMNIBUS CIRCUMSTANTIIS INSPECTIS PENDET EX JUSTICIAVUM DISCRETIONE. What a reasonable fine ought to be is not defined, but is left to the discretion of the judges, all the circumstances being considered. 11 Coke, 44.

QUAMDIU. Lat. As long as; so long as. A word of limitation in old conveyances. Co. Litt. 235a.

QUAMDIU SE GENE GESSERIT. As long as he shall behave himself well; during good behavior; a clause frequent in letters patent or grants of certain offices, to secure them so long as the persons to whom they are granted shall not be guilty of abusing them, the opposite clause being "durante bene placito," (during the pleasure of the grantor.)

QUAMVIS ALIQUID PER SE NON SIT MALUM, TAMEN, SI SIT MALI EXEMPLI, NON EST FACIENDUM. Although a thing may not be bad in itself, yet, if it is of bad example, it is not to be done. 2 Inst. 564.

QUAMVIS LEX GENERALITER LOQUITUR, RESTRINGENDA TAMEN EST, UT, cessante, RATIONE, IPSA CESSAT. Although a law speaks generally, yet, if it is of bad example, it is not to be done indirectly. Broom, Max. 489.

QUANDO ABEST PROVISIO PARTIS, ADEST PROVISIO LEGIS. When the provision of the party is wanting, the provision of the law is at hand. 6 Vin. Abr. 49; 13 C. B. 960.

QUANDO ACCIDERINT. Lat. When they shall come in.

In practice. When a defendant, executor, or administrator pleads plene administravit, the plaintiff may pray to have judgment of assets quando acciderint; Bull. N. P. 169; Bac. Abr. Executor (M). A similar judgment may be taken at plaintiff's election, in an action against an heir, on a plea of riens per descent, instead of taking issue on the plea. In either of these cases if assets afterwards come to the hands of the executor or heir a scire facias must be sued out before execution can issue, or there may be an action of debt, suggesting a devastavit; 2 Bouv. Inst. 3708. It is also sometimes termed a judgment of assets in futuro. By taking a judgment in this form the plaintiff admits that defendant has fully administered to that time; 1 Pet. C. C. 442, n; and therefore the plaintiff will not be allowed to give evidence of effects come to defendant's hands before judgment. For this reason the scire facias on a judgment of assets quando acciderint must only pray execution of such assets as have come to the defendant's hands since former judgment, and if it prays judgment of assets generally, it cannot be supported. 2 Com. Dig. Pleader (2D9).

QUANDO ALIQUID MANDATUR, MANDATUR ET OMNE PER QUOD PERVENITUR AD ILLUD. 5 Coke 116. When anything is commanded, everything by which it can be accomplished is also commanded.

QUANDO ALIQUID PER SE NON SIT MALUM, TAMEN SI SIT MALI EXEMPLI, NON EST FACIENDUM. When anything by itself is not evil, and yet may be an example for evil, it is not to be done. 2 Inst. 564.

QUANDO ALIQUID PROHIBETUR EX DIRECTO, PROHIBETUR ET PER OBLIQUUM. Co. Litt. 223. When anything is prohibited directly, it is prohibited also indirectly.

QUANDO ALIQUID PROHIBETUR, PROHIB. ETUR ET OMNE QUOD DEVENITUR AD ILLUD: When anything is prohibited, everything by which it is reached is prohibited also. 2 Inst. 48. That which cannot be done directly shall not be done indirectly. Broom, Max. 489.

QUANDO ALIQUIS ALIQUID CONCEDIT, CONCEDERE VIDETUR ET ID SINE QUO RES UTI NON POTEST. When a person grants anything, he is supposed to grant that also without which the thing cannot be used. When the use of a thing is granted, everything is granted by which the grantee may have and enjoy such use. 3 Kent, Comm. 421.

QUANDO CHARTA CONTINET GENERALEM CLAUSULAM, POSTEAEQUE DESCENDIAD AD VERBA SPECIALIA QUIE CLAUSULIE GENERALI SUNT CONSENTANEA, INTERPRETANDA EST CHARTA SECUNDUM VERBA SPECIALIA. When a deed contains a general clause, and afterwards descends to special words which are agreeable to the general clause, the deed is to be interpreted according to the special words. 8 Coke 154b.

QUANDO DE UNA ET EAEM RE DUO ONERABLES EXISTUNT, UNUS, PRO INSUFFICIENEA ALTERIUS, DE INTEGRONEARABIT VR. When there are two persons liable for one and the same thing, one of them, in case of default of the other, shall be charged with the whole. 2 Inst. 277.

QUANDO DISPOSITIO REFERRI POTEAT AD DUAS RES ITA QUOD SECUNDUM RELATIONEM UNAM VITIETUR ET SECUNDUM ALTERAM UTILIS SIT, TUM FACIENDA EST RELATIO AD ILLAM UT VALEAT DISPOSITIONE. 6 Coke 76. When a disposition may refer to two things, so that by the former it would be vitiated, and by the latter it would be preserved, then the relation is to be made to the latter, so that the disposition may be valid.

QUANDO DIVERS! DESIDERANTUR ACTUS AD ALIQUEM STATUM PERFICIENDUM, PLUS RESPICIT LEX ACTUM ORIGINALEM. When different acts are required to the formation of any estate, the law chiefly regards the original act. When to the perfection of an estate or interest divers acts or things are requisite, the law has more regard to the original act, for that is the fundamental part on which all the others are founded. 10 Coke 49a.

QUANDO DUO JURA CONCURREN'T IN UNA PERSONA, JEQUUM EST AC SI ESSENT IN DIVERSIS. When two rights concur in one person, it is the same as if they were in two separate persons. 4 Co. 118; Broom, Max. 531.

QUANDO JUS DOMINI REGIS ET SUBDI'TI CONCURREN'T, JUS REGIS PREFERRE DEBET. 9 Coke 129. When the right of king and of subject concur, the king's right should be preferred.
QUANDO LEX ALIQUID ALICUI CONCEDIT, CONCEDERE VIDETUR ET ID SINE QUO RES IPSZE ESSE NON POTEST. 5 Coke 47. When the law gives a man anything, it gives him that also without which the thing itself cannot exist.

QUANDO LEX ALIQUID ALICUI CONCEDIT, OMNIA INCIDENTIA TACITE CONCEDUNTUR. 2 Inst. 326. When the law gives anything to any one, all incidents are tacitly given.

QUANDO LEX EST SPECIALIS, RATIO AUTEM GENERALIS, GENERALITER LEX EST INTEL-LIGENDA. When a law is special, but its reason or object general, the law is to be understood generally. 2 Inst. 83.

QUANDO LICET ID QUOD MAJUS, VIDETUR ET LICERE ID QUOD MINUS. Shep. Touch. 429. When the greater is allowed, the less is to be understood as allowed also.

QUANDO IVULIER NOBILIS NUPSERIT IGNOBILI, DESINET ESSE NOBILIS NISI NOBILI-TAS NATIVA FUERIT. 4 Coke, 118. When a noble woman marries a man not noble, she ceases to be noble, unless her nobility was born with her.

QUANDO PLUS FIT QUAM FIERI DEBET, VIDETUR ETIAM ILLUD FIERI QUOD FACIENDUM EST. When more is done than ought to be done, that at least shall be considered as performed which should have been performed, [as, if a man, having a power to make a lease for ten years, make one for twenty years, it shall be void only for the surplus.] Broom, Max. 177; 5 Coke, 115; 8 Coke, 85a.

QUANDO QUOD AGO NON VALET UT AGO, VALEAT QUANTUM VALERE POTEST. When that which I do does not have effect as I do it, let it have as much effect as it can. Vandervolgen v. Yates, 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 242, 261.

QUANDO RES NON VALET UT AGO, VALEAT QUANTUM VALERE POTEST. When a thing is of no effect as I do it, it shall have effect as far as [or in whatever way] it can. Cowp. 600.

QUANDO VERBA ET MENS CONGRU1LTNT, NON EST INTERPRETATION! LOCUS. When the words and the mind agree, there is no place for interpretation.

QUANDO VERBA STATUTI SUNT SPECIALIA, RATIO AUTEM GENERALIS, GENERALITER STATUTUM EST INTELLIGENDUM. When the words of a statute are special, but the reason or object of it general, the statute is to be construed generally. 10 Coke 101b.

QUANTI MINORIS. Lat. The name of an action in the civil law, (and in Louisiana,) brought by the purchaser of an article, for a reduction of the agreed price on account of defects in the thing which diminish its value.

QUANTUM DAMNIFICATUS? How much damned? The name of an issue directed by a court of equity to be tried in a court of law, to ascertain the amount of compensation to be allowed for damage.

QUANTUM MERUIT. As much as he deserved. In pleading. The common count in an action of assumpsit for work and labor, founded on an implied assumpsit or promise on the part of the defendant to pay the plaintiff as much as he reasonably deserved to have for his labor. 3 Bl. Comm. 161; 1 Tidd, Pr. 2; Viles v. Kennebec Lumber Co., 118 Me. 148, 106 A. 431.

It refers to class of obligations imposed by law, without regard or intention or assent of parties bound, for reasons dictated by reason and justice; such obligations not being contracts though form of action is contract. Carpenter v. Josey Oil Co., C.C.A.Okl., 26 F.2d 442, 443. Amount of recovery being only the reasonable value of the services rendered regardless of any agreement as to value. Smith v. Bliss, 44 Cal.App.2d 171, 112 P.2d 30, 33.

QUANTUM TENENS DOMINO EX HOMAGIO, TANTUM DOMINUS TENIENTI EX DOCTOR. DEBET PRZETER SOLAM REVERENTIAM; MUTUA DEBET ESSE DOMINII ET HOMAGII FIDEILITATIS CONNEXIO. Co. Litt. 64. As much as the tenant by his homage owes to his lord, so much is the lord, by his lordship, indebted to the tenant, except reverence alone; the tie of dominion and of homage ought to be mutual.

QUANTUM VALEBANT. As much as they were worth. In pleading. The common count in an action of assumpsit for goods sold and delivered, founded on an implied assumpsit or promise, on the part of the defendant, to pay the plaintiff as much as the goods were reasonably worth. 3 Bl. Comm. 161; 1 Tidd, Pr. 2.

QUARANTINE. A period of time (theoretically forty days) during which a vessel, coming from a place where a contagious or infectious disease is prevalent, is detained by authority in the harbor of her port of destination, or at a station near it, without being permitted to land or to discharge her crew or passengers. Quarantine is said to have been first established at Venice in 1484. Bak- er, Quar. 3.

The space of forty days during which a widow has a right to remain in her late husband's principal mansion immediately after his death. The right of the widow is also called her "quarantine." See Davis v. Lowden, 56 N.J.Eq. 126, 38 A. 648; Falvey v. Hicks, 315 Mo. 442, 286 S.W. 385, 392.

A provision or interest given in law to the widow in her husband's estate, such as the privilege of occupying the mansion house and curtilage without charge until her dower is assigned, and technically is a dower right, or object of it general, the statute is to be construed generally. 10 Coke 101b.

QUARE. Lat. Wherefore; for what reason; on what account. Used in the Latin form of several common-law writs.

QUARE CLAUSUM FREGIT. Lat. Wherefore he broke the close. That species of the action of trespass which has for its object the recovery of damages for an unlawful entry upon another's land is termed "trespass, quare clausum fregit;" "breaking a close" being the technical expression. for an unlawful entry upon land. The language of the declaration in this form of action is "that the defendant, with force and arms, broke and entered the close" of the plaintiff. The phrase is often abbreviated to "qu. cl. fr." Brown.

QUARE EJECTIT INFRA TERMINUM. Wherefore he ejected within the term. In old practice. A writ which lay for a lessee where he was ejected before the expiration of his term, in cases where the wrong-doer or ejector was not himself in possession of the lands, but his feoffee or another claiming under him. 3 Bl. Comm. 199, 206; Reg. Orig. 227; Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 197 S.

QUARE IMPEDIT. Wherefore he hinders. In English practice. A writ or action which lies for the patron of an advowson, where he has been disturbed in his right of patronage; so called from the emphatic words of the old form, by which the disturber was summoned to answer why he hinders the plaintiff. 3 B1.Comm. 246, 248.

QUARE INCUMBRAVIT. In English law. A writ which lay against a bishop who, within six months after the vacation of a benefice, conferred it on his clerk, while two others were contending for the right of presentation, calling upon him to show cause why he had incumbered the church. Reg. Orig. 32. Abolished by 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 27.

QUARE INTRUSIT. A writ that formerly lay where the lord proffered a suitable marriage to his ward, who rejected it, and entered into the land, and married another, the value of his marriage not being satisfied to the lord. Abolished by 12 Car. II. c. 24.

QUARE NON ADMISIT. In English law. A writ to recover damages against a bishop who does not admit a plaintiff's clerk. It is, however, rarely or never necessary; for it is said that a bishop, refusing to execute the writ ad admittendum clericum, or making an insufficient return to it, may be fined. Wats.Cler.Law, 302.

QUARE NON PERMITTIT. An ancient writ, which lay for one who had a right to present to a church for a turn against the proprietary. Fleta, 1. 5, c. 6.

QUARE OBSTRUXIT. Wherefore he obstructed. In old English practice. A writ which lay for one who, having a liberty to pass through his neighbor's ground, could not enjoy his right because the owner had so obstructed it. Cowell.

QUARENTENA TERRIE. A furlong. Co.Litt. 5b.

QUARREL. This word is said to extend not only to real and personal actions, but also to the causes of actions and suits; so that by the release of all "quarrels," not only actions pending, but also causes of action and suit, are released; and "quarrels," "controversies," and "debates" are in law considered as having the same meaning. Co.Litt. 8, 153; Termes de la Ley.

QUARRY. In mining law. An open excavation where the works are visible at the surface; a place or pit where stone, slate, marble, etc., is dug out or separated from a mass of rock. Bainb. Mines, 2. See Marvel v. Merritt, 116 U.S. 11, 6 S.Ct. 207, 29 L.Ed. 550.

QUART. A liquid measure, containing one-fourth part of a gallon.

QUARTA DIVI PH. In Roman law. That portion of a testator's estate which he was required by law to leave to a child whom he had adopted and afterwards emancipated or unjustly disinherited, being one-fourth of his property. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 594.

QUARTA FALCIDIA. In Roman law. That portion of a testator's estate which he was required to be left to the heir, amounting to at least one-fourth. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 771.

QUARTER. The fourth part of anything, especially of a year. Also a length of four inches. In England, a measure of corn, generally reckoned at eight bushels, though subject to local variations. Hospital St. Cross v. Lord Howard De Walden, 6 Term, 343. In American land law, a quarter section of land. See infra. And see McCartney v. Dennison, 101 Cal. 252, 35 P. 766. In a military sense, the usual term applied to stations, buildings, lodgings, etc., in the regular occupation of military troops. State ex rel. Charlton v. French, 44 N.M. 169, 99 P.2d 715, 727.

In the Law of War. The sparing of the life of a fallen or captured enemy on the battlefield. By the end of the seventeenth century quarter became a recognized usage of war. It is forfeited only under exceptional circumstances. 1. In case of absolute and overwhelming necessity, as where a small force is incumbered with a large number of prisoners in a savage and hostile country, and may be justified in killing them for their own self-preservation. 2. Where belligerents violate the laws of war they may be refused quarter. 3. By way of retaliation against an enemy who has denied quarter without a cause. Risley, The Law of War; Spaight, War Rights on Land, 88-95.

QUARTER OF A YEAR. Ninety-one days. Co. Litt. 135b.

QUARTER-DAY. The four days in the year upon which, by law or custom, moneys payable in quarter-yearly installments are collectible, are called "quarter-days."

QUARTER-DOLLAR. A silver coin of the United States, of the value of twenty-five cents.
QUARTER-EAGLE. A gold coin of the United States, of the value of two and a half dollars.

QUARTER-SALES. In New York law. A species of fine on alienation, being one-fourth of the purchase money of an estate, which is stipulated to be paid back on alienation by the grantee. The expressions "tenth-sales," etc., are also used, with similar meanings. Jackson ex dem. Livingston v. Groot, 7 Cow. (N.Y.) 285.

QUARTER SEAL. See Seal.

QUARTER SECTION. In American land law. The quarter of a section of land according to the divisions of the government survey, laid off by dividing the section into four equal parts by north-and-south and -east-and-west lines, and containing 160 acres.

QUARTER SESSIONS. In English law. A criminal court held before two or more justices of the peace, (one of whom must be of the quorum), in every county, once in every quarter of a year. 4 Bl.Comm. 271; 4 Steph.Comm. 335.

In American law. Courts established in some of the states, to be holden four times in the year, invested with criminal jurisdiction, usually of offenses less than felony, and sometimes with the charge of certain administrative matters, such as the care of public roads and bridges.

QUARTERING. In English criminal law. The dividing a criminal's body into quarters, after execution. A part of the punishment of high treason. 4 Bl.Comm. 93.

QUARTERING SOLDIERS. The act of a government in billeting or assigning soldiers to private houses, without the consent of the owners of such houses, and requiring such owners to supply them with board or lodging or both.

QUARTERIZATION. Quartering of criminals.

QUARTERLY. Quarter yearly; once in a quarter year. Dickenson v. Cox, 118 Or. 88, 244 P. 877, 878; Leonard v. St. Clair, 27 Idaho, 568, 149 P. 1058, 1060.

QUARTERLY COURTS. A system of courts in Kentucky possessing a limited original jurisdiction in civil cases and appellate jurisdiction from justices of the peace. Hamilton v. Spalding, 76 S.W. 517, 25 Ky.Law Rep. 847. They are not county courts, but separate and independent courts created and established by the constitution. Perry County v. McIntosh, 280 Ky. 223, 133 S.W. 2d 90, 91.

QUARTERONE. In the Spanish and French West Indies, a quadroon, that is, a person one of whose parents was white and the other a mulatto. Daniel v. Guy, 19 Ark. 131.

QUARTO DIE POST. Lat. On the fourth day after. Appearance day, in the former English practice, the defendant being allowed four days, inclusive, from the return of the writ, to make his appearance.

QUASH. To overthrow; to abate; to vacate; to annul; to make void. Spelman; 3 Bl.Comm. 303. Bosley v. Bruner, 2 Cushm. (Miss.) 462; Wilson v. Commonwealth, 157 Va. 776, 162 S.E. 1, 2.

QUASI. Lat. As if; almost as it were; analogous to. This term is used in legal phraseology to indicate that one subject resembles another, with which it is compared, in certain characteristics, but that there are intrinsic and material differences between them. Bicknell v. Garrett, 1 Wash.2d 564, 96 P.2d 592, 595, 126 A.L.R. 258; Cannon v. Miller, 22 Wash.2d 227, 155 P.2d 500, 503, 507, 157 A.L.R. 530. Marker v. State, 25 Ala.App. 91, 142 So. 105, 106. It is often prefixed to English words, implying mere appearance or want of reality. State v. Jeffrey, 188 Minn. 476, 247 N.W. 692, 693.

It is exclusively a term of classification. Prefixed to a term of Roman law, it implies that the conception to which it serves as an index is connected with the conception with which the comparison is instituted by a strong superficial analogy or resemblance. It negatives the notion of identity, but points out that the conceptions are sufficiently similar for one to be classed as the sequel to the other. Maine, Anc. Law, 332. Civilians use the expressions "quasi contractus," "quasi delictum," "quasi possesso," "quasi futuro," etc.

QUASI ADMISSION. An act or utterance, usually extrajudicial, which creates an inconsistency with and discredits to a greater or lesser degree, present claim or other evidence of person creating the inconsistency, and person who enacted or uttered it may nevertheless disprove its correctness by introduction of other evidence. Sutherland v. Davis, 151 Ky. 743, 151 S.W.2d 1021, 1024.

QUASI-CONTRACTUS (Lat.). In civil law. An obligation similar in character to that of a contract, which arises not from an agreement of parties but from some relation between them, or from a voluntary act of one of them. An obligation springing from voluntary and lawful acts of parties in the absence of any agreement. Howe. Stud. Civ. L. 17L QUASI ESTOPPEL. The principle which precludes a party from asserting, to another's disadvantage, a right inconsistent with a position previously taken by him. Philadelphia County v. Sheehan, 263 Pa. 449, 107 A. 14, 16.

A term used by Bigelow to cover a group of cases in which a party is precluded from occupying inconsistent positions, either in litigations or in ordinary dealings; Big. Est. [6th ed.] 732. Pickett v. Bank., 32 Ark. 34.6 ; Robinson v. Pebworth, 71 Ala. 240. It is to be noted that in the cases grouped under this title the courts have generally used the simple term "estoppel" which, it has been suggested, is a questionable use of terms, since many of the cases are mere instances of ratification or acquiescence; Big. Est. 755.

"Equitable estoppel" and "estoppel in pais" are convertible terms embracing "quasi estoppel" and embody doctrine that one may not repudiate an act done or position assumed by him, where such course would work injustice to another rightfully relying thereon. Brown v. Corn Exchange Nat. Bank & Trust Co., 136 N.J.Eq. 430, 42 A.2d 474, 480.

QUASI JUDICIAL. A term applied to the action, discretion, etc., of public administrative officers, who are required to investigate facts, or ascertain the existence of facts, and draw conclusions from them, as a basis for their official action, and to exercise discretion of a judicial nature. Bair v. Struck, 29 Mont. 45, 74 P. 69, 63 L.R.A. 481; Mitchell v. Clay County, 69 Neb. 779, 96 N.W. 678.

The actions of the National Labor Relations Board are "quasi-judicial" in character. Thompson Products v. National Labor Relations Board, C.C.A.6, 133 F.2d 637, 640.

QUASI-TRADITIO (Lat.). In civil law. A term used to designate that a person is in the use of the property of another, which the latter suffers and does not oppose. Lec.Elem. § 396. It also signifies the act by which the right of property is ceded in a thing to a person who is in possession of it; as, if I loan a boat to Paul, and deliver it to him, and afterwards I sell him the boat, it is not requisite that he should deliver the boat to me to be again delivered to him: there is a quasi-tradition or delivery.

QUATER CUSIN. See Cousin.

QUATUORPEDIBUS CURRIT. Lat. It runs upon four feet; it runs upon all fours. See All-Fours.

QUATUORVIRI. In Roman law. Magistrates who had the care and inspection of roads. Dig. 1, 2, 3, 30.

QUAY. A wharf for the loading or unloading of goods carried in ships. This word is sometimes spelled "key."

The popular and commercial signification of the word "quay" involves the notion of a space of ground appropriated to the public use; such use as the convenience of commerce requires. New Orleans v. U. S., 10 Pet. 662, 715, 9 L. Ed. 573.

QUE EST LE MESME, L. Fr. Which is the same. A term used in actions of trespass, etc. See Quae est Eadem.

QUESTATE. L. Fr. Whose estate. A term used in pleading, particularly in claiming prescription, by which it is alleged that the plaintiff and those former owners whose estate he has have immemorially exercised the right claimed. This was called "prescribing in a que estate."

QUEAN. A worthless woman; a strumpet. Obsolete.

QUEEN. A woman who possesses the sovereignty and royal power in a country under a monarchical form of government. The wife of a king.

Queen consort. In English law. The wife of a reigning king. 1 Bl.Comm. 218.

Queen dowager. In English law. The widow of a king. 1 B1.03mm. 223.

Queen-gold. A royal revenue belonging to every queen consort during her marriage with the king, and due from every person who has made a voluntary fine or offer to the king of ten marks or upwards, in consideration of any grant or privilege conferred by the crown. It is now quite obsolete. 1 Bl.Comm. 220-222.

Queen regnant. In English law. A queen who holds the crown in her own right; as the first Queen Mary, Queen Elizabeth, Queen Anne, and Queen Victoria. 1 Bl.Comm. 218; 2 Steph.Comm. 465.

For the titles and descriptions of various officers in the English legal system, called "Queen's Advocate," "Queen's Coroner," "Queen's Counsel," "Queen's Proctor," "Queen's Remembrancer," etc., during the reign of a female sovereign, as in the time of Queen Victoria, see, now, under King and the following titles.

QUEEN ANNE'S BOUNTY. A fund created by a charter of Queen Anne, (confirmed by St. 2 Ann. c. 11), for the augmentation of poor livings, consisting of all the revenue of first fruits and tenths, which was vested in trustees forever. 1 Bl.Comm. 286.

QUEEN'S BENCH. The English court of king's bench is so called during the reign of a queen. 3 Steph.Comm. 403. See King's Bench.

QUEEN'S PRISON. A jail which used to be appropriated to the debtors and criminals confined under process or by authority of the superior courts at Westminster, the high court of admiralty, and also to persons imprisoned under the bankrupt law.

QUEM REDITUM REDDIT. L. Lat. An old writ which lay where a rent-charge or other rent which was not rent service was granted by fine holding of the grantor. If the tenant would not attorn, then the grantee might have had this writ. Old Nat. Brev. 126.

QUEMADMODUM AD QUERIENEM FACTI NON RESPONDENT JURIES, ITA AD QUERIENEM JURIS NON RESPONDENT JURA-TORES. In the same manner that judges do not answer to questions of fact, so jurors do not answer to questions of law. Co.Litt. 295.

QUERELA. Lat. An action preferred in any court of justice. The plaintiff was called "querens," or complainant and his brief, complaint, or declaration was called "querela." Jacob.

QUERELA CORAM REGE A CONCILIO DIS-
CUTIENDA ET TERMINANDA. A writ by which one is called to justify a complaint of a trespass made to the king himself, before the king and his council. Reg.Orig. 124.

QUERELA INOFFICIOSI TESTAMENTI. Lat. In the civil law. A species of action allowed to a child who had been unjustly disinherited, to set aside the will, founded on the presumption of law, in such cases, that the parent was not in his right mind. Calvin.; 2 Kent, Comm. 327; Bell.

QUERENS. Lat. A plaintiff; complainant; inquirer.

QUERULOUS. Apt to find fault; habitually complaining; disposed to murmur. Expressing, or suggestive of complaint; fretful; whining. Crounse v. Booth Fisheries, 111 Neb. 6, 195 N.W. 462, 463

QUESTA. In old records. A quest; an inquest, or inquiry, upon the oaths of an impaneled jury. Cowell.

QUESTION. A subject or point of investigation, examination or debate; theme of inquiry; problem; matter to be inquired into; as a delicate or doubtful question. Pitts v. Howe Scale Co., 110 Vt. 27, 1 A.2d 695, 697.

A method of criminal examination heretofore in use in some of the countries of continental Europe, consisting of the application of torture to the supposed criminal, by means of the rack or other engines, in order to extort from him, as the condition of his release from the torture, a confession of his own guilt or the names of his accomplices.

Evidence
An interrogation put to a witness, for the purpose of having him declare the truth of certain facts as far as he knows them.

Practice
A point on which the parties are not agreed, and which is submitted to the decision of a judge and jury.

General
Categorical question. One inviting a distinct and positive statement of fact; one which can be answered by "yes" or "no." In the plural, a series of questions, covering a particular subject-matter, arranged in a systematic and consecutive order.

QUIRITARIAN OWNERSHIP. In Roman law. Ownership held by a title recognized by the municipal law, in an object also recognized by that law, and in the strict character of a Roman citizen. "Roman law originally only recognized one kind of dominion, called, emphatically, `quiritary dominion.' Gradually, however, certain real rights arose which, though they failed to satisfy all the elements of the definition of quiritary dominion, were practically its equivalent, and received from the courts a similar protection. These real rights might fall short of quiritary dominion in three respects: (1) Either in respect of the persons in whom they resided; (2) or of the subjects to which they related; or (3) of the title by which they were acquired." In the latter case, the ownership was called "bonitarian," e., "the property of a Roman citizen, in a subject capable of quiritary property, acquired by a title not known to the civil law, but introduced by the praetor and protected by his imperium or supreme executive power;" e. g., where res mancipi had been transferred by mere tradition. Poste's Gaits' Inst. 186.

QUOD SUB CERTA FORMA CONCESSUM VEL
RESERVATUM EST NON TRAHITUR AD VA-LOREM VEL COMPENSATIONEM. That which is granted or reserved under a certain form is not [permitted to be drawn into valuation or compensation. Bac.Max. 26, reg. 4. That which is given or reserved in a certain specified form must be taken as it is granted, and will not be permitted to be made the subject of any adjustment or compensation on the part of the grantee.
Ex parte Miller, 2 Hill (N.Y.) 423.

QUOD SUBINTELLIGITUR NON DEEST. What is tacitly understood is not wanting. 2 td.Raym. 832.

QUOD TACITE INTELLIGITUR DEESSE NON VIDETUR. What is tacitly understood is not considered to be wanting. 4 Coke, 22a.

QUOD VIDE. Which see. A direction to the reader to look to another part of the book, or to another book, there named, for further information.
Usually abbreviated "q. v."

QUOD VOLUIT NON DIXIT. What he intended he did not say, or express. An answer sometimes made in overruling an argument that the lawmaker or testator  meant so and so. 1 Kent, Comm. 468, note; Mann v. Mann's Ex'rs, 1 Johns.
Ch. (N.Y.) 235.

QUONIAM ATTACHIAMENTA. (Since the attachments.) One of the oldest books in the Scotch law. So called from the two first words of the volume. Jacob; Whishaw.

QUORUM. A majority of the entire body;  e. g., a quorum of a state supreme court. Mountain States Telephone & Telegraph Co. v. People, 68
Colo. 487, 190 P. 513, 517.

Such a number of the members of a body as is competent to transact business in the absence of the other members.
Morton v. Talmadge, 166 Ga. 620, 144 S.E. 111.

The idea of a quorum is that, when that required number of persons goes into a session as a body, such as directors of a corporation, the votes of a majority thereof are sufficient for binding action. Benintendi v. Kenton Hotel, 294 N.Y. 112, 60 N.E.2d 829, 831.

When a committee, board of directors, meeting of shareholders, legislature or other body of pei sons cannot act unless a certain number at least of them are present, that number is called a "quorum." Sweet. In the absence of any law or rule fixing the quorum, it consists of a majority of those entitled to act. Ex parte Willcocks, 7 Cow.

Justices of the Quorum

In English law, those justices of the peace whose presence at a session is necessary to make a lawful bench. All the justices of the peace for a county are named and appointed in one commission, which authorizes them all, jointly and several, to keep the peace, but provides that some particular named justices or one of them shall always be present when business is to be transacted, the ancient Latin phrase being "quorum unum
A. B. esse volumus." These designated persons are the "justices of the quorum." But the distinction is long since obsolete. 1 Bl.Comm. 351;
Snider v. Rinehart, 18 Colo. 18, 31 P. 716.

QUORUM PRIETEXTU NEC AUGET NEC MI-
NUIT SENTENTIAM, SED TANTUM CONFIR-
MAT PRZEMISSA, Plowd. 52. "Quorum prætextu" neither increases nor diminishes a sentence, but only confirms that which went before.

QUOT. In old Scotch law. A twentieth part of the movable estate of a person dying, which was due to the bishop of the diocese within which the person resided. Bell.

QUOTA. A proportional part or share, the proportional part of a demand or liability, falling upon each of those who are collectively responsible for the whole.

QUOTATION. The production to a court or judge of the exact language of a statute, precedent, or other authority, in support of an argument or proposition advanced.

The transcription of part of a literary composition into another book or writing.

A statement of the market price of one or more commodities; or the price specified to a corre-respondent.
QUOTIENS DUBIA INTERPRETABAT LIBERTATIS EST, SECUNDUM LIBERTATEM RESPONDENDUM ERIT. Whenever there is a doubt between liberty and slavery, the decision must be in favor of liberty. Dig. 50. 17. 20.

QUOTIENT VERDICT. A money verdict the amount of which is fixed by the following process: Each juror writes down the sum he wishes to award by the verdict; these amounts are all added together, and the total is divided by twelve, (the number of the jurors,) and the quotient stands as the verdict of the jury by their agreement. Hamilton v. Owego Waterworks, 48 N.Y.S. 106, 22 App.Div. 573. Such verdict is invalid. Hoffman v. City of St. Paul, 187 Minn. 320, 245 N.W. 373, 374, 86 A.L.R. 198; Stone v. State, 24 Ala.App. 395, 135 So. 646, 647; Killion v. Dinkleage, 121 Neb. 322, 236 N.W. 757, 759.

QUOTIES DUBIA INTERPRETABAT LIBERTATIS EST, SECUNDUM LIBERTATEM RESPONDENDUM ERIT. Whenever the interpretation of liberty is doubtful, the answer should be on the side of liberty. Dig. 50, 17, 20.

QUOTIES IDEM SERMO DUAS SENTENTIAS EXPRIMIT, EA POTISSIMUM EXCIPIATUR, QUIE REI GERENDIE APTIOR EST. Whenever the same language expresses two meanings that should be adopted which is the better fitted for carrying out the subject-matter. Dig. 50, 17, 67.

QUOTIES IN STIPULATIONIBUS AMBIGUA ORATIO EST, COMMODOSSIDUM EST ID ACCIPIT QUO RES DE QUAE AGITUR IN TUTO SIT. Whenever the language of stipulations is ambiguous, it is most fitting that that [sense] should be taken by which the subject-matter may be protected. Dig. 45, 1, 80.

QUOTUPLEX. Lat. Of how many kinds; how many fold. A term of frequent occurrence in Sheppard’s Touchstone.

QUOUSQUE. Lat. How long; how far; until. In old conveyances it is used as a word of limitation. 10 Coke, 41.

QUOVIS MODO. Lat. In whatever manner.

QUUM DE LUCRO DUORUM QUERATUR, MELIOR EST CAUSA POSSIDENTIS. When the question is as to the gain of two persons, the title of the party in possession is the better one. Dig. 50, 17, 126, 2.

QUUM IN TESTAMENTO AMBIGUE AUT ETIAM PERPERAM SCRIPTUM EST, BENIGNE INTERPRETARI ET SECUNDUM ID QUOD CREDIBLE ET COGITATUM, CREDEMENDUM EST. When in a will an ambiguous or even an erroneous expression occurs, it should be construed liberally and in accordance with what is thought the probable meaning of the testator. Dig. 34, 5, 24; Broom, Max. 437.

QUUM PRINCIPALIS CAUSA NON CONSISTIT NE EA QUIDEM QUIE SEQUUNTUR LOCUM HABENT. When the principal does not hold, the incidents thereof ought not to obtain. Broom, Max. 496.

QUUM QUOD AGO NON VALET UT AGO, VALEAT QUANTUM VALERE POTEST. 1 Vent. 216. When what I do is of no force as to the purpose for which I do it, let it be of force to as great a degree as it can.
R. In the signatures of royal persons, "R." is an abbreviation for "rex" (king) or "regina" (queen.) In descriptions of land, according to the divisions of the governmental survey, it stands for "range." Ottumwa, etc., R. Co. v. McWilliams, 71 Iowa 164, 32 N.W. 315; Simms v. Rolfe, 177 Ark. 52, 5 S.W.2d 718, 719.

R. E. A. Rural Electrification Administration.

R. G. An abbreviation for Regula Generalis, a general rule or order of court; or for the plural of the same.

R. L. This abbreviation may stand either for "Revised Laws" or "Roman law."

R. S. An abbreviation for "Revised Statutes."

RACE. An ethnical stock; a great division of mankind having in common certain distinguishing physical peculiarities constituting a comprehensive class appearing to be derived from a distinct primitive source. A tribal or national stock, a division or subdivision of one of the great racial stocks of mankind distinguished by minor peculiarities. Descent. In re Halladjian, C.C.Mass., 174 F. 834; Ex parte (Ng.) Fung Sing, D.C.Wash., i 6 F.2d 670.

RACE-WAY. An artificial canal dug in the earth; a channel cut in the ground. Wilder v. De Cou, 26 Minn. 17, 1 N.W. 48. The channel for the current that drives a waterwheel. Webster.

RACHAT. In French law. The right of repurchase which, in English and American law, the vendor may reserve to himself. It is also called "r6mOre." Brown.

RACHATER. L. Fr. To redeem; to repurchase, (or buy back.) Kelham.

RACHETUM. In Scotch law. Ransom; corresponding to Saxon "wereqild," a pecuniary composition for an offense. Skene; Jacob.

RACHDIBURGIL In the legal polity of the Salians and Ripuarians and other Germanic peoples, the name given to the judges or assessor who sat with the count in his mallum, (court,) and were generally associated with him in other matters. Spelman.

RACK. An engine of torture anciently used in the inquisitorial method of examining persons charged with crime, the office of which was to break the limbs or dislocate the joints.

RACK-RENT. A rent of the full value of the tenement, or near it. 2 Bl.Comm. 43.

RACK-VINTAGE. Wines drawn from the lees. Cowell.

RACKETEERING. An organized conspiracy to commit the crimes of extortion or coercion, attempts to commit extortion or coercion. From the standpoint of extortion, it is the obtaining of money or property from another, with his consent, induced by the wrongful use of force or fear. The fear which constitutes the legally necessary element in extortion is induced by oral or written threats to do an unlawful injury to the property of the threatened person by means of explosives, fire, or otherwise; and to kill, kidnap, or injure him or a relative of his or some member of his family. From the standpoint of coercion, it usually takes the form of compelling by use of similar threats to person or property a person to do or abstain from doing an act which such other person has the legal right to do or abstain from doing, such as joining a so-called protective association to protect his right to conduct a business or trade. United States v. McGlone, D.C. Pa., 19 F.Supp. 285, 287.

RADICALS. A political party. The term arose in England, in 1818, when the popular leaders, Hunt, Cartwright, and others, sought to obtain a radical reform in the representative system of parliament. Bolingbroke (Disc. Parties, Let. 18) employs the term in its present accepted sense: "Such a remedy might have wrought a radical cure of the evil that threatens our constitution," etc. Wharton.

RADIUS. A straight line drawn from the centre of a circle to any point of the circumference. Its length is half the diameter of that circle, or is the space between the centre and the circumference. State v. Berard, 40 La.App. 174, 3 So. 463.

RADOURS. An abbreviation for "Revised Statutes."
RAGEMAN. A statute, so called, of justices assigned by Edward I. and his council, to go a circuit through all England, and to hear and determine all complaints of injuries done within five years next before Michaelmas, in the fourth year of his reign. Spelman. Also a rule, form, regimen, or precedent.

RAGMAN'S ROLL, or RAGIMUND'S ROLL. A roll, called from one Ragimund or Ragimont, a legate in Scotland, who, summoning all the beneficed clergymen in that kingdom, caused them on oath to give in the true value of their benefices, according to which they were afterwards taxed by the court of Rome. Wharton.

RAIL CHAIR. A device used where the ends of rails come together; it holds the separate rails firmly together and in alignment and so gives them the effect of being one continuous rail. Railroad Supply Co. v. Hart Steel Co., C.C.A.11., 222 F. 261, 269.

RAILROAD, n. A road or way on which iron or steel rails are laid for wheels to run on, for the conveyance of heavy loads in cars or carriages propelled by steam or other motive power; a road or way on which iron rails are laid for transportation purposes, as incident to the possession or ownership of which important franchises and rights affecting the public are attached. A railway. New Deemer Mfg. Co. v. Kilpatrick, 129 Miss. 268, 92 So. 71, 73; Muskogee Electric Traction Co. v. Doering, 70 Okl. 21, 172 P. 793, 794, 2 A.L.R. 94. An enterprise created and operated to carry on a fixed track passengers and freight, or passengers or freight, for rates or tolls, without discrimination as to those who demand transportation. Bradley v. Degnon Contracting Co., 224 N.Y. 60, 120 N.E. 89, 91. In a strictly accurate sense, it is a generic term, and includes all kinds of railroads, whether street railways, horse car lines, cable car lines, electric trolley lines, suburban lines, interurban lines, or steam railroads engaged in general transportation. In re Columbia Ry., Gas & Electric Co., D.C.S.C., 24 F.2d 828, 831.

The term "railroad" or "railway" may in a broad sense include all structures which are necessary to operation of railroad. Smith v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co., 50 Mont. 539, 148 P. 393, 394.

Whether or not "railroad" includes roads operated by horse-power, electricity, cable-lines, etc., will generally depend upon the context of the statute in which it is found. The decisions on this point are at variance. Frisco Lumber Co. v. Spivey, 40 Okl. 633, 140 P. 157, 158; Morgan v. Grande Ronde Lumber Co., 76 Or. 440, 148 P. 1122, 1123.

If scope of a statute relating to railroads shows that both railroads and street railroads were within the legislative contemplation, the word "railroad" will include street railroads; but, if act was aimed at railroads proper, street railroads are excluded from its provisions. In re Columbia Ry., Gas & Electric Co., D.C.S.C., 24 F.2d 828, 831.

Railroad is usually limited to roads for heavy steam transportation and also to steam roads partially or wholly electrified or roads for heavy traffic designed originally for electric traction. The lighter electric street-car lines and the like are usually termed railways. In Great Britain and the British colonies, except Canada, all such roads, whether for heavy or light traffic, are usually called railways. Webster, Diet.

See, also, Railway.

Branch Railroad

A road connected with the main line, not as a mere incident thereto, to facilitate the business of the main line, but to do a business of its own by transporting persons and property to and from places not reached by the main line. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. East Sioux Falls Quarry Co., 33 S.D. 63, 144 N.W. 724, 726.

Railroad Car

Any vehicle constructed for operation over railroad tracks. State v. Tardiff, 111 Me. 552, 90 A. 424, L.R.A.1915A, 817.

Railroad Commission

A body of commissioners, appointed in several of the states, to regulate railway traffic within the state, with power, generally, to regulate and fix rates, see to the enforcement of police ordinances, and sometimes assess the property of railroads for taxation. Southern Pac. Co. v. Board of Railroad Com'rs, C.C.Cal., 78 F. 236, 252.

Railroad Company

A company which is principally engaged in operating a railroad. Crowley v. Polleys Lumber Co., 92 Mont. 27, 9 P.2d 1068, 1070.

Railroad Division

A unit of management established for convenience in operation. Day v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 295 Ky. 679, 175 S.W.2d 347, 349.

Railroad Line

A regular line of railroad vehicles for public use operating between distant points or between different cities. Bruce Transfer Co. v. Johnston, 227 Iowa 50, 287 N.W. 278, 280.

Railroad Property

The property which is essential to a railroad company to enable it to discharge its functions and duties as a common carrier by rail. It includes the road bed, right of way, tracks, bridges, stations, rolling stock, and such like property. Northern Pac. It. Co. v. Walker, C.C.N.D., 47 F. 681.

Railroad Relief Funds

A term applied to funds raised by periodical contributions of corporation employees, or by them jointly with the corporation, for the purpose of providing relief to the employees in case of injury, and the payment of money to their families in case of death, in the service.

RAILWAY. In law, this term is usually of exactly equivalent import to "railroad" (q. v.). State v. Brin, 30 Minn, 522, 16 N.W. 406; Milivale

Interurban Railways

A sort of hybrid, having in some respects the characteristics of the ordinary railroad and in others those of the street railroad. Within the limits of the cities which they enter, they usually pass along the streets, and perform the ordinary functions of street railroads, stopping where desired to let passengers on or off, and serving the public need for local street travel. Outside the cities, on their way from one city or town to another, they frequently travel upon a roadway obtained from private persons, not upon a public road, and stop, as in case of ordinary railroads, only at stations established by them for that purpose. They also often convey freight as well as passengers. San Francisco and S. M. Electric Ry. Co. v. Scott, 142 Cal. 222, 75 P. 575, 576, 583.

Railway Commissioners

A body of three commissioners appointed under the English regulation of railways act, 1873, principally to enforce the provisions of the railway and canal traffic act, 1854, by compelling railway and canal companies to give reasonable facilities for traffic, to abstain from giving unreasonable preference to any company or person, and to forward through traffic at through rates. They also have the supervision of working agreements between companies. Sweet.

Railway Depot

A station at which trains stop for transaction of ordinary business of railroad company, the receiving and delivering of freight and passengers. Brenner v. Amrine, 151 Kan. 788, 100 P.2d 688, 690.

Street Railway

One constructed and operated on or along the streets of a city or town to carry persons from one point to another in such city or town, or to and from its suburbs. It is peculiarly to accommodate people in cities and towns; its tracks are ordinarily laid to conform to street grades, its cars run along the streets, and perform the ordinary functions of street railroads. Anhalt v. Water-loo, C. F. & N. Ry. Co., 166 Iowa 479, 147 N.W. 928, 931. See Railroad. "Street railway" may include both urban and interurban lines. City of Milwaukee v. Railroad Commission of Wisconsin, 169 Wis. 559, 173 N.W. 329, 330. See, also, Interurban Railways.

Trunk Railway

A commercial railway connecting towns, cities, counties, or other points within the state or in different states, which has the legal capacity, under its charter or the general law, of constructing, purchasing, and operating branch lines or feeders connecting with its main stem or trunk; the main or trunk line bearing the same relation to its branches that the trunk of a tree bears to its branches, or the main stream of a river to its tributaries. Oregon, C. & E. Ry. Co. v. Blackmer, 154 Or. 388, 59 P.2d 694, 696.

RAIN—WATER. The water which naturally falls from the clouds.

RAINY DAYS. Where a charter party (a cargo of wheat) provided that rainy days should not be counted as lay days, it excludes only rainy days on which, with reference to the facilities of the port in the way of covered docks, etc., the cargo could not be safely landed. Kerr v. Schwaner, 101 C.C.A. 285, 177 F. 659.

RAISE. To create; to infer; to create or bring to light by construction or interpretation. To cause or procure to be produced, bred or propagated. To bring together; to get together or obtain for use or service; to gather; to collect; to levy; as to raise money to raise an army. Town of Amherst v. Erie County, 256 N.Y.S. 785, 143 Misc. 540; Miller Hatcheries v. Boyer, C.C.A. Iowa, 131 F.2d 283, 287.

RAISE A PRESCRIPTION. To give occasion or ground for a presumption; to be of such a character, or to be attended with such circumstances, as to justify an inference or presumption of law. Thus, a person's silence, in some instances, will "raise a presumption" of his consent to what is done.

RAISE AN ISSUE. To bring pleadings to an issue; to have the effect of producing an issue between the parties pleading in an action.

RAISE REVENUE. To levy a tax, as a means of collecting revenue; to bring together, collect, or levy revenue. The phrase does not imply an increase of revenue. Perry County v. Selma, etc., R. Co., 58 Ala. 557.

RAISING A PROMISE. The act of the law in extracting from the facts and circumstances of a particular transaction a promise which was implicit therein, and postulating it as a ground of legal liability.

RAISING A USE. Creating, establishing, or calling into existence a use. Thus, if a man con-

Black's Law Dictionary Revised 4th Ed.-90 RAISING

veyed land to another in fee, without any consideration, equity would presume that he meant it to be to the use of himself, and would, therefore, raise an implied use for his benefit. Brown.

RAISING AN ACTION, in Scotland, is the institution of an action or suit.

RAISING MONEY. Realizing money by subscription, loan, or otherwise. New York & R. Cement
Co. v. Davis, 173 N.Y. 235, 66 N.E. 9; New London Literary Inst. v. Prescott, 40 N.H. 333.

RAISING PORTIONS. When a landed estate is settled on an eldest son, it is generally burdened with the payment of specific sums of money in favor of his brothers and sisters. A direction to this effect is called a direction for "raising portions for younger children;" and, for this purpose, it is usual to demise or lease the estate to trustees for a term of years, upon trust to raise the required portions by a sale or mortgage of the same. Mozley & Whitley.

RAN, Sax. In Saxon and old English law. Open theft, or robbery.

RANCHO. Sp. A small collection of men or their dwellings; a hamlet. As used, however, in.
Mexico and in the Spanish law formerly prevailing in California, the term signifies a ranch or large tract of land suitable for grazing purposes where horses or cattle are raised, and is distinguished from hacienda, a cultivated farm or plantation.

RANCID. Having a rank smell or taste from chemical change or decomposition. Spry v. Kiser, 179 N.C. 417, 102 S.E. 708, 709.

RAND, or RAND LIFT. In the nomenclature of the • art of building heels, the cup-shaped piece attached to the top of the heel, fitting it to the heel seat of the shoe. Brockton Heel Co. v. International Shoe Co., D.C.N.H., 19 F.2d 145.

RANGE, v. To have or extend in certain direction, to correspond in direction or line, or to trend or run. Lilly v. Marcum, 214 Ky. 514, 283 S.W.
1059, 1060.

RANGE, n. In the government survey of the United States, one of the divisions of a state, a row or tier of townships as they appear on the map.

A tract or district of land within which domestic animals in large numbers range for subsistence; an extensive grazing ground. The term is used on the great plains of the United States to designate a tract commonly of many square miles occupied by one or different proprietors and distinctively called a cattle range, stock range, or sheep range. The animals on a range are usually left to take care of themselves during the whole year without shelter, except when periodically gathered in a round-up for counting and selection, and for branding, when the herds of several pro-prieters run together. State v. Omaecheviaria, 27 Idaho, 797, 152 P. 280, 282; Missoula Trust &
201, 245 P. 949, 951.

RANGER. In forest law. A sworn officer of the forest, whose office chiefly consists in three points:
To walk daily through his charge to see, hear, and inquire as well of trespasses as trespassers in his bailiwick; to drive the beasts of the forest, both of venery and chase, out of the deforestationed into the forested lands; and to present all trespassers of the forest at the next courts holden for the forest. Cowell.

RANK, n. Grade of official standing. The order or place in which certain officers are placed in the army and navy, in relation to others. Wood v.
U. S., 15 Ct.Cl. 158.

Rank is often used to express something different from office. It then becomes a designation or title of honor, dignity, or distinction conferred upon an officer in order to fix his relative position in reference to other officers in matters of privilege, precedence, and sometimes of command, or to determine which to determine his pay and emoluments. This is the case with the staff officers of the army. Wood v. U. S., 15 Ct.Cl. 159.

RANK, adj. In English law. Excessive; too large in amount; as a rank modus. 2 Bl.Comm.
30.

RANKING OF CREDITORS. The Scotch term for the arrangement of the property of a debtor according to the claims of the creditors, in consequence of the nature of their respective securities. Bell. The corresponding process in England is the marshalling of securities in a suit or action for redemption or foreclosure. Paterson.

RANSOM. The money, price, or consideration paid or demanded for redemption of a captured person or persons, a payment that releases from Fla. 847, 163 So. 136.

In international law. The redemption of captured property from the hands of an enemy, particularly of property captured at sea. 1 Kent, Comm. 104. A sum paid or agreed to be paid for the redemption of captured property. 1 Kent, Comm. 105.

Strictly speaking, not a recapture of the captured property. It is rather a purchase of the right of the captors at the time, be it what it may; or, more properly, it is a relinquishment of all the interest and benefit which the captors might acquire or consummate in the property, by a regular adjudication of a prize tribunal, whether it be an interest in rem, a lien, or a mere title to expenses. In this respect, there seems to be no difference between the case of a ransom of an enemy or a neutral. Maisonnaire v.
Kearing. 2 Gall. 325, Fed.Cas.No.8,978.

In old English law. A sum of money paid for the pardon of some great offense. The distinction between ransom and amerciament is said to be that ransom was the redemption of a corporal punishment, while amerciament was a fine or penalty directly imposed, and not in lieu of another punishment. Cowell; 4 Bl.Comm. 380; U.
S. v. Griffin, 6 D.C. 57. A sum of money paid for the redemption of a person from captivity or imprisoment. Thus one of the feudal "aids" was to ransom the lord's person if taken prisoner. 2
Bl.Comm. 63.
RANSOM BILL. A contract by which a captured vessel, in consideration of her release and of safe-conduct for a stipulated course and time, agrees to pay a certain sum as ransom.

Hence, if she consent to the sexual intercourse, although that consent may be reluctantly given, and although there may be some force used to obtain her consent, the offense cannot be "rape." Opposition to the sexual act by mere words is not sufficient. Welch v. State, 58 Ga.App. 447, 198 S.E. 810, 811. While slightest penetration is sufficient, it must be shown that private parts of male entered at least to some extent in those of female, and emission without penetration is insufficient. Kitchen v. State, 61 Okl.Cr. 435, 69 P.2d 411, 415.

Under modern statutes which often materially change the common-law definition and create an offense commonly known as "statutory rape," where the offense consists in having sexual intercourse with a female under statutory age, the offense may be either with or without the female's consent. State v. Ellison, 19 N.M. 428, 144 P. 10, 13.

In English law. An intermediate division between a shire and a hundred; or a division of a county, containing several hundreds. 1 Bl.Comm. 116; Cowell. Apparently peculiar to the county of Sussex. See, however, Lath.

RAPINE. The felonious taking of another man's personal property, openly and by violence, against his will.

In the civil law, rapina is defined as the forcible and violent taking of another man's movable property with the criminal intent to appropriate it to the robber's own use. A prmtorian action lay for this offense, in which quadruple damages were recoverable. Gaius, lib. 3, § 209; Inst. 4, 2; Mackseld. Rom. Law, § 481; Heinecc. Elem. § 1071.

RAPPOR T A SUCCESSION. In French law and in Louisiana. A proceeding similar to hotchpot; the restoration to the succession of such property as the heir may have received by way of advancement from the decedent, in order that an even division may be made among all the co-heirs. Civ.Code La. art. 1227.

RAPTOR. In old English law. A ransacker. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 52, § 12.
RATIFICATION. In a broad sense, the confirmation of a previous act done either by the party himself or by another; confirmation of a voidable act. Story, Ag. §§ 250, 251; 2 Kent, Comm. 237; Norton v. Shelby County, 6 S.Ct. 1121, 118 U.S. 425, 30 L.Ed. 178; Gallup v. Fox, 30 A. 756, 64 Conn. 491. The affirmation by a person of a prior act which did not bind him, but which was done or professedly done on his account, whereby the act, as to some or all persons, is given effect as if originally authorized by him. Goldfarb v. Reich, 112 N.J.L. 413, 171 A. 149, 151; The adoption by one, as binding upon himself, of an act done in such relations that he may claim it as done for his benefit, although done under such circumstances as would not bind him except for his subsequent assent. Samstag & Hilder Bros. v. Ott.heimer & Weil, 90 Conn. 475, 97 A. 865, 867; It is equivalent to a previous authorization and relates back to time when act ratified was done, except where intervening rights of third persons are concerned. Petray v. First Nat. Bank, 92 Cal.App. 86, 267 P. 711, 713.

In the law of principal and agent, the adoption and confirmation by one person with knowledge of all material facts, of an act or contract performed or entered into in his behalf by another who at the time assumed without authority to act as his agent. Maryland Casualty Co. v. First State Bank of Dewar, 101 Okl. 71, 223 P. 701, 705; Gould v. Maine Farmers' Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 114 Me. 416, 96 A. 732, 734, L.R.A.1917A, 604.

Ratifiation of transaction involves same elements Its making of new contract, and understanding of material facts necessary to an intelligent assent is essential to "ratification." State ex rel. Robertson v. Johnson County Bank, 18 Tenn.App. 232, 74 S.W.2d 1084, 1087.

Essence of "ratification" by principal of act of agent is manifestation of mental determination by principal to affirm the act, and this may be manifested by written word or by spoken word or by conduct, or may be inferred from known circumstances and principal's acts in relation there-. to. Miller v. Chatsworth Sa\. Bank, 203 Iowa, 411, 212 N.W. 722, 724.

To constitute ratification of voidable contract the act relied on must be performed with full knowledge of its consequences and with an express intension of ratifying what is known to be voidable. Cee v. Moon, 260 Ill. 76, 102 N.E. 1074, 1076; Fletcher v. A. W. Koch Co., Tex.Civ.App., 189 S.W. 501, 503.

Express ratifications are those made in express and direct terms of assent. Implied ratifications are such as the law presumes from the acts of the principal.

Estoppel and ratification distinguished. See Estopell.
ity & Deposit Co. of Maryland, 149 Minn. 171, 182 N.W. 1008, 1009.

Though sometimes used synonymously, from a strictly lexical standpoint, the word “adopt” should be used to apply to void transactions, while the word “ratify” should be limited to the final approval of a voidable transaction by one who theretofore had the optional right to relieve himself from its obligations. Cosden Oil & Gas Co. v. Hendrickson, 96 Okl. 206, 221 P. 86, 89.

RATIHABITIO. Lat. Confirmation, agreement, consent, approbation of a contract. Saltmarsh v. Candia, 51 N.H. 76.

RATIHABITIO MANDATO ZEQUIPARATUR. Ratification is equivalent to express command. Dig. 46, 3, 12, 4; Broom, Max. 867; Palmer v. Yates, 3 Sandf. (N.Y.) 151.

REAL, Civil Law

Relating to a thing, (whether movable or immovable,) as distinguished from a person.

Common Law

Relating to land, as distinguished from personal property. This term is applied to lands, tenements, and hereditaments.

REAL BURDEN. In Scotch law. Where a right to lands is expressly granted under the burden of a specific sum, which is declared a burden on the lands themselves, or where the right is declared null if the sum be not paid, and where the amount of the sum, and the name of the creditor in it, can be discovered from the records, the burden is said to be real. Bell.

REAL CHYMIN. L. Fr. In old English law. The royal way; the king's highway, (regia via.)

REAL EVIDENCE. Evidence furnished by things themselves, on view or inspection, as distinguished from a description of them by the mouth of a witness; e. g., the physical appearance of a person when exhibited to the jury, marks, scars, wounds, finger-prints, etc., also the weapons or implements used in the commission of a crime, and other inanimate objects, and evidence of the physical appearance of a place (the scene of an accident or of the commission of a crime or of property to be taken under condemnation pro-
REAL INJURY. In the civil law. An injury arising from an unlawful act, as distinguished from a verbal injury, which was done by words. Hallifax, Civil Law, b. 2, c. 15, nn. 3, 4.

REAL LAW. At common law. The body of laws relating to real property. This use of the term is popular rather than technical.

In the civil law. A law which relates to specific property, whether movable or immovable.

If real law in any given case relates to immovable property, it is limited in its operation to the territory within which the property is situate, real estate being both by common and continental laws, subject exclusively to the laws of the government within whose territory it is situated. Story, Confl.L. 426.

REAL THINGS (or THINGS REAL). In common law. Such things as are permanent, fixed, and immovable, which cannot be carried out of their place; as lands and tenements. 2 Bl.Comm. 15. Things substantial and immovable, and the rights and profits annexed to or issuing out of them. 1 Steph.Comm. 156.

REALITY. In foreign law. That quality of laws which concerns property or things, (quae ad rem spectant.) Story, Confl. Laws, § 16.

REALIZE. To convert any kind of property into money; but especially to receive the returns from an investment. Weldon v. Newsom, 67 Colo. 502, 186 P. 516, 517.

REALM. A kingdom; a country. 1 Taunt. 270; 4 Camp. 289.

REALTY. A brief term for real property; also for anything which partakes of the nature of real property.

Quasi realty. Things which are fixed in contemplation of law to realty, but movable in themselves, as heir-looms, (or limbs of the inheritance,) title-deeds, court rolls, etc. Wharton.

REAPPRAISER. A person who, in certain cases, is appointed to make a revaluation or second appraisement of imported goods at the custom-house.

REAPTWHEL. See Riptowell.

REAR. The word has been held not necessarily to mean directly behind. Hinds v. Hinsdale, 80 N.H. 346, 116 A. 635, 636.

REARGUMENT. Its purpose is to demonstrate to court that there is some decision or principle of law which would have a controlling effect and which has been overlooked, or that there has been a misapprehension of facts. In re Hooker’s Estate, 18 N.Y.S.2d 107, 110, 173 Misc. 515.

REASON. A faculty of the mind by which it distinguishes truth from falsehood, good from evil, and which enables the possessor to deduce inferences from facts or from propositions. Webster. Also an inducement, motive, or ground for action, as in the phrase “reasons for an appeal.” Miller v. Miller, 8 Johns. (N.Y.) 77.

REASONABLE. Just; proper. Ordinary or usual. Fit and appropriate to the end in view. Parkes v. Bartlett, 236 Mich. 460, 210 N.W. 492, 494, 47 A.L.R. 1128; Having the faculty of reason; rational; governed by reason; under the influence of reason; agreeable to reason. Clausen v. State, 21 Wyo. 505, 133 P. 1055, 1056. Thinking, speaking, or acting according to the dictates of reason; not immoderate or excessive, being synonymous with rational; honest; equitable; fair; suitable; moderate; tolerable. Cass v. State, 124 Tex.Cr.R. 208, 61 S.W.2d 500.

As applied to rates of public service companies, a reasonable rate is one not so low as to be destructive of the company’s property or so high, either intrinsically or because discriminatory, as to be an unjust exaction from the public. Turner v. Connecticut Co., 91 Conn. 692, 101 A. 88, 90.

REASONABLE ACT. Such as may fairly, justly, and reasonably be required of a party.

REASONABLE AND PROBABLE CAUSE. Such grounds as justify any one in suspecting another of a crime, and giving him in custody thereon. It is a suspicion founded upon circumstances sufficiently strong to warrant reasonable man in belief that charge is true. Murphy v. Murray, 74 Cal.App. 726, 241 P. 938, 940.

REASONABLE CERTAINTY, RULE OF. Permits recovery of damages only for such future pain and suffering as is reasonably certain to result from the injury received. Prettyman v. Topkis, 3 A.2d 708, 710, 9 W.W.Harr. (Del.) 568. To authorize recovery under such rule for permanent injury, permanency of injury must be shown with reasonable certainty, which is not mere conjecture or likelihood or even a probability of such injury. State ex rel. Kansas City Public Service Co. v. Shain, 350 Mo. 316, 165 S.W.2d 428, 430.

REASONABLE CREATURE. Under the common-law rule that murder is taking the life of a “reasonable creature” under the king’s peace, with malice aforethought, the phrase means a human being, and has no reference to his mental condition, as it includes a lunatic, an idiot, and even an unborn child. State v. Jones, Walk. (Miss.) 85.
REBELLIOUS ASSEMBLY. In English law. A gathering of twelve persons or more, intending, going about, or practicing unlawfully and of their own authority to change any laws of the realm; or to destroy the inclosure of any park or ground inclosed, banks of fish-ponds, pools, conduits, etc., to the intent the same shall remain void; or to destroy the deer in any park, fish in ponds, coneyes in any warren, dovehouses, etc.; or to burn sacks of corn; or to abate rents or prices of victuals, etc., Cowell.

In old English law, also a contempt of a court manifested by disobedience to its process, particularly of the court of chancery. If a defendant refused to appear, after attachment and proclamation, a "commission of rebellion" issued against him. 3 Bl.Comm. 444.

REBELLION, COMMISSION OF. In equity practice. A process of contempt issued on the non-appearance of a defendant.

REBUTAL. The introduction of rebutting evidence; the showing that statement of witnesses as to what occurred is not true; the stage of a trial at which such evidence may be introduced; also the rebutting evidence itself. Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 255, 10 P. 674. State v. Monroe, 205 La. 285, 17 So.2d 331, 332.

REBUFFER. To repel or bar. The action of the heir by the warranty of his ancestor is called "rebut or repel." 2 Co. Litt. 247.

REBUS SIC STANTIBUS. Lat. At this point of affairs; in these circumstances. A name given to a tacit condition, said to attach to all treaties, that they shall cease to be obligatory so soon as the state of facts and conditions upon which they were founded has substantially changed. Taylor, Int. L. § 394; 1 Oppenheim, Int. L. 550; Grotius, ch. XVI, § XXV.

The change of government from a monarchy to a republic was treated as not terminating treaties, nor a successful revolution; nor an alliance of one of the treaty powers with a third power. As the result, however, of the changes in the state of Europe effected by the wars of Napoleon, all the treaties of the United States with European powers were considered as terminated, excepting only one with Spain of 1795. 5 Moore, Dig. Int. L. 335, 337, 338.

REBUT. In pleading and evidence. To defeat or take away the effect of something. Sweet.

When a plaintiff in an action produces evidence which raises a presumption of the defendant's liability, and the defendant adduces evidence which shows that the presumption is ill-founded, he is said to "rebut it." Sweet.

In the old law of real property, to repel or bar a claim. Co. Litt. 365a; Termes de la Ley.

Thus, when a person was sued for land which had been warranted to him by the plaintiff or his ancestor, and he pleaded the warranty as a defense to the action, this was called a "rebutter." Co.Litt. 365a; Termes de la Ley.

REBUT AN EQUITY. To defeat an apparent equitable right or claim, by the introduction of evidence showing that, in the particular circumstances, there is no ground for such equity to attach, or that it is overridden by a superior or countervailing equity. 2 Whart. Ev. § 973.

REBUTTAL. The introduction of rebutting evidence; the showing that statement of witnesses as to what occurred is not true; the stage of a trial at which such evidence may be introduced; also the rebutting evidence itself. Lux v. Hagggin, 69 Cal. 255, 10 P. 674. State v. Monroe, 205 La. 285, 17 So.2d 331, 332.

REBUFFER. In pleading. A defendant's answer to a plaintiff's surrejoinder; the third pleading in the series on the part of the defendant. Steph. Pl. 59; 3 Bl.Comm. 310.
REBUTTING EVIDENCE. Evidence given to explain, repel, counteract, or disprove facts given in evidence by the adverse party. State v. Martinez, 43 Idaho 180, 250 P. 239, 244; State v. Fourchey, 25 So. 109, 51 La.Ann. 228.

Also evidence given in opposition to a presumption of fact or a prima facie case; in this sense, it may be not only counteracting evidence, but evidence sufficient to counteract, that is, conclusive. Fain v. Cornett, 25 Ga. 186.

CONSTITUTIONAL LAW

To rehire an elected officer, by a vote of the electorate. In 1911 the right to recall was provided in Idaho, Montana, North and South Dakota, Washington, Wisconsin, Wyoming, and California. Like provisions were adopted in 1912 in Ohio, Arizona, and Nebraska. The recall of judges was adopted in Oregon in 1908; in California in 1911; in Colorado, Arizona, and Nevada in 1912.

INTERNATIONAL LAW

To summon a diplomatic minister back to his home court, at the same time depriving him of his office and functions.

RECALL A JUDGMENT. To revoke, cancel, vacate, or reverse a judgment for matters of fact; when it is annulled by reason of errors of law, it is said to be "reversed."

Act of receiving; also, the fact of receiving or being received; that which is received; that which comes in, in distinction from what is expended, paid out, sent away, and the like. State v. Texas Co., 173 Tenn. 154, 116 S.W.2d 583, 584.

In old practice. Admission of a party to defend a suit, as of a wife on default of the husband in certain cases. Litt. § 668; Co. Litt. 352b.

RECEIPTOR. A name given in some of the states to a person who receives from the sheriff goods which the latter has seized under process of garnishment, on giving to the sheriff a bond conditioned to have the property forthcoming when demanded or when execution issues. Story, Bailm. § 124.

RECEIVER. To take into possession and control; accept custody of. Young v. Alexander, 123 Miss. 708, 86 So. 461; Northwestern Spring Co. v. Rosenberg, C.C.A.2d, 287 F. 785, 786.

An indifferent person between the parties to a cause, appointed by the court to receive and preserve the property or fund in litigation, and receive its rents, issues, and profits, and apply or dispose of them at the direction of the court when it does not seem reasonable that either party should hold them. Or where a party is incompetent to do so, as in the case of an infant. The remedy of the appointment of a receiver is one of the very oldest in the court of chancery, and is founded on the inadequacy of the remedy to be obtained in the court of ordinary jurisdiction. Bisp. Eq. § 576; In Re Guaranty Indemnity Co., 256 Mich. 671, 240 N.W. 78. A fiduciary of the court, appointed as an incident to other proceedings wherein certain ultimate relief is prayed. In re Granada Hotel Corporation, D.C.Ill., 9 F.Supp. 909. He is a trustee or ministerial officer representing court, and all parties in interest in litigation, and property or fund intrust-ted to him. Dallas Bank & Trust Co. v. Thompson, Tex.Civ.App., 87 S.W.2d 307, 308. See also Receiver Pendente Lite and Receivership.

One who receives money to the use of another to render an account. Story, Eq. Jur. § 446.

In criminal law. One who receives stolen goods from thieves, and conceals them. Cowell. This was always the prevalent sense of the word in the common as well as the civil law.

RECEIVER GENERAL OF THE DUCHY OF LANCASTER. An officer of the duchy court, who collects all the revenues, fines, forfeitures, and assessments within the duchy.

RECEIVER GENERAL OF THE PUBLIC REVENUE. In English law. An officer appointed in every county to receive the taxes granted by parliament, and remit the money to the treasury.

RECEIVER OF FINES. An English officer who receives the money from persons who compound with the crown on original writs sued out of chancery. Wharton.

RECEIVERS AND TRIERS OF PETITIONS. The mode of receiving and trying petitions to parliament was formerly judicial rather than legislative, and the triers were committees of prelates, peers, and judges, and, latterly, of the members generally. Brown.

RECEIVER'S CERTIFICATE. A non-negotiable evidence of debt, or debenture, issued by authority of a court of chancery, as a first lien upon the property of a debtor corporation in the hands of a receiver. Beach, Rec. § 379.

RECEIVERS OF WRECK. Persons appointed by the English board of trade. The duties of a receiver of wreck are to take steps for the preservation of any vessel stranded or in distress within his district; to receive and take possession of all articles washed on shore from the vessel; to use force for the suppression of plunder and disorder; to institute an examination on oath with respect to the vessel; and, if necessary, to sell the vessel, cargo, or wreck. Sweet.

RECEIVER PENDENTE LITE. A person appointed to take charge of the fund or property to which the receivership extends while the case remains undecided. The title to the property is not changed by the appointment. The receiver acquires no title, but only the right of possession as the officer of the court. The title remains in those in whom it was vested when the appointment was made. The object of the appointment is to secure the property pending the litigation, so that it may be appropriated in accordance with the rights of the parties, as they may be determined by the judgment in the action. Title Guarantee & Trust Co. v. 457 Schenectady Ave., 257 N.Y.S. 413, 417, 235 App.Div. 509.

RECEIVERSHIP. An extraordinary remedy of an ancillary character; chief reason for its allowance being to husband property in litigation for benefit of person who may ultimately be found entitled thereto. Pereira v. Wulf, 83 Mont. 343, 272 P. 532, 533. See, also, Receiver.

RECEIVING STOLEN GOODS. The short name usually given to the offense of receiving any property with the knowledge that it has been feloniously, or unlawfully stolen, taken, extorted, obtained, embezzled, or disposed of. Sweet; Underwood v. State, 36 Okl.Cr. 21, 251 P. 507, 508; Winters v. State, 80 Tex.Cr.R. 85, 188 S.W. 982.

RECEIVING STOLEN GOODS. The short name usually given to the offense of receiving any property with the knowledge that it has been feloniously, or unlawfully stolen, taken, extorted, obtained, embezzled, or disposed of. Sweet; Underwood v. State, 36 Okl.Cr. 21, 251 P. 507, 508; Winters v. State, 80 Tex.Cr.R. 85, 188 S.W. 982.

RECENS INSECUITIO. In old English law. Fresh suit; fresh pursuit. Pursuit of a thief immediately after the discovery of the robbery. 1 Bl.Comm. 297.

ITECEPISSE DE COTISATION. In French law. A receipt setting forth the extent of the interest subscribed by a member of a mutual insurance company. Arg. Fr. Merc. Law, 571.

RECEPTUS. Lat. In the civil law. The name sometimes given to an arbitrator, because he had been received or chosen to settle the differences between the parties. Dig. 4, 8; Cod. 2, 56.

RECESS. In the practice of the courts, a short interval or period of time during which the court suspends business, but without adjourning. In re Gannon, 69 Cal. 541, 11 P. 240. In legislative practice, the interval, occurring in consequence of an adjournment, between the sessions of the same continuous legislative body; not the interval between the final adjournment of one body and the convening of another at the next regular session. Tipton v. Parker, 71 Ark. 193, 74 S.W. 298; Reynolds v. Cropsey, 241 N.Y. 389, 150 N.E. 303, 307.

RECESSION. The act of ceding back; the restoration of the title and dominion of a territory, by the government which now holds it, to the government from which it was obtained bycession or otherwise. 2 White, Recop. 516.

RECESSUS MARIS. Lat. In old English law. An act of exclusion or retreat of the sea.

RECHT. Ger. Right; justice; equity; the whole body of law; unwritten law; law; also a right.

There is much ambiguity in the use of this term, an ambiguity which it shares with the French "droit," the Italian "diritto," and the English "right." On the one hand, the term "recht" answers to the Roman "jus," and thus indicates law in the abstract, considered as the foundation of all rights, or the complex of underlying moral principles which impart the character of justice to all positive law, or give it an ethical content. Taken in this abstract sense, the term may be an adjective, in which case it is equivalent to the English "just," or a noun, in which case it may be paraphrased by the expressions "justice," "moralitie," or "equity." On the other hand, it serves to point out a right; that is, a power, privilege, faculty, or demand, inherent in one person, and incident upon another. In the latter signification "recht" (or "droit," or "diritto," or "right") is the correlative of "duty" or "obligation." In the former sense, it may be considered as opposed to wrong, injustice, or the absence of law. The word "recht" has the further ambiguity that it is used in contradistinction to "Gesetz," as "jus" is opposed to "lex," or the unwritten law to enacted law. See Droit; Jus; Right.

RECIDIVIST. A habitual criminal. An incorrigible criminal. One who makes a trade of crime. McDonald, Criminology, ch. viii; People v. Rave, 364 Ill. 72, 3 N.E.2d 972, 976.

RECIDIVIST CONTRACT. A contract, the parties to which enter into mutual engagements. A mutual or bilateral contract.

RECIPIROCAL WILLS. Wills made by two or more persons in which they make reciprocal testamentary provisions in favor of each other, whether they unite in one will or each executes a separate one. In re Cawley's Estate, 136 Pa. 628, 20 A. 567, 10 L.R.A. 93.

RECIPOCRITY. Mutual. The term is used in international law to denote the relation existing between two states when each of them gives the subjects of the other certain privileges, on condition that its own subjects shall enjoy similar privileges at the hands of the latter state. Sweet.

RECITAL. The formal statement or setting forth of some matter of fact, in any deed or writing, in order to explain the reasons upon which the transaction is founded. The recitals are situated in the premises of a deed, that is, in that part of a deed between the date and the habendum, and they usually commence with the formal word "whereas." Brown.

The formal preliminary statement in a deed or other instrument, of such deeds, agreements, or matters of fact as are necessary to explain the reasons upon which the transaction is founded. 2 Bl.Comm. 298.

In pleading. The statement of matter as introductory to some positive allegation, beginning in declarations with the words, "For that whereas." Steph. Pl. 388, 389.

RECITE. To state in a written instrument facts connected with its inception, or reasons for its being made. Also to quote or set forth the words or the contents of some other instrument or document; as, to "recite" a statute. See Hart v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., 6 W.Va. 348.

RECK. To take heed; have a care, mind, heed. Lancaster v. Carter, Tex.Com.App., 255 S.W. 392, 394.

RECKLESS. Not reeking; careless, heedless, inattentive; indifferent to consequences. According to circumstances it may mean desperately heedless, wanton or willful, or it may mean only careless, inattentive, or negligent. People v. Sweet, 130 Misc.Rep. 612, 225 N.Y.S. 182, 183.

Reckless conduct, as respects common-law manslaughter, must evince disregard of consequences under circumstances involving danger to life or safety. State v. Custer, 129 Kan. 381, 282 P. 1071, 1078, 67 A.L.R. 909.

RECKLESS DISREGARD OF RIGHTS OF OTHERS. As used in automobile guest law, mean the voluntary doing by motorist of an improper or wrongful act, or with knowledge of existing conditions, the voluntary refraining from doing a proper or prudent act when such act or failure to act evinces an entire abandonment of any care, and heedless indifference to results which may follow and the reckless taking of chance of accident happening without intent that any occur. Albert McGann Securities Co. v. Coen, 114 Ind.App. 60, 48 N.E.2d 58, 60. Gill v. Hayes, 188 Okl. 434, 108 P.2d 117, 120.

RECLAIM. To claim or demand back; to ask for the return or restoration of a thing; to insist upon one's right to recover that which was one's own, but was parted with conditionally or mistakenly; as, to reclaim goods which were obtained from one under false pretenses. Witson v. Succession of Staring, La.App., 175 So. 495, 498.

Feudal Law

It was used of the action of a lord pursuing, prosecuting, and recalling his vassal, who had gone to live in another place, without his permission.

International Law

The demanding of a thing or person to be delivered up or surrendered to the government or state to which either properly belongs, when, by an irregular means, it has come into the possession of another. Wharton.

Law of Property

Spoken of animals, to reduce from a wild to a tame or domestic state; to tame them. In an analogous sense, to reclaim land is to reduce marshy or swamp land to a state fit for cultivation and habitation.

Scotch Law

To appeal. The reclaiming days in Scotland are the days allowed to a party dissatisfied with the judgment of the lord ordinary to appeal thereof to the inner house; and the petition of appeal is called the reclaiming "bill," "note," or "petition." Mozley & Whitley; Bell.

RECLAIMED ANIMALS. Those that are made tame by art, industry, or education, whereby a qualified property may be acquired in them.

RECLAIMING BILL. In Scotch law. A petition of appeal or review of a judgment of the lord ordinary or other inferior court. Bell.

RECLAMATION DISTRICT. A subdivision of a state created by legislative authority, for the purpose of reclaiming swamp, marshy, or desert lands within its boundaries and rendering them fit for habitation or cultivation, generally with funds raised by local taxation or the issue of bonds, and sometimes with authority to make rules or ordinances for the regulation of the work in hand.

RECOGNIZE. To try; to examine in order to determine the truth of a matter. Also to enter into a recognizance.

RECOGNIZEE. He to whom one is bound in a recognizance.

RECOGNIZOR. He who enters into a recognizance.

RÈCOLEMENT. In French law. This is the process by which a witness, who has given his deposition, reads the same over and scrutinizes it, with a view to affirming his satisfaction with it as it stands, or to making such changes in it as his better recollection may suggest to him as necessary to the truth. This is necessary to the validity of the deposition. Poth. Proc. Crim. § 4, art. 4.

RECOMMEND. To advise or counsel. Kirby v. Nolte, 351 Mo. 525, 173 S.W.2d 391.

RECOMMENDATION. In feudal law. A method of converting alodial land into feudal property. The owner of the allod surrendered it to the king or a lord, doing homage, and received it back as a benefice or feud, to hold to himself and such of his heirs as he had previously nominated to the superior.

The act of one person in giving to another a favorable account of the character, responsibility, or skill of a third.

Letter of Recommendation

A writing whereby one person certifies concerning another that he is of good character, solvent, possessed of commercial credit, skilled in his trade or profession, or otherwise worthy of trust, aid, or employment. It may be addressed to an individual or to whom it may concern, and is designed to aid the person commended in obtaining credit, employment, etc. McDonald v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 187 Ill. 539, 58 N.E. 463.

RECOMMENDATORY. Precatory, advisory, or directory.

Recommending words in a will are such as do not express the testator's command in a peremptory form, but advise, counsel, or suggest that a certain course be pursued or disposition made.
RECOMPENSATION. In Scotland, where a party sues for a debt, and the defendant pleads compensation, i.e., set-off, the plaintiff may allege a compensation on his part; and this is called "recompensation." Bell.

RECOMPENSE. A reward for services; remuneration for goods or other property.

RECOMPENSE OR RECOVERY IN VALUE. That part of the judgment in a "common recovery" by which the tenant is declared entitled to recover lands of equal value with those which were warranted to him and lost by the default of the vouchee. 2 Bl.Comm. 358-359.

RECONCILIATION. The renewal of amicable relations between two persons who had been at enmity or variance; usually implying forgiveness of injuries on one or both sides. It is sometimes used in the law of divorce as a term synonymous or analogous to "condonation." Martin v. Martin, 151 La. 530, 92 So. 46, 48.

RECONCILIATION. In the civil law. A renewing of a former lease; relocation. Dig. 19, 2, 13, 11; Code Nap. arts. 1737-1740.

RECONSTRUCTION. Act of constructing again. It presupposes the nonexistence of the thing to be reconstructed, as an entity; that the thing before existing has lost its entity. McCarty v. Boulevard Com'r's of Hudson County, 91 N.J.L. 137, 106 A. 219, 220; Miller Hatcheries v. Buckeye Incubator Co., C.C.A.Mo., 41 F.2d 619:

Also the name commonly given to the process of reorganizing, by acts of congress and executive action, the governments of the states which had passed ordinances of secession, and of re-establishing their constitutional relations to the national government, restoring their representation in congress, and effecting the necessary changes in their internal government, after the close of the civil war. Black, Const. Law (3d Ed.) 48; Texas v. White, 7 Wall. 700, 19 L.Ed. 227.

RECONTINUANCE. Used to signify that a person has recovered an incorporeal hereditament of which he had been wrongfully deprived. Thus, A. is disseised of a manor, whereunto an advowson is appendant, an estranger [i.e., neither A. nor the disseisor] usurps to the advowson; if the disseisee [A.] enter into the manor, the advowson is recontinued again, which was severed by the usurpation.  And so note a diversitie between a recontinuance and a remitter; for a remitter cannot be properly, unless there be two titles; but a recontinuance may be where there is but one. Co. Litt. 363b; Sweet.

RECONVENE. Lat. In the canon and civil law. To make a cross-demand upon the actor, or plaintiff. 4 Reeve, Eng. Law, 14, and note, (r).

RECONVENTION. In the civil law. An action by a defendant against a plaintiff in a former action; a cross-bill or litigation.

The term is used in practice in the states of Louisiana and Texas, derived from the reconven-tio of the civil law. Reconvention is not identical with set-off, but more extensive. Pacific Exp. Co. v. Malin, 132 U.S. 531, 10 S.Ct. 166, 33 L.Ed. 450; Suberville v. Adams, 47 La. Ann. 68, 16 So. 652; Gimbel v. Gomprecht, 89 Tex. 497, 35 S.W. 470.

RECONVENTIONAL DEMAND. Any plea by a defendant which constitutes more than mere defense and amounts to counterclaim. Alfonso v. Ruiz, La.App., 2 So.2d 480, 483, 484.

RECONVERSION. That imaginary process by which a prior constructive conversion is annulled and the property restored in contemplation of equity to its original actual quality. Seagle v. Harris, 214 N.C. 339, 199 S.E. 271, 273.

RECOVENCYANCE. It takes place where a mortgage debt is paid off, and the mortgaged property is conveyed again to the mortgagor or his representatives free from the mortgage debt. Sweet.

RECOPILACION DE INDIAS. A collection of Spanish colonial law, promulgated A. D. 1680. See Schm. Civil Law, Introd. 94.

RECORD, v. To commit to writing, to printing, to inscription, or the like, to make an official note of, to write, transcribe, or enter in a book or on parchment, for the purpose of preserving authentic evidence of, or on a wax cylinder, rubber disk, etc., for reproduction, as by a phonograph, or to register or enroll. To transcribe a document, or enter the history of an act or series of acts, in an official volume, for the purpose of giving notice of the same, of furnishing authentic evidence, and for preservation. Cady v. Purser, 131 Cal. 552, 63 P. 844, 82 Am.St.Rep. 391; Shimmel v. People, 108 Colo. 592, 121 P.2d 491, 493.

RECORD, n. A written account of some act, transaction, or instrument, drawn up, under authority of law, by a proper officer, and designed to remain as a memorial or permanent evidence of the matters to which it relates. People ex rel. Simons v. Dowling, 146 N.Y.S. 919, 920, 84 Misc. 201. A memorandum public or private, of what has been done, ordinarily applied to public records only, in which sense it is a written memorial made by a public officer. Nogueira v. State, 123 Tex.Cr.R. 449, 59 S.W.2d 831.

The act or fact of recording or being recorded, reduction to writing as evidence, also, the writing so made, a register, a family record, official contemporaneous writing, an authentic official copy of document entered in book or deposited in keeping of officer designated by law, an official contemporaneous memorandum stating the proceedings of a court or official copy of legal papers used in a case. Shimmel v. People, 108 Colo. 592, 121 P.2d 491, 493.

There are three kinds of records, viz.: (1) judicial, as an attainder; (2) ministerial, on oath, being an office or inquisition found; (3) by way of conveyance, as a deed enrolled. Wharton.
Practice

A written memorial of all the acts and proceedings in an action or suit, in a court of record. The official and authentic history of the cause, consisting in entries of each successive step in the proceedings, chronicling the various acts of the parties and of the court, couched in the formal language established by usage, terminating with the judgment rendered in the cause, and intended to remain as a perpetual and unimpeachable memorial of the proceedings and judgment. State v. Brewer, 19 Ala.App. 291, 97 So. 160, 161.

At common law, a roll of parchment upon which the proceedings and transactions of a court are entered or drawn up by its officers, and which is then deposited in its treasury in perpetuam rei memoriam. 3 Steph.Comm. 583; 3 Bl.Comm. 24. A court of record is that where the acts and judicial proceedings are enrolled in parchment for a perpetual memorial and testimony, which rolls are called the "records of the court," and are of such high and supereminent authority that their truth is not to be called in question. Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 422, 94 Am.Dec. 742. O'Connell v. Hotchkiss, 44 Conn. 53; Murrah v. State, 51 Miss. 656; State v. Anders, 64 Kan. 742, 68 P. 668; Wilkinson v. Railway Co., C.C., 23 F. 562; O'Connell v. Hotchkiss, 44 Conn. 53; Murrah v. State, 51 Miss. 656; State v. Anders, 64 Kan. 742, 68 P. 668; Wilkinson v. Railway Co., C.C., 23 F. 562; In re Christern, 43 N.Y.Super.Ct. 531.

In the practice of appellate tribunals, the history of the proceedings on the trial of the action below, (with the pleadings, offers, objections to evidence, rulings of the court, exceptions, charge, etc.,) in so far as the same appears in the record furnished to the appellate court in the paper-books or other transcripts. Hence, derivatively, it means the aggregate of the various judicial steps taken on the trial below, in so far as they were taken, presented, or allowed in the formal and proper manner necessary to put them upon the record of the court. This is the meaning in such phrases as "no error in the record," "contents of the record," "outside the record," etc. Le Clair v. Calls Him, 106 Okl. 247, 233 P. 1087, 1091.

General

Conveyances by record. Extraordinary assurances; such as private acts of parliament and royal grants.

Courts of record. Those whose judicial acts and proceedings are enrolled in parchment, for a perpetual memorial and testimony, which rolls are called the "records of the court," and are of such high and supereminent authority that their truth is not to be called in question. Every court of record has authority to fine and imprison for contempt of its authority. 3 Broom & H. Comm. 21, 30. Page v. Turcott, 179 Tenn. 491, 167 S.W.2d 350, 354.

Debts of record. Those which appear to be due by the evidence of a court of record; such as a judgment, recognizance, etc.

Diminution of record. Incompleteness of the record sent up on appeal. See Diminution.

Face of record. See Face of Record.

False record. See False Record.

Judicial record. A precise history of suit from commencement to termination, including conclusion of law. People v. Fox, 346 Ill. 374, 178 N.E. 907, 910.

Matter of record. See Matter.

Nul tiel record. See Nul.

Of record. See that title.

Public record. A record, memorial of some act or transaction, written evidence of something done, or document, considered as either concerning or interesting the public, affording notice or information to the public, or open to public inspection. Keeve v. Donnell, 92 Me. 151, 42 A. 345; Colson v. Orr, 71 Cal. 43, 11 P. 814.

Record and writ clerk. Four officers of the court of chancery were designated by this title, whose duty it was to file bills brought to them for that purpose. Business was distributed among them according to the initial letter of the surname of the first plaintiff in a suit. Hunt, Eq. These officers are now transferred to the high court of justice under the judicature acts.

Record commission. The name of a board of commissioners appointed for the purpose of searching out, classifying, indexing, or publishing the public records of a state or county.

Record of nisi prius. In English law. An official copy or transcript of the proceedings in an action, entered on parchment and "sealed and passed," as it is termed, at the proper office; it serves as a warrant to the judge to try the cause, and is the only document at which he can judicially look for information as to the nature of the proceedings and the issues joined. Brown.

Title of record. A title to real estate, evidenced and provable by one or more conveyances or other instruments all of which are duly entered on the public land records.

Trial by record. A species of trial adopted for determining the existence or non-existence of a record. When a record is asserted by one party to exist, and the opposite party denies its existence under the form of a traverse that there is no such record remaining in court as alleged, and issue is joined thereon, this is called an "issue of nul tiel record," and in such case the court awards a trial by inspection and examination of the record. Upon this the party affirming its existence is bound to produce it in court on a day given for the purpose, and, if he fails to do so, judgment is given for his adversary. Co. Litt. 117b, 260a; 3 Bl. Comm. 331.
RECORD, ESTOPPEL BY. An estoppel founded upon matter of record; as a confession, or admission made in pleading in a court of record, which precludes the party from afterwards contesting the same fact in the same suit. Steph. Pl. 197.

An officer appointed to make record or enrolment of deeds and other legal instruments authorized by law to be recorded.

RECORD OF LONDON. One of the justices of oyer and terminer, and a justice of the peace of the quorum for putting the laws in execution for the preservation of the peace and government of the city. Being the mouth of the city, he delivers the sentences and judgments of the court therein, and also certifies and records the city customs, etc. He is chosen by the lord mayor and aldermen, and attends the business of the city when summoned by the lord mayor, etc. Wharton.

RECORDED ACTS. Statutes enacted in the several states relative to the official recording of deeds, mortgages, bills of sale, chattel mortgages, etc., and the effect of such records as notice to creditors, purchasers, incumbrancers, and others interested.

RECORDS, EARLY ENGLISH. A record commission was appointed in 1800 by parliament, which in 37 years of service printed many records of England, Wales and Scotland. See their reports. Extracts from that on the "Statutes of the Realm" will be found in 2 Sel. Essays in Anglo. Amer. L. H. 171. See 2 Holdsw. Hist. E. L.

RECORDUM. A record; a judicial record. It is used in the phrase prout patet per recordum, which is a formula employed, in pleading, for reference to a record, signifying as it appears from the record. 1 Chit. Pl. 385; Philpot v. McArthur, 10 Me. 127.

RECOUP, or RECOUPE. To deduct, defalk, discount, set off, or keep back; to withhold part of a demand.

RECOMPENSE. In practice. Defalcation or discount from a demand. A keeping back something which is due, because there is an equitable reason to withhold it. Tomlins. A right of the defendant to have a deduction from the amount of the plaintiff's damages, for the reason that the plaintiff has not complied with the cross-obligations or independent covenants arising under the same contract. Hoover Commercial Co. v. Humphrey, 107 Miss. 810, 66 So. 214, 216.

It implies that plaintiff has cause of action, but asserts that defendant has counter cause of action growing out of breach of some other part of same contract on which plaintiff's action is founded, or for some cause connected with it. Marianna Lime Products Co. v. McKay, 109 Fla. 273, 147 So. 264, 267; Storrs v. Storrs, 130 Fla. 717, 178 So. 841, 178 So. 843.

It is keeping back something which is due because there is an equitable reason to withhold it; and is now uni-
RECOVERY. In its most extensive sense, the restoration or vindication of a right existing in a person, by the formal judgment or decree of a competent court, at his instance and suit, or the obtaining, by such judgment, of some right or property which has been taken or withheld from him. This is also called a "true" recovery, to distinguish it from a "feigned" or "common" recovery. See Common Recovery.

The obtaining of a thing by the judgment of a court, as the result of an action brought for that purpose. Vaughan v. Humphreys, 153 Ark. 140, 239 S.W. 730, 22 A.L.R. 1201.

Final Recovery

The final judgment in an action. Also the final verdict in an action, as distinguished from the judgment entered upon it. Fisk v. Gray, 100 Mass. 193.

RECRÉANT. Coward or craven. The word pronounced by a combatant in the trial by battel, when he acknowledged himself beaten. 3 Bl. Comm. 340.

RECRIMINATION. A charge made by an accused person against the accuser; in particular a counter-charge of adultery or cruelty made by one charged with the same offense as a suit for divorce, against the person who has charged him or her, Wharton. A showing by the defendant of any cause of divorce against the plaintiff, in bar of the plaintiff's cause of divorce. Morrison v. Morrison, 38 Idaho 45, 221 P. 156, 158. And to bar divorce, complainant's misconduct need not be of equal degree with that of defendant, but must be of same general character. Carter v. Carter, Tex. Civ.App., 151 S.W.2d 884, 885.

RECRUIT. A newly-enlisted soldier.

RECRUITING. Within 50 U.S.C.A. § 2388(a), denouncing the offense of obstructing the "recruiting or enlistment service," "recruiting" is gaining fresh supplies for the forces, as well by draft as otherwise, and put as an alternative to enlistment or voluntary enrollment. U. S. v. Prieth, D.C.N.J., 251 F. 946, 951.

RECTA PRISA REGIS. In old English law. The king's right to prisage, or taking of one butt or pipe of wine before and another behind the mast, as a custom for every ship laden with wines. Cowell.

RECTIFICATION OF BOUNDARIES. The action to rectify or ascertain the boundaries of two adjoining pieces of land. Sweet.

RECTIFICATION OF REGISTER. The process by which a person whose name is wrongly entered on (or omitted from) a register may compel the keeper of the register to remove (or enter) his name. Sweet.

RECTIFIER. As used in the United States internal revenue laws, this term is not confined to a person who runs spirits through charcoal, but is applied to any one who rectifies or purifies spirits in any manner whatever, or who makes a mixture of spirits with anything else, and sells it under any name. Quantity of Distilled Spirits, 3 Ben. 73, Fed.Cas.No.11,494.
RECTIFY. To correct or define something which is erroneous or doubtful. Sweet.

Thus, where the parties to an agreement have determined to embody its terms in the appropriate and conclusive form, but the instrument meant to effect this purpose (e.g., a conveyance, settlement, etc.) is, by mutual mistake, so framed as not to express the real intention of the parties, an action may be brought in the chancery division of the high court to have it rectified. Sweet.

RECTITUO. Lat. Right or justice; legal dues; attribute or payment. Cowell.

RECTO DE ADVOCATIONE ECCLESUE. A writ which lay at common law, where a man had right of advowson of a church, and, the parson dying, a stranger had presented. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 30.

RECTO DE CUSTODIA TERRIE ET HIEREDIS. A writ of right of ward of the land and heir. Abolished.

RECTO DE DOTE. A writ of right of dower, which lay for a widow who had received part of her dower, and demanded the residue, against the heir of the husband or his guardian. Abolished. 23 & 24 Viet. c. 126, § 26.

RECTO DE DOTE UNDE NIHIL HABET. A writ of right of dower whereof the widow had nothing, which lay where her deceased husband, having divers lands or tenements, had assured no dower to his wife, and she thereby was driven to sue for her thirds against the heir or his guardian. Abolished.

RECTO DE RATIONABILI PARTE. A writ of right, of the reasonable part, which lay between privies in blood; as brothers in gavelkind, sisters, and other coparceners, for land in fee-simple. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 9.

RECTO QUANDO (or QUIA) DOMINUS REMISIT CURIAM. A writ of right, when or because the lord had remitted his court, which lay where lands or tenements in the seignory of any lord were in demand by a writ of right. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 16.

RECTO SUR DISCLAIMER. An abolished writ on disclaimer.

RECTOR. In ecclesiastical law. One who rules or governs. A name given to certain officers of the Roman church. Dict. Canoniique.

ment, took bail for such as were to appear at the county court, and presided at the court or fiemote. He was also called gerefa.

There were several kinds of reeves, as, the shire-gerefa, shire-reeve or sheriff; the heh-gerefa, or high-sheriff; tithing-reeve, burghor or borough-reeve.

Land Reeve

See Land.

REFALO. A word composed of the three initial syllables "re." "fa." "lo.," for "recordarti facias loquelam," (q. v.). 2 Sell. Pr. 160.

REFARE. To bereave, take away, rob. Cowell.

REFECTION. In the civil law. Reparation; re-establishment of a building. Dig. 19, 1, 6, 1.

REFER. When a case or action involves matters of account or other intricate details which require minute examination, and for that reason are not fit to be brought before a jury, it is usual to refer the whole case, or some part of it, to the decision of an auditor or referee, and the case is then said to be referred.

Taking this word in its strict, technical use, it relates to a mode of determining questions which is distinguished from "arbitration," in that the latter word imports submission of a controversy without any lawsuit having been brought, while "reference" imports a lawsuit pending, and an issue framed or question raised which (and not the controversy itself) is sent out. Thus, arbitration is resorted to instead of any judicial proceeding; while reference is one mode of decision employed in the course of a judicial proceeding. And "reference" is distinguished from "hearing or trial," in that these are the ordinary modes of deciding issues and questions in and by the courts with aid of juries when proper; while reference is an employment of non-judicial persons—individuals not integral parts of the court—for the decision of particular matters inconvenient to be heard in actual court. Abbott.

To point, allude, direct, or make reference to. This is the use of the word in conveyancing and in literature, where a word or sign introduced for the purpose of directing the reader's attention to another place in the deed, book, document, etc., is said to "refer" him to such other connection.

REFEREE. In practice. A person to whom a cause pending in a court is referred by the court, to take testimony, hear the parties, and report thereon to the court. Central Trust Co. of New York v. Wabash, etc., R. Co., C.C.Mo., 32 F. 684, 685. He is an officer exercising judicial powers, and is an arm of the court for a specific purpose. Segal v. Jackson, 48 N.Y.S.2d 877, 879, 183 Misc. 460.

REFEREE IN BANKRUPTCY. An officer appointed by the courts of bankruptcy under the act of 1898 (11 U.S.C.A. § 1) corresponding to the "registers in bankruptcy" under earlier statutes having administrative and quasi-judicial functions under the bankruptcy law, and who assists the court in such cases and relieves the judge of attention to matters of detail or routine, by taking charge of all administrative matters and the preparation or preliminary consideration of questions requiring judicial decision, subject at all times to the supervision and review of the court. In re Carl Dernburg & Son, C.C.A.N.Y., 5 F.2d 37, 38. He is an officer of the bankruptcy court but not a judge. Fish v. East, C.C.A.Colo., 114 F.2d 177, 200. His status is substantially that of a master whose findings to extent adopted are considered findings of District Court. Stewart v. Ganey, C.C. A.Ala., 116 F.2d 1010, 1012.

REFEREES, COURT OF. In the passage of private bills through the house of commons, the practice was adopted in 1864 of the appointment of referees on such bills, consisting of the chairman of ways and means and not less than three other persons to be appointed by the speaker. The referees were formed into one or more courts, three at least being required to constitute each court, a member in every case being chairman, but receiving no salary. The referees inquired into the proposed works, etc., and reported to the house. The committees of the house on any bill might also refer any question to the referees for their decision. It was also ordered in 1864 that the referees should decide on all petitions as to the right of the petitioner to be heard, i.e., his locus standi. A court of referees was specially constituted for the adjudication of this right, called locus standi. A series of reports of the court of referees on private bills in parliament, called Locus Standi reports, has been published since 1867.

REFEREES, OFFICIAL. Officials in the King's Bench Division of the High Court of Justice in England, created by the judicature acts. They are three in number. They try such questions and actions as may be referred to them, and act as arbitrators in certain cases.

REFERENCE. In contracts. An agreement to submit to arbitration; the act of parties in submitting their controversy to chosen referees or arbitrators.

In commercial law. The act of sending or directing one person to another, for information or advice as to the character, solvency, standing, etc., of a third person, who desires to open business relations with the first, or to obtain credit with him.

REFERENCE IN CASE OF NEED. When a person draws or endorses a bill of exchange, he sometimes adds the name of a person to whom it may be presented "in case of need;" e., in case it is dishonored by the original drawee or acceptor. Byles, Bills, 261.

REFERENCE STATUTES. Statutes which refer to other statutes and make them applicable to the subject of legislation. Their object is to incorporate into the act of which they are a part the provisions of other statutes by reference and adoption. State ex rel. School Dist. of Kansas City v. Lee, 334 Mo. 513, 66 S.W.2d 521; Van Pelt v. Hilliard, 75 Fla. 792, 78 So. 693, 698, L.R.A. 1918E, 639.
REFERENCE TO RECORD. Under the English practice, when an action is commenced, an entry of it is made in the cause-book according to the year, the initial letter of the surname of the first plaintiff, and the place of the action, in numerical order among those commenced in the same year, e. g., “1876, A. 26;” and all subsequent documents in the action (such as pleadings and affidavits) bear this mark, which is called the “reference to the record.” Sweet.

REFERENDARIUS. An officer by whom the order of causes was laid before the Roman emperor, the desires of petitioners made known, and answers returned to them. Vicat, Voc. Jur.; Calvin.

REFERENDO SINGULA SINGULIS. Lat. Referring individual or separate words to separate subjects; making a distributive reference of words in an instrument; a rule of construction.

REFERENDUM. In international law. A communication sent by a diplomatic representative to his home government, in regard to matters presented to him which he is unable or unwilling to decide without further instructions.

In the modern constitutional law of Switzerland and elsewhere, a method of submitting an important legislative measure to a direct vote of the whole people. Pacific States Telephone & Telegraph Co. v. Oregon, 32 S.Ct. 224, 223 U.S. 118, 56 L.Ed. 377; Kiernan v. Portland, 32 Sup.Ct. 231, 223 U.S. 151, 56 L.Ed. 386; Plebiscite; Initiative. Right reserved to the people to adopt or reject any act or measure which has been passed by a legislative body, and which, in most cases, would without action on the part of the electors become a law. Whitmore v. Carr, 2 Cal. App.2d 590, 38 P.2d 802, 803. City of Litchfield v. Hart, 306 Ill.App. 621, 29 N.E.2d 678, 679.

REFINANCE. To finance again or anew. In automobile parlance, signifying that notes executed for the purchase price of an automobile have been negotiated by the original vendor to some corporation dealing in that character of securities. American Indemnity Co. v. Allen, for Use and Benefit of Commerce Union Bank, 176 Tenn. 134, 138 S.W.2d 445, 446.

REFINEMENT. A term sometimes employed to describe verbiage inserted in a pleading or indictment, over and above what is necessary to be set forth; or an objection to a plea or indictment on the ground of its failing to include such superfluous matter. State v. Peak, 130 N.C. 711, 41 S.E. 887.

REFORM. To correct, rectify, amend, remodel. Instruments inter partes may be reformed, when defective, by a court of equity. By this is meant that the court, after ascertaining the real and original intention of the parties to a deed or other instrument, (which intention they failed to sufficiently express, through some error, mistake of fact, or inadvertence,) will decree that the instrument be held and construed as if it fully and technically expressed that intention. Churchill v. Meade, 92 Or. 626, 182 P. 368, 371; Gross v. Yeskel, 100 N.J.Eq. 293, 134 A. 737.

See, also, Reformation.

It is to be observed that “reform” Is seldom, if ever, used of the correction of defective pleadings, judgments, decrees or other judicial proceedings; “amend” being the proper term for that use. Again, “amend” seems to connotes the idea of improving that which may have been well enough before, while “reform” might be considered as properly applicable only to something which before was quite worthless.

REFORM ACTS. A name bestowed on the statutes 2 Wm. IV. c. 45, and 30 & 31 Viet. c. 102, passed to amend the representation of the people in England and Wales; which introduced extended amendments into the system of electing members of the house of commons.

See, also, Reform.

REFORMATORY. A place or institution in which efforts are made either to cultivate the intellect or instruct the conscience or improve the conduct where inmates voluntarily submit themselves to its instruction or discipline or are forcibly detained therein. McKinnon v. Second Judicial District Court in and for Washoe County, 35 Nev. 494, 130 P. 465, 468.

REFORMATORY SCHOOLS. In English law. Schools to which convicted juvenile offenders (under sixteen) may be sent by order of the court before which they are tried, if the offense be punishable with penal servitude or imprisonment, and the sentence be to imprisonment for ten days or more. Wharton.

REFRESHER. In English law. A further or additional fee to counsel in a long case, which may be, but is not necessarily, allowed on taxation.

REFRESHING THE MEMORY. The act of a witness who consults his documents, memoranda, or books, to bring more distinctly to his recollection the details of past events or transactions, concerning which he is testifying.

REFUND, v. To repay or restore; to return money in restitution or repayment. Rackliff v. Greenbush, 93 Me. 99, 44 A. 375. City of Long Beach v. Lisenby, 180 Cal. 52, 179 P. 198, 201. United States v. Wurts, Pa., 58 S.Ct. 637, 639, 303 U.S.
414, 82 L.Ed. 932. To fund again or anew; specifically, finance, to borrow, usually by the sale of bonds, in order to pay off an existing loan with the proceeds. Street Improvement Dist. No. 315 v. Arkansas Highway Commission, 190 Ark. 1045, 83 S.W.2d 81, 82.

REFUND ANNUITY CONTRACT. A contract by which an insurance company agrees to repay to the annuitant, in installments during his life, amount paid in by him to company, and if at his death there be a balance unpaid, to pay that balance to person designated by annuitant. In re Atkins’ Estate, 129 N.J.Eq. 186, 18 A.2d 45, 49.

REFUNDING BOND. A bond which replaces or pays off outstanding bond which holder surrenders in exchange for new security. Fore v. Alabama State Bridge Corporation, 242 Ala. 455, 6 So.2d 508, 512. Also a bond given to an executor by a legatee, upon receiving payment of the legacy, conditioned to refund the same, or so much of it as may be necessary, if the assets prove deficient.

REFUNDS. In the laws of the United States. Sums of money received by the government or its officers which, for any cause, are to be refunded or restored to the parties paying them; such as excessive duties or taxes, duties paid on goods destroyed by accident, duties received on goods which are re-exported, etc.

REFUSAL. The act of one who has, by law, a right and power of having or doing something of advantage, and declines it. Also, the declination of a request or demand, or the omission to comply with some requirement of law, as the result of a positive intention to disobey. In the latter sense, the word is often coupled with “neglect,” as if a party shall “neglect or refuse” to pay a tax, file an official bond, obey an order of court, etc. But “neglect” signifies a mere omission of a duty, which may happen through inattention, dilatoriness, mistake, or inability to perform, while “refusal” implies the positive denial of an application or command, or at least a mental determination not to comply. U. S. v. Krafft, C.C.A.N.J., 249 F. 919, 925; American Nat. Bank of Ardmore v. National Bank of Claremore, 119 Okl. 149, 249 P. 424, 428.

“Fail” is distinguished from “refuse” in that “refuse” involves an act of the will, while “fail” may be an act of inevitable necessity. Maestas v. American Metal Co. of New Mexico, 37 N.M. 203, 20 P.2d 924, 928.

REFUSE, n. That which is refused or rejected as useless or worthless. Worthless matter, rubbish, scum, leavings. Stern Holding Co. v. O’Connor, 119 N.J.L. 291, 196 A. 432, 433.

REGAL FISH. Whales and sturgeons, so called in English law, as belonging to the king by prerogative when cast on shore or caught near the coast. 1 Bl. Comm. 290.

REGALE. In old French law. A payment made to the seigneur of a fief, on the election of every bishop or other ecclesiastical feudatory, corresponding with the relief paid by a lay feudatory. Steph. Lect. 235.

REGALE EPISCOPORUM. The temporal rights and privileges of a bishop. Cowell.

REGALIA. An abbreviation of “jura regalia,” royal rights, or those rights which a king has by virtue of his prerogative. Hence owners of counties palatine were formerly said to have “jura regalia” in their counties as fully as the king in his palace. 1 Bl. Comm. 117. The term is sometimes used in the same sense in the Spanish law. Hart v. Burnett, 15 Cal. 566.

Some writers divide the royal prerogative into majora and minora regalia, the former including the regal dignity and power, the latter the revenue or fiscal prerogatives of the crown. 1 Bl. Comm. 117.

REGALIA FACERE. To do homage or fealty to the sovereign by a bishop when he is invested with the regalia.

REGALITY. A territorial jurisdiction in Scotland conferred by the crown. The lands were said to be given in liberam regalitatem, and the persons receiving the right were termed "lords of regality." Bell.

REGARD. In old English law. Inspection; supervision. Also a reward, fee, or perquisite.

REGARD, COURT OF. In forest law. A tribunal held every third year, for the lawing or expedition of dogs, to prevent them from chasing deer. Cowell.

REGARD OF THE FOREST. In old English law. The oversight or inspection of it, or the office and province of the regarer, who is to go through the whole forest, and every bailiwick in it, before the holding of the sessions of the forest, or justice-seat, to see and inquire after trespassers, and for the survey of dogs. Manwood.
REGARDANT. A term which was applied, in feudal law, to a villein annexed to a manor, and having charge to do all base services within the same, and to see the same freed from all things that might annoy his lord. Such a villein regarded was thus opposed to a villein en gros, who was transferable by deed from one owner to another. Cowell; 2 Bl. Comm. 93.

REGARDER OF A FOREST. An ancient officer of the forest, whose duty it was to take a view of the forest hunts, and to inquire concerning trespasses, offenses, etc. Manwood.

REGE INCONSULTO. Lat. In English law. A writ issued from the sovereign to the judges, not to proceed in a cause which may prejudice the crown, until advised. Jenk. Cent. 97.

REGENCY. Rule; government; kingship. The man or body of men intrusted with the vicarious government of a kingdom during the minority, absence, insanity, or other disability of the king.

REGENT. A governor or ruler. One who vicariously administers the government of a kingdom, in the name of the king, during the latter's minority or other disability.

A master, governor, director, or superintendent of a public institution, particularly a college or university.

In the canon law, it signifies a master or professor of a college. Dict. du Dr. Can.

REGIDOR. In Spanish law. One of a body, never exceeding twelve, who formed a part of the ayuntamiento. The office of regidor was held for life; that is to say, during the pleasure of the supreme authority. In most places the office was purchased; in some cities, however, they were elected by persons of the district, called "capitulares." 12 Pet. 442, note.

REGIME. In French law. A system of rules or regulations.

REGIME DOTAL. The dot, being the property which the wife brings to the husband as her contribution to the support of the burdens of the marriage, and which may either extend as well to future as to present property, or be expressly confined to the present property of the wife, is subject to certain regulations which are summarized in the phrase "regime dotal." The husband has the entire administration during the marriage; but, as a rule, where the dot consists of immovables, neither the husband nor the wife, nor both of them together, can either sell or mortgage it. The dot is returnable upon the dissolution of the marriage, whether by death or otherwise. Brown.

REGIME EN COMMUNAUTE. The community of interests between husband and wife which arises upon their marriage. It is either (1) legal or (2) conventional, the former existing in the absence of any "agreement" properly so called, and arising from a mere declaration of community; the latter arising from an "agreement," properly so called. Brown.

REGIMIENTO. In Spanish law. The body of regidores, who never exceeded twelve, forming a part of the municipal council, or ayuntamiento, in every capital of a jurisdiction. 12 Pet. 442, note.

REGINA. Lat. The queen.

REGISTERED. Entered or recorded in some official register or record or list. State v. McGuire, 183 Iowa 927, 167 N.W. 592, 594.

REGISTERED BOND. The bonds of the United States government (and of many municipal and private corporations) are either registered or "coupon bonds." In the case of a registered bond, the name of the owner or lawful holder is entered in a register or record, and it is not negotiable or transferable except by an entry on the register, and checks or warrants are sent to the registered holder for the successive installments of interest as they fall due. A bond with interest coupons attached is transferable by mere delivery, and the coupons are payable, as due, to the person who shall present them for payment. But the bond issues of many private corporations now provide that the individual bonds "may be registered as to principal," leaving the interest coupons payable to bearer, or that they may be registered as to both principal and interest, at the option of the holder. Benwell v. New York, 55 N.J.Eq. 260, 36 A. 668; Novoprutsky v. Morris Plan Co. of Philadelphia, 319 Pa. 97, 179 A. 218, 219, 98 A.L.R. 1486.

REGISTERED TONNAGE. The registered tonnage of a vessel is the capacity or cubical contents of the ship, or the amount of weight which she will carry, as ascertained in some proper manner and entered on an official register or record. See Reck v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 54 Hun 637, 7 N.Y.S. 492; Wheaton v. Weston, D.C.Pa., 128 F. 153.

REGISTERED TRADE—MARK. A trade-mark filed in the United States patent office, with the necessary description and other statements required by the act of congress, and there duly recorded, securing its exclusive use to the person causing it to be registered. 15 U.S.C.A. § 1051.

REGISTERED VOTERS. In Virginia, this term refers to the persons whose names are placed upon the registration books provided by law as the sole record or memorial of the duly qualified voters of the state. Chalmers v. Funk, 76 Va. 719.

REGISTER'S COURT. In American law. A court in the state of Pennsylvania which has jurisdiction in matters of probate.

REGISTRANT. One who registers; particularly, one who registers anything (e. g., a trade-mark) for the purpose of securing a right or privilege granted by law on condition of such registration.

REGISTRAR. An officer who has the custody or keeping of a registry or register. This word is used in England; "register" is more common in America.

REGISTRAR GENERAL. In English law. An officer appointed by the crown under the great seal, to whom, subject to such regulations as shall be made by a principal secretary of state, the general superintendence of the whole system of registration of births, deaths, and marriages is intrusted. 3 Steph. Comm. 234.

REGISTRAR’S LICENSE. In English law, a license issued by an officer of that name authorizing the solemnization of a marriage without the use of the religious ceremony ordained by the Church of England.

REGISTRARIUS. In old English law. A notary; a registrar or register.

REGISTRATION. Recording; inserting in an official register or record, particularly of an official character, as registration of voters; the act of making a list, catalogue, schedule, or register, particularly of an official character, or of making entries therein. In re Supervisors of Election, C.C.Del., 1 F. 1.

Any schedule containing a list of voters, the being upon which constitutes a prerequisite to vote.

A method of proof prescribed for ascertaining the electors who shall qualify to cast their votes and being a part of the machinery of elections and safeguards against frauds. O'Brien v. City of Saratoga Springs, 228 N.Y.S. 82, 83, 137 Misc. 728.

A special registration as distinguished from a "general registration" is one designed for a particular election which becomes functus officio when that election has been had. A general registration is one made up under general rules. Cowart v. City of Waycross, 159 Ga. 589, 126 S.E. 476, 479.

REGISTRATION OF STOCK. In the practice of corporations. Recording in the official books of the company of the name and address of the holder of each certificate of stock, with the date of its issue, and, in the case of a transfer of stock from one holder to another, the names of both parties and such other details as will identify the transaction and preserve a memorial or official record of its essential facts. Fisher v. Jones, 82 Ala. 117, 3 So. 13.

REGISTRUM BREVIMUM. The register of writs (q. v.).

REGISTRY. A register, or book authorized or recognized by law, kept for the recording or registration of facts or documents. The act of recording or writing in the register or depositing in the place of public records. Schneidau v. New Orleans Land Co., 132 La. 264, 61 So. 225, 232.

REJOINING GRATIS. Rejoining voluntarily, or without being required to do so by a rule to rejoin. When a defendant was under terms to rejoin gratis, he had to deliver a rejoinder, without putting the plaintiff to the necessity and expense of obtaining a rule to rejoin. 10 Mees. & W. 12; Lush, Pr. 396; Brown.

RELATE. To stand in some relation; to have bearing or concern; to pertain; refer; to bring into association with or connection with; with “to.” City of Mitchell v. Western Public Service Co., 124 Neb. 248, 246 N.W. 484, 486; Siano v. Helvering, D.C.N.J., 13 F.Supp. 776, 780.

RELATED. Standing in relation; connected; allied; akin. Nowland Realty Co. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.7, 47 F.2d 1018, 1021.

RELATIO EST FICTIO JURIS ET INTENTA AD UNUM. Relation is a fiction of law, and intended for one thing. 3 Coke, 28.

RELATIO SEMPER FIAT UT VALEAT DISPOSITIONIS. Reference should always be had in such a manner that a disposition in a will may avail. 6 Coke, 76.

RELATION. A relative or kinsman; a person connected by consanguinity. In re Spier’s Estate, 224 Mich. 658, 195 N.W. 430, 431; McMenamy v. Kampellmann, 273 Mo. 450, 200 S.W. 1075, 1077. See, also, Relative.

The words “relatives” and “relations,” in their primary sense, are broad enough to include any one connected by blood or affinity, even to the remotest degree, but where used in wills, as defining and determining legar succession, are construed to include only those persons who are entitled to share in the estate as next of kin under the statute of distributions. In re Trickett’s Estate, 197 Cal. 20, 239 P. 406, 409; Wooten’s Trustee v. Hardy, 221 Ky. 336, 298 S.W. 963, 967.

The connection of two persons, or their situation with respect to each other, who are associated, whether by the law, by their own agreement, or by kinship, in some social status or union for the purposes of domestic life; as the relation of guardian and ward, husband and wife, master and servant, parent and child; so in the phrase “domestic relations.”

The doctrine of “relation” is that principle by which an act done at one time is considered by a fiction of law to have been done at some antecedent period. It is usually applied where several proceedings are essential to complete a particular transaction, such as a conveyance or deed. The last proceeding which consummates the conveyance is held for certain purposes to take effect by relation as of the day when the first proceeding was had. Knapp v. Alocander-Edgar Lumber Co., 237 U.S. 162, 35 S.Ct. 515, 517, 59 L.Ed. 894. And see U. S. v. Anderson, 194 U.S. 394, 24 S.Ct. 716, 48 L.Ed. 1035.

A recital, account, narrative of facts; information given. Thus, suits by quo warranto are entitled "on the relation of" a private person, who is called the "relator." But in this connection the word seems also to involve the idea of the suggestion, instigation, or instance of the relator.

In the civil law, the report of the facts and law in a pending case, made by the judges to the emperor, for the purpose of obtaining his opinion on the questions of law involved, in the form of an imperial rescript. This proceeding might be resorted to in cases where no law seemed applicable, or where there were great difficulties in its interpretation, until it was abolished by Justinian. Nov. 125.

RELATION NEVER DEFECTS COLLATERAL ACTS. 18 Vin.Abr. 292.

RELATION SHALL NEVER MAKE A VOID GRANT OR DEVISE OF THE PARTY. 18 Vin.Abr. 292.

RELATIONS. A term which, in its widest sense, includes all the kindred of the person spoken of. 2 Jarm. Wills, 661.

RELATIVE. A kinsman; a person connected with another by blood or affinity.

When used generically, includes persons connected by ties of affinity as well as consanguinity, and, when used with a restrictive meaning, refers to those only who are connected by blood. Appeal of Schutte, 90 Conn. 529, 97 A. 906, 907.

A person or thing having relation or connection with some other person or thing; as, relative rights, relative powers, infra. See also, Relation.

RELATIVE CONFESSION. See Confession.

RELATIVE FACT. In the law of evidence. A fact having relation to another fact; a minor fact; a circumstance.

RELATIVE POWERS. Those which relate to land; so called to distinguish them from those which are collateral to it.

RELATIVE RIGHTS. Those rights of persons which are incident to them as members of society, and standing in various relations to each other. 1 Bl.Comm. 123. Those rights of persons in private life which arise from the civil and domestic relations. 2 Kent, Comm. 1.

RELATIVE WORDS REFER TO THE NEXT ANTECEDENT, UNLESS THE SENSE BE THEREBY IMPAIRED. Noy, Max. 4; Wing. Max. 19; Broom, Max. 606; Jenk. Cent. 180.

RELATIVORUM, COGNITO UNO, COGNOSCITUR ET ALTERUM. Cro. Jac. 539. Of relatives, one being known, the other is also known.

RELATOR. An informer; the person upon whose complaint, or at whose instance certain writs are issued such as information or writ of quo warranto, and who is quasi the plaintiff in the proceeding. State ex inf. Barker v. Duncan, 265 Mo. 26, 175 S.W. 940, 942, Ann.Cas.1916D, 1.

RELATRIX. In practice. A female relator or petitioner.

RELAXARE. In old conveyancing. To release. Relaxavi, relaxasse, have released. Litt. § 445.

RELAXATIO. In old conveyancing. A release; an instrument by which a person relinquishes to another his right in anything.

RELAXATION. In old Scotch practice. Letters passing the signet by which a debtor was relaxed [released] from the horn; that is, from personal diligence. Bell.

RELEASE, n. The relinquishment, concession, or giving up of a right, claim, or privilege, by the person in whom it exists or to whom it accrues, to the person against whom it might have been demanded or enforced. Miller v. Estabrook, C.C.A. W.Va., 273 F. 143, 148; Coopey v. Keady, 73 Or. 66, 144 P. 99, 101.

In this sense it is a contract and must be supported by lawful and valuable consideration. Hamilton v. Edmundson, 235 Ala. 97, 177 So. 743, 746.

A discharge of a debt by act of party, as distinguished from an extinguishment which is a discharge by operation of law, and, in distinguishing release from receipt, "receipt" is evidence that an obligation has been discharged, but "release" is itself a discharge of it. Glickman v. Weston, 140 Or. 117, 11 P.2d 281, 284.

An express release is one directly made in terms by deed or other suitable means. An implied release is one which arises from acts of the creditor or owner, without any express agreement. Pothier, Obl. nn. 608, 609. A release of the operation of law is one which, though not expressly made, the law presumes in consequence of some act of the releasor; for instance, when one of several joint obligors is expressly released, the others are also released by operation of law. 3 Salk. 298; Rowley v. Stoddard, 7 Johns., N.Y., 207.

Liberation, discharge, or setting free from restraint or confinement. Thus, a man unlawfully imprisoned may obtain his release on habeas corpus. Parker v. U. S., 22 Ct.C1. 100.

The abandonment to (or by) a person called as a witness in a suit of his interest in the subject-matter of the controversy, in order to qualify him to testify, under the common-law rule.

A receipt or certificate given by a ward to the guardian, on the final settlement of the latter's accounts, or by any other beneficiary on the termination of the trust administration, relinquishing all and any further rights, claims, or demands, growing out of the trust or incident to it.

In admiralty actions, when a ship, cargo, or other property has been arrested, the owner may obtain its release by giving bail, or paying the value of the property into court. Upon this being done he obtains a release, which is a kind of writ under the seal of the court, addressed to the marshal, commanding him to release the nроnerty. Sweet.

Estate

The conveyance of a man’s interest or right which he hath unto a thing to another that hath the possession thereof or some estate therein. Shep. Touch. 320. The relinquishment of some right or benefit to a person who has already some interest in the tenement, and such interest as qualifies him for receiving or availing himself of the right or benefit so relinquished. Burt. Real Prop. 12; Field v. Columbet, 9 Fed.Cas. 13; Baker v. Woodward, 12 Or. 3, 6 P. 173.

A conveyance of an ulterior interest in lands or tenements to a particular tenant, or of an undivided share to a co-tenant, (the releassee being in either case in privity of estate with the releasor,) or of the right, to a person wrongfully in possession. 1 Steph.Comm. 479.

Deed of release. A deed operating by way of release; but more specifically, in those states where deeds of trust are in use instead of common-law mortgages, as a means of pledging real property as security for the payment of a debt, a "deed of release" is a conveyance in fee, executed by the trustee or trustees, to the grantor in the deed of trust, which conveys back to him the legal title to the estate, and which is to be given on satisfactory proof that he has paid the secured debt in full or otherwise complied with the terms of the deed of trust.

Release by way of enlarging an estate. A conveyance of the ulterior interest in lands to the particular tenant; as, if there be tenant for life or years, remainder to another in fee, and he in remainder releases all his right to the particular tenant and his heirs, this gives him the estate in fee 1 Steph.Comm. 480; 2 Bl.Comm. 324.

Release by way of entry and feoffment. As if there be two joint disseisors, and the disseissee releases to one of them, he shall be sole seised, and shall keep out his former companion; which is the same in effect as if the disseissee had entered and thereby put an end to the disseisin, and afterwards had enfeoffed one of the disseissee in fee. 2 Bl.Comm. 325.

Release by way of extinguishment. As if my tenant for life makes a lease to A. for life, remainder to B. and his heirs, and I release to A., this extinguishes my right to the reversion, and shall inure to the advantage of B.’s remainder, as well as of A.’s particular estate. 2 Bl.Comm. 325.

Release by way of passing a right. As if a man be disseised and releaseth to his disseisor all his right, hereby the disseisor acquires a new right, which changes the quality of his estate, and renders that lawful which before was tortious or wrongful. 2 Bl.Comm. 325.

Release by way of passing an estate. As, where one of two coparceners releases all her right to the other, this passes the fee-simple of the whole. 2 Bl.Comm. 324, 325.

Release of dower. The relinquishment by a married woman of her expectant dower interest or estate in a particular parcel of realty belonging to her husband, as, by joining with him in a conveyance of it to a third person.

Release to uses. The conveyance by a deed of release to one party to the use of another is so termed. Thus, when a conveyance of land was effected, by those instruments of assurance termed a lease and release, from A. to B. and his heirs, to the use of C. and his heirs, in such case C. at once took the whole fee-simple in such lands; B. by the operation of the statute of uses, being made a mere conduit-pipe for conveying the estate to C. Brown.

RELEASEE. The person to whom a release is made.

RELEASEER, or RELEASOR. The maker of a release.

RELEGATIO. Lat. A kind of banishment known to the civil law, which differed from "deportatio" in leaving to the person his rights of citizenship.

RELEGATION. In old English law. Banishment for a time only. Co. Litt. 133.

RELEVANCY. Applicability to the issue joined. That quality of evidence which renders it properly applicable in determining the truth and falsity of the matters in issue between the parties to a suit. 1 Greenl.Ev. § 49. Two facts are said to be relevant to each other when so related that according to the common course of events, one either taken by itself or in connection with other facts, proves or renders probable the past, present, or future existence or non-existence of the other. Steph.Dig.Ev. art. 1. Katz v. Delohery Hat Co., 97 Conn. 665, 112 A. 88, 93; Barnett v. State, 104 Ohio St. 298, 135 N.E. 647, 650, 27 A. L.R. 351.

Relevancy is that which conduces to the proof of a pertinent hypothesis; a pertinent hypothesis being one which, if sustained, would logically influence the issue. Whart.Ev. § 20; Hampton v. State, 126 Tex.Cr.R. 211, 70 S.W.2d 1001.

In Scotch law, the relevancy is the justice or sufficiency in law of the allegations of a party. A plea to the relevancy is therefore analogous to the demurrer of the English courts.

A distinction is sometimes taken between "logical" relevancy and "legal" relevancy, the former being judged merely by the standards of ordinary logic or the general laws of reasoning, the latter by the strict and artificial rules of the law with reference to the admissibility of evidence. Hoag v. Wright, 54 N.Y.S. 658, 34 App.Div. 260.

Relevant evidence is such evidence as relates to, or bears directly upon, the point or fact in issue, and proves or has a tendency to prove the proposition alleged; evidence which conduces to prove a pertinent theory in a case. State v. O’Neil, 13 Or. 183, 9 P. 286; Moran v. Abbey, 58 Cal. 163, 168. 1 Whart.Ev. § 20. It does not mean evidence addressed with positive directness to the point but that which according to the common course of events either taken by itself or in connection with other facts, proves or renders probable the past, present or future existence or nonexistence of the other. Seller v. Jenkins, 97 Ind. 430, 438 (quoting Steph.Ev. art. 1, and Best, Principles of Ev. 257, n.). See, also, Relevancy.
Relevancy of evidence does not depend upon the conclusiveness of the testimony offered, but upon its legitimate tendency to establish a controverted fact. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baird, 24 S.Ct. 563, 194 U.S. 25, 48 L. Ed. 860; State v. Upson: 162 Minn. 9, 201 N.W. 913, 915.

RELEVANT. Applying to the matter in question; affording something to the purpose.

Fact is relevant to another fact when, according to common course of events, existence of one taken alone or in connection with the other fact renders existence of the other certain or more probable. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Downs, Tex.Civ.App., 70 S.W.2d 318, 322.

In Scotch law, good in law, legally sufficient; as, a "relevant" plea or defense.

RELEVANT EVIDENCE. See Evidence.

RELIABLE. Trustworthy, 'worthy of confidence. Quinn v. Daly, 300 Ill. 273, 133 N.E. 290, 291.

RElict. The survivor of a pair of married people, whether the survivor is the husband or the wife; it means the relict of the united pair, (or of the marriage union,) not the relict of the deceased individual. Spitzer v. Heeter, 42 Ohio St. 101.

RElict Verificone. (Lat. his pleading being abandoned). A confession of judgment made after plea pleaded; viz., a cognovit actionem accompanied by a withdrawal of the plea.

Relief. The assistance or support, pecuniary or otherwise, granted to indigent persons by the proper administrators of the poor-laws.

Also wages paid in cash or in kind for public work because of need. In re Matruski, 8 N.Y.S. 2d 471, 480, 169 Misc. 316.

Deliverance from oppression, wrong, or injustice.

In this sense it is used as a general designation of the assistance, redress, or benefit which a complainant seeks at the hands of a court, particularly in equity. It may be thus used of such remedies as specific performance, or the reformation or rescission of a contract; but it does not seem appropriate to the awarding of money damages.

In feudal law. A sum payable by the new tenant, the duty being incident to every feudal tenancy, by way of fine or composition with the lord for taking up the estate which was lapsed or fallen in by the death of the last tenant. At one time the amount was arbitrary, but afterwards the relief of a knight's fee became fixed at one hundred shillings. 2 Bl.Comm. 65.

Relief Association. See Railroad Relief Funds.

Relieve. To give ease, comfort, or consolation to; to give aid, help, or succor to; to alleviate, assuage, ease, mitigate; succor, assist, aid, help; support, sustain; lighten, diminish. Brollier v. Van Alstine, 236 Mo.App. 1233, 163 S.W.2d 109, 115.

To release from a post, station, or duty; to put another in place of, or to take the place of, in the bearing of any burden, or discharge of any duty. Kemp v. Stanley, 204 La. 110, 15 So.2d 1, 11.

In feudal law, to depend; thus, the seigniory of a tenant in capite relieves of the crown, meaning that the tenant holds of the crown. The term is not common in English writers. Sweet.

Religio sequitur patrem. The father's religion is prima facie the infant's religion. Religion will follow the father. [1902] 1 Ch. 688.

One's views of his relations to his Creator and to the obligations they impose of reverence for his being and character, and of obedience to his will. It is often confounded with cultus or form of worship of a particular sect, but is distinguishable from the latter. People ex rel. Fish v. Sandstrom, 3 N.Y.S.2d 1006, 1007, 167 Misc. 436.

Bond uniting man to God, and a virtue whose purpose is to render God worship due him as source of all being and principle of all government of things. Nikulnikoff v. Archbishop, etc., of Russian Orthodox Greek Catholic Church, 255 N.Y.S. 653, 663, 142 Misc. 894.

Religious freedom. Within constitution embraces not only the right to worship God according to the dictates of one's conscience, but also the right to do, or forbear to do, any act, for conscience sake, the doing or forbearance of which is not inimical to the peace, good order, and morals of society. Barnette v. West Virginia State Board of Education, D.C.W.Va., 47 F.Supp. 251, 253, 254; Jones v. City of Moultrie, 196 Ga. 526, 27 S.E.2d 39.

Religious Corporation. See Corporation.
RELIGIOUS HOUSES. Places set apart for pious uses; such as monasteries, churches, hospitals, and all other places where charity was extended to the relief of the poor and orphans, or for the use or exercise of religion.

RELIGIOUS IMPOSTORS. In English law. Those who falsely pretend an extraordinary commission from heaven, or terrify and abuse the people with false denunciations of judgment; they are punishable with fine, imprisonment, and infamous corporal punishment. 4 Broom & H. Comm. 71.

RELIGIOUS LIBERTY. See Liberty.

RELIGIOUS MEN. Such as entered into some monastery or convent. In old English deeds, the vendee was often restrained from aliening to "Jews or religious men" lest the lands should fall into mortmain. Religious men were civilly dead. Blount.

RELIGIOUS USE. See Charitable Uses.

RELINQUISH. To abandon, to give up, to surrender, to renounce some right or thing. Masser v. London Operating Co., 106 Fla. 474, 145 So. 79, 84; Roy v. Salisbury, Cal.App., 121 P.2d 109, 117.

RELINQUISHMENT. A forsaking, abandoning, renouncing, or giving over a right. Wisconsin-Texas Oil Co. v. Clutter, Tex.Civ.App., 258 S.W. 265, 268.

RELIQUA. The remainder or debt which a person finds himself debtor in upon the balancing or liquidation of an account. Hence reliquary, the debtor of a reliqua; as also a person who only pays piece-meal. Enc.Lond.

RELIQUES. Remains; such as the bones, etc., of saints, preserved with great veneration as sacred memorials. They have been forbidden to be used or brought into England. St. 3 Jac. I. c. 26.

RELOCATIO. Lat. In the civil law. A renewal of a lease on its determination. It may be either express or tacit; the latter is when the tenant holds over with the knowledge and without objection of the landlord. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 412.

RELOCATION. In Scotch law. A reletting or renewal of a lease; a tacit relocation is permitting a tenant to hold over without any new agreement.

In mining law. A new or fresh location of an abandoned or forfeited mining claim by a stranger, or by the original locator when he wishes to change the boundaries or to correct mistakes in the original location.

REMAINDER. The remnant of an estate in land, depending upon a particular prior estate created at the same time and by the same instrument, and limited to arise immediately on the determination of that estate, and not in abridgement of it. 4 Kent, Comm. 197; Bean v. Atkins, 87 Vt. 376, 89 A. 643, 646; Pinnell v. Downin, 224 N.C. 493, 31 S.E.2d 467, 469.

An estate limited to take effect and be enjoyed after another estate is determined. As, if a man seised in fee-simple grants lands to A. for twenty years, and, after the determination of the said term, then to B. and his heirs forever, here A. is tenant for years, remainder to B. in fee. 2 Bl.Comm. 164.

An estate in reversion is the residue of an estate, usually the fee left in the grantor and his heirs after the determination of a particular estate which he has granted out of it. The rights of the reversioner are the same as those of a vested remainderman in fee. Sayward v. Sayward, 7 Me. 213, 22 Am.Dec. 191; Glenn v. Holt, Tex.Civ.App., 229 S.W. 684, 685.

In wills. The terms rest, residue, and remainder of estate are usually and ordinarily understood as meaning that part of the estate which is left after all of the other provisions of the will have been satisfied. In re Vail's Estate, 223 Iowa 551, 273 N.W. 107, 110.

Contingent Remainder

An estate in remainder which is limited to take effect either to a dubious and uncertain person, or upon a dubious and uncertain event, by which no present or particular interest passes to the remainder-man, so that the particular estate may chance to be determined and the remainder never take effect. 2 Bl.Comm. 169. A remainder limited so as to depend upon an event or condition which may never happen or be performed, or which may not happen or be performed till after the determination of the preceding estate. Fearne, Rem. 3; Thompson v. Adams, 205 Ill. 552, 69 N.E. 1; Griswold v. Greer, 18 Ga. 545; Price v. Sisson, 13 N.J. Eq. 168.

Cross-Remainder

Where land is devised or conveyed to two or more persons as tenants in common, or where different parts of the same land are given to such persons in severalty, with such limitations that, upon the determination of the particular estate of either, his share is to pass to the other, to the entire exclusion of the ultimate remainder-man or reversioner until all the particular estates shall be exhausted, the remainders so limited are called "cross-remainders." In wills, such remainders may arise by implication; but, in deeds, only by express limitation. 2 Bl.Comm. 381; 2 Washb. Real Prop. 233; 1 Prest.Est. 94.

Executed Remainder

A remainder which vests a present interest in the tenant, though the enjoyment is postponed to the future. 2 Bl.Comm. 168; Fearne, Rem. 31; Hudson v. Wadsworth, 8 Conn. 359.

Executory Remainder

A contingent remainder; one which exists where the estate is limited to take effect either to a dubious and uncertain person or upon a dubious and uncertain event. Temple v. Scott, 143 Ill. 290, 32 N.E. 366.
Vested Remainder

An estate by which a present interest passes to the party, though to be enjoyed in futuro, and by which the estate is invariably fixed to remain to a determinate person after the particular estate has been spent. Pinnell v. Dowtin, 224 N.C. 493, 31 S.E.2d 467, 469. One limited to a certain person at a certain time or upon the happening of a necessary event. -Etna Life Ins. Co. v. Hoppin, 214 F. 928, 933, 131 C.C.A. 224.

REMAINDER TO A PERSON NOT OF A CAPACITY TO TAKE AT THE TIME OF APPOINTING IT, IS VOID. Plowd. 27.

REMAINDER VESTED SUBJECT TO BEING DIVESTED. A remainder given to one person, with proviso that it shall go to another under certain contingencies. In re Barnes’ Estate, 279 N.Y.S. 117, 155 Misc. 320.

REMAINDERMAN. One who is entitled to the remainder of the estate after a particular estate carved out of it has expired. In re Mawhinney’s Will, 261 N.Y.S. 334, 146 Misc. 30.

REMAND. To send back.

Cause
The sending the cause back to the same court out of which it came, for purpose of having some action on it there.

Prisoner
After a preliminary or partial hearing before a court or magistrate, is to send him back to custody, to be kept until the hearing is resumed or the trial comes on. Ex parte Chalfant, 81 W.Va. 93, 93 S.E. 1032, 1033.

When a prisoner is brought before a judge on habeas corpus, for the purpose of obtaining liberty, the judge hears the case, and either discharges him or remands him.

REMANENT PRO DEFECTU EMPTORUM. In practice. The return made by the sheriff to a writ of execution when he has not been able to sell the property seized, that the same remains unsold for want of buyers.

REMEDIAL. Affording a remedy; giving the means of obtaining redress. Of the nature of a remedy; intended to remedy wrongs or abuses, abate faults, or supply defects. Pertaining to or affecting the remedy, as distinguished from that which affects or modifies the right.

REMEDIAL ACTION. One which is brought to obtain compensation or indemnity. Cummings v. Board of Education of Oklahoma City, 190 Okl. 533, 125 P.2d 989, 994.

REMEDIAL STATUTE. One that intends to afford a private remedy to a person injured by the wrongful act. That is designed to correct an existing law, redress an existing grievance, or introduce regulations conducive to the public good.

A statute giving a party a mode of remedy for a wrong, where he had none, or a different one, before. 1 Chit.B1. 86, 87, notes; In re Ungaro’s Will, 88 N.J.Eq. 25, 102 A. 244, 246; Cherry v. Kennedy, 144 Tenn. 320, 232 S.W. 661, 662.

The underlying test to be applied in determining whether a statute is penal or remedial is whether it primarily seeks to impose an arbitrary, deterring punishment upon anyone who might commit a wrong against the public by a violation of the requirements of the statute, or whether the purpose is to measure and define the damages which may accrue to an individual or class of individuals, as just and reasonable compensation for a possible loss having a causal connection with the breach of the legal obligation owing under the statute to such individual or class. Southern Ry. Co. v. Melton, 133 Ga. 277, 291, 307, 65 S.E. 665. In re Mawhinney’s Will, 261 N.Y.S. 334, 146 Misc. 30. Remedial statutes are those which are made to supply such defects, and abridge such superfluities, in the common law, as arise either from the general imperfection of all human laws, from change of time and circumstances, from the mistakes and unavised determinations of unlearned (or even learned) judges, or from any other cause whatsoever. 1 B1.Comm. 86; Fails v. Key, Tex.Civ.App., 278 S.W. 893, 896; Columbus Trust Co. v. Upper Hudson Electric & R. Co., Sup., 190 N.Y.S. 737, 739. These remedial statutes are themselves divided into enlarging statutes, by which the common law is made more comprehensive and extended than it was before, and into restraining statutes, by which it is narrowed down to that which is just and proper. A remedial statute is one which not only remedies defects in the common law but defects in civil jurisprudence generally. M. H. Vestal Co. v. Robertson, 277 Ill. 425, 115 N.E. 629, 631; MacDonald v. Hamilton B. Wills & Co., 199 App. Div. 203, 191 N.Y.S. 566, 568.

REMEDIES FOR RIGHTS ARE EVER FAVORABLY EXTENDED. 18 Vin.Abr. 521.

REMEDY. The means by which a right is enforced or the violation of a right is prevented, redressed, or compensated. Remedies are of four kinds: (1) By act of the party injured, the principal of which are defense, recaption, distress, entry, abatement, and seizure; (2) by operation of law, as in the case of retainer and remitter; (3) by agreement between the parties, e. g., by accord and satisfaction and arbitration; and (4) by judicial remedy, e. g., action or suit. Sweet. Berry v. M. F. Donovan & Sons, 120 Me. 45’7, 115 A. 250, 252, 25 A.L.R. 1021; California Prune & Apricot Growers’ Ass’n v. Catz American Co., C.C.A.Cal., 60 F.2d 788, 790, 85 A.L.R. 1117.

The means employed to enforce a right or redress an injury, as distinguished from right, which is a well founded or acknowledged claim. Chelentis v. Luckenbach S. S. Co., 38 S.Ct. 501, 503, 247 U.S. 372, 62 L.Ed. 1171.

Strictly speaking, “remedy” is no part of the action, but is the result thereof, the object for which the action is presented, the end to which all the litigation is directed. Mathews v. Sniggs, 75 Okl. 108, 182 P. 703, 707.

Remedies for the redress of injuries are either public, by indictment, when the injury to the individual or to his property affects the public, or private, when the tort is only injurious to the individual.
REMEDY

That which relieves or cures a disease, including a medicine or remedial treatment. United States v. Natura Co., D.C.Cal., 250 F. 925, 926.

Also a certain allowance to the master of the mint, for deviation from the standard weight and fineness of coins. Enc. Lond.

Adequate Remedy
See Adequate.

Civil Remedy
The remedy afforded by law to a private person in the civil courts in so far as his private and individual rights have been injured by a delict or crime; as distinguished from the remedy by criminal prosecution for the injury to the rights of the public.

Cumulative Remedy
See Cumulative.

Exclusive Remedy
See Exclusive Remedy.

Extraordinary Remedy
See Extraordinary.

Judicial Remedy
See Judicial.

Legal Remedy
A remedy available, under the particular circumstances of the case, in a court of law; as distinguished from a remedy available only in equity. See State v. Sneed., 105 Tenn. 711, 58 S.W. 1070.

Remedy Over
A person who is primarily liable or responsible, but who, in turn, can demand indemnification from another, who is responsible to him, is said to have a “remedy over.” For example, a city, being compelled to pay for injuries caused by a defect in the highway, has a “remedy over” against the person whose act or negligence caused the defect, and such person is said to be “liable over” to the city. 2 Black, Judgm. § 575.

REMEMBRANCER. Of the city of London. Parliamentary solicitor to the corporation, and bound to attend all courts of aldermen and common council when required. Pull.Laws & Cust.Lond. 122. See King’s Remembrancer.

REMEMBRANCERS. In English law. Officers of the exchequer, whose duty it is to put in remembrance the lord treasurer and the justices of that court of such things as are to be called and dealt in for the benefit of the crown. Jacob. REMERE. In French law. Redemption; right of redemption.

A sale ez remdrO is a species of conditional sale with right of repurchase. An agreement by which the vendor reserves to himself the right to take back the thing sold on restoring the price paid, with costs and interest. Duverger.

REMISE. To remit or give up. A formal word in deeds of release and quitclaim; the usual phrase being "remise, release, and forever quitclaim." American Mortg. Co. v. Hutchinson, 19 Or. 334, 24 P. 515.

REMISE DE LA DETTE. In French law. The release of a debt.

REMISSION. In civil law. A release of a debt. It is conventional, when it is expressly granted to the debtor by a creditor having a capacity to alienate; or tacit, when the creditor voluntarily surrenders to his debtor the original title, under private signature constituting the obligation. Civ.Code La. art. 2199. Hall v. Allen Mfg. Co., 133 La. 1079, 63 So. 591, 592.

Forgiveness or condonation of an offense or injury.

At common law. The act by which a forfeiture or penalty is forgiven. United States v. Morris, 10 Wheat. 246, 6 L.Ed. 314.

REMISSIUS IMPERANTI MELIUS ARETUR. 3 Inst. 233. A man commanding not too strictly is better obeyed.

REMISSNESS. The doing of the act in question in a tardy, negligent, or careless manner; but term does not apply to the entire omission or forbearance of the act. Baldwin v. United States Tel. Co., 6 Abb.Prac.N.S., N.Y., 423.

REMIT. To send or transmit; as to remit money. Potter v. Morland, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 388; Hollowell v. Life Ins. Co., 35 S.E. 616, 126 N.C. 398. To send back, as to remit a check. Colvin v. Acc. Ass’n, 66 Hun, 543, 21 N.Y.S. 734. To give up; to annul; to relinquish; as to remit a fine. People ex rel. Cropsey v. Court of Special Sessions of City of New York, 156 N.Y.S. 61, 62, 170 App.Div. 575.

REMITMENT. The act of sending back to custody; an annulment. Wharton.

REMITTANCE. Money sent by one person to another, either in specie, bill of exchange, check, or otherwise.

REMITTER. The relation back of a later defective title to an earlier valid title. Remitter occurs where he who has the true property or jus proprietatis in lands, but is out of possession thereof, and has no right to enter without recovering possession in an action, has afterwards the freehold cast upon him by some subsequent and of course defective title. In this case he is remitted, or sent back by operation of law, to his ancient and more certain title. 3 Bl.Comm. 19.

REMITTIT DAMNA. Lat. An entry on the record, by which the plaintiff declares that he remits a part of the damages which have been awarded him.

REMITTITUR DAMNA. Lat. In practice. An entry made on record, in cases where a jury has given greater damages than a plaintiff has declared for, remitting the excess. 2 Tidd, Pr. 896.

REMITTITUR OF RECORD. The returning or sending back by a court of appeal of the record and proceedings in a cause, after its decision thereon, to the court whence the appeal came, in order that the cause may be tried anew, (where it is so ordered,) or that judgment may be entered in accordance with the decision on appeal, or execution be issued, or any other necessary action be taken in the court below.

REMITTOR. A person who makes a remittance to another.

REMNANT RULE. The rule that width of lot, frontage of which is not specified on plat specifying frontage of all other lots in same block, is length of block, minus total width of other lots. Routh v. Williams, 141 Fla. 334, 193 So. 71, 73.

REMODEL. To model, shape, form, fashion, afresh, or to recast; to model anew; to reconstruct, to reform, reshape, reconstruct, to make over in a somewhat different way. Board of Comrs of Guadalupe County v. State, 43 N.M. 409, 94 P.2d 515, 520.

REMONSTRANCE. Expostulation; showing of reasons against something proposed; a representation made to a court or legislative body wherein certain persons unite in urging that a contemplated measure be not adopted or passed. Girvin v. Simon, 59 P. 945, 127 Cal. 491; In re Mercer County License Applications, 3 Pa.Co.Ct. R. 45.

REMOTE. At a distance; afar off; inconsiderable; slight. Newsome v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 20 Ala.App. 349, 102 So. 61, 64.

REMOTE CAUSE. In the law of negligence with respect to injury or accident. A cause which would not according to experience of Mankind, lead to the event which happened. Miles v. Southern Motor Truck Lines, 295 Ky. 156, 173 S.W.2d 990, 994. One where the effect is uncertain, vague, or indeterminate, and where the effect does not necessarily follow. Jaggars v. Southeastern Greyhound Lines, D.C.Tenn., 34 F.Supp. 667, 669.

To determine whether a given cause is a "proximate cause" or a "remote cause," it must be determined whether the facts constitute a succession of events, so linked together that they become a natural whole, or whether chain of events is so broken that they become independent, and final result cannot be said to be the natural and probable consequence of the primary cause, the negligence of defendants. Fitzgerald v. Pennsylvania R. R., 121 Pa.Super. 461, 184 A. 299.

REMOTE DAMAGE. See Damages.

REMOTE POSSIBILITY. In the law of estates, a double possibility, or a limitation dependent on two or more facts or events both or all of which are contingent and uncertain; as, for example, the limitation of an estate to a given man provided that he shall marry a certain woman and that she shall then die and he shall marry another.

REMOBENESS. Want of close connection between a wrong and the injury which prevents the party injured from claiming compensation from the wrongdoer. Wharton.

REMOBENESS OF EVIDENCE. When the fact or facts proposed to be established as a foundation from which indirect evidence may be drawn, by way of inference, have not a visible, plain, or necessary connection with the proposition eventually to be proved, such evidence is rejected for "remoteness." See 2 Whart.Ev. § 1226, note.

REMOBTO IMPEDIMENTO, EMERGIT ACTIO. The impediment being removed, the action rises. When a bar to an action is removed, the action rises up into its original efficacy. Shep.Touch. 150; Wing. 20.

REMOVAL. In a broad sense, the transfer of a person or thing from one place to another. Durrett v. Woods, 155 La. 533, 99 So. 430, 431.

As used in statutes relative to removal from state is often limited to such absence from state as amounts to a change of residence. Smithers v. Smithers, 145 La. 752, 82 So. 879, 880.

"Suspension" is the temporary forced removal from the exercise of office; "removal" is the dismissal from office. Murley v, Township of Raritan, 117 N.J.L. 357, 168 A. 739, 740.

REMOVAL OF CAUSES. The transfer of a cause from one court to another. State ex rel. McNeal v. Avoyelles Parish School Board, 199 La. 859, 7 So.2d 165, 166. Commonly used of the transfer of the jurisdiction and cognizance of an action commenced but not finally determined, with all further proceedings therein, from one trial court to another trial court. More particularly, the transfer of a cause, before trial or final hearing thereof, from a state court to the United States District Court, under the acts of congress in that behalf.

REMOVAL OF PAUPER. The actual transfer of a pauper, by order of a court having jurisdiction, from a poor district in which he has no settlement, but upon which he has become a charge, to the district of his domicile or settlement.

REMOVAL, ORDER OF. An order of court directing the removal of a pauper from the poor district upon which he has illegally become a charge to the district in which he has his settlement. Also an order made by the court a quo, directing the transfer of a cause therein depending, with all future proceedings in such cause, to another court.
REMOVAL

REMOVAL TO AVOID TAX. Within a statute relating to forfeiture, some transfer of the thing involved from some definite place of manufacture, production, origin, or the like to some other place, whereat or wherefrom collection of tax on it might be less easily effected. U. S. v. One Buick Automobile, D.C.Cal., 300 F. 584, 588; U. S. v. Mangano, C.C.A.Neb., 299 F. 492, 493.

REMOVAL WITHOUT PROPER CAUSE. Of persons in the classified civil service, includes a removal for reasons which are insufficient, frivolous, or irrelevant, and a removal grounded upon evidence which to fair-minded persons appears inadequate to justify the conclusion reached but falling short of an exercise of bad faith. Murray v. Justices of Municipal Court of City of Boston, 233 Mass. 186, 123 N.E. 682, 683. See "Cause."

REMOVER. In practice. A transfer of a suit or cause out of one court into another, which is effected by writ of error, certiorari, and the like. 11 Coke, 41.

REMUNERATION. Reward; recompense; salary. Dig. 17, 1, 7.

A quid pro quo. If a man gives his services, whatever consideration he gets for giving his services seems to me a remuneration for them. Consequently, I think, if a person was in the receipt of a payment, or in the receipt of a percentage, or any kind of payment which would not be an actual money payment, the amount he would receive annually in respect of this would be "remuneration." 1 Q.B. Div. 663, 664.

RENANT, or RENIANT. In old English law. Denying. 32 Hen. VIII. c. 2.

RENOUNCING PROBATE. In English practice. Refusing to take upon one's self the office of executor or executrix. Refusing to take out probate under a will wherein one has been appointed executor or executrix. Holthouse.

RENDER, n. In feudal law, used in connection with rents and heriots. Goods subject to rent or heriot-service were said to lie in render, when the lord might not only seize the identical goods, but might also distrain for them. Cowell.

RENDEZVOUS. Fr. A place appointed for meeting. Especially used of places appointed for the assembling of troops, the coming together of the ships of a fleet, or the meeting of vessels and their convoy.

RENEGADE. One who has changed his profession of faith or opinion; one who has deserted his church or party.

RENEW. To make new again; to restore to freshness; to make new spiritually; to regenerate; to begin again; to recommence; to resume; to restore to existence; to revive; to re-establish; to recreate; to replace; to grant or obtain an extension of. Rayburn v. Guntersville Realty Co., 228 Ala. 662, 154 So. 812, 93 A.L.R. 1055; F. Chafee's Sons v. Blanchard's Estate, 105 Vt. 389, 165 A. 912, 913.

RENEWAL. The act of renewing or reviving. A revival or rehabilitation of an expiring subject; that which is made anew or re-established; in law, meaning an obligation on which time of payment is extended; the substitution of a new right or obligation for another of the same nature, a change of something old to something new; to grant or obtain extension of, to continue in force for a fresh period; as commonly used with reference to notes and bonds importing a postponement of maturity of obligations dealt with; an extension of time in which that obligation may be discharged; an obligation being "renewed" when the same obligation is carried forward by the new paper or undertaking, whatever it may be. Campbell River Timber Co. v. Vierhus, C.C.A.Wash., 86 F.2d 673, 675, 108 A.L.R. 763.

RENEW. To make new again; to restore to freshness; to make new spiritually; to regenerate; to begin again; to recommence; to resume; to restore to existence; to revive; to re-establish; to recreate; to replace; to grant or obtain an extension of. Rayburn v. Guntersville Realty Co., 228 Ala. 662, 154 So. 812, 93 A.L.R. 1055; F. Chafee's Sons v. Blanchard's Estate, 105 Vt. 389, 165 A. 912, 913.

RENDER, n. In feudal law, used in connection with rents and heriots. Goods subject to rent or heriot-service were said to lie in render, when the lord might not only seize the identical goods, but might also distrain for them. Cowell.

RENOUNCING PROBATE. In English practice. Refusing to take upon one's self the office of executor or executrix. Refusing to take out probate under a will wherein one has been appointed executor or executrix. Holthouse.

There is clear distinction between stipulation to "renew" lease for additional term and one to "extend," in that stipulation to renew requires making of new lease, while one to extend does not. Sanders v. Wender, 205 Ky. 422, 265 S. W. 939, 941.

RENOUENCE. To make an affirmative declaration of abandonment. Continental Bank & Trust Co. of New York v. Fulton Realty Co., 10 N.J.Misc. 1105, 162 A. 560, 563. To reject; cast off; repudiate; disclaim; forsake; abandon; divest one's self of a right, power, or privilege. Usually it implies an affirmative act of disclaimer or disavowal.

RENOUNCING PROBATE. In English practice. Refusing to take upon one's self the office of executor or executrix. Refusing to take out probate under a will wherein one has been appointed executor or executrix. Holthouse.

Render judgment. To pronounce, state, declare, or announce the judgment of the court in a given case or on a given state of facts; not used with reference to judgments by confession, and not synonymous with "entering," "docketing," or "recording" the judgment.

The rendition of a judgment is the judicial act of the court in pronouncing the sentence of the law, while the entry of a judgment is a ministerial act, which consists in spreading upon the record a statement of the final conclusion reached by the court in the matter, thus furnishing external and incontestable evidence of the sentence given and designed to stand as a perpetual memorial of its action. Schuster v. Rader, 13 Colo. 329, 22 P. 505; Farmers' State Bank v. Bales, 64 Neb. 870, 90 N.W. 945; Winstead v. Evans, Tex.Civ.App., 33 S.W. 580; Welch v. Kroger Grocer Co., 177 So. 41, 42, 180 Miss. 89.
RENOVARE. Lat. In old English law. To renew. Annuatim renovare, to renew annually. A phrase applied to profits which are taken and the product renewed again. Amb. 131.

RENT. Consideration paid for use or occupation of property. Whiting Paper Co. v. Holyoke Water Power Co., 276 Mass. 542, 177 N.E. 574, 575. Compensation or return of value given at stated times for the possession of lands and tenements corporeal. A sum of money or other consideration, issuing yearly out of lands and tenements corporeal; something which a tenant renders out of the profits of the land which he enjoys; a compensation or return, being in the nature of an acknowledgment or recompense given for the possession of some corporeal inherence. 2 Bl.Comm. 41; In re Perlmutter’s Will, 282 N.Y.S. 282, 156 Misc. 571.

Also the payment of royalty under a mineral lease. Robinson v. Horton, 197 La. 919, 2 So.2d 647, 649; Miller v. Carr, 137 Fla. 114, 188 So. 103, 106, 107.

In Louisiana. The contract of rent of lands is a contract by which one of the parties conveys and cedes to the other a tract of land, or any other immovable property, and stipulates that the latter shall hold it as owner, but reserving to the former an annual rent of a certain sum of money, or of a certain quantity of fruits, which the other party binds himself to pay him. It is of the essence of this conveyance that it be made in perpetuity. If it be made for a limited time, it is a lease. Civ.Code La. arts. 2779, 2780.

As used in Emergency Price Control Act authorizing recovery of either $50 or treble damages for overcharge of rent, means each separate payment made by tenant to landlord at a specified time for use of landlord’s premises, and does not mean a single right to all the payments made on a series of occasions in return for a continuous estate conveyed by landlord. Emergency Price Control Act of 1942, § 205 (e), 50 U.S.C.A.Appendix § 925 (e). Gilbert v. Thierry, D.C.Mass., 58 F. Supp. 235, 240.

Fair rent. See Fair Rent.

Fee farm rent. A rent charge issuing out of an estate in fee; a perpetual rent reserved on a conveyance of land in fee simple.

Ground rent. See Ground.

Quit rent. Certain established rents of the freeholders and ancient copyholders of manors were so called, because by their payment the tenant was free and “quit” of all other services.

Rack rent. A rent of the full annual value of the tenement or near it. 2 Bl.Comm. 43.

Rent-charge. This arises where the owner of the rent has no future interest or reversion in the land. It is usually created by deed or will, and is accompanied with powers of distress and entry.

Rent-roll. A list of rents payable to a particular person or public body.

Rent seck. Barren rent; a rent reserved by deed, but without any clause of distress. 2 Bl.

Rent-service. This consisted of fealty, together with a certain rent, and was the only kind of rent originally known to the common law. It was so called because it was given as a compensation for the services to which the land was originally liable. Brown.

Rents of assize. The certain and determined rents of the freeholders and ancient copyholders of manors. Apparently so called because they were assized or made certain, and so distinguished from a redditus mobilis, which was a variable or fluctuating rent. 3 Cruise, Dig. 314; Brown.

Rents resolute. Rents anciantly payable to the crown from the lands of abbeys and religious houses; and after their dissolution, notwithstanding that the lands were demised to others, yet the rents were still reserved and made payable again to the crown. Cowell.

RENT MUST BE RESERVED TO HIM FROM WHOM THE STATE OF THE LAND MOVETH. Co.Litt. 143.

RENTAGE. Rent.

RENTAL. (Said to be corrupted from “rent-roll.”) In English law. A roll on which the rents of a manor are registered or set down, and by which the lord’s bailiff collects the same. It contains the lands and tenements let to each tenant, the names of the tenants, and other particulars. Cunningham; Holthouse.

Payment received periodically for the use of property; rent.; Friedbar Realty Corporation v. Sanford, 119 Misc. 621, 198 N.Y.S. 38, 39.

Net Rental

When used with reference to real property, means a rental over and above all expenses. Perkins v. Kirby, 39 R.I. 343, 97 A. 884, 887.

Rental Bolls

In Scotch law. When the tithes (tiends) have been liquidated and settled for so many bolls of corn yearly. Bell.

Rental-Rights

In English law. A species of lease usually granted at a low rent and for life. Tenants under such leases were called “rentalers” or “kindly tenants.”

Rental Value

The value of land for use for purpose for which it is adapted in the hands of a prudent occupant, In re Acquiring Lands for an Alley, 147 Minn. 211, 179 N.W. 907, 909. Fair rental value of land, but not the conjectural or probable profits thereof. Maddox v. Yocum, 109 Ind.App. 416, 31 N.E.2d 652, 655.

RENTIER. In French law. A fundholder, a person having an income from personal property. Wharton.

RENTS, ISSUES AND PROFITS. The profits arising from property generally. Rents collected by party in possession, the net profits. Phrase does not apply to rental value or value of use and occupation. People v. Gustafson, 53 Cal.App.2d 230, 127 P.2d 627, 632.

RENUNCIATION. The act by which a person abandons a right acquired without transferring it to another. McCormick v. Engstrom, 119 Kan. 698, 241 P. 685, 688.

Under the Negotiable Instruments Law the unilateral act of the holder, usually, without consideration, whereby he expresses the intention of abandoning his rights on the instrument or against one or more parties thereto. McGlynn v. Granstrom, 169 Minn. 164, 210 N.W. 892, 893. See Renounce.

RENOI. The act of a state in summarily reconducting foreign vagabonds, criminals, etc., to the frontiers of their own state. A doctrine under which the court in resorting to a foreign law adopts the rules of the foreign law as to conflict of laws, which rules may in turn refer the court back to the law of the forum. 31 Harvard Law Rev. 523, 27 Yale Law Journal 509 and In re Tallmadge, 109 Misc. 696, 181 N.Y.S. 336, 341. Also the rule that, in a suit by a nonresident upon a cause arising locally, his capacity to sue is determined by looking to law of his domicile rather than to local law. Gray v. Gray, 87 N.H. 82, 174 A. 508, 511, 94 A.L.R. 1404.

RENT VIAGERE. That species of rente, the duration of which depends upon the contingency of the death of one or more persons indicated in the contract. The uncertainty of the time at which such death may happen causes the rente viagere to be included in the number of aleatory contracts. Duverger. Civ.Code La. art. 2793 defines the contract of annuity as that by which one party delivers to another a sum of money, and agrees not to reclaim it so long as the receiver pays the rent agreed upon.

RENT VIAGERE. That species of rente, the duration of which depends upon the contingency of the death of one or more persons indicated in the contract. The uncertainty of the time at which such death may happen causes the rente viagere to be included in the number of aleatory contracts. Duverger. Civ.Code La. art. 2793 defines the contract of annuity as that by which one party delivers to another a sum of money, and agrees not to reclaim it so long as the receiver pays the rent agreed upon.

RENT VIAGERE. That species of rente, the duration of which depends upon the contingency of the death of one or more persons indicated in the contract. The uncertainty of the time at which such death may happen causes the rente viagere to be included in the number of aleatory contracts. Duverger. Civ.Code La. art. 2793 defines the contract of annuity as that by which one party delivers to another a sum of money, and agrees not to reclaim it so long as the receiver pays the rent agreed upon.

RENTE. In French law. The annual return which represents the revenue of a capital or of an immovable alienated. The constitution of rente is a contract by which one of the parties lends to the other a capital which he agrees not to recall, in consideration of the borrower's paying an annual interest. It is this interest which is called "rente." Duverger. The word is therefore nearly synonymous with the English "annuity."

RENTE FONCIERE. A rent which issues out of land, and it is of its essence that it be perpetual, for, if it be made but for a limited time, it is a lease. It may, however, be extinguished. Civ. Code La. art. 2780.

RENTS. Government funds. Wharton.

The word "repair" contemplates an existing structure or thing which has become imperfect, and means to supply in the original existing structure which is lost or destroyed, and thereby restore it to the condition in which it originally existed, as near as may be. Childers v. Speer, 63 Ga.App. 488, 12 S.E.2d 439, 440.

REPAIRS. Restoration to soundness; reparation; work done to property to keep it in good order.

Necessary repairs. For which the master of a ship may lawfully bind the owner are such as are reasonably fit and proper for the ship under the circumstances, and not merely such as are absolutely indispensable for the safety of the ship or the accomplishment of the voyage. The Fortitude, 3 Sumn. 327, F.Cas.No.4,953; Webster v. Seekamp, 4 Barn. & Ald. 352.

REPARATIONE FACIENDA. For making repairs. The name of an old writ which lay in various cases; as if, for instance, there were three tenants in common of a mill or house which had fallen into decay, and one of the three was willing to repair it, and the other two not; in such case the party who was willing to repair might have this writ against the others. Cowell; Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 127.
REPARTIAMENTO. In Spanish law, a judicial proceeding for the partition of property held in common. Steinbach v. Moore, 30 Cal. 505.

REPATRIATION. The regaining nationality after expatriation.

REPAVE. In reference to a street improvement relates generally to a new pavement, either of the same or different material, for the full width of the street theretofore similarly improved, or for some defined section thereof. Cleveland Ry. Co. v. City of Cleveland, 97 Ohio St. 122, 119 N.E. 202, 203.

REPAY. To pay back; refund; restore; return. Harlan Coal & Land Co. v. King Harlan Mining Co., 192 Ky. 111, 232 S.W. 650, 654.

REPEAL. The abrogation or annulling of a previously existing law by the enactment of a subsequent statute which declares that the former law shall be revoked and abrogated, (which is called "express" repeal), or which contains provisions so contrary to or irreconcilable with those of the earlier law that only one of the two statutes can stand in force, (called "implied" repeal.) Oakd. Pa'y. Co. v. Hilton, 69 Cal. 479, 11 P. 3; Pacific Milling & Elevator Co. v. City of Portland, 65 Or. 49, 133 P. 72, 78, 46 L.R.A.,N.S., 363. For "Express Repeal", see that title.

"Repeal" of a law means its complete abrogation by the enactment of a subsequent statute, whereas the "amendment" of a statute means an alteration in the law already existing, leaving some part of the original still standing. State ex inf. Crain ex rel. Peebles v. Moore, 339 Mo. 492, 99 S.W.2d 17, 19.

REPEATERS. Persons who commit crime and are sentenced, and then commit another and are sentenced again. Opolich v. Fluckey, D.C.Ga., 47 F.2d 950.

REPELLITUR A SACRAMENTO INFAMIS. An infamous person is repelled or prevented from taking an oath. Co.Litt. 158; Bract. fol. 185.

REPELLITUR EXCEPTIONE CEDENDARUM ACTIONUM. He is defeated by the plea that the actions have been assigned. Cheesebrough v. Millard, 1 Johns.Ch. (N.Y.) 409, 414.

REPERITORY. In French law. The inventory or list of notaries make of all contracts which take place before them. Merl. Repert.

REPETITION. In the civil law. A demand or action for the restoration of money under mistake, or goods delivered by mistake or on an unperformed condition. Dig. 12, 6. See Solutio Indebiti.

In Scotch law. The act of reading over a witness' deposition, in order that he may adhere to it or correct it at his choice. The same as recollection (q. v.) in the French law. 2 Benth.Jud.Ev. 239.

REPETITUM NAMlUM. A repeated, second, or reciprocal distress; withernam. 3 Bl.Comm. 148.

REPETUNDJE, or PECUNLE REPETUNDAE. In Roman law. The terms used to designate such sums 'of money as the socii of the Roman state, or individuals, claimed to recover from magistri, juridices, or publici curatores, which they had improperly taken or received in the province, or in the urbs Roma, either in the discharge of their jurisdictio, or in their capacity of judices, or in respect of any other public function. Sometimes the word "repetundce" was used to express the illegal act for which compensation was sought. Wharton.

REPETUNDARUM CRIMEN. In Roman law. The crime of bribery or extortion in a magistrate, or person in any public office. Calvin.

REPLACE. To pay back; refund; restore; return. Harlan Coal & Land Co. v. King Harlan Mining Co., 192 Ky. 111, 232 S.W. 650, 654.

REPLEADER. When, after issue has been joined in an action, and a verdict given thereon, the pleading is found (on examination) to have miscarried and failed to effect its proper object, viz., of raising an apt and material question between the parties, the court will, on motion of the unsuccessful party, award a repeller; that is, will order the parties to plead de novo for the purpose of obtaining a better issue. Brown.

Judgment of Repleader

A judgment allowed by the court to do justice between the parties where defect is in form or manner of stating the right, and the issue joined is on an immaterial point, so that court cannot tell for whom to give judgment. 1 Chit.Pl. 687, 688. On the award of a repeller, the parties must recommend their pleadings at the point where the immaterial issue originated. This judgment is interlocutory, quod partes replacient.

REPLEGIARE. To replevy; to redeem a thing detained or taken by another by putting in legal sureties.

REPLEGIARE DE AVERIIS. Replevin of cattle. A writ brought by one whose cattle were distrained, or put in the pound, upon any cause by another, upon surety given to the sheriff to prosecute or answer the action in law. Cowell.

REPLEGIARI FACIAS. You cause to be repleved. In old English law. The original writ in the action of replevin; superseded by the statute of Marlbridge, c. 21. 3 Bl.Comm. 146.

REPLETION. In canon law. Where the revenue of a benefice is sufficient to fill or occupy the whole right or title of the graduate who holds it. Wharton.

REPLEVIALE, or REPLEVISABLE. Property is said to be repleviable or replevisable when proceedings in replevin may be resorted to for the purpose of trying the right to such property.

REPLEVIN. A personal action ex delicto brought to recover possession of goods unlawfully taken, (generally, but not only, applicable to the taking of goods distraint for rent,) the validity of which taking it is the mode of contesting, if the party from whom the goods were taken wishes to have them back in specie, whereas, if he prefer to have damages instead, the validity may be contested by action of trespass or unlawful distress. The word means a redelivery to the owner of the pledge or thing taken in distress. Wharton; Sinnott v. Feiock, 165 N.Y. 444, 59 N.E. 265, 53 L.R.A. 565, 80 Am.St.Rep. 736; Healey v. Humphrey, 81 F. 990, 27 C.C.A. 39. A local action to be brought where property is taken or where property is detained, unless statute regulates matter. Miles v. Securities Inv. Co., 171 Tenn. 417, 104 S.W.2d 823. A possessory action, and a plaintiff cannot recover on the weakness of defendant's title, but must recover on the strength of his own title. Hannibal Inv. Co. v. Schmidt, Mo.App., 113 S.W.2d 1048, 1052. Cardinal question in a replevin action is plaintiff's right to immediate possession of the property at the commencement of the action. Warren v. Driscoll, 178 Minn. 344, 227 N.W. 199, 200.

Personal Replevin

A species of action to replevy a man out of prison or out of the custody of any private person. It took the place of the old writ de homine replegiando; but, as a means of examining into the legality of an imprisonment, it is now superseded by the writ of habeas corpus.

Replevin Bond

A bond executed to indemnify the officer who executed a writ of replevin and to indemnify the defendant or person from whose custody the property was taken for such damages as he may sustain. Imel v. Van Deren, 8 Colo. 90, 5 P. 803.

REPLEVISOR. The plaintiff in an action of replevin.

REPLEVY. In reference to the action of replevin, to redeem goods which have been distraint, to the original possessor of them, on his pleading or giving security to prosecute an action against the distraintor for the purpose of trying the legality of the distress. Also the bailing or liberating a man from prison on his finding bail to answer for his forthcoming at a future time. Brown.

REPLIANT, or REPLICANT. A litigant who replies or files or delivers a replication.

REPLICARE. Lat. In the civil law and old English pleading. To reply; to answer a defendant's plea.

REPLICATIO. Lat. In the civil law and old English pleading. The plaintiff's answer to the defendant's exception or plea; corresponding with and giving name to the replication in modern pleading. Inst. 4, 14, pr.

REPLICATION. In pleading. A reply made by the plaintiff in an action to the defendant's plea, or in a suit in chancery to the defendant's answer.

General and Special

In equity practice, a general replication is a general denial of the truth of defendant's plea or answer, and of the sufficiency of the matter alleged in it to bar the plaintiff's suit, and an assertion of the truth and sufficiency of the bill. A special replication is occasioned by the defendant's introducing new matter into his plea or answer, which makes it necessary for the plaintiff to put in issue some additional fact on his part in avoidance of such new matter. James v. Lawson, 103 W.Va. 165, 136 S.E. 851, 853.

REPLY. In its general sense, what the plaintiff, petitioner, or other person who has instituted a proceeding says in answer to the defendant's case. Sweet. Its office is to join issue or avoid new matter in answer, and not to aid complaint by supplying omission or adding new ground of relief. Teisinger v. Hardy, 91 Mont. 9, 5 P.2d 219, 220.

On trial or argument. When a case is tried or argued in court, the speech or argument of the plaintiff in answer to that of the defendant. Under the practice of the chancery and common-law courts, to reply is to file or deliver a replication, (q. v.). Under codes of reformed procedure, the name of the pleading which corresponds to "replication" in common-law or equity practice.

Frivolous or sham reply. For the distinction between these two kinds of replies, see Frivolous.

REPONE. In Scotch practice. To replace; to restore to a former state or right. 2 Alis. Crim. Pr. 351.

REPORT. An official or formal statement of facts or proceedings.

The formal statement in writing made to a court by a master in chancery, a clerk, or referee, as the result of his inquiries into some matter referred to him by the court.

A "report" of a public official is distinguished from a "return" of such official, in that "return" is typically concerned with something done or observed by officer, while "report" embodies result of officer's investigation not originally occurring within his personal knowledge. E. K. Hardison Seed Co. v. Jones, C.C.A.6, 149 F.2d 252, 257.

The name is also applied (usually in the plural) to the published volumes, appearing periodically, containing accounts of the various cases argued and determined in the courts with the decisions thereon.

Lord Coke defines "report" to be "a public relation, or a bringing again to memory cases judicially argued, debated, resolved, or adjudged in any of the king's courts of justice, together with such causes and reasons as were delivered by the judges of the same." Co.Litt. 293.

REPORT FOR INDUCTION. Within the Selective Service Act, to present one's self not only at the appointed place but also in readiness to go through the process which constitutes induction into the army. 'Selective Training and Service Act reported by the legislative committee. That communication which the chairman of the committee makes to the house at the close of the investigation upon which it has been engaged. Brown.

REPORT OFFICE. A department of the English court of chancery. The suitors' account there is discontinued by the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 87, § 36.

REPORTER. A person who reports the decisions upon questions of law in the cases adjudged in the several courts of law and equity. Wharton.

REPORTS, THE. The name given, par excellence, to Lord Coke's Reports, from 14 Eliz. to 13 Jac. I., which are cited as "Rep." or "Coke." They are divided into thirteen parts, and the modern editions are in six volumes, including the index.

REPOSITORIUM. A storehouse or place where things are kept; a warehouse. Cro.Car. 555.

REPRESENT. To appear in the character of; personate; to exhibit; to expose before the eyes. To represent a thing is to produce it publicly. Dig. 10, 4, 2, 3; In re Matthews, 57 Idaho, 75, 62 P.2d 578, 580, 111 A.L.R. 13. To represent a person is to stand in his place; to supply his place; to act as his substitute. Plummer v. Brown, 64 Cal. 429, 1 P. 703; Seibert v. Dunn, 216 N.Y. 237, 110 N.E. 447, 449.

REPRESENTATION. Any conduct capable of being turned into a statement of fact. Scandrett v. Greenhouse, 244 Wis. 108, 11 N.W.2d 510, 512.

Contracts
A statement express or implied made by one of two contracting parties to the other, before or after the time of making the contract, in regard to some past or existing fact, circumstance, or state of facts pertinent to the contract, which is influential in bringing about the agreement. Fernandina Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. v. Peters, D.C. Fla., 283 F. 621, 627; Kiser v. Richardson, 91 Kan. 812, 139 P. 373, Ann.Cas.1915D, 539.

Insurance
A collateral statement, either by writing not inserted in the policy or by parol, of such facts or circumstances, relative to the proposed adventure, as are necessary to be communicated to the underwriters, to enable them to form a just estimate of the risks. 1 Marsh.Ins. 450; Myers v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. of New York, 83 W.Va. 390, 98 S.E. 424, 426. The allegation of any facts, by the applicant to the insurer, or vice versa, preliminary to making the contract, and directly bearing upon it, having a plain and evident tendency to induce the making of the policy. The statements may or may not be in writing, and may be either express or by obvious implication. Augusta Insurance & Banking Co. of Georgia v. Abbott, 12 Md. 348.

In relation to the contract of insurance, there is an important distinction between a representation and a warranty. The former, which precedes the contract of insurance, and is no part of it, need be only materially true; the latter is a part of the contract, and must be exactly and literally fulfilled, or else the contract is broken and ineffectual. Glendale Woolen Co. v. Protection Ins. Co., 21 Conn. 19, 54 Am. Dec. 309.

Law of Distribution and Descent
The principle upon which the issue of a deceased person take or inherit the share of an estate which their immediate ancestor would have taken or inherited, if living; the taking or inheriting per stirpes. 2 Bl.Comm. 217, 517; In re Paterson's Estate, Cal.App., 76 P.2d 138, 143.

Scotch Law
The name of a plea or statement presented to a lord ordinary of the court of session, when his judgment is brought under review.

General
False representation. See False Representation.

Misrepresentation. An intentional false statement respecting a matter of fact, made by one of the parties to a contract, which is material to the contract and influential in producing it.

Promissory representation. A term used chiefly in insurance, and meaning a representation made by the assured concerning what is to happen during the term of the insurance, stated as a matter of expectation or even of contract, and amounting to a promise to be performed after the contract has come into existence. New Jersey Rubber Co. v. Commercial Union Assur. Co., 64 N.J.L. 580, 46 A. 777.

REPRESENTATION OF PERSONS. A fiction of the law, the effect of which is to put the representative in the place, degree, or right of the person represented. Civ.Code La. art. 894. REPRESENTATION, ESTOPPEL BY. It arises when one by acts, representations, admissions, or silence when he ought to speak out, intentionally or through culpable negligence induces another to believe certain facts to exist and such other rightfully relies and acts on such belief, so that he will be prejudiced if the former is permitted to deny the existence of such facts. Carter v.
Real Representative

He who represents or stands in the place of another, with respect to his real property, is so termed, in contradistinction to him who stands in the place of another, with regard to his personal property, and who is termed the "personal representative." Thus the heir is the real representative of his deceased ancestor. Brown.

Representative Action or Suits

See Class or Representative Action.

Representative Democracy

A form of government where the powers of the sovereignty are delegated to a body of men, elected from time to time, who exercise them for the benefit of the whole nation. 1 Bouv.Inst. no. 31.

Representative Peers

Those who, at the commencement of every new parliament, are elected to represent Scotland and Ireland in the British house of lords; sixteen for the former and twenty-eight for the latter country. Brown.

Also the withdrawing of any sentence for a period of time. Ex parte Dormitzer, 119 Or. 336, 249 P. 639, 640.

It does no more than stay the execution of a sentence for a time, and it is ordinarily an act of clemency extended to a prisoner to afford him an opportunity to procure some amelioration of the sentence imposed. Fulk v. Walker, 124 Conn. 121, 198 A. 265, 267. It cannot be granted until after sentence. State ex rel. Gordon v. Zangerle, 136 Ohio St. 371, 26 N.E.2d 190, 194.

REPRIMAND. A public and formal censure or severe reproof, administered to a person in fault by his superior officer or by a body to which he belongs. Thus, a member of a legislative body may be reprimanded by the presiding officer, in pursuance of a vote of censure, for improper conduct in the house. So a military officer, in some cases, is punished by a reprimand administered by his commanding officer, or by the secretary of war.

REPRISALS. The forcible taking by one nation of a thing that belonged to another, in return or satisfaction for an injury committed by the latter on the former. Vattel, b. 2, c. 18, s. 342.

General Reprisals

Take place by virtue of commissions delivered to officers and citizens of the aggrieved state, directing them to take the persons and property belonging to the offending state wherever found.
REPROBATION, ACTION OF. In Scotch law.

REPROBATION. In ecclesiastical law. The refusal to accept a witness, or the due execution of instruments offered in evidence and the like.

REPROBATOR. In Scotch law. An action or proceeding intended to convict a witness of perjury, to which the witness must be made a party. Bell.

REPROBATA PECUNIA LIBERAT SOLVEN-TEM. Money refused [the refusal of money tendered] releases him who pays, [or tenders it.] 9 Coke, 79a.

REPROBATION. In ecclesiastical law. The interposition of objections or exceptions; as to the competency of witnesses, to the due execution of instruments offered in evidence and the like.

REPROBATOR, ACTION OF. In Scotch law. An action or proceeding intended to convict a witness of perjury, to which the witness must be made a party. Bell.

REP-SILVER. In old records. Money paid by servile tenants for exemption from the customary duty of reapimg for the lord. Cowell.

REPUBLIC. A commonwealth; that form of government in which the administration of affairs is open to all the citizens. In another sense, it signifies the state, independently of its form of government. 1 Toullier 28 and n., 202, note; State v. Harris, 2 Bailey (S.C.) 599; Co.Litt. 303.

REPUTATION. Estimation in which one is held, regarded by it as of binding force.

REPUTATION. Estimation in which one is held, regarded by it as of binding force.

REPUTATION. Estimation in which one is held, regarded by it as of binding force.

REPUTATION. Estimation in which one is held, regarded by it as of binding force.

REPUTATION. Estimation in which one is held, regarded by it as of binding force.

REPUTATION. Estimation in which one is held, regarded by it as of binding force.

REPUTATION. Estimation in which one is held, regarded by it as of binding force.

REPUTATION. Estimation in which one is held, regarded by it as of binding force.

REPUTATION. Estimation in which one is held, regarded by it as of binding force.

REPUTATION. Estimation in which one is held, regarded by it as of binding force.

REPUTATION. Estimation in which one is held, regarded by it as of binding force.

REPUTATION. Estimation in which one is held, regarded by it as of binding force.
REPUTATION

"Character" is made up of the things an individual actually is and does whereas. "reputation" is what people think an individual is and what they say about him. McNulty v. State, 138 Tex.Cr.R. 317, 135 S.W.2d 987, 989; James v. State, ex rel. Loser, 24 Tenn. App. 453, 145 S.W.2d 1026, 1033.

In the law of evidence, matters of public and general interest, such as the boundaries of counties or towns, rights of common, claims of highway, etc., are allowed to be proved by general reputation; e.g., by the declaration of deceased persons made ante litem motam, by old documents, etc., notwithstanding the general rule against secondary evidence. Best, Ev. 632.

REPUTED. Accepted by general, vulgar, or public opinion. Thus, land may be reputed part of a manor, though not really so, and a certain district may be reputed a parish or a manor, or be a parish or a manor in reputation, although it is in reality no parish or manor at all. Brown; Lowell Hardware Co. v. May, 59 Colo. 475, 149 P. 831, 833.

REPUTED OWNER. See Owner.

REQUEST, v. To ask for something or for permission or authority to do, see, hear, etc., something; to solicit; and is synonymous with beg, entreat, and beseech. Artificial Ice & Cold Storage Co. v. Martin, 102 Ind.App. 74, 198 N.E. 446, 449.

In its ordinary or natural meaning when used in a will, is precatory and not mandatory. Byars v. Byars, 143 Tex. 10, 182 S.W.2d 363, 364, 366.

REQUEST, n. An asking or petition; the expression of a desire to some person for something to be granted or done; particularly for the payment of a debt or performance of a contract; also direction or command in law of wills. Beakley v. Knutson, 90 Or. 574, 174 P. 1149, 1150; Hurley-Tobin Co. v. White, 84 N.J.Eq. 60, 188, 94 A. 52, 53. For "Express Request," see that title.

The two words, "request" and "require," as used in notices to creditors to present claims against an estate, are of the same origin, and virtually synonymous. Prentice v. Whitney, 8 Hun, N.Y., 300.

Pleading

The statement in the plaintiff’s declaration that the particular payment or performance, the failure of which constitutes the cause of action, was duly requested or demanded of the defendant.

General

Request, letters of. In English law. Many suits are brought before the Dean of the Arches as original judge, the cognizance of which properly belongs to inferior jurisdictions within the province, but in respect of which the inferior judge has waived his jurisdiction under a certain form of proceeding known in the canon law by the denomination of "letters of request." 3 Steph. Comm. 306.

Request note. In English law. A note requesting permission to remove dutiable goods from one place to another without paying the excise.

Requests, courts of. See Courts of Requests.

Special request. A request actually made, at a particular time and place. This term is used in contradistinction to a general request, which need not state the time when nor place where made. 3 Bouv.Inst. no. 2843.

REQUIREMENT CONTRACT. A contract in writing whereby one agrees to buy, for a sufficient consideration, all the merchandise of a designated type which the buyer may require for use in his own established business. Such contract is not void for uncertainty. Fuchs v. United Motor Stage Co., 135 Ohio St. 509, 21 N.E.2d 669, 672.

REQUISITION. A demand in writing, or formal request or requirement. Atwood v. Charlton, 21 R.I. 568, 45 A. 580.

In international law. The formal demand by one government upon another, or by the governor of one of the United States upon the governor of a sister state, of the surrender of a fugitive criminal.

In Scotch law. A demand made by a creditor that a debt be paid or an obligation fulfilled. Bell.

REQUISITIONS ON TITLE, in English conveyancing, are written inquiries made by the solicitor of an intending purchaser of land, or of any estate or interest therein, and addressed to the vendor’s solicitor, in respect of some apparent insufficiency in the abstract of title. Mozley & Whitl.

REREFIEFS. In Scotch law. Inferior fiefs; portions of a fief or feud granted out to inferior tenants. 2 Bl.Comm. 57.

RERUM ORDO CONFUNDITUR SI UNICUIQUE JURISDICTIO NON SERVETUR. 4 Inst. Proem. The order of things is confounded if every one preserve not his jurisdiction.

RERUM PROGRESSUS OSTENDUNT MULTA, QUAZE IN INITIO PRIECAVERI SEU PRIEVIDERI NON POSSUNT. 6 Coke, 40. The progress of events shows many things which, at the beginning, could not be guarded against or foreseen.
RERUM SUARUM QUILIBET EST MODERATOR ET ARBITER. Every one is the regulator and disposer of his own property. Co.Litt. 223a.

RES. Lat. In the civil law. A thing; an object. As a term of the law, this word has a very wide and extensive signification, including not only things which are objects of property, but also such as are not capable of individual ownership. Inst. 2, 1, pr. And in old English law it is said to have a general import, comprehending both corporeal and incorporeal things of whatever kind, nature, or species. 3 Inst. 182- Bract. fol. 7b. By “res,” according to the modern civilians, is meant everything that may form an object of rights, in opposition to "persona," which is regarded as a subject of rights. “Res,” therefore, in its general meaning, comprises actions of all kinds; while in its restricted sense it comprehends every object of right, except actions. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 146. This has reference to the fundamental division of the Institutes, that all law relates either to persons, to things, or to actions. Inst. 1, 2, 12.

In modern usage, the term is particularly applied to an object, subject-matter, or status, considered as the defendant in an action, or as the object against which, directly, proceedings are taken. Thus, in a prize case, the captured vessel is “the res.” And proceedings of this character are said to be in rem. (See In Personam; In Rem.) "Res" may also denote the action or proceeding, as when a cause, which is not between adversary parties, is entitled 'In re _____.

Classification

Things (res) have been variously divided and classified in law, e.g., in the following ways: (1) Corporeal and incorporeal things; (2) moveables and immovables; (3) res mancipi and res nec mancipi; (4) things real and things personal; (5) things in possession and choses (i.e., things) in action; (6) fungible things and things not fungible, (fungibles vel non fungibles;)

and (7) res singulce (i.e., individual objects) and universitates rerum, (i.e., aggregates of things.) Also persons are for some purposes and in certain respects regarded as things. Brown.

General

Res accessoria. In the civil law. An accessory thing; that which belongs to a principal thing, or is in connection with it.

Res adiratee. The gist of the old action for res adirate was the fact that the plaintiff had lost his goods, that they had come into the hands of the defendant, and that the defendant, on request, refused to give them up. 3 Hadsw.Hist.E.L. 275.

Res adjudicata. A common but indefensible misspelling of res judicata. The latter term designates a point or question or subject-matter which was in controversy or dispute and has been authoritatively and finally settled by the decision of a court; that issuable fact once legally determined is conclusive as between parties in same action or subsequent proceeding. Tiffany Production of California v. Superior Court of California for Los Angeles County, 131 Cal. App. 729, 22 P. 2d 275.

Res adjudicata (if there be such a term) could only mean an article or subject of property “awarded to” a given person by the judgment of a court, which might perhaps be the case in replevin and similar actions.

Res caduca. In the civil law. A fallen or escheated thing; an escheat. Hallifax, Civil Law, b. 2, c. 9, no. 60.

Res communes. In the civil law. Things common to all; that is, those things which are used and enjoyed by every one, even in single parts, but can never be exclusively acquired as a whole, e.g., light and air. Inst. 2, 1, 1; Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 169.

Res controversa. In the civil law. A matter controverted; a matter in controversy; a point in question; a question for determination. Calvin.

Res coronae. In old English law. Things of the crown; such as ancient manors, homages of the king, liberties, etc. Fleta, lib. 3, c. 6, § 3.

Res corporales. In the civil law. Corporeal things; things which can be touched, or are perceptible to the senses. Dig. 1, 8, 1, 1; Inst. 2, 2; Bract. folos. 7b, 10b, 13b.

Res derelicta. Abandoned property; property thrown away or forsaken by the owner, so as to become open to the acquisition of the first taker or occupant. Rhodes v. Whitehead, 27 Tex. 313, 84 Am.Dec. 631.

Res fungibiles. In the civil law. Fungible things, things of such a nature that they can be replaced by equal quantities and qualities when returning a loan or delivering goods purchased, for example, so many bushels of wheat or so many dollars; but a particular horse or a particular jewel would not be of this character.

Res furtivie. In Scotch law. Goods which have been stolen. Bell.

Res gestoe. Things done. McClory v. Schneider, Tex.Civ.App., 51 S.W.2d 738, 741. Those circumstances which are the automatic and undesigned incidents of a particular litigated act, which may be separated from act by lapse of time more or less appreciable, and which are admissible when illustrative of such act. The whole of the transaction under investigation and every part of it. Res gestoe is considered as an exception to the hearsay rule. In its operation it renders acts and declarations which constitute a part of the things done and said admissible in evidence, even though they would otherwise come within the rule excluding hearsay evidence or self-serving declarations. The rule is extended to include, not only declarations by the parties to the suit, but includes statements made by bystanders and strangers, under certain circumstances. Edwards v. West Texas Hospital, Tex.Civ.App., 89 S.W.2d 801, 809; Slayback Van Order Co. v. Eiben, 177 A. 671, 673, 115 N.J.L. 17. For evidence to be admissible as res gestae, there must be an act in itself admissible in the case independently of the declaration that accompanies it; a declaration uttered simultaneously, or almost simultaneously, with the occurrence of the act; and the explanation of the act by what is said when it happens. Staley v. Royal Pines Park, 202 N.C. 155, 162 S.E. 202, 203.

Test as to whether declaration is part of res Best a depends on whether declaration was facts talking through party or party talking about facts. Batchelor v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 196 N.C. 84, 144 S.E. 542, 544, 60 A.L.R. 1091.

"Res gestae", while often spoken of as an exception to the hearsay rule, is generally not such in fact but ordinarily it relates to statements which because of their intimate relation to facts become a part of those facts and are therefore admitted as such. Industrial Commission of Colorado v. Fotis, 112 Colo. 423, 149 P.2d 657, 659.

Res habiles. In the civil law, things which are prescribable; things to which a lawful title may be acquired by ordinary prescription.

Res immobiles. In the civil law. Immovable things; including land and that which is connected therewith, either by nature or art, such as trees and buildings. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 160.

Res incorporales. In the civil law. Incorporeal things; things which cannot be touched; such as those things which consist in right. Inst. 2, 2; Bract. fols. 7b, 10b. Such things as the mind alone can perceive.

Res integra. A whole thing; a new or unopened thing. The term is applied to those points of law which have not been decided, which are untouched by dictum or decision. 3 Mer. 269.

Res inter alios acta. A thing done between others, or between third parties or strangers. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Schmitz, 211 Ill. 446, 71 N.E. 1050.

Res ipsa loquitur. The thing speaks for itself. Rebuttable presumption that defendant was negligent, which arises upon proof that instrumentality causing injury was in defendant’s exclusive control, and that the accident was one which ordinarily does not happen in absence of negligence. Sliwowski v. New York, N. H. & R. Co., 94 Conn. 303, 108 A. 805, 807; Poth v. Dexter Horton Estate, 140 Wash. 272, 248 P. 374, 375; Pearson v. Butts, 224 Iowa 376, 276 N.W. 65, 67.

Res judicata. A matter adjudged; a thing judicially acted upon or decided; a thing or matter settled by judgment. A phrase of the civil law, constantly quoted in the books. Epstein v. Soskin, 86 Misc.Rep. 94, 148 N.Y.S. 323, 324; Rule that final judgment or decree on merits by court of competent jurisdiction is conclusive of rights of parties or their privies in all later suits on points and matters determined in former suit. American S. S. Co. v. Wickwire Spencer Steel Co., D.C.N.Y., 8 F.Supp. 562, 566. And to be applicable, requires identity in thing sued for as well as identity of cause of action, of persons and parties to action, and of quality in persons for or against whom claim is made. Freudereich v. Mayor and Council of Borough of Fairview, 114 N.J.L. 290, 176 A. 162, 163. The sum and substance of the whole rule is that a matter once judicially decided is finally decided. Massie v. Paul, 263 Ky. 183, 92 S. W.2d 11, 14. See, also, Res Adjudicata, supra.

Estoppel and res judicata distinguished. See Estoppel.

Res litigiosa. In Roman law, things which are in litigation; property or rights which constitute the subject-matter of a pending action.

Res mancipi. See Mancipi Res.

Res mobiles. In the civil law. Movable things; things which may be transported from one place to another, without injury to their substance and form. Things corresponding with the chattels personal of the common law. 2 Kent, Comm. 347.

Res nova. A new matter; a new case; a question not before decided.

Res nullius. The property of nobody. A thing which has no owner, either because a former owner has finally abandoned it, or because it has never been appropriated by any person, or because (in the Roman law) it is not susceptible of private ownership.

Res periti domino. A phrase used to express that, when a thing is lost or destroyed, it is lost to the person who was the owner of it at the time. Broom, Max. 238.

Res publica. Things belonging to the public; public property; such as the sea, navigable rivers, highways, etc.

Res quotidiana. Every-day matters; familiar points or questions.

Res religiosa. Things pertaining to religion. In Roman law, especially, burial-places, which were regarded as sacred, and could not be the subjects of commerce.

Res sacra. In the civil law. Sacred things. Things consecrated by the pontiffs to the service of God; such as sacred edifices, and gifts or offerings. Inst. 2, 1, 8. Chalices, crosses, censors. Bract. fol. 8.

Res sancta. In the civil law. Holy things; such as the walls and gates of a city. Inst. 2, 1, 10. Walls were said to be holy, because any offense against them was punished capitally. Bract. fol. 8.

Res universitatis. In the civil law. Things belonging to a community, (as, to a municipality,) the use and enjoyment of which, according to their proper purpose, is free to every member of the community, but which cannot be appropriated to the exclusive use of any individual; such as RES ACCENDENT LUMINA REBUS. One thing throws light upon others. Odgen v. Gibbons, 4 Johns.Ch. (N.Y.) 149.

RES Accessoria sequitur rem principali parte. Broom, Max. 491. The accessory follows the principal.

RES DENOMINATUR A PRINCIPALI PARTE. 9 Coke, 47. The thing is named from its principal part.

RES EST MISERA UBI JUS EST VAGUM ET INCERTUM. 2 Salk. 512. It is a wretched state of things when law is vague and mutable.

RES GENERALEM HABET SIGNIFICATIONEM QUIA TAM CORPorea QUAM INCORPorea CUJUSCUNQUE SUNT GENERIS, NATURIE, SIVE SPECIEI, COMPREHENDIT. 3 Inst. 182. The word "thing" has a general signification, because it comprehends corporeal and incorporeal objects, of whatever nature, sort, or species.

RES INTER ALIOS ACTA ALTERI NOCERE NON DEBET. Things done between strangers ought not to injure those who are not parties to them. Co.Litt. 132; Broom, Max. 954, 967.

RES INTER ALIOS JUDICATIE NULLUM ALIOS PRIEJUDICIUM FACIUNT. Matters adjudged in a cause do not prejudice those who were not parties to it. Dig. 44, 2, 1.

RES JUDICATA FACIT EX ALBO NIGRUM; EX NIGRO, ALBUM; EX CURVO, RECTUM; EX RECTO, CURVUM. A thing adjudged [the solemn judgment of a court] makes white, black; the crooked, straight; the straight, crooked. 1 Bouv. Inst. no. 840.

RES JUDICATA PRO VERITATE ACCIPITUR. A matter adjudged is taken for truth. Dig. 50, 17, 207. A matter decided or passed upon by a court of competent jurisdiction is received as evidence of truth. 2 Kent, Comm. 120.

RES NULLIUS NATURALITER FIT PRIMI OCCUPANTIS. A thing which has no owner naturally belongs to the first finder.

RES PER PECUNIAM ESTIMATUR, ET NON PECUNIA PER REM. 9 Coke, 76. The value of a thing is estimated according to its worth in money, but the value of money is not estimated by reference to a thing.

RES PROPRIA EST QUIE COMMUNIS NON EST. A thing is private which is not common. Le Breton v. Miles, 8 Paige (N.Y.) 261, 270.

RES QUIE INTRA PRIEJUDICIA PERDUCITIE NONDUM SUNT, QUANQUAM AB HOSTIBUS OCCUPATZEE,IDEO POSTLIMINII NON EGENT, QUIA DOMINUM NONDUM MUTURUNT EX GENTIUM JURE. Things which have not yet been introduced within the enemy's lines, although held by the enemy, do not need the fiction of postlimony on this account, because their ownership by the law of nations has not yet changed. Gro, de Jure B. 1. 3, c. 9, § 16; Id. 1. 3, c. 6, § 3.

RES SACRA NON RECIPIE ESTIMATIONEM. A sacred thing does not admit of valuation: Dig. 1, 8, 9, 5.

RES SUA NEMINI SERVIT. 4 Macq.H.L.Cas. 151. No one can have a servitude over his own property.

RES TRANSIT CUM SUO ONERE. The thing passes with its burden. Where a thing has been incumbered by mortgage, the incumbrance follows it wherever it goes. Bract, fol. 47b, 48.

RESALE. Where a person who has sold goods or other property to a purchaser sells them again to some one else. Sometimes a vendor reserves the right of reselling if the purchaser commits default in payment of the purchase money, and in some cases (e. g., on a sale of perishable articles) the vendor may do so without having reserved the right. Sweet.

RESCIT. In old English practice. An admission or receiving a third person to plead his right in a cause formerly commenced between two others; as, in an action by tenant for life or years, he in the reversion might come in and pray to be received to defend the land, and to plead with the demandant. Cowell.

RESCIT OF HOMAGE. The lord's receiving homage of his tenant at his admission to the land. Kitch. 148.

RESCIND. To abrogate, annul, avoid, or cancel a contract; particularly, nullifying a contract by the act of a party. Vaughan v. Fey, 47 Cal.App. 485, 190 P. 1041, 1042; Pearson v. Brown, 27 Cal. App. 125, 148 P. 956, 958. To declare a contract void in its inception and to put an end to it as though it never were. Russell v. Stephens, 191 Wash. 314, 71 P.2d 30, 31. Not merely to terminate it and release parties from further obligations to each other but to abrogate it from the beginning and restore parties to relative positions which they would have occupied had no contract ever been made. Wall v. Zynda, 283 Mich. 260, 278 N.W. 66, 68, 114 A.L.R. 1521; Sylvania Industrial Corporation v. Lilienfeld's Estate, C.C.A.Va., 132 F.2d 887, 892, 145 A.L.R. 612.

RESCISSIO. Lat. In the civil law. An annulment; avoiding, or making void; abrogation; rescission. Cod. 4, 44.

In Spanish law, nullity is divided into absolute and relative. The former is that which arises from a law, whether civil or criminal, the principal motive for which is the public interest; and the latter is that which affects only certain individuals. "Nullity" is not to be confounded with "rescission." Nullity takes place when the act is affected by a radical vice, which prevents it from producing any effect; as where an act is in contravention of the laws or of good morals, or where it has been executed by a person who cannot be supposed to have any will, as a child under the age of seven years, or a madman, (un nino demente.) Rescission is where an act, valid in appearance, nevertheless conceals a defect, which may make it null, if demanded by any of the parties; as, for example, mistake, force, fraud, deceit, want of sufficient age, etc. Nullity relates generally to public order, and cannot therefore be made good either by ratification or prescription; so that the tribunals ought, for this reason alone, to decide that the null act can have no effect, without stopping to inquire whether the parties to it have or have not received any injury. Rescission, on the contrary, may be made good by ratification or by the silence of the parties; and neither of the parties can demand it, unless he can prove that he has received some prejudice or sustained some damage by the act. Sunol v. Hepburn, 1 Cal. 281, citing Escriche.

RESCISSORY ACTION. In Scotch law. One to rescind or annul a deed or contract.

RESCOUS. Rescue. The taking back by force goods which had been taken under a distress, or the violently taking away a man who is under arrest, and setting him at liberty, or otherwise procuring his escape, are both so denominated. This was also the name of a writ which lay in cases of rescue. Co.Litt. 160; 3 Bl.Comm. 146; Fitzh.Nat.Brev. 100; 6 Mees. & W. 564.

RESCRIPT. In canon law. A term including any form of apostolical letter emanating from the pope. The answer of the pope in writing. Dict. Droit Can.

At common law. A counterpart, duplicate, or copy.

In American law. A written order from the court to the clerk, giving directions concerning the further disposition of a case. Pub.St.Mass. p. 1295. The written statement by an appellate court of its decision in a case, with the reasons therefor, sent down to the trial court.

In the civil law. A species of imperial constitutions, being the answers of the prince in individual cases, chiefly given in response to inquiries by parties in relation to litigated suits, or to inquiries by the judges, and which became rules for future litigated or doubtful legal questions. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 46.

DESCRIPTION. In French law. A letter by which one requests some one to pay a certain sum of money, or to account for him to a third person for it. Poth. Cont. de Change, no. 225.

RESCRIPTUM. Lat. In the civil law. A species of imperial constitution, in the form of an answer to some application or petition; a rescript. Calvin.

RESCUE. At common law. Forcibly and knowingly freeing another from arrest or imprisonment without any effort by prisoner to free himself. Merrill v. State, 42 Ariz. 341, 26 P.2d 110. The unlawfully or forcibly taking back goods which have been taken under a distress for rent, damage feasant, etc. Hamlin v. Mack, 33 Mich. 108.

In admiralty and maritime law. The deliverance of property taken as prize, out of the hands of the captors, either when the captured party retake it by their own efforts, or when, pending the pursuit or struggle, the party about to be overpowered receive reinforcements, and so escape capture.

RESCUE DOCTRINE. Under this doctrine, one injured in voluntary attempt to rescue a person whose life is imperiled by negligence of another may recover from the negligent person if the attempted rescue be not an act of extreme recklessness. Rovinski v. Rowe, C.C.A.Mich., 131 F.2d 687, 692, 693.

RESCUSSOR. In old English law. A rescuer; one who commits a rescous. Cro.Jac. 419; Cowell.

RESCYT. L. Fr. Resceit; receipt; the receiving or harboring a felon, after the commission of a crime. Britt. c. 23.

RESEALING WRIT. In English law. The second sealing of a writ by a master so as to continue it, or to cure it of an irregularity.

RESERVATIO NON DEBIT ESSE DE PROFICUIS IPSIS, QUIA EA CONCEDUNTUR, SED DE REDITU NOVO EXTRA PROFICUA. A reservation ought not to be of the profits themselves, because they are granted, but from the new rent, apart from the profits. Co.Litt. 142.

RESERVATION. A clause in a deed or other instrument of conveyance by which the grantor creates, and reserves to himself, some right, interest, or profit in the estate granted, which had no previous existence as such, but is first called into being by the instrument reserving it; such as rent, or an easement. In re Narragansett Indians, 20 R.I. 715, 40 A. 347; Smith v. Cornell University, 21 Misc. 220, 45 N.Y.S. 640; Johnson v. Peck, 90 Utah 544, 63 P.2d 251.

For exception and reservation distinguished, see Exception.

Public Land Laws of the United States

A reservation is a tract of land, more or less considerable in extent, which is by public authority withdrawn from sale or settlement, and appropriated to specific public uses; such as parks, military posts, Indian lands, etc. Jackson v. Wilcox, 2 Ill. 344; Meehan v. Jones, C.C.Minn., 70 F. 455.

Practice

The reservation of a point of law is the act of the trial court in setting it aside for future consideration, allowing the trial to proceed meanwhile as if the question had been settled one way, but subject to alteration of the judgment in case the court in banc should decide it differently.
RESERVE, v. To keep back, to retain, to keep in store for future or special use, and to retain or hold over to a future time. Commissioner of Internal Revenue v. Strong Mfg. Co., C.C.A.6, 124 F. 2d 360, 363.

RESERVE, n. In insurance law. A sum of money, variously computed or estimated, which, with accretions from interest, is set aside as a fund with which to mature or liquidate by payment or reinsurance with other companies future accrued and contingent claims, and claims accrued but contingent and indefinite as to amount or time of payment. Royal Highlanders v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.8, 138 F.2d 360, 363.

RESERVED LAND. Public land that has been withheld or kept back from sale or disposition. Donley v. Van Horn, 49 Cal.App. 383, 193 P. 514, 516.

RESET. The receiving or harboring an outlawed person. Cowell.

RESET OF THEFT.

RESET. The receiving or harboring an outlawed person. Cowell.

RESET OF THEFT.

RESETTER. In Scotch law. A receiver of stolen goods knowing them to have been stolen.

RESETTLEMENT. The reopening of an order or decree for the purpose of including therein some recital or provision which should have been included and was initially omitted through inadvertence. In re Bartlett’s Will, 299 N.Y.S. 316, 317, 164 Misc. 524.

RESIDENCE. Residence, abode, or continuance.

RESIDENT. One who has his residence in a place. See Residence.

RESIDENCE. That which remains after debts and expenses of administration, legacies, and devises have been satisfied. Nichols v. Swickard, 211 Iowa 957, 234 N.W. 846, 847. It consists of all that has not been legally disposed of by will, other than by residuary clause. In re Cushman’s Estate, 257 N.Y.S. 582, 586, 143 Misc. 432.

RESIDUARY ACCOUNT. In English practice. The account which every executor and administrator, after paying the debts and particular legacies of the deceased, and before paying over the residuum, must pass before the board of inland revenue. Mozley & Whitley.

RESIDUARY CLAUSE. Clause in will by which that part of property is disposed of which remains after satisfying bequests and devises. Sanborn v. Sanborn, 14 N.J.Misc. 260, 184 A. 400, 402.

RESIDUARY DEVISE AND DEVISEE. See Devise.

RESIDUARY ESTATE. That which remains after debts and expenses of administration, legacies, and devises have been satisfied. Nichols v. Swickard, 211 Iowa 957, 234 N.W. 846, 847. It consists of all that has not been legally disposed of by will, other than by residuary clause. In re Cushman’s Estate, 257 N.Y.S. 582, 586, 143 Misc. 432.

RESIDUARY LEGACY. See Legacy.

RESIDUARY LEGATEE. See Legatee.
RESIDUE. The surplus of a testator's estate remaining after all the debts and particular legacies have been discharged. 2 Bl.Com. 514; In re Hamlin, 185 App.Div. 153, 172 N.Y.S. 787, 790; In re Brown v. Hilleary, 147 Or. 185, 32 P.2d 584, 587.

RESIDUUM. That which remains after any process of separation or deduction; a residue or balance. That which remains of a decedent's estate, after debts have been paid and legacies deducted. United States Trust Co. v. Black, 30 N.Y.S. 453, 9 Misc. 653.

RESIGNATIO EST JURIS PROPRII SPONTANEA REFUTATIO. Resignation is a spontaneous relinquishment of one's own right. Godb. 284.

In ecclesiastical law. Where a parson, vicar, or other beneficed clergyman voluntarily gives up and surrenders his charge and preferment to those from whom he received the same. It is usually done by an instrument attested by a notary. Phillim. Ecc. Law, 517.

In Scotch law. The return of a fee into the hands of the superior. Bell.

RESIGNATION BOND. A bond or other engagement in writing taken by a patron from the clergyman presented by him to a living, to resign the benefice at a future period. This is allowable in certain cases under St. 9 Geo. IV. c. 94, passed in 1828. 2 Steph. Comm. 721.

RESIGNEE. One in favor of whom a resignation is made. 1 Bell, Comm. 125n.

RESILIENCY. In patent law. That quality, as of a metal, which causes it to spring back to its form, inherent in properly tempered metal. Besser v. Merillat Culvert Core Co., D.C.Iowa, 226 F. 783, 786.

RESILIRE. Lat. In old English law. To draw back from a contract before it is made binding. Bract. fol. 38.

RESISTANCE. The act of resisting opposition; the employment of forcible means to prevent the execution of an endeavor in which force is employed; standing against; obstructing. U. S. v. Jose, C.C.Wash., 63 F. 954; U. S. v. Huff, C.C. Tenn., 13 F. 639.

RESISTING AN OFFICER. In criminal law, the offense of obstructing, opposing, and endeavoring to prevent (with or without actual force) a peace officer in the execution of a writ or in the lawful discharge of his duty while making an arrest or otherwise enforcing the peace. Jones v. State, 60 Ala. 99.

RESOLUCION. In Spanish colonial law. An opinion formed by some superior authority on matters referred to its decision, and forwarded to inferior authorities for their instruction and government. Schm. Civil Law, 93, note 1.

RESOLUTION. A formal expression of the opinion or will of an official body or a public assembly, adopted by vote; as a legislative resolution. Scudder v. Smith, 331 Pa. 165, 200 A. 601, 604.

Civil Law

The cancellation or annulling, by the act of parties or judgment of a court, of an existing contract which was valid and binding, in consequence of some cause or matter arising after the making of the agreement, and not in consequence of any inherent vice or defect, which, invalidating the contract from the beginning, would be ground for rescission. 7 Toullier, no. 551.

Legislative Practice

The term is usually employed to denote the adoption of a motion, the subject-matter of which would not properly constitute a statute; such as a mere expression of opinion; an alteration of the rules; a vote of thanks or of censure, etc. McDowell v. People, 68 N.E. 379, 204 Ill. 499; Conley v. Texas Division of United Daughters of the Confederacy, Tex.Civ.App., 164 S.W. 24, 26.

The chief distinction between a "resolution" and a "law" is that the former is used whenever the legislative body passing it wishes merely to express an opinion as to some given matter or thing and is only to have a temporary effect on such particular thing, while by a "law" it is intended to permanently direct and control matters applying to persons or things in general. Ex parte Hague, 104 N.J Eq. 31, 144 A. 546, 559.

Joint resolution. A resolution adopted by both houses of congress or a legislature. When such a resolution has been approved by the president or passed with his approval, it has the effect of a law. 6 Op. Atty. Gen. 680.

The distinction between a joint resolution and a concurrent resolution of congress, is that the former requires the approval of the president while the latter does not. Rep. Sen. Jud. Corn. Jan. 1897.

If a resolution originating in one house of the Legislature is passed by that house and is then sent to the other for its concurrence, and is passed by it, signed by the presiding officer of each house and approved by the Governor, it is a "joint resolution" as that term is used in the Constitution and the joint rules of the Legislature. Oklahoma News Co. v. Ryan, 101 Okl. 151, 224 P. 969, 971.

Practice

A solemn judgment or decision of a court. This word is frequently used in this sense by Coke and some of the more ancient reporters.
RESOLUTIVE. In Scotch conveyancing. Having the quality or effect of resolving or extinguishing a right. Bell.

RESOLUTO JURE CONCEDENTIS RESOLVENDUM JURIS CONCESSUM. The right of the grantor being extinguished, the right granted is extinguished. Mackeld. Rom. Law, 179; Broom, Max. 467.

RESOLUTORY CONDITION. See Condition.

RESORT, v. To go back; as, it resorted to the haunt. U. S. ex rel. Dobra v. Lindsey, D.C.Tex., 51 F.2d 141, 142.

RESORT, n. A place of frequent assembly, as, court of last resort. A court whose decision is final and without appeal in reference to the particular case.

RESOURCES. Money or any property that can be converted into supplies; means of raising money or supplies; capabilities of raising wealth or to supply necessary wants; available means or capability of any kind. Shelby County v. Tennessee Centennial Exposition Co., 96 Tenn. 653, 36 S.W. 694, 33 L.R.A. 717. Cerenzia v. Department of Social Security of Washington, 18 Wash.2d 230, 138 P.2d 868, 871.

RESPECTIVE. Relating to particular persons or things, each to each; particular; several; as, their respective homes. Sandford v. Stagg, 106 N.J.Eq. 71, 150 A. 187, 188.

RESPECTU COMPUTI VICECOMITIS HABENTUR JUS CONCESSUM. To dispense with the performance of homage by tenants who held their lands in consideration of performing homage to their lords. Cowell.

RESPOND. 1. To make or file an answer to a bill, libel, or appeal, in the character of a respondent, (q. v.).

RESPIRE, v. To go back; as, it resorted to the haunt. U. S. ex rel. Dobra v. Lindsey, D.C.Tex., 51 F.2d 141, 142.

RESPITE. The temporary suspension of the execution of a sentence, a reprieve; a delay, forbearance, or continuation of time; postponement.

RESPITE OF HOMAGE. To dispense with the performance of homage by tenants who held their lands in consideration of performing homage to their lords. Cowell.

RESPITE OF APPEAL. Adjourning an appeal to some future time. Brown.

RESPITE OF HOMAGE. To dispense with the performance of homage by tenants who held their lands in consideration of performing homage to their lords. Cowell.

RESPOND. 1. To make or file an answer to a bill, libel, or appeal, in the character of a respondent, (q. v.).

RESPOND. 2. To be liable or answerable; to make satisfaction or amends; as, to “respond in damages.”

RESPONDEAT OUSTER. Upon an issue in law arising upon a dilatory plea, the form of judgment for the plaintiff is that the defendant answer, which is thence called a judgment of “respondat ouster.” This not being a final judgment, the pleading is resumed, and the action proceeds. Steph.Pl. 115; 3 Bl.Comm. 303; Bauer v. Roth, 4 Rawle (Pa.) 91.

RESPONDEAT RAPTOR, QUI IGNORARE NON POTUIT QUOD PUPILLUM ALIENUM ABDUXIT. Hob. 99. Let the ravisher answer, for he cannot be ignorant that he has taken away another’s ward.

RESPONDEAT SUPERIOR. Let the master answer. This maxim means that a master is liable in certain cases for the wrongful acts of his servant, and a principal for those of his agent. Broom, Max. 843. Southern Paramount Pictures Co. v. Gaulding, 24 Ga.App. 478, 101 S.E. 311; Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Pittinger, C.C.A.N.J., 293 F. 853, 855. Under this doctrine master is responsible for want of care on servant’s part toward those to whom master owes duty to use care, provided failure of servant to use such care occurred in course of his employment. Shell Petroleum Corporation v. Magnolia Pipe Line Co., Tex.Civ.App., 85 S.W.2d 829, 832. Doctrine applies only when relation of master and servant existed between defendant and wrongdoer at time of injury sued for, in respect to very transaction from which it arose. James v. J. S. Williams & Son, 177 La. 1033, 150 So. 9, 11. Hence doctrine is inapplicable where injury occurs while servant is acting out-

In the civil law. An act by which a debtor, who is unable to satisfy his debts at the moment, transacts (compromises) with his creditors, and obtains from them time or delay for the payment of the sums which he owes to them. The respite is either voluntary or forced. It is voluntary when all the creditors consent to the proposal, which the debtor makes, to pay in a limited time the whole or a part of the debt. It is forced when a part of the creditors refuse to accept the debtor’s proposal, and when the latter is obliged to compel them by judicial authority to consent to what the others have determined, in the cases directed by law.

RESPITE OF APPEAL. Adjourning an appeal to some future time. Brown.

RESPITE OF HOMAGE. To dispense with the performance of homage by tenants who held their lands in consideration of performing homage to their lords. Cowell.

RESPOND. 1. To make or file an answer to a bill, libel, or appeal, in the character of a respondent, (q. v.).

RESPOND. 2. To be liable or answerable; to make satisfaction or amends; as, to “respond in damages.”

RESPONDEAT OUSTER. Upon an issue in law arising upon a dilatory plea, the form of judgment for the plaintiff is that the defendant answer, which is thence called a judgment of “respondat ouster.” This not being a final judgment, the pleading is resumed, and the action proceeds. Steph.Pl. 115; 3 Bl.Comm. 303; Bauer v. Roth, 4 Rawle (Pa.) 91.

RESPONDEAT RAPTOR, QUI IGNORARE NON POTUIT QUOD PUPILLUM ALIENUM ABDUX-IT. Hob. 99. Let the ravisher answer, for he cannot be ignorant that he has taken away another’s ward.

RESPONDEAT SUPERIOR. Let the master answer. This maxim means that a master is liable in certain cases for the wrongful acts of his servant, and a principal for those of his agent. Broom, Max. 843. Southern Paramount Pictures Co. v. Gaulding, 24 Ga.App. 478, 101 S.E. 311; Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Pittinger, C.C.A.N.J., 293 F. 853, 855. Under this doctrine master is responsible for want of care on servant’s part toward those to whom master owes duty to use care, provided failure of servant to use such care occurred in course of his employment. Shell Petroleum Corporation v. Magnolia Pipe Line Co., Tex.Civ.App., 85 S.W.2d 829, 832. Doctrine applies only when relation of master and servant existed between defendant and wrongdoer at time of injury sued for, in respect to very transaction from which it arose. James v. J. S. Williams & Son, 177 La. 1033, 150 So. 9, 11. Hence doctrine is inapplicable where injury occurs while servant is acting out-

Municipalities are exempt from doctrine when officers are acting in exercise of governmental functions. Lemieux v. City of St. Albans, 112 Vt. 512, 28 A.2d 373, 374.

In admiralty. The party upon whom a libel in admiralty is served. Brown.

In the civil law. One who answers or is security for another; a fidejussor. Dig. 2, 8, 6.

RESPONDENTIA. The hypothecation of the cargo or goods on board a ship as security for the repayment of a loan, the term "bottomry" being confined to hypothecations of the ship herself; but now the term "respondentia" is seldom used, and the expression "bottomry" is generally employed, whether the vessel or her cargo or both be the security. Maude & P. Shipp. 433; Smith, Merc. Law, 416. See Maitland v. The Atlantic, 16 F. Cas. 522.

A contract by which a Cargo, or some part thereof, is hypothecated as security for a loan, the repayment of which is dependent on maritime risks.

RESPONDERE NON DEBET. Lat. In pleading. The prayer of a plea where the defendant insists that he ought not to answer, as when he claims a privilege; for example, as being a member of congress or a foreign ambassador. 1 Chit.Pl. 433.

RESPONSA PRUDENTIUM. Lat. Answers of jurists; responses given upon cases or questions of law referred to them, by certain learned Roman jurists, who, though not magistrates, were authorized to render such opinions. These responsa constituted one of the most important sources of the earlier Roman law, and were of great value in developing its scientific accuracy. They held much the same place of authority as our modern precedents and reports.

RESPONSALIS. In Old English law. One who appeared for another.

In ecclesiastical law. A proctor.

RESPONSALIS AD LUCRANDUM VEL PETENS- DUM. He who appears and answers for another in court at a day assigned; a proctor, attorney, or deputy. 1 Reeve, Eng.Law, 169.

RESPONSIBILITY. The obligation to answer for an act done, and to repair any injury it may have caused.

RESPONSIBILITY OF EVICTION. In a lease the burden of expelling by legal process those in possession, if they wrongfully withhold it. Muler v. Bernstein, 198 Ill.App. 104, 106.

RESPONSIBLE. Liable, legally accountable or answerable. The Mary F. Barrett, C.C.A.Pa., 279 F. 329, 334; Middendorf, Williams & Co. v. Alexander Milburn Co., 113 A. 348, 354, 137 Md. 583. Able to pay a sum for which he is or may become liable, or to discharge an obligation which he may be under. People v. Kent, 160 Ill. 655, 43 N.E. 760.

RESPONSIBLE CAUSE. So as to relieve defendant from liability for injuries. A cause which is the culpable act of a human being who is legally responsible for such act. State, to Use of Schiller, v. Hecht Co., 165 Md. 415, 169 A. 311, 313.

RESPONSIBLE GOVERNMENT. This term generally designates that species of governmental system in which the responsibility for public measures or acts of state rests upon the ministry or executive council, who are under an obligation to resign when disapproval of their course is expressed by a vote of want of confidence, in the legislative assembly, or by the defeat of an important measure advocated by them.

RESPONSIO UNIUS NON OMNINO AUDIA- TUR. The answer of one witness shall not be heard at all. A maxim of the Roman law of evidence. 1 Greenl. Ev. § 260.

RESPONSIVE. Answering; constituting or comprising a complete answer. A "responsive allegation" is one which directly answers the allegation it is intended to meet. Picture Plays Theater Co. of Tampa v. Williams, 75 Fla. 556, 78 So. 674, 677, A.L.R. 1.

RESSEISER. The taking of lands into the hands of the crown, where a general livery or ouster le main was formerly misused.

REST, v. In the trial of an action, a party is said to "rest," or "rest his case," when he intimates that he has produced all the evidence he intends to offer at that stage, and submits the case, either finally, or subject to his right to afterwards offer rebutting evidence.

REST, n. Repose, cessation or intermission of motion, exertion or labor; freedom from activity; quiet. Corrugating Machinery Corporation v. Progressive Corrugated Paper Machinery Co., D. C.N.Y., 47 F.2d 273, 275. Also residue (which title see).
RESTAMPING WRIT. Passing it a second time through the proper office, whereupon it receives a new stamp. 1 Chit. Arch. Pr. 212.

RESTAUR, or RESTOR. The remedy or recourse which marine underwriters have against each other, according to the date of their assurances, or against the master, if the loss arise through his default, as through ill loading, want of caulking, or want of having the vessel tight; also the remedy or recourse a person has against his guarantor or other person who is to indemnify him from any damage sustained. Enc. Lond.

RESTAURANT. An establishment where refreshments or meals may be obtained by the public. Donahue v. Conant, 102 Vt. 108, 146 A. 417, 419. It includes cafes, lunchrooms, dairy lunch rooms, cafeterias, tea rooms, waffle houses, fountain lunches, sandwich shops and many others. People, on Complaint of Canniano, v. Kupas, 13 N.Y. S.2d 488, 490, 171 Misc. 480.

RESTITUTIO IN INTEGRUM. Lat. In the civil law. Restoration or restitution to the previous condition. This was effected by the praetor on equitable grounds, at the prayer of an injured party, by rescinding or annulling a contract or transaction valid by the strict law, or annulling a change in the legal condition produced by an omission, and restoring the parties to their previous situation or legal relations. Dig. 4, 1; Mackeld. Rom. Law, 1 220.

The restoration of a cause to its first state, on petition of the party who was cast, in order to have a second hearing. Halifax, Civil Law, b. 3, c. 9, no. 49.

RESTITUTION. Act of restoring; restitution; restoration of anything to its rightful owner; the act of making good or giving equivalent for any loss, damage or injury; and indemnification. State v. Barnett, 110 Vt. 221, 3 A.2d 521, 525, 526.

Equity
Restoration of both parties to their original condition, (when practicable,) upon the rescission of a contract for fraud or similar cause.

Maritime Law
The placing back or restoring articles which have been lost by jettison: This is done, when remainder of the cargo has been saved, at the general charge of the owners of the cargo. Stevens, Av. pt. 1, c. 1, 1, art. 1, n. 8.

Practice
The return of something to the owner of it or to the person entitled to it, upon the reversal or setting aside of the judgment or order of court under which it was taken from him. Haebler v. Myers, 132 N.Y. 363, 30 N.E. 963, 15 L.R.A. 588, 28 Am. St. Rep. 589; Holloway v. People's Water Co., 100 Kan. 414, 167 P. 265, 269, 2 A.L.R. 161.

If, after money has been levied under a writ of execution, the judgment be reversed by writ of error, or set aside, the party against whom the execution was sued out shall have restitution. 2 Tidd, Pr. 1033; 1 Burrill, Pr. 292. So, on conviction of a felon, immediate restitution of such of the goods stolen as are brought into court will be ordered to be made to the several prosecutors. 4 Steph. Comm. 434.

General
Restitution of conjugal rights. In English ecclesiastical law. A species of matrimonial cause or suit which is brought whenever either a husband or wife is guilty of the injury of subtraction, or lives separate from the other without any sufficient reason; in which case the ecclesiastical jurisdiction will compel them to come together again, if either be weak enough to desire it, contrary to the inclination of the other. 3 Bl. Comm. 94.

Restitution of minors. In Scotch law. Relief obtained by minor on attaining majority against a deed previously executed by him. Bell.

Restitution of stolen goods. At common law there was no restitution of goods upon an indictment, because it was at the suit of the crown only, therefore the party was compelled to bring an appeal of robbery in order to have his goods again; but a writ of restitution was granted by 21 Hen. VIII. c. 11, and it became the practice of the crown to order, without any writ, immediate restitution of such goods.

Writ of restitution. See that title.

RESTITUTIONE EXTRACTI AB ECCLESIA. A writ to restore a man to the church, which he had recovered for his sanctuary, being suspected of felony. Reg. Orig. 69.

RESTITUTIONE TEMPORALIUM. A writ addressed to the sheriff, to restore the temporalities of a bishopric to the bishop elected and confirmed. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 169.

RESTRAN. To limit, confine, abridge, narrow down, restrict, obstruct, impede, hinder, stay, destroy. U. S. v. Keystone Watch Case Co., D.C. Pa., 218 F. 502, 515. To prohibit from action; to put compulsion upon; to restrict; to hold or press back. To enjoin, (in equity.)

RESTRAINING ORDER. An order in the nature of an injunction. See Order.

RESTRAINING POWERS. Restrictions or limitations imposed upon the exercise of a power by the donor thereof.

RESTRAINING STATUTE. A statute which restrains the common law, where it is too lax and luxuriant. 1 Bl. Comm. 87. Statutes restraining the powers of corporations in regard to leases have been so called in England. 2 Bl. Comm. 319, 320.

RESTRAIN. Confinement, abridgment, or limitation. Prohibition of action; holding or pressing back from action. Hindrance, confinement, or restriction of liberty. Obstruction, hindrance or destruction of trade or commerce.
RERAINT

RERAINT OF PRINCES AND RULERS. In marine and war risk policies, operation of sovereign power by exercise of vis major, in its sovereign capacity, controlling and divesting for the time, the authority of owners over ship, and clause applies only to acts done in exercise of sovereign power. Baker Castor Oil Co. v. Insurance Co. of North' America, D.C.N.Y., 60 F.Supp. 32, 35.

Where the "restraint of princes" clause or similar language is found in the contract, a reasonable apprehension of capture or destruction of the ship or cargo will justify nonperformance of the agreement to carry. The George T. Goulandris, D.C.Me., 36 F.Supp. 827, 830, 834.

RERAINT OF MARRIAGE. A contract, covenant, bond, or devise. When conditions unreasonably hamper or restrict the party's freedom to marry, or his choice, or unduly postpone the time of his marriage. "General restraint," as used in the rule invalidating contracts in general restraint of marriage, means restraint binding a competent person not to marry any one at any time. Barnes v. Hobson, Tex.Civ.App., 250 S.W. 238, 242.

RERAINT OF TRADE. Contracts or combinations which tend or are designed to eliminate or stifle competition, effect a monopoly, artificially maintain prices, or otherwise hamper or obstruct the course of trade and commerce as it would be carried on if left to the control of natural and economic forces. U. S. v. Reading Co., 40 S.Ct. 425, 429, 253 U.S. 26, 64 L.Ed. 760; U. S. v. Patty, 33 S.Ct. 141, 144, 145, 226 U.S. 525, 57 L.Ed. 333, 44 L.R.A.,N.S., 325.

With reference to contracts between individuals, a restraint of trade is said to be "general" or "special." A contract which forbids a person to employ his talents, industry, or capital in any undertaking within the limits of the state or country is in "general" restraint of traffic; if it forbids him to employ himself in a designated trade or business, either for a limited time or within a prescribed, area or district, it is in "special" restraint of trade. Holbrook v. Waters, 9 How. Prac. (N.Y.) 337.

"Restrain of trade" at which the Sherman Anti-Trust Act is aimed, are only those which are comparable to restraints deemed illegal at common law. United States v. South-Eastern Underwriters Ass'n, D.C.Ga., 51 F.Supp. 712, 714.

RERAINT ON ALIENATION. Restriction of the power of aliening property. See Perpetuity.

In English practice, as applied to counsel, a notice given to a counsel by an attorney on behalf of the plaintiff or defendant in an action, in order to secure his services as advocate when the cause comes on for trial. Holthouse. Blackman v. Webb, 38 Kan. 668, 17 P. 464.

In old English usage. A servant, not menial or familiar,—that is, not continually dwelling in the house of his master, but only wearing his livery, and attending sometimes upon special occasions. Cowell.

RESTRICT. To restrain within bounds; to limit; to confine. State ex rel. Lucey v. Terry, Del.Supper., 196 A. 163, 167.

RESTRICTED LANDS. Lands the alienation of which is subject to restrictions imposed by Congress to protect the Indians from their own sup- posed incompetency. 25 U.S.C.A. § 331 note. Kenny v. Miles, 39 S.Ct. 417, 418, 250 U.S. 58, 63 L.Ed. 841.

RESTRICTION. In the case of land registered under the English land transfer act, 1875, an entry on the register made on the application of the registered proprietor of the land, the effect of which is to prevent the transfer of the land or the creation of any charge upon it, unless notice of the application for a transfer or charge is sent by post to a certain address, or unless the consent of a certain person or persons to the transfer or charge is obtained, or unless some other thing is done. Sweet.

RESTRICTIVE INDOREMENT. An indorsement so worded as to restrict the further negotiability of the instrument. Thus, "Pay the contents to J. S. only," or "to J. S. for my use," are restrictive indorsements, and put an end to the negotiability of the paper. 1 Daniel, Neg. Inst. § 698.

RESTS, n. Periodical balancings of an account, (particularly in mortgage and trust accounts,) made for the purpose of converting interest into principal, and charging the party liable thereon with compound interest. Mozley & Whiteley.

RESULT, v. To proceed, to spring, or arise, as a consequence, effect, or conclusion; to come out, or have an issue; to terminate; to end. Abbott v. Prudential Ins. Co. of America, 89 N.H. 149, 195 A. 413, 414.

In law, a thing is said to result when, after having been ineffectually or only partially disposed of, it comes back to its former owner or his representatives. Sweet.

RESULT, n. That which results, the conclusion or end to which any course or condition of thing leads, or which is obtained by any process or operation; consequence or effect. Reese v. Dempsey, 48 N.M. 485, 153 P.2d 127, 131.

RESULTING TRUST. See Trust,

RESULTING USE. See Use.

RESUMMONS. In practice. A second summons. The calling a person a second time to answer an action, where the first summons is defeated upon any occasion; as the death of a party, or the like. Cowell.

RESUMPTION. In old English law. The taking again into the king's hands such lands or tenements as before, upon false suggestion, or other error, he had delivered to the heir, or granted by letters patent to any man. Cowell.

RESURRENDER. Where copyhold land has been mortgaged by surrender, and the mortgagee has been admitted, then, on the mortgage debt being paid off, the mortgagor is entitled to have the land reconveyed to him, by the mortgagee surrendering it to the lord to his use. This is called a resurrender. 2 Da'y. Conv. 1332n.

RETAIL. To sell by small quantities, in broken lots or parcels, not in bulk, to sell direct to con-

RETAILER OF MERCHANDISE. A merchant who buys articles in gross or merchandise in large quantities, and sells the same by single articles or in small quantities. Byran v. City of Sparks, 36 Nev. 573, 137 P. 522, 523.

RETAIL. To continue to hold, have, use, recognize, etc., and to keep. Kimbell Trust & Savings Bank v. Hartford Accident & Indemnity Co., 333 Ill. 318, 164 N.E. 661, 662.

In practice. To engage the services of an attorney or counsellor to manage a cause. See Retainer.

RETAIN. The act of withholding what one has in one's own hands by virtue of some right.

Act of the client in employing his attorney or counsel, and also denotes the fee which the client pays when he retains the attorney to act for him, and thereby prevents him from acting for his adversary. Bright v. Turner, 205 Ky. 188, 265 S.W. 627, 628; Devany v. City of South Norfolk, 143 Va. 768, 129 S.E. 672, 674.

General Retainer

Of an attorney or solicitor merely gives a right to expect professional service when requested, but none which is not requested. It binds the person retained not to take a fee from another against his retainer, but to do nothing except what he is asked to do, and for this he is to be distinctly paid. Rhode Island Excl. Bank v. Hawkins, 6 R.I. 206.

Right of Retainer

The right which the executor or administrator of a deceased person has to retain out of the assets sufficient to pay any debt due to him from the deceased in priority to the other creditors whose debts are of equal degree. 3 Steph.Comm. 263. In re Smith's Estate, 179 Wash. 417, 38 P. 2d 244, 245.

Special Retainer

An engagement or retainer of an attorney or solicitor for a special and designated purpose; as, to prepare and try a particular case. Agnew v. Walden, 84 Ala. 502, 4 So. 672.

RETAINER PAY. Compensation paid to enlisted men retained in the service but not rendering active service. French v. French, Cal., 105 P.2d 155, 157.

RETAINING A CAUSE. In English practice, The act of one of the divisions of the high court of justice in retaining jurisdiction of a cause wrongly brought in that division instead of another. Under the judicature acts of 1873 and 1875, this may be done, in some cases, in the discretion of the court or a judge.

RETAINING FEE. A fee given to counsel on engaging his services. Conover v. West Jersey Mortgage Co., 96 N.J.Eq. 441, 126 A. 855, 860.

RETAINING LIEN. See Attorney's Lien.

RETAKE. The taking one's goods, from another, who without right has taken possession thereof. See Recaption.

RETAILATION. See lex talionis, (q. v.).

RETAILLA. In old English law. Retail; the cutting up again, or division of a commodity into smaller parts.

RETEMENTUM. In old English law. A species of lien; the right to retain possession of a chattel until the lienor is satisfied of his claim upon the article itself or its owner.

RETNENTIA. A retinue, or persons retained by a prince or nobleman. Cowell.

RETIRE. As applied to bills of exchange, this word is ambiguous. It is commonly used of an indorser who takes up a bill by handing the amount to a transferee, after which the indorser holds the instrument with all his remedies intact. But it is sometimes used of an acceptor, by whom, when a bill is taken up or retired at maturity, it is in effect paid, and all the remedies on it extinguished. Byles, Bills, 215. Empire Security Co. v. Berry, 211 Ill.App. 278.

To withdraw from active service as an officer of the army or navy; to separate, withdraw, or remove. State v. Love, 95 Neb. 573, 145 N.W. 1010, 1013, Ann.Cas.1915D, 1078.

RETRAXIT. Lat. He has withdrawn.

The open, public, and voluntary renunciation by the plaintiff, in open court, of his suit or cause of action, and if this is done by the plaintiff, and a judgment entered thereon by the defendant, the plaintiff’s right of action is forever gone. U. S. v. Parker, 7 S.Ct. 454, 120 U.S. 89, 30 L.Ed. 601; Lewis v. Johnson, Cal.App., 80 P.2d 90.

Judgment of Retraxit

One where, after appearance and before judgment, the plaintiff voluntarily enters upon the record that he “withdrew his suit,” whereverupon judgment is rendered against him.

The difference between a retraxit and a nolle prosequi is that a retraxit is a bar to any future action for the same cause; while a nolle prosequi is not, unless made after judgment. Similarly, a retraxit differs from a nonsuit.

RETRAIT TO THE WALL. In the law relating to homicide in self-defense, this phrase means that the party must avail himself of any apparent and reasonable avenues of escape by which his danger might be averted, and the necessity of slaying his assailant avoided. People v. Iams, 57 Cal. 120.

RETRIBUTION. This word is sometimes used in law, though not commonly in modern times, as the equivalent of “recompense,” or a payment or compensation for services, property, use of an estate, or other value received.

A party to a suit, whether plaintiff or defendant; a litigant. This was the ancient sense of the word. Calvin.

A party to a contract. Reus stipulandi, a party stipulating; the party who asked the question in the form prescribed for stipulations. Reus promittendi, a party promising; the party who answered the question.

The report made by the court, body of magistrates, returning board, or other authority charged with the official counting of the votes cast at an election.

In English practice, the election of a member of parliament.

Fair Return

See Fair Return.

False Return

A return to a writ, in which the officer charged with it falsely reports that he served it, when he did not, or makes some other false or incorrect statement, whereby injury results to a person interested. State v. Jenkins, 70 S.W. 152, 170 Mo. 16. In taxation, a return that is incorrect, Du Pont v. Graham, D.C.Del., 283 F. 300, 302, although made in good faith under a mistake of law. Eliot Nat. Bank v. Gill, D.C.Mass., 210 F. 933, 937. Under some statutes, in order to render a return a false return, there must appear, if not a design to mislead or deceive on the part of the taxpayer, at least culpable negligence. Fouts v. State, 149 N.E. 551, 555, 113 Ohio St. 450.

General Return-day

Return Irreplevisable

A writ allowed by the statute of Westm. 2, c. 2, to a defendant who had had judgment upon verdict or demurrer in an action of replevin, or after the plaintiff had, on a writ of second deliverance, become a second time nonsuit in such action. By this writ the goods were returned to the defendant, and the plaintiff was restrained from suing out a fresh replevin. Previously to this statute, an unsuccessful plaintiff might bring actions of replevin in infinitum, in reference to the same matter. 3 Bl.Comm. 150.
REUS EXCIPIENDO FIT ACTOR. The defendant, by excepting or pleading, becomes a plaintiff; that is, where, instead of simply denying the plaintiff’s action, he sets up some new matter in defense, he is bound to establish it by proof, just as a plaintiff is bound to prove his cause of action. Bouvier, Tr. des Preuves, §§ 152, 320; Best, Ev. p. 294, § 252.

REUS LIESZE MAJESTATIS PUNITUR UT PER-EAT UNUS NE PEREANT OMNES. A traitor is punished that one may die lest all perish. 4 Coke, 124.

Revenue Side of the Exchequer

That jurisdiction of the court of exchequer, or of the exchequer division of the high court of justice, by which it ascertains and enforces the proprietary rights of the crown against the subjects of the realm. The practice in revenue cases is not affected by the orders and rules under the judicature act of 1875. Mozley & Whitley.

REVERSAL. The annulling or making void a judgment on account of some error or irregularity. Usually spoken of the action of an appellate court.

International Law

A declaration by which a sovereign promises that he will observe a certain order or certain conditions, which have been once established, notwithstanding any changes that might otherwise cause a deviation therefrom. Bouvier.

REVERSE. To overthrow, vacate, set aside, make void, annul, repeal, or revoke, as to reverse a judgment, sentence or decree, or to change to the contrary or to a former condition. Department of Water and Power of City of Los Angeles v. Inyo Chemical Co., Cal.App., 100 P.2d 822, 826. Securities and Exchange Commission v. C. M. Joiner Leasing Corporation, D.C.Tex., 53 F.Sup. 714, 715.

REVERSER. In Scotch law. The proprietor of an estate who grants a wadset (or mortgage) of his lands, and who has a right, on repayment of the money advanced to him, to be replaced in his right. Bell.

REVERSIBLE ERROR. See Error.

REVERSIO. L. Lat. In old English law. The returning of land to the donor. Fleta, lib. 3, cc.
10, 12.

REVERSIO TER/LE EST TANQUAM TERRA
REVERTENS IN POSSESSIONE DONATORI,
SIVE HJEREDIBUS SUIS POST DONUM FINI-TIM. Co. Litt. 142. A reversion of land is, as it were, the return of the land to the possession of the donor or his heirs after the termination of the estate granted.

REVERSION, or ESTATE IN REVERSION. The residue of an estate left by operation of law in the grantor or his heirs, or in the heirs of a testator, commencing in possession on the determina-

Any future interest left in a transferor or his successor. Miller v. Dierken, 153 Pa.Super. 389, 33 A.2d 804, 805. It is a vested interest or estate, in as much as person entitled to it has a fixed right to future enjoyment. State ex rel. Tozer v.
Probate Court of Washington County, 102 Minn.
268, 113 N.W. 888, 893.

The term reversion has two meanings, first, as designating the estate left in the grantor during the continuance of a particular estate and also the residue left in grantor or his heirs after termination of particular estate. Davidson v. Davidson, 350 Mo. 639, 167 S.W.2d 641,

It differs from a remainder in that it arises by act of the law, whereas a remainder is by act of the parties. A reversion, moreover, is the remnant left in the grantor, whilst a remainder is the remnant of the whole estate disposed of, after a preceding part of the same has been given away. Copenhaver v. Pendleton, 155 Va. 463, 155 S.
E. 802, 806, 77 A.L.R. 324.

Scotch Law

A right of redeeming landed property which has been either mortgaged or adjudicated to secure the payment of a debt. In the former case, the reversion is called "conventional;" in the latter case, it is called "legal;" and the period of seven years allowed for redemption is called the "legal." Bell; Paterson.

Legal reversion. In Scotch law. The period within which a proprietor is at liberty to redeem and adjudged from him for debt.

REVERSIONARY. That which is to be enjoyed in reversion.

REVERSIONARY LEASE. One to take effect in futuro. A second lease, to commence after the expiration of a former lease. Wharton.

REVERSIONER. A person who is entitled to an estate in reversion. By an extension of its meaning, one who is entitled to any future estate or any property in expectancy.

REV ERT. To turn back, to return to. Reichard
v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 231 Iowa 563, 1 N.W.
2d 721, 727.

With respect to property to go back to and lodge in former owner, who parted with it by creating estate in another which has expired, or to his heirs. Petition of Smith, 291 Pa. 129, 139 A.
832, 835.

In a loose way the term "revert to" is sometimes used in a will as the equivalent of "go to," and, where the language of a will so indicates, it will be construed as used to designate the person to whom the testator wished the land to be given. Mastellar v. Atkinson, 94 Kan. 279, 146 P.
367, 368, Ann.Cas.1917B, 502; In re Owens’ Will, 164 Wis.
260, 159 N.W. 906, 907.

REVERTER. Reversion. A possibility of revert-er is that species of reversionary interest which exists when the grant is so limited that it may possibly terminate. 1 Washb. Real Prop. 63. See Formedon in the Reverter.

REVEST. To vest again. A seisin is said to revest, where it is acquired a second time by the party out of whom it has been divested. 1 Rop.
Husb. & Wife, 353. Opposed to "divest." The words "revest" and "divest" are also applicable to the mere right or title, as opposed to the posses-

REVESTIRE. In old European law. To return or resign an investiture, seisin, or possession that has been received; to reinvest; to re-enfeoff.
Spelman.

REVIEW. To re-examine judicially. A reconsideration; second view or examination; revision; consideration for purposes of correction. Used especially of the examination of a cause by an appellate court; and of a second investigation of a proposed public road by a jury of viewers.
Swan v. Justices of Superior Court, 222 Mass. 542, 111 N.E. 386, 389; State v. Griffiths, 137 Wash.
448, 242 P. 969, 970.

Bill of Review

In equity practice. A bill, in the nature of a writ of error, filed to procure an examination and alteration or reversal of a decree made upon a former bill, which decree has been signed and enrolled. Story, Eq. Pl. § 403.

Commission of Review

In English ecclesiastical law. A commission formerly sometimes granted, in extraordinary cases, to revise the sentence of the court of delegates, when it was apprehended they had been led into a material error. 3 Bl.Comm. 67.
Court of Review

In England. A court established by 1 & 2 Wm. IV. c. 56, for the adjudicating upon such matters in bankruptcy as before were within the jurisdiction of the lord chancellor. It was abolished in 1847.

Reviewing Taxation

The re-taxing or re-examining an attorney’s bill of costs by the master. The courts sometimes order the masters to review their taxation, when, on being applied to for that purpose, it appears that items have been allowed or disallowed on some erroneous principle, or under some mistaken impression. 1 Archb. Pr. K. B. 55.

REVISING ASSESSORS. In English law. Two officers elected by the burgesses of non-parliamentary municipal boroughs for the purpose of assisting the mayor in revising the parish burgess lists. Wharton.

REVISING BARRISTERS’ COURTS. In English law. Courts held in the autumn throughout the country, to revise the list of voters for county and borough members of parliament.

Abolished by the Representation of the People Act, 1918, which repealed the statutes under which they existed. Wharton.

REVISION. A re-examination or careful reading over for correction or improvement. State Road Commission of West Virginia v. West Virginia Bridge Commission, 112 W.Va. 514, 166 S.E. 11, 13.

REVISION OF STATUTES. Is more than a restatement of the substance thereof in different language, but implies a re-examination of them, and may constitute a restatement of the law in a corrected or improved form, in which case the statement may be with or without material change, end is substituted for and displaces and repeals the former law as it stood relating to the subjects within its purview. Maclean v. Brodigan, 41 Nev. 468, 172 P. 375; Elite Laundry Co. v. Dunn, 126 W.Va. 858, 30 S.E.2d 454, 458.

REVIVAL. The process of renewing the operative force of a judgment which has remained dormant or unexecuted for so long a time that execution cannot be issued upon it without new process to reanimate it. Havens v. Sea Shore Land Co., 57 N.J.Eq. 142, 41 A. 755.

The act of renewing the legal force of a contract or obligation, which had ceased to be sufficient foundation for an action, on account of the running of the statute of limitations, by giving a new promise or acknowledgment of it.

REVIVE. To renew, revivify; to make one’s self liable for a debt barred by the statute of limitations by acknowledging it; or for a matrimonial offense, once condoned, by committing another. Police Jury of Caddo Parish v. City of Shreveport, 137 La. 1032, 69 So. 828, 831; Maclean v. Brodigan, 41 Nev. 468, 172 P. 375.

REVIVOR, BILL OF. In equity practice. A bill filed for the purpose of reviving or calling into operation the proceedings in a suit when, from some circumstance, (as the death of the plaintiff,) the suit had abated.

REVIVOR, WRIT OF. In English practice. Where it became necessary to revive a judgment, by lapse of time, or change by death, etc., of the parties entitled or liable to execution, the party alleging himself to be entitled to execution might sue out a writ of revivor in the form given in the act, or apply to the court for leave to enter a suggestion upon the roll that it appeared that he was entitled to have and issue execution of the judgment, such leave to be granted by the court or a judge upon a rule to show cause, or a summons, to be served according to the then present practice.

REVOCABLE. Susceptible of being revoked.

REVOCATION. The recall of some power, authority, or thing granted, or a destroying or making void of some deed that had existence until the act of revocation made it void. It may be either general, of all acts and things done before; or special, to revoke a particular thing. 5 Coke, 90. Ford v. Greenawalt, 292 Ill. 121, 126 N.E. 555, 556; O’Hagan v. Kracke, 300 N.Y.S. 351, 361, 165 Misc. 4.

Revocation by act of the party is an intentional or voluntary revocation. The principal instances occur in the case of authorities and powers of attorney and wills.

A revocation in law, or constructive revocation, is produced by a rule of law, irrespective of the intention of the parties. Thus, a power of attorney is in general revoked by the death of the principal. Sweet.

REVOCATION OF PROBATE. Is where probate of a will, having been granted, is afterwards recalled by the court of probate, on proof of a subsequent will, or other sufficient cause.

REVOCATION OF WILL. The recalling, annulling or rendering inoperative an existing will, by some subsequent act of the testator, which may be by the making of a new will inconsistent with the terms of the first, or by destroying the old will, or by disposing of the property to which it related, or otherwise. Boudinot v. Bradford, 2 Dall. 268, 1 L.Ed. 375. Cutler v. Cutler, 130 N.C. 1, 40 S.E. 689, 57 L.R.A. 209, 89 Am.St.Rep. 854.

REVOCA TIONE PARLIAMENT!. An ancient writ for recalling a parliament. 4 Inst. 44.

REVOCA TUR. Lat. It is recalled. This is the term, in English practice, appropriate to signify that a judgment is annulled or set aside for error in fact; if for error in law, it is then said to be reversed.

REVOKE. To annul or make void by recalling or taking back, cancel, rescind, repeal, reverse. O'Hagan v. Kracke, 300 N.Y.S. 351, 362, 165 Misc. 4.

REVOLT. The endeavor of the crew of a vessel, or any one or more of them, to overthrow the legitimate authority of her commander, with intent to remove him from his command, or against his will to take possession of the vessel by assuming the government and navigation of her, or by transferring their obedience from the lawful commander to some other person. United States v. Kelly, 11 Wheat. 417, 6 L.Ed. 508; Hamilton v. U. S., C.C.A. Va., 268 F. 15, 18.

REVOLUTION. A complete overthrow of the established government in any country or state by those who were previously subject to it. Gitlow v. Kiely, D.C.N.Y., 44 F.2d 227, 232.

REVOLUTIONARY, adj. Pertaining to or connected with, characterized by, or of nature of, revolution. Gitlow v. Kiely, D.C.N.Y., 44 F.2d 227, 233.

REWARD. A recompense or premium offered or bestowed by government or an individual in return for special or extraordinary services to be performed, or for special attainments or achievements, or for some act resulting to the benefit of the public; as, a reward for useful services, for the discovery and apprehension of criminals, for the restoration of lost property. Kinn v. First Nat. Bank, 95 N.W. 969, 118 Wis. 537, 99 Am.St. Rep. 1012.

That which is offered or given for some service or attainment; sum of money paid or taken for loing, or for bearing to do, some act. Kirk v. Smith, 48 Mont. 489, 138 P. 1088, 1089.

REWME. In old records. Realm, or kingdom.

REX. Lat. The king. The king regarded as the party prosecuting in a criminal action; as in the form of entitling such actions, "Rex v. Doe."

REX DEBET ESSE SUB LEGE QUIA LEX FACIT REGEM. The king ought to be under the law, because the law makes the king. 1 Bl. Comm. 239.

REX EST LEGALIS ET POLITICOUS. Lane, 27. The king is both a legal and political person.

REX EST LEX VIVENS. Jenk. Cent. 17. The king is the living law.

REX EST MAJOR SINGULIS, MINOR UNIVERSIS. Bract. 1, 1, c. 8. The king is greater than any single person, less than all.

REX HOC SOLUM NON POTE T QUOD NON POTE T INJUSTE AGERE. 11 Coke, 72. The king can do everything but an injustice.

REX NON DEBIT ESSE SUB HOMINE, SED SUB DEO ET SUTE LEGE, QUIA LEX FACIT REGEM. Bract. fol. 5. The king ought to be under no man, but under God and the law, because the law makes a king. Broom, Max. 47.

REX NON POTE T FALLERE NEC FALLI. The king cannot deceive or be deceived. Grounds & Rud. of Law 438.

REX NON POTE T PECCARE. The king cannot do wrong; the king can do no wrong. 2 Rolle, 304. An ancient and fundamental principle of the English constitution. Jenk. Cent. p. 9, case 16; 1 Bl. Comm. 246.

REX 'NUNQUAM MORITUR. The king never dies. Broom, Max. 50; Branch, Max. (5th Ed.) 197; 1 Bl. Comm. 249.

RHANDIR. A part in the division of Wales before the Conquest; every township comprehending four gavels, and every gavel had four rhandirs, and four houses or tenements constituted every rhandir. Tayl. Hist. Ga.

RHODIAN LAWS. The earliest code or collection of maritime laws. It was formulated by the people of the island of Rhodes, who, by their commercial prosperity and the superiority of their navies, had acquired the sovereignty of the seas. Its date is very uncertain, but is supposed (by Kent and others) to be about 900 B. C. Nothing of it is now extant except the article on jettison, which has been preserved in the Roman collections or Pandects (Dig. 14, 2; 3 Kent, Comm. 232, 233 'Lex Rhodia de Jactu."

The Lex Rhodia de Jactu provided that when the goods of an owner are thrown overboard for the safety of the ship or of the property of other owners, he becomes entitled to a ratable contribution. It has been adopted into the law of all civilized nations. Campbell, Rom. L. 137. Another code, under the same name, was published in more modern times, but is generally considered, by the best authorities, to be spurious. Schomberg, Mar. Laws Rhodes, 37, 38; 3 Kent, Comm. 3, 4; Azuni, Mar. Law, 265-296.

RIAL. A piece of gold coin current for 10s., in the reign of Henry VI., at which time there were half-rials and quarter-rials or rial-farthings. In the beginning of Queen Elizabeth's reign, golden rials were coined at 15s. a piece; and in the time of James L there were rose-rials of gold at 30s. and spur-rials at 15s. Lown. Essay Coins, 38.
RIBAUD. A rogue; vagrant; whoremonger; a person given to all manner of wickedness. Cowell.

RIBBONMEN. Associations or secret societies formed in Ireland, having for their object the dispossessions of landlords by murder and fire-raising. Wharton.

RICHARD ROE, otherwise TROUBLESOME. The casual ejector and fictitious defendant in ejectment, whose services are no longer invoked.

RIENS LOUR DEUST. Not their debt. The old form of the plea of nil debet. 2 Reeve, Eng. Law, 332.

RIENS PASSA PER LE FAIT. Nothing passed by the deed. A plea by which a party might avoid the operation of a deed, which had been enrolled or acknowledged in court; the plea of non est factum, not being allowed in such case.

RIENS PER DESCENT. Nothing by descent. The plea of an heir, where he is sued for his ancestor's debt, and has no land from him by descent, or assets in his hands. Cro. Car. 151; 1 Tidd, Pr. 645; 2 Tidd, Pr. 937.

RIER COUNTY. In old English law. After-county; i.e., after the end of the county court. A time and place appointed by the sheriff for the receipt of the king's money after the end of his county, or county court. Cowell.

RIFLETUM. A coppice or thicket. Cowell.

RIGA. In old European law. A species of servitude and tribute rendered to their lords by agricultural tenants. Supposed by Spelman to be derived from the name of a certain portion of land, called, in England, a "rig" or "ridge," an elevated piece of ground, formed out of several furrows. Burrill.

RIGG THE MARKET. A term of the stock-exchange, denoting the practice of inflating the price of given stocks, or enhancing their quoted value, by a system of pretended purchases, designed to give the air of an unusual demand for such stocks. L. R. 13 Eq. 447.

RIGHT. As a noun, and taken in an abstract sense, justice, ethical correctness, or consonance with the rules of law or the principles of morals. In this signification it answers to one meaning of the Latin "jus," and serves to indicate law in the abstract, considered as the foundation of all rights, or the complex of underlying moral principles which impart the character of justice to all positive law, or give it an ethical content.

As a noun, and taken in a concrete sense, a power, privilege, faculty, or demand, inherent in one person and incident upon another. "Rights" are defined generally as "powers of free action." And the primal rights pertaining to men are undoubtedly enjoyed by human beings purely as such, being grounded in personality, and existing antecedently to their recognition by positive law. But leaving the abstract moral sphere, and giving to the term a juristic content, a "right" is well defined as "a capacity residing in one man of controlling, with the assent and assistance of the state, the actions of others." Holl. Jur. 69.

The noun substantive "a right" signifies that which jurists denominate a "faculty"; that which resides in a determinate person, by virtue of a given law, and which avails against a person (or answers to a duty lying on a person) other than the person in whom it resides. And the noun substantive "rights" is the plural of the noun substantive "a right." But the expression "right," when it is used as an adjective, is equivalent to the adjective
"just," as the adverb "rightly" is equivalent to the adverb "justly." And, when used as the abstract name corresponding to the adjective "right," the noun substantive "right" is synonymous with the noun substantive "justice." Aust.Jur. § 264, not.

In a narrower signification, an interest or title in an object of property; a just and legal claim to hold, use, or enjoy it, or to convey or donate it, as he may please. See Co. Litt. 345a.

The term "right," in civil society, is defined to mean that which a man is entitled to have, or to do, or to receive from others within the limits prescribed by law. Atehison & N. R. Co. v. Baty, 6 Neb. 40, 29 Am.Rep. 356.

That which one person ought to have or receive from another, it being withheld from him, or not in his possession. In this sense "right" has the force of "claim," and is properly expressed by the Latin "jus." Lord Coke considers this to be the proper signification of the word, especially in writs and pleadings, where an estate is turned to a right; as by discontinuance, disseisin, etc. Co. Litt. 345a.

See, also, Droit; Jus; Recht.

Classification

Rights may be described as perfect or imperfect, according as their action or scope is clear, settled, and determinate, or is vague and undefined.

Rights are either in personam or in rem. A right in personam is one which imposes an obligation on a definite person. A right in rem is one which imposes an obligation on persons generally; 1. e., either on all the world or on all the world except certain determinate persons. Thus, if I am entitled to exclude all persons from a given piece of land, I have a right in rem in respect of that land; and, if there are one or more persons, A., B., and C., whom I am not entitled to exclude from it, my right is still a right in rem. Sweet.

Rights may also be described as either primary or secondary. Primary rights are those which can be created without reference to rights already existing. Secondary rights can only arise for the purpose of protecting or enforcing primary rights. They are either preventive (protective) or remedial (reparative.) Sweet.

Preventive or protective secondary rights exist in order to prevent the infringement or loss of primary rights. They are judicial when they require the assistance -of a court of law for their enforcement, and extrajudicial when they are capable of being exercised by the party himself. Remedial or reparative secondary rights are also either judicial or extrajudicial. They may further be divided into (1) rights of restitution or restoration, which entitle the person injured to be replaced in his original position; (2) rights of enforcement, which entitle the person injured to the performance of an act by the person bound; and (3) rights of satisfaction or compensation. Sweet.

With respect to the ownership of external objects of property, rights may be classed as absolute and qualified. An absolute right gives to -the person in whom it inheres the uncontrolled dominion over the object at all times and for all purposes. A qualified right gives the possessor a right to the object for certain purposes or under certain circumstances only. Such is the right of a bailee to recover the article bailed when it has been unlawfully taken from him by a stranger.

Rights are also either legal or equitable. The former is the case where the person seeking to enforce the right for his own benefit has the legal title and a remedy at law. The latter are such as are enforceable only in equity; as, at the suit of cestui que trust.

Constitutional Law

There is also a classification of rights, with respect to the constitution of civil society. Thus, according to Blackstone, "the rights of persons, considered in their natural capacities, are of two sorts,—absolute and relative; absolute, which are such as appertain and belong to particular men, merely as individuals or single persons; relative, which are incident to them as members of society, and standing in various relations to each other." 1 Bl. Comm. 123. Johnson v. Johnson, 32 Ala. 637; People v. Berberrich, 20 Barb, (N. Y.) 224.

Rights are also classified in constitutional law as natural, civil, and political, to which there is sometimes added the class of "personal rights."

Natural rights are those which grow out of the nature of man and depend upon personality, as distinguished from such as are created by law and depend upon civilized society; or they are those which are plainly assured by natural law (Borden v. State, 11 Ark. 519, 44 Am.Dec. 217) ; or those which, by fair deduction from the present physical, moral, social, and religious characteristics of man, he must be invested with, and which he ought to have realized for him in a jural society, in order to fulfill the ends to which his nature calls him. 1 Woolsey, Politi. Science, p. 26. Such are the rights of life, liberty, privacy, and good reputation. See Black, Const. Law (3d Ed.) 523.

Civil rights are such as belong to every citizen of the state or country, or, in a wider sense, to all its inhabitants, and are not connected with the organization or administration of government. They include the rights of property, marriage, protection by the laws, freedom of contract, trial by jury, etc. Winnett v. Adams, 71 Neb. 817, 99 N.W. 681. Or, as otherwise defined, civil rights are rights appertaining to a person in virtue of his citizenship in a state or community. Rights capable of being enforced or redressed in a civil action. Also a term applied to certain rights secured to citizens of the United States by the thirteenth and fourteenth amendments to the constitution, and by various acts of congress made in pursuance thereof. State of Iowa v. Railroad Co., C.C.Iowa, 37 F. 498, 3 L.R.A. 554; State v. Powers, 51 N.J.L. 432, 17 A. 969.

Political rights consist in the power to participate, directly or indirectly, in the establishment or administration of government, such as the right of citizenship, that of suffrage, the right to hold
RIGHT

Personal rights is a term of rather vague import, but generally it may be said to mean the right of personal security, comprising those of life, limb, body, health, reputation, and the right of personal liberty.

As an Adjective
The term "right" means just, morally correct, consonant with ethical principles or rules of positive law. It is the opposite of wrong, unjust, illegal.

Old English Law
The term denoted an accusation or charge of crime. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 66 F.

Other Compound and Descriptive Terms
Base right. In Scotch law, a subordinate right; the right of a subvassal in the lands held by him. Bell.

Common right. See Common.

Declaration of rights. See Bill of Rights, under Bill.

Existing right. See Existing Right.

Marital rights. See Marital.

Mere right. In the law of real estate, the mere right of property in land; the right of a proprietor, but without possession or even the right of possession; the abstract right of property.

Petition of right. See Petition.

Private rights. Those rights which appertain to a particular individual or individuals, and relate either to the person, or to personal or real property. 1 Chit. Gen. Pr. 3.

The term "private right," as used with reference to the right of a person to injunctive relief, is used as a mere distinguishing term from "public right," and not as meaning any particular monopolistic right. Long v. Southern Express Co., D.C.Fla., 201 F. 441, 444. "Private rights" of a municipal corporation, as effecting the running of the statute of limitations, are such as only that part of the municipality included within the corporate limits of a municipality are interested in. Board of Com'r's of Woodward County v. Willett, 49 Okl. 254, 152 P. 365, 366, L.R.A. 1916B, 92.

Real right. In Scotch law. That which entitles him who is vested with it to possess the subject as his own, and, if in the possession of another, to demand from him its actual possession. Real rights affect the subject itself; personal are founded in obligation. Erskine, Inst. 3, 1, 2.

Right heir. See Heir.

Riparian rights. See Riparian.

Vested rights. See Vested.

Writ of right. A procedure for the recovery of real property after not more than sixty years' adverse possession; the highest writ in the law, sometimes called, to distinguish it from others of the droitural class, the "writ of right proper." Abolished by 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 27. 3 Steph. Comm. 392.

Writ of right close. An abolished writ which lay for tenants in ancient demesne, and others of a similar nature, to try the right of their lands and tenements in the court of the lord exclusively.

1 Steph. Comm. 224.

RIGHT AND WRONG TEST. Under "this test" if, at the time of committing an act, the party was laboring under such a defect of reason from disease of the mind as not to know the nature and quality of the act he was doing, or if he did know the nature and quality thereof, that he did not know that he was doing what was wrong, he should not be held responsible under the criminal law. State v. Wallace, 170 Or. 60, 131 P.2d 222, 229, 230.

RIGHT IN ACTION. This is a phrase frequently used in place of chose in action, and having an identical meaning.

RIGHT IN COURT. See Rectus in Curia.

RIGHT OF ACTION. The right to bring suit: a legal right to maintain an action, growing out of a given transaction or state of facts and based thereon. Hibbard v. Clark, 56 N.H. 155, 22 Am. Rep. 442; Webster v. County Com'r's, 63 Me. 29.

By the old writers the phrase is commonly used to denote that a person has lost a right of entry, and has nothing but a right of action left. Co.Litt. 363b.

RIGHT OF DISCUSSION. In Scotch law. The right which the cautioner (surety) has to insist that the creditor shall do his best to compel the performance of the contract by the principal debtor, before he shall be called upon. 1 Bell, Comm. 347.

RIGHT OF DIVISION. In Scotch law. The right which each of several cautioners (sureties) has to refuse to answer for more than his own share of the debt. To entitle the cautioner to this right the other cautioners must be solvent, and there must be no words in the bond to exclude it. 1 Bell, Comm. 347.

RIGHT OF ENTRY. The right of taking or resuming possession of land by entering on it in a peaceable manner.

RIGHT OF HABITATION. In Louisiana. The right to occupy another man's house as a dwelling, without paying rent or other compensation. Civ.Code La. art. 627.

RIGHT OF LOCAL SELF–GOVERNMENT. Power of citizens to govern themselves, as to matters purely local in nature, through officers of their own selection. City of Ardmore v. Excise Board of Carter County, 155 Okl. 126, 8 P.2d 2, 11.
RIGHT OF POSSESSION. Which may reside in one man, while another has the actual possession, being the right to enter and turn out such actual occupant; e. g., the right of a disseisee. An apparent right of possession is one which may be defeated by a better; an actual right of possession, one which will stand the test against all opponents. 2 Bl. Comm. 196; Cahill v. Pine Creek Oil Co., 38 Okl. 568, 134 P. 64, 65.

RIGHT OF PRIVACY. See Privacy.

RIGHT OF PROPERTY. The mere right of property in land; the abstract right which remains to the owner after he has lost the right of possession, and to recover which the writ of right was given. United with possession, and the right of possession, this right constitutes a complete title to lands, tenements, and hereditaments. 2 Bl. Comm. 197.

RIGHT OF REDEMPTION. The right to disen- cumber property or to free it from a claim or lien; specifically, the right (granted by statute only) to free property from the incumbrance of a foreclosure or other judicial sale, or to recover the title passing thereby, by paying what is due, with interest, costs, etc. Not to be confounded with the “equity of redemption,” which exists independently of statute but must be exercised before sale. Mayer v. Farmers’ Bank, 44 Iowa 216; Millett v. Mullen, 95 Me. 400, 49 A. 871. Western Land & Cattle Co. v. National Bank of Arizona at Phoenix, 28 Ariz. 270, 236 P. 725, 726.

RIGHT OF RELIEF. In Scotch law. The right of a cautioner (surety) to demand reimbursement from the principal debtor when he has been compelled to pay the debt. 1 Bell, Comm. 347.

RIGHT OF REPRESENTATION AND PERFORMANCE. By the acts 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 15, and 5 & 6 Vict. c. 45, the author of a play, opera, or musical composition, or his assignee, has the sole right of representing or causing it to be represented in public at any place in the British dominions during the same period as the copyright in the work exists. The right is distinct from the copyright, and requires to be separately registered. Sweet.

RIGHT OF SEARCH. In international law. The right of one vessel, on the high seas, to stop a vessel of another nationality and examine her papers and (in some cases) her cargo. Thus, in time of war, a vessel of either belligerent has the right to search a neutral ship, encountered at sea, to ascertain whether the latter is carrying contraband goods.

RIGHT OF WAY. The right of passage or of way is a servitude imposed by law or by convention, and by virtue of which one has a right to pass on foot, or horseback, or in a vehicle, to drive beasts of burden or carts, through the estate of another. When this servitude results from the law, the exercise of it is confined to the wants of the person who has it. When it is the result of a contract, its extent and the mode of using it is regulated by the contract. Civ.Code La. art. 722.

"Right of way," in its strict meaning, is the right of passage over another man’s ground; and in its legal and generally accepted meaning, in reference to a railway, it is a mere easement in the lands of others, obtained by lawful condemnation to public use or by purchase. It would be using the term in an unusual sense, by applying it to an absolute purchase of the fee-simple of lands to be used for a railway or any other kind of a way. Williams v. Western Union Ry. Co., 50 Wis. 76, 5 N.W. 482. And see Kripp v. Curtis, 71 Cal. 62, 11 P. 879; Stuyvesant v. Woodruff, 21 N.J.L. 136, 57 Am. Dec. 156.

"Right of way" has a twofold significance, being sometimes used to mean the mere intangible right to cross, a right of crossing, a right of way, and often used to otherwise indicate that strip of land which a railroad appropriates to its own use, and upon which it builds its roadbed. Marion, B. & E. Traction Co. v. Simmons, 180 Ind. 289, 102 N.E. 132.

The "right of way" is a space of conventional width for one or more railroad tracks, while a "railroad yard" might be extended indefinitely. City of New York v. New York & H. R. Co., Sup., 169 N.Y.S. 12, 14.

RIGHT PATENT. An obsolete writ, which was brought for lands and tenements, and not for an advowson, or common, and lay only for an estate in fee-simple, and not for him who had a lesser estate; as tenant in tail, tenant in frank marriage, or tenant for life. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 1.

RIGHT TO BEGIN. On the hearing or trial of a cause, or the argument of a demurrer, petition, etc., the right to begin is the right of first address- ing the court or jury. The right to begin is frequently of importance, as the counsel who begins has also the right of replying or having the last word after the counsel on the opposite side has addressed the court or jury. Sweet.

RIGHT TO REDEEM. Right of redemption, which title see.

RIGHTS OF PERSONS. Rights which concern and are annexed to the persons of men. 1 Bl. Comm. 122.

RIGHTS OF THINGS. Such as a man may acquire over external objects, or things unconnected with his person. 1 Bl. Comm. 122.

RIGHTS, PETITION OF. See Petition.

RIGOR JURIS. Lat. Strictness of law. Latch, 150. Distinguished from gratia curice, favor of the court.

RIGOR MORTIS. In medical jurisprudence. Cadaveric rigidity; a rigidity or stiffening of the muscular tissue and joints of the body, which sets in at a greater or less interval after death, but usually within a few hours, and which is one of the recognized tests of death.

RING. A clique; an exclusive combination of persons for illegitimate or selfish purposes; as to control elections or political affairs, distribute offices, obtain contracts, control the market or the stock-exchange, etc. Schomberg v. Walker, 132 Cal. 224, 64 P. 290.
RIOT ACT. A celebrated English statute, which or tumultuous manner, assemble together to do an unlawfully assembled and disturbing the peace, any sheriff, under-sheriff, justice of the peace, or mayor, by proclamation, command them to disperse, (which is familiarly called "reading the riot act," and that if they refuse to obey, and re-maintain together for the space of one hour after such proclamation, they are all guilty of felony. The act is 1 Geo. I, St. 2, c. 5.

RIOTER. One who encourages, promotes, or 49, 89 P.2d 970, 974.

RIOTOSE. L. Lat. Riotously. A formal and essential word in old indictments for riots. 2 Strange, 834.

RIOTOUS ASSEMBLY. In English criminal law.

The unlawful assembling of twelve persons or more, to the disturbance of the peace, and not dispersing upon proclamation. 4 Bl. Comm. 142;
4 Steph. Comm. 273. And see Madisonville v.
Bishop, 113 Ky. 106, 67 S.W. 269, 57 L.R.A. 130.

RIOTOUSLY. A technical word, properly used in indictments for riot. It of itself implies force and violence. 2 Chit. Crim. Law, 489.

RIPA. Lat. The banks of a river, or the place beyond which the waters do not in their natural course overflow.

RIPARIA. A medieval Latin word, which Lord
Coke takes to mean water running between two banks; in other places it is rendered "bank."

RIPARIAN. Belonging or relating to the bank of a river; or on the bank. Land lying beyond the natural watershed of a stream is not "riparian." Bathgate v. Irvine, 126 Cal. 135, 58 P. 442, 77 Am.St.Rep. 158. Town of Gordonsville v. Zinn,

The term is sometimes used as relating to the shore of the sea or other tidal water, or of a lake or other considerable body of water not having the character of a watercourse. But this is not accurate. The proper word to be employed in such connections is "littoral."

RIPARIAN NATIONS. In international law.
Those who possess opposite banks or different parts of banks of one and the same river.

RIPARIAN OWNER. A riparian proprietor; one who, owns land on the bank of a river. Met-tier v. Ames Realty Co., 61 Mont. 152, 201 P. 702, 703. See, also, Littoral.

RIPARIAN PROPRIETOR. An owner of land, bounded generally upon a stream of water, and as such having a qualified property in the soil to the thread of the stream with the privileges annexed thereto by law. Potomac Steamboat Co.
U.S. 672, 27 L.Ed. 1070.

RIPARIAN RIGHTS. The rights of the owners of lands on the banks of watercourses, relating to the water, its use, ownership of soil under the stream, accretions, etc. Mobile Transp. Co. v.
Mobile, 128 Ala. 335, 30 So. 645, 64 L.R.A. 333, 86

Generally speaking such rights are : (1) Use of water for general purposes, as bathing and domestic use; (2) to wharf out to navigability ; (3) access to navigable waters.
1238.
RIPARIAN WATER. Water which is below the highest line of normal flow of the river, or stream, as distinguished from flood water. Humphreys-Mexia Co. v. Arseneaux, 116 Tex. 603, 297 S.W. 225, 229, 53 A.L.R. 1147; Motl v. Boyd, 116 Tex. 82, 286 S.W. 458, 468.

RIPARIAN USUS PUBLICUS EST JURE GENTIUM, SICUT IPSIUS FLUMINIS. The use of river-banks is by the law of nations public, like that of the stream itself. Dig. 1, 8, 5, pr.; Fleta, 1, 3, c. 1, § 5.

RIPE FOR JUDGMENT. A suit, when it is so far advanced, by verdict, default, confession, the determination of all pending motions, or other disposition of preliminary or disputed matters, that nothing remains for the court but to render the appropriate judgment. Hosmer v. Hoitt, 161 Mass. 173, 36 N.E. 835.

RIPTOWELL, or REAPTOWEL. A gratuity or reward given to tenants after they had reaped their lord’s corn, or done other customary duties. Cowell.

RIPUARIAN. An ancient code of laws by which the Ripuarii, a tribe of Franks who occupied the country upon the Rhine, the Meuse, and the Scheldt, were governed. They were first reduced to writing by Theodoric, king of Austrasia, and completed by Dagobert. Spelman.

RIPUARIAN PROPRIETORS. Owners of lands bounded by a river or watercourse.

RISCUS. L. Lat. In the civil law. A chest for the keeping of clothing. Calvin.

RISING OF COURT. Properly the final adjournment of the court for the term, though the term is also sometimes used to express the cessation of judicial business for the day or for a recess; it is the opposite of “sitting” or “session.” State v. Weaver, 11 Neb. 163, 8 N.W. 385.

RISK. In insurance law; the danger or hazard of a loss of the property insured; the casualty contemplated in a contract of insurance; the degree of hazard; a specified contingency or peril; and, colloquially, the specific house, factory, ship, etc., covered by the policy. People ex rel. Daily Credit Service Corporation v. May, 147 N.Y.S. 487, 489, 162 App.Div. 215; Old Colony Trust Co. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.1, 102 F.2d 380, 382.

Assumption of risk. See that title.

Obvious risk. See Obvious.

Perceivable risk. See Perceivable.

RISK INCIDENT TO EMPLOYMENT. Within Workmen’s Compensation Acts, one growing out of or connected with what workman must do in fulfilling his contract of service, and may be either ordinary risk, directly connected with employment, or extraordinary risk indirectly connected with employment because of its special nature. Belyus v. Wilkinson, Gaddis & Co., 115 N.J.L. 43, 178 A. 181, 184. Olson Drilling Co. v. Industrial Commission, 386 Ill. 402, 54 N.E.2d 452, 454.

RISK OF NAVIGATION. Not the equivalent of "perils of navigation," but is of more comprehensive import than the latter. Pitcher v. Hennessy, 48 N.Y. 419.

RISTOURNE. Fr. In insurance law; the dissolution of a policy or contract of insurance for any cause. Emerig. Traite des Assur. c. 16.

RITE. Lat. Duly and formally; legally; properly; technically.

RIVAGE. In French law. The shore, as of the sea.

In English law. A toll anciently paid to the crown for the passage of boats or vessels on certain rivers. Cowell.

RIVEARE. To have the liberty of a river for fishing and fowling. Cowell.

RIVER. A natural stream of water, of greater volume than a creek or rivulet, flowing in a more or less permanent bed or channel, between defined banks or walls, with a current which may either be continuous in one direction or affected by the ebb and flow of the tide. Alabama v. Georgia, 23 How. 513, 16 L.Ed. 556; Motl v. Boyd, 116 Tex. 82, 286 S.W. 458, 467.

Rivers are public or private; and of public rivers some are navigable and others not. The common-law distinction is that navigable rivers are those only wherein the tide ebbs and flows. But, in modern usage, any river is navigable which affords passage to ships and vessels, irrespective of its being affected by the tide.

Public river. A river capable in its natural state of some useful service to the public because of its existence as such, navigability being not the sole test. St. Regis Paper Co. v. New Hampshire Water Resources Board, 92 N.H. 164, 26 A.2d 832, 838.

RIVER BANKS. The boundaries which confine the water to its channel throughout the entire width when stream is carrying its maximum quantity of water. Mammoth Gold Dredging Co. v. Forbes, 39 Cal.App.2d 739, 104 P.2d 131, 137.

RIXA. Lat. In the civil law. A quarrel; a strife of words. Calvin.

RIXATRIX. In old English law. A scold; a scolding or quarrelsome woman. 4 Bl. Comm. 168.

ROAD. A highway; an open way or public passage; a line of travel or communication extending from one town or place to another; a strip of land appropriated and used for purposes of travel and communication between different places. Shannon v. Martin, 164 Ga. 872, 139 S.E. 671, 672, 54 A.L.R. 1246; San Francisco-Oakland Terminal Rys. v. Alameda County, 66 Cal.App. 77, 225 P. 304, 305. For "Farm-To-Market Roads," see that title.

In maritime law. An open passage of the sea that receives its denomination commonly from some part adjacent, which, though it lie out at sea, yet, in respect of the situation of the land adjacent, and the depth and wideness of the place, is a safe place for the common riding or anchoring of ships; as Dover road, Kirkley road, etc. Hale de Jure Mar. pt. 2, c. 2; The Cuzco, D.C. Wash., 225 F. 169, 176.

In its specific application, the phrase "law of the road" refers to the rule which requires that vehicles meeting shall turn to the right in passing, or keep to the right of the middle of the highway. Blashfield, Cyc. of Automobile Law and Prac., Perm. Ed., §§ 636, 891.

Private road. This term has various meanings: (1) A road, the soil of which belongs to the owner of the land which it traverses, but which is burdened with a right of way. Morgan v. Livingston, 6 Mart. 0. S. (La.) 231. (2) A neighborhood way, not commonly used by others than the people of the neighborhood, though it may be used by any one having occasion. State v. Mobley, 1 McMul. (S.C.) 44. (3) A road intended for the use of one or more private individuals, and not wanted nor intended for general public use, which may be opened across the lands of other persons by statutory authority in some states. Madera County v. Raymond Granite Co., 139 Cal. 128, 72 P. 915. (4) A road which is only open for the benefit of certain individuals to go from and to their homes for the service of their lands and for the use of some estates exclusively.

Public road. A highway; a road or way established and adopted (or accepted as a dedication) by the proper authorities for the use of the general public, and over which every person has a right to pass and to use it for all purposes of travel or transportation to which it is adapted and devoted. State ex rel. Clay County v. Hackmann, 270 Mo. 658, 195 S.W. 706, 708; Schier v. State, 96 Ohio St. 245, 117 N.E. 229.

ROAD DISTRICTS. Public or quasi municipal corporations organized or authorized by statutory authority in many of the states for the special purpose of establishing, maintaining, and caring for public roads and highways within their limits, sometimes invested with powers of local taxation, and generally having elective officers styled "overseers" or "commissioners" of roads. Farmer v. Myles, 106 La. 333, 30 So. 858; San Bernardino County v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 137 Cal. 659, 70 P. 782; Madden v. Lancaster County, C.C.A. Neb., 65 F. 191, 12 C.C.A. 566.

ROAD HOG. As applied to automobilists means that they selfishly occupy portions of the road which belong to others. Blue's Truck Line v. Harwell, 59 Ga.App. 305, 200 S.E. 500, 502.

ROAD TAX. A tax for the maintenance and repair of the public roads within the particular jurisdiction, levied either in money or in the form of so many days' labor on the public roads exacted of all the inhabitants of the district. See Lewin v. State, 77 Ala. 46.

ROADBED. The whole material laid in place and ready for travel. Menut & Parks Co. v. Cray, 114 Vt. 41, 39 A.2d 342, 345, 156 A.L.R. 404.

ROADSTEAD. In maritime law. A known general station for ships, notoriously used as such, and distinguished by the name; and not any spot where an anchor will find bottom and fix itself. 1 C. Rob. Adm. 232.

ROB. To take personality in possession of another from his person or his presence, feloniously and against his will, by violence or by putting him in fear. People v. Flohr, 30 Cal.App.2d 576, 86 P.2d 862, 864.

ROBBER. One who commits a robbery. The term is not in law synonymous with "thief," but applies only to one who steals with force or open violence. De Rothschild v. Royal Mail Steam Packet Co., 7 Exch. 742; The Manitoba, D.C.N.Y., 104 F. 151.

ROBBERY. Felonious taking of personal property in the possession of another, from his person or immediate presence, and against his will, accomplished by means of force or fear. 1 Hawk. P. C. 25; 4 Bl. Comm. 243; United States v. Jones, 3 Wash. C. C. 209, F.Cas.No.15,494; Armstrong v. Commonwealth, 190 Ky. 217, 227 S.W. 162, 163; Robards v. State, 37 Okl.Cr. 371, 259 P. 166, 168. Where a person, either with violence or with threats of injury, and putting the person robbed in fear, takes and carries away a thing which is on the body, or in the immediate presence of the person from whom it is taken, under such circumstances that, in the absence of violence or threats, the act committed would be a theft. Steph. Crim. Dig. 208; 2 Russ. Crimes, 78. And see, further, State v. Osborne, 116 Iowa 479, 89 N.W. 1077. Thomas v. State, 91 Ala. 34, 9 So. 81.

Generally speaking, the elements of "robbery" are the taking of personal property or money from the person or presence of another by actual or constructive force without his consent and with the animus furandi or intent to steal. Robbery may thus be said to be a compound larceny, composed of the crime of larceny from the person with the aggravation of force, actual or constructive, used in the taking. Williams v. Mayo, 126 Fla. 871, 172 So. 86, 87.

Highway Robbery. The crime of robbery committed upon or near a public highway. State v. Brown, 113 N.C. 645, 18 S.E. 51; Anderson v. Hartford Accident & Indemnity Co., 247 P. 507, 510, 77 Cal.App. 641; The felonious and forcible taking of property from the person of another on a highway. State v. Holt, 192 N.C. 490, 135 S.E. 324, 325. It differs from robbery in general only in the place where it is committed. Robbery by hold-up originally applied to the stopping and robbery of traveling parties, but the term has acquired a broader meaning. It has come to be applied to robbery in general, by the use of force or putting in fear. Duluth St. Ry. Co. v. Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland, 136 Minn. 299, 161 N.W. 595, 596, L.R.A. 1917D, 684. In England, by St. 23 Hen. VIII. c. 1, this was made felony without benefit of clergy, while robbery committed elsewhere was less severely punished. The distinction was abolished by St. 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 9, and in this country it has never prevailed generally.

ROBE. Fr. A word anciently used by sailors for the cargo of a ship. The Italian "roba" had the same meaning.

ROBERDSMEN. In old English law. Persons who, in the reign of Richard I., committed great outrages on the borders of England and Scotland. Said to have been the followers of Robert Hood, or Robin Hood. 4 Bl. Comm. 246.

ROD. A lineal measure of sixteen feet and a half, otherwise called a "perch."

ROD KNIGHTS. In feudal law. Certain servants who held their land by serving their lords on horseback. Cowell.

ROD LICENSE. In Canadian law, a license, granted on payment of a tax or fee, permitting the licensee to angle for fish (particularly salmon) which are otherwise protected or preserved.

ROGARE. Lat. In Roman law. To ask or solic- it. Rogare legem, to ask for the adoption of a law, i.e., to propose it for enactment, to bring in a bill. In a derivative sense, to vote for a law so proposed; to adopt or enact it.

ROGATIO. Lat. In Roman law. An asking for a law; a proposal of a law for adoption or passage. Derivatively, a law passed by such a form.

ROGATIO TESTIUM. This in making a notu- cupative will, is where the testator formally calls upon the persons present to bear witness that he has declared his will. Williams' Ex'rs, 116; Browne, Prob. Pr. 59.

ROGATION WEEK. In English ecclesiastical law. The second week before Whitsunday, thus called from three fasts observed therein, the Mon- day, Tuesday, and Wednesday, called "Rogation days," because of the extraordinary prayers then made for the fruits of the earth, or as a prepara- tion for the devotion of Holy Thursday. Wharton.

ROGATIONES, QUESTIONES, ET POSITIONES DEBENT ESSE SIMPLICES. Hob. 143. Demands, questions, and claims ought to be simple.

ROGATOR. Lat. In Roman law. The proposer of a law or rogation.

ROGATORY LETTERS. A commission from one judge to another requesting him to examine a witness. See Letter.

ROGATION TESTIUM. This in making a non- cupative will, is where the testator formally calls upon the persons present to bear witness that he has declared his will. Williams' Ex'rs, 116; Browne, Prob. Pr. 59.

In modern practice, the term is sometimes used to denote a record of the proceedings of a court or public office.

Thus, in English practice, the roll of parchment on which the issue is entered is termed the "Issue roll." So the rolls of a manor, wherein the names, rents, and services of the tenants are copied and enrolled, are termed the "court rolls." There are also various other rolls; as those which contain the records of the court of chancery, those which contain the registers of the proceedings of old parliaments, called "rolls of parliament," etc. Brown.

Assessment Roll

In taxation, the list or roll of taxable persons and property, completed, verified, and deposited by the assessors. Bank v. Genoa, 28 Misc. 71, 59 N.Y.S. 829; Adams v. Brennan, 72 Miss. 894, 18 So. 482.

Judgment Roll

In English practice. A roll of parchment con- taining the entries of the proceedings in an action at law to the entry of judgment inclusive, and which is filed in the treasury of the court. 1 Arch. Pr. K. B. 227, 228; 2 Tidd, Pr. 931; Pettis v. Johnston, 78 Okl. 277, 190 P. 681, 700. A record made of the issue roll (q, v.), which, after final judgment has been given in the cause, as- sumes this name. Steph. Pl. Andr. ed. § 97; 3 Chitty, Stat. 514; Freem. Judg. § 75. The Judi- cature Act of 1875 requires every judgment to be entered in a book by the proper officer.

It has been abolished, as such, in New Jersey; Jennings v. Philadelphia & R. Co., C.C.N.J., 23 F. 569, 571. There is said to be hopeless confusion in the cases in this coun- try as to what constitutes the judgment roll. All the cases agree that the complaint, the summons and, most of them, the return on the summons, the affidavit for publi- cation in case of constructive service, and papers of that sort are included therein; Terry v. Gibson, 23 Colo.App. 273, 128 P. 1127, 1128, citing many cases, and also 1 Gr. Evid. 511, and Freem. Judg. § 78; Madsen v. Hodson, 69 Utah 527, 256 P. 792, 793. See the title Roll.

ROLL

Rolls of Parliament
The manuscript registers of the proceedings of old parliaments; in these rolls are likewise a great many decisions of difficult points of law, which were frequently, in former times, referred to the determination of this supreme court by the judges of both benches, etc.

Rolls of the Exchequer
There are several in this court relating to the revenue of the country.

Rolls of the Temple
In English law. In each of the two Temples is a roll called the "calves-head roll," wherein every bencher, barrister, and student is taxed yearly; also meals to the cook and other officers of the houses, in consideration of a dinner of calves-head, provided in Easter term. Orig. Jur. 199.

Rolls Office of the Chancery
In English law. An office in Chancery Lane, London, which contains rolls and records of the high court of chancery, the master whereof is the second person in the chancery, etc. The rolls court was there held, the master of the rolls sitting as judge; and that judge still sits there as a judge of the chancery division of the high court of justice. Wharton.

Tax Roll
A schedule or list of the persons and property subject to the payment of a particular tax, with the amounts severally due, prepared and authenticated in proper form to warrant the collecting officers to proceed with the enforcement of the tax. Babcock v. Beaver Creek Tp., 64 Mich. 601, 31 N. W. 423; Smith v. Scully, 66 Kan. 139, 71 P. 249.

ROLLING. En route; on way to destination; in transit. Sales of goods are often made "rolling" f. o. b. a designated place. Vaccaro Bros. & Co. v. Farris, 92 W.Va. 655, 115 S.E. 830.

ROLLING STOCK. The portable or movable apparatus and machinery of a railroad, particularly such as moves on the road, viz., engines, cars, tenders, coaches, and trucks. Great Northern Ry. Co. v. Flathead County, 61 Mont. 263, 202 P. 198, 200; Black Diamond Coal Mining Co. v. Glover Mach. Works, 212 Ala. 654, 103 So. 853, 854.

ROLLING STOCK PROTECTION ACT. The act of 35 & 36 Vict. c. 50, passed to protect the rolling stock of railways from distress or sale in certain cases.

ROMA PEDITIE. Lat. Pilgrims that traveled to Rome on foot.

ROMAN CATHOLIC CHARITIES ACT. The statute 23 & 24 Vict. c. 134, providing a method for enjoying estates given upon trust for Roman Cath-olicls, but invalidated by reason of certain of the trusts being superstitious or otherwise illegal. 3 Steph. Comm. 76.

ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH. The juristic personality of the Catholic Church, with the right to sue and to take and hold property has been recognized by all systems of European law from the fourth century. It was formally recognized between Spain and the Papacy and by Spanish laws from the beginning of the settlements in the Indies, also by our treaty with Spain in 1898, whereby its property rights were solemnly safeguarded. Municipality of Ponce v. Roman Catholic Church in Porto Rico, 28 S.Ct. 737, 210 U.S. 296, 52 L.Ed. 1068. To the same effect as to the Philippines; Santos v. Roman Catholic Church, 29 S.Ct. 338, 212 U.S. 463, 53 L.Ed. 599.

ROMAN LAW. In a general sense, comprehends all the laws which prevailed among the Romans, without regard to the time of their origin, including the collections of Justinian.

In a more restricted sense, the Germans understand by this term merely the law of Justinian, as adopted by them. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 18.

In England and America, it appears to be customary to use the phrase, indifferently with "the civil law," to designate the whole system of Roman jurisprudence, including the Corpus Juris Civilis; or, if any distinction is drawn, the expression "civil law" denotes the system of jurisprudence obtaining in those countries of continental Europe which have derived their juridical notions and principles from the Justinian collection, while "Roman law" is reserved as the proper appellation of the body of law developed under the government of Rome from the earliest times to the fall of the empire.

ROME-SCOT, or ROME-PENNY. Peter-pence, (q. v.). Cowell.

ROMNEY MARSH. A tract of land in the county of Kent, England, containing twenty-four thousand acres, governed by certain ancient and equitable laws of sewers, composed by Henry de Bathe, a venerable judge in the reign of King Henry III.; from which laws all commissioners of sewers in England may receive light and direction. 3 Bl.Comm. 73, note t; 4 Inst. 276.

ROOD OF LAND. The fourth part of an acre in square measure, or one thousand two hundred and ten square yards.

ROOM. A space for occupancy or use inclosed on all sides, as in building or apartment, frequently named for use to which it is put as bedroom, dining room, toolroom. Featherstone v. Dessert, 173 Wash. 264, 22 P.2d 1050.

ROOMER. A lodger, one who rents a room or rooms in a house. Atlantic City v. Le Beck, 125 N.J.L. 373, 15 A.2d 653, 654.

ROOT OF DESCENT. The same as "stock of descent."
ROOT OF TITLE. The document with which an abstract of title properly commences. Sweet.

ROS. A kind of rushes, which some tenants were obliged by their tenure to furnish their lords withal. Cowell.

ROSALAND. Healthy ground, or ground full of certain legal duties when called upon in their turn. In military affairs it is a table or plan by which the duty of officers is regulated. Matthews v. Bowman, 25 Me. 167.

ROTA. Lat. Succession; rotation. "Rota of presentations;" "rota of the terms." 2 W.B1. 772, 773.

A roll or list, as of schoolboys, soldiers, jurors, or the like. Cent. Diet.

In the Roman Catholic Church, an ecclesiastical court, called also "Rota Romana," consisting of 12 "auditors." Webster, Dict. One of its members must be a German, one a Frenchman, two Spaniards, and eight Italians. Encyc. Brit. It has its seat at the papal court, and is divided into two colleges or senates, having jurisdiction of appeals and of all matters beneficiary and patrimonial. There is no appeal from its decisions except to the Pope. Cent. Diet.

Also, a celebrated court at Genoa about the sixteenth century, or before, whose decisions in maritime matters form the first part of Straccha de Merc. Ingersoll’s Roccus.

ROTHER-BEASTS. A term which includes oxen, cows, steers, heifers, and such like horned animals. Cowell.

ROTTEN BOROUGHS. Small boroughs in England, which prior to the reform act, 1832, returned one or more members to parliament.

ROTTEN CLAUSE. A clause sometimes inserted in policies of marine insurance to the effect that "if, on a regular survey, the ship shall be declared unseaworthy by reason of being rotten or unsound," the insurers shall be discharged. 1 Phil. Ins. § 849. See Steinmetz v. United States Ins. Co., 2 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 296.

ROTLUS WINTONUE. The roll of Winton. An exact survey of all England, made by Alfred, not unlike that of Domesday; and it was so called because it was kept at Winchester, among other records of the kingdom; but this roll time has destroyed. Ingulph. Hist. 516.

ROTURE. Fr. In old French and Canadian law. A free tenure without the privilege of nobility; the tenure of a free commoner.

ROΤURIER. Fr. In old French and Canadian law. A free tenant of land on services exigible either in money or in kind. Steph. Lect. 229. A free commoner; one who held of a superior, but could have no inferior below him.

ROUND-ROBIN. A circle divided from the center, like Arthur’s round table, whence its supposed origin. In each compartment is a signature, so that the entire circle, when filled, exhibits a list, without priority being given to any name. A common form of round-robin is simply to write the names in a circular form. Wharton.

ROUP. In Scotch law. A sale by auction. Bell.

ROUT. A rout is an unlawful assembly which has made a motion towards the execution of the common purpose of the persons assembled. It is, therefore, between an unlawful assembly and a riot. Steph. Crim. Dig. 41. Whenever two or more persons assembled and acting together, make any attempt or advance toward the commission of an act which would be a riot if actually committed. Follis v. State, 37 Tex.Cr.R. 535, 40 S.W. 277.

In railroad parlance, a designated course over a way or right of way, irrespective of the singleness or multiplicity of operation thereon. Regenhardt Const. Co. v. Southern Ry. in Kentucky, 297 Ky. 840, 181 S.W.2d 441, 444.

In French insurance law. The way that is taken to make the voyage insured. The direction of the voyage assured.

ROUTOUSLY. In pleading. A technical word in indictments, generally coupled with the word "riotously." 2 Chit. Crim. Law, 488.

ROY. L!, Fr. The king.

ROY EST L’ORIGINAL DE TOUTS FRANCHIS-... attends to prorogue parliament, if he should do so. Brown.

ROYAL BURGHS. Boroughs incorporated in Scotland by royal charter. Bell.

ROYAL COURTS OF JUSTICE. Under the statute 42 & 43 Vict. c. 78, § 28, this is the name given to the buildings, together with all additions thereto, erected under the courts of justice building act, 1865, (28 & 29 Vict. c. 48,) and courts of justice concentration (site) act, 1865, (28 & 29 Vict. c. 49.) Brown.

ROYAL FISH. See Fish.

ROYAL GRANTS. Conveyances of record in England. They are of two kinds: (1) Letters patent; and (2) letters close, or writs close. 1 Steph. Comm. 615-618.

ROYAL HONORS. In the language of diplomacy, the privilege enjoyed by every kingdom in Europe, by the pope, and Swiss confederations, to precedence over all others who do not enjoy the same rank, with the exclusive right of sending to other states public ministers of the first rank, as ambassadors, together with other distinctive titles and ceremonies. Wheat. Int. Law, pt. 2, C. 3, § 2.

ROYAL MINES. Mines of silver and gold belonged to the king of England, as part of his prerogative of coinage, to furnish him with material. 1 Bl. Comm. 294.

ROYAL PREROGATIVE. Those rights and capacities which the king enjoys alone in contradistinction to others and not to those which he enjoys in common with any of his subjects. It is that special pre-eminence which the sovereign has over all other persons, and out of the course of the common law by right of regal dignity. Etna Casualty & Surety Co. v. Bramwell, D.C. Or., 12 F.2d 307, 309.

ROYAL TITLES ACT, 1901. The title of the sovereign is "By the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India."

ROYALTY ACRES. That part of the oil that goes to landowner, whether it be in place or after production. Dickens v. Tisdale, 204 Ark. 838, 164 S.W.2d 990, 992.

ROYALTY BONUS. The consideration for oil and gas lease over and above the usual royalty of one-eighth. Sheppard v. Stanolind Oil & Gas Co., Tex.Civ.App., 125 S.W.2d 643, 648.

RUBRIC. The directions in the Book of Common Prayer of the Church of England are so called, being, in the authorized version of 1662, printed in red letters.

RUBRIC OF A STATUTE. Its title, which was anciently printed in red letters. It serves to show the object of the legislature, and thence affords the means of interpreting the body of the act; hence the phrase, of an argument, "a rubro ad nigrum." Wharton.

RUINA. Lat. In the civil law. Ruin, the falling of a house. Dig. 47, 9.

RULE, v. To command or require by a rule of court; as, to rule the sheriff to return the writ, to rule the defendant to plead. To settle or decide a point of law arising upon a trial at nisi prius; and, when it is said of a judge presiding at such a trial that he "ruled" so and so, it is meant that he laid down, settled, or decided such and such to be the law.

RULE, n. An established standard, guide, or regulation; a principle or regulation set up by authority, prescribing or directing action or forbearance; as, the rules of a legislative body, of a company, court, public office, of the law, of ethics. A regulation made by a court of justice or public office with reference to the conduct of business therein.

An order made by a court, at the instance of one of the parties to a suit, commanding a ministerial officer, or the opposite party, to do some act, or to show cause why some act should not be done. It is usually upon some interlocutory matter, and has not the force or solemnity of a decree or judgment.

A rule of law. Thus, we speak of the rule against perpetuities; the rule in Shelley's Case, etc.

Cross-Rules
These were rules where each of the opposite litigants obtained a rule nisi, as the plaintiff to increase the damages, and the defendant to enter a nonsuit. Wharton.

General Rules
General or standing orders of a court, in relation to practice, etc.
RULE

Rule Absolute
One which commands the subject-matter of the rule to be forthwith enforced. It is usual, when the party has failed to show sufficient cause against a rule nisi, to "make the rule absolute," i. e., imperative and final.

Rule Against Perpetuities
See that title.

Rule—Day
In practice. The day on which a rule is returnable, or on which the act or duty enjoined by a rule is to be performed. Cook v. Cook, 18 Fla. 637.

Rule Discharged
A term indicating that the court has refused to take the action sought by the rule, or has decided that the cause shown against the rule is deemed sufficient.

Rule in Shelley’s Case
See Shelley’s Case, Rule in.

Rule Nisi
A rule which will become imperative and final unless cause be shown against it. This rule commands the party to show cause why he should not be compelled to do the act required, or why the object of the rule should not be enforced.

Rule of 1756
A rule of international law, first practically established in 1756, by which neutrals, in time of war, are prohibited from carrying on with a belligerent power a trade which is not open to them in time of peace. 1 Kent, Comm. 82.

Rule of Apportionment
Rule that, where subdivided tract contains more or less than aggregate amount called for, excess or deficiency is apportioned among several tracts. Geiger v. Uhl, 204 Ind. 135, 180 N.E. 10, 12.

Rules of Course
Certain orders made by the courts for the purpose of regulating the practice in actions and other proceedings before them.

Rule of Presumption
Rule changes one of burdens of proof, that is, it declares that main fact will be inferred or assumed from some other fact until evidence to contrary is introduced. Barrett v. U. S., C.A.Ga., 322 F.2d 292, 294.

Rules of Procedure

Rule of Property
A settled rule or principle, resting usually on precedents or a course of decisions, regulating the ownership or devolution of property. Yazoo & M. V. R. Co. v. Adams, 81 Miss. 90, 32 So. 937.

Rule of the Road
The popular English name for the regulations governing the navigation of vessels in public waters, with a view to preventing collisions. Sweet.

Rule to Plead
A rule of court, taken by a plaintiff as of course, requiring the defendant to plead within a given time, on pain of having judgment taken against him by default.

Rule to Show Cause
A rule commanding the party to appear and show cause why he should not be compelled to do the act required, or why the object of the rule should not be enforced; a rule nisi, (q. v.).

Special Rule
Rules granted without any motion in court, or when the motion is only assumed to have been made, and is not actually made, are called "common" rules; while the rules granted upon motion actually made to the court in term, or upon a judge’s order in vacation, are termed "special" rules. Brown. The term may also be understood as opposed to "general" rule; in which case it means a particular direction, in a matter of practice, made for the purposes of a particular case.

RULE AGAINST PERPETUITIES. Principle that no interest in property is good unless it must vest, if at all, not later than 21 years, plus period of gestation, after some life or lives in being at time of creation of interest. Perkins v. Iglehart, 183 Md. 520, 39 A.2d 672, 676. Bliven v. Borden, 56 R.I. 283, 185 A. 239, 244. St. Louis Union Trust Co. v. Bassett, 85 S.W.2d 569, 575, 337 Mo. 604, 101 A.L.R. 1266.

Some states modified this common law principle by statute.

See, also, Perpetuity.

RULES. In American practice. This term is sometimes used, by metonymy, to denote a time or season in the judicial year when motions may be made and rules taken, as special terms or argument-days, or even the vacations, as distinguished from the regular terms of the courts for the trial of causes; and, by a further extension of its meaning, it may denote proceedings in an action taken out of court. Thus, "an irregularity committed at rules may be corrected at the next term of the court." Southall’s Adm’r v. Exchange Bank, 12 Grat. (Va.) 312.

RULES OF A PRISON. Certain limits without the walls, within which all prisoners in custody in civil actions were allowed to live, upon giving sufficient security to the marshal not to escape.

RULES OF THE KING’S BENCH PRISON. In English practice. Certain limits beyond the walls, within which all prisoners in custody in civil actions were allowed to live, upon giving security by bond, with two sufficient sureties, to the marshal, not to escape, and paying him a certain percentage on the amount of the debts for which they were detained. Holthouse.

RUMOR. Flying or popular report; a current story passing from one person to another without any known authority for the truth of it. Webster. It is not generally admissible in evidence. Smith v. Moore, 74 Vt. 81, 52 A. 320; Gaffney v. Royal Neighbors of America, 31 Idaho 549, 174 P. 1014, 1017; State v. Vettere, 76 Mont. 574, 248 P. 179, 183.

RUNCARIA. In old records. Land full of brambles and briars. 1 Inst. 5a.

RUNCINUS. In old English law. A load-horse; a sumpter-horse or cart-horse.

RUNDLET, or RUNLET. A measure of wine, oil, etc., containing eighteen gallons and a half. Cowell.

RUNNING A SWITCH. In railroad parlance, going through a switch not properly aligned for the movement made. Benton v. St. Louis-San Francisco R. Co., Mo., 182 S.W.2d 61, 63.

RUNNING DAYS. Days counted in their regular succession on the calendar, including Sundays and holidays. Brown v. Johnson, 10 Mees. & W. 334; Crowell v. Barreda, 16 Gray (Mass.) 472; Davis v. Pendergast, 7 F.Cas. 162.

RUNNING LEASE. In old books. A lease which provided that the tenancy should not be confined to any portion of the land granted, and allowed the tenant the use of all the land he could clear, to distinguish it from one confined to a particular division, circumscribed by metes and bounds, within a larger tract. Cowan v. Hatcher, Tenn.Ch.App., 59 S.W. 691.

RUNNING OF THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS. A metaphorical expression, by which is meant that the time mentioned in the statute of limitations is considered as passing. United States v. Markowitz, D.C.Cal., 34 F.Supp. 827, 829.

RUNNING POLICY. One which contemplates successive insurances, and which provides that the object of the policy may be from time to time defined, especially as to the subjects of insurance, by additional statements or indorsements. Corporation of London Assurance v. Paterson, 106 Ga. 538, 32 S.E. 650.

RUNNING WITH THE LAND. A covenant is said to run with the land when either the liability to perform it or the right to take advantage of it passes to the assignee of that land. Brown.
RUNNING WITH THE REVERSION. A covenant is said to run with the reversion when either the liability to perform it or the right to take advantage of it passes to the assignee of that reversion. Brown.

RUNRIG LANDS. Lands in Scotland where the ridges of a field belong alternatively to different proprietors. Anciently this kind of possession was advantageous in giving a united interest to tenants to resist inroads. By the act of 1695, c. 23, a division of these lands was authorized, with the exception of lands belonging to corporations. Wharton.

RUPEE. A silver coin of India, rated at 2s. for the current, and 2s. 3d. for the Bombay, rupee.

RUPTUINI. Lat. In the civil law. Broken. A term applied to a will. Inst. 2, 17, 3.

RURAL DEANERY. The circuit of an archdeacon's and rural dean's jurisdictions. Every rural deanery is divided into parishes. See 1 Steph. Comm. 117.

RURAL DEANS. In English ecclesiastical law. Very ancient officers of the church, almost grown out of use, until about the middle of the present century, about which time they were generally revived, whose deaneries are as an ecclesiastical division of the diocese or archdeaconry. They are deputies of the bishop, planted all round his diocese, to inspect the conduct of the parochial clergy, to inquire into and report dilapidations, and to examine candidates for confirmation, armed in minuter matters with an inferior degree of judicial and coercive authority. Wharton.

RURAL SERVITUDE. In the civil law. A servitude annexed to a rural estate, (prcedium rusticum.)

RUSE DE GUERRE. Fr. A trick in war; a stratagem.

RUSTICI. Lat. In feudal law. Natives of a conquered country.

In old English law. Inferior country tenants, churls, or chorls, who held cottages and lands by the services of plowing, and other labors of agriculture, for the 19rd. Cowell.

RUSTICUM FORUM. Lat. A rude, unlearned, or unlettered tribunal; a term sometimes applied to arbitrators selected by the parties to settle a dispute. Underhill v. Van Cortlandt, 2 Johns.Ch. (N.Y.) 339; Dickinson v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co., 7 W.Va. 429.

RUSTICUM JUDICIUM. Lat. In maritime law. A rough or rude judgment or decision. A judgment in admiralty dividing the damages caused by a collision between the two ships. 3 Kent, Comm. 231; Story, Bailm. § 608a. The Victory, C.C.A. Va., 68 F. 400, 15 C.C.A. 490.

RUTA. Lat. In the civil law. Things extracted from land; as sand, chalk, coal, and such other matters.

RUTA ET CJESA. In the civil law. Things dug, (as sand and lime,) and things cut, (as wood, coal, etc.) Dig. 19, 1, 17, 6. Words used in conveyancing.

RYOT. In India. A peasant, subject, or tenant of house or land. Wharton.

RYOT-TENURE. A system of land-tenure, where the government takes the place of landowners and collects the rent by means of tax gatherers. The farming is done by poor peasants, (ryots), who find the capital, so far as there is any, and also do the work. The system exists in Turkey, Egypt, Persia, and other Eastern countries, and in a modified form in British India. After slavery, it is accounted the worst of all systems, because the government can fix the rent at what it pleases, and it is difficult to distinguish between rent and taxes.
SABBATH. One of the names of the first day of the week; more properly called "Sunday," (q. v.). Gunn v. State, 89 Ga. 341, 15 S.E. 458; State v. Reade, 98 N.J.L. 596, 121 A. 288.

SABBATUM. L. Lat. The Sabbath; also peace. Domesday.

SABBULONARIUM. A gravel pit, or liberty to dig gravel and sand; money paid for the same. Cowell.

SABINIANS. A school or sect of Roman jurists, under the early empire, founded by Ateius Capito, who was succeeded by M. Sabinus, from whom the name.

SABLE. The heraldic term for black. It is called "Saturn," by those who blazon by planets, and "diamond," by those who use the names of jewels. Engravers commonly represent it by numerous perpendicular and horizontal lines, crossing each other. Wharton.

SABOTAGE. A method used by labor revolutionists to force employers to accede to demands made on them. It consists in a willful obstruction and interference with the normal processes of industry. It aims at inconveniencing and tying up all production, but stops short of actual destruction or of endangering human life directly. The original act of sabotage is said to have been the slipping of a wooden shoe, or sabot, of a workman into a loom, in the early days of the introduction of machinery, to impede production. State v. Moilen, 140 Minn. 112, 167 N.W. 345, 347, 1 A.L.R. 331; State v. Tonn, 195 Iowa, 94, 191 N.W. 530, 538.

SAC. In old English law. A liberty of holding pleas; the jurisdiction of a manor court; the privilege claimed by a lord of trying actions of trespass between his tenants, in his manor court, and imposing fines and amerciaments in the same.

SACABURTH, SACABERE, SACABERE. In old English law. He that is robbed, or by theft deprived of his money or goods, and puts in surety to prosecute the felon with fresh suit. Bract. fol. 154b.

SACCABOR. In old English law. The person from whom a thing had been stolen, and by whom the thief was freshly pursued. Bract. fol. 154b. See Sacaburth.

SACCULARIL Lat. In feudal law. Compurgators; persons who came to purge a defendant by their oath that they believed him innocent.
SACRAMENTI ACTIO. Lat. In the older practice of the Roman law, this was one of the forms of legis actio, consisting in the deposit of a stake or juridical wager. See Sacramentum, SACRAMENTUM. Lat.

Roman Law

An oath, as being a very sacred thing; more particularly, the oath taken by soldiers to be true to their general and their country. Ainsw. Lex.

In one of the formal methods of beginning an action at law (legis actiones) known to the early Roman jurisprudence, the sacramentum was a sum of money deposited in court by each of the litigating parties, as a kind of wager or forfeit, to abide the result of the suit. The successful party received back his stake; the losing party forfeited his, and it was paid into the public treasury, to be expended for sacred objects, (in sacris rebus,) whence the name. See Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 203.

Common Law

An oath. Cowell.

SACRAMENTUM DECISIONIS. The voluntary or decisive oath of the civil law, where one of the parties to a suit, not being able to prove his case, offers to refer the decision of the cause to the oath of his adversary, who is bound to accept or make the same offer on his part, or the whole is considered as confessed by him. 3 Bl.Comm. 342.

SACRAMENTUM FIDELITATIS. In old English law. The oath of fealty. Reg. Orig. 303.

SACRAMENTUM HABET IN SE TRES COMITES,—VERITATEM, JUSTITIAM, ET JUDICIUM; VERITAS HABENDA EST IN JURATO; JUSTITIA ET JUSTICIUM IN JUDICE. An oath has in it three component parts,—truth, justice, and judgment; truth in the party swearing; justice and judgment in the judge administering the oath. 3 Inst. 160.

SACRAMENTUM SI FATUUM FUERIT, LICET SACRILEGUS. Lat. In the civil and common law. The taking of things out of a holy place. Calvin.

SACRILEGUS. Lat. In the civil and common law. A sacrilegious person; one guilty of sacrilege.

SACRILEGUS OMNII PRZEDONUM CUPIDITATEM ET SCELEBRA SUPERAT. 4 Coke, 106. A sacrilegious person transcends the cupidity and wickedness of all other robbers.

SACRISTAN. A sexton, anciently called "sagerson," or "sagisthon;" the keeper of things belonging to divine worship.

SADBERGE. A denomination of part of the county palatine of Durham. Wharton.

SADISM. That state of sexual perversion in man in which the sexual inclination manifests itself by the desire to beat, to maltreat, humiliate and even to kill the person for whom the passion is conceived. 3 Witth. & Beck, Med.Jur. 739.

The opposite of masochism (q. v.).

&EMEND. In old English law. An umpire, or arbitrator.

SIEPE CONSTITUTUM EST, RES INTER ALIOS JUDICATAS ALIIS NON PRZEJUDICARE. It has often been settled that matters adjudged between others ought not to prejudice those who were not parties. Dig. 42, 1, 63.

SIEPE VIATOREM NOVA, NON VETUS, ORBITA FALLIT. 4 Inst. 34. A new road, not an old one, often deceives the traveler.

SIEPE NUMERUM UBI PROPRIETAS VERBORUM ATTENDITUR, SENSUS VERITATIS AMITITUR. Oftentimes where the propriety of words is attended to, the true seise is lost. Branch, Princ.; 7 Coke, 27.

SIEVE EVITIA. Lat. In the law of divorce. Cruelty; anything which tends to bodily harm, and in that manner renders cohabitation unsafe. 1 Hagg. Const. 458.

SAFE. A metal receptacle for the preservation of valuables.

SAFE-CONDUCT. A guaranty or security granted by the king under the great seal to a stranger, for his safe coming into and passing out of the kingdom. Cowell.

One of the papers usually carried by vessels in time of war, and necessary to the safety of neutral merchantmen. It is in the nature of a license to the vessel to proceed on a designated voyage, and commonly contains the name of the master, the name, description, and nationality of the ship, the voyage intended, and other matters.

A distinction is sometimes made between a passport, conferring a general permission to travel in the territory belonging to, or occupied by, the belligerent, and a safe-conduct, conferring permission upon an enemy subject or others to proceed to a particular place for a defined object. II Opp. § 218.

SAFE DEPOSIT COMPANY. A company which maintains vaults for the deposit and safe-keeping of valuables in which compartments or boxes are rented to customers who have exclusive access thereto, subject to the oversight and under the rules and regulations of the company.
SAFE LIMIT OF SPEED. As regards limitation on speed of automobiles at crossings, the limit at which one may discern the approaching train and stop before he is in the danger zone. Horton v. New York Cent. R. Co., 200 N.Y.S. 365, 366, 205 App.Div. 763.

SAFE LOADING PLACE. A place where a vessel can be rendered safe for loading by reasonable measures of precaution. 14 Q.B.D. 105; 54 L.J. Q.B. 121.

SAFE PLACE TO WORK. In the law of master and servant, a place in which the master has eliminated all danger which the exercise of reasonable care by the master would remove or guard against. Melody v. Des Moines Union Ry. Co., 161 Iowa, 695, 141 N.W. 438, 439; Buick v. Olds Motor Works, 175 Mich. 640, 141 N.W. 680, 683, 49 L.R.A.,N.S., 883.

Master's duty to provide a "safe place" to work includes places to and from which the employee might be required or expected to go. High Splint Coal Co. v. Ramey's Adm'x, 271 Ky. 532, 112 S.W.2d 1007, 1008.

The rule of furnishing of a "safe place to work" is generally applicable in cases of master and servant or in cases where work is being done on property, vessel, or otherwise, of owner. The Ellenor, D.C.Fla., 39 F.Supp. 576, 580.

SAFE-PLEDGE. A surety given that a man shall appear upon a certain day. Bract. 1, 4, c. 1.

SAFEGUARD. In old English law. A special privilege or license in the form, under the great seal, granted to strangers seeking their right by course of law within the king's dominions, and apprehending violence or injury to their persons or property from others. Reg. Orig. 26.

A notification by a belligerent commander that buildings or other property upon which the notification is posted up are exempt from interference upon the part of his troops. Holland, Laws and Customs of War 44.

The term is likewise used to describe a guard of soldiers who are detailed to accompany enemy subjects or to protect certain enemy property. II Opp. § 219.

SAFETY APPLIANCE ACT. The act of Congress of March 2, 1893 (45 U.S.C.A. §§ 1-7), provides that after January 1, 1898, it shall be unlawful for common carriers in interstate commerce by railroad to use locomotive engines not equipped with power driving-wheel brakes and appliances for operating the train brake system, or to run a train that has not a sufficient number of cars in it so equipped that the engineer on the locomotive can control its speed without requiring hand brakes; and to haul or use on its line any car in interstate traffic "not equipped with couplers coupling automatically by impact, and which can be uncoupled without the necessity of men going between the ends of the cars."

SAFETY ISLAND. A cement sidewalk raised above the street level for the use and protection of pedestrians. Strappelli v. City of Chicago, 371 Ill. 72, 20 N.E.2d 43, 44.

SAGAMAN. A tale-teller; a secret accuser.

SAGES DE LA LEY. L. Fr. Sages of the law; persons learned in the law. A term applied to the chancellor and justices of the king's bench.

SAGIBARO. In old European law. A judge or justice; literally, a man of causes, or having charge or supervision of causes. One who administered justice and decided causes in the mallum, or public assembly. Spelman.

SAID. Before mentioned. This word is constantly used in contracts, pleadings, and other legal papers, with the same force as "aforesaid." Murray v. State, 150 Ark. 461, 234 S.W. 485, 486; Greely Nat. Bank v. Wolf, C.C.A.Colo., 4 F.2d 67, 69.

SAIGA. In old European law. A German coin of the value of a penny, or of three pence.

Vessel "sails" when she has intended cargo on board and is in complete readiness for voyage, with stores and crew aboard. Archibald McNeil & Sons Co., of New York, v. Western Maryland Ry. Co., D.C.Pa., 42 F.2d 669, 677.

SAILING. When a vessel quits her moorings, in complete readiness for sea, and it is the actual and real intention of the master to proceed on the voyage, and she is afterwards stopped by head winds and comes to anchor, still intending to proceed as soon as wind and weather will permit, this is a sailing on the voyage within the terms of a policy of insurance. Bowen v. Hope Ins. Co., 20 Pick. (Mass.) 328, 32 Am.Dec. 213.

SAILING INSTRUCTIONS. Written or printed directions, delivered by the commanding officer of a convoy to the several masters of the ships under his care, by which they are enabled to understand and answer his signals, to know the place of rendezvous appointed for the fleet in case of dispersion by storm, by an enemy, or otherwise. Without sailing instructions no vessel can have the protection and benefit of convoy. Marsh. Ins. 368.

SAILORS. Seamen; mariners.

SAINT MARTIN LE GRAND, COURT OF. An ancient court in London, of local importance, formerly held in the church from which it took its name.

SAINT SIMONISM. An elaborate form of non-communistical socialism. It is a scheme which does not contemplate an equal, but an unequal, division of the produce. It does not propose that all should be occupied alike, but differently, according to their vocation or capacity; the function of each being assigned, like grades in a regiment, by the choice of the directing authority, and the remuneration being by salary, proportioned to the importance, in the eyes of that authority, of the function itself, and the merits of the person who fulfills it. 1 Mill.PorEcon. 258.

SAIO. In Gothic law. The ministerial officer of a court or magistrate, who brought parties into court and executed the orders of his superior. Spelman.

SAISIE. Fr. In French law. A judicial seizure or sequestration of property, of which there are several varieties. See infra.

SAISIE-ARRET. An attachment of property in the possession of a third person.

SAISIE-EXECUTION. A writ resembling that of fieri facias; defined as that species of execution by which a creditor places under the hand of justice (custody of the law) his debtor’s movable property liable to seizure, in order to have it sold, so that he may obtain payment of his debt out of the proceeds. Dalloz, Diet.

SAISIE-FORAINE. A permission given by the proper judicial officer to authorize a creditor to seize the property of his debtor in the district which the former inhabits. Dalloz, Diet. It has the effect of an attachment of property, which is applied to the payment of the debt due.

SAISIE-GAGERIE. A conservatory act of execution, by which the owner or principal lessor of a house or farm causes the furniture of the house or farm leased, and on which he has a lien, to be seized, similar to the distress of the common law. Dalloz, Dic.

SAISIE-IMMOBILIRE. The proceeding by which a creditor places under the hand of justice (custody of the law) the immovable property of his debtor, in order that the same may be sold, and that he may obtain payment of his debt out of the proceeds. Dalloz, Diet.

SAKE. In old English law. A lord’s right of amercing his tenants in his court. Keilw. 145.

Acquittance of suit at county courts and hundred courts. Fleta, 1. 1, c. 47, § 7.

SALABLE VALUE. Usual selling price at place where property is situated when its value is to be ascertained. Fort Worth & D. N. Ry. Co. v. Sugg, Tex. Civ.App., 68 S.W.2d 570, 572.

SALADINE TENTH. A tax imposed in England and France, in 1188, by Pope Innocent III., to raise a fund for the crusade undertaken by Richard I. of England and Philip Augustus of France, against Saladin, sultan of Egypt, then going to besiege Jerusalem. By this tax every person who did not enter himself a crusader was obliged to pay a tenth of his yearly revenue and of the value of all his movables, except his wearing apparel, books, and arms. The Carthusians, Bernardines, and some other religious persons were exempt. Gibbon remarks that when the necessity for this tax no longer existed, the church still clung to it as too lucrative to be abandoned, and thus arose the tithing of ecclesiastical benefices for the pope or other sovereigns. Enc.Lond.

SALARIUM. Lat. In the civil law. An allowance of provisions. A stipend, wages, or compensation for services. An annual allowance or compensation. Calvin.

SALARY. A reward or recompense for services performed.

In a more limited sense a fixed periodical compensation paid for services rendered; a stated compensation, amounting to so much by the year, month, or other fixed period, to be paid to public officers and persons in some private employments, for the performance of official duties or the rendering of services of a particular kind, more or less definitely described, involving professional knowledge or skill, or at least employment above the grade of menial or mechanical labor. State v. Speed, 183 Mo. 186, 81 S.W. 1260. A fixed, annual, periodical amount payable for services and depending upon the time of employment and not the amount of services rendered. In re Information to Discipline Certain Attorneys of Sanitary Dist. of Chicago, 351 Ill. 206, 184 N.E. 332, 359. It is synonymous with "wages," except that "salary" is sometimes understood to relate to compensation for official or other services, as distinguished from "wages," which is the compensation for labor. Walsh v. City of Bridgeport, 88 Conn. 528, 91 A. 969, 972, Ann.Cas.1917B, 318. See, also, Fee.

For "Executive Salaries," see that title.

SALE. A contract between two parties, called, respectively, the "seller" (or vendor) and the "buyer," (or purchaser,) by which the former, in consideration of the payment or promise of payment of a certain price in money, transfers to the latter the title and the possession of property. Pard. Droit Commer. § 6; 2 Kent, Comm. 363; Poth. Cont. Sale, § 1; Butler v. Thomson, 92 U.S. 414, 23 L.Ed. 684. In re Frank’s Estate, 277 N.Y. S. 573, 154 Misc. 472.

A contract whereby property is transferred from one person to another for a consideration of value, implying the passing of the general and absolute title, as distinguished from a special interest falling short of complete ownership. Arnold v. North American Chemical Co., 232 Mass. 196, 122 N.E. 283, 284; Faulkner v. Town of South Boston, 141 Va. 517, 127 S.E. 380, 381.

An agreement by which one gives a thing for a price in current money, and the other gives the price in order to have the thing itself. Three circumstances concur to the perfection of the contract, to-wit, the thing sold, the price, and the consent. Civ.Code La. art. 2439.

To constitute a "sale," there must be parties standing to each other in the relation of buyer and seller, their minds must assent to the same proposition, and a consideration must pass. Commissioner of Internal Revenue v. Freihofer, C.C.A.3, 102 F.2d 787, 789, 790, 125 A.L.R. 761.
"Sale" consists of two separate and distinct elements: First, contract of sale which is completed when offer is made and accepted and, second, delivery of property which may precede, be accompanied by, or follow, payment of price as may have been agreed upon between parties. Inland Refining Co. v. Langworthy, 112 Okl. 280, 240 P. 627, 629.

An essential element of a "sale" is the money price which must either be fixed by agreement or capable of being ascertained therefrom. Puryear-Meyer Grocer Co. v. Cardwell Bank, Mo.App., 4 S.W.2d 489, 490.

"Sale," as applied to relation between landowner and real estate broker working to secure purchaser of land, means procuring purchaser able, ready and willing to buy on terms fixed by seller. T. W. Sandford & Co. v. Waring, 201 Ky. 169, 256 S.W. 9, 10.

Synonyms

The contract of "sale" is distinguished from "barter" (which applies only to goods) and "exchange," (which is used of both land and goods,) in that both the latter terms denote a commutation of property for property; i.e., price or consideration is always paid in money if the transaction is a sale, but, if it is a barter or exchange, it is paid in specific property susceptible of valuation. Westfall v. Ellis, 141 Minn. 377, 170 N.W. 339, 341; J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co. v. Loomis, 31 N.D. 27, 153 N.W. 479, 481. "Sale" differs from "gift" in that the latter transaction involves no return or recompense for the thing transferred. But an onerous gift sometimes approaches the nature of a sale, at least where the charge it imposes is a payment of money. "Sale" is also to be discriminated from "bailment;" and the difference is to be found in the fact that the contract of bailment always contemplates the return to the bailor of the specific article delivered, either in its original form or in a modified or altered form, or the return of an article which, though not identical, is of the same class, and is equivalent. But sale never involves the return of the article itself, but only a consideration in money. This contract differs also from "accord and satisfaction," because in the latter the object of transferring the property is to compromise and settle a claim, while the object of a sale is the price given.

The cardinal difference between the relation of seller and buyer and that of principal and factor is that in a "sale" title passes to the buyer, while in a "consignment" by principal to factor title remains in principal, and only possession passes to factor. McGaw v. Hanway, 120 Md. 197, 87 A. 666, 667, Ann.Cas.1915A, 601, and a "sale" is distinguished from a mortgage, in that the former is a transfer of the absolute property in the goods for a price, whereas a mortgage is at most a conditional sale of property as security for the payment of a debt or performance of some other obligation, subject to the condition that on performance the title shall revest in the mortgagor. Waldrep v. Exchange State Bank of Keifer, 81 Okl. 162, 197 P. 509, 511, 14 A.L.R. 747.

An abandonment must be made without any desire that any other person shall acquire the thing abandoned, since if it is made for a consideration it is a "sale" or "barter," and if made without consideration, but with an intention that some other person shall become the possessor, it is a "gift." Del Giorgio v. Powers, 81 P.2d 1006, 1014, 27 Cal.App.2d 668.

Absolute and conditional sales. An absolute sale is one where the property in chattels passes to the buyer upon the completion of the bargain. Truax v. Parvis, 7 Houst. (Del.) 330, 32 A. 227. A conditional sale is one in which the transfer of title is made to depend on the performance of a condition, usually the payment of the price; it is a purchase for a price paid or to be paid, to become absolute on a particular event, or a purchase accompanied by an agreement to resell upon particular terms. Pointdexter v. McCannon, 16 N.C. 373, 18 Am.Dec. 591; Crimp v. McCormick Const. Co., Ill., 18 C.C.A. 595, 72 F. 366.

Conditional sales are distinguishable from mortgages in that a mortgage assumes the continued existence of a debt and is given as security therefor. Turner v. Kerr, 44 Mo. 429; Crane v. Bonnell, 2 N.J.Eq. 264; Weatherly v. Weatherly, 40 Miss. 462, 90 Am.Dec. 344; Lamborn v. Denison State Bank, 115 Kan. 415, 223 P. 293, 294.

Bill of sale. See Bill.

Cash sale. A transaction whereby payment is to be in full on receipt of the goods. Bernzweig v. Hyman Levin Co., Sup., 172 N.Y.S. 437, 438. A sale where title is not to pass until the price is paid, or where title has passed, but possession is not to be delivered until payment is made. E. L. Welch Co. v. Lahart Elevator Co., 122 Minn. 432, 142 N.W. 828, 830.

Exclusive sale. With respect to a broker. An agreement by the owner that he will not sell the property during the life of the contract to any purchaser not procured by the broker in question. Harris v. McPherson, 97 Conn. 164, 115 A. 723, 724, 24 A.L.R. 1530, but see contra Roberts v. Harrington, 168 Wis. 217, 169 N.W. 603, 10 A.L.R. 810.

Executed and executory sales. An executed sale is one which is final and complete in all its particulars and details, nothing remaining to be done by either party to effect an absolute transfer of the subject-matter of the sale. Fogel v. Brubaker, 15 A. 692, 122 Pa. 7; Martin v. John Clay & Co., Mo.App., 167 S.W.2d 407, 411. An executory sale is one which has been definitely agreed on as to terms and conditions, but which has not yet been carried into full effect in respect to some of its terms or details, as where it remains to determine the price, quantity, or identity of the thing sold, or to pay installments of purchase-money, or to effect a delivery. McFadden v. Henderson, 29 So. 640, 128 Ala. 221; Fogel v. Brubaker, 15 A. 692, 122 Pa. 7; Smith v. Barron County Sup’rs, 44 Wis. 691.

Execution sale. See Execution Sale.

Fair sale. See Fair Sale.

Forced sale. A sale made without the consent or concurrence of the owner of the property, but by virtue of judicial process, such as a writ of execution or an order under a decree of foreclosure.
Fraudulent sale. One made for the purpose of defrauding the creditors of the owner of the property, by covering up or removing from their reach and converting into cash property which would be subject to the satisfaction of their claims.

Judicial sale. One made under the process of a court having competent authority to order it, by an officer duly appointed and commissioned to sell, as distinguished from a sale by an owner in virtue of his right of property. Union Trading Co. v. Drach, 58 Colo. 550, 146 P. 767, 770. Chapman v. Guaranty State Bank, Tex.Com.App., 267 S.W. 690, 693.

Memorandum sale. That form of conditional sale in which the goods are placed in the possession of the vendee subject to his approval, the title remaining in the seller until they are either accepted or rejected by the vendee.

Private sale. One negotiated and concluded privately between buyer and seller, and not made by advertisement and public outcry or auction. Barcello v. Hapgood, 118 N.C. 712, 24 S.E. 124.

Sale and return. A species of contract by which the seller (usually a manufacturer or wholesaler) delivers a quantity of goods to the buyer, on the understanding that, if the latter should desire to retain or use or resell any portion of such goods, he will consider such part as having been sold to him, and will pay their price, and the balance he will return to the seller, or hold them, as bailee, subject to his order. Sturm v. Boker, 14 S.Ct. 99, 150 U.S. 312, 37 L.Ed. 1093; Haskins v. Dern, 19 Utah, 89, 56 P. 953; Hickman v. Shimp, 109 Pa. 16; G. A. Soden & Co. v. T. J. Wilkinson & Son, 100 So. 182, 184, 135 Miss. 665.

Sale by sample. A sales contract in which it is the understanding of both parties that the goods exhibited constitute the standard with which the goods not exhibited correspond and to which deliveries should conform. M. C. Kiser Co. v. Brandon, 31 Ga.App. 241, 120 S.E. 427, 429.

Sale in gross. A sale by the tract, without regard to quantity; it is in that sense a contract of hazard. Miller v. Moore, 45 Cal.App. 283, 187 P. 763, 764; Cox v. Collins, 205 Ala. 491, 88 So. 440, 441.

Sale-note. A memorandum of the subject and terms of a sale, given by a broker or factor to the seller, who bailed him the goods for that purpose, and to the buyer, who dealt with him. Also called "bought and sold notes."

Sale on approval. A species of conditional sale, which is to become absolute only in case the buyer, on trial, approves or is satisfied with the article sold. The approval, however, need not be express; it may be inferred from his keeping the goods beyond a reasonable time. Benj. Sales, § 911; Warren v. Russell, 143 Ark. 516, 220 S.W. 831.

Sale on credit. A sale of property accompanied by delivery of possession, but where payment of the price is deferred to a future day. In re Heinz's Estate, 224 N.Y. 1, 120 N.E. 63, 64.

Sale per atercionem. In the civil law, a sale where the goods are taken in bulk, or not by weight or measure, and for a single price, or where a piece of land is sold for a gross sum, to be paid for the whole premises, and not at a fixed price by the acre or foot. State v. Buck, 46 La. Ann. 656, 15 So. 531.

Sale with all faults. On what is called a "sale with all faults," unless the seller fraudulently and inconsistently represents the article sold to be faultless, or contrives to conceal any fault from the purchaser, the latter must take the article for better or worse. 3 Camp. 154; Brown.

Sale with right of redemption. A sale in which the vendor reserves right to take back property by returning price paid. Glover v. Abney, 160 La. 175, 106 So. 735, 739.

Tax-sale. A sale of land for unpaid taxes; a sale of property, by authority of law, for the collection of a tax assessed upon it, or upon its owner, which remains unpaid.

Voluntary sale. One made freely, without constraint, by the owner of the thing sold. 1 Bouv. Inst. no. 974.

SALESMAN. One whose occupation is to sell, as goods, merchandise, land, securities, transportation, etc., either in a store or within a given territory; specifically, a commercial traveler. In re Herbert Candy Co., D.C.Pa., 43 F.Supp. 588, 590.

SALET. In old English law. A headpiece; a steel cap or morion. Cowell.

SALFORD HUNDRED COURT OF RECORD. An inferior and local court of record having jurisdiction in personal actions where the debt or damage sought to be recovered does not exceed £50, if the cause of action arise within the hundred of Salford. St. 31 & 32 Vict. c. 130; 2 Exch.Div. 346.

SALIC LAW. A body of law framed by the Salian Franks, a Teutonic race who settled in Gaul about the beginning of the fifth century.

It is the most ancient of the barbarian Codes. It is said to have been compiled about the year 420. It embraced the laws and customs of the Salian Franks. It is of great historical value, in connection with the origins of feudalism and similar subjects. Its most celebrated provision was one which excluded women from the inheritance of landed estates, by an extension of which law females were always excluded from succession to the crown of France. Hence this provision, by itself, is often referred to as the "Salic Law."

In French jurisprudence. The name is frequently applied to that fundamental law of France which excluded females from succession to the crown. Supposed to have been derived from the sixty-second title of the Salic Law, "De Alode." Brande.

SALIC

SALMANNUS. A sale-man, found in the Salic Law in the fifth century, who was a third person called in to complete the transfer of property. 12 Harv.L.Rev. 445, Law in Science, etc., by O. W. Holmes, Jr.

SALOON-KEEPER. This expression has a definite meaning, namely, a retailer of cigars, liquors, etc. Cahill v. Campbell, 105 Mass. 40.

SALT DUTY IN LONDON. A custom in the city of London called "granage," formerly payable to the lord mayor, etc., for salt brought to the port of London, being the twentieth part. Wharton.

SALT SILVER. One penny paid at the feast day of St. Martin, by the tenants of some manors, as a commutation for the service of carrying their lord's salt from market to his larder. Paroch. Antiq. 496.

SALUS. Lat. Health; prosperity; safety.

SALUS POPULI SUPREMA LEX. The welfare of the people is the supreme law. Bac. Max. reg. 12; Broom, Max. 1-10; Montesq. Esprit des Lois, lib. 26, c. 23; 13 Coke, 139; Lingo Lumber Co. v. Hayes, Tex.Civ.App., 64 S.W.2d 835, 839.

SALUS REIPUBLICIE SUPREMA LEX. The welfare of the state is the supreme law. Inhabitants of Springfield v. Connecticut River R. Co., 4 Cush. (Mass.) 71.

SALUS UBI MULTI CONSILIARII. 4 Inst. 1. Where there are many counselors, there is safety.

SALUTE. A gold coin stamped by Henry V. in France, after his conquests there, whereon the arms of England and France were stamped quarterly. Cowell.

In the army and navy an honor paid to a distinguished personage, when troops or squadrons meet, when officers are buried, or to celebrate an event or show respect to a flag and on many other ceremonial occasions. Cent. Dict.

SALVAGE. In maritime law. A compensation allowed to persons by whose assistance a ship or its cargo has been saved, in whole or in part, from impending danger, or recovered from actual loss, in cases of shipwreck, derelict, or recapture. 3 Kent, Comm. 245; Cope v. Vallette Dry-Dock Co., 7 S.Ct. 336, 119 U.S. 625, 30 L.Ed. 501; J. M. Guffey Petroleum Co. v. Borison, C.C.A.Tex., 211 F. 594, 601.

Elements necessary to valid "salvage" are marine peril, with service voluntarily rendered, when not required as existing duty, or from a special contract, and success in whole or in part, and that service rendered contributed to such success. Robert R. Sizer & Co. v. Chiarello Bros., D. C.N.Y., 32 F.2d 333, 335.

In the older books of the law, (and sometimes in modern writings,) the term is also used to denote the goods or property saved.

Equitable Salvage

By analogy, the term "salvage" is sometimes also used in cases which have nothing to do with maritime perils, but in which property has been preserved from loss by the last of several advances by different persons. In such a case, the person making the last advance is frequently entitled to priority over the others, on the ground that, without his advance, the property would have been lost altogether. This right, which is sometimes called that of "equitable salvage," and is in the nature of a lien, is chiefly of importance with reference to payments made to prevent leases or policies of insurance from being forfeited, or to prevent mines and similar undertakings from being stopped or injured. 1 Fish.Mortg. 149; 3 Ch. Div. 411; L.R. 14 Eq. 4; 7 Ch.Div. 825.

Salvage Charges

This term includes all the expenses and costs incurred in the work of saving and preserving the property which was in danger. The salvage charges ultimately fall upon the insurers.

Salvage Loss

That kind of loss which it is presumed would, but for certain services rendered and exertions made, have become a total loss. In the language of marine underwriters, this term means the difference between the amount of salvage, after deducting the charges, and the original value of the property insured. Koons v. La Fonciere Compagnie, D.C.Cal., 71 F. 981.

Salvage Service

A service voluntarily rendered to a vessel in need of assistance, and is designed to relieve her from distress or danger, either present or to be reasonably apprehended and for which a salvage reward is allowed by the maritime law. The Emanuel Stavroudis, D.C.Md., 23 F.2d 214, 216.

It is distinguished from "towage service," in that the latter is rendered for the mere purpose of expediting a vessel's voyage, without reference to any circumstances of danger, though the service in each case may be rendered in the same way. The Emanuel Stavroudis, D.C.Md., 23 F.2d 214, 216.

SALVIAN INTERDICT. See Interdictum Salvianum.

SALVO. Lat. Saving; excepting; without prejudice to.

SALVOR. A person who, without any particular relation to a ship in distress, proffers useful service, and gives it as a volunteer adventurer, without any pre-existing covenant that connected him with the duty of employing himself for the preservation of that ship. The Clara, 23 Wall. 16, 23 L.Ed. 150; The Dumper, C.C.A.N.Y., 129 F. 99, 63 C.C.A. 600; Central Stockyard Co. v. Mears, 85 N.Y.S. 795, 89 App.Div. 452.

SALVUS PLEGIUS. L. Lat. A safe pledge; except me and my heirs. Salvo me et heredibus meis, except me and my heirs. Salvo jure cujuslibet, without prejudice to the rights of any one.

SAME. The word "same" does not always mean "identical," not different or other. It frequently means of the kind or species, not the specific thing. Crapo v. Brown, 40 Iowa 487, 493. When preceded by the definite article, meaning the one just referred to. In re Conner's Estate, 318 Pa. 150, 178 A. 15, 17.

SAME INVENTION. Within reissue statute, whatever invention was described in original letters patent, and appears therein to have been intended to be secured thereby. 35 U.S.C.A. § 64; Morgan v. Drake, Cust. & Pat.App., 36 F.2d 511, 512. It is not to be determined by the claims of the original patent but from the description and such other evidence as the commissioner may deem relevant. Detrola Radio & Television Corporation v. Hazeltine Corporation, C.C.A.Mich., 117 F.2d 238, 241.

SAME OFFENSE. As used in Constitution, providing that no person shall be twice put in jeopardy for the same offense, does not signify the same offense eo nomine, but the same criminal act, transaction, or omission. State v. Shaver, 197 Iowa 1028, 198 N.W. 329, 336.

SAMPLE. A specimen; a small quantity of any commodity, presented for inspection or examination as evidence of the quality of the whole; as a sample of cloth or of wheat.

SAMPLE, SALE BY. A sale at which only a sample of the goods sold is exhibited to the buyer. See "Sale."

SANCTIO. Lat. In the civil law. That part of a law by which a penalty was ordained against those who should violate it. Inst. 2, 1, 10.

SANCTION, n. In the original sense of the word, a penalty or punishment provided as a means of enforcing obedience to a law. In jurisprudence, a law is said to have a sanction when there is a state which will intervene if it is disobeyed or disregarded. Therefore international law has no legal sanction. Sweet.

In a more general sense, a conditional evil annexed to a law to produce obedience to that law; and, in a still wider sense, an authorization of anything. Occasionally, "sanction" is used (e.g., in Roman law) to denote a statute, the part (penal clause) being used to denote the whole. Brown.

The vindicatory part of a law, or that part which ordains or denounces a penalty for its violation. 1 Bl.Comm, 56.

SANCTUARY. In old English law. A consecrated place which had certain privileges annexed to it, and to which offenders were accustomed to resort for refuge, because they could not be arrested there, nor the laws be executed.

SANDBAG. A tube of strong, flexible material filled with sand, by which a heavy blow may be struck which leaves little or no mark on the skin. Cent. Diet. It is included in the general term sap (q.v.).

SAND—GAVEL. In old English law. A payment due to the lord of the manor of Rodley, in the county of Gloucester, for liberty granted to the tenants to dig sand for their common use. Cowell.

SANDE. Of natural and normal mental condition; healthy in mind.

SANDEF. Sound mind, memory, and understanding. This is one of the essential elements in the capacity of contracting; and the absence of it in lunatics and idiots, and its immaturity in infants, is the cause of their respective incapacities or partial incapacities to bind themselves. The like circumstance is their ground of exemption in cases of crime. Brown.

SANG, or SANG. In old French. Blood.

SANGUINE, or MURREY. An heraldic term for "blood-color," called, in the arms of princes, "dragon's tail," and, in those of lords, "sardonyx." It is a tincture of very infrequent occurrence.
and not recognized by some writers. In engraving, it is denoted by numerous lines in saltire. Wharton.

SANGUINEM EMERE. Lat. In feudal law. A redemption by villeins, of their blood or tenure, in order to become freemen.

SANGUIS. Lat. In the civil and old English law. Blood; consanguinity. The right or power which the chief lord of the fee had to judge and determine cases where blood was shed. Mon. Aug. t. i. 1021.

SANIS. A kind of punishment among the Greeks; inflicted by binding the malefactor fast to a piece of wood. Enc. Lond.

SANITARIUM. Health station or retreat; boarding-house, or other place where patients are kept and where medical and surgical treatment is given. City of Atlanta v. Blackman Health Resort, 153 Ga. 499, 113 S.E. 545, 548.

SANITARY. That which pertains to health, with especial reference to cleanliness and freedom from infective and deleterious influences. Mayor and City Council of Baltimore v. Bloecher & Schaff, 149 Md. 648, 132 A. 160, 162.

SANITARY AUTHORITIES. In English law. Bodies having jurisdiction over their respective districts in regard to sewerage, drainage, scavenging, the supply of water, the prevention of nuisances and offensive trades, etc., all of which come under the head of "sanitary matters" in the special sense of the word. Sanitary authorities also have jurisdiction in matters coming under the head of "local government." Sweet.

SANITATION. Devising and applying of measures for preserving and promoting public health; removal or neutralization of elements injurious to health; practical application of sanitary science. Smith v. State, 160 Ga. 857, 129 S.E. 542, 544.

SANITY. Sound understanding; the normal condition of the human mind; the reverse of insanity. (q. v.). Rust v. Reid, 124 Va. 1, 97 S.E. 324, 331.

The accepted test of "sanity" in criminal cases is whether defendant could distinguish between right and wrong. People v. Dawa, 15 Cal.2d 393, 101 P.2d 498, 499.

SANS CEO QUE. L. Fr. Without this. See Absque Hoc.

SANS FRAIS. Fr. Without expense. See Retour Sans Protet.

SANS IMPEACHMENT DE WAST. L. Fr. Without impeachment of waste. Litt. § 152. See Absque Impetitione Vasti.

SANS JOUR. Fr. Without day; sine die.

SANS NOMBRE. Fr. A term used in relation to the right of putting animals on a common. The term "common sans hombre" does not mean that the beasts are to be innumerable, but only indefinite; not certain. Willes, 227.

SANS RECURS. Fr. Without recourse. See Indorsement.

SAPIENS INCIPIIT A FINE, ET QUOD PRIMUM EST IN INTENTIONE, ULTIMUM EST IN EXECUTIONE. A wise man begins with the last, and what is first in intention is last in execution. 10 Coke, 25.

SAPIENS OMNIA AGIT CUM CONSILIO. A wise man does everything advisedly. 4 Inst. 4.

SAPIENTIA LEGIS NUMMARIO PRETIO NON EST ESTIMANDA. The wisdom of the law cannot be valued by money. Jenk. Cent. 168.

SAPIENTIS JUDICIS EST COGITARE TANTUM SIBI ESSE PERMISSUM, QUANTUM COMMIS SUM ET CREDITUM. It is the part of a wise judge to think that a thing is permitted to him, only so far as it is committed and intrusted to him. 4 Inst. 163. That is, he should keep his jurisdiction within the limits of his commission.

SART. In old English law. A piece of woodland, turned into arable. Cowell.

SASINE. In Scotch law. The symbolical delivery of land, answering to the livery of seisin of the old English law. 4 Kent, Comm. 459.

SASSE. In old English law. A kind of wear with flood-gates, most commonly in cut rivers, for the shutting up and letting out of water, as occasion required, for the more ready passing of boats and barges to and fro; a lock; a turnpike; a sluice. Cowell.

SASSONS. The corruption of Saxons. A name of contempt formerly given to the English, while they affected to be called "Angles;" they are still so called by the Welsh.

SATIS LIQUET. See Liquet.

SATISDARE. Lat. In the civil law. To guarantee the obligation of a principal.
SATISDATIO. Lat. In the civil law. Security given by a party to an action, as by a defendant, to pay what might be adjudged against him. Inst. 4, 11; 3 Bl.Comm. 291.

SATISFACTION. Act of satisfying; the state of being satisfied. Seago v. New York Cent. R. Co., 349 Mo. 1249; 164 S.W.2d 336, 341. The discharge of an obligation by paying a party what is due to him, (as on a mortgage, lien, or contract,) or what is awarded to him, by the judgment of a court or otherwise. Thus, a judgment is satisfied by the payment of the amount due to the party who has recovered such judgment, or by his levying the amount. Bryant v. Fairfield, 51 Me. 152; Armour Bros. Banking Co. v. Addington, 37 S.W. 100, 1 Ind.T. 304. The execution or carrying into effect of an accord. Barber v. Mallon, Mo.App., 168 S.W.2d 177, 179; R. J. Bearings Corporation v. Warr, 192 Oki. 133, 134 P.2d 355, 357.

Practice
An entry made on the record, by which a party in whose favor a judgment was rendered declares that he has been satisfied and paid.

Equity
The doctrine of satisfaction in equity is somewhat analogous to performance in equity, but differs from it in this respect: that satisfaction is always something given either in whole or in part as a substitute or equivalent for something else, and not (as in performance) something that may be construed as the identical thing covenanted to be done. Brown.

SATISFACTION, CONTRACTS TO. A class of contracts in which one party agrees to perform his promise to the satisfaction of the other. A contract for construction work "to the entire satisfaction of the owners" imports that the construction be to the satisfaction of a reasonable man and not to the personal satisfaction of owners. Waite v. C. E. Shoemaker & Co., 50 Mont. 264, 146 P. 736, 742.

SATISFACTION PIECE. In practice. A memorandum in writing, entitled in a cause, stating that satisfaction is acknowledged between the parties, plaintiff and defendant. Upon this being duly acknowledged and filed in the office where the record of the judgment is, the judgment becomes satisfied, and the defendant discharged from it. 1 Archb.Pr. 722.

SATISFACTION SHOULD BE MADE TO THAT FUND WHICH HAS SUSTAINED THE LOSS. 4 Bouv. Inst. no. 3731.

SATISFACTORY. Where a contract provides that it is to be performed in a manner "satisfactory" to one of the parties, the provision must be construed as meaning that the performance must be such that the party, as a reasonable person, should be satisfied with it. Hoff v. L. Gould & Co., 198 Ill. App. 499, 501.

SATISFACTORY EVIDENCE. Such evidence as is sufficient to produce a belief that the thing is true; credible evidence; such evidence as, in respect to its amount or weight, is adequate or sufficient to justify the court or jury in adopting the conclusion in support of which it is adduced. Walker v. Collins, C.C.A.Kan., 59 F. 74, 8 C.C.A. 1; U. S. v. Lee Huen, D.C.N.Y., 118 F 457.

"Satisfactory evidence," which is sometimes called "sufficient evidence," means that amount of proof which ordinarily satisfies an unprejudiced mind beyond a reasonable doubt. Thayer v. Boyle, 50 Me. 152, 146 P. 736, 737; State v. Moss, 95 Or. 616, 188 P. 702, 704. See, also, Sufficient Evidence.

SATISFIED TERM. A term of years in land is thus called when the purpose for which it was created has been satisfied or executed before the expiration of the set period.

SATISFIED TERMS ACT. The statute 8 & 9 Vict. c. 112, passed to abolish satisfied outstanding terms of years in land. By this act, terms which shall henceforth become attendant upon the inheritance, either by express declaration or construction of law, are to cease and determine. This, in effect, abolishes outstanding terms. 1 Steph.Comm. 380-382; Williams, Real Prop. pt. 4, c. 1.

SATISFY. To answer or discharge, as a claim, debt, legal demand or the like. Swanner v. Union Mortg. Co., 99 Utah 298, 105 P.2d 342, 343. To comply actually and fully with a demand; to extinguish, by payment or performance.

To convince, as to satisfy a jury. Lawrence v. Goodwill, 44 Cal.App. 440, 186 P. 781, 785.

SATISFYING. Preservation from danger or loss; failure of the direct line in successions. Spelman; Cowell.

SAUVAGINE. L. Fr. Wild animals.

SAUVEMENT. L. Fr. Safely kept. Britt. c. 87.

SAUVEMENT GARDES, safely kept. Britt. c. 87.

SAVE. To except, reserve, or exempt; as where a statute "saves" vested rights. To toll, or suspend the running or operation of; as to "save" the statute of limitations.

SAVER DEFAULT. L. Fr. In old English prac. To excuse a default. Termes de la Ley.

SAVING. Where a contract provides that it is to be performed in a manner "satisfactory" to one of the parties, the provision must be construed as meaning that the performance must be such that the party, as a reasonable person, should be satisfied with it. Hoff v. L. Gould & Co., 198 Ill. App. 499, 501.
SAVING CLAUSE. In a statute an exception of a special thing out of the general things mentioned in the statute. Ordinarily a restriction in a repealing act, which is intended to save rights, pending proceedings, penalties, etc., from the annihilation which would result from an unrestricted repeal. State v. St. Louis, 174 Mo. 125, 73 S.W. 623, 61 L.R.A. 593; Bass v. Albright, Tex.Civ.App., 59 S.W.2d 891, 894.

SAVING THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS. A creditor is said to "save the statute of limitations" when he saves or preserves his debt from being barred by the operation of the statute. Thus, in the case of a simple contract debt, if a creditor commence an action for its recovery within six years from the time when the cause of action accrued, he will be in time to save the statute. Brown.

SAVINGS BANK. See Bank.

SAVINGS BANK TRUST. See Trust.

SCHIREMAN. In Saxon law. An officer having the civil government of a shire, or county; an earl. 1 Bl.Comm. 398.

SCHIRENS-GELD. In Saxon law. A tax paid to sheriffs for keeping the shire or county court. Cowell.

SCHISM. In ecclesiastical law. A division or separation in a church or denomination of Christians, occasioned by a diversity of faith, creed, or religious opinions. Lindstrom v. Tell, 131 Minn. 203, 154 N.W. 969, 971.

SCHISM-BILL. In English law. The name of an act passed in the reign of Queen Anne, which restrained Protestant dissenters from educating their own children, and forbade all tutors and schoolmasters to be present at any conventicle or dissenting place of worship. The queen died on the day when this act was to have taken effect, (August 1, 1714,) and it was repealed in the fifth year of Geo. I. Wharton.

Common Schools

Schools maintained at the public expense and administered by a bureau of the state, district, or municipal government, for the gratuitous education of the children of all citizens without distinction. Board of Education of City of Sapulpa v. Corey, 63 Okl. 178, 163 P. 949, 953; State v. O'Dell, 187 Ind. 84, 118 N.E. 529, 530.

Consolidated School District

A common school district where two or more existing schools have consolidated into one single district. Trustees of Walton School v. Board of Sup'rs of Covington County, 115 Miss. 117, 75 So. 833, 834; Rice v. Gong Lum, 139 Miss. 760, 104 So. 105, 110.

District School

A common or public school for the education at public expense of the children residing within a given district; a public school maintained by a "school district." See infra.

Grade School

A school in which the pupils are classified according to progress and taught by different teachers so that a rural school under one teacher is not included within the exception, although various pupils in various stages of progress are classified. Board of County Com'rs of Laramie v. State, 24 Wyo. 364, 158 P. 801, 804.

High School

A school in which higher branches of learning are taught than in the common schools. Thurman-Watts v. Board of Education of City of Coffeyville, 115 Kan. 328, 222 P. 123, 125. A school in which such instruction is given as will prepare the students to enter a college or university. Whitlock v. State, 30 Neb. 815, 47 N.W. 284.

Normal School

A training school for teachers; one in which instruction is given in the theory and practice of teaching; particularly, in the system of schools generally established throughout the United States, a school for the training and instruction of those who are already teachers in the public schools or those who desire and expect to become such. Board of Regents v. Painter, 102 Mo. 464, 14 S.W. 938, 10 L.R.A. 493

Private School

One maintained by private individuals or corporations, not at public expense, and open only to pupils selected and admitted by the proprietors or governors, or to pupils of a certain class or possessing certain qualifications, (racial, religious, or otherwise,) and generally supported, in part at least, by tuition fees or charges Quigley v. State, 5 Ohio Cir.Ct.R. 638.

Public Schools

Schools established under the laws of the state (and usually regulated in matters of detail by the local authorities), in the various districts, counties, or towns, maintained at the public expense by taxation, and open with or without charge to the children of all the residents of the town or other district. St. Joseph's Church v. Assessors of Taxes, 12 R.I. 19, 34 Am.Rep. 597. Litchman v. Shannon, 90 Wash. 186, 155 P. 783, 784. Schools belonging to the public and established and conducted under public authority; not schools owned and conducted by private parties, though they may be open to the public generally and though tuition may be free. Gerke v. Purcell, 25 Ohio St. 229.

School Board

A board of municipal officers charged with the administration of the affairs of the public schools. They are commonly organized under the general laws of the state, and fall within the class of quasi corporations, sometimes coterminous with a county or borough, but not necessarily so. The members of the school board are sometimes termed "school directors," or the official style may be "the board of school directors." The circuit of their territorial jurisdiction is called a "school district," and each school district is usually a separate taxing district for school purposes.

School Directors

See School Board.

School District

A public and quasi municipal corporation, organized by legislative authority or direction, comprising a defined territory, for the erection, maintenance, government, and support of the public schools within its territory in accordance with and in subordination to the general school laws of the state, invested, for these purposes only, with powers of local self-government and generally of local taxation, and administered by a board of officers, usually elected by the voters of the district, who are variously styled "school directors," or "trustees," "commissioners," or "supervisors" of schools. Hamilton v. San Diego County, 108 Cal. 273, 41 P. 305; Duff v. School Dist. of Perry Tp., 281 Pa. 87, 126 A. 202.

School Lands

Public lands of a state set apart by the state (or by congress in a territory) to create, by the proceeds of their sale, a fund for the establishment and maintenance of public schools.

School-Master

One employed in teaching a school.

SCHOOL PURPOSES. This term in constitutional provision limiting rates of taxation covers ordinary expenses of maintaining and operating schools. Peter v. Kaufmann, 327 Mo. 915, 38 S.W. 2d 1062, 1067.

SCHOUT. In Dutch law. An officer of a court whose functions somewhat resemble those of a sheriff.

SCI. FA. An abbreviation for "scire facias," (q. v.).

SCIENDUM. Lat. In English law. The name given to a clause inserted in the record by which it is made known that the justice here in court, in this same term, delivered a writ thereupon to the deputy-sheriff of the county aforesaid, to be executed in due form of law. Lee, Dict. "Record."

SCIENDUM EST. Lat. It is to be known; be it remarked. In the books of the civil law, this phrase is often found at the beginning of a chapter or paragraph, by way of introduction to some explanation, or directing attention to some particular rule.

SCIENTER. Lat. Knowingly. The term is used in pleading to signify an allegation (or that part of the declaration or indictment which contains it) setting out the defendant's previous knowledge of the cause which led to the injury complained of, or rather his previous knowledge of a state of facts which it was his duty to guard against, and his omission to do which has led to the injury complained of. The insertion of such an allegation is called "laying the action (or indictment) with a scienter." And the term is frequently used to signify the defendant's guilty knowledge. People v. Gould, 237 Mich. 156, 211 N.W. 346, 348. Horton v. Tyree, 104 W.Va. 238, 139 S.E. 737, 738.

SCIENTI ET VOLENTI NON FIT INJURIA. Bract. fol. 20. An injury is not done to one who knows and wills it.

SCIENDIA SCIOLOREM EST MIXTA IGNORANTIA. 8 Coke, 159. The knowledge of smatterers is diluted ignorance.

SCIENTIA UTRIMQUE PAR PARES CONTRAHENTES FACIT. Equal knowledge on both sides makes contracting parties equal. 3 Burrows, 1905. An insured need not mention what the underwriter knows, or what he ought to know. Broom, Max. 772.

SCILICET. Lat. To-wit; that is to say. A word used in pleadings and other instruments, as introductory to a more particular statement of matters previously mentioned in general terms. Hob. 171, 172.
SCINTILLA. Lat. A spark; a remaining particle; the least particle.

SCINTILLA JURIS. In real property law. A spark of right or interest. By this figurative expression was denoted the small particle of interest which, by a fiction of law, was supposed to remain in a feoffee to uses, sufficient to support contingent uses afterwards coming into existence, and thereby enable the statute of uses (27 Hen. VIII. c. 10) to execute them. 2 Washb. Real Prop. 125; 4 Kent, Comm. 238.

SCINTILLA OF EVIDENCE. A spark of evidence. Cunningham v. Union Pac. Ry. Co., 4 Utah, 206, 7 P. 795, 797. A metaphorical expression to describe a very insignificant or trifling item or particle of evidence; used in the statement of the common-law rule that if there is any evidence at all in a case, even a mere scintilla, tending to support a material issue, the case cannot be taken from the jury, but must be left to their decision. Offutt v. World's Columbian Exposition, 175 El. 472, 51 N.E. 651.

It is the duty of trial court to instruct a verdict, though there is slight testimony, if its probative force is so weak that it only raises suspicion of existence of facts sought to be established, since such testimony fails short of being "evidence". Texas Pacific Coal & Oil Co. v. Wells, Tex. Civ.App., 151 S.W.2d 927, 929.

Suggestions, if any, from evidence did not amount to "evidence". Cooksey v. McGuire, Tex.Civ.App., 146 S.W.2d 480, 483.

SCIRE DEBES CUM QUO CONTRAHIS. You ought to know with whom you deal. 11 Mees. & W. 405, 632; 13 Mees. & W. 171.

SCIRE ET SCIRE DEBERE JEQUIPARANTUR IN JURE. To know a thing, and to be bound to know it, are regarded in law as equivalent. Tray. Leg. Max. 551.

SCIRE FACIAS. Lat. In practice. A judicial writ, founded upon some matter of record, such as a judgment or recognizance and requiring the person against whom it is brought to show cause why the party bringing it should not have advantage of such record, or (in the case of a scire facias to repeal letters patent) why the record should not be annulled and vacated. 2 Archb.Pr. K.B. 86; Pub. St. Mass. p. 1295. The name is used to designate both the writ and the whole proceeding. City of St. Louis v. Miller, 235 Mo. App. 987, 145 S.W.2d 504, 505.

The most common application of this writ is as a process to revive a judgment, after the lapse of a certain time, or on a change of parties, or otherwise to have execution of the judgment, in which cases it is merely a continuation of the original action. It is used more rarely as a mode of proceeding against special bail on their recognizance, and as a means of repealing letters patent, in which cases it is an original proceeding. 2 Archb. Pr. K. B. 86. American Ry. Express Co. v. F. S. Royster Guano Co., 141 Va. 602, 126 S.E. 678, 679.

SCIRE FACIAS AD AUDIENDUM ERRORES. The name of a writ which is sued out after the plaintiff in error has assigned his errors. Fitzh. Nat.Brev. 20.

SCIRE FACIAS AD DISPROBANDUM DEBITUM. The name of a writ in use in Pennsylvania, which lies by a defendant in foreign attachment against the plaintiff, in order to enable him, within a year and a day next ensuing the time of payment to the plaintiff in the attachment, to disprove or avoid the debt recovered against him. Bouvier.

SCIRE FACIAS AD REHABENDAM TERRAM. Lies to enable a judgment debtor to recover back his lands taken under an elegit when the judgment creditor has satisfied or been paid the amount of his judgment. Chit. 692; Fost. on Sci.Fa. 58.

SCIRE FACIAS FOR THE CROWN. In English law. The summary proceeding by extent is only resorted to when a crown debtor is insolvent, or there is good ground for supposing that the debt may be lost by delay.' In ordinary cases where a debt or duty appears by record to be owing to the crown, the process for the crown is a writ of sci. quare executionem non; but should the defendant become insolvent pending this writ, the crown may abandon the proceeding and resort to an extent. Wharton.

SCIRE FACIAS QUARE RESTITUTIONEM NON. This writ lies where execution on a judgment has been levied, but the money has not been paid over to the plaintiff, and the judgment is afterwards reversed in error or on appeal; in such a case a scire facias is necessary before a writ of restitution can issue. Chit. 582; Fost. on Sci. Fa. 64.

SCIRE FACIAS SUR MORTGAGE. A writ issued upon the default of a mortgagor to make payments or observe conditions, requiring him to show cause why the mortgage should not be foreclosed, and the mortgaged property taken and sold in execution.

SCIRE FACIAS SUR MUNICIPAL CLAIM. A writ of scire facias, authorized to be issued in Pennsylvania, as a means of enforcing payment of a municipal claim (q. v.) out of the real estate upon which such claim is a lien.

SCIRE FECI. Lat. In practice. The name given to the sheriff's return to a writ of scire facias. that he has caused notice to be given to the party or parties against whom the writ was issued. 2 Archb. Pr. K. B. 98, 99.

SCIRE. In English law. The name of a writ formerly used to recover the amount of a judgment from an executor.

SCIRE FIERI INQUIRY. In English law. The name of a writ formerly used to recover the amount of a judgment from an executor.

SCIRE LEGES NON HOC EST VERBA EARUM TENERE, SED VIM AC POTESTATEM. To know the laws is not to observe their mere words, but their force and power; [that is, the essential meaning in which their efficacy resides.] Dig. 1, 3, 17; 1 Kent, Comm. 462.

SCIRE PROPRIE EST REM RATIONE ET PER CAUSAM COGNOSCERE. To know properly is to know a thing in its reason, and by its cause. We are truly said to know anything, where we know the true cause thereof. Co.Litt. 183b.

SCIREWYTE. In old English law. A tax or prestation paid to the sheriff for holding the asizes or county courts. Cowell.

SCITE, or SITE. The sitting or standing on any place; the seat or situation of a capital messuage, or the ground whereon it stands: Jacob.

SCOLD. A troublesome and angry woman, who, by brawling and wrangling among her neighbors, breaks the public peace, increases discord, and becomes a public nuisance to the neighborhood. 4 Steph.Comm. 276.

Common ’Scold

SCOPE.

Of Authority
Includes not only actual authorization conferred upon agent by his principal, but also that which has apparently or impliedly been delegated to agent. Angerosa v. White Co., 290 N.Y.S. 204, 208, 248 App.Div. 425.

Of a Patent
The boundaries or limits of the invention protected by the patent, which are not matters of metes and bounds and can never be defined in the definite sense employed in thinking of physical things, but must be determined by methods based upon established principles of patent law. Smith v. Mid-Continent Inv. Co., C.C.A.Mo., 106 F.2d 622, 624.

SCOT. In old English law. A tax, or tribute; one's share of a contribution.

SCOT AND LOT. In English law. The name of a customary contribution, laid upon all subjects according to their ability. Brown.

SCOT AND LOT VOTERS. In English law. Voters in certain boroughs entitled to the franchise in virtue of their paying this contribution. 2 Steph.Comm. 360.

SCOTAL. In old English law. An extortionate practice by officers of the forest who kept alehouses, and compelled the people to drink at their houses for fear of their displeasure. Prohibited by the charter of the forest, c. 7. Wharton.

See Charta de foresta.

SCOTCH MARRIAGES. See Gretna Green.

SCOTCH PEERS. Peers of the kindom of Scotland; of these sixteen are elected to parliament by the rest and represent the whole body. They are elected for one parliament only.

SCOTS. In English law. Assessments by commissioners of sewers.

SCOTTARE. To pay scot, tax, or customary dues. Cowell.

SCOUNDREL. An opprobrious epithet, implying rascality, villainy, or a want of honor or integrity. In slander, this word is not actionable per se. 2 Bouv.Inst. 2250.

SCRAMBLING POSSESSION. See Possession.

SCRATCHING THE TICKET. Where partisan voters support and vote for one or more of nominees of opposite political party. Swindall v. State Election Board, 168 Okl. 97, 32 P.2d 691, 696.

SCRIBA. Lat. A scribe; a secretary. Scriba regis, a king's secretary; a chancellor. Spelman.

SCRIBERE EST AGERE. To write is to act. Treasonable words set down in writing amount to overt acts of treason. 2 Rolle, 89; 4 Bl.Comm. 80; Broom, Max. 312, 967.

SCRIP. Certificates of ownership, either absolute or conditional, of shares in a public company, corporate profits, etc. An acknowledgment by the projectors of a company or the issuers of a loan that the person named therein (or more commonly the holder for the time being of the certificate) is entitled to a certain specified number of shares, debentures, bonds, etc. It is usually given in exchange for the letter of allotment, and in its turn is given up for the shares, debentures, or bonds which it represents. Scrip certificate. Lindl. Partn. 127; Sweet.

The term has also been applied in the United States to warrants or other like orders drawn on a municipal treasury (City of Alma v. Guaranty Sav. Bank, C.C.A.8, 60 F. 207, 8 C.C.A. 564,) to certificates showing the holder to be entitled to a certain portion or allotment of public or state lands, Wait v. State Land Office Com'r, 87 Mich. 353, 49 N.W. 600, and to the fractional paper currency issued by the United States during the period of the Civil War.

SCRIP DIVIDEND. See Dividend.

SCRIPT. Where instruments are executed in part and counterpart, the original or principal is so called.

English Probate Practice

A will, codicil, draft of will or codicil, or written instructions for the same. If the will is destroyed, a copy or any paper embodying its contents becomes a script, even though not made under the direction of the testator. Browne, Prob. Pr. 280.

SCRIPTIE OBLIGATIONES SCRIPTIS TOLLUNTUR, ET NUDI CONSENSUS OBLIGATIO CONTRARIO CONSENSU DISSOLVITUR. Written obligations are superseded by writings, and an obligation of naked assent is dissolved by assent to the contrary.

SCRIPTORIUM. In old records. A place in monasteries, where writing was done. Spelman.

SCRIPTUM. Lat. A writing; something written. Fleta, L 2, c. 60, § 25.

SCRIPTUM INDENTATUM. A writing indented; an indenture or deed.

SCRIPTUM OBLIGATORIUM. A writing obligatory. The technical name of a bond in old pleadings. Any writing under seal.

CRFVENER. A writer; scribe; conveyancer. One whose occupation is to draw contracts, write deeds and mortgages, and prepare other species of written instruments.

Also an agent to whom property is intrusted by others for the purpose of lending it out at an interest payable to his principal, and for a commission or bonus for himself, whereby he gains his livelihood.

Money Scrivener

A money broker. The name was also formerly applied in England to a person (generally an attorney or solicitor) whose business was to find investments for the money of his clients, and see to perfecting the securities, and who was often intrusted with the custody of the securities and the collection of the interest and principal. Williams v. Walker, 2 Sandf.Ch. (N.Y.) 325.

SCROLL. A mark intended to supply the place of a seal, made with a pen or other instrument of writing. Mitch. R. E. and Con XV. 454, 455.

A paper or parchment containing some writing, and rolled up so as to conceal it.

SCROOP'S INN. An obsolete law society, also called "Sergeants' Place," opposite to St. Andrew's Church, Holborn, London.

SCRUET-ROLL. In old practice. A species of roll or record, on which the bail on habeas corpus was entered.

SCRUTATOR. Lat. In old English law. A searcher or bailiff of a river; a water-bailiff, whose business was to look to the king's rights, as to his wrecks, his flotsam, jetsam, water-strays, royal fishes. Hale, de Jure Mar. par. 1, c. 5.

SCURRILOUS. The low and indecent language of the meaner sort of people, low indecency or abuse; mean; foul; vile, synonymous with vulgar; foul or foul-mouthed. U. S. v. Strong, D.C. Wash., 263 F. 789, 7%; U. S. v. Ault, D.C.Wash., 263 F. 800, 810.

SCUSSUS. In old European law. Shaken or beaten out; threshed, as grain. Spelman.

A pecuniary composition or commutation made by a tenant by knight-service in lieu of actual service. 2 Bl.Comm. 74.

A pecuniary aid or tribute originally reserved by particular lords, instead or in lieu of personal service, varying in amount according to the expenditure which the lord had to incur in his personal attendance upon the king in his wars. Wright, Ten. 121-134.

SCUTAGIO HABENDO. A writ that anciently lay against tenants by knight's service to serve in the wars, or send sufficient persons, or pay a certain sum. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 83.

SCUTE, A French coin of gold, coined A.D. 1427, of the value of 3s. 4d.

SCUTELLA. A scuttle; anything of a flat or broad shape like a shield. Cowell.

SCUTELLA ELEEMOSYNARIA. An alms-basket.

SCUTIFER. In old records. Esquire; the same as "armiger." Spelman.

SCUTUM ARMORUM. A shield or coat of arms. Cowell.

SCYRA. In old English law. Shire; county; the inhabitants of a county.

SCYREGEMOTE. In Saxon law. The meeting or court of the shire. This was the most important court in the Saxon polity, having jurisdiction of both ecclesiastical and secular causes. Its meetings were held twice in the year. Its Latin name was "curia comitatis."

SE DEFENDENDO. Lat. In defending himself; in self-defense. Homicide committed se defendendo is excusable.

SEA. The ocean; the great mass of water which surrounds the land. Snowdon v. Guion, 50 N.Y. Super.Ct. 143. In marine insurance "sea" includes not only the high seas but the bays, inlets, and rivers as high up as the tide ebbs and flows. Mannheim Ins. Co. v. Charles Clarke & Co., Tex. Civ.App., 157 S.W. 291, 293.

Beyond Sea

In England, this phrase means beyond the limits of the British Isles; in America, outside the limits of the United States or of the particular state, as the case may be.

High Seas

The ocean; public waters. According to the English doctrine, the high sea begins at the distance of three miles from the coast of any country; according to the American view, at low-water mark, except in the case of small harbors and roadsteads inclosed within the fauces terrce. U. S. v. Grush, 26 F.Cas. 50; U. S. v. Rodgers, 14 S.Ct. 109, 150 U.S. 249, 37 L.Ed. 1071. The open ocean outside of the fauces terrce, as distinguished from arms of the sea; the waters of the ocean without the boundary of any county. Any waters on the sea-coast which are without the boundaries of low-water mark.

Main Sea

The open, uninclosed ocean; or that portion of the sea which is without the fauces terrce on the sea-coast, in contradistinction to that which is surrounded or inclosed between narrow headlands or promontories. U. S. v. Grush, 26 F.Cas. 48; U. S. v. Rodgers, 14 S.Ct. 109, 150 U.S. 249, 37 L.Ed. 1071.

Sea-Batteries

Assaults by masters in the merchant service upon seamen at sea.

Sea-Bed

All that portion of land under the sea that lies beyond the sea-shore.

Sea-Brief

Sea-Letter, which title see.

Sea-Greens

In the Scotch law. Grounds overflowed by the sea in spring tides. Bell.

Sea-Laws

Laws relating to the sea, as the laws of Oleron, etc.

Sea-Letter

A species of manifest, containing a description of the ship’s cargo, with the port from which it comes and the port of destination. This is one of the documents necessary to be carried by all neutral vessels, in the merchant service, in time of war, as an evidence of their nationality. 4 Kent, Comm. 157; Sleght v. Hartshorne, 2 Johns. (N.Y.) 540.

The last sea letter was issued at the Port of New York in 1806, and the use of sea letters was discontinued by proclamation of President Madison in 1815. 46 U.S.C.A. §§ 61, 62, note. The words “sea letter,” however, are still carried in those sections of the Code, but in 1948 were eliminated from the criminal code as obsolete. 18 U.S.C. A. § 507, note.

Sea-, Reeve

An officer in maritime towns and places who took care of the maritime rights of the lord of the manor, and watched the shore, and collected wrecks for the lord. Tomlins.

Sea-Rovers

Pirates and robbers at sea.

Sea-Shore

The margin of the sea in its usual and ordinary state. When the tide is out, low-water mark is the margin of the sea; and, when the sea is full, the margin is high-water mark. The sea-shore is therefore all the ground between the ordinary high-water mark and low-water mark. It cannot be considered as including any ground always covered by the sea, for then it would have no definite limit on the sea-board. Neither can it include any part of the upland, for the same reason. Commonwealth of Massachusetts v. State of New York, 46 S.Ct. 357, 362, 271 U.S. 65, 70 L.Ed. 838; That space of land over which the waters of the sea are spread in the highest water during the winter season. Civ.Code La. art. 442.

Seaworthy, Seaworthiness

See those titles.

A particular sign, made to attest in the most formal manner, the execution of an instrument.

Merlin defines a seal to be a plate of metal with a flat surface, on which is engraved the arms of a prince or nation, or private individual, or other device, with which an impression may be made on wax or other substance on paper or parchment in order to authenticate them. The impression thus made is also called a “seal.” Repert. mot “Seceu.”

"Seals" serve as an authentication of an instrument and also as the badge of a specialty. Caruthers V. Peninsular Life Ins. Co., 150 Fla. 467, 7 So.2d 841, 842.

Common Seal

A seal adopted and used by a corporation for authenticating its corporate acts and executing legal instruments.

Corporate Seal

The official or common seal of an incorporated company or association.

Great Seal

In English law. A seal by virtue of which a great part of the royal authority is exercised. The office of the lord chancellor, or lord keeper, is created by the delivery of the great seal into his custody. There is one great seal for all public acts of state which concern the United Kingdom. Mozley & Whiteley. In American law, the United...
States and also each of the states has and uses a seal, always carefully described by law, and sometimes officially called the "great" seal, though in some instances known simply as "the seal of the United States," or "the seal of the state."

Private Seal

The seal (however made) of a private person or corporation, as distinguished from a seal employed by a state or government or any of its bureaus or departments.

Privy Seal

In English law. A seal used in making out grants or letters patent, preparatory to their passing under the great seal. 2 Bl.Comm. 347.

Public Seal

A seal belonging to and used by one of the bureaus or departments of government, for authenticating or attesting documents, process, or records. An impression made of some device, by means of a piece of metal or other hard substance, kept and used by public authority. Kirksey v. Bates, 7 Port. (Ala.) 534, 31 Am.Dec. 722.

Quarter Seal

In Scotch law. A seal kept by the director of the chancery; in shape and impression the fourth part of the great seal, and called in statutes the "testimonial" of the great seal. Bell.

Seal Days

In English practice. Motion days in the court of chancery, so called because every motion had to be stamped with the seal, which did not lie in court in the ordinaryittings out of term. Wharton.

Seal Office

In English practice. An office for the sealing of judicial writs.

Seal-Paper

In English law. A document issued by the lord chancellor, previously to the commencement of the sittings, detailing the business to be done for each day in his court, and in the courts of the lords justices and vice-chancellors. The master of the rolls in like manner issued a seal-paper in respect of the business to be heard before him. Smith, Ch.Pr. 9.

SEALLED. Authenticated by a seal; executed by the affixing of a seal. Also fastened up in any manner so as to be closed against inspection of the contents.

SEALLED AND DELIVERED. These words, followed by the signatures of the witnesses, constitute the usual formula for the attestation of conveyances.

SEALLED INSTRUMENT. An instrument of writing to which the party to be bound has affixed not only his name, but also his seal, or (in those jurisdictions where it is allowed) a scroll.

SEALED VERDICT. When the jury have agreed upon a verdict, if the court is not in session at the time, they are permitted (usually) to put their written finding in a sealed envelope, and then separate. This verdict they return when the court again convenes. The verdict thus returned has the same effect, and must be treated in the same manner, as if returned in open court before any separation of the jury had taken place. Sutliff v. Gilbert, 8 Ohio, 408; Young v. Seymour, 4 Neb. 89. But see Spielter v. North German Lloyd S. S. Co., 249 N.Y.S. 358, 365, 232 App.Div. 104, holding that it is mere agreement reached by jurors, and does not become final until it is read into record and jurors discharged.

SEALING. In matters of succession, the placing, by the proper officer, of seals on the effects of a succession for the purpose of preserving them, and for the interest of third persons. The seals are affixed by order of the judge having jurisdiction. Civ.Code La. art. 1075.

SEALING UP. Where a party to an action has been ordered to produce a document part of which is either irrelevant to the matters in question or is privileged from production, he may, by leave of the court, seal up that part, if he makes an affidavit stating that it is irrelevant or privileged. Daniell, Ch. Pr. 1681. The sealing up is generally done by fastening pieces of paper over the part with gum or wafers. Sweet.

SEALS. In Louisiana. Seals are placed upon the effects of a deceased person, in certain cases, by a public officer, as a method of taking official custody of the succession. See Sealing.

SEAMEN. Sailors; mariners; persons whose business is navigating ships, or who are connected with the ship as such and in some capacity assist in its conduct, maintenance or service. Commonly exclusive of the officers of a ship. The Hurricane, D.C.Pa., 2 F.2d 70, 72; City of Los Angeles v. United Dredging Co., C.C.A.Cal., 14 F 2d 364, 366; The Lillian, D.C.Me., 16 F.2d 146, 148. One whose occupation is to navigate vessels upon the sea including all those on board whose labor contributes to the accomplishment of the main object in which the vessel is engaged. Osland v. Star Fish & Oyster Co., C.C.A.Ala., 107 F.2d 113, 114. One whose duties are maritime in character and are rendered on a vessel in navigable waters. Helena Glendale Ferry Co. v. Walling, C.C.A.Ark. 132 F.2d 616, 619, 620.

A vessel must be in motion or capable of motion and regarded legally as in motion in order that those employed in its use may be regarded as "seamen". Spinner v. Waterways Fuel & Dock Co., 70 Ohio App. 121, 41 N.E. 2d 144, 145, 146.

SEANCE. In French law. A session; as of some public body.
SEARCH

SEARCHER. In English law. An officer of the customs, whose duty it is to examine and search all ships outward bound, to ascertain whether they have any prohibited or uncustomed goods on board. Wharton. Jacob.

SEASHORE. That portion of land adjacent to the sea which is alternately covered and left dry by the ordinary flux and reflux of the tides. Wood v. Maitland, 8 N.Y.S.2d 146, 151, 169 Misc. 484. See, also, Sea.

SEASONAL EMPLOYMENT. As used in compensation laws, as basis for determining amount of compensation, refers to occupations which can be carried on only at certain seasons or fairly definite portions of the year, and does not include such occupations as may be carried on throughout entire year. Hiestand v. Ristau, 135 Neb. 881, 284 N.W. 756, 760. Pryor v. Brickle, Del., 5 A.2d 242, 244, 1 Terry 5.

SEATED LAND. Land that is occupied, cultivated, improved, reclaimed, farmed, or used as a place of residence. Residence without cultivation, or cultivation without residence, or both together, impart to land the character of being seated. The term is used, as opposed to "unseated land," in Pennsylvania tax laws. Earley v. Ewer, 102 Pa. 340; Coal Co. v. Fales, 55 Pa. 98.

SEAWAN. The name used by the Algonquin Indians for the shell beads (or wampum) which passed among the Indians as money. Webster.

SEAWORTHINESS. In marine insurance. A warranty of seaworthiness means that the vessel is competent to resist the ordinary attacks of wind and weather, and is competently equipped and manned for the voyage, with a sufficient crew, and with sufficient means to sustain them, and with a captain of general good character and nautical skill. 3 Kent, Commentaries, 287.

A warranty of seaworthiness extends not only to the condition of the structure of the ship itself, but requires that it be properly laden, and provided with a competent master, a sufficient number of competent officers and seamen, and the requisite appurtenances and equipments, such as sails, cables and anchors, cordage and sails, food, water, fuel, and lights, and other necessary or proper stores and implements for the voyage. See, also, Seaworthy.

"Seaworthiness" involves no more than reasonable fitness for purpose of a voyage. In re Gravel Products Corporation, C.C.A.N.Y., 24 F.2d 702, 703.

SEAWORTHY. This adjective, applied to a vessel, signifies that she is properly constructed, prepared, manned, equipped, and provided, for the voyage intended. See Seaworthiness.

The term "seaworthy" is somewhat equivocal. In its more literal sense, it signifies capable of navigating the sea; but, more exactly, it implies a condition to be and remain in safety, in the condition she is in, whether at sea, in port, or on a railway, stripped and under repairs. If, when the policy attaches, she is in a suitable place, and capable, when repaired and equipped, of navigating the sea, she is seaworthy. But where a vessel is warranted seaworthy for a specified voyage, the place and usual length being given, something more is implied than mere physically strong and capable; she must be suitably officered and manned, supplied with provisions and water, and furnished with charts and instruments, and, especially in time of war, with documents necessary to her security against hostile capture. The term "seaworthy," as used in the law and practice of insurance, does not mean, as the term would seem to imply, capable of going to sea or of being navigated on the sea; it imports something very different, and much more, viz., that she is sound, staunch, and strong, in all respects, and equipped, furnished, and provided with officers and men, provisions and documents, for a certain service. In a policy for a definite voyage, the term "seaworthy" means "sufficient for such a vessel and voyage." Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. v. Watson, C.C.A.Va., 19 F.2d 832, 833; The Newport, C.C.A.Cal., 7 F.2d 452, 453.

SEBASTOMANIA. See Insanity.

SECK. A want of remedy by distress. Litt. § 218. See Rent. Want of present fruit or profit, as in the case of the reversion without rent or other service, except fealty. Co.Litt. 151b, n. 5.

SECOND. This term, as used in law, may denote either sequence in point of time or inferiority or postponement in respect to rank, lien, order, or privilege.

SECOND LIEN. One which takes, rank immediately after a first lien on the same property and is next entitled to satisfaction out of the proceeds.

SECONDARY, n. In English practice. An officer of the courts of king's bench and common pleas; so called because he was second or next to the chief officer. In the king's bench he was called "Master of the King's Bench Office," and was a deputy of the prothonotary or chief clerk. 1 Archb. Pr. K. B. 11, 12. By St. 7 Wm. IV. and 1 Vict. c. 30, the office of secondary was abolished.

An officer who is next to the chief officer. Also an officer of the corporation of London, before whom inquiries to assess damages are held, as before sheriffs in counties. Wharton.

SECONDARY, adj. Of a subsequent, subordinate, or inferior kind or class; generally opposed to "primary."

SECONDARY BOYCOTT. Any combination if its purpose and effect are to coerce customers or patrons, or suppliers through fear of loss or bodily harm, to withhold or withdraw their business relations from employer who is under attack. Wright v. Teamsters' Union Local No. 690, 33 Wash. 905, 207 P.2d 662, 665.

SECONDARY EVIDENCE. That which is inferior to primary. Thus, a copy of an instrument, or oral evidence of its contents, is secondary evidence of the instrument and contents. It is that species of evidence which becomes admissible, as being the next best, when the primary or past evidence of the fact in question is lost or inaccessible; as when a witness details orally the contents of an instrument which is lost or destroyed. Williams v. Davis, 56 Tex. 253; Baccum v. George, 65 Ala. 259; Roberts v. Dixon, 50 Kan. 436, 31 P. 1083.

SECONDARY LIABILITY. A liability which does not attach until or except upon the fulfillment of certain conditions; as that of a surety, or that of an accommodation indorser.

SECOND-HAND EVIDENCE. Evidence which has passed through one or more media before reaching the witness; hearsay evidence.

SECONDS. In criminal law. Those persons who assist, direct, and support others engaged in fighting a duel.

SECRET. Concealed; hidden; not made public; particularly, in law, kept from the knowledge or notice of persons liable to be affected by the act, transaction, deed, or other thing spoken of.

Webster defines "secrete" as "to deposit in a place of hiding, to hide, to conceal;" and defines the adjective "secret" as "hidden, concealed;" and the noun as "something studiously concealed, a thing kept from general knowledge, what is not revealed." The Century Dictionary defines the verb "secrete" as "to make or keep secret, hide, conceal, remove from observation, or the knowledge of others;" and defines the adjective "secret" as "set or kept apart, hidden, concealed;" and the noun as "something studiously hidden or concealed, a thing kept from general knowledge, what is not or should not be revealed." Something known only to one or a few and kept from others. Ferrell v. State, 68 Tex.Cr.R. 487, 152 S. W. 901, 903; Kaumagraph Co. v. Stampagraph Co., 235 N.Y. 1, 138 N.E. 485, 487; Rubner v. Gursky, Sup., 21 N.Y.S.2d 558, 561.

As to secret "Committee," "Equity," "Partnership," and "Trust," see those titles.

SECRET LIEN. A lien reserved by the vendor of chattels, who has delivered them to the vendee, to secure the payment of the price, which is concealed from all third persons.

SECRET SERVICE. A branch of government service concerned with the detection of counterfeiting and other offenses, civil or political, committed or threatened by persons who operate in secrecy. It is under the charge of the treasury department. Its rules and regulations, promulgated by the department, are laws within R. S. U. S. § 753 (28 U.S.C.A. § 2241), authorizing the issuance by a federal court of the writ of habeas corpus in case of a prisoner in custody for an act done in pursuance of a law of the United States; U. S. ex rel. Flynn v. Fuellhart, C.C.Pa., 106 F. 911.

SECRETARY. An official scribe, amanuensis, or writer, or person employed to write letters, dispatches, orders, public or private papers, records, and the like. Mauritz v. Schwind, Tex.Civ.App., 101 S.W.2d 1085, 1090.

Of a corporation or association, an officer charged with the direction and management of that part of the business of the company which is concerned with keeping the records, the official correspondence, with giving and receiving notices, countersigning documents, etc.
SECRETARY

Also a name given to several of the heads of executive departments in the government of the United States; as the "Secretary of War," "Secretary of the Interior," etc. It is also the style of some of the members of the English cabinet; as the "Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs." There are also secretaries of embassies and legations.

SECRETARY OF DECREES AND INJUNCTIONS. An officer of the English court of chancery. The office was abolished by St. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 87, § 23.

SECRETARY OF EMBASSY. A diplomatic officer appointed as secretary or assistant to an ambassador or minister plenipotentiary.

SECRETARY OF LEGATION. An officer employed to attend a foreign mission and to perform certain duties as clerk.

SECRETARY OF STATE. In American law. Title of the chief of the executive bureau of the United States called the "Department of State." He is a member of the cabinet, and is charged with the general administration of the international and diplomatic affairs of the government. In many of the state governments there is an executive officer bearing the same title and exercising important functions. In English law. The secretaries of state are cabinet ministers attending the sovereign for the receipt and dispatch of letters, grants, petitions, and many of the most important affairs of the kingdom, both foreign and domestic. There are five principal secretaries,—one for the home department, another for foreign affairs, a third for the colonies, a fourth for war, and a fifth for India. Wharton.

SECRETARY OF THE CROWN. To conceal or hide away. Particularly, to put property out of the reach of creditors, either by corporally hiding it, or putting the title in another's name, or otherwise hindering creditors from levying on it or attaching it. Guile v. McNanny, 14 Minn. 522 (Gil. 391) 100 Am.Dec. 244; Sturz v. Fischer, 36 N.Y.S. 894, 15 Misc. 410.

SECRETARY OF STATE. The production in court of documents containing secrets of state will not be compelled if it would be injurious to the public interest and if the officer in custody of them claims the privilege. Beatson v. Skene, 5 H. & N. 838, per Pollock, C. B. This is said to include confidential communications made by servants of the Crown to each other. 21 Q. B. D. 512. The question of their production is to be decided by the head of the department having custody of them and not by the court. 5 H. & N. 838; [19001 1 Ch. 347; 13 Low. Can. 33 (where the cases were fully considered). Appeal of Hartranft, 85 Pa. 433, 27 Am.Rep. 667 (in which Agnew, C. J., vigorously dissented), where a ruling in the trial of Aaron Burr was cited as a precedent. That it is for the judge to pass on the question, see Wigm. Evid. § 2376. In 21 Q. B. D. 515, Field, J., said that if he were sitting, he should consider himself entitled to examine the documents privately, and ascertain the real motive of the refusal to produce.

SECT. As applied to religious bodies. A party or body of persons who unite in holding certain special doctrines or opinions concerning religion, which distinguish them from others holding the same general religious belief. Gerhardt v. Heid, 66 N.D. 444, 267 N.W. 127.

SECTA. In old English law. Suit; attendance at court; the plaintiff's suit or following, i.e., the witnesses whom he was required, in the ancient practice, to bring with him and produce in court, for the purpose of confirming his claim, before the defendant was put to the necessity of answering the declaration. 3 Bl. Comm. 295, 344; Bract. fol. 214a. A survival from this proceeding is seen in the formula still used at the end of declarations, "and therefore he brings his suit," (et inde producit sectam.) This word, in its secondary meaning, signifies suit in the courts; lawsuit.

SECTA AD CURIAM. A writ that lay against him who refused to perform his suit either to the county court or the court-baron. Cowell.

SECTA AD FURNUM. In old English law. Suit due to a man's public oven or bake-house. 3 Bl. Comm. 235.

SECTA AD JUSTICIAM FACIENDAM. In old English law. A service which a man is bound to perform by his fee.

SECTA AD MOLENDINUM. A writ which lay for the owner of a mill against the inhabitants of a place where such mill is situated, for not doing suit to the plaintiff's mill; that is, for not having their corn ground at it. Brown.

SECTA AD TORRALE. In old English law. Suit due to a man's kiln or malthouse. 3 Bl. Comm. 235.

SECTA CURVE. In old English law. Suit of court; attendance at court. The service, incumbent upon feudal tenants, of attending the lord at his court, both to form a jury when required, and also to answer for their own actions when complained of.

SECTA EST PUGNA CIVILIS; SICUT ACTORES ARMANTUR ACTIONIBUS, ET, QUASI, GLADII ACCINGUNTUR, ITA REI MUNIUNT EXCEPTIONIBUS, ET DEFENDUNTUR, QUASI, CLYPEIS. Hob. 20. A suit is a civil warfare; for as the plaintiffs are armed with actions, and, as it were, girded with swords, so the defendants are fortified with pleas, and are defended, as it were, by shields.

SECTA FACIENDA PER ILLAM QUPE HABET ENICIAM PARTEM. A writ to compel the heir, who has the elder's part of the co-heirs, to perform suit and services for all the coparceners. Reg. Orig. 177.

SECTA QUE SCRIPTO NITITUR A SCRIPTO VARIARI NON DEBET. Jenk. Cent. 65. A suit which is based upon a writing ought not to vary from the writing.
SECTA REGALIS. A suit so called by which all persons were bound twice in the year to attend in the sheriff’s tourn, in order that they might be informed of things relating to the public peace. It was so called because the sheriff’s tourn was the king’s leet, and it was held in order that the people might be bound by oath to bear true allegiance to the king. Cowell.

SECTA UNICA TANTUM FACIENDA PRO PLURIBUS H.AEREDITATIBUS. A writ for an heir who was distrained by the lord to do more suits than one, that he should be allowed to do one suit only in respect of the land of divers heirs descended to him. Cowell.

SECTARIAN. Denominational; devoted to, peculiar to, pertaining to, or promotive of, the interest of a sect, or sects; in a broader sense, used to describe the activities of the followers of one faith as related to those of adherents of another. The term is most comprehensive in scope. Gerhardt v. Heid, 66 N.D. 444, 267 N.W. 127, 130.

See, also, Sect.

SECTATORES. Suitors of court who, among the Saxons, gave their judgment or verdict in civil suits upon the matter of fact and law. 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, 22.

SECTION. In text-books, codes, statutes, and other juridical writings, the smallest distinct and numbered subdivisions are commonly called "sections," sometimes "articles," and occasionally "paragraphs." Ex parte Pea River Power Co., 207 Ala. 6, 91 So. 920.

The general and proper acception of the terms "section," "half," and "quarter section," as well as their construction by the general land department, denotes the land in the sectional and subdivisional lines, and not the exact quantity which a perfect admeasurement of an unobstructed surface would declare. Brown v. Hardin, 21 Ark. 327.

SECTION OF LAND. In American land law. A division or parcel of land, on the government survey, comprising one square mile or 640 acres. Each “township” (six miles square) is divided by straight lines into thirty-six sections; and these are again divided into half-sections and quarter-sections. South Florida Farms Co. v. Goodno, 84 Fla. 532, 94 So. 672, 675.

SECULAR CLERGY. In ecclesiastical law, the parochial clergy, who perform their ministry in, seculo (in the world), and who are thus distinguished from the monastic or "regular" clergy. Steph. Comm. 681, note.

SECUNDUM. Lat. In the civil and common law. According to. Occurring in many phrases of familiar use, as follows:

SECUNDUM IEOUM ET BONUM. According to what is just and right.

SECUNDUM ALLEGATA ET PROBATA. According to what is alleged and proved; according to the allegations and proofs. 15 East, 81; Cloutman v. Tunison, 1 Sumn. 375, F.Cas.No.2,907.

SECUNDUM ARTEM. According to the art, trade, business, or science.

SECUNDUM BONOS MORES. According to good usages; according to established custom; regularly; orderly.

SECUNDUM FORMAM DONI. According to the form of the gift or grant. See Formedon.

SECUNDUM FORMAM STATUTI. According to the form of the statute.

SECUNDUM LEGEM COMMUNEM. According to the common law.

SECUNDUM NATURAM EST COMMODA CU-JUSQUE REI EUM SEQUI, QUEM SEQUUNTUR INCOMMODA. It is according to nature that the advantages of anything should attach to him to whom the disadvantages attach. Dig. 50, 17, 10.

SECUNDUM NORMAM LEGIS. According to the rule of law; by the intention and rule of law.

SECUNDUM REGULAM. According to the rule; by rule.

SECUNDUM SUBJECTAM MATERIAM. According to the subject-matter. 1 Bl. Comm. 229. All agreements must be construed secundum subjectam materiam if the matter will bear it. 2 Mod. 80, arg.

SECURE. To give security; to assure of payment, performance, or indemnity; to guaranty or make certain the payment of a debt or discharge of an obligation. Ex parte Reynolds, 52 Ark. 330, 12 S.W. 570.

One "secures" his creditor by giving him a lien, mortgage, pledge, or other security, to be used in case the debtor or fails to make payment.

Also, not exposed to danger; safe; so strong, stable or firm as to insure safety. Wenzel & Henoch Const. Co. v. Industrial Commission, 202 Wis. 595, 233 N.W. 777, 779.
SECURED CREDITOR. A creditor who holds some special pecuniary assurance of payment of his debt, such as a mortgage or lien. In re New York Title and Mortgage Co., 160 Misc. 67, 289 N.Y.S. 771, 785, 160 Misc. 67.

SECURITAS. In old English law. Security; sur-

In the civil law. An acquittance or release. Spelman; Calvin.

SECURITATEM INVENIENDI. An ancient writ, lying for the sovereign, against any of his subjects, to stay them from going out of the kingdom to foreign parts; the ground whereof is that every man is bound to serve and defend the commonwealth as the crown shall think fit. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 115.

SECURITATIS PACIS. In old English law. Security of the peace. A writ that lay for one who was threatened with death or bodily harm by another, against him who so threatened. Reg. Orig. 88.

SECURITY. Protection; assurance; indemnification. The term is usually applied to an obligation, pledge, mortgage, deposit, lien, etc., given by a debtor in order to make sure the payment or performance of his debt, by furnishing the creditor with a resource to be used in case of failure in the principal obligation. The name is also sometimes given to one who becomes surety or guarantor for another. Bissinger & Co. v. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co., 83 Or. 288, 163 P. 592, 593.

Missa Pluribus, Et Plus Vident Oculi

SECURUS. Lat. Otherwise; to the contrary. This word is used in the books to indicate the converse of a foregoing proposition, or the rule applicable to a different state of facts, or an exception to a rule before stated.

SECUS. Lat. But it is not allowed. A phrase used in the old reports, to signify that the court disagreed with the arguments of counsel.

SED NON ALLOCATUR. Lat. But inquiry; examine this further. A remark indicating, briefly, that the particular statement or rule laid down is doubted or challenged in respect to its correctness.

SED PER CURIAM. Lat. But by the court. This phrase is used in the reports to introduce a statement made by the court, on the argument, at variance with the propositions advanced by counsel, or the opinion of the whole court, where that is different from the opinion of a single judge immediately before quoted.

SED QUIERE. Lat. But inquire; examine this further. A remark indicating, briefly, that the particular statement or rule laid down is doubted or challenged in respect to its correctness.

SED VIDE. Lat. But see. This remark, followed by a citation, directs the reader’s attention to an authority or a statement which conflicts with or contradicts the statement or principle laid down.
SEDATO ANIMO. Lat. With settled purpose.

SEDE PLENA. Lat. The see being filled. A phrase used when a bishop's see is not vacant.

SEDENTE CURIA. Lat. The court sitting; during the sitting of the court.

SEDERUNT, ACTS OF. In Scotch law. Certain ancient ordinances of the court of session, conferring upon the courts power to establish general rules of practice. Bell.

SEDES. Lat. A see; the dignity of a bishop. 3 Steph. Comm. 65.

SEDGE FLAT. A tract of land below high-water mark. Church v. Meeker, 34 Conn. 421.

SEDENTIO. An insurrectionary movement tending towards treason, but wanting an overt act; attempts made by meetings or speeches, or by publications, to disturb the tranquillity of the state. Arizona Pub. Co. v. Harris, 181 P. 373, 375, 20 Ariz. 446.

The distinction between "sedition" and "treason" consists in this: that though the ultimate object of sedition is a violation of the public peace, or at least such a course of measures as evidently engenders it, yet it does not aim at direct and open violence against the laws or the subversion of the constitution. Als.Crim.Law, 580.

In Scotch law. The raising commotions or disturbances in the state. It is a revolt against legitimate authority. Ersk. Inst. 4, 4, 14.

In English law. The offense of publishing, verbally or otherwise, any words or document with the intention of exciting disaffection, hatred, or contempt against the sovereign, or the government and constitution of the kingdom, or either house of parliament, or the administration of justice, or of exciting his majesty's subjects to attempt, otherwise than by lawful means, the alteration of any matter in church or state, or of exciting feelings of ill will and hostility between different classes of his majesty's subjects. Sweet. State v. Shepherd, 177 Mo. 205, 76 S.W. 79, 99 Am. St.Rep. 624.

SEDUCED TO LEAVE SERVICE. An injury for which a master may have an action on the case.

SEDUCTION. The act of seducing. Act of man enticing woman to have unlawful intercourse with him by means of persuasion, solicitation, promises, bribes, or other means without employment of force. Van De Velde v. Colle, 8 N.J.Misc. 782, 152 A. 645, 646.

At common law seduction is recognized merely as creating a civil liability, and actions for seduction are based solely upon relation of master and servant and no one but those entitled to services can maintain action. Under statutory provisions in many states the woman is now permitted to recover for her own seduction.

In many states seduction has been made a criminal offense. Previous chaste character of the woman at time of seduction is essential under some statutes.

SEE. The circuit of a bishop's jurisdiction; or his office or dignity, as being bishop of a given diocese.

SEEN. This word, when written by the drawee on a bill of exchange, amounts to an acceptance by the law merchant. Barnet v. Smith, 30 N.H. 256, 64 Am.Dec. 290; Peterson v. Hubbard, 28 Mich. 197.

SEIGNIOR, in its general signification, means "lord," but in law it is particularly applied to the lord of a fee or of a manor; and the fee, dominions, or manor of a seignior is thence termed a "seigniory," i.e., a lordship. He who is a lord, but of no manor, and therefore unable to keep a court, is termed a "seignior in gross." Kitch. 206; Cowell.

Seignior or Seigneur. Among the feudists, this name signified lord of the fee. Fitzh.N.B. 23. Seigneur is still used in French Canada. The most extended signification of this word includes not only a lord or peer of parliament, but is applied to the owner or proprietor of a thing, hence the owner of a hawk, and the master of a fishing vessel, is called a seigneur. 37 Edw. III, c. 19; Barrington, Stat. 238.

SEIGNIORAGE. A royalty or prerogative of the sovereign, whereby an allowance of gold and silver, brought in the mass to be exchanged for coin, is claimed. Cowell. Mintage; the charge for coining bullion into money at the mint.

SEIGNIORESS. A female superior.

SEIZED IN DEMESNE AS OF FEE. This is the strict technical expression used to describe the ownership in "an estate in fee-simple in possession in a corporeal hereditament." The word "seized" is used to express the "seisin" or owner's possession of a freehold property; the phrase "in demesne," or "in his demesne," (in dominico suo) signifies that he is seised as owner of the land itself, and not merely of the seigniory or services; and the concluding words, "as of fee," import that he is seised of an estate of inheritance in fee-simple. Where the subject is incorporeal, or the estate expectant on a precedent freehold, the words "in his demesne" are omitted. (Co. Litt.
17a; Fleta, 1. 5, c. 5, § 18; Bract. 1. 4, tr. 5, c. 2,
§ 2.) Brown.

SEISI. In old English law. Seised; possessed.

SEISIN. The completion of the feudal investiture, by which the tenant was admitted into the feud, and performed the rights of homage and fealty.
Stearns, Real Act. 2. Possession with an intent on the part of him who holds it to claim a freehold interest. Deshong v. Deshong, 186 Pa. 227, possession according to the nature of the estate.

Upon the introduction of the feudal law into England, the word "seisin" was applied only to the possession of an estate of freehold, in contradistinction to that precarious kind of possession by which tenants in villeinage held their lands, which was considered to be the possession of those in whom the freehold continued. The word still retains its original signification, being applied exclusively to the possession of land of a freehold tenure, it being inaccurate to use the word as expressive of the possession of lease-holds or terms of years, or even of copyholds. Brown.

Under our law, the word "seisin" has no accurately de-defined technical meaning. At common law, it imported a feudal investiture of title by actual possession. With us it has the force of possession under some legal title or right to hold. This possession, so far as possession alone is involved, may be shown by parol; but, if it is intended to show possession under a legal title, then the title must be shown by proper conveyance for that purpose. Ford
v. Garmer, 49 Ala. 603.

Every person in whom a seisin is required by any of the provisions of this chapter shall be deemed to have been seised, if he may have had any right, title, or interest in the inheritance. G.S.N.C. §1 29-1, rule 12.

Actual Seisin

Possession of the freehold by the pedis positio of one’s self or one’s tenant or agent, or by construction of law, as in the case of a state grant or a conveyance under the statutes of uses, or (probably) of grant or devise where there is no actual adverse possession; it means actual possession as distinguished from constructive possession or possession in law. Carr v. Anderson, 6
App.Div. 6, 39 N.Y.S. 746.

Constructive Seisin

Seisin in law where there is no seisin in fact; as where the state issues a patent to a person who never takes any sort of possession of the lands granted, he has constructive seisin of all the land in his grant, though another person is at the time 351.

Covenant of Seisin

See Covenant.

Equitable Seisin

A seisin which is analogous to legal seisin; that is, seisin of an equitable estate in land. Thus a mortgagor is said to have equitable seisin of the land by receipt of the rents. Sweet.

Livery of Seisin

Delivery of possession; called, by the feudists,
"investiture."

Primer Seisin

In English law. The right which the king had, when any of his tenants died seised of a knight’s fee, to receive of the heir, provided he were of full age, one whole year’s profits of the lands, if they were in immediate possession; and half a year’s profits, if the lands were in reversion, expectant on an estate for life. 2 Bl. Comm. 66.

Quasi Seisin

A term applied to the possession which a copyholder has of the land to which he has been admitted. The freehold in copyhold lands being in the lord, the copyholder cannot have seisin of them in the proper sense of the word, but he has a customary or quasi seisin analogous to that of a freeholder. Williams, Seis. 126; Sweet.

Seisin in Deed

Actual possession of the freehold; the same as actual seisin or seisin in fact. Roetzel v. Beal, 196 Ark. 5, 116 S.W.2d 591, 593.

Seisin in Fact

Possession with intent on the part of him who holds it to claim a freehold interest; the same as actual seisin. Seim v. O’Grady, 42 W.Va. 77, 24
S.E. 994; Savage v. Savage, 19 Or. 112, 23 P. 890,

Seisin in Law

A right of immediate possession according to the nature of the estate. Martin v. Trail, 142 Mo.
85, 43 S.W. 655; Savage v. Savage, 19 Or. 112, 23
P. 890, 20 Am.St.Rep. 795. As the old doctrine of corporeal investiture is no longer in force, the delivery of a deed gives seisin in law. Watkins v.

Nugen, 118 Ga. 372, 45 S.E. 262.

Seisin Ox

In Scotch law. A perquisite formerly due to the sheriff when he gave possession to an heir holding crown lands. It was long since converted into a payment in money, proportioned to the value of the estate. Bell.

SEISINA. L. Lat. Seisin.

SEISINA FACIT STIPITEM. Seisin makes the stock. 2 BL Comm. 209; Broom, Max. 525, 528.

SEISINA HABENDA. A writ for delivery of seisin to the lord, of lands and tenements, after the sovereign, in right of his prerogative, had had the year, day, and waste on a felony committed, etc. Reg. Orig. 165.

SEIZE. To put in possession, invest with fee simple, be seized of or in, be legal possessor of, or be Super. 535, 39 A.2d 323, 326.

SEIZIN. See Seisin.

SEIZING OF HERIOTS. Taking the best beast, etc., where an heriot is due, on the death of the tenant. 2 BL Comm. 422.
SEIZURE. To take possession of forcibly, to grasp, to snatch, or to put in possession. Hardie v. State, 140 Tex.Cr.R. 368, 144 S.W.2d 571, 575.

Law of Copyholds
Seizure is where the lord of copyhold lands takes possession of them in default of a tenant. It is either seizure quousque or absolute seizure.

Practice
The act performed by an officer of the law, under the authority and exigence of a writ, in taking into the custody of the law the property, real or personal, of a person against whom the judgment of a competent court has passed, condemning him to pay a certain sum of money, in order that such property may be sold, by authority and due course of law, to satisfy the judgment. Or the act of taking possession of goods in consequence of the authority and exigence of a writ, in taking into the custody of the law the property, real or personal, of a person against whom the judgment of taking possession of goods in consequence of a violation of public law. Carey v. Insurance Co., 54 N.W. 18, 84 Wis. 80, 20 L.R.A. 267, 36 Am.St. Rep. 907.

Seize, even though hostile, is not necessarily capture, though such is its usual and probable result. The ultimate act or adjudication of the state, by which the seizure has been made, assigns the proper and conclusive quality and denomination to the original proceeding. A condemnation pronounces upon the act as having been not a valid act of capture, but an act of temporary seizure only. Appleton v. Crowninshield, 3 Mass. 443.

SEIZURE QUOUSQUE. Where the heir on the death of his ancestor postpones claiming admittance; Jenks, Mod. Land L. 208.

SELF-DEALING. Basically relates to transactions wherein a trustee, acting for himself and also as "trustee," a relation which demands strict fidelity to others, seeks to consummate a deal wherein self-interest is opposed to duty. Cestui que trust has in such case the election to affirm or disaffirm, unless countervailing equities have intervened. First Nat. Bank v. Basham, 238 Ala. 500, 191 So. 873, 876, 877, 878, 125 A.L.R. 656; In re Binder's Estate, 137 Ohio St. 26, 27 N.E.2d 939, 947, 129 A.L.R. 130.

SELF-DEFENSE. The protection of one's person or property against some injury attempted by another. The right of such protection. An excuse for the use of force in resisting an attack on the person, and especially for killing an assailant. Whart. Crim. Law, §§ 1019, 1026. The right of a man to repel force by force even to the taking of life in defense of his person, property or habitation, or of a member of his family, against any one who manifests, intends, attempts or endeavors by violence or surprise, to commit a felony force. State v. Patterson, 45 Vt. 308, 12 Am.Rep. 200; Logue v. Com., 38 Pa. 265, 80 Am. Dec. 481. Essential elements of "self-defense" are that defendant does not provoke difficulty and that there must be impending peril without convenient or reasonable mode of escape. Hayes v. State, 225 Ala. 253, 142 So. 675, 677. The law of "self-defense" justifies an act done in the reasonable belief of immediate danger, and, if an injury was done by defendant in justifiable self-defense, he can never be punished criminally nor held responsible for damages in a civil action. Baltimore Transit Co. v. Faulkner, 179 Md. 598, 20 A.2d 485, 487.

SELF-EXECUTING CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISION. Immediately effective without the necessity of ancillary legislation. Cleary v. Kincaid, 23 Idaho, 789, 131 P. 1117, 1118; Stange v. City of Cleveland, 94 Ohio St. 377, 114 N.E. 261, 262.

Constitutional provision is "self-executing" if it supplies sufficient rule by which right given may be enjoyed or duty imposed enforced; constitutional provision is not "self-executing" when it merely indicates principles without laying down rules giving them force of law. Zachary v. City of Wagoner, 146 Okl. 268, 292 P. 345, 348; State v. Perault, 34 N.M. 438, 283 P. 902, 903.

SELF-EXECUTING JUDGMENTS. Those requiring no affirmative action of the court or action under process issued by the court to execute them. /Etna Casualty & Surety Co. of Hartford, Conn., v. Board of Sup'rs of Warren County, 160 Va. 11, 168 S.E. 617, 629.

SELF-MURDER, SELF-DESTRUCTION, or SELF-SLAUGHTER. See Felo de Se; Suicide.

SELF-EXECUTING JUDGMENTS. Those requiring no affirmative action of the court or action under process issued by the court to execute them. /Etna Casualty & Surety Co. of Hartford, Conn., v. Board of Sup'rs of Warren County, 160 Va. 11, 168 S.E. 617, 629.

SELF-MURDER, SELF-DESTRUCTION, or SELF-SLAUGHTER. See Felo de Se; Suicide.

SELION OF LAND. In old English law. A ridge of ground rising between two furrows, containing no certain quantity, but sometimes more and sometimes less. Termes de la Ley.

SELL. To dispose of by sale (q. v.).

SELLER. One who sells anything; the party who transfers property in the contract of sale. The correlative is "buyer," or "purchaser." Though these terms are not inapplicable to the persons concerned in a transfer of real estate, it is more customary to use "vendor" and "purchaser," or "vendor" in that case.
SELLETTE (Fr.). A kind of woollen seat set up in criminal courts in France, on which they placed the accused to undergo his last interrogatory when the conclusions of the counsel for the prosecution went against him with regard to capital punishment or at least penal corporal punishment. It implied moral degradation and was therefore limited to persons accused of crimes entailing corporal punishment. Ord. Cr. de 1670, Tibre IV, art. 21. Abolished by Edict of May 1, 1788. Called a “stool of repentance.”

SELLING PUBLIC OFFICES. Buying or selling any office in the gift of the crown, or making any iegotiation relating thereto, was deemed a mis-demeanor under stats. 5 & 6 Edw. VI. c. 16, and 49 Geo. III. c. 126, 2 Steph. Com., 11th ed. 631.

SELLING STOCKS SHORT. Selling stocks customer does not possess, customer borrowing the number of shares he has sold from some third person to deliver to his vendee expecting to be able to buy the stocks later at a lower figure and return them to the person from whom he borrowed them. Henderson v. Usher, 125 Fla. 709, 170 So. 846, 851.

SEMAWAYNE'S CASE. This case decided, in 1604, that "every man's house [meaning his dwelling-house only] is his castle," and that an officer executing civil process may not break open outer doors in general, but only inner doors, but that (after request made) he may break open even outer doors to find goods of another wrongfully in the house. Brown. It is reported in 5 Coke, 91.

SEMBLE. L. Fr. It seems; it would appear. This expression is often used in the reports to preface a statement by the court upon a point of law which is not directly decided, when such statement is intended as an intimation of what the decision would be if the point were necessary to be passed upon. It is also used to introduce a suggestion by the reporter, or his understanding of the point decided when it is not free from obscurity.

SEMED CIVIS SEMPER CIVIS. Once a citizen always a citizen. Tray. Lat. Max. 555.

SEME MALUS SEMPER PRIESUMITUR ESSE MALUS IN EODEM GENERE. Whoever is once bad is presumed to be so always in the same kind of affairs. Cro. Car. 317.

SEMESTRIA. Lat. In the civil law. Concubinage was so called. Tayl. Civil Law, 273.

SEMINARIUM. Lat. In the civil law. A nursery of trees. Dig. 7, 1, 9, 6.

SEMINARY. A place of training, an institution of education, a school, academy, college, or university in which young persons are instructed in the several branches of learning which may qualify them for their future employment, and the origin of the word seems to imply a place where the seeds of education are sown and implanted. State v. Northwestern College of Speech Arts, 193 Minn. 123, 258 N.W. 1.

SEMINAUFRAIUM. Lat. In maritime law. Half-shipwreck, as where goods are cast over-board in a storm; also where a ship has been so much damaged that her repair costs more than her worth. Wharton.

SEMITA. In old English law. A path. Fleta, 1. 2, c. 52, § 20.

SEMPER. Lat. Always. A word which introduces several Latin maxims, of which some are also used without this prefix.

SEMPER IN DUBIIS BENIGNIORA PR1EFERENDA SUNT. In doubtful cases, the more favorable constructions are always to be preferred. Dig. 50, 17, 56.

SEMPER IN DUBIIS ID AGENDUM EST, UT QUAM TUTISSIMO LOCO RES SIT bona fide CONTRACTA, NISI QUAM APERTA CONTRA LEGES SCRIPTUM EST. In doubtful cases, such a course should always be taken that a thing contracted bona fide should be in the safest condition, unless when it has been openly made against law. Dig. 34, 5, 21.

SEMPER IN OBSCURIS, QUOD MINIMUM EST SEQUIMUR. In obscure constructions we always apply that which is the least obscure. Dig. 50, 17, 9; Broom, Max. 687n.

SEMPER IN STIPULATIONIBUS, ET IN CET-ERIS CONTRACTIBUS, ID SEQUIMUR QUOD ACTUM EST. In stipulation, and in other contracts we follow that which was done, [we are governed by the actual state of the facts.] Dig. 50, 17, 34.

SEMPER ITA FIAT RELATIO UT VALEAT DIS-POSITIO. Reference [of a disposition in a will] should always be so made that the disposition may have effect. 6 Coke, 76b.

SEMPER NECESSITAS PROBANDI INCUMBIT EI QUI AGIT. The claimant is always bound to prove, [the burden of proof lies on the actor.]

SEMPER PARATUS. Lat. Always ready. The name of a plea by which the defendant alleges that he has always been ready to perform what is demanded of him. 3 Bl. Comm. 303.

SEMPER PRIESUMITUR PRO LEGITIMA-TIONE PUERORUM. The presumption always is in favor of the legitimacy of children. 5 Coke, 98b; Co. Litt. 126a.

SEMPER PRIESUNITUR PRO MATRIMONIO. The presumption is always in favor of the validity of a marriage.
SEMPER PRISEUMITUR PRO NEGANTE. The presumption is always in favor of the one who denies. 10 Clark & F. 534; 3 El. & Bl. 723.

SEMPER PRISEUMITUR PRO SENTENTIA. The presumption always is in favor of a sentence. 3 Bulst. 42; Branch, Princ.

SEMPER QUI NON PROHIBET PRO SE INTERVENIRE, MANDARE CREDITUR. He who does not prohibit the intervention of another in his behalf is supposed to authorize it. 2 Kent, Comm. 616; Dig. 14, 6, 16; Dig. 46, 3, 12, 4.

SEMPER SEXUS MASCULINUS ETIAM FEMININUM SEXUM CONTINET. The masculine sex always includes the feminine. Dig. 32, 62.

SEMPER SPECIALIA GENERALIBUS INSUNT. Specials are always included in generals. Dig. 50, 17, 147.

SEN. This is said to be an ancient word, which signified "justice." Co. Litt. 61a.

SENAGE. Money paid for synodals.

SENATE. American Law. The name of the upper chamber, or less numerous branch, of the congress of the United States. Also the style of a similar body in the legislatures of several of the states.

Roman Law. The great administrative council of the Roman commonwealth.

SENIOR. American Law. One who is a member of a senate, either of the United States or of a state.

Old English law. A member of the royal council; a king’s councillor.

Roman law. A member of the senatus.

SENIARES SUNT PARTES CORPORIS REGIS. Senators are part of the body of the king. Staundef. 72, E.; 4 Inst. 53, in marg.

SENIATORS OF THE COLLEGE OF JUSTICE. The judges of the court of session in Scotland are called "Senators of the College of Justice."

SENIAT. Lat. In Roman law. The senate; the great national council of the Roman people.

The place where the senate met. Calvin.

SENIATUM CONSULTUM. In Roman law. A decision or decree of the Roman senate, having the force of law, made without the concurrence of the people. These enactments began to take the place of laws enacted by popular vote, when the commons had grown so great in number that they could no longer be assembled for legislative purposes. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 33; Hunter Rom. Law, § 1; Inst. 1, 2, 5.

SENIATUM CONSULTUM MARCIANUM. A decree of the senate, in relation to the celebration of the Bacchanalian mysteries, enacted in the consulate of Q. Marcius and S. Postumus.

SENIATUM CONSULTUM ORFICIANUM. An enactment of the senate (Orficius being one of the consuls and Marcus Antoninus emperor) or admitting both sons and daughters to the succession of a mother dying intestate. Inst. 3, 4, pr.

SENIATUM CONSULTUM PEGASIANUM. The Pegasusian decree of the senate. A decree enacted in the consulate of Pegasus and Pusio, in the reign of Vespasian, by which an heir, who was requested to restore an inheritance, was allowed to retain one-fourth of it for himself. Inst. 2, 23, 5.

SENIATUM CONSULTUM TREBELLIANI. A decree of the senate (named from Trebellius, in whose consulate it was enacted) by which it was provided that, if an inheritance was restored under a trust, all actions which, by the civil law, might be brought by or against the heir should be brought to and against him to whom the inheritance was restored. Inst. 2, 23, 4; Dig. 36, 1.

SENIATUM CONSULTUM ULTIMI NEMISSITIS. A decree of the senate of the last necessity. The name given to the decree which usually preceded the nomination of a dictator. 1 Bl. Comm. 136.

SENIATUM CONSULTUM VELLEIANUM. The Velleian decree of the senate. A decree enacted in the consulate of Velleius, by which married women were prohibited from making contracts. Story, Conti. Laws, § 425.

SENIATUM DECRETA. Lat. In the civil law. Decisions of the senate. Private acts concerning particular persons merely.

SENGA. In Spanish law. A path; the right of a path. The right of foot or horse path. White, New Recop. b. 2, tit 6, § 1.

SENECTUS. Lat. Old age. In the Roman law, the period of senectus, which relieved one from the charge of public office, was officially reckoned as beginning with the completion of the seventy-fifth year. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 138.

SENESCALLUS. In old English law. A seneschal; a steward; the steward of a manor. Fleta, 1. 2, c. 72.

SENECHAL. In old European law. A title of office and dignity, derived from the middle ages, answering to that of steward or high steward in England. Seneschals were originally the lieutenants of the dukes and other great feudatories of the kingdom, and sometimes had the dispensing of justice and high military commands.

SENECHALLO ET MARESHALLO QUOD NON TENEAT PLACITA DE LIBERO TENEMENTO. A writ addressed to the steward and marshal of England, inhibiting them to take cognizance of an action in their court that concerns freehold. Reg. Orig. 185. Abolished.

SENEUGIA. In old records. Widowhood. Cowell.
SENILE

SENILE DEMENTIA. That peculiar decay of the mental faculties which occurs in extreme old age, and in many cases much earlier, whereby the person is reduced to second childhood, and becomes sometimes wholly incompetent to enter into any binding contract, or even to execute a will. It is the recurrence of second childhood by mere decay. Byrne v. Fulkerson, 254 Mo. 97, 162 S.W. 171, 178; Guarantee Trust & Safe Deposit Co. v. Waller, 240 Pa. 575, 88 A. 13, 15. See Insanity.

SENIOR. The elder. An addition to the name of the elder of two persons in the same family having the same name.

SENIOR COUNSEL. Of two or more counsel retained on the same side of a cause, he is the "senior" who is the elder, or more important in rank or estimation, or who is charged with the more difficult or important parts of the management of the case.

SENIOR JUDGE. Of several judges composing a court, the one who holds the oldest commission, or who has served the longest time under his present commission.

SENIORES. In old English law. Seniors; ancestors; elders. A term applied to the great men of the realm. Spelman.

SENIORITY. Represents in the highest degree the right to work, and by seniority the oldest man in point of service, ability and fitness for the job being sufficient, is given choice of jobs, is first promoted within range of jobs subject to seniority, and is the last laid off, proceeding so on down the line to the youngest in point of service. Dooley v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. of Pennsylvania, 130 N.J. Eq. 75, 21 A.2d 334, 338, 339.

SENIORIO. In Spanish law. Dominion or property.

SENSUS. Lat. Sense, meaning, signification. Malo sensu, in an evil or derogatory sense. Mi-tiori sensu, in a milder, less severe, or less stringent sense. Sensu honesto, in an honest sense; to interpret words sensu honesto is to take them so as not to impute impropriety to the persons concerned.

SENSUS VERBORUM EST ANIMA LEGIS. 5 Coke, 2. The meaning of the words is the spirit of the law.

SENSUS VERBORUM EST DUPLEX,—MITIS ET ASPER; ET VERBA SEMPER ACCIPienda SUnt IN MITORI SENSU. 4 Coke, 13. The meaning of words is twofold,—mild and harsh; and words are always to be received in their milder sense.

SENSE. Lat. Sense, meaning, signification. SENUS VERBORUM EST ANIMA LEGIS.
actually pronounced, on the understanding that it will not be executed. Such a record has the same effect as if the judgment had been pronounced and the offender reprieved by the court. Mozley & Whitley. The practice is now disused.

Simple sentence. (In rhetoric.) See Simple.

Suspension of sentence. This term may mean either a withholding or postponing the sentencing of a prisoner after the conviction, or a postponing of the execution of the sentence after it has been pronounced. In the latter case, it may, for reasons addressing themselves to the discretion of the court, be indefinite as to time, or during the good behavior of the prisoner. See People v. Webster, 14 Misc. 617, 36 N.Y.S. 745; In re Buchanan, 146 N.Y. 264, 40 N.E. 883.

SENTENCES TO RUN CONCURRENTLY. Merely means that accused is given privilege of serving each day a portion of each sentence. Nishimoto v. Nagle, C.C.A.Cal., 44 F.2d 304, 305.

SENTENTIA. Lat. In the civil law. (1) Sense; import; as distinguished from mere words (2) The deliberate expression of one’s will or intention. (3) The sentence of a judge or court.

SENTENTIA A NON JUDICE LATA NEMINI DEBET NOCERE. A sentence pronounced by one who is not a judge should not harm any one. Fleta, 1. 6, c. 6, § 7.

SENTENTIA CONTRA, MATRIMONIUM NUMQUAM TRANSIT IN REM JUDICATAM. 7 Coke, 43. A sentence against marriage never becomes a matter finally adjudged, e., res judicata.

SENTENTIA FACIT JUS, ET RES JUDICATA PRO VERITATE ACCIPITUR. Ellesm. Post. N. 55. Judgment creates right, and what is adjudicated is taken for truth.

SENTENTIA INTERLOCUTORIA REVOCARI POTEST, DEFINITIVA NON POTEST. Bac. Max. 20. An interlocutory judgment may be recalled, but not a final.

SENTENTIA NON FERTUR DE REBUS NON LIQUIDIS. Sentence is not given upon matters that are not clear. Jenk. Cent. p. 7, case 9.

SEPARABLE CONTROVERSY. As to removal of causes from state courts to federal courts, this phrase means a separate and distinct cause of action existing in the suit, on which a separate and distinct suit might properly have been brought and complete relief afforded as to such cause of action; or the case must be one capable of separation into parts, so that, in one of the parts, a controversy will be presented, wholly between citizens of different states, which can be fully determined without the presence of any of the other parties to the suit as it has been begun. Fraser v. Jennison, 1 S.Ct. 171, 106 U.S. 191, 27 L. Ed. 131; Gudger v. Western N. C. R. Co., C.C.N. C., 21 F. 81; Steed v. Henry, 180 S.W. 508, 509, 120 Ark. 583; Harrison v. Harrison, D.C.Miss., 5 F.2d 1001, 1003; Mace v. Mayfield, D.C.S.C., 10 F.2d 231, 232. It requires two or more causes of action, one of which is wholly between citizens of different states. Johnson v. Marsh, D.C.Neb., 49 F.Supp. 137, 139, 141, 143.

SEPARALITER. Lat. Separately. Used in indictments to indicate that two or more defendants were charged separately, and not jointly, with the commission of the offense in question. State v. Edwards, 60 Mo. 490.

SEPARATE, adj. Individual; distinct; particular; disconnected. Generally used in law as opposed to "joint," though the more usual antithesis of the latter term is "several." Either of these words implies division, distribution, disconnection, or aloofness. Merrill v. Pepperdine, 9 Ind.App. 416, 36 N.E. 921.

As to separate "Acknowledgment" and "Covenant," see those titles.

SEPARATE ACTION. As opposed to a joint action, an action brought for himself alone by each of several complainants who are all concerned in the same transaction, but cannot legally join in the suit.

SEPARATE DEMISE IN EJECTMENT. A demise in a declaration in ejectment used to be termed a "separate demise" when made by the lessee separately or individually, as distinguished from a demise made jointly by two or more persons, which was termed a "joint demise." No such demise, either separate or joint, is now necessary in this action. Brown.

SEPARATE ESTATE. The individual property of one of two persons who stand in a social or business relation, as distinguished from that which they own jointly or are jointly interested in. Thus, "separate estate," within the meaning of the bankrupt law, is that in which each partner is separately interested at the time of the bankruptcy. The term can only be applied to such property as belonged to one or more of the partners, to the exclusion of the rest. In re Lowe, 11 Nat. Bankr. Rep. 221, F.Cas.No.8,564. The separate estate of a married woman is that which belongs to her, and over which her husband has no right in equity. It may consist of lands or chattels. Williams v. King, 29 F.Cas. 1,369.

SEPARATE EXAMINATION. The interrogation of a married woman, who appears before an officer for the purpose of acknowledging a deed or other instrument, conducted by such officer in private or out of the hearing of her husband, in order to ascertain if she acts of her own will and without compulsion or constraint of the husband. Also the examination of a witness in private or apart from, and out of the hearing of, the other witnesses in the same case.

SEPARATE MAINTENANCE. Allowance granted to a wife for support of herself and children while she is living apart from her husband. Cohn v. Cohn, 4 Wash.2d 322, 103 P.2d 366, 367.

Alimony in its strict sense is confined to an allowance made to a wife who is legally separated or divorced from husband, but in many jurisdictions courts have authority to make an allowance to a wife who is living separate and apart, from her husband without being legally separated or divorced, and this allowance is often called "separate maintenance." Dyer v. Dyer, 212 N.C. 620, 194 S.E. 278.

SEPARATE PROPERTY. Property owned by married person in his or her own right during marriage. In re Morgan's Estate, 203 Cal. 569, 265 P. 241, 245. See, also, Separate Estate.

Of a married woman. That which she owns in her own right, which is liable only for her own debts, and which she can encumber and dispose of at her own will.

"Separate property" continues to be such as long as it can clearly be traced and identified, and its rents, issues, and profits remain separate property. True v. United States, D.C. Wash., 51 F.Supp. 720, 723, 726.

SEPARATE TRIAL. The separate and individual trial of each of several persons jointly accused of a crime.

SEPARATIM. Lat. In old conveyancing. Severally. A word which made a several covenant. 5 Coke, 23a.

SEPARATION. In matrimonial law. A cessation of cohabitation of husband and wife by mutual agreement, or, in the case of "judicial separation," under the decree of a court. Woodruff v. Woodruff, 215 N.C. 685, 3 S.E.2d 5, 6.

SEPARATION A MENS A ET THOR O. A partial dissolution of the marriage relation.

SEPARATION OF PATRIMONY. In Louisiana probate law. The creditors of the succession may demand, in every case and against every creditor of the heir, a separation of the property of the succession from that of the heir. This is what is called the "separation of patrimony." The object of a separation of patrimony is to prevent property out of which a particular class of creditors have a right to be paid from being confounded with other property, and by that means made liable to the debts of another class of creditors. Civ. Code La. art. 1444.

SEPARATION ORDER. In England, where a husband is convicted of an aggravated assault upon his wife, the court or magistrate may order that the wife shall be no longer bound to cohabit with him. Such an order has the same effect as a judicial decree of separation on the ground of cruelty. It may also provide for the payment of a weekly sum by the husband to the wife and for the custody of the children. Sweet.

SEPARATISTS. Seceders from the Church of England. They, like Quakers, solemnly affirm, instead of taking the usual oath, before they give evidence.

SEPES. Lat. In old English law. A hedge or inclosure. The inclosure of a trench or canal. Dig. 43, 21, 4.

SEPTENNIAL ACT. In English law. The statute 1 Geo. I. St. 2, c. 38. The act by which a parliament has continuance for seven years, and no longer, unless sooner dissolved; as it always has, in fact, been since the passing of the act. Wharton.

SEPTUAGESIMA. In ecclesiastical law. The third Sunday before Quadragesima Sunday, being about the seventieth day before Easter.

Roman law. An inclosure; an inclosed place where the people voted; otherwise called "ovile."

SEPTUNX. Lat. In Roman law. A division of the as, containing seven uncece, or duodecimal parts; the proportion of seven-twelfths. Tayl. Civil Law, 492.

SEPULCHRE. A grave or tomb. The place of interment of a dead human body. The violation of sepulchres is a misdemeanor at common law.

SEPULTURA. Lat. An offering to the priest for the burial of a dead body.

SEQUAMUR VESTIGIA PATRUM NOSTRORUM. Jenk. Cent. Let us follow the footsteps of our fathers.

SEQUATUR SUB SUO PERICULO. In old English practice. A writ which issued where a sheriff had returned nihil, upon a summoneas ad warrantandum, and after an alias and pluries had been issued. So called because the tenant lost his lands without any recovery in value, unless upon that writ he brought the vouchee into court. Rosc. Real Act. 268; Cowell.

SEQUELA. L. Lat. In old English law. Suit., process or prosecution. Sequela causa, the process of a cause. Cowell.

SEQUELA CURLE. Suit of court. Cowell.

SEQUELA VILLANORUM. The family retinue and appurtenances to the goods and chattels of villeins, which were at the absolute disposal of the lord. Par. Antiq. 216.

SEQUELS. Small allowances of meal, or manufactured victual, made to the servants at a mill where corn was ground, by tenure, in Scotland. Wharton.

SEQUESTER, V. Civil Law

To renounce or disclaim, etc. As when a widow came into court and disclaimed having anything to do with her deceased husband's estate, she was said to sequester. The word more commonly signifies the act of taking in execution under a writ of sequestration. Brown.

To deposit a thing which is the subject of a controversy in the hands of a third person, to hold for the contending parties.

To take a thing which is the subject of a controversy out of the possession of the contending parties, and deposit it in the hands of a third person. Calvin.

English Ecclesiastical Practice

To gather and take care of the fruits and profits of a vacant benefice, for the benefit of the next incumbent.

Equity Practice

To take possession of the property of a defendant, and hold it in the custody of the court, until he purges himself of a contempt.

International Law

To confiscate; to appropriate private property to public use; to seize the property of the private citizens of a hostile power, as when a belligerent nation sequesters debts due from its own subjects to the enemy. 1 Kent, Comm. 62.

SEQUESTER, n. Lat. In the civil law. A person with whom two or more contending parties deposited the subject-matter of the controversy.

SEQUESTRARI FACIAS. In English ecclesiastical practice. A process in the nature of a deposit which two or more persons, engaged in litigation about anything, make of the thing in contest with an indifferent person who binds himself to restore it, when the issue is decided, to the party to whom it is adjudged to belong. Civ. Code La. art. 2973.

SEQUESTER, v. To deposit a thing which is the subject of a controversy in the hands of a third person, to hold for the contending parties.

SEQUESTERATOR. One to whom a sequestration is made. One appointed or chosen to perform a sequestration, or execute a writ of sequestration.

SEQUESTRO HABENDO. In English ecclesiastical law. A judicial writ for the discharging a sequestration of the profits of a church benefice, granted by the bishop at the sovereign's command, to compel the parson to appear at the suit of another. Upon his appearance, the parson may have this writ for the release of the sequestration. Reg. Jud. 36.

SERF. In the feudal polity, a class of persons whose social condition was servile, and who were bound to labor and onerous duties at the will of their lords. They differed from slaves only in that they were bound to their native soil, instead of being the absolute property of a master.
Sergeant

Sergeant at arms. See Serjeant.

Sergeant at law. See Serjeant.

Town sergeant. In several states, an officer having the powers and duties of a chief constable or head of the police department of a town or village.

SERIATELY. In series, or following one after another. In re Flint, 32 C.C.P.A. 1116, 150 F.2d 126, 131.

SERIATIM. Lat. Severally; separately; individually; one by one.

SERIOUS. Important; weighty; momentous; grave, great, as in the phrases "serious bodily harm," "serious personal injury," etc. Ward v. State, 70 Tex.Cr.R. 393, 159 S.W. 272, 282; McKeel v. State, 93 Tex.Cr.R. 217, 246 S.W. 1035, 1036.

SERIOUS AND WILFUL MISCONDUCT. In Workmen's Compensation Law. The intentional doing of something with the knowledge that it is likely to result in a serious injury, or with a wanton and reckless disregard of its probable consequences. McAdoo v. Industrial Accident Commission, 40 Cal.App. 570, 181 P. 400, 401.

SERIOUS ILLNESS. In life insurance. An illness that permanently or materially impairs, or is likely to permanently or materially impair, the health of the applicant. Not every illness is serious. An illness may be alarming at the time, or thought to be serious by the one afflicted, and yet not be serious in the sense of that term as used in insurance contracts. An illness that is temporary in its duration, and entirely passes away, and is not attended, nor likely to be attended, by a permanent or material impairment of the health or constitution, is not a serious illness. It is not sufficient that the illness was thought serious at the time it occurred, or that it might have resulted in permanently impairing the health. Fishbeck v. New York Life Ins. Co., 179 Wis. 369, 192 N.W. 170, 175; American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Hicks, Tex.Civ. App., 198 S.W. 616, 622.

SERJEANT. The same word etymologically with "sergeant," but the latter spelling is more commonly employed in the designation of military and police officers, (see Sergeant,) while the former is preferred when the term is used to describe certain grades of legal practitioners and certain officers of legislative bodies. See infra.

Common Serjeant

A judicial officer attached to the corporation of the city of London, who assists the recorder in disposing of the criminal business at the Old Bailey sessions, or central criminal court. Brown.

Serjeant at Arms

An executive officer appointed by, and attending on, a legislative body, whose principal duties are to execute its warrants, preserve order, and arrest offenders.

Serjeant at Law

A barrister of the common-law courts of high standing, and of much the same rank as a doctor of law is in the ecclesiastical courts. These serjeants seem to have derived their title from the old knights templar, (among whom there existed a peculiar class under the denomination of "frères sergens," or "fratres servientes," and to have continued as a separate fraternity from a very early period in the history of the legal profession. The barristers who first assumed the old monastic title were those who practiced in the court of common pleas, and until a recent period (the 25th of April, 1834, 9 & 10 Viet. c. 54) the serjeants at law always had the exclusive privilege of practice in that court. Every judge of a common-law court, previous to his elevation to the bench, used to be created a serjeant at law; but since the judicature act this is no longer necessary. Brown.

Serjeant of the Mace

In English law. An officer who attends the lord mayor of London, and the chief magistrates of other corporate towns. Holthouse.

Serjeants’ Inn

The inn to which the serjeants at law belonged, near Chancery lane; formerly called “Faryndon Inn.”

SERJEANTIA IDEM EST QUOD SERVITIUM. Co.Litt. 105. Serjeanty is the same as service.

SERJEANTY. A species of tenure by knight servitude, which was due to the king only, and was distinguished into grand and petit serjeanty. The tenant holding by grand serjeanty was bound, in stead of attending the king generally in his wars, to do some honorary service to the king in person, as to carry his banner or sword, or to be his butler, champion, or other officer at his coronation. Petit serjeanty differed from grand serjeanty, in that the service rendered to the king was not of a personal nature, but consisted in rendering him annually some small implement of war, as a bow, sword, arrow, lance, or the like. Cowell; Brown.

SERMENT. In old English law. Oath; an oath.

SERMO INDEX ANIMI. 5 Coke, 118. Speech is an index of the mind.

SERMO RELATUS AD PERSONAM INTELLIGI DEBET DE CONDITIONE PERSONAE. 4 Coke, 116. Speech which is referred to a person ought to be understood of the condition of the person.

SERMONES SEMPER ACCUPIENTI SUNT SE- CUNDUM SUBJECTAM MATERIAM, ET CON- DITIONEM PERSONARE. 4 Coke, 14. Language is always to be understood according to its subject-matter, and the condition of the persons.

SERPENT—VENOM REACTION. A test for insanity by means of the breaking up of the red corpuscles of the blood of the suspected person on the injection of the venom of cobras or other serpents; recently employed in judicial proceedings in some European countries and in Japan.

SERRATED. Notched on the edge; cut in notches like the teeth of a saw. This was anciently the method of trimming the top or edge of a deed of indenture. See Indent, v.

SERVAGE. In feudal law, where a tenant, besides payment of a certain rent, found one or more workmen for his lord’s service. Tomlins.

SERVANDA EST CONSUETUDO LOCI UBI CAUSA AGITATUR. The custom of the place where the action is brought is to be observed. Decouche v. Savetier, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 190, 219, 8 Am. Dec. 478.

SERVANT. One employed to perform service in master’s affairs, whose physical conduct in performance of the service is controlled or is subject to right to control by the master. Brenner v. Socony Vacuum Oil Co., 236 Mo.App. 524, 158 S.W.2d 171, 174, 175; Reiling v. Missouri Ins. Co., 236 Mo.App. 164, 153 S.W.2d 79. A person in the employ of another and subject to his control as to what work shall be done and the means by which it shall be accomplished. Pantell v. Shriver Allison Co., 61 Ohio App. 119, 22 N.E.2d 497, 499. One who is employed to render personal service to another otherwise than in the pursuit of an independent calling, and who, in such service, remains entirely under control and direction of employer. Henley v. State, 59 Ga.App. 595, 2 S.E.2d 139, 142. A person of whatever rank or position in employ and subject to direction or control of another in any department of labor or business. Saums v. Parfet, 270 Mich. 165, 258 N.W. 235, 237. For "Family," see that title.

The term is often given special meanings by statutes and like other words is greatly influenced by context in wills and other documents. Hand v. Cole, 88 Tenn. 400, 12 S.W. 922, 7 L.R.A. 96; In re Thompson’s Estate, 126 Misc. Rep. 91, 213 N.Y. S. 426, 429.

SERVE. In Scotch practice. To render a verdict or decision in favor of a person claiming to be an heir; to declare the fact of his heirship judicially. A jury are said to serve a claimant heir, when they find him to be heir, upon the evidence submitted to them. Bell.

As to serving papers, etc., see Service of Process.

SERVI. Lat. Slaves.

Old English law. Bondmen; servile tenants. Cowell.

Old European law. Persons over whom their masters had absolute dominion.

SERVI REDEMPTIONE. Criminal slaves in the time of Henry L 1 Kemble, Sax. 197, (1849).

SERVICE. Has a variety of meanings, dependent upon the context or the sense in which used. Central Power & Light Co. v. State, Tex.Civ.App., 165 S.W.2d 920, 925. For "Family," see that title.

Contracts

The being employed to serve another; duty or labor to be rendered by one person to another, the former being bound to submit his will to the direction and control of the latter. Cameron v. State Theater Co., 256 Mass. 466, 152 N.E. 880, 881; Ludvig v. Pacific Fire Ins. Co. of New York, 204 N.Y.S. 465, 466, 123 Misc. 189. The act of serving; the labor performed or the duties required. State ex rel. King v. Board of Trustees of Firemen’s Pension Fund of Kansas City, 192 Mo.App. 583, 184 S.W. 929, 930. Occupation, condition, or status of a servant, etc. Performance of labor for benefit of another, or at another’s command; attendance of an inferior, hired helper, slave, etc. Claxton v. Johnson County, 194 Ga. 43, 20 S.E.2d 606, 610.

"Service" and "employment" generally imply that the employer, or person to whom the service is due, both selects and compensates the employee, or person rendering the service. Ledvinka v. Home Ins. Co. of New York, 139 Md. 434, 115 A. 596, 597, 19 A.L.R. 167.

The term is used also for employment in one of the offices, departments, or agencies of the government; as in the phrases "civil service," "public service," "military service," etc. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. School Dist. No. 1 in Yuma County, 63 Colo. 159, 165 P. 260, 263; Miller v. Illinois Bankers’ Life Ass’n, 138 Ark. 442, 212 S.W. 310, 311, 7 A.L.R. 378.

Domestic Relations

The "services" of a wife, for the loss of which, occasioned by an injury to the wife, the husband may recover in an action against the tort-feasor, include whatever of aid, assistance, comfort, and society the wife would be expected to render to or bestowed upon her husband in the circumstances in which they were situated. Thompson v. Aultman & Taylor Mach. Co., 96 Kan. 259, 150 P. 587, and in all the relations of domestic life, Little Rock Gas & Fuel Co. v. Coppedge, 116 Ark. 334, 172 S.W. 885, 889.

Feudal Law

The consideration which the feudal tenants were bound to render to the lord in recompense for the lands they held of him. The services, in respect of their quality, were either free or base services, and, in respect of their quantity and the time of exacting them, were either certain or uncertain. 2 Bl. Comm. 60.

Practice

The exhibition or delivery of a writ, notice, injunction, etc., by an authorized person, to a person who is thereby officially notified of some action or proceeding in which he is concerned, and is thereby advised or warned of some action or step which he is commanded to take or to forbear. U. S. v. McMahon, 17 S.Ct. 28, 164 U.S. 81, 41 L.Ed. 357; In re Tengwall Co., C.C.A.II., 201 F. 82, 84; Martin v. Hawkins, Tex.Civ.App., 238 S.W. 991.

General

Civil service. See that title.

Constructive service of process. Any form of service other than actual personal service; notifiservice of a writ or notice made to another party, for example, to a person named in a summons, is personal service. But where a person named in a summons is of unsound mind, service upon the guardian of such person may be deemed "personal service." Pat tison v. Grand Trust & Savings Co., 195 Ind. 313, 144 N.E. 26, 29. Some courts hold to the view that Public utilities. The furnishing of water, heat, light and power, etc. by them. Claxton v. Johnson County, 194 Ga. 43, 20 S.E.2d 606, 610.

Salvage service. See Salvage.

Secular service. Worldly employment or service, as contrasted with spiritual or ecclesiastical.

Service by publication. Service of a summons or other process upon an absent or nonresident defendant, by publishing the same as an advertisement in a designated newspaper, with such other efforts to give him actual notice as the particular statute may prescribe.

Service of an heir. An old form of Scotch law, fixing the right and character of an heir to the estate of his ancestor. Bell.

Service of process. The service of writs, summons, rules, etc., signifies the delivering to or leaving them with the party to whom or with whom they ought to be delivered or left; and, when they are so delivered, they are then said to have been served. Usually a copy only is served and the original is shown. Brown.

Special service. In Scotch law. That form of service by which the heir is served to the ancestor who was feudally vested in the lands. Bell.

Substituted service. Any form of service of process other than personal service, such as service by mail or by publication in a newspaper; service of a writ or notice on some person other than the one directly concerned, for example, his attorney of record, who has authority to represent him or to accept service for him.

SERVICE ESTABLISHMENT. Within Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938. An establishment which has ordinary characteristics of retail establishments except that services instead of goods are sold. An establishment the principal activity of which is to furnish service to the consuming public, and includes barber shops, beauty parlors, shoe shining parlors, clothes pressing clubs, laundries and automobile repair shops. Fleming v. A. B. Kirschbaum Co., C.C.A.Pa., 124 F.2d 567, 572.

SERVIDUMBRE. In Spanish law. A servitude. The right and use which one man has in the buildings and estates of another, to use them for the benefit of his own. Las Partidas, 3, 31, 1.

SERVIENS AD CLAVAM. Serjeant at mace. 2 Mod. 58.

SERVIENS AD LEGEM. In old English practice. Serjeant at law.

SERVIENS DOMINI REGIS. In old English law. King's serjeant; a public officer, who acted sometimes as the sheriff's deputy, and had also judicial powers. Bract. fols. 145b, 150b, 330, 358.

SERVIENS NARRATOR. A serjeant-at-law, q. v.

SERVIENT. Serving; subject to a service or servitude. A servient estate is one which is burdened with a servitude. Burdine v. Sewell, 92 Fla. 375, 109 So. 648, 652; Saratoga State Waters Corporation v. Pratt, 227 N.Y. 429, 125 N.E. 834, 838.

SERVIENT TENEMENT. An estate in respect of which a service is owing, as the dominant tenement is that to which the service is due. Northwestern Improvement Co. v. Lowry, 104 Mont. 289, 66 P.2d 792, 795, 110 A.L.R. 605.

SERVIENTIBUS. Certain writs touching servants and their masters violating the statutes made against their abuses. Reg. Orig. 189.

SERVILE EST EXPLICATIONIS CRIMEN; SOLA INNOCENTIA LIBERA. 2 Inst. 573. The crime of theft is slavish; innocence alone is free.

SERVITIA PERSONALIA SEQUUNTUR PERSONAM. 2 Inst. 374. Personal services follow the person.

SERVITIIS ACQUIETANDIS. A judicial writ for a man distrained for services to one, when he owes and performs them to another, for the acquittal of such services. Reg. Jud. 27.

SERVITIUM. Lat. In feudal and old English law. The duty of obedience and performance which a tenant was bound to render to his lord, by reason of his fee. Spelman.

SERVITIUM, IN LEGE ANGLIZE, REGULAR-ITER ACCIPITUR PRO SERVITIO QUOD PER TENENTES DOMINIS SUIS DEBETUR RATIONE FEOID SUI. Co. Litt. 65. Service, by the law of England, means the service which is due from the tenants to the lords, by reason of their fee.
SERVITUM. Lat. In the civil law. Slavery; bondage; the state of service. An institution of penal servitude. In English criminal law, a punishment which consists in keeping the offender in confinement and compelling him to labor. Involuntary servitude. See Involuntary.

SERVITUS FEODALE ET PRIDIALE. A personal service, but due only by reason of lands which were held in fee. Bract. 1. 2, c. 16.

SERVITUM FORINSECVUM. Forinsec, foreign, or extra service; a kind of service that was due to the king, over and above (foris) the service due to the lord.

SERVITUM INTRINSECVUM. Intrainsic or ordinary service; the ordinary service due the chief lord, from tenants within the fee. Bract. fols. 36, 36b.

SERVITUM LIBERUM. A service to be done by feudatory tenants, who were called "liberi hornines," and distinguished from vassals, as was their service, for they were not bound to any of the base services of plowing the lord's land, etc., but were to find a man and horse, or go with the lord into the army, or to attend the court, etc. Cowell.

See, also, Liberum Servitium.

SERVITUM MILITARE. Knight-service; military service. 2 Bl. Comm. 62.

SERVITUM REGALE. Royal service, or the rights and prerogatives of manors which belong to the king as lord of the same, and which were generally reckoned to be six, viz.: Power of judicature, in matters of property; power of life and death, in felonies and murder; a right to waifs and strays; assessments; minting of money; and assise of bread, beer, weights, and measures. Cowell.

SERVITUM SCUT. Service of the shield; that is, knight-service.

SERVITUM SOCZE. Service of the plow; that is, socage.

SERVITOR. A serving-man; particularly applied to students at Oxford, upon the foundation, who are similar to sizars at Cambridge. Wharton.

SERVITORS OF BILLS. In old English practice. Servants or messengers of the marshal of the king's bench, sent out with bills or writs to summons persons to that court. Now more commonly called "tipstaves." Cowell.

SERVITUTE.

The Condition of being Bound to Service

The state of a person who is subjected, voluntarily or otherwise, to another person as his servant. Shilling v. State, 143 Miss. 709, 109 So. 737, 739.

A Charge or Burden

A charge or burden resting upon one estate for the benefit or advantage of another; a species of incorporeal right derived from the civil law (see Servitus) and closely corresponding to the "easement" of the common-law, except that "servitude" rather has relation to the burden or the estate burdened, while "easement" refers to the benefit or advantage or the estate to which it accrues. Rowe v. Nally, 81 Md. 367, 32 A. 198; Los Angeles Terminal Land Co. v. Muir, 136 Cal. 36, 68 P. 308.

The term "servitude," in its original and popular sense, signifies the duty of service, or rather the condition of one who is liable to the performance of services. The word, however, in its legal sense, is applied figuratively to things. When the freedom of ownership in land is fettered or restricted, by reason of some person, other than the owner thereof, having some right therein, the land is said to "serve" such person. The restricted condition of the ownership or the right which forms the subject-matter of the restriction is termed a "servitude," and the land so burdened with another's right is termed a "servient tenement," while the land belonging to the person enjoying the right is called the "dominant tenement." The word "servitude" may be said to have both a positive and a negative signification; in the former sense denoting the restrictive right belonging to the entitled party; in the latter, the restrictive duty entailed upon the proprietor or possessor of the servient land. Brown.

Classification

All servitudes which affect lands may be divided into two kinds,—personal and real. Personal servitudes are those attached to the person for whose benefit they are established, and terminate with his life. This kind of servitude is of three sorts,—usufruct, use, and habitation. Real servitudes, which are also called "predial" or "landed" servitudes, are those which the owner of an estate enjoys on a neighboring estate for the benefit of his own estate. They are called "predial" or "landed" servitudes because, being established for the benefit of an estate, they are rather due to the estate than to the owner personally. Frost-Johnson Lumber Co. v. Sailing's Heirs, 150 La. 756, 91 So. 207, 245; Tide-Water Pipe Co. v. Bell, 280 Pa. 104, 124 A. 351, 354, 40 A.L.R.' 1516.

Real servitudes are divided, in the civil law, into rural and urban servitudes. Rural servitudes are such as are established for the benefit of a landed estate; such, for example, as a right of way over the servient tenement, or of access to a spring, a coal-mine, a sand-pit, or a wood that is upon it. Urban servitudes are such as are established for the benefit of one building over another. (But the buildings need not be in the city, as the name would apparently imply.) They are such as the right of support, or of view, or of drip or sewer, or the like. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 316, et seq.

Servitudes are also classed as positive and negative. A positive servitude is one which obliges the owner of the servient estate to permit or suffer something to be done on his property by another. A negative servitude is one which does not bind the servient proprietor to permit something to be done upon his property by another, but merely restrains him from making a certain use of his property which would impair the easement enjoyed by the dominant tenement. Rowe v. Nally, 81 Md. 367, 32 A. 198.

Penal servitude. In English criminal law, a punishment which consists in keeping the offender in confinement and compelling him to labor.

Involuntary servitude. See Involuntary.
the conventional law of nations, by which one person is subjected to the dominion of another, contrary to natural right. Inst. 1, 3, 2.

Also a service or servitude; an easement.

SERVITUS ACTUS. The servitude or right of walking, riding, or driving over another's ground. Inst. 2, 3, pr. A species of right of way.

SERVITUS ALTIUS NON TOLLENDI. The servitude of not building higher. A right attached to a house, by which its proprietor can prevent his neighbor from building his own house higher. Inst. 2, 3, 4.

SERVITUS AQUAE DUCENDIE. The servitude of leading water; the right of leading water to one's own premises through another's land. Inst. 2, 3, pr.

SERVITUS AQUAE EDUCENDIE. The servitude of leading off water; the right of leading off the water from one's own onto another's ground. Dig. 8, 3, 29.

SERVITUS AQUAE HAURIENDZ. The servitude right of draining water from another's spring or well. Inst. 2, 3, 2.

SERVITUS CLOACAE MITTENDIE. The servitude of having a sewer through the house or ground of one's neighbor. Dig. 8, 1, 7.

SERVITUS EST CONSTITUTIO JURE GENTIUM QUA QUIS DOMINO ALIENO CONTRA NATUR-AM SUBJICITUR. Slavery is an institution by the law of nations, by which a man is subjected to the dominion of another, contrary to nature. Inst. 1, 3, 2; Co. Litt. 116.

SERVITUS FUMI IMMITTENDI. The servitude of dripping; the right of building a projection from one's house upon the house or ground of one's neighbor. Inst. 2, 3, 1; Domat, 1, 1, 6.

SERVITUS PASCENDI. The servitude of pasturing; the right of pasturing one's cattle on another's ground; otherwise called "jus pascendi." Inst. 2, 3, 2.

SERVITUS PECORIS AD AQUAM ADPULSAM. A right of driving one's cattle on a neighbor's land to water.

SERVITUS PILED!! RUSTIC!. The servitude of a rural or country estate; a rural servitude. Inst. 2, 3, pr., and 3.

SERVITUS PILED!! URBAN!. The servitude of an urban or city estate; an urban servitude. Inst. 2, 3, 1.

SERVITUS PRIEDIORUM. A prandial servitude; a service, burden, or charge upon one estate for the benefit of another. Inst. 2, 3, 3.

SERVITUS PROJICIENDI. The servitude of projecting; the right of building a projection from one's house in the open space belonging to one's neighbor. Dig. 8, 2, 2.

SERVITUS PROSPECTUS. A right of prospect. This may be either to give one a free prospect over his neighbor's land or to prevent a neighbor from having a prospect over one's own land. Dig. 8, 2, 15; Domat, 1, 1, 6.

SERVITUS STILLICIDII. The right of drip; the right of having the water drip from the eaves of one's house upon the house or ground of one's neighbor. Inst. 2, 3, 1, 4; Dig. 8, 2, 2.

SERVITUS TIGNI IMMITTENDI. The servitude of letting in a beam; the right of inserting beams in a neighbor's wall. Inst. 2, 3, 1, 4; Dig. 8, 2, 2.

SERVITUS VIZE. The servitude or right of way; the right of walking, riding, and driving over another's land. Inst. 2, 3, pr.

SERVUS. Lat. In the civil and old English law. A slave; a bondman. Inst. 1, 3, pr.; Bract. fol. 4b.

Servos a manu. (Lat. Literally, a servant by hand, or with the hand.) A scribe, secretary. Harper's Lat. Dict., citing Suet. Caes. 74 (i. e., the biography of Julius Caesar by Suetonius Tranquillus). This phrase was also written a manu servos, and eventually gave rise to the word amanuensis, derived from a manu, plus ensis, and taking the place of a manu servos. Cent. Dict. s. v. "amanuensis."

SESS. In English law. A tax, rate, or assessment.

SESSIO. Lat. In old English law. A sitting; a session. Sessio parliamenti, the sitting of parliament. Cowell.

SESSION. The sitting of a court, Legislature, council, commission, etc., for the transaction of its proper business. Hence, the period of time, within any one day, during which such body is assembled in form, and engaged in the transaction of business, or, in a more extended sense, the whole space of time from its first assembling to its prorogation or adjournment sine die. Rails v. Wyand, 40 Okl. 323, 138 P. 158, 162.
Session of court is time during term in which court sits for transaction of business, after judge arrives and opens court. Carpenter v. City of Birmingham, 221 Ala. 368, 128 So. 899, 900.

Synonyms

Strictly speaking, the word "session," as applied to a court of justice, is not synonymous with the word "term." The "session" of a court is the time during which it actually sits for the transaction of judicial business, and hence terminates each day with the rising of the court. A "term" of court is the period fixed by law, usually embracing many days or weeks, during which it shall be open for the transaction of judicial business and during which it may hold sessions from day to day. But this distinction is not always observed, many authorities using the two words interchangeably. Muse v. Harris, 122 Okl. 250, 254 P. 72, 73; State v. City of Victoria, 97 Kan. 638, 156 P. 705, 708; Nation v. Savely, 127 Okl. 117, 260 P. 32, 35.

General

Court of session. The supreme civil court of Scotland, instituted A. D. 1532, consisting of thirteen (formerly fifteen) judges, viz., the lord president, the lord justice clerk, and eleven ordinary lords.

General sessions. A court of record, in England, held by two or more justices of the peace, for the execution of the authority given them by the commission of the peace and certain statutes. General sessions held at certain times in the four quarters of the year pursuant to St. 2 Hen. V. are properly called "quarter sessions," (q. v.,) but intermediate general sessions may also be held. Sweet.

Great session of Wales. A court which was abolished by St. 1 Wm. IV. c. 70. The proceedings now issue out of the courts at Westminster, and two of the judges of the superior courts hold the circuits in Wales and Cheshire, as in other English counties. Wharton.

Joint session. In parliamentary practice, a meeting together and commingling of the two houses of a legislative body, sitting and acting together as one body, instead of separately in their respective houses. Snow v. Hudson, 56 Kan. 378, 43 P. 262.

Petty sessions. In English law. A special or petty session is sometimes kept in corporations and counties at large by a few justices, for dispatching smaller business in the neighborhood between the times of the general sessions; as for licensing alehouses, passing the accounts of the parish officers, etc. Brown.

Quarter sessions. See that title.

Regular session. An ordinary, general, or stated session, (as of a legislative body,) as distinguished from a special or extra session.

Session laws. The name commonly given to the body of laws enacted by a state Legislature at one of its annual or biennial sessions. So called to distinguish them from the "compiled laws" or "revised statutes" of the state.

Session of the peace. In English law. A sitting of justices of the peace for the exercise of their powers. There are four kinds,—petty, special, quarter, and general sessions.

Sessional orders. Certain resolutions which are agreed to by both houses at the commencement of every session of the English parliament, and have relation to the business and convenience thereof; but they are not intended to continue in force beyond the session in which they are adopted. They are principally of use as directing the order of business. Brown.

Sessions. A sitting of justices in court upon their commission, or by virtue of their appointment, and most commonly for the trial of criminal cases. The title of several courts in England and the United States, chiefly those of criminal jurisdiction. Burrill.

Special sessions. In English law. A meeting of two or more justices of the peace held for a special purpose, (such as the licensing of alehouses,) either as required by statute or when specially convoked, which can only be convened after notice to all the other magistrates of the division, to give them an opportunity of attending. Stone, J. Pr. 52, 55.

SET. This word appears to be nearly synonymous with "lease." A lease of mines is frequently termed a "mining set." Brown.

SET ASIDE. A judgment, decree, award, or any proceedings is to cancel, annul, or revoke them at the instance of a party unjustly or irregularly affected by them. Brandt v. Brandt, 40 Or. 477, 67 P. 508.

SET DOWN. A cause for trial or hearing at a given term is to enter its title in the calendar, list, or docket of causes which are to be brought on at that term.

SET OF EXCHANGE. In mercantile law. Foreign bills are usually drawn in duplicate or triplicate, the several parts being called respectively "first of exchange," "second of exchange," etc., and these parts together constitute a "set of exchange." Any one of them being paid, the others become void.

SET OUT. In pleading. To recite or narrate facts or circumstances; to allege or aver; to describe or to incorporate; as, to set out a deed or contract. First Nc.t.: Bank v. Engelbercht, 58 Neb. 639, 79 N.W. 556; Powder Valley State Bank v. Hudelson, 74 Or. 191, 144 P. 494, 497.

SET UP. To bring forward or allege, as something relied upon or deemed sufficient; to propose or interpose, by way of defense, explanation, or justification; as, to set up the statute of limitations, i. e., offer and rely upon it as a defense to a claim.

SETI. As used in mining laws, lease. Brown.

“Set-off,” both at law and in equity, is that right which exists between two parties, each of whom under an independent contract owes an ascertained amount to the other, to set off his respective debt by way of mutual deduction, so that in any action brought for the larger debt the residue only, after such deduction, shall be recovered. John Will & Sons, Inc. v. Citizens Nat. Bank of Netcong, 125 N.J.L. 546, 16 A.2d 804, 806.

A set-off was unknown to the common law; according to which mutual debts were distinct, and inextinguishable except by actual payment, release or agreement. Scarano v. Scarano, 132 N.J.Eq. 362, 28 A.2d 425, 429, 430. A defendant who had a demand against plaintiff was compelled to bring a separate suit or resort to an equity court to have his claim set off. The English statute 2 Geo. II, c. 22, which has been generally adopted in the United States, with some modifications, in cases of mutual debts, however, allowed the defendant to set his debt against the other, either by pleading it in bar, or giving it in evidence, where proper notice had been given of such intention, under the general issue. The statute being made for the benefit of defendant, is not compulsory. The defendant, may waive his right, and bring a cross action against plaintiff. Himes v. Barnitz, 8 Watts, Pa., 39; 2 Camp. 594; Hinckly v. Walters, 9 Watts, Pa., 179; Branham v. Johnson, 62 Md. 259.

Independent of statute the right of set-off is of equitable origin and hence power to allow set-offs is inherent in equity courts; but courts sometimes allow set-offs where, for some technical reason, it could not be allowed at law under statute. Colton v. Dovers’ Perpetual Building and Loan Ass’n, 90 Md. 85, 45 A. 23, 26, 46 L.R.A. 388, 78 Am.St. Rep. 431; Scarano v. Scarano, 132 N.J.Eq. 362, 28 A.2d 425, 429, 430.

It ‘differs from counterclaim, in that a “counterclaim” arises out of the same transaction described in the complaint, while a “set-off” is independent thereof. Savings Bank of New London v. Santaniello, 130 Conn. 206, 33 A.2d 126, 128.

For the distinction between set-off and recoupment, see Recoupment.

“Set-off” differs from a “lien,” inasmuch as the former belongs exclusively to the remedy, and is merely a right to intercept the party think proper to do so, when sued by his creditor on a counter-demand, which can only be enforced through the medium of judicial proceedings; while the latter is, in effect, a substitute for a suit. 2 Op. Atty. Gen. 677.

SETTLE. A word of equivocal meaning; meaning different things in different connections, and the particular sense in which it is used may be explained by the context or the surrounding circumstances. Accordingly, the term may be employed as meaning to agree, to approve, to arrange, to ascertain, to liquidate, to come to or reach an agreement, to determine, to establish, to fix, to free from uncertainty, to place, or to regulate. Edwards v. Edwards, Tex.Civ.App., 52 S.W.2d 657, 661; Kocher v. Ricketts, 71 Ohio App. 8, 47 N.E.2d 657, 659.

Parties are said to settle an account when they go over its items and ascertain and agree upon the balance due from one to the other. And, when the party indebted pays such balance, he is also said to settle it. M. Zimmerman Co. v. Goldberg, 69 Pa.Super.Ct. 254, 255; State Bank of Stratford v. Young, 159 Iowa, 375, 140 N.W. 376, 380.

Settle a bill of exceptions. To approve it. Kocher v. Ricketts, 71 Ohio App. 8, 47 N.E.2d 657, 659.

When the bill of exceptions prepared for an appeal is not accepted as correct by the respondent, it is settled (i.e., adjusted and finally made conformable to the truth) by being taken before the judge who presided at the trial, and by him put into a form agreeing with his minutes and his recollection. Green v. Commonwealth, 181 Ky. 253, 204 S.W. 82, 83.

Settle a document. To make it right in form and in substance. Documents of difficulty or complexity, such as mining leases, settlements by will or deed, partnership agreements, etc., are generally settled by counsel. Sweet.

Settle property. To limit it, or the income of it, to several persons in succession, so that the person for the time being in the possession or enjoyment of it has no power to deprive the others of their right of future enjoyment. Sweet.

Settle up. A term, colloquial rather than legal, which is applied to the final collection, adjustment, and distribution of the estate of a decedent; it includes the processes of collecting the property, paying debts and charges, and turning over the balance to those entitled to receive it.

Settled estate. See Estate.

Settling day. The day on which transactions for the “account” are made up on the English stock-exchange. In consols they are monthly; in other investments, twice in the month.

Settling interrogatories. The determination by the court of objections to interrogatories and cross-interrogatories prepared to be used in taking a deposition.

Settling issues. In English practice. Arranging or determining the form of the issues in a cause. Where, in any action, it appears to the judge that the statement of claim or defense or reply does not sufficiently disclose the issues of fact between the parties, he may direct the parties to prepare issues; and such issues shall, if the parties differ, be settled by the judge. Judicature Act 1875, schedule, art. 19.

SETTLEMENT. Act or process of adjusting or determining; an adjusting; an adjustment between persons concerning their dealings or difficulties; an agreement by which parties having disputed matters between them reach or ascertain what is coming from one to the other; arrangement of difficulties; composure of doubts or differences; determination by agreement; and liquidation. Sowers v. Robertson, 144 Kan. 273, 58 P.2d 1105, 1107. Payment or satisfaction. Ledbetter v. Hall, 191 Ark. 791, 87 S.W.2d 996, 999. In legal parlance, implies meeting of minds of parties to transaction or controversy. Ezmirlian v. Otto, 139 Cal.App. 486, 34 P.2d 774, 778.

See, also, Settle.

Contracts

Adjustment or liquidation of mutual accounts; the act by which parties who have been dealing together arrange their accounts and strike a balance. Also full and final payment or discharge of an account. Bauer v. National Union Fire Ins. Co. of Pittsburgh, Pa., 51 N.D. 1, 198 N.W. 546, 550; Michael v. Donohoe, 86 W.Va. 34, 102 S.E. 803, 805.

Conveyancing

A disposition of property by deed, usually through the medium of a trustee, by which its enjoyment is limited to several persons in succession, as a wife, children, or other relatives.

Poor Laws

Settlement once acquired is not necessarily lost or defeated by a voluntary absence for the purpose of obtaining work. State ex rel. Heydenreich v. Lyons, 374 Ill. 557, 30 N.E.2d 46, 51.

Probate Practice

The settlement of an estate consists in its administration by the executor or administrator carried so far that all debts and legacies have been paid and the individual shares of distributees in the corpus of the estate, or the residuary portion, as the case may be, definitely ascertained and determined, and accounts filed and passed, so that nothing remains but to make final distribution. Appeal of Mathews, 72 Conn. 555, 45 A. 170; Pearce v. Pearce, 199 Ala. 491, 74 So. 952, 957.

Public Transactions and Accounts

General

Act of settlement. The statute 12 & 13 Wm. III. c. 2, by which the crown of England was limited to the house of Hanover, and some new provisions were added at the same time for the better securing the religion, laws, and liberties.

Deed of settlement. A deed made for the purpose of settling property, i.e., arranging the mode and extent of the enjoyment thereof. The party who settles property is called the "settlor;" and usually his wife and children or his creditors or his near relations are the beneficiaries taking interests under the settlement. Brown.

Equity of settlement. The equitable right of a wife, when her husband sues in equity for the reduction of her equitable estate to his own possession, to have the whole or a portion of such estate settled upon herself and her children. Also a similar right now recognized by the equity courts as directly to be asserted against the husband. Also called the "wife's equity."

Family settlement. See Family Settlement.

Final settlement. This term, as applied to the administration of an estate, is usually understood to have reference to the order of court approving the account which closes the business of the estate, and which finally discharges the executor or administrator from the duties of his trust. Roberts v. Spencer, 112 Ind. 85, 13 N.E. 129.

Strict settlement. This phrase was formerly used to denote a settlement whereby land was limited to a parent for life, and after his death to his first and other sons or children in tail, with trustees interposed to preserve contingent remainders. 1 Steph. Comm. 332, 333. In England, a settlement to the use of the settlor for life, and after his death to the use that his widow may receive a rent charge (or jointure), subject to these life interests, to trustees for a long term of years in trust to raise by mortgage on the term a sum of money for the portions for his younger children, and subject thereto to the use of his first and other sons successively and the heirs male of their bodies, with the ultimate remainder in default of issue to the settlor in fee simple.

Voluntary settlement. A settlement of property upon a wife or other beneficiaried, made gratuitously or without valuable consideration.

SEXTOR. A person who, for the purpose of acquiring a pre-emption right, has gone upon the land in question, and is actually resident there. Hume v. Gracy, 86 Tex. 671, 27 S.W. 584; McInthyre v. Sherwood, 82 Cal. 139, 22 P. 937.

SEXTOR. The grantor or donor in a deed of settlement. Also one who creates trust. Ulmer v. Fulton, 129 Ohio St. 323, 195 N.E. 557, 564, 97 A.L.R. 1170. One who furnishes the consideration for the creation of a trust, though in form the trust is created by another. Lehman v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.2, 109 F.2d 99, 100.

SEVER. To separate, as one from another; to cut off from something; to divide; to part in any way, especially by violence, as by cutting, rending, etc.; as, to sever the head from the body; to cut or break open or apart; to divide into parts; to cut through; to disjoin; as, to sever the arm or leg. Muse v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 193 La. 605, 192 So. 72, 74, 125 A.L.R. 1075. In practice. To insist upon a plea distinct from that of other co-defendants.

SEVERABLE. Admitting of severance or separation, capable of being divided; separable; capable of being severed from other things to which it was joined, and yet maintaining a complete and independent existence. State ex rel. Dolman v. Dickey, 288 Mo. 92, 231 S.W. 582, 585; Lawson v. Muse, 180 Mo.App. 35, 165 S.W. 396, 397.

SEVERABLE CONTRACT. See Contract.

SEVERABLE STATUTE. A statute if after an invalid portion of it has been stricken out, that which remains is self-sustaining and capable of separate enforcement without regard to the stricken portion, in which case that which remains should be sustained. Rutenberg v. City of Philadelphia, 329 Pa. 26, 196 A. 73, 79.

SEVERAL. More than two, often used to designate a number greater than one. First Nat. Trust & Savings Bank of San Diego v. Industrial Accident Commission, 2 P.2d 347, 351, 213 Cal. 322, 78 A.L.R. 1324. Each particular, or a small number, singly taken. Nashville, C. & St. L. Ry. v. Marshall County, 161 Tenn. 236, 30 S.W.2d 268. Separate; individual; independent; separable. In this sense the word is distinguished from "joint." Also exclusive; individual; appropriated. In this sense it is opposed to "common." Townsend v. Roof, 210 Mo.App. 293, 237 S.W. 189, 190; L. L. Satler Lumber Co. v. Exler, 239 Pa. 135, 86 A. 793, 798.

SEVERAL ACTIONS. Where a separate and distinct action is brought against each of two or more persons who are all liable to the plaintiff in respect to the same subject-matter, the actions are said to be "several." If all the persons are joined as defendants in one and the same action, it is called a "joint" action.

SEVERAL INHERITANCE. An inheritance conveyed so as to descend to two persons severally, by moieties, etc.

SEVERAL ISSUES. This occurs where there is more than one issue involved in a case. 3 Steph. Comm. 560.

SEVERALLY. Distinctly, separately, apart from others. State Nat. Bk. v. Reilly, 124 Ill. 471, 14 N. E. 657. When applied to a number of persons the expression severally liable usually implies that each one is liable alone. Pruyn v. Black, 21 N.Y. 301.

SEVERALTY. A state of separation. An estate in severalty is one that is held by a person in his own right only, without any other person being joined or connected with him, in point of interest, during his estate therein. 2 Bl.Comm. 179.

The term "severalty" is especially applied, in England, to the case of adjoining meadows undivided from each other, but belonging, either permanently or in what are called "shifting severalties," to separate owners, and held in severalty until the crops have been carried, when the whole is thrown open as pasture for the cattle of all the owners, and in some cases for the cattle of other persons as well; each owner is called a "severalty owner," and his rights of pasture are called "severalty rights," as opposed to the rights of persons not owners. Cooke, -Lncl.Acts, 47, 163n.

SEVERALTY, ESTATE IN. An estate which is held by the tenant in his own right only, without any other being joined or connected with him in point of interest during the continuance of his estate. 2 Bl.Comm. 179.

SEVERANCE. Act of severing, or state of being severed; partition; separation. Muse v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 193 La. 605, 192 So. 72, 74, 125 A.L.R. 1075.

Pleading
Separation; division. The separation by defendants in their pleas; the adoption, by several defendants, of separate pleas, instead of joining in the same plea. Steph.Pl. 257.

Property
The destruction of any one of the unities of a joint tenancy. It is so called because the estate is no longer a joint tenancy, but is severed. Cutting of the crops, such as corn, grass, etc., or the separating of anything from the realty. Brown.

SEVERANCE DAMAGE. Any element of value arising out of relation of condemned portion to tract of which it was a part. It is to be included in owner’s compensation. U. S. v. Miller, 63 S. Ct. 276, 281, 317 U.S. 369, 87 L.Ed. 336, 147 A.L.R. 55.

SEWER. A fresh-water trench or little river, encompassed with banks on both sides, to drain off... surplus water into the sea. Cowell. Properly, a trench artificially made for the purpose of carrying water into the sea, (or a river or pond.)
Crabb, Real Prop. § 113; Bennett v. New Bedford, 110 Mass. 433.

In its modern and more usual sense, an artificial (usually under-ground or covered) channel used for the drainage of two or more separate buildings. State Board of Health v. Jersey City, 55
N.J.Eq. 116, 35 A. 835; Aldrich v. Paine, 106 Iowa
461, 76 N.W. 812.

"Sewers" differ from "drains" only in that the former are in cities, and generally covered over, while the latter are in rural communities, and open. Pioneer Real Estate Co. v. City of Portland, 119 Or. 1, 247 P. 319, 321. See, also, Barton v. Drainage Dist. No. 30, 174 Ark. 173, 294
S. W. 418, 419.

Commissioners of Sewers

In English law. The court of commissioners of sewers is a temporary tribunal erected by virtue of a commission under the great seal. Its jurisdiction is to overlook the repairs of sea-banks and sea-walls, and the cleansing of public rivers, streams, ditches, and other conduits whereby any waters are carried off, and is confined to such county or particular district as the commission expressly names. Brown.

Public Sewer

One which serves the public and connects with and receives the discharges from district sewers.
Schwabe v. Moore, 187 Mo.App. 74, 172 S.W. 1157, 1159.

Sewer Outlet

As used in a statute, that portion of a sewer which serves no other purpose than to connect the sewer system with the point of discharge. Mo-

Trunk Sewer

One which bears the same relation to a system of sewers that the trunk of a tree bears to its branches. Rush v. Grandy, 66 Mont. 222, 213 P.
242, 243.

SEX. The sum of the peculiarities of structure and function that distinguish a male from a female organism; the character of being male or female. Webster, Dict.

SEXAGESIMA SUNDAY. In ecclesiastical law.
The second Sunday before Lent, being about the sixtieth day before Easter.

SEXHINDENI. In Saxon law. The middle thanes, valued at 600s.

SEXTANS. Lat. In Roman law. A subdivision of the as, containing two unci; the proportion of two-twelvths, or one-sixth. 2 Bl.Comm. 462, note.

SEXTARY. In old records. An ancient measure of liquids, and of dry commodities; a quarter or seam. Spelman.

SEXTERY LANDS. Lands given to a church or religious house for maintenance of a sexton or sacristan. Cowell.

SEXTON. An attendant or care-taker in a church building, usually with care of the attached bury-ging ground.

SEXTUS DECRETALIUM. Lat. The sixth
(book) of the decretals; the sext, or sixth decretal.
So called because appended, in the body of the canon law, to the five books of the decretals of Gregory IX.; it consists of a collection of supplementary decretals, and was published A. D. 1298.
Butl. Hor. Jur. 172; 1 Bl.Comm. 82.

SEXUAL DISEASES. Synonymous with venereal diseases. State v. Hollinshead, 77 Or. 473, 151
P. 710, 711.

SEXUAL INSTINCT, INVERSION AND PER-VERSION OF. See Insanity; Pederasty; Sodomy.

SEXUAL INTERCOURSE. Carnal copulation of male and female, implying actual penetration of the organs of the latter. Williams v. State, 92
Pla. 125, 109 So. 305, 306.

SHACK. In English law. The straying and escaping of cattle out of the lands of their owners into other uninclosed land; an intercomming of cattle. 2 H.Bl. 416.

It sometimes happens that a number of adjacent fields, though held in severalty, i. e., by separate owners, and cultivated separately, are, after the crop on each parcel has been carried in, thrown open as pasture to the cattle of all the owners. "Arable lands cultivated on this plan are called 'shack fields,' and the right of each owner of a part of the same to feed cattle out of the lands of their owners though held in severalty, is in favor of this meaning, or when addressed to public duty which may be enforced, particularly if public policy has the invariable significance of excluding the idea of discretion, and has the significance, the term "shall" is a word of command, and one which has always or which must be given a compulsory meaning; as denoting obligation. It has a peremptory meaning, and it is generally imperative or mandatory. It has the invariable significance of excluding the idea of discretion, and has the significance of operating to impose a duty which may be enforced, particularly if public policy is in favor of this meaning, or when addressed to public officials, or where a public interest is involved, or where the public or persons have rights which ought to be exercised or enforced, unless a contrary intent appears. Peo-

But it may be construed as merely permissive or directory, (as equivalent to "may," ) to carry out the legislative intention and in cases where no right or benefit to any one depends on its being taken in the imperative sense, and where no public or private right is impaired by its interpretation in the other sense. Spaulding & Kimball v. Etna Chemical Co., 98 Vt. 169, 126 A. 588, 589; Wisdom v. Board of Sup'r's of Polk County, 236 Iowa 669, 19 N.W.2d 602, 607, 608. Also, as against the government, it is to be construed as "may," unless a contrary intention is manifest. Cairo & Fulton R. Co. v. Hecht, 95 U.S. 170, 24 L.Ed. 423.

Although the word usually denotes an obligation, it also implies an element of futurity. Cunningham v. Long, 125 Me. 494, 135 A. 198, 200; Hemsley v. McKim, 119 Md. 431, 87 A. 506, 511.

SHARE. n. A part or definite portion of a thing owned by a number of persons in common and contemplates something owned in common by two or more persons and has reference to that part of the undivided interest which belongs to some one of them. In re Bond & Mortgage Guarantee Co., 157 Misc. 240, 283 N.Y.S. 623, 639.

In the law of corporations and joint-stock companies, a definite portion of the capital of a company.

See, also, Share of Corporate Stock.

SHARE AND SHARE ALIKE. In equal shares or proportions. Jenne v. Jenne, 271 Ill. 526, 111 N.E. 540, 543; Rogers v. Burress, 199 Ky. 766, 251 S.W. 980, 981. The words commonly indicate per capita division; Burton v. Cahill, 192 N.C. 505, 135 S.E. 332, 335; and they may be applied to a division between classes as well as to a division among individuals; Laisure v. Richards, 56 Ind. App. 301, 103 N.E. 679, 682; Tucker v. Nugent, 117 Me. 10, 102 A. 307, 310.

SHARE CERTIFICATE. An instrument under the seal of the company, certifying that the person therein named is entitled to a certain number of shares; it is prima facie evidence of his title thereto. Frank Gilbert Paper Co. v. Prankard, 204 App.Div. 83, 198 N.Y.S. 25, 28; Furr v. Chapman, Tex.Com.App., 286 S.W. 171, 172.

SHARE OF CORPORATE STOCK. A proportion- al part of certain rights in the management and profits of a corporation during its existence, and in the assets upon dissolution, and evidence of the stockholder's ratable share in the distribution of the assets on the winding up of the corporation's business. Department of Treasury of Indiana v. Crowder, 214 Ind. 252, 15 N.E.2d 89, 91; Commissioner of Internal Revenue v. Scatena, C.C.A.9, 85 F. 729, 732.

SHARE-WARRANT TO BEARER. A warrant or certificate under the seal of the company, stating that the bearer of the warrant is entitled to a certain number or amount of fully paid up shares or stock. Coupons for payment of dividends may be annexed to it. Delivery of the share-warrant operates as a transfer of the shares or stock. Sweet.

SHAREHOLDER. Strictly, a person who has agreed to become a member of a corporation or company, and with respect to whom all the required formalities have been gone through; e.g., signing of deed of settlement, registration, or the like. A shareholder by estoppel is a person who has acted and been treated as a shareholder, and consequently has the same liabilities as if he were an ordinary shareholder. Lind.: Partn. 130. Beal v. Essex Sa". Bank, C.C.A.Mass., 67 F. 816, 15 C.C.A. 128; State v. Mitchell, 104 Tenn. 336, 58 S.W. 365.

SHARP. A "sharp" clause in a mortgage or other security (or the whole instrument described as "sharp") is one which empowers the creditor to take prompt and summary action upon default in payment or breach of other conditions.

SHARPING CORN. A customary gift of corn, which, at every Christmas, the farmers in some parts of England give to their smith for sharpening their plow-irons, harrow-tines, _etc. Blount.

SHASTER. In Hindu law. The instrument of government or instruction; any book of instructions, particularly containing Divine ordinances. Wharton.

SHAVE. Sometimes used to denote the act of obtaining the property of another by oppression and extortion. Also used in an innocent sense to denote the buying of existing notes and other securities for money, at a discount. Hence to charge a man with using money for shaving is not libelous per se. Trentham v. Moore, 111 Tenn. 346, 76 S.W. 904.

SHAW. In old English law. A wood. Co.Litt. 4b.

SHAWATORES. Soldiers. Cowell.

SHEADING. A riding, tithing, or division in the Isle of Man, where the whole island is divided into six sheadings, in each of which there is a coroner or chief constable appointed by a delivery of a
SHERIFF

American Law

The chief executive and administrative officer of a county, being chosen by popular election. His principal duties are in aid of the criminal courts and civil courts of record; such as serving process, summoning juries, executing judgments, holding judicial sales and the like. He is also the chief conservator of the peace within his territorial jurisdiction. Harston v. Langston, Tex.Civ.App., 292 S.W. 648, 650. When used in statutes, the term may include a deputy sheriff. Lanier v. Town of Greenville, 174 N.C. 311, 93 S.E. 850, 853.

English Law

The principal officer in every county, who has the transacting of the public business of the county. He is an officer of great antiquity, and was also called the "shire-reeve," "reeve," or "bailiff." He is called in Latin "vice-comes," as being the deputy of the earl or comes, to whom anciently the custody of the shire was committed. The duties of the sheriff principally consist in executing writs, precepts, warrants from justices of the peace for the apprehension of offenders, etc. Brown.

Scotch Law

The office of sheriff differs somewhat from the same office under the English law, being, from ancient times, an office of important judicial power, as well as ministerial. The sheriff exercises a jurisdiction of considerable extent, both of civil and criminal character, which is, in a proper sense, judicial, in addition to powers resembling those of an English sheriff. Tomlins; Bell,

General

Deputy sheriff. See Deputy.

High sheriff. One holding the office of sheriff, as distinguished from his deputies or assistants under sheriffs.

Pocket sheriff. In English law. A sheriff appointed by the sole authority of the crown, without the usual form of nomination by the judges in the exchequer. 1 Bl.Comm. 342; 3 Steph.Comm. 23.

SHERIFF CLERK. The clerk of the sheriff's court in Scotland,
SHERIFF

SHERIFF DEPUTE. In Scotch law. The principal sheriff of a county, who is also a judge.

SHERIFF-GELD. A rent formerly paid by a sheriff, and it is prayed that the sheriff in his account may be discharged thereof. Rot. Parl. 50 Edw. III.

SHERIFF-TOOTH. In English law. A tenure by the service of providing entertainment for the sheriff at his county courts. An ancient tax on land in Derbyshire. A common tax formerly levied for the sheriff’s diet. Cowell; Wharton.

SHERIFF’S COURT. The court held before the sheriff’s deputy, that is, the undersheriff, and wherein actions are brought to be executed. The sheriff’s court for the principal sheriff of a county, who is also a judge. Rot. Parl. 50 Edw. III.

SHERIFF-GELD. A rent formerly paid by a sheriff in his account may be discharged thereof. Rot. Parl. 50 Edw. III.

The “Sheriffs Court of the City of London” was the name by which the City of London Court was known prior to the County Courts Act, 1867, 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, § 35. Its procedure was, theretofore, regulated by Acts and Rules peculiar to itself; but by the above enactment, it becomes to all intents and purposes a county court. Wharton.

SHERIFF’S JURY. In practice. A jury composed of no determinate number, but which may be more or less than twelve, summoned by the sheriff for the purposes of an inquisition or inquest of office. 3 Bl.Comm. 258.

SHERIFF’S OFFICERS. Bailiffs, who are either bailiffs of hundreds or bound-bailiffs.

SHERIFF’S SALE. See Sale.

SHERIFF’S TOURN. A court of record in England, formerly held twice every year, within a month after Easter and Michaelmas, before the sheriff, in different parts of the county. It was, indeed, only the turn or rotation of the sheriff to keep a court-leet in each respective hundred. This was the great court-leet of the county, as the county court is the court-baron; for out of this, for the ease of the sheriff, was taken the court-leet or view of frank-pledge. 4 Bl.Comm. 273. It was obsolete in Coke’s time, but was not abolished till 1887. It had a limited criminal jurisdiction.

SHERIFFALTY, or SHRIEVALTY. The time of a man’s being sheriff. Cowell. The term of a sheriff’s office. Also, the office itself.

SHERIFFFALTY, or SHRIEVALTY. The time of a man’s being sheriff. Cowell. The term of a sheriff’s office. Also, the office itself.

SERRERIE. A word used by the authorities of the Roman Church, to specify contemptuously the technical parts of the law, as administered by non-clerical lawyers. Wharton.

SHEWER. In the practice of the English high court, when a view by a jury is ordered, persons are named by the court to show the property to be viewed, and are hence called "shewers." There is usually a shewer on behalf of each party. Archb.Pr. 339, et seq.

SHEWING. In English law. To be quit of attachment in a court, in plaints shewed and not avowed. Obsolete.

SHIFT MARRIAGE. When a man died having debts which his widow was unable to pay, she was obliged, if she contracted a second marriage, to leave her clothes in the hands of the creditors, and to go through the ceremony in her shift. Gradually, however, the ceremony was mitigated by the bridegroom lending her clothes for the occasion. Said by Lecky, Hist. of Eng. 18th Cent., IV, p. 23, to be a curious relic of a standard of commercial integrity which had long since passed away.

SHIFTING. Changing; varying; passing from one person to another by substitution.

SHIFTING CLAUSE. In a settlement, a clause by which some other mode of devolution is substituted for that primarily prescribed. Examples of shifting clauses are: The ordinary name and arms clause, and the clause of less frequent occurrence by which a settled estate is destined as the foundation of a second family, in the event of the elder branch becoming otherwise enriched. These shifting clauses take effect under the statute of uses. Sweet.

SHIFTING RISK. In insurance, a risk created by a contract of insurance on a stock of merchandise, or other similar property, which is kept for sale, or is subject to change in items by purchase and sale; the policy being conditioned to cover the goods in the stock at any and all times and not to be affected by changes in its composition. Farmers’ etc., Ins. Ass’n v. Kryder, 5 Ind.App. 430, 31 N.E. 851, 51 Am.St.Rep. 284.

SHIFTING SEVERALTY. See Severalty.

SHIFTING STOCK OF MERCHANDISE. A stock of merchandise subject to change from time to time, in the course of trade by purchases, sales, or other transactions. Laderburg v. Miller, C.C.A. Va., 210 F. 614, 617.

SHIFTING THE BURDEN OF PROOF. Transferring it from one party to the other, or from one side of the case to the other, when he upon whom it rested originally has made out a prima facie case or defense by evidence, of such a character that it then becomes incumbent upon the other to rebut it by contradictory or defensive evidence.

SHIFTING USE, See Use.

SHILLING. In English law. The name of an English coin, of the value of one-twentieth part of... a pound. This denomination of money was also used in America, in colonial times, but was not everywhere of uniform value.

SHIN-PLASTER. Formerly, a jocose term for a bank-note greatly depreciated in value; also for paper money of a denomination less than a dollar. Webster, Dict. See Madison Ins. Co. v. Forsythe, 2 Ind. 483.

SHINNEY. A local name for a homemade whiskey. State v. McClinton, 94 So. 141, 142, 152 La. 632.

SHINTO. State religion of Japan.

In a broader sense, to transport. Burton v. State, 135 Ark. 612, 206 S.W. 51, 52. To deliver to a common carrier for transportation. State v. Bayer, 93 Ohio St. 72, 112 N.E. 197, 198; Horner v. Daily, 77 Ind.App. 378, 133 N.E. 585, 587. To send necessary, to get rid of. Bird v. State, 131 Tenn. 518, 175 S.W. 554, 556, Ann.Cas.1917A, 634. To send by established mode of transportation, as to "carry," "convey," or "transport," which are synonymous and defined, respectively, as "to bear or cause to be borne as from one place to another," "to transport from one place to another," and "to carry or convey from one place to another." Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co. v. Petroleum Refining Co., D.C.Ky., 39 F.2d 629, 630.

SHIP, n. A vessel of any kind employed in navigation. In a more restricted and more technical sense, a three-masted vessel navigated with sails. U. S. v. Kelly, 4 Wash.C.C. 528, F.Cas.No.15,516.

Nautical men apply the term "ship" to distinguish a vessel having three masts, each consisting of a lower mast, a topmast, and a topgallant mast, with their appropriate rigging. In familiar language, it is usually employed to distinguish any large vessel, however rigged. Tomlins: Cope v. Vallette Dry-Dock Co., 119 U.S. 625, 7 S.Ct. 336, 30 L.Ed. 501; Swan v. U. S., 19 Ct.Cl. 62; The St. Louis, D.C.Ky., 48 F. 312; Wood v. Two Barges, C.C.La., 46 F. 204, as to what is not a ship.

An agreement to construct an ocean going ship is performed by the construction of an ocean going barge suitable for a cargo carrying steamer, since the hull and spars constitute the ship. Bell v. First Nat. Bank of Rockport, Tex.Civ.App., 226 S.W. 1107.

Ex Ship

These words in a contract of sale are not restricted to any particular ship, and by the usage of merchants simply denote that the property in the goods shall pass to the buyer upon their leaving the ship’s tackle, and that he shall be liable for all subsequent charges of landing. They do not constitute a condition of the contract but are inserted for the benefit of the seller. Harrison v. Fortlage, 16 S.Ct. 488, 161 U.S. 57, 40 L.Ed. 616.

General Ship

Where a ship is not chartered wholly to one person, but the owner offers her generally to carry the goods of all comers, or where, if chartered to one person, he offers her to several subfreighters for the conveyance of their goods, she is called a "general" ship, as opposed to a "chartered" one. Brown. One which is employed by the charterer or owner on a particular voyage, and is hired to a number of persons, unconnected with each other to convey their respective goods to the place of destination. Alexander Eccles & Co. v. Strachan Shipping Co., D.C.Ga., 21 F.2d 653, 655; Ward v. Gree. 6 Cow., N.Y., 173, 16 Am.Dec. 437.

Ship-Breaking

In Scotch law. The offense of breaking into a ship. Arkley, 461.

Ship-Broker

An agent for the transaction of business between ship-owners and charterers or those who ship cargoes. Little Rock v. Barton, 33 Ark. 444.

Ship-Chandlery

A term of extensive import, and includes everything necessary to furnish and equip a vessel, so as to render her seaworthy for the intended voyage.

Not only stores, stoves, hardware, and crockery have been held to be within the term, but muskets and other arms also, the voyage being round Cape Horn to California, in the course of which voyage arms are sometimes carried for safety. Weaver v. The S. G. Owens, Pa., 29 F.Cas. 17,310; 29 F.Cas. 489.

Ship-Channel

In rivers, harbors, etc., the channel in which the water is deep enough for vessels of large size, usually marked out in harbors by buoys. The Oliver, D.C.Va., 22 F. 848.

Ship-Damage

In the charter-parties with the English East India Company, these words occur. Their meaning is, damage from negligence, insufficiency, or bad stowage in the ship. Abb. Shipp. 204.

Ship-Master

The captain or master of a merchant ship, appointed and put in command by the owner, and having general control of the vessel and cargo, with power to bind the owner by his lawful acts and engagements in the management of the ship.

Ship-Money

In English law. An imposition formerly levied on port-towns and other places for fitting out ships; revived by Charles I., and abolished in the same reign. 17 Car. I. c. 14.

Ship’s-Bill

The copy of the bill of lading retained by the master. It is not authoritative as to the terms of the contract of affreightment; the bill delivered to the shipper must control, if the two do not agree. The Thames, 14 Wall. 98, 20 L.Ed. 804.

Ship’s Company

A term embracing all the officers of the ship, as well as the mariniers or common seamen, but not a passenger. U. S. v. Libby, 26 F.Cas. 928; U. S. v. Winn, 28 F.Cas. 735.

Ship’s Husband

In maritime law. A person appointed by the several part-owners of a ship, and usually one of their number, to manage the concerns of the ship for the common benefit. Generally understood to be the general agent of the owners in regard to all the affairs of the ship in the home port. Story, Ag. § 35; 3 Kent, Comm. 151; Webster v. The Andes, 18 Ohio 187; Muldon v. Whitlock, 1 Cow., N.Y., 307, 13 Am.Dec. 533; 1 Y. & C. 326; Gould v. Stanton, 16 Conn. 12. He cannot insure or bind the owners for premiums. Hewett v. Buck, 17 Me. 147, 35 Am.Dec. 243; 2 Maule & S. 485; Foster v. Ins. Co., 11 Pick., Mass., 85; 5 Burr. 2627.

Ship’s Papers

The papers which must be carried by a vessel on a voyage, in order to furnish evidence of her national character, the nature and destination of the cargo, and of compliance with the navigation laws. The ship’s papers are of two sorts: Those required by the law of a particular country; such as the certificate of registry, license, charter-party, bills of lading and of health, required by the law of England to be on board all British ships. These required by the law of nations to be on board neutral ships, to vindicate their title to that character; these are the passport, sea-letter, proofs of property, the muster-roll or rôle d’equipage, the charter-party, the bills of lading and invoices, the log-book or ship’s journal, and the bill of health. 1 March. Ins. c. 9, § 6. See, also, Grace v. Browne, C.C.A.N.Y., 86 F. 155.

SHIPMENT. The delivery of the goods within the time required on some vessel, destined to the particular port, which the seller has reason to suppose will sail within a reasonable time. It does not mean a clearance of the vessel as well as putting the goods on board where there is nothing to indicate that the seller was expected to exercise any control over the clearance of the vessel or of her subsequent management. Ledon v. Havemeyer, 121 N.Y. 179, 24 N.E. 297, 8 L.R.A. 245. See L.R. 2 App.Cas. 455; Stubbs v. Lund, 7 Mass. 453, 5 Am.Dec. 63; Lamborn & Co. v. Log Cabin Products Co., D.C.Minn., 291 F. 435, 438.

A “shipment” does not consist in loading alone, but consists in complete delivery of goods by the shipper to the carrier for transportation, and shipment is not made until the shipper has parted with all control over the goods and nothing remains to be done by him to complete delivery.

SHIPPER. A Dutch word, signifying the master of a ship. It is mentioned in some statutes, and is now generally called “skipper.” Tomlins.

One who ships goods; one who puts goods on board of a vessel, for carriage to another place during her voyage and for delivery there, by charter-party or otherwise. One who signs a bill of lading as “shipper,” unless the contrary appears, is presumably the consignor. New York Cent. R. Co. v. Singer Mfg. Co., 3 N.J.M. 1137, 131 A. 111, 114.

Under federal statutes, one is a “shipper” who, although a consignee, exercises such direct control over shipments of commodities consigned to him by another as enables him, by his own act, to procure for himself discriminations in respect to transportation service. U. S. v. Metropolitan Lumber Co., D.C.N.J., 254 F. 335, 346. Thus, a forwarder of freight, who sends in his own name all the freight he can over a carrier, which, in consideration of the business thus obtained, pays him a commission or salary calculated on the freight moneys received by the carrier from him, is a “shipper,” and the payment in form of commission or salary or otherwise is a “rebate” or concession in violation of the Interstate Commerce Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, § 6, 24 Stat. 380 (49 U.S.C.A. § 6), and Elkins Act Feb. 19, 1903, c. 708, 32 Stat. 847, § 1, as amended by Act June 29, 1906, c. 3591, 34 Stat. 587, § 2 (49 U.S.C.A. § 41). U. S. v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., D.C.N.Y., 222 F. 685, 686.

SHIPPER’S ORDER. In bills of lading, is well understood and means that the title remains in the shipper until he orders a delivery of the goods. B. W. McMahen & Co. v. State Nat. Bank of Shawnee, Tex.Civ.App., 160 S.W. 403, 404; Bennett v. Dickinson, 106 Kan. 95, 186 P. 1005.

SHIPPING. Ships in general; ships or vessels of any kind intended for navigation. Relating to ships; as, shipping interests, shipping affairs, shipping business, shipping concerns. Putting on board a ship or vessel, or receiving on board a ship or vessel. Webster, Dict.; Worcester, Dict.

Law of Shipping

A comprehensive term for all that part of the maritime law which relates to ships and the persons employed in or about them. It embraces such subjects as the building and equipment of vessels, their registration and nationality, their ownership and inspection, their employment, (including charter-parties, freight, demurrage, towage, and salvage,) and their sale, transfer, and mortgage; also, the employment, rights, powers, and duties of masters and mariners; and the law relating to ship-brokers, ship-agents, pilots, etc.

Mental Shock
A sudden agitation of the mind; startling emotion, as the shock of a painful discovery, a shock of grief or joy. Provident Life and Accident Ins. Co. v. Campbell, 18 Tenn.App. 452, 79 S.W.2d 292, 295.

A blow, impact, collision, concussion, or violent shake or jar, or a violent collision of bodies, or the concussion caused by it; a sudden striking or dashing together or against something. Provident Life and Accident Ins. Co. v. Campbell, 18 Tenn. App. 452, 79 S.W.2d 292, 295.

Physical Shock
Physical Shock. The demolition or shattering of a vessel, caused by her driving ashore or on rocks and shoals in the midseas, or by the violence of winds and waves in tempests. 2 Am. Ins. p. 734.

SHOOT. To strike with something shot; to hit, wound, or kill, with a missile discharged from a weapon; and the missile meant in such cases is the arrow, bullet, or ball, intended to be discharged and to strike the object aimed at. A person cannot be said to have been shot who was not hit by bullet or ball, but only powder burned by the weapon discharged. State v. Manuel, 153 La. 7, 95 So. 263, 264. The term generally implies the use of firearms. Shumake v. State, 90 Fla. 133, 105 So. 314, 315.

SHOP. A building in which goods and merchandise are sold at retail, or where mechanics work, and sometimes keep their products for sale. State v. Morgan, 98 N.C. 641, 3 S.E. 927; State v. O'Connell, 26 Ind. 267; State v. Sprague, 149 Mo. 409, 50 S.W. 901; Corn. v. Riggs, 14 Gray, Mass., 378, 77 Am. Dec. 333; Richards v. Ins. Co., 60 Mich. 426, 27 N.W. 586. There must be some structure of a more or less permanent character. 6 B. & S. 303.

The term is properly applied to a place of manufacture or repair, such as a roundhouse, Koecher v. Minneapolis, St. P. & S. S. M. Ry. Co., 122 Minn. 458, 142 N.W. 874, 876, or a building used for repairing automobiles and for the sale of automobile parts, gas, and oil, State v. Garon, 161 La. 867, 109 So. 530, 532. But it is not strictly applicable to a garage, State v. Garon, 158 La. 1014, 105 So. 47, 48, nor to a restaurant, even though the restaurant also engages in the sale of cigars, Debenham v. Short, Tex.Civ. App., 199 S. W. 1147.

The word "shop" in its popular as well as legal meaning is not confined to a workshop, but is a word of various significance, and "store" and "workshop" are both included in it and do not exhaust its meaning. A place kept and used for the sale of goods may be rightly denominated a "shop." Commonwealth v. Moriarty, 311 Mass. 116, 40 N.E.2d 307, 308.

SHOP RIGHT. In patent law. The right of an employer to use employee's invention in employer's business without payment of royalty. Ashland Oil & Refining Co. v. Dorton, 300 Ky. 385, 189 S.W.2d 394.

It cannot come into existence unless the inventor was an employee of the one claiming the right at the time when the invention was made and reduced to practice. Crom v. Cement Gun Co., D.C.Del., 46 F.Supp. 403, 405.

SHOPA. In old records, a shop. Cowell.

SHOP-BOOK RULE. An exception to the hearsay evidence rule, permitting the introduction in evidence of books of original entry made in the usual course of business, and introduced from proper custody and upon general authentication. Clayton v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 96 Utah 331, 85 P.2d 819, 822, 120 A.L.R. 1117.

SHOP-BOOKS. Books of original entry kept by trademen, shop-keepers, mechanics, and the like, in which are entered their accounts and charges for goods sold, work done, etc., commonly called "account-books," or "books of account." The term does not include the stubs of a check book and entries thereon, McWhorter v. Tyson, 203 Ala. 509, 83 So. 330, 333, nor the book and entries of an express messenger, Rhoades v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. R., 227 Mass. 138, 116 N.E. 244, 245.

SHOPKEEPER. Whether a person who buys and sells commodities as a business is a merchant or a shopkeeper depends on the extent, and not on the character, of his business; if his business is large he is a "merchant," and if it is small he is a "shopkeeper." White Mountain Fur Co. v. Town of Whitefield, 77 N.H. 340, 91 A. 870, 871.

SHORE. Land on the margin of the sea, a lake, or a river,—especially a large river, in which the water ebbs and flows. Galveston v. Menard, 23 Tex. 349; Bell v. Gough, 23 N.J.L. 683.

Strictly and technically, lands adjacent to the sea or other tidal waters; the lands adjoining navigable waters, where the tide flows and reflows, which at high tides are submerged, and at low tides are bare. Shively v. Bowlby, 14 S.Ct. 548, 154 U.S. 1, 38 L.Ed. 331; Mather v. Chapman, 40 Conn. 400, 16 Am.Rep. 46; Axline v. Shaw, 35 Fla. 305, 17 So. 411, 28 L.R.A. 391. The space bounded by the high and low water marks. La Porte v. Menacon, 220 Mich. 684, 190 N.W. 655, 656; Sinford v. Watts, 123 Me. 230, 122 A. 573, 574; Borax Consolidated v. City of Los Angeles, Cal., 56 S.Ct. 23, 296 U.S. 101, 80 L.Ed. 9. And this is also true even though the lands may lie along nonnavigable waters. Shively v. Bowlby, 154 U.S. 1, 38 L.Ed. 331; Mather v. Chapman, 40 Conn. 400, 16 Am.Rep. 46; Axline v. Shaw, 35 Fla. 305, 17 So. 411, 28 L.R.A. 391. The space bounded by the high and low water marks. La Porte v. Menacon, 220 Mich. 684, 190 N.W. 655, 656; Sinford v. Watts, 123 Me. 230, 122 A. 573, 574; Borax Consolidated v. City of Los Angeles, Cal., 56 S.Ct. 23, 296 U.S. 101, 80 L.Ed. 9. And this is also true even though the lands may lie along nonnavigable bodies of water. Hunter v. Van Keuren, 130 Misc. 599, 224 N.Y.S. 153, 160.

Sea-shore is that space of land over which the waters of the sea spread in the highest water, during the winter season. Civ.Code La. art. 451.

Under the civil law the "shore line" boundary of lands adjoining navigable waters is the line marked by the highest tide. Dincans v. Keeran, Tex.Civ.App., 192 S.W. 603, 604.

In connection with salvage, "shore" means the land on which the waters have deposited things which are the subject of salvage, whether below or above ordinary high-water mark. The Gulfport, D.C.Ala., 243 F. 667, 680.

SHORT. Not long; of brief length; brief; not coming up to a measure, standard, requirement, or the like. Webster, Dict.

A term of common use in the stock and produce markets. To say that one is "short," in the vernacular of the exchanges, implies only that one has less of a commodity than may be necessary to meet demands and obligations. It does not imply that commodity cannot or will not be supplied upon demand. Thomas v. McShan, 99 Okl. 88, 225 P. 713, 714.

SHORT CAUSE. A cause which is not likely to occupy a great portion of the time of the court, and which may be entered on the list of "short causes," upon the application of one of the parties, and will then be heard more speedily than it would be in its regular order. This practice obtains in the English chancery and in some of the American states. The time allowed for the hearing varies in the different courts.

SHORT ENTRY. A custom of bankers of entering on the customer's pass-book the amount of notes deposited for collection, in such a manner that the amount is not carried to the latter's general balance until the notes are paid. Giles v. Perkins, 9 East, 12; Blaine v. Bourne, 11 R.I. 121, 23 Am.Rep. 429.

SHORT LEASE. A term applied colloquially, but without much precision, to a lease for a short term, (as a month or a year,) as distinguished from one running for a long period.

SHORT NOTICE. In practice. Notice of less than the ordinary time; generally of half that time. 2 Tidd, Pr. 757. In English Practice, four days' notice of trial. Wharton, Law Diet. Notice of trial. 1 Cr. & M. 499.

SHORT RATE. Cancellation of insurance policy. Where insurance policy is mutually rescinded by both parties and new policy contract, identical with original, save for shortened term and lessened earned premium, is re-issued and substituted for original contract. Keehn v. Hi-Grade Coal & Fuel Co., 23 N.J.Misc. 102, 41 A.2d 525, 532.

SHORT SALE. A contract for sale of shares of stock which the seller does not own, or certificates for which are not within his control, so as to be available for delivery at the time when, under rules of the exchange, delivery must be made. Provost v. U. S., 46 S.Ct. 152, 153, 269 U.S. 443, 70 L.Ed. 352; Chandler v. Prince, 221 Mass. 495, 109 N.E. 374, 378. In a "short sale" the broker may make a delivery of bonds or stock, charging the price thereof to the customer, and the account is carried until the customer orders the broker to repurchase the bonds, and an adjustment is made between the broker and customer on the difference between the selling and purchasing price. Brown v. Carpenter, 182 App.Div. 650, 168 N.Y.S. 921, 923.
SHORT SUMMONS. A process, authorized in some of the states, to be issued against an absconding, fraudulent, or nonresident debtor, which is returnable within a less number of days than an ordinary writ of summons.

SHORTFORD. An old custom of the city of Exeter, similar to that of gavelet in London, which was a mode of foreclosing the right of a tenant by the chief lord of the fee, in cases of non-payment of rent. Cowell.

SHORTLY AFTER. In point of time, a relative term, meaning in a short or brief time or manner; soon; presently; quickly. Chittenden County Trust Co. v. Hurd, 93 Vt. 71, 106 A. 564, 565.

SHOT. A projectile, particularly a solid ball or bullet that is not intended to fit the bore of a piece; also such projectiles collectively. Green v. Commonwealth, 122 Va. 862, 94 S.E. 940, 941.

SHOTGUN. A smooth-bore gun, often double-barreled, and now almost universally breach-loading, designed for firing shots at short range and killing small game, especially birds. Henderson v. State, 75 Fla. 464, 78 So. 427, 428.

SHOWER. One who accompanies a jury to the scene to call the attention of the jurors to specific objects to be noted. Snyder v. Mass., 54 S.Ct. 330.

SHRUB. A low, small plant, the branches of which grow directly from the earth without any supporting trunk, or stem. Clay v. Tel. Cable Co., 70 Miss. 406, 11 So. 658.

SHUT DOWN. To stop work;—usually said of a factory, etc. Webster, Dict.

SHY. To start suddenly aside through fright or suspicion; said especially of horses. San Antonio Machine & Supply Co. v. McKinley, Tex.Civ.App., 239 S.W. 340, 342.

SI A JURE DISCEDAS, VAGUS ERIS, ET ERUNT OMNIA OMNIBUS INCERTA. If you depart from the law, you will go astray, and all things will be uncertain to everybody. Co.Litt. 227b.

SI ACTIO. Lat. The conclusion of a plea to an action when the defendant demands judgment, if the plaintiff ought to have his action, etc. Obsolete.

SI ALIQUIS REI SOCIETAS SIT ET FINIS NEGOTIO IMPOSITUS EST, FINITUR SOCIETAS. If there is a partnership in any matter, and the business is ended, the partnership ceases. Griswold v. Waddington, 16 Johns, N.Y., 438, 489.

SI ALIQUIS DEFICIT, CUM AEQUITAS POSCIT, SUBVENIENDUM EST. If any one of certain required forms be wanting, where equity requires, it will be aided. The want of some of a neutral vessel's papers is strong presumptive evidence against the ship's neutrality, yet the want of any one of them is not absolutely conclusive. 1 Kent, Comm. 157.

SI ALIQUIS SOLATI. Lat. If he knows anything; if he is not altogether devoid of reason.

SI ASSUETIS MEDERI POSSIS, NOVA NON SUNT TENTANDA. If you can be relieved by accustomed remedies, new ones should not be tried. If an old wall can be repaired, a new one should not be made. 10 Coke, 142b.

SI CONSTET DE PERSONA. Lat. If it be certain who is the person meant.
SI CONTINGAT. Lat. If it happen. Words of condition in old conveyances. 10 Coke, 42a.

SI DUO IN TESTAMENTO PUGNANTIA REPERIANTUR, ULTIMUM EST RATUM. If two conflicting provisions are found in a will, the last is observed. Loft 251.

SI FECERIT TE SECURUM. Lat. If he make you secure. In practice. The initial and emphatic words of that description of original writ which directs the sheriff to cause the defendant to appear in court, without any option given him, provided the plaintiff gives the sheriff security effectually to prosecute his claim. 3 Bl.Comm. 274.

SI INGRATUM DIXERIS, OMNIA DIXERIS. If you affirm that one is ungrateful, in that you include every charge. A Roman maxim. Tray. Lat. Max.

SI ITA EST. Lat. If it be so. Emphatic words in the old writ or mandamus to a judge, commanding him, if the fact alleged be truly stated, (si ita est,) to affix his seal to a bill of exceptions. Ex parte Crane, 5 Pet. 192, 8 L.Ed. 92.

SI JUDICAS, COGNOSCE. If you judge, understand.

SI MELIORES SUNT QUOS DUCIT AMOR, PLURES SUNT QUOS CORRIGIT TIMOR. If those are better who are led by love, those are the greater number who are corrected by fear. Co.Litt. 392.

SI NON APPAREAT QUID ACTUM EST, ERIT CONSEQUENS UT ID SEQUAMUR QUOD IN REGIONE IN QUA ACTUM EST FREQUENTER. If it does not appear what was agreed upon, the consequence will be that we must follow that which is the usage of the place where the agreement was made. Dig. 50, 17, 34.

SI NON WINES. Lat. In English practice. A writ of association of justices whereby, if all cannot meet at the day assigned, it is allowed that two or more may proceed with the business. Cowell; Fitzh.Nat.Brev. 111 C.

SI NULLA SIT CONJECTURA QUIS DUCAT ALIO, VERBA INTELLIGENDA SUNT EX PROPRIETATE, NON GRAMMATICA SED POPULARI EX USU. If there be no inference which can be drawn from the words used in the formula by which the praetor directed the cause. Cowell; Fitzh.Nat.Brev. 111 C.

SI PARET. Lat. If it appears. In Roman law. 3 Inst. 5L If a man kill one, meaning to kill another, he is held guilty of felony.

SI RECOGNOSCAT. Lat. If he acknowledge. In old practice. A writ which lay for a creditor against his debtor for money numbered (pecunia numerata) or counted; that is, a specific sum of money, which the debtor had acknowledged in the county court, to owe him, as received in pecunias numeratis. Cowell.

must be complied with; and with respect to their truth, it is necessary that every part be true, taken jointly; if the conditions are separate, it is sufficient to comply with either one or other of them; and being conjunctive, that one or the other be true. Co.Litt. 225.

SI QUID UNIVERSITATI DEBETUR SINGULIS NON DEBETUR, NEC QUOD DEBET UNIVERSITATIS SINGULI DEBENT. If anything be owing to an entire body [or to a corporation], it is not owing to the individual members; nor do the individuals owe that which is owing by the entire body. Dig. 3, 4, 7, 1; 1 Bla.Comm. 484; Lindl. Part. *5.

SI QUIDEM IN NOMINE, COGNOMINE, PRERROGATIVEM LEGATARIAR TESTATOR ERRARET, CUM DE PERSONA CONSTAT, NIHILOMINIS VALET LEGATUM. Although a testator may have mistaken the nomen, cognomen, or prerenomen of a legatee, yet, if it be certain who is the person meant, the legacy is valid. Inst. 2, 20, 29; Broom, Max. 645; 2 Domat b. 2, 1, s. 6, §§ 10, 19.

SI QUIS. Lat. In the civil law. If any one. Formal words in the pmtorian edicts. The word "quias," though masculine in form was held to include women. Dig. 50, 16, 1.

SI QUIS CUM TOTUM PETISSET PARTEM PETAT, EXCEPTIO REI JUDICATVE VOCET. If a party, when he should have sued for an entire claim, sues only for a part, the judgment is res judicata against another suit. 2 Mart. O. S. (La.) 83.

SI A TUTELA REMOVENDUS EST. Jenk.Cent. 39. If a guardian do fraud to his ward, he shall be removed from his guardianship.

SI QUIS CUSTODI FRAUDEM PUPILLO FECERI SI QUIS PRZEGNANTEM UXOREM RELIQUIT, NON VIDETVR SINE LIBERIS DEcessISS. If a man dies, leaving his wife pregnant, he shall not be considered to have died without children. A rule of the civil law.
SI SUGGESTIO NON SIT VERA, LITERE PATENTES VACUIE SUNT. 10 Coke, 113. If the suggestion be not true, the letters patent are void.

SI TE FECERIT SECURUM. If he make you secure. See Si Fecerit to Securum.

SI SUGGESTIO NON SIT VERA, LITERE PATENTES VACUIE SUNT. 10 Coke, 113. If the suggestion be not true, the letters patent are void.

TENTES VACUIE SUNT. 10 Coke, 113. If the letters patent are void.

SI TE FECERIT SECURUM. If he make you secure. See Si Fecerit to Securum.

SI SUGGESTIO NON SIT VERA, LITERE PATENTES VACUIE SUNT. 10 Coke, 113. If the suggestion be not true, the letters patent are void.

SI TE FECERIT SECURUM. If he make you secure. See Si Fecerit to Securum.

SI SUGGESTIO NON SIT VERA, LITERE PATENTES VACUIE SUNT. 10 Coke, 113. If the suggestion be not true, the letters patent are void.

SI TE FECERIT SECURUM. If he make you secure. See Si Fecerit to Securum.

SI SUGGESTIO NON SIT VERA, LITERE PATENTES VACUIE SUNT. 10 Coke, 113. If the suggestion be not true, the letters patent are void.

SI TE FECERIT SECURUM. If he make you secure. See Si Fecerit to Securum.

SI SUGGESTIO NON SIT VERA, LITERE PATENTES VACUIE SUNT. 10 Coke, 113. If the suggestion be not true, the letters patent are void.

SI TE FECERIT SECURUM. If he make you secure. See Si Fecerit to Securum.

SI SUGGESTIO NON SIT VERA, LITERE PATENTES VACUIE SUNT. 10 Coke, 113. If the suggestion be not true, the letters patent are void.

SI TE FECERIT SECURUM. If he make you secure. See Si Fecerit to Securum.

SI TE FECERIT SECURUM. If he make you secure. See Si Fecerit to Securum.

SI SUGGESTIO NON SIT VERA, LITERE PATENTES VACUIE SUNT. 10 Coke, 113. If the suggestion be not true, the letters patent are void.

SI TE FECERIT SECURUM. If he make you secure. See Si Fecerit to Securum.
SIDE-KICKER. A coined expression without any standing in lexicology, which the court, as a matter of common knowledge, can say is not an uncommon vernacular or colloquial expression which may with equal propriety express a social relationship between the parties to whom it is applied, or convey the idea that they are business partners or have business interests in common. Spoon v. Sheldon, 27 Cal.App. 765, 151 P. 150, 152.

SIDE LINES. In commercial usage, lines of goods sold or businesses followed in addition to one's principal articles or occupation. Merrimac Mfg. Co. v. Bibb, 124 Ark. 189, 186 S.W. 817, Ann. Cas.1918C, 951. In mining law, the side lines of a mining claim are those which measure the extent of the claim on each side of the middle of the vein at the surface. They are not necessarily the side lines as laid down on the ground or on a map or plat; for if the claim, in its longer dimension, crosses the vein, instead of following it, the platted side lines will be treated in law as the end lines, and vice versa. Argentine Min. Co. v. Terrible Min. Co., 7 S.Ct. 1356, 122 U.S. 478, 30 L.Ed. 1140; Del Monte Min. Co. v. Last Chance Min. Co., 18 S.Ct. 895, 171 U.S. 55, 43 L.Ed. 72.

SIDE REPORTS. A term sometimes applied to unofficial volumes or series of reports, as contrasted with those prepared by the official reporter of the court, or to collections of cases omitted from the official reports.

SIDESMEN. In ecclesiastical law. These were originally persons whom, in the ancient episcopal synods, the bishops were wont to summon out of each parish to give information of the disorders of the clergy and people, and to report heretics. In process of time they became standing officers, originally and properly a seal impressed upon the church-warrens of a parish. 1 Burn. Ecc.Law, 399.

SIDEWALK. That part of a public street or highway designed for the use of pedestrians, City of Birmingham v. Shirley, 209 Ala. 305, 96 So. 214, 215; being exclusively reserved for them, and constructed somewhat differently than other portions of the street used by animals and vehicles generally, Central Life Assur. Soc. of the United States v. City of Des Moines, 185 Iowa 573, 171 N.W. 31, 32. That part of the street of a municipality which has been set apart and used for pedestrians, as distinguished from that portion set apart and used for animals and vehicles. Graham v. City of Pueblo, 63 Colo. 519, 168 P. 649, 650. A walk for foot passengers, or a public way especially intended for pedestrians. Russo v. City of Pueblo, 63 Colo. 519, 168 P. 649, 650. A walk for foot passengers or the side of a street or road. Kohlhof v. Chicago, 192 Ill. 249, 61 N.E. 446, 85 Am.St.Rep. 335; Challiss v. Parker, 11 Kan. 391; State v. Berdeta, 73 Ind. 185, 38 Am.Rep. 117; Pequignot v. Detroit, C.C.Mich., 16 F. 212.

Generally the sidewalk is included with the gutters and roadway in the general term street. In re Burmeister, 76 N.Y. 174; Warner v. Knox, 50 Wis. 429, 7 N.W. 372; Wiles v. Hoss, 114 Ind. 371, 16 N.E. 800. But in many cases of municipal ordinances and contracts the word street is held not to include sidewalks. Barry v. City of Cloverport, 175 Ky. 548, 194 S. W. 818, 819. See, also, James v. City of Newberg, 101 Or. 616, 201 P. 212.

SIGNATORY. A term used in diplomacy to indicate a nation which is a party to a treaty.

SIGNATURE. The act of putting down a man's name at the end of an instrument to attest its validity, the name thus written. A "signature" may be written by hand, printed, stamped, typewritten, engraved, photographed, or cut from one instrument and attached to another, and a signature lithographed on an instrument by a party is sufficient for the purpose of signing it; it being immaterial with what kind of instrument a signature is made. Smith v. Greenville County, 188 S.C. 349, 199 S.E. 416, 419. Maricopa County v. Osborn, 60 Ariz. 290, 136 P.2d 270, 274. And whatever mark, symbol, or device one may choose to employ as representative of himself is sufficient. Griffith v. Bonawitz, 73 Neb. 622, 103 N.W. 327, 339. See Sign.

SIGNIFICAVIT. In ecclesiastical law. When this word is used alone, it means the bishop's certificate to the court of chancery in order to obtain the writ of excommunication; but, where the words "writ of significavit" are used, the meaning is the same as "writ de excommunicato capiendo." Shelf. Mar. & Div. 502. Obsolete.

SIGNIFY. To make known by signs or words; express; communicate; announce; declare. State v. Klein, 94 Wash. 212, 162 P. 52, 53.

SIGNING JUDGMENT. See Sign.

SIGNATURE. The plural of signum (q. v.).

SIGNAL. A means of communication, as between vessels at sea or between a vessel and the shore. The international code of signals for the use of all nations assigns arbitrary meanings to different arrangements of flags or displays of lights.

SIGNAL ORIGIN. A sign; a mark; a seal. The seal of an instrument. Calvin.

A species of proof. By "signa" were meant those species of indica which come more immediately under the cognizance of the senses; such as stains of blood on the person of one accused of murder, indications of terror at being charged with the offense, and the like. Best, Pres. 13, note f.

SIMPLEX. Lat. Simple; single; pure; unqualified.

Charta Simplex
A deed-poll or single deed. Jacob, Law Diet.

Simplex Beneficium
In ecclesiastical law. A minor dignity in a cathedral or collegiate church, or any other ecclesiastical benefice, as distinguished from a cure of souls. It may therefore be held with any parochial cure, without coming under the prohibitions against pluralities. Wharton.

Simplex Dictum
In old English practice. Simple averment; mere assertion without proof.

Simplex Justitiarius
In old records. Simple justice. A name sometimes given to a puisne justice. Cowell.

Simplex Loquela
In old English practice. Simple speech; the mere declaration or plaint of a plaintiff.
SIMULATED

It may at any time and at the demand of any person in interest be declared a sham and may be ignored by creditors of the apparent vendor. Hibernia Bank & Trust Co. v. Louisiana Ave. Realty Co., 143 La. 962, 79 So. 554, 556.

SIMULATED FACT. In the law of evidence. A fabricated fact; an appearance given to things by human device, with a view to deceive and mislead. Burrill, Circ.Ev. 131.

SIMULATED JUDGMENT. One which is apparently rendered in good faith, upon an actual debt, and intended to be collected by the usual process of law, but which in reality is entered by the fraudulent contrivance of the parties, for the purpose of giving to one of them an advantage to which he is not entitled, or of defrauding or delaying third persons.

SIMULATED SALE. One which has all the appearance of an actual sale in good faith, intended to transfer the ownership of property for a consideration, but which in reality covers a collusive design of the parties to put the property beyond the reach of creditors, or proceeds from some other fraudulent purpose. Moran v. Johnson, La. App., 151 So. 139, 140.

It results when parties execute a formal act of sale of a thing for which no price is paid or is intended to be paid, and such sale has no legal effect and no title is transferred thereby. If there exists an actual consideration for transfer evidenced by alleged act of sale, no matter how inadequate it be, the transaction is not a "simulated sale", and, even though it be charged to be in fraud of vendor's creditors, such transfer cannot be set aside as a simulation although it may be subject to annulment on the ground of fraud or the giving of undue preference. Caster v. Miller, D.C.La., 39 F.Supp. 120, 123.

SIMULATIO LATENS. Lat. A species of feigned disease, in which disease is actually present, but where the symptoms are falsely aggravated, and greater sickness is pretended than really existed. Beck, Med.Jur. 3.

SIMULATION. Assumption of appearance which was feigned, false, deceptive, or counterfeit. United States v. Peppa, D.C.Cal., 13 F.Supp. 669, 670.

In the civil law. Misrepresentation or concealment of the truth; as where parties pretend to perform a transaction different from that in which they really are engaged. Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 181. A feigned, pretended act, one which assumes the appearance without the reality and, being entirely without effect, it is held not to have existed, and, for that reason, it may be disregarded or attacked collaterally by any interested person. Freeman v. Woods, La.App., 1 So.2d 134, 136.

In French law, Collusion; a fraudulent arrangement between two or more persons to give a false or deceptive appearance to a transaction in which they engage.

SIMULTANEOUS. A word of comparison meaning that two or more occurrences or happenings are identical in time. Brush.Electric Co. v. Western Electric Co., C.C.111., 69 F. 240, 244.

The word "simultaneous," as used in a patent claim, does not imply absolute synchronism from beginning to end, but has some elasticity. Events may be substantially or relatively simultaneous, although not absolutely so. Westinghouse Mach. Co. v. C. & G. Cooper Co., C.C.A.Ohio, 245 F. 465, 468.

SINCE. This word's proper signification is "after," Keller v. Keller, 121 Kan. 520, 247 P. 433, 435, 49 A.L.R. 113, and in its apparent sense it includes the whole period between the event and the present time. Jones v. Bank, 79 Me. 195, 9 A. 22. "Since" a day named, does not necessarily include that day. Monroe v. Acworth, 41 N.H. 201.

SINDERESIS. "A natural power of the soul, set in the highest part thereof, moving and stirring it to good, and abhorring evil. And therefore sinderesis never sinneth nor erreth. And this sinderesis our Lord put in man, to the intent that the order of things should be observed. And therefore sinderesis is called by some men the 'law of reason,' for it ministereth the principles of the law of reason, the which be in every man by nature, in that he is a reasonable creature," Doct. & Stud. 39.

SINE. Lat. Without.

SINE ANIMO REVERTENDI. Without the intention of returning. 1 Kent, Comm. 78.

SINE ASSENSU CAPITULI. Without the consent of the chapter; in old English practice. A writ which lay where a dean, bishop, prebendary, abbot, prior, or master of a hospital aliened the lands holden in the right of his house, abbey, or priory, without the consent of the chapter; in which cases his successor might have this writ. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 194, I; Cowell.

SINE CONSIDERATIONE CURVE. Without authority of a judge. 2 Kames, Eq. 115.

SINE DECERETO. Without authority of a judge. 2 Kames, Eq. 115.

SINE DIE. Without day; without assigning a day for a further meeting or hearing.

Hence, a final adjournment; final dismissal of a cause. Quod eat sine die, that he go without day; the old form of a judgment for the defendant, i. e., a judgment discharging the defendant from any further appearance in court.

SINE HOC QUOD. Without this, that. A technical phrase in old pleading, of the same import with the phrase "absque hoc quod."

SINE NUMERO. Without stint or limit. A term applied to common. Fleta, lib. 4, c. 19, § 8.

SINE PROLE. Without issue. Used in genealogical tables, and often abbreviated into "s. p."

SINE QUA NON. Without which not. That without which the thing cannot be. An indispensible requisite or condition.
SINE POSSESSIONE USUCAPIO PROCEDERE NON POTEST. There can be no prescription without possession.

SINECURE. In ecclesiastical law. When a rector of a parish neither resides nor performs duty at his benefice, but has a vicar under him endowed and charged with the cure thereof, this is termed a "sinecure." Brown.

An ecclesiastical benefice without cure of souls.

In popular usage, the term denotes an office which yields a revenue to the incumbent, but makes little or no demand upon his time or attention.

SINGLE. One only; being a unit; alone; one which is abstracted from others. State ex rel. Nelson v. Board of Com'r's of Yellowstone County, 111 Mont. 395, 109 P.2d 1106, 1107.

Unitary; detached; individual; affecting only one person; containing only one part, article, condition, or covenant. State v. Patch, 64 Mont. 565, 210 P. 748, 750. Unremarried. In re Rudman's Estate, 244 Pa. 248, 90 A. 566, 567. The term is applicable to a widow; Crum v. Brock, 136 Miss. 858, 101 So. 704, 705, 12 L.J.W.C. 74; and occasionally even to a married woman living apart from her husband; 12 Q.B.D. 681.

SINGLE CREDITOR. One having a lien only on a single fund;—distinguished from double creditor, who is one having a lien on two funds. Newby v. Fox, 90 Kan. 317, 133 P. 890, 47 L.R.A.,N.S., 302.

SINGLE JUROR CHARGE. The charge that, if there is any juror who is not reasonably satisfied from the evidence that plaintiff should recover against defendant, jury cannot find against defendant. Greyhound Corp. v. Brown, 113 So.2d 916, 919, 269 Ala. 520; Southern Ry. Co. v. Stallings, 107 So.2d 873, 884, 268 Ala. 463.

SINGULAR. Each; as in the expression "all and singular." Also, individual. In grammar, the singular is used to express only one. In law, the singular frequently includes the plural. Under the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 21, § 4, words in acts of parliament importing the singular shall include the plural, and vice versa, unless the contrary is expressly provided. Whart. Lex.

As to singular "Successor," and "Title," see those titles.

SINGULI IN SOLIDUM TENENTUR. Each is bound for the whole. 6 Johns.Ch. (N.Y.) 242, 252.

SINKING FUND. See Fund.

SIPESSOCUA. In old English law. A franchise, liberty, or hundred.

SIST, n. In Scotch practice. A stay or suspension of proceedings; an order for a stay of proceedings. Bell.

SISTER. A woman who has the same father and mother with another, or has one of them only. In the first case, she is called sister, simply; in the second, half-sister. Wood v. Mitchell, 61 How. Prac., N.Y., 48. The word is the correlative of "brother."

SISTER IN LAW. Sister of one's spouse; wife of one's brother.

SIT. To hold court; to do any act of a judicial nature. Russell v. Crook County Court, 75 Or. 168, 146 P. 806, 808. To hold a session, as of a court, grand jury, legislative body, etc. To be formally organized and proceeding with the transaction of business. Allen v. State, 102 Ga. 619, 29 S.E. 470.

SITE. A plot of ground suitable or set apart for some specific use. Victoria v. Our Lord's Church, 22 B.C. 174, 175. A seat or ground plot. Miller v. Alliance Ins. Co. of Boston, C.C.N.Y., 7 F. 649, 651. The term does not of itself necessarily mean a place or tract of land fixed by definite boundaries. Petersburg School Dist. of Nelson County v. Peterson, 14 N.D. 344, 103 N.W. 756, 758. See, also, Scite.

SITHCUNDMAM. In Saxon law. The high constable of a hundred.

SITIO GANADO MAYOR. (Sometimes written, also, sitio de ganado mayor.) Sp. In Spanish and Mexican land law, a tract of land in the form of a square, each side of which measures 5,000 varas; the distance from the center of each sitio to each of its sides should be measured directly to the cardinal points of the compass, and should be 2,500 varas. U. S. v. Cameron, 3 Ariz. 100, 21 P. 177. Equivalent to 4338.464 acres. Ainsa v. U. S., 16 S.Ct. 544, 161 U.S. 219, 40 L.Ed. 673. A square league. U. S. v. Sutherland, 19 How. 363, 364, 15 L.Ed. 666.

SITIO DE GANADO MENOR, or sheep ranch, is equivalent to 1928.133 acres. Ainsa v. U. S., 16 S.Ct. 544, 161 U.S. 219, 40 L.Ed. 673.

SITTINGS AFTER TERM. Sittings in banc after term were held by authority of the St. 1 & 2 Vict. c. 32. The courts were at liberty to transact business at their sittings as in term-time, but the custom was to dispose only of cases standing for argument or judgment. Wharton.

SITTINGS IN BANK, OR BANC. The sittings which the respective superior courts of common law hold during every term for the purpose of hearing and determining the various matters of law agreed before them.
They are so called in contradistinction to the sittings at nisi prius which are held for purpose of trying issues of fact.

In America, the practice is essentially the same, all the judges, or a majority of them usually, sitting in banc and but one holding the court for jury trials; and the term has the same application here as in England.

SITTINGS IN CAMERA. See Chambers.

SITUATE. To give a specific position to; fix a site for; to place in certain position; subject to definite conditions or circumstances; (rare) having a fixed place or a relative position; (archaic) residing; dwelling. Century Ins. Co. v. Glidden Buick Corporation, 174 Misc. 149, 20 N.Y.S.2d 108, 112.

SITUATION OF DANGER. Within the meaning of the last clear chance rule as applicable to a plaintiff operating a moving vehicle is reached only when plaintiff, in moving toward path of an on-coming train or vehicle has reached a position from which he cannot escape by ordinary care, and it is not enough that plaintiff was merely approaching a position of danger. Johnson v. Sacramento Northern Ry., 54 Cal.App.2d 528, 129 P.2d 503, 506.

SITUS. Lat. Situation; location. Smith v. Bank, 5 Pet. 524, 8 L.Ed. 212; Heston v. Finley, 118 Kan. 717, 236 P. 841, 843; Avery v. Interstate Grocery Co., 118 Okl. 268, 248 P. 340, 341, 52 A.L.R. 528. Site; position; the place where a thing is considered, for example, with reference to jurisdiction over it, or the right or power to tax it. Boyd v. Selma, 96 Ala. 144, 11 So. 393, 16 L.R.A. 729; Bullock v. Guilford, 59 Vt. 516, 9 A. 360; Fenton v. Edwards, 126 Cal. 43, 58 P. 320, 46 L.R.A. 832, 77 Am.St.Rep. 141.

It imports fixedness of location. In its natural signification the term is applicable only to landed estates which are really fixed and immovable. Conventionally, it is applied to personal property as annexing it to the individual to whom it belongs; its situs being primarily in legal contemplation where the owner happens to be at any time. It is the exception that personal property has any other situs than that of the person of its owner. Zanes v. Mercantile Bank & Trust Co. of Texas, Tex.Civ.App., 49 S.W.2d 922, 926.

Generally, personal property has its taxable "situs" in that state where owner of it is domiciled. Smith v. Lummas, 149 Fla. 660, 6 So.2d 625, 627, 628.

SIVE TOTA RES EVINCATUR, SIVE PARS, HABET REGRESSUM EMPTOR IN VENDITOR-EM. The purchaser who has been evicted in whole or in part has an action against the vendor. Dig. 21, 2, 1; Broom, Max. 768.

SIX ACTS, THE. The acts passed in 1819, for the pacification of England, are so called. They, in effect, prohibited the training of persons to arms; authorized general searches and seizure of arms; prohibited meetings of more than fifty persons for the discussion of public grievances; repressed with heavy penalties and confiscations seditious and blasphemous libels; and checked pamphletering by extending the newspaper stamp duty to political pamphlets. Brown.

SIX ARTICLES, LAWS OF. A celebrated act entitled "An act for abolishing diversity of opinion," (31 Hen. VIII, c. 14,) enforcing conformity under the severest penalties on six of the strongest points in the Roman Catholic religion: Transubstantiation, communion in one kind, the celibacy of the clergy, monastic vows, the sacrifice of the mass, and auricular confession. 4 Step.Com. 183; 4 Reeve, Eng.Law, 378. Repealed by 1 Eliz. c. 1.

SIX CLERKS. In English practice. Officers of the court of chancery, who received and filed all bills, answers, replications, and other papers, signed office copies of pleadings, examined and signed docketes of decrees, etc., and had the care of all records in their office. Holthouse; 3 Bl. Comm. 443. They were abolished by St. 5 Vict. c. 5.

SIX-DAY LICENSE. In English law. A liquor license, containing a condition that the premises in respect of which the license is granted shall be closed during the whole of Sunday, granted under section 49 of the licensing act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 94.)

SIXHINDI. Servants of the same nature as rod knights, (q. v.) Anc. Inst. Eng.

SKELETON BILL. One drawn, indorsed, or accepted in blank.

SKID, n. A simple contrivance used for handling heavy articles under many conditions. Beckman v. Anheuser Busch Brewing Ass’n, 98 Mo.App. 555, 72 S.W. 710, 711.

SKILL. Practical and familiar knowledge of the principles and processes of an art, science, or trade, combined with the ability to apply them in practice in a proper and approved manner and with readiness and dexterity. Akridge v. Noble, 114 Ga. 949, 41 S.E. 78; Haworth v. Severs Mfg. Co., 87 Iowa 765, 51 N.W. 68.

Reasonable Skill

Such skill as is ordinarily possessed and exercised by persons of common capacity, engaged in

SKILLED WITNESSES. One possessing knowledge and experience as to particular subject which are not acquired by ordinary persons. Firemen's Ins. Co. v. Little, 189 Ark. 640, 74 S.W.2d 777, 780.

Such witness is allowed to give evidence on matters of opinion and abstract fact.

SKIOGRAPHS. Photographs of the interior of the object portrayed. Texas Emp. Ins. Ass'n v. Crow, Tex., 221 S.W.2d 235, 237.

SLACKER. A person who was derelict in the performance of his duty toward his country in the world war. Dimmitt v. Breakey, C.C.A.Tex., 267 F. 792; Choctaw Coal & Mining Co. v. Lillich, 204 Ala. 533, 86 So. 383, 385, 11 A.L.R. 1014.

SLADE. In old records. A long, flat, and narrow piece or strip of ground. Paroch. Antiq. 465.

SLAINS. See Letters of Slains.

SLANDER. The speaking of base and defamatory words tending to prejudice another in his reputation, office, trade, business, or means of livelihood. Little Stores v. Isenberg, 26 Tenn.App. 357, 172 S.W.2d 13, 16. Harbison v. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co., 327 Mo. 440, 37 S.W.2d 609, 616. Oral defamation; the speaking of false and malicious words concerning another, whereby injury results to his reputation. Pollard v. Lyon, 91 U.S. 227, 23 L.Ed. 308; Fredrickson v. Johnson, 60 Minn. 337, 62 N.W. 388; Johnston v. Savings Trust Co. of St. Louis, Mo., 66 S.W.2d 113, 114; Lloyd v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.7, 55 F.2d 842, 844. An essential element of "slander" is that slanderous words be spoken in presence of another than person slandered, and publication is always material and issuable fact in action for slander. Tucker v. Pure Oil Co. of Carolinas, 191 S.C. 60, 3 S.E.2d 547, 549. Hence an oral defamation, heard only by one who does not understand the language in which it is spoken, is not "slander". Allen v. American Indemnity Co., 63 Ga. App. 894, 12 S.E.2d 127, 128.

"Libel" and "slander" are both methods of defamation; the former being expressed by print, writing, pictures, or signs; the latter by oral expressions. Ajouelo v. Auto-Soler Co., 61 Ga.App. 216, 6 S.E.2d 415, 418.

An action for "slander of title" is maintainable only by one who possesses an estate or interest in the property. Allison v. Berry, 316 Ill.App. 261, 44 N.E.2d 929, 934.

SLANDERER. One who maliciously and without reason imputes a crime or fault to another of which he is innocent. See Slander.

SLANDEROUS PER SE. Slanderous in itself. Words falsely spoken of another are slanderous per se only when they impute the commission of a crime involving moral turpitude, impute the existence of a loathsome and infectious disease, impute unfitness to perform the duties of an office or employment, prejudice in a profession or trade, or tend to disinherit him. Smallwood v. York, 163 Ky. 139, 173 S.W. 380, 381, L.R.A.1915D, 578; Nelson v. Rosenberg, 135 Neb. 34, 280 N.W. 229. Words which are slanderous without proof of special damages. Simons v. Harris, 215 Iowa 479, 245 N.W. 875, 876.

To constitute slander "per se," the published statement must be susceptible of but one meaning. Tucker v. Wallace, 90 Mont. 359, 3 P.2d 404, 405.

SLAVE. A person who is wholly subject to the will of another; one who has no freedom of action, but whose person and services are wholly under the control of another. Webster; Anderson v. Salant, 38 R.I. 463, 96 A. 425, 428, L.R.A.1916D, 651.

One who is under the power of a master, and who belongs to him; so that the master may sell and dispose of his person, of his industry, and of his labor, without his being able to do anything, have anything, or acquire anything, but what must belong to his master. Civ.Code La. 1838, art. 35.

SLAVE—TRADE. The traffic in slaves, or the buying and selling of slaves for profit.

SLAVERY. The condition of a slave; that civil relation in which one man has absolute power over the life, fortune, and liberty of another.

SLAY. This word, in an indictment, adds nothing to the force and effect of the word "kill," when used with reference to the taking of human life. It is particularly applicable to the taking of human life in battle; and, when it is not used in this sense, it is synonymous with "kill." State v. Thomas, 32 La.Ann. 351.

SLEDGE. A hurdle to draw traitors to execution. 1 Hale, P. C. 82.

SLEEPING PARTNER. A dormant partner; one whose name does not appear in the firm, and who takes no active part in the business, but who has an interest in the concern, and shares the profits, and thereby becomes a partner, either absolutely, or as respects third persons.

SLEEPING RENT. In English law. An expression frequently used in coal-mine leases and agreements for the same. It signifies a fixed or dead, i. e., certain, rent, as distinguished from a rent or royalty varying with the amount of coals gotten, and is payable although the mine shouLa not be worked at all, but should be sleeping or dead, whence the name. Brown.

SLICE. An indeterminate part or portion. Read v. McKeague, 252 Mass. 162, 147 N.E. 585.

As to slight "Care," "Evidence," "Fault," and "Negligence," see those titles.

SLIP. In negotiations for a policy of insurance. In England, the agreement is in practice concluded between the parties by a memorandum called the "slip," containing the terms of the proposed insurance, and initialed by the underwriters. Sweet.

Also that part of a police court which is divided off from the other parts of the court, for the prisoner to stand in. It is frequently called the "dock." Brown.

The intermediate space between two wharves or docks; the opening or vacant space between two piers. Thompson v. New York, 11 N.Y. 120; New York v. Scott, 1 Caines, N.Y., 543.

SLIPPA. A stirrup. There is a tenure of land in Cambridgeshire by holding the sovereign's stirrup. Wharton.

SLOPE. Within a mining statute, a level or inclined way, passage, or opening used for the same purpose as a shaft. Roberts v. Tennessee Coal, Iron & R. Co., C.C.A.Ala., 255 F. 469, 471.

SLOT MACHINE. Within a statute prohibiting operation of slot machines or similar gambling device, an apparatus by which a person depositing money therein may, by chance, get directly or indirectly money or articles of value worth either more or less than the money deposited. Elder v. Camp, 193 Ga. 320, 18 S.E.2d 622, 624. See also State v. Abbott, 218 N.C. 470, 11 S.E.2d 539, 544.

SLOUGH. An arm of a river, flowing between islands and the main-land, and separating the islands from one another. Sloughs have not the breadth of the main river, nor does the main body of water of the stream flow through them. Dunlieth & D. Bridge Co. v. Dubuque County, 55 Iowa 565, 8 N.W. 443.

SLOUGH SILVER. A rent paid to the castle of Wigmore, in lieu of certain days' work in harvest, heretofore reserved to the lord from his tenants. Cowell.

SLUICEWAY. An artificial channel into which water is let by a sluice. Specifically, a trench constructed over the bed of a stream, so that logs or lumber can be floated down to a convenient place of delivery. Webster. See Anderson v. Munch, 29 Minn. 416, 13 N.W. 192.

SLUM. A squalid, dirty street or quarter of a city, town or village, ordinarily inhabited by the very poor, destitute or criminal classes; overcrowding is usually a prevailing characteristic. Marvin v. Housing Authority of Jacksonville, 133 Fla. 590, 183 So. 145, 150. Spahn v. Stewart, 268 Ky. 97, 103 S.W.2d 651, 658.

SLUNG-SHOT. A small mass of metal or stone fixed on a flexible handle, strap, or the like, used as a weapon. People v. Williams, 100 Cal.App. 149, 279 P. 1040.

SLUSH FUND. Money collected or spent for corrupt purposes such as lobbying or the like. Boehm v. United States, C.C.A.Mo., 123 F.2d 791, 812.

SMAKA. In old records. A small, light vessel; a smack. Cowell.

SMALL DEBTS COURTS. The several county courts established by St. 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, for the purpose of bringing justice home to every man's door.

SMALL TITHES. All personal and mixed tithes, and also hops, saffrons, potatoes, and sometimes, by custom, wood. Otherwise called "privy tithes." 2 Steph.Comm. 726.

SMELLER. In liquor cases. A witness who is shown to know liquor by smell. Mathews v. State, 21 Ala.App. 181, 106 So. 390, 391.

SMELTING. A melting of ores in the presence of some re-agent which operates to separate the metallic element by combining with a non-metallic element. Lowrey v. Smelting & Aluminum Co., C.C.Ohio, 68 F. 354.

SMOKE-FARTHINGS. In old English law. An annual rent paid to cathedral churches; another name for the pentecostals or customary oblations offered by the dispersed inhabitants within a diocese, when they made their processions to the mother cathedral church. Cowell.

SMUGGLING. The offense of importing prohibited articles, or of defrauding the revenue by the introduction of articles into consumption, without paying the duties chargeable upon them. It may be committed indifferently either upon the excise or customs revenue. Wharton.

Clandestine introduction of goods into United States, importation of which is prohibited without payment of duty, constitutes. Tomplin v. U. S., C.C.A.La., 42 F.2d 203, 204.

The fraudulent taking into a country, or out of it, merchandise which is lawfully prohibited. (Quoted and approved by Brewer, J., in Dunbar v. U. S., 15 S.Ct. 325, 156 U.S. 185, 39 L.Ed. 390.)

"The bringing on shore, or carrying from the shore, goods and merchandise, for which the duty has not been paid, or of goods of which the importation or exportation is prohibited." 6 Bac. Abr. 258; Hill v. U. S., C.C.A.Md., 42 F.2d 812, 814.

SMUT. See Obscene.

SNOTTERING SILVER. A small duty which relating to withdrawal of liquors from bonded warehouses, the spirits which in course of time in the warehouse had been absorbed by the staves of the barrel containing it. Bernheim Distilling Co. v. Mayes, D.C.Ky., 268 F. 629, 630.

SMUT. See Obscene.

SOC. In the same manner as has been stated; under this circumstance; in this way, referring to something which is asserted. Blanton v. State, 156 La. 182, 100 So. 299, 300.

SOCAGER. A tenant by socage.

SOCAGO. A species of tenure, in England, where- by the tenant held certain lands in consideration of certain inferior services of husbandry to be performed by him to the lord of the fee. In its most general and extensive signification, a tenure by any certain and determinate service. And in this sense it is by the ancient writers constantly put in opposition to tenure by chivalry or knight-service, where the render was precarious and uncertain. Socage is of two sorts,—free socage, where the services are not only certain, but honorable; and villein socage, where the services, though certain, are of baser nature. Such as hold by the former tenure are also called in Glanvil and other authors by the name of "liberi sokeman-," or tenants in free socage. By the statute 12 Car. 2, c. 24, all the tenures by knight-service were, with one or two immaterial exceptions, converted into free and common socage. Cowell; Bract. 1. 2, c. 35; 2 B1.Comm. 79; Flata, lib. 3, c. 14, § 9; Litt. § 117; Glan. 1. 3, c. 7.

SOCAL. A seigniory or lordship, enfranchised by the king, with liberty of holding a court of his socmen or socagers; e., his tenants.

SOCAGE. A species of tenure, in England, where-perfect and equal distribution of the products of labor, and would make land and capital, as the instruments and means of production, the joint possession of the members of the community.

SOCIDA. In civil law. The name of a contract by which one man delivers to another, either for a small recompense or for a part of the profits, certain animals on condition that if any of them perish they shall be replaced by the bailee or he shall pay their value.

A contract of hiring, with the condition that the bailee takes upon him the risk of the loss of the thing hired. Wolff § 638.

SOCIEDAD ANONIMA. In Spanish and Mexican law. A business corporation. "By the corporate name, the shareholders' names are unknown to the world; and, so far as their connection with the corporation is concerned, their own names may be said to be anonymous, that is, nameless. Hence the derivation of the term 'anonymous' as applied to a body of persons associated together in the form of a company to transact any given business under a company name which does not disclose any of their own." Hall, Mex. Law, § 749.

SOCIEDAD DE GANANCIALES. A Cuban law. It exists between husband and wife and is literally an association for profit. The underlying purpose of such associations is that the spouses may each contribute to a common stock, the wife her dowry, the husband his capital, the gains from those as well as from their joint labors, to be shared equally. On dissolution of the association, ordinarily by death, the distribution is as follows: First the wife gets back her dowry and "parapherna"; second, the debts of the "sociedad" are paid; and the husband's contribution, "capital," is returned. The remainder is profits, "gananciales," and is divided equally between the spouses after restoring any losses to their contributed property. Sanchez v. Bowers, C.C.A.N.Y., 70 F.2d 715, 716, 718.

SOCIETAS. Lat. In the civil law. Partnership; a partnership; the contract of partnership. Inst. 3, 26. A contract by which the goods or labor of two or more are united in a common stock, for the sake of sharing in the gain. Hallifax, Civil Law, b. 2, c. 18, no. 12.

SOCIETAS LEONINA. That kind of society or partnership by which the entire profits belong to some of the partners, in exclusion of the rest. So called in allusion to the fable of the lion, who, having entered into partnership with other animals for the purpose of hunting, appropriated all the prey to himself. Wharton.

SOCIETAS NAVALIS. A naval partnership; an association of vessels; a number of ships pursuing their voyage in company, for purposes of mutual protection.

SOCIETE. Fr. In French law. Partnership. See Commendam.

SOCIETE ANONYME. In French law originally a partnership conducted in the name of one of the members; the others were strictly secret partners. To creditors of the firm they came into no relation and under no liability. An association where the liability of all the partners is limited. It had in England until lately no other name than that of "chartered company," meaning thereby a joint-stock company whose shareholders, by a charter from the crown, or a special enactment of the legislature, stood exempted from any liability for the debts of the concern, beyond the amount of their subscriptions. 2 Mill, Pol. Econ. 485.

SOCIETE D’ACQUETS. A written contract between husband and wife to regard as community property only those things which are acquired during the marriage.

SOCIETE EN COMMANDE. In Louisiana. A partnership formed by a contract by which one person or partnership agrees to furnish another person or partnership a certain amount, either in property or money, to be employed by the person or partnership to whom it is furnished, in his or their own name or firm, on condition of receiving a share in the profits, in the proportion determined by the contract, and of being liable to losses and expenses to the amount furnished and no more. Civ.Code La. art. 2839.

SOCIETE EN NOM COLLECTIF. A partnership in which all the members are jointly and severally liable.

SOCIETE EN PARTICIPATION. A joint adventure.

SOCIETE PAR ACTIONS. A joint stock company.

SOCIETY. An association or company of persons (generally unincorporated) united together by mutual consent, in order to deliberate, determine, and act jointly for some common purpose. In a wider sense, the community or public; the people in general. Gilmer v. Stone, 7 S.Ct. 689, 120 U.S. 586, 30 L.Ed. 734.

Within rule that husband is entitled to damages for loss of wife’s "society" through wrongful injury means such capacities for usefulness, aid, and comfort as a wife as she possessed at the time of the injuries. Homan v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 335 Mo. 30, 70 S.W.2d 869.

Civil society—usually, a state, nation, or body politic. Rutherford, Inst. c. 1, 2.

SOCI MEI SUCIUS MEUS SOCIUS NON EST. The partner of my partner is not my partner. Dig. 50, 17, 47, 1.

SOCIOPATHIC PERSONALITY. See Psychopath.

SOCIUS. Lat. In the civil law. A partner.
SOCMAN. A socager.

SOCMANRY. Free tenure by socage.

SOCOME. A custom of grinding corn at the lord's mill. Cowell. Bond-socome is where the tenants are bound to it. Blount.

SODOMITE. One who has been guilty of sodomy.

SODOMY. A carnal copulation by human beings with each other against nature, or with a beast. Strum v. State, 168 Ark, 1012, 272 S.W. 359. State v. Young, 140 Or. 228, 13 P.2d 604, 607.

This term is often defined in statutes and judicial decisions as meaning the “crime against nature,” the “crimen innominatum,” or as carnal copulation, against the order of nature, by man with man, or, in the same unnatural manner, with woman or with a beast. See Code Ga.1882, § 4352 (Penn.Code 1910, § 373); Honselman v. People, 168 Ill. 111, 172, 48 N.E. 304. But, strictly speaking, it should be used only as equivalent to “pederasty,” that is, the sexual act as performed by a man upon the person of another man or a boy by penetration of the anus. See Ausman v. Veal, 10 Ind. 355, 71 Am.Dec. 331. The term might also, without any great violence to its original meaning, be so extended as to cover the same act when performed in the same manner by a man upon the person of a woman. Another possible method of unilateral sexual connection, by penetration of the mouth (penem in orem alii immittere), is not properly called “sodomy,” but “fellation.” That this does not constitute sodomy within the meaning of a statute is held in Com. v. Poindexter, Ky., 118 S.W. 943; Lewis v. State, 36 Tex. Cr.R. 37, 35 S.W. 372, 61 Am.St.Rep. 831; but a greater number of jurisdictions hold otherwise. See State v. Farris, 189 Iowa, 505, 178 N.W. 361, 362; Glover v. State, 179 Ind. 459, 101 N.E. 629, 630, L.R.A.,N.S., 473; White v. State, 136 Ga. 158, 71 S.E. 135; State v. Start, 65 Or. 178, 132 P. 512, 46 L.R.A.,N.S., 266. On the other hand, bestiality is the carnal copulation of a human being with a beast, or animal of the sub-human orders of the opposite sex. It is not identical with sodomy, nor is it a form of sodomy, though the two terms are often confused in legal writings and sometimes in statutes. See Ausman v. Veal, 10 Ind. 355, 71 Am.Dec. 331. Buggery is a term rarely used in statutes, but apparently including both sodomy (in the widest sense) and bestiality as above defined. See Ausman v. Veal, 10 Ind. 355, 71 Am.Dec. 331; Com. v. J., 21 Pa.Co. ct. R. 625.

SOFT DRINK PARLOR. A place where soft drinks are sold and drunk on premises. People v. De Geovanni, 326 Ill. 230, 157 N.E. 195, 197.

SOIL. The surface, or surface-covering of the land, not including minerals beneath it or grass or plants growing upon it. But in a wider (and more usual) sense, the term is equivalent to “land,” and includes all that is below, upon, or above the surface.

SOIT. Fr. Let it be; be it so. A term used in several law; French phrases employed in English law, particularly as expressive of the will or assent of the sovereign in formal communications with parliament or with private suitors.

SOIT BAILE AUX SEIGNEURS. Let it be delivered to the lords. The form of indorsement on a bill in parliament when sent to the house of lords. Hob. 111a.

SOIT DROIT FAIT AL PARTIE. In English law. Let right be done to the party. A phrase written on a petition of right, and subscribed by the king.

SOIT FAIT COMME IL EST DESIRE. Let it be as it is desired. The royal assent to private acts of parliament.

SOJOURNING. This term means something more than “traveling,” and applies to a temporary, as contradistinguished from a permanent, residence. Henry v. Ball, 1 Wheat. 5, 4 L.Ed. 21; In re Gahn’s Will, 110 Misc. 96, 180 N.Y.S. 262, 266.

SOKEMANRIES. Lands and tenements which were not held by knight-service, nor by grand serjeanty, nor by petit, but by simple services; being, as it were, lands enfranchised by the king or his predecessors from their ancient demesne. Their tenants were sokemans. Wharton.

SOKE3IANS. In English law. Those who held their lands in socage. 2 Bl. Comm. 100.

SOKE-REEVE. The lord’s rent gatherer in the soca. Cowell.

SOLA AC PER SE SENECTUS DONA TIONE3I TESTAMENTUM AUT TRANSACTIONE3I NON VITIAT. Old age does not alone and of itself vitiate a will or gift. Van Alst v. Hunter, 5 Johns, Ch., N.Y., 148, 158.

SOLAR. In Spanish law. Land; the demesne, with a house, situate in a strong or fortified place. White, New Repob. b. 1, tit. 5, c. 3, § 2.

SOLAR DAY. That period of time which begins at sunrise and ends at sunset. Co. Litt. 135a.

SOLAR MONTIL A calendar month. See Month.

SOLARES. In Spanish law. Lots of ground. This term is frequently found in grants from the Spanish government of lands in America. 2 White, Repob. 474.

SOLARIUM. Lat. In the civil law. A rent paid for the ground, where a person built on the public land. A ground rent. Spelman; Calvin.

SOLATIUM. Compensation. Damages allowed for injury to the feelings.

SOLD. See “Sale.”

SOLD NOTE. A note given by a broker, who has effected a sale of merchandise, to the buyer, stating the fact of sale, quantity, price, etc. Story, Ag. § 28; Saladin v. Mitchell, 45 Ill. 83.

SOLDIER. A military man; a private in the army.

Prior to induction a selectee is subject to Selective Training Act but is not yet a "soldier". Billings v. Truesdell, Kan., 64 S.Ct. 737, 741, 321 U.S. 542, 88 L.Ed. 917.
A member of the Women’s Army Corps is a “soldier in the military service.” United States v. Williams, D.C.N.Y., 59 F.Supp. 300, 301.

SOLE. Single; individual; separate; the opposite of joint; as a sole tenant. Fort Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Williams, Tex.Civ.App., 275 S.W. 415, 419.

Comprising Only one person; the opposite of aggregate; as a sole corporation.

Unmarried; as a feme sole. See the nouns.

SOLE ACTOR DOCTRINE. Under this doctrine a principal is charged with the knowledge of his agent. It contemplates that agent must have ostensibly endeavored to benefit his principal, and even though he did not do so and his acts were for his personal benefit, possibly through defalcation, the third party who obligated himself must have been under the impression that he was dealing with the principal. General American Life Ins. Co. v. Anderson, D.C.Ky., 46 F.Supp. 189, 195, 196, 198. It is based on the presumption that by reason of the relationship between an agent and his principal the principal is presumed to have been told everything the agent has "done and presumed to have known of his actions and promises.

SOLE AND UNCONDITIONAL OWNER. See Owner.

SOLEMN. Formal; in regular form; with all the forms of a proceeding. As to solemn "Form," see Probate. As to solemn "Oath" and "War," see the nouns.

SOLEMN OCCASION. Within constitutional provision empowering the Legislature to require the opinion of the Justices on important questions of law means occasion when such questions of law are necessary to be determined by the body making the inquiry in the exercise of the power intrusted to it by the Constitution or laws. In re Opinion of the Justices, 217 Mass. 607, 105 N.E. 440, 441.

SOLEMNITAS ATTACHIAMENTORUM. In old English practice. Solemnity or formality of attachments. The issuing of attachments in a certain formal and regular order. Bract. fols. 439, 440; 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, 480.

SOLEMNITATES JURIS SUNT OBSERVANDIE. The solemnities of law are to be observed. Jenk. Cent. 13.

SOLEMNITY. A rite or ceremony; the formality established by law to render a contract, agreement, or other act valid.

SOLEMNIZE. A marriage, means no more than to enter into a marriage contract, with due publication, before third persons, for the purpose of giving it notoriety and certainty; which may be before any persons, relatives, friends, or strangers, competent to testify to the facts. See Dyer v. Brannock, 66 Mo. 410, 27 Am.Rep. 359; Pearson v. Howey, 11 N.J.L. 19; Bowman v. Bowman, 24 Ill.App. 172.

SOLICIT. To appeal for something; to apply to or for obtaining something; to ask earnestly; to solicit for the purpose of receiving; to plead for; to try to obtain; and though the word implies a serious request, it requires no particular degree of importunity, entreaty, imploration, or supplication. People v. Phillips, 70 Cal.App.2d 449, 160 P.2d 872, 874. To tempt a person; to lure on, especially into evil. People v. Rice, 383 Ill. 584, 50 N.E. 2d 711, 713. To awake or excite to action, or to invite. In re Winthrop, 135 Wash. 135, 237 P. 3, 4; Briody v. De Kimp, 91 N.J.Law, 206, 102 A. 688, 689. The term implies personal petition and importunity addressed to a particular individual to do some particular thing. Golden & Co. v. Justice’s Court of Woodland Tp., Yolo County, 23 Cal.App. 778, 140 P. 49, 58.

SOLICITATION. Asking; enticing; urgent request. Any action which the relation of the parties justifies in construing into a serious request. State v. Underwood, 79 Or. 338, 155 P. 194. Thus "solicitation of chastity" is the asking or urging a woman to surrender her chastity. State v. Rend, 203 Iowa 329, 210 N.W. 911; People v. Murray, 307 Ill. 349, 138 N.E. 649, 653. The word is also used in such phrases as "solicitation to larceny," to bribery, etc.

SOLICITOR. In English law. A legal practitioner in the court of chancery. The words "solicitor" and "attorney" are commonly used indiscriminately, although they are not precisely the same, an attorney being a practitioner in the courts of common law, a solicitor, a practitioner in the courts of equity. Most attorneys take out a certificate to practice in the courts of chancery, and therefore become solicitors also, and, on the other hand, most, if not all, solicitors take out a certificate to practice in the courts of common law, and therefore become attorneys also. Brown.

SOLICITOR GENERAL. In English law. One of the principal law officers of the crown, associated in his duties with the attorney general, holding office by patent during the pleasure of the sovereign, and having a right of preaudience in the courts. 3 Bl. Comm. 27. In American law, an officer of the department of justice, next in rank after authority to the attorney general, whose principal assistant he is. His chief function is to represent the United States in all cases in the supreme court and the court of claims in which the government is interested or to which it is a party, and to discharge the duties of the attorney general in the absence or disability of that officer or when there is a vacancy in the office. Rev.St.U.S. §§ 347, 359 (5 U.S.C.A. §§ 293, 309).
SOLICITOR OF THE SUPREME COURT. The solicitors before the supreme courts, in Scotland, are a body of solicitors entitled to practice in the court of session, etc. Their charter of incorporation bears date August 10, 1797.

SOLICITOR OF THE TREASURY. An officer of the United States attached to the department of justice, having general charge of the law business appertaining to the treasury.

SOLICITOR TO THE SUITORS' FUND. An officer of the English court of chancery, who is appointed in certain cases guardian ad litem.

SOLIDITY. In the civil law, when several persons bind themselves towards another for the same sum, at the same time, and in the same contract; and so obligate themselves that each may be compelled to pay the whole debt, and that payment made by one of them exonerates the others towards the creditor; and the obligation thus contracted is one, in solido, although one of the debtors be obliged differently from the others to the payment of one and the same thing; as if the one be but conditionally bound, while the engagement of the others is pure and simple, or if the one is allowed a term which is not granted to the others. Rex Credit Co. v. Long, La.App., 159 So. 359, 360.

SOLIDARITY. In the civil law, when several persons bind themselves towards another for the same sum, at the same time, and in the same contract; and so obligate themselves that each may be compelled to pay the whole debt, and that payment made by one of them exonerates the others towards the creditor; and the obligation thus contracted is one, in solido, although one of the debtors be obliged differently from the others to the payment of one and the same thing; as if the one be but conditionally bound, while the engagement of the others is pure and simple, or if the one is allowed a term which is not granted to the others. Rex Credit Co. v. Long, La.App., 159 So. 359, 360.

SOLIDUS. Lat. In the civil law. A whole; an entire or undivided thing.

SOLIDUS LEGALIS. A coin equal to 13s. 4d. of the present standard. 4 Steph. Comm. 119n. Originally the "solidus" was a gold coin of the Byzantine Empire, but in medieval times the term was applied to several varieties of coins, or as descriptive of a money of account, and is supposed to be the root from which "shilling" is derived.

SOLIDUM. In old English law. Two plowlands, and somewhat less than a half. Co. Litt. 5a.

SOLITARY CONFINEMENT. In a general sense, the separate confinement of a prisoner, with only occasional access of any other person, and that only at the discretion of the jailer; in a stricter sense, the complete isolation of a prisoner from all human society, and his confinement in a cell so arranged that he has no direct intercourse with or sight of any human being, and no employment or instruction. See Medley, Petitioner, 10 S.Ct. 384, 134 U.S. 160, 33 L.Ed. 835.

SOLUTIONE FEODI MILITIS PARLIAMENTI, ETUR. The payment of the price [of a thing] is held to be in place of a purchase, [operates as a purchase.] Jenk. Cent. p. 56, case 2; 2 Kent. Comm. 387.

SOLUTIO. Lat. In civil law. Payment, satisfaction, or release; any species of discharge of an obligation accepted as satisfactory by the creditor. The term refers not so much to the counting out of money as to the substance of the obligation. Dig. 46, 3, 54; Id. 50, 16, 176.

SOLUTIO INDEBITI. In the civil law. Payment of what was not due. From the payment of what was not due arises an obligation quasi ex contractu. When one has erroneously given or performed something to or for another, for which he was in no wise bound, he may redemand it, as if he had only lent it. The term "solutio indebiti" is here used in a very wide sense, and includes also the case where one performed labor for another, or assumed to pay a debt for which he was not bound, or relinquished a right or released a debt, under the impression that he was legally bound to do so. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 500.

SOLUTIO PRETII EMPTIONIS LOCO HABETUR. The payment of the price [of a thing] is held to be in place of a purchase, [operates as a purchase.] Jenk. Cent. p. 56, case 2; 2 Kent. Comm. 387.

SOLUTIO. Lat. In civil law. Payment, satisfaction, or release; any species of discharge of an obligation accepted as satisfactory by the creditor. The term refers not so much to the counting out of money as to the substance of the obligation. Dig. 46, 3, 54; Id. 50, 16, 176.

SOLUTUS. In the civil law. Loosed; freed from confinement; set at liberty. Dig. 50, 16, 48.
In Scotch practice. Purged. A term used in old depositions.

SOLVABILITE. Fr. In French law. Ability to pay; solvency. Emerig. Traite des Assur. c. 8, § 15.

SOLVENDO ESSE. Lat. To be in a state of solvency; i.e., able to pay.

SOLVENDO ESSE NEMO INTELLIGITUR NISI QUI SOLLODUM POTEST SOLVERE. No one is considered to be solvent unless he can pay all that he owes. Dig. 50, 16, 114.

SOLVENDUM IN FUTURO. (Lat.) To be paid in the future. Used of an indebtedness which is said to be debitum, in presenti (due now) and solvendum, in futuro (payable in the future). An interest in an estate may be rested in presenti, though it be solvendum in futuro, enjoyable in the future.

SOLVENT. See Solvency.

For "solvency" and "solvency" see "Debt" and "Partner."

SOLVERE. Lat. To pay; to comply with one's engagement; to do what one has undertaken to do; to release one's self from obligation, as by payment of a debt. Calvin.

SOLVERE PCENAS. To pay the penalty.

SOLVIT. Lat. He paid; paid. 10 East, 206.

SOLVIT AD DIEM. He paid at the day. The technical name of the plea, in an action of debt on bond, that the defendant paid the money on the day mentioned in the condition. 1 Archb. N. P. 220, 221.

SOLVIT ANTE DIEM. A plea that the money was paid before the day appointed.

SOLVIT POST DIEM. He paid after the day. The plea in an action of debt on bond that the defendant paid the money after the day named for the payment, and before the commencement of the suit. 1 Archb. N. P. 222.

SOLVITUR ADIEUX SOCIETAS ETIAM MORTE SOCI. A partnership is moreover dissolved by the death of a partner. Inst. 3, 26, 5; Dig. 17, 2.

SOLVITUR EO LIGAMINE QUO LIGATUR. In the same manner that a thing is bound it is unloosed. Livingston v. Lynch, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 582.

SOMERSETT'S CASE. A celebrated decision of the English king's bench, in 1771, (20 How. St. Tr. 1,) that slavery no longer existed in England in any form, and could not for the future exist on English soil, and that any person brought into England as a slave could not be thence removed except by the legal means applicable in the case of any free-born person.

SOMNAMBULISM. Sleep-walking. Whether this condition is anything more than a co-operation of the voluntary muscles with the thoughts which occupy the mind during sleep is not settled by physiologists. Wharton.

SOMNIPNOTICUS. Lat. In the civil law. Hurtful; injurious; hindering; excusing or justifying de-Morbus sonticus is any illness of so serious a nature as to prevent a defendant from appearing in court and to give him a valid excuse. Calvin.

SOREHON, or SORN. An arbitrary exaction, formerly existing in Scotland and Ireland. Whenever a chieftain had a mind to revel, he came down among the tenants with his followers, by way of contempt called "Gilliiwifitts," and lived on free quarters. Wharton; Bell.

SORNER. In Scotch law. A person who takes meat and drink from others by force or menaces, without paying for it. Bell.

SORTITIO. Lat. In the civil law. A drawing of lots. Sortitio judicum was the process of selecting a number of judges, for a criminal trial, by drawing lots.

SOUND. In English law. A drain or water-course. The channels or water-courses used for draining mines are so termed; and those mines which are near to any given sough, and lie within the same level, and are benefited by it, are technically said to lie within the title of that sough. 5 Mees. & W. 228; Brown.

SOUGHT. In English law. A mortuary, or customary gift due ministers, in many parishes of England, on the death of parishioners. It was originally voluntary and intended as amends for ecclesiastical dues neglected to be paid in the life-time. 2 Bl. Comm. 425.

SOUNDING IN DAMAGES. When an action is brought, not for the recovery of lands, goods, or sums of money, (as is the case in real or mixed actions or the personal action of debt or detinue,) but for damages only, as in covenant, trespass, etc., the action is said to be "sounding in damages." Steph. Pl. 116. See Collins v. Greene, 67 Ala. 211; Rosser v. Bunn, 66 Ala. 93.
SOUNDNESS. General health; freedom from any permanent disease. 1 Car. & M. 291. See "Sound."

SOURCE. That from which any act, movement, or effect proceeds; a person or thing that originates, sets in motion, or is a primary agency in producing any course of action or result; an originator; creator; origin. A place where something is found or whence it is taken or derived. Jackling v. State Tax Commission, 40 N.M. 241, 58 P.2d 1167, 1171.

The source of income. Place where it is produced. Union Electric Co. v. Coale, 347 Mo. 175, 146 S.W.2d 631, 635.

SOURCES OF THE LAW. The origins from which particular positive laws derive their authority and coercive force. Such are constitutions, treaties, statutes, usages, and customs.

In another sense, the authoritative or reliable works, records, documents, edicts, etc., to which we are to look for an understanding of what constitutes the law. Such, for example, with reference to the Roman law, are the compilations of Justinian and the treatise of Gaius; and such, with reference to the common law, are especially the ancient reports and the works of such writers as Bracton, Littleton, Coke, Fleta, and others.

SOUS. Fr. Under.

SOUS SEING PRIVE. Fr. In French law. Under private signature; under the private signature of the parties. A contract or instrument thus signed is distinguished from an "authentic act," which is formally concluded before a notary or judge. Civil Code La. art. 2240.

SOUTH SEA FUND. The produce of the taxes appropriated to pay the interest of such part of the English national debt as was advanced by the South Sea Company and its annuitants. The holders of South Sea annuities have been paid off, or have received other stock in lieu thereof. 2 Steph.Comm. 578.

SOVEREIGN. A person, body, or state in which independent and supreme authority is vested; a chief ruler with supreme power; a king or other ruler with limited power.

In English law. A gold coin of Great Britain, of the value of a pound sterling.

SOVEREIGN IMMUNITY OF STATE FROM LIABILITY. Exists when the state is engaged in a governmental function. Manion v. State, 303 Mich. 1, 5 N.W.2d 527, 528.

SOVEREIGN PEOPLE. The political body, consisting of the entire number of citizens and qualified electors, who, in their collective capacity, possess the powers of sovereignty and exercise them through their chosen representatives. See Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. 404, 15 L.Ed. 691.

SOVEREIGN POWER or SOVEREIGN PRE-ROGATIVE. That power in a state to which none other is superior or equal, and which includes all the specific powers necessary to accomplish the legitimate ends and purposes of government. See Boggs v. Merced Min. Co., 14 Cal. 309; Donnelly v. Decker, 58 Wis. 461, 17 N.W. 389, 46 Am.Rep. 637; Com. v. Alger, 7 Cush., Mass., 81; 'Etna Casualty & Surety Co. v. Bramwell, D.C.Or., 12 F.2d 307, 309.

SOVEREIGN RIGHT. A right which the state alone, or some of its governmental agencies, can possess, and which it possesses in the character of a sovereign, for the common benefit, and to enable it to carry out its proper functions; distinguished from such "proprietary" rights as a state, like any private person, may have in property or demands which it owns. See St. Paul v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 45 Minn. 387, 48 N.W. 17.

SOVEREIGN STATES. States whose subjects or citizens are in the habit of obedience to them, and which are not themselves subject to any other (or paramount) state in any respect. The state is said to be semi-sovereign only, and not sovereign, when in any respect or respects it is liable to be controlled (like certain of the states in India) by a paramount government, (e. g., by the British empire.) Brown. In the intercourse of nations, certain states have a position of entire independence of others, and can perform all those acts which it is possible for any state to perform in this particular sphere. These same states have also entire power of self-government; that is, of independence upon all other states as far as their own territory and citizens not living abroad are concerned. No foreign power or law can have control except by convention. This power of independent action in external and internal relations constitutes complete sovereignty. Wools. Pol. Science, I. 204.

SOVEREIGNTY. The supreme, absolute, and uncontrollable power by which any independent state is governed; supreme political authority; paramount control of the constitution and frame of government and its administration; the self-sufficient source of political power, from which all specific political powers are derived; the international independence of a state, combined with the right and power of regulating its internal affairs without foreign dictation; also a political society, or state, which is sovereign and independent. Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. 455, 1 L.Ed. 440; Union Bank v. Hill, 3 Cold., Tenn., 325; Moore v. Shaw, 17 Cal. 218, 79 Am.Dec. 123; State v. Dixon, 66 Mont. 76, 213 P. 227.

The power to do everything in a state without accountability,—to make laws, to execute and to apply them, to impose and collect taxes and levy contributions, to make war or peace, to form treaties of alliance or of commerce with foreign nations, and the like. Story, Const. § 207.

"Sovereignty" in government is that public authority which directs or orders what is to be done by each member associated in relation to the end of the association. It is the supreme power by which any citizen is governed and is the person or body of persons in the state to whom there is politically no superior. The necessary existence of the state and that right and power which necessarily follow is "sovereignty." By "sovereignty" in its largest sense is meant supreme, absolute, uncontrollable power, the absolute right to govern. The word which by itself comes nearest to being the definition of "sovereignty" is will or volition as applied to political affairs. City of Bisbee v. Cochise County, 52 Ariz. 1, 78 P.2d 982, 986.

SOVERTIE. In old Scotch law. Surety. Skene.

SOWLEGROVE. February; so called in South Wales. Cowell.

SOWMING AND ROWMING. In Scotch law. Terms used to express the form by which the number of cattle brought upon a common by those having a servitude of pasturage may be justly proportioned to the rights of the different persons possessed of the servitude. Beli.

SOWNE. In old English law. To be leviable. An old exchequer term applied to sheriff's returns. 4 Inst. 101; Cowell; Spelman.

SPADARIUS. Lat. A sword-bearer. Blount.

SPADONES. Lat. In the civil law. Impotent persons. Those who, on account of their temperament or some accident they have suffered, are unable to procreate. Inst. 1, 11, 9; Dig. 1, 7, 2, 1.

SPARSDI. Lat. Here and there; scattered; at intervals. For instance, trespass to realty by cutting timber sparsim (here and there) through a tract.

SPATIE PLACITUM. In old English law. A court for the speedy execution of justice upon military delinquents. Cowell.

SPEAK. In practice. To argue. "The case was ordered to be spoke to again." 10 Mod. 107. See Imparlance; Speaking with Prosecutor.

SPEAKER. The official designation of the president or chairman of certain legislative bodies, particularly of the houses of representatives in the congress of the United States, of one or both branches of several of the state legislatures, and of the two houses of the British parliament.

The term "speaker," as used in reference to either of the houses of parliament, signifies the functionary acting as chairman. In the common his duties are to put questions, to preserve order, and to see that the privileges of the house are not infringed; and, in the event of the numbers being even on a division, he has the privilege of giving the casting vote. The speaker of the lords is the lord chancellor or the lord keeper of the great seal of England, or, if he be absent, the lords may choose their own speaker. The duties of the speaker of the lords are principally confined to putting questions, and the lord chancellor has no more to do with preserving order than any other peer. Brown.

SPEAKING DEMURRER. See Demurrer.

SPEAKING ORDER. See Order.

SPEAKING WITH PROSECUTOR. A method of compounding an offense, allowed in the English practice, where the court permits a defendant convicted of a misdemeanor to speak with the prosecutor before judgment is pronounced; if the prosecutor declares himself satisfied, the court may inflict a trivial punishment. 4 Steph.Comm. 261.

SPECIAL ACT. A private statute; an act which operates only upon particular persons or private concerns. 1 Bl.Comm. 86; Unity v. Burrage, 103 U.S. 454, 26 L.Ed. 405.

SPECIAL CASE. In English practice. When a trial at nisi prius appears to the judge to turn on a point of law, the jury may find a general verdict, subject to the opinion of the court above, upon what is termed a "special case" to be made; that is, upon a written statement of all the facts of the case drawn up for the opinion of the court above, nisi prius. The party for whom the general verdict is so given is in such case not entitled to judgment till the court in banc has decided on the special case; and, according to the result of that decision, the verdict is ultimately entered either for him or his adversary. Brown.

SPECIAL CLAIM. In English law. A claim not enumerated in the orders of April 22, 1850, which required the leave of the court of chancery to file it. Such claims are abolished.

SPECIAL COMMISSION. In English law. An extraordinary commission of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery, issued by the crown to the judges when it is necessary that offenses should be immediately tried and punished. Wharton.
SPECIAL ERRORS. Special pleas in error are such as, instead of joining in error, allege some extraneous matter as a ground of defeating the writ of error, e. g., a release of errors, expiration of the time within which error might be brought, or the like. To these, the plaintiff in error may either reply or demur.

SPECIAL EXAMINER. In English law. Some person, not one of the examiners of the court of chancery, appointed to take evidence in a particular suit. This may be done when the state of business in the examiner's office is such that it is impossible to obtain an appointment at a conveniently early day, or when the witnesses may be unable to come to London. Hunt. Eq. pt. I. c. 5, § 2.

SPECIAL EXECUTION. A copy of a judgment with a direction to the sheriff indorsed thereon to execute it. Crombie v. Little, 47 Minn. 581, 50 N.W. 823. One that directs a levy upon some special property. Oklahoma Salvage & Supply Co. v. First Nat. Bank, 122 Oki. 128, 251 P. 1006, 1007.

SPECIAL EXECUTOR. One whose power and office are limited, either in respect to the time or place of their exercise, or restricted to a particular portion of the decedent's estate.

One only empowered by will to take charge of a limited portion of the estate, or such part as may lie in one place, or to carry on the administration only to a prescribed point.

SPECIAL FACTS RULE. In corporation law, as respects director's duty of disclosure when dealing with stockholders, is that where special circumstances or facts are present which make it inequitable for the director to withhold information from the stockholder, the duty to disclose arises, and concealment is fraud. Taylor v. Wright, 69 Cal.App.2d 371, 159 P.2d 980, 985.

SPECIAL JURISDICTION. A court authorized to take cognizance of only some few kinds of causes or proceedings expressly designated by statute is called a "court of special jurisdiction."

SPECIAL LAW. One relating to particular persons or things; one made for individual cases or for particular places or districts; one operating upon a selected class, rather than upon the public generally. State v. Irwin, 5 Nev. 120; Sargent v. Union School Dist., 63 N.H. 528, 2 A. 641; Dodge v. Youngblood, Tex.Civ.App., 202 S.W. 116, 118; Ex parte Crane, 27 Idaho 671, 151 P. 1006, 1011, L.R.A.1918A, 942; State v. Daniel, 87 Fla. 270, 99 So. 804, 809. A law is "special" when it is different from others of the same general kind or designed for a particular purpose, or limited in range or confined to a prescribed field of action or operation. State v. Johnson, 170 N.C. 685, 86 S.E. 788, 792.

A law is not special and local in a constitutional sense, if it affects all persons in like circumstances in the same manner. St. Louis-San Francisco Ry. Co. v. Bledsoe, C.C. A.Okl., 7 F.2d 364, 366. Whether an act be local or special is determined by the generality with which it affects the people as a whole, rather than the extent of territory over which it is operative, and, if it equally affects all people coming within its operation, it is not local or special. State ex rel. Garvey v. Buckner, 308 Mo. 390, 272 S.W. 940, 942. In taxation cases, courts make no distinction between "special law" and 'local law." Bozarth v. Egg Harbor City, 85 N.J.Law, 412, 89 A. 920, 921. The phrases "special act" and "private act" mean the same thing. Federal Trust Co. v. East Hartford Fire Dist., C.C.A.Conn., 283 F. 95, 98

SPECIAL LIEN. A special lien is in the nature of a particular lien, being a lien upon particular property; a lien which the holder can enforce only as security for the performance of a particular act or obligation and of obligations incidental thereto. Green v. Coast Line R. Co., 97 Ga. 15, 24 S.E. 814, 33 L.R.A. 806, 54 Am.St.Rep. 379; Civ. Code Cal. § 2875; Marks v. Baum Bldg. Co., 73 Okl. 264, 175 P. 818, 822.

SPECIAL MATTER. Under a plea of the general issue, the defendant is allowed to give special matter in evidence, usually after notice to the plaintiff of the nature of such matter, thus sparing him the necessity of pleading it specially. 3 Bl.Comm. 306.

SPECIAL PAPER. A list kept in the English courts of common law, and now in the king's bench, common pleas, and exchequer divisions of the high court, in which list demurrers, special cases, etc., to be argued are set down. It is distinguished from the new trial paper, peremptory paper, crown paper, revenue paper, etc., according to the practice of the particular division. Wharton.

SPECIAL REGISTRATION. In election laws. Registration for particular election only which does not entitle elector to vote at any succeeding election. Cowart v. City of Waycross, 159 Ga. 589, 126 S.E. 476, 479.

SPECIALIA GENERALIBUS DEROGANT. Special words derogate from general words. A special provision as to a particular subject—matter is to be preferred to general language, which might have governed in the absence of such special provision. L.R. 1 C.P. 546.

SPECIALIST. In stock exchange. Broker who remains at one post of exchange where particular stocks are dealt in and executes orders of other

A writing sealed and delivered, containing some agreement. A writing sealed and delivered, which is given as a security for the payment of a debt, in which such debt is particularly specified. Bac. Abr. "Obligation," A.

A corporate seal is not necessary to the contract of a corporation, and hence it is generally deemed that the affixing of a corporate seal to an instrument not required to be executed with that formality indicates that the instrument was intended to be a "specialty", but there is an exception if it appears from the instrument itself that the instrument was not intended to be a specialty. Caruthers v. Peninsular Life Ins. Co., 150 Fla. 467, 7 So.2d 841, 842.

SPECIALTY DEBT. A debt due or acknowledged to be due by deed or instrument under seal. 2 Bl. Comm. 465.

When spoken of a contract, the expression "performance in specie" means strictly, or according to the exact terms. As applied to things, it signifies individuality or identity. Thus, on a bequest of a specific picture, the legatee would be said to be entitled to the delivery of the picture in specie; i.e., of the very thing. Whether a thing is due in genere or in specie depends, in each case, on the will of the transacting parties. Brown.

SPECIES. Lat. In the civil law. Form; figure; fashion or shape. A form or shape given to materials.

SPECIES FACTI. In Scotch law. The particular criminal act charged against a person.

SPECIFIC. Precisely formulated or restricted; definite; explicit; of an exact or particular nature. People v. Thomas, 25 Cal.2d 880, 156 P.2d 7, 17. Having a certain form or designation; observing a certain form; particular; precise; tending to specify, or to make particular, definite, limited or precise. Republic Casualty Co. v. Scandinavian-American Bank, D.C.Wash., 2 F.2d 113, 114; Western Union Telegraph Co. v. South & N. A. R. Co., 184 Ala. 66, 62 So. 788, 793.

As to specific "Denial", "Devise", "Legacy," and "Performance," see those titles.

SPECIFICALLY. In a specific manner; explicitly, particularly, definitely. Straton v. Hodgkins, 109 W.Va. 536, 155 S.E. 902.

SPECIFICATIO. Lat. In the civil law. Literally, a making of form; a giving of form to materials. That mode of acquiring property through which a person, by transforming a thing belonging to another, especially by working up his materials into a new species, becomes proprietor of the same. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 271.

Law of Personal Property

The acquisition of title to a thing by working it into new forms or species from the raw material; corresponding to the specificatio of the Roman law. See Lampton v. Preston, 1 J. J. Marsh, Ky., 462, 19 Am.Dec. 104.

Right by "specification" can only be acquired when, without the accession of any other material that of another person, which has been used by the operator innovently, has been converted by him into something specifically different in the inherent and characteristic qualities, which identify it. Such is the conversion of corn into meal, of grapes into wine, etc. Bozeman Mortuary Ass'n v. Fairchild, 253 Ky. 74, 68 S.W.2d 756, 92 A.L.R. 419.

Military Law

The clear and particular description of the charges preferred against a person accused of a military offense. Tytler, Mil. Law, 109; Carter v. McCloughry, 22 S.Ct. 181, 183 U.S. 365, 46 L.Ed. 236.

Practice

A detailed and particular enumeration of several points or matters urged or relied on by a party to a suit or proceeding; as, a "specification of errors," or a "specification of grounds of opposition to a bankrupt's discharge." See Railway Co. v. McArthur, 96 Tex. 65, 70 S.W. 317; In re Glass, D.C.Tenn., 119 F. 514; Frank v. Ruzicka, 45 S.D. 49, 185 N.W. 371, 372.

SPECIFY. To mention specifically; to state in full and explicit terms; to point out; to tell or state precisely or in detail; to particularize, or to distinguish by words one thing from another. Independent Highway Dist. No. 2 of Ada County v. Ada County, 24 Idaho 416, 134 P. 542, 545; Roche Valley Land Co. v. Barth, 67 Mont. 353, 215 P. 654, 655; Aleksich v. Industrial Accident Fund, 116 Mont. 127, 151 P.2d 1016, 1021.

SPECIMEN. A sample; a part of something intended to exhibit the kind and quality of the whole. People v. Freeman, 1 Idaho 322.

SPECULATION. Buying or selling with expectation of profiting by a rise or fall in price; also engaging in hazardous business transactions for the chance of unusually large profit. Clucas v. Bank of Montclair, 110 N.J.L. 394, 166 A. 311, 313, 394, 88 A.L.R. 302.

SPECULATIVE DAMAGES. See Damages.
SPECULUM. Lat. Mirror or looking-glass. The title of several of the most ancient lawbooks or compilations. One of the ancient Icelandic books is styled "Speculum Regale."

SPEEDY EXECUTION. An execution which, by the direction of the judge at nisi prius, issues forthwith, or on some early day fixed upon by the judge for that purpose after the trial of the action. Brown.

SPEEDY REMEDY. One which, having in mind the subject-matter involved, can be pursued with expedition and without essential detriment to the party aggrieved. State v. District Court of Thirteenth Judicial Dist. in and for Yellowstone County, 50 Mont. 289, 146 P. 743, 745, Ann.Cas.1917C, 164.

It does not mean trial immediately after defendant's apprehension and indictment, but trial consistent with court's business. People v. Wilson, 356 Ill. 256, 190 N.E. 270, 272.

SPELLING. The formation of words by letters; orthography. Incorrect spelling does not vitiate a written instrument if the intention clearly appears.

SPEND. To consume by using in any manner, to use up, to exhaust, distribute, as to expend money or any other possession. Levenson v. Wolfson, 42 Ohio App. 332, 182 N.E. 116.

SPENDTHRIFT. One who spends money profusely and improvidently; a prodigal; one who lavishes or wastes his estate. Taylor v. Koenigstein, 128 Neb. 809, 260 N.W. 544.

In some jurisdictions, under statutes, a person who by excessive drinking, gaming, idleness, or debauchery of any kind shall so spend, waste, or lessen his estate as to expose himself or his family to want or suffering, or expose the town to charge or expense for the support of himself or family. Rev.St.Maine, c. 67, § 4, cl. 2 (Rev.St. 1930, c. 80, § 4, cl. 2); Pub. Laws N.H.1926, c. 291, § 4; G.L.Mass., c. 201, § 8; Smith-Hurd Rev.St.I11.1931, c. 86, § 53; Young v. Young, 87 Me. 44, 22 A. 782; Morey's Appeal, 57 N.H. 54; Norton v. Leonard, 12 Pick., Mass., 152, 161; In re Bishop, 149 Ill.App. 491, 498.

Every person who is liable to be put under guardianship on account of excessive drinking, gaming, idleness, or debauchery. Comp. Laws Mich.1929, § 15777; G.L.Vt. 3651.

To constitute valid "spendthrift trust," legal title must be vested in trustee; gift must be only of income to a beneficiary, taking no estate, having no power of alienation, right to possession, nor beneficial interest in property save qualified right to support and equitable interest in income; and trust must be active one. Chinnis v. Cobb, 210 N.C. 104, 185 S.E. 638, 640.

SPERATE. That of which there is hope. Thus a debt which one may hope to recover may be called "sperate," in opposition to "desperate." See 1 Chit. Pr. 520.

SPES ACCRESCENDI. Lat. Hope of surviving. 3 Atk. 762; 2 Kent, Comm. 424.

SPES EST VIGILANTIS SOMNIUM. Hope is the dream of the vigilant. 4 Inst. 203.

SPES IMPUNITATIS CONTINUUM AFFECTUM TRIBUT DELINQUENDI. The hope of impunity holds out a continual temptation to crime. 3 Inst. 236.

SPES RECUPERANDI. Lat. The hope of recovery or recapture; the chance of retaking property captured at sea, which prevents the captors from acquiring complete ownership of the property until they have definitely precluded it by effectual measures. 1 Kent, Comm. 101.

SPIGURNEL. The sealer of the royal writs.

SPINNING HOUSE. A house of correction to which the authorities of Oxford and Cambridge may send persons (mostly women of frivolous character) not members of the University who are found consorting with the students, to the detriment of their morals. 4 Steph. Comm. 264.

SPINSTER. The addition given, in legal proceedings, and in conveyancing, to a woman who never has been married.

SPIRITUAL. Relating to religious or ecclesiastical persons or affairs, as distinguished from "secular" or lay, worldly, or business matters. Johnson v. State, 107 Miss. 196, 65 So. 218, 220, 51 L.R.A., N.S., 1183.

As to spiritual "Corporation," "Courts," and "Lords," see those titles.

SPIRITUALITIES OF A BISHOP. Those profits which a bishop receives in his ecclesiastical character, as the dues arising from his ordaining and instituting priests, and such like, in contradistinction to those profits which he acquires in his temporal capacity as a baron and lord of parliament, and which are termed his "temporalities," consisting of certain lands, revenues, and lay fees, etc. Cowell
SPIRITUALITY OF BENEFICES. In ecclesiastical law. The tithes of land, etc. Wharton.

The phrase "spirituous liquor," in a penal statute, cannot be extended beyond its exact literal sense. Spirit is the name of an inflammable liquor produced by distillation. Wine is the fermented juice of the grape, or a preparation of other vegetables by fermentation; hence the term does not include wine. State v. Moore, 5 Blackf., Ind., 118.

SPITAL, or SPITTLE. A charitable foundation; a hospital for diseased people; a hospital. Cowell.

SPLIT SENTENCE. One where penalty of fine and imprisonment, as provided by statute, is imposed and imprisonment part is suspended and fine part enforced. Cote v. Cummings, 126 Me. 330, 138 A. 547, 552.

SPLITTING A CAUSE OF ACTION. Dividing a single cause of action, claim, or demand into two or more parts, and bringing suit for one of such parts only. The plaintiff who does this is bound by his first judgment, and can recover no more. 2 Black, Judgm. § 734. Birdville Independent School Dist. v. Deen, Tex.Civ.App., 114 S.W.2d 628, 632. Commencement of an action for only a part of the cause of action. Silber v. James Drug Stores, 124 N.J.L. 401, 11 A.2d 756, 758. Floyd v. C. I. T. Corporation, 191 S.C. 518, 5 S.E.2d 299, 301.

There is no "splitting of causes" where demand which is subject of second action was not due at time of the first action. Glavich v. Industrial Accident Commission of California, 44 Cal.App.2d 517, 112 P.2d 774, 778.

The rule against "splitting causes of action" does not mean that plaintiff cannot sue for less than is his due but means merely that if he does so he may be precluded from maintaining another action for the remainder of the same demand. Scientific & Hospital Supply Corporation v. Board of Education of City of New York, 16 N.Y.S.2d 91, 93, 172 Misc. 770.

The rule against "splitting cause of action" applies only when several actions are between same parties. Warnecke v. Foley, 234 Iowa 348, 11 N.W.2d 457, 459.

SPOLIATION.

English Ecclesiastical Law

An injury done by one clerk or incumbent to another, in taking the fruits of his benefice without any right to them, but under a pretended title. 3 Bl. Comm. 90, 91.

The name of a suit sued out in the spiritual court to recover for the fruits of the church or for the church itself. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 85.

Torts

 Destruction of a thing by the act of a stranger, as the erasure or alteration of a writing by the act of a stranger. This has not the effect to destroy its character or legal effect. 1 Greenl. Ev. § 566; Medlin v. Platt County, 8 Mo. 239, 40 Am. Dec. 135; Edwards v. Thompson, 99 Wash. 188, 169 P. 327, 328; Knox v. Horne, Tex.Civ.App., 200 S. W. 259, 260; Cooper v. Hembree, 194 Okl. 465, 152 P.2d 695, 697.

SPOLIATOR. Lat. A spoiler or destroyer. It is a maxim of law, bearing chiefly on evidence, but also upon the value generally of the thing destroyed, that everything most to his disadvantage is to be presumed against the destroyer, (spoliat-or,) contra spoliatorem omnia precesumuntur. 1 Smith, Lead. Cas. 315.

SPOLIATUS DEBET ANTE OMNIA RESTITUI. A party despoiled [forcibly deprived of possession] ought first of all to be restored. 2 Inst. 714; 4 Reeve, Eng. Law, 18.

SPOLIATUS EPISCOPUS ANTE OMNIA DEBET RESTITUI. A bishop despoiled of his see ought, above all, to be restored. See 14 L. Q. R. 27.

SPOLIUM. In the civil and common law. A thing violently or unlawfully taken from another.

SPONDEO. Lat. In the civil law. I undertake; I engage. Inst. 3, 16, 1.

SPONDET PERITIAM ARTIS. He promises the skill of his art; he engages to do the work in a skillful or workmanlike manner. 2 Kent, Comm. 588. Applied to the engagements of workman for hire. Story, Balm. § 428.

SPONSALIA, STIPULATIO SPONSALITIA. Lat. An engagement to pay a certain sum of money in the form of an answer to a formal interrogatory by the other party. Calvin.

SPRIS. A trifling or ludicrous engagement, such as a court will not sustain an answer in. 1 Kames, Eq. Introd. 34. An informal undertaking, or one made without the usual formula of interrogation. Calvin.

SPONSIO
SPONSIONS. In international law. Agreements or engagements made by certain public officers (as generals or admirals in time of war) in behalf of their governments, either without authority or in excess of the authority under which they purport to be made, and which therefore require an express or tacit ratification.

SPONSOR. A surety; one who makes a promise or gives security for another, particularly a godfather in baptism.

In the civil law. One who intervenes for another voluntarily and without being requested.

SPONTANEOUS COMBUSTION. The ignition of a body by the internal development of heat without the action of an external agent. Eckman Chemical Co. v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co., 107 Neb. 268, 185 N.W. 444, 446.

SPONTANEOUS EXCLAMATION. Within res gestae rule, a statement or exclamation made immediately after some exciting occasion by a participant or spectator and asserting the circumstances of that occasion as it is observed by him. Riley v. State, 50 Ariz. 442, 73 P.2d 96, 101.

SPONTE OBLATA. Lat. A free gift or present to the crown.

SPONTE VIRUM FUGIENS ET ADULTERA FACTA, DOTE SUA CAREAT, NISI SPONSI SPONTE RETRACTA. Co. Litt. 32b.

Let a woman leaving her husband of her own accord, and committing adultery, lose her dower, unless taken back by her husband of his own accord.

SPORTULA. Lat. In Roman law. A largess, dole, or present; a pecuniary donation; an official perquisite; something over and above the ordinary fee allowed by law. Inst. 4, 6, 24.

SPOUSALS. In old English law. Mutual promises to marry.

SPOT A FREIGHT CAR. To place it at a precise spot where it is to be loaded or unloaded, such as a freight house, a team track, or a shipper's warehouse. Union Pac. It Co. v. Anderson, 167 Or. 687, 120 P.2d 578, 585.

SPOUSE. One's wife or husband. Rosell v. State Industrial Accident Commission, 164 Or. 173, 95 P.2d 726, 729.

SPRING. A fountain of water; an issue of water from the earth, or the basin of water at the place of its issue. Webster. A natural chasm in which water has collected, and from which it either is lost by percolation or rises in a defined channel.

SPRINGING USE. See Use.

SPURIOUS BANK-BILL. A bill which may be a legitimate impression from the genuine plate, but it must have the signatures of persons not the officers of the bank whence it purports to have issued, or else the names of fictitious persons. It may also be an illegitimate impression from a genuine plate, or an impression from a counterfeit plate, but it must have such signatures or names as indicated. A bill, therefore, may be both counterfeit and forged, or both counterfeit and spurious, but it cannot be both forged and spurious. Kirby v. State, 1 Ohio St. 187.

SPURIOUS. Lat. In the civil law. A bastard; the offspring of promiscuous cohabitation.

SPY. A person sent into an enemy's camp to inspect their works, ascertain their strength and their intentions, watch their movements, and secretly communicate intelligence to the proper officer. By the laws of war among all civilized nations, a spy is punished with death. Webster. See Vattel, 3, 179; U. S. ex rel. Wessels v. McDonald, D.C.N.Y., 1920, 265 F. 754; Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 44, 18 L.Ed. 281 (argument of counsel).

SQUARE. As used to designate a certain portion of land within the limits of a city or town, this term may be synonymous with “block,” that is, the smallest subdivision which is bounded on all sides by principal streets, or it may denote a space (more or less rectangular) not built upon, and set apart for public passage, use, recreation, or ornamentation, in the nature of a “park” but smaller. State v. Natal, 42 La. Ann. 612, 7 South. 781; Rowzee v. Pierce, 75 Miss. 846, 23 South. 307, 40 L.R.A. 402, 65 Am.St.Rep. 625; City of St. Louis v. Pope, 344 Mo. 479, 126 S.W.2d 1201, 1213.
Public Square

In its popular import, the phrase refers almost exclusively to ground occupied by a courthouse owned by a county, Logansport v. Dunn, 8 Ind. 378; but it may be used as synonymous with park; Church of Hoboken v. Council of Hoboken, 33 N. J.L. 13, 97 Am.Dec. 696; Woodward v. City of Des Moines, 182 Iowa 1102, 165 N.W. 313, 314.

Square Block

SQUATTER. In American law. One who settles on another's land, particularly on public lands, without legal authority. O'Donnell v. McIntyre, 16 Abb. N. C., N.Y., 84; Parkersburg Industrial Co. v. Schultz, 43 W.Va. 470, 27 S.E. 255. A person entering upon lands, not claiming in good faith the right to do so by virtue of any title of his own or by virtue of some agreement with another whom he believes to hold the title. Mayor and Council of City of Forsyth v. Hooks, 182 Ga. 78, 184 S.E. 724, 728.

A squatter can never gain prescriptive title to land regardless of how long he holds possession, since his possession is never considered as "adverse possession". Conway v. Shuck, 203 Ark. 559, 157 S.W.2d 777, 778.

SQUIRE. A contraction of "esquire."

SS. An abbreviation used in that part of a record, pleading, or affidavit, called the "statement of the venue." Commonly translated or read, "to wit," and supposed to be a contraction of "scilicet."

Also in ecclesiastical documents, particularly records of early councils, "ss" is used as an abbreviation for subscrips. Occasionally, in Law French, it stands for sans, "without," e.g., "faire feoffment ss son baron." Bendloe, p. 180.

STABILIA. A writ called by that name, founded on a custom in Normandy, that where a man in power claimed lands in the possession of an inferior, he petitioned the prince that it might be put into his hands till the right was decided, whereupon he had this writ. Wharton.

STABILIZE. To keep steady, fixed, as distinguished from fluctuating, shifting. McCanless v. Klein, 182 Tenn. 563, 188 S.W.2d 745, 748.

STABILIZE PRICES. Holding prices steady against any and all increases. Philadelphia Coke Co. v. Bowles, Em.App., 139 F.2d 349, 353.

STABIT PLUESUMPTIO DONEC PROBETUR IN CONTRARIUM. A presumption will stand good till the contrary is proved. Hob. 297; Broom, Max. 949.

STABLE-STAND. In forest law. One of the four evidences or presumptions whereby a man was convicted of an intent to steal the king's deer in the forest. This was when a man was found at his standing in the forest with a cross-bow or long-bow, ready to shoot at any deer, or else standing close by a tree with grey-hounds in a leash, ready to slip. Cowell; Manwood.

STABULARIUS. Lat. In the civil law. A stable-keeper. Dig. 4, 9, 4, 1.

STACHIA. In old records. A dam or head made to stop a water-course. Cowell.

STAFF-HERDING. The following of cattle within a forest.

STAGE LINE. A regular line of vehicles for public use operating between distant points or between different cities. Bruce Transfer Co. v. Johnston, 227 Iowa 50, 287 N.W. 278, 280.

STAGE-RIGHT. A word which it has been attempted to introduce as a substitute for "the right of representation and performance," but it can hardly be said to be an accepted term of English or American law. Sweet.

STAGIARIUS. A resident. Cowell.

STAGNUM. In old English law. A pool, or pond. Co. Litt. 5a; Johnson v. Rayner, 6 Gray (Mass.) 110.

STAKE. A deposit made to answer an event, as on a wager. Mohr v. Miesen, 47 Minn. 228, 49 N. W. 862; Pompano Horse Club v. State, 93 Fla. 415, 111 So. 801, 813, 52 A.L.R. 51. Something deposited by two persons with the third on condition that it is to be delivered to the one who shall become entitled to it by the happening of a specified contingency. Baxter v. Deneen, 98 Md. 181, 57 A. 601, 607, 64 L.R.A. 949, 1 Ann.Cas. 147.

STAKEHOLDER. A person with whom money is deposited pending the decision of a bet or wager; (q.v.). Sweet. Wabash R. Co. v. Flannigan, 95 Mo.App. 477, 75 S.W. 691; Martin v. Francis, 173 Ky. 529, 191 S.W. 259, 262, L.R.A. 1918F, 966, Ann. Cas.1908E, 289. His function is to receive the sums wagered and hold them against the determining event, whether that event be a horse race or otherwise, and then pay them over to the winner. Also a third person chosen by two or more persons to keep in deposit property the right or possession of which is contested between them, and to be delivered to the one who shall establish his right to it. State v. Dudley, 127 N.J.L. 127, 21 A.2d 209, 210.

STALE DEMAND, or CLAIM. A demand or claim that has long remained unasserted, one that is first asserted after an unexplained delay which is so long as to render it difficult or impossible for the court to ascertain the truth of the matters in controversy and do justice between the parties, or to create a presumption against the existence or validity of the claim, or a presumption that the claim has been abandoned or satisfied. Luschen v. Stanton, 192 Okl. 454, 137 P.2d 567, 572. It implies a greater lapse of time than is necessary to "laches." Bell v. Mackey, 191 S.C. 105, 3 S.E.2d 816, 824, 830. The doctrine is purely an equitable one, and arises only when, from lapse of time and laches of plaintiff, it would be inequitable to allow a party to enforce his legal rights. Wood v. City Board of Plumbing Examiners, 192 Ga. 415, 15 S.E.2d 486, 488; Lamar v. Rivers, 235 Ala. 130, 178 So. 16, 18.

STALLAGE. The liberty or right of pitching or erecting stalls in fairs or markets, or the money paid for the same. 1 Steph. Comm. 664.

STALLARIUS. In Saxon law. The prcefectus stabuli, now master of the horse. Sometimes one who has a stall in a fair or market.

STAMP. An impression made by public authority, in pursuance of law, upon paper or parchment, upon which certain legal proceedings, conveyances, or contracts are required to be written, and for which a tax or duty is exacted.

A small label or strip of paper, bearing a particular device, printed and sold by the government, and required to be attached to mail-matter, and to some other articles subject to duty or excise. U. S. v. Skilken, D.C.Ohio, 293 F. 916, 919.

STAMP ACTS. In English law. Acts regulating the stamps upon deeds, contracts, agreements, papers in law proceedings, bills and notes, letters, receipts, and other papers.

STAMP DUTIES. Duties imposed upon and raised from stamps upon parchment and paper, and forming a branch of the perpetual revenue of the kingdom. 1 Bl. Comm. 323.

STANCE. In Scotch law. A resting place; a field or place adjoining a drove-road, for resting and refreshing sheep and cattle on their journey. 7 Bell, App. Cas. 53, 57, 58.

STAND. To cease from movement or progress; to pause, remain stationary or inactive. Jaggers v. Southeastern Greyhound Lines, D.C.Tenn., 34 F.Supp. 667, 668.

To abide; to submit to; as "to stand a trial."

To remain as a thing is; to remain in force. Pleadings demurred to and held good are allowed to stand.

To appear in court.

An ensign or flag used in war.

A type, model, or combination of elements accepted as correct or perfect. Ashwell v. Miller, 54 Ind.App. 381, 103 N.E. 37, 40.

STANDARD MORTGAGE CLAUSE. In fire policy. Clause providing that in case of loss policy shall be payable to mortgagee, and that his interest as payee shall not be invalidated by act of mortgagee. Rhode Island Ins. Co. v. Wurtman, 265 Ky. 835, 98 S.W.2d 29, 31.

Basic difference in effect between "loss payable clause" and "standard mortgage clause" is that the former is subject to such defenses as insurer may have against the mortgagee, while the latter is not. Overholt v. Reliance Ins. Co. of Philadelphia, 319 Pa. 340, 179 A. 554, 556.

STANDARD OF WEIGHT, or MEASURE. A weight or measure fixed and prescribed by law, to which all other weights and measures are required to correspond.

STANDING. One's place in the community in the estimation of others; his relative position and social, commercial, or moral relations; his repute, grade, or rank. Gross v. State, 186 Ind. 581, 117 N.E. 562, 564, 1 A.L.R. 1151.

STANDING ASIDE JURORS. A practice by which, on the drawing of a jury for a criminal trial, the prosecuting officer puts aside a juror, provisionally, until the panel is exhausted, without disclosing his reasons, instead of being required to challenge him and show cause. The statute 33 Edw. I. deprived the crown of the power to challenge jurors without showing cause, and the practice of standing aside jurors was adopted in England, as a method of evading its provisions. A similar practice is in use in Pennsylvania. See Warren v. Corn., 37 Pa. 54; Zell v. Com., 94 Pa. 272; Haines v. Corn., 100 Pa. 322. But in Missouri, it is said that the words "stand aside" are the usual formula, used in impaneling a jury, for rejecting a juror. State v. Hultz, 106 Mo. 41, 16 S.W. 940.

STANDING BY. Used in law as implying knowledge, under such circumstances as rendered it the duty of the possessor to communicate it; and it is such knowledge, and not the mere fact of "standing by," that lays the foundation of responsibility. The phrase does not import an actual presence, but implies knowledge under such circumstances as to render it the duty of the possessor to communicate it. Anderson v. Hubble, 93 Ind. 573, 47 Am.Rep. 394; Gatling v. Rodman, 6 Ind. 292; Richardson v. Chickerling, 41 N.H. 380, 77 Am.Dec. 769; Morrison v. Morrison, 2 Dana, Ky., 16; Piqua State Bank v. Brannum, 103 Kan. 25, 173 P. 1, 2.

STANDING MUTE. A prisoner, arraigned for treason or felony, was said to "stand mute," when he refused to plead, or answered foreign to the purpose, or, after a plea of not guilty, would not put himself upon the country.

STANDING IN LOCO PARENTIS. As required to entitle deceased employee's illegitimate child to compensation under Workmen's Compensation

STANDING ORDERS. Rules and forms regulating the procedure of the two houses of parliament, each having its own. They are of equal force in every parliament, except so far as they are altered or suspended from time to time. Cox, Inst. 136; May, Parl. Pr. 185.

STANDING SEISED TO USES. A covenant to stand seised to uses is one by which the owner of an estate covenants to hold the same to the use of another person, usually a relative, and usually in consideration of blood or marriage. It is a species of conveyance depending for its effect on the statute of uses.

STANDING TO SUE DOCTRINE. Doctrine that in action in federal constitutional court by citizen against a government officer, complaining of alleged unlawful conduct there is no justiciable controversy unless citizen shows that such conduct invades or will invade a private substantive legally protected interest of plaintiff citizen. Associated Industries of New York State v. Ickes, C.C.A.2, 134 F.2d 694, 702.

STANNARIES. A district which includes all parts of Devon and Cornwall where some tin work is situate and in actual operation. The tin miners of the stannaries have certain peculiar customs and privileges.

STANN ARY COURTS. Courts of Devonshire and Cornwall for the administration of justice among the miners and tinners. These courts were held before the lord warden and his deputies by virtue of a privilege granted to the workers of the tin-mines there, to sue and be sued in their own courts only, in order that they might not be drawn away from their business by having to attend law-suits in distant courts. Brown.

STAPLE.

English Law

A mart or market. A place where the buying and selling of wool, lead, leather, and other articles were put under certain terms. 2 Reeve, Eng. Law, 393.

International Law

The right of staple, as exercised by a people upon foreign merchants, is defined to be that they may not allow them to set their merchandises and wares to sale but in a certain place. This practice is not in use in the United States. 1 Chit. Corn. Law, 103.

General

Staple inn. An inn of chancery. See Inns of Chancery.

Statute staple. The statute of the staple, 27 Ed. III. stat. 2, confined the sale of all commodities to be exported to certain towns in England, called estaple or staple, where foreigners might resort. It authorized a security for money, commonly called statute staple, to be taken by traders for the benefit of commerce; the mayor of the place is entitled to take recognizance of a debt in proper form which had the effect to convey the lands of the debtor to the creditor till out of the rents and profits of them he should be satisfied. 2 Rolle, Abr. 446; Bac. Abr. Execution (B. 1); Co. 4th Inst. 238. A security for a debt acknowledged to be due, so called from its being entered into before the mayor of the staple, that is to say, the grand mart for the principal commodities or manufactures of the kingdom, formerly held by act of parliament in certain trading towns. In other respects it resembled the statute-merchant, (q. v.), but like that has now fallen into disuse. 2 Bl. Comm. 160; 1 Steph. Comm. 287.

STAR—CHAMBER. A court which originally had jurisdiction in cases where the ordinary course of justice was so much obstructed by one party, through writs, combination of maintenance, or overawing influence that no inferior court would find its process obeyed. The court consisted of the privy council, the common-law judges, and (it seems) all peers of parliament. In the reign of Henry VIII. and his successors, the jurisdiction of the court was illegally extended to such a degree (especially in punishing disobedience to the king’s arbitrary proclamations) that it became odious to the nation, and was abolished. 4 Steph. Comm. 310; Sweet.

STAR PAGE. The line and word at which the pages of the first edition of a law book began are frequently marked by a star in later editions, and always should be.

STARE DECISIS. Lat. To abide by, or adhere to, decided cases.

Policy of courts to stand by precedent and not to disturb settled point. Neff v. George, 364 Ill. 306, 4 N.E.2d 338, 390, 391. Doctrine that, when court has once laid down a principle of law as applicable to a certain state of facts, it will adhere to that principle, and apply it to all future cases, where facts are substantially the same. Moore v. City of Albany, 98 N.Y. 396, 410; Regardless of whether the parties and property are the same. Horne v. Moody, Tex.Civ.App., 146 S.W.2d 505, 509, 510. Under doctrine a deliberate or solemn decision of court made after argument on question of law fairly arising in the case, and necessary to its determination, is an authority, or binding precedent in the same court, or in other courts of equal or lower rank in subsequent cases where the very point is again in controversy. State v. Mellenberger, 163 Or. 233, 95 P.2d 709, 719, 720, 128 A.L.R. 1506. Doctrine is one of policy, grounded on theory that security and certainty require that accepted and established legal principle, under which rights may accrue, be recognized and followed, though later found to be not legally sound, but whether previous holding of court shall be adhered to, modified, or overruled is within court’s discretion under circumstances of case before it. Otter Tail Power Co. v. Von Bank, 72 N.D. 497, 8 N.W.2d 599, 607, 145 A.L.R. 1343. Under doctrine, when point of law has been settled by decision, it forms precedent which is not afterwards to be departed from, and, while it should ordinarily be strictly adhered to, there are occasions when departure is rendered necessary to vindicate plain, obvious principles of law and remedy continued injustice. McGregor v. Provident Trust Co. of Philadelphia, 119 Fla. 718, 162 So. 323. The doctrine is a salutary one, and should not ordinarily be departed from where decision is of long standing and rights have been acquired under it, unless considerations of public policy demand it. Colonial Trust Co. v. Flanagan, 344 Pa. 556, 25 A.2d 728, 729.

The doctrine is limited to actual determinations in respect to litigated and necessarily decided questions, and is not applicable to dicta or obiter dicta. In re Herle’s Estate, 165 Misc. 46, 300 N.Y.S. 103.

Federal courts should in all instances follow the law of the state with respect to the construction of state statutes, and where that law has been determined by the courts of last resort, their decisions are “stare decisis” and must be followed, irrespective of federal courts’ opinions concerning what the law ought to be, but with respect to the pronouncement of other state courts, federal courts are not so bound and may conclude that the decision does not truly express the state law. Kehaya v. Axton, D.C.N.Y., 32 F.Supp. 266, 268.

STARE DECESIS ET NON QUIETA MOVERE. To adhere to precedents, and not to unsettle things which are established. 87 Pa. 286; Ballard County v. Kentucky County Debt Commission, 290 Ky. 770, 162 S.W.2d 771, 773. See Stare Decisis.

STARE IN JUDICIO. Lat. To appear before a tribunal, either as plaintiff or defendant.

STARR, or STARRA. The old term for contract or obligation among the Jews, being a corruption from the Hebrew word "shetar," a covenant, by an ordinance of Richard I., no Starr was allowed to be valid, unless deposited in one of certain repositories established by law, the most considerable of which was in the king’s exchequer at Westminster; and Blackstone conjectures that the room in which these chests were kept was thence called the "starr-chamber." 4 Bl. Comm. 266, 267, note a.

STAT PRO RATIONE VOLUNTAS. The will stands in place of a reason. Sears v. Shafer, 1 Barb. (N.Y.) 408, 411; Farmers’ Loan & Trust Co. v. Hunt, 16 Barb. (N.Y.) 514, 525.

STAT PRO RATIONE VOLUNTAS POPULI. The will of the people stands in place of a reason. People v. Draper, 25 Barb. (N.Y.) 344, 376.

STATE, n. To express the particulars of a thing in writing or in words; to set down or set forth in detail; to aver, allege, or declare. People v. Mercado, 59 Cal.App. 69, 209 P. 1035, 1037.

To set down in gross; to mention in general terms, or by way of reference; to refer. Utica v. Richardson, 6 Hill (N.Y.) 300.

STATE, n. A people permanently occupying a fixed territory bound together by common-law habits and custom into one body politic exercising, through the medium of an organized government, independent sovereignty and control over all persons and things within its boundaries, capable of making war and peace and of entering into international relations with other communities of the globe. United States v. Kusche, D.C.Cal., 56 F. Supp. 201, 207, 208. The organization of social life which exercises sovereign power in behalf of the people. Delany v. Moraitis, C.C.A.Md., 136 F. 2d 129, 130.

One of the component commonwealths or States of the United States of America. The term is sometimes applied also to governmental agencies authorized by state, such as municipal corporations. George v. City of Portland, 114 Or. 418, 235 P. 681, 683, 39 A.L.R. 341.

The people of a state, in their collective capacity, considered as the party wronged by a criminal deed; the public; as in the title of a cause, "The State vs. A. B."

The section of territory occupied by one of the United States.

The circumstances or condition of a being or thing at a given time. State v. Inich, 55 Mont. 1, 173 P. 230, 234.

Foreign State

A foreign country or nation. The several United States are considered "foreign" to each other except as regards their relations as common members of the Union.

State’s Evidence

See Evidence.

State Offices

As used in Primary Election Law, offices to be filled by electorate of entire state. Hamilton v. Monroe, Tex.Civ.App., 287 S.W. 304, 305. See "Office."

State Officers

Those whose duties concern the state at large or the general public, or who are authorized to exercise their official functions throughout the entire state, without limitation to any political subdivision of the state. State ex rel. Consolidated School Dist. No. 2 v. Ingram, 317 Mo. 1141, 298 S.W. 37, 38; Ramsay v. Van Meter, 300 193, 133 N.E. 193, 195; State v. Jones, 79 Fla. 56, 84 So. 84, 85; McCullough v. Scott, 182 N.C. 865, 109 S.E. 789, 793. In another sense, officers belonging to or exercising authority under one of the states of the Union, as distinguished from the officers of the United States. See In re Police Com’rs, 22 R.I. 654, 49 A. 36; State v. Burns, 38 Fla. 378, 21 So. 290; People v. Nixon, 158 N.Y. 221, 52 N.E. 1117.
State Paper
A document prepared by, or relating to, the political department of the government of a state or nation, and concerning or affecting the administration of its government or its political or international relations. Also, a newspaper, designated by public authority, as the organ for the publication of public statutes, resolutions, notices, and advertisements.

State Revenue
Current income of state from whatever source derived that is subject to appropriation for public uses. State ex rel. McKinley Pub. Co. v. Hackmann, 314 Mo. 33, 282 S.W. 1007, 1011.

State Tax
A tax the proceeds of which are to be devoted to the expenses of the state, as distinguished from taxation for local or municipal purposes. See Youngblood v. Sexton, 32 Mich. 413, 20 Am.Rep. 654; State v. Auditor of State, 15 Ohio St. 482; Society for Establishing Useful Manufactures v. City of Paterson, 89 N. J. Law, 208, 98 A. 440, 441.

State Trial
A trial for a political offense.

State Trials
A work in thirty-three volumes octavo, containing all English trials for offenses against the state and others partaking in some degree of that character, from the ninth year of Hen. II. to the first of Geo. IV.

STATE EXPERIENCE FACTOR. The term as used in Unemployment Compensation Law, means a factor based on factual experience of all employers and their employees operating within the state coming within influence of the act. Broadway v. Alabama Dry Dock & Shipbuilding Co., 246 Ala. 201, 20 So. 2d 41, 49.

STATE OF FACTS. Formerly, when a master in chancery was directed by the court of chancery to make an inquiry or investigation into any matter arising out of a suit, and which could not conveniently be brought before the court itself, each party in the suit carried in before the master a statement showing how the party bringing it in represented the matter in question to be; and this statement was technically termed a "state of facts," and formed the ground upon which the evidence was received, the evidence being, in fact, brought by one party or the other, to prove his own or disprove his opponent's state of facts. And so now, a state of facts means the statement made by any one of his version of the facts. Brown.

STATE OF FACTS AND PROPOSAL. In English lunacy practice, when a person has been found a lunatic, the next step is to submit to the master a scheme called a "state of facts and proposal," showing what is the position in life, property, and income of the lunatic, who are his next of kin and heir at law, who are proposed as his committee, and what annual sum is proposed to be allowed for his maintenance, etc. From the state of facts and the evidence adduced in support of it, the master frames his report. Elmer, Lun. 22; Pope, Lun. 79; Sweet.

STATE OF THE CASE. A narrative of the facts upon which the plaintiff relies, substituted for a more formal declaration, in suits in the inferior courts. The phrase is used in New Jersey.

STATE PAPER OFFICE. An office established in London in 1578 for the custody of state papers. The head of it was the "Clerk of the Papers."

STATED. Determined, fixed, or settled. In re McKeon's Estate, 227 Iowa 1050, 289 N.W. 915, 919

Stated Meeting
A meeting of a board of directors, board of officers, etc., held at the time appointed therefor by law, ordinance, by-law, or other regulation; as distinguished from "special" meetings, which are held on call as the occasion may arise, rather than at a regularly appointed time, and from adjourned meetings. See Zulich v. Bowman, 42 Pa. 87; Hanson v. Chicago, B & Q. R. Co., 32 Wyo. 337, 232 P. 1101, 1104.

Stated Term
A regular or ordinary term or session of a court for the dispatch of its general business, held at the time fixed by law or rule; as distinguished from a special term, held out of the due order or for the transaction of particular business.

Stated Times
Occurring at regular intervals or given regularly; fixed, regular in operation or occurrence, not occasional or fluctuating. Zangerle v. State, 115 Ohio St. 168, 152 N.E. 658, 659.

STATEMENT. In a general sense, an allegation; a declaration of matters of fact. The term has come to be used of a variety of formal narratives of facts, required by law in various jurisdictions as the foundation of judicial or official proceedings and in a limited sense is a formal, exact, detailed presentation. Southern Surety Co. v. Schmidt, 117 Ohio St. 28, 158 N.E. 1, 3. For "False and Misleading Statement," and "Foreign Statement," see those titles.

STATEMENT OF AFFAIRS. In English bankruptcy practice, a bankrupt or debtor who has presented a petition for liquidation or composition must produce at the first meeting of creditors a statement of his affairs giving a list of his creditors, secured and unsecured, with the value of the securities, a list of bills discounted, and a statement of his property. Sweet.

STATEMENT OF CLAIM. A written or printed statement by the plaintiff in an action in the English high court, showing the facts on which he relies to support his claim against the defendant, and the relief which he claims. It is delivered to the defendant or his solicitor. The delivery of the statement of claim is usually the next step after appearance, and is the commencement of the pleadings. Sweet.

STATEMENT OF CONFESSION. Oftentimes referred to as a "power of attorney" is written authority of debtor and his direction to enter judgment against debtor as stated therein. Blott v. Blott, 227 Iowa 1108, 290 N.W. 74, 76.

STATEMENT OF DEFENSE. In the practice of the English high court, where the defendant in an action does not demur to the whole of the plaintiff's claim, he delivers a pleading called a "statement of defense." The statement of defense deals with the allegations contained in the statement of claim, (or the indorsement on the writ, if there is no statement of claim,) admitting or denying them, and, if necessary, stating fresh facts in explanation or avoidance of those alleged by the plaintiff. Sweet.

STATEMENT OF PARTICULARS. In English practice, when the plaintiff claims a debt or liquidated demand, but has not indorsed the writ specially, (i. e., indorsed on it the particulars of his claim under Order iii. r. 6,) and the defendant fails to appear, the plaintiff may file a statement of the particulars of his claim, and after eight days enter judgment for the amount, as if the writ had been specially indorsed. Court Rules, xiii. 5; Sweet.

STATE'S EVIDENCE. A popular term for testimony given by an accomplice or joint participant in the commission of a crime tending to criminate or convict the others, and given under an actual or implied promise of immunity for himself.

STATESMAN. A freeholder and farmer in Cumberland. Wharton.

STATIM. Lat. Forthwith; immediately. In old English law, this term meant either "at once," or "within a legal time," i. e., such time as permitted the legal and regular performance of the act in question.

STATING AN ACCOUNT. Exhibiting, or listing in their order, the items which make up an account.

STATING PART OF A BILL. That part of a bill in chancery in which the plaintiff states the facts of his case; it is distinguished from the charging part of the bill and from the prayer.

STATION. In the civil law. A place where ships may ride in safety. Dig. 50, 16, 59.

A place where military duty is performed or stores are kept or something connected with war is done. McGowan v. United States, 48 Ct.C1. 95.

A place at which both freight and passengers are received for transportation or delivered after transportation. Daniel v. Doyle, 135 Ark. 547, 204 S.W. 210, 211; Railroad Commission of Texas v. Pecos & N. T. Ry. Co., Tex.Civ.App., 212 S.W. 535, 537.

STATIONER'S COMPANY. A body formed in 1557 in London of 97 London stationers and their successors, to whom was entrusted, in the first instance, and, under Orders in Council, the censorship of the press.

STATIONERS' HALL. In English law. The hall of the stationers' company, at which every person claiming copyright in a book must register his title, in order to be able to bring actions against persons infringing it. 2 Stephe.Comm. 37-39.

STATIONERY OFFICE. In English law. A government office established as a department of the treasury, for the purpose of supplying government offices with stationery and books, and of printing and publishing government papers.

STATIST. A statesman; a politician; one skilled in government,

STATISTICS. That part of political science which is concerned in collecting and arranging facts illustrative of the condition and resources of a state. The subject is sometimes divided into (1) historical statistics, or facts which illustrate the former condition of a state; (2) statistics of population; (3) of revenue; (4) of trade, commerce, and navigation; (5) of the moral, social, and physical condition of the people. Wharton.

STATU LIBER. Lat. In Roman law. One who is made free by will under a condition; one who has his liberty fixed and appointed at a certain time or on a certain condition. Dig. 40, 7.

STATU LIBERI. Lat. In Louisiana. Slaves for a time, who had acquired the right of being free at a time to come, or on a condition which was not fulfilled, or in a certain event which had not happened, but who in the meantime remained in a state of slavery. Civ.Code La.1838, art. 37.

It also means estate, because it signifies the condition or circumstances in which one stands with regard to his property. In the Year Books, it was used in this sense; 2 Poll. & Maitl. Hist, E. L. 11.

STATUS DE MANERIO. The assembly of the tenants in the court of the lord of a manor, in order to do their customary suit.
STATUTA PRO PUBLICO COMmodo LATEr IN-TERPRETANTUR. Jenk.Cent. 21. Statutes made for the public good ought to be liberally construed.

STATUS QUO. The existing state of things at any given date. Status quo ante bellum, the state of things before the war.

STATUS OF IRREMOVABILITY. In English law. The right acquired by a pauper, after one year's residence in any parish, not to be removed therefrom.

STATUTE, n. An act of the legislature declaring, commanding, or prohibiting something; a particular law enacted and established by the will of the legislative department of government; the written will of the legislature, solemnly expressed according to the forms necessary to constitute it the law of the state. Federal Trust Co. v. East Hartford Fire Dist., C.C.A.Conn., 283 F. 95, 98; In re Van Tassel v. American Ins. Co., 351 Mo. 392, 173 S.W.2d 51, 52.

STATUTA PRO PUBLICO COMmodo LATEr IN-TERPRETANTUR. Jenk.Cent. 21. Statutes made for the public good ought to be liberally construed.

STATUTABLE, or STATUTORY. That which is introduced or governed by statute law, as opposed to the common law or equity. Thus, a court is said to have statutory jurisdiction when jurisdiction is given to it in certain matters by act of the legislature.

STATUTE, n. An act of the legislature declaring, commanding, or prohibiting something; a particular law enacted and established by the will of the legislative department of government; the written will of the legislature, solemnly expressed according to the forms necessary to constitute it the law of the state. Federal Trust Co. v. East Hartford Fire Dist., C.C.A.Conn., 283 F. 95, 98; In re Van Tassel v. American Ins. Co., 351 Mo. 392, 173 S.W.2d 51, 52.

STATUTA PRO PUBLICO COMmodo LATEr IN-TERPRETANTUR. Jenk.Cent. 21. Statutes made for the public good ought to be liberally construed.

This word is used to designate the written law in contradistinction to the unwritten law. Foster v. Brown, 199 Ga. 444, 34 S.E.2d 530, 535. See Common Law.

Foreign and Civil Law

Any particular municipal law or usage, though resting for its authority on judicial decisions, or the practice of nations. 2 Kent, Comm. 456. The whole municipal law of a particular state, from whatever source arising. Story, Confl. Laws, § 12.

"Statute" also sometimes means a kind of bond or obligation of record, being an abbreviation for "statute merchant" or "statute staple." See infra. For mandatory and directory statutes see "Mandatory" and "Directory."

Local statute. See Local Law.

Negative statute. A statute expressed in negative terms; a statute which prohibits a thing from being done, or declares what shall not be done.

Penal statute. See Penal.

Perpetual statute. One which is to remain in force without limitation as to time; one which contains no provision for its repeal, abrogation, or expiration at any future time.

Personal statutes. In foreign and modern civil law. Those statutes which have principally for their object the person, and treat of property only incidentally. Story, Confl. Laws, § 13. A personal statute, in this sense of the term, is a law, ordinance, regulation, or custom, the disposition of which affects the person and clothes him with a capacity or incapacity, which he does not change with every change of abode, but which, upon principles of justice and policy, he is assumed to carry with him wherever he goes. 2 Kent, Comm. 456. The term is also applied to statutes which, instead of being general, are confined in their operation to one person or group of persons. Bank of Columbia v. Walker, 14 Lea (Tenn.) 308; Saul v. Creditors, 5 Mart. N.S. (La.) 591, 16 Am. Dec. 212.

Private statute. A statute which operates only upon particular persons, and private concerns. 1 Bl.Comm. 86. An act which relates to certain individuals, or to particular classes of men. Dwar.St. 629; State v. Chambers, 93 N.C. 600.

Public statute. A statute enacting a universal rule which regards the whole community, 'as distinguished from one which concerns only particular individuals and affects only their private rights. See Code Civ.Proc.Cal. § 1898.

Punitive statute. See that title.

Real statutes. In the civil law. Statutes which have principally for their object property, and which do not speak of persons, except in relation to property. Story, Confl. Laws, § 13; Saul v. His Creditors, 5 Mart. N.S. (La.) 582, 16 Am.Dec. 212.

Reference statutes. See that title.

Remedial statute. See Remedial.

Revised statutes. A body of statutes which have been revised, collected, arranged in order, and re-enacted as a whole; this is the legal title of the collections of compiled laws of several of the states and also of the United States.

Special statute. One which operates only upon particular persons and private concerns. 1 Bl.
Comm. 86. Distinguished from a general or public statute.

Statute fair. In English law. A fair at which laborers of both sexes stood and offered themselves for hire; sometimes called also "Mop."

Statute-merchant. In English law. A security for a debt acknowledged to be due, entered into before the chief magistrate of some trading town, pursuant to the statute 13 Edw. I. De Mercatori-bus, by which not only the body of the debtor might be imprisoned, and his goods seized in satisfaction of the debt, but also his lands might be delivered to the creditor till out of the rents and profits of them the debt be satisfied. 2 Bl.

statute 13 Eliz. c. 5, against conveyances made in fraud of creditors.

Statute of frauds. See Frauds, Statute of.

Statute of Gloucester. In English law. The statute 6 Edw. I. c. 1, A.D. 1278. It takes its name from the place of its enactment, and was the first statute giving costs in actions. 3 Bl. Comm.
399.

Statute of laborers. See Laborer.

Statute of limitations. See Limitation.

Statute of uses. See Use.

Statute of wills. In English law. The statute 32 Hen. VIII. c. 1, which enacted that all persons being seised in fee-simple (except femmes covert, infiants, idiots, and persons of non-sane memory might, by will and testament in writing, devise to any other person, except to bodies corporate, two-thirds of their lands, tenements, and hereditaments, held in chivalry, and the whole of those held in socage. 2 Bl. Comm. 375.

Statute roll. A roll upon which an English statute, after receiving the royal assent, was formerly entered.

Statute staple. See Staple.

Statutes at large. Statutes printed in full and in the order of their enactment, in a collected form, as distinguished from any digest, revision, abridgement, or compilation of them. Thus the volumes of "United States Statutes at Large," contain all the acts of congress in their order.
The name is also given to an authentic collection of the various statutes which have been passed by the British parliament from very early times to the present day.

Statutes of amendments and jeofailes. Statutes whereby a pleader who perceives any slip in the form of his proceedings, and acknowledges the error (jeofaile), is permitted to amend. State ex rel. Smith v. Trimble, 315 Mo. 166, 285 S.W. 729, 731.

Temporary statute. One which is limited in its duration at the time of its enactment. It continues in force until the time of its limitation has expired, unless sooner repealed. A statute which by reason of its nature has only a single and temporary operation—e. g., an appropriation bill—is also called a temporary statute.

Validating statute. See that title.

STATUTE, v. In old Scotch law. To ordain, establish, or decree.

STATUTES IN DEROGATION OF COMMON LAW MUST BE STRICTLY CONSTRUED. Cooley, Const. Lim. 75, note; Arthurs, Appeal of, 1

Grant Cas. (Pa.) 57.

STATUTI. Lat. In Roman law. Licensed or registered advocates; members of the college of advocates. The number of these was limited, and they enjoyed special privileges from the time of Constantine to that of Justinian.

STATUTORY. Relating to a statute; created or defined by a statute; required by a statute; conforming to a statute.

STATUTORY BOND. One that either literally or substantially meets requirements of statute.
Southern Surety Co. v. United States Cast Iron

STATUTORY CRIME. See Crime.

STATUTORY DEDICATION. See Dedication.

STATUTORY EXPOSITION. When the language of a statute is ambiguous, and any subsequent enactment involves a particular interpretation of the former act, it is said to contain a statutory exposition of the former act. Wharton.

STATUTORY FORECLOSURE. See Foreclosure.

STATUTORY OBLIGATION. An obligation—whether to pay money, perform certain acts, or discharge certain duties—which is created by or arises out of a statute, as distinguished from one founded upon acts between parties or jural relationships.

STATUTUM. Lat. Established; determined.

In the Civil law. A term applied to judicial action. Dig. 50, 16, 46, pr.

In old English law. A statute; an act of parliament.

STATUTUM DE MERCATORIBUS. The statute of Acton Burnell, (q. v.).

STATUTUM EX GRATIA REGIS DICITUR, QUANDO REX DIGNATUR CEDERE DE JURE SUO REGIO, PRO COMMODO ET QUIETE POPULI SUI. 2 Inst. 378. A statute is said to be by the grace of the king, when the king deigns to yield some portion of his royal rights for the good and quiet of his people.

STATUTUM GENERALITER EST INTELLIGENDUM QUANDO VERBA STATUTI SUNT SPECIALIA, RATIO AUTEM GENERALIS. When the words of a statute are special, but the reason of it general, the statute is to be understood generally. 10 Coke, 101.

STATUTUM HIBERNIZE DE COHAEREDIBUS. The statute 14 Hen. III. The third public act in the statute-book. It has been pronounced not to be a statute. In the form of it, it appears to be an instruction given by the king to his justices in Ireland, directing them how to proceed in a certain point where they entertained a doubt. It seems the justices itinerant in that country had a doubt, when land descended to sisters, whether the younger sisters ought to hold of the eldest, and do homage to her for their several portions, or of the chief lord, and do homage to him; and certain knights had been sent over to know what the practice was in England in such a case. 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, 259.

STATUTUM SESSIONUM. In old English law. The statute session; a meeting in every hundred of constables and householders, by custom, for the ordering of servants, and debating of differences between masters and servants, rating of wages, etc. 5 Eliz. c. 4.

STATUTUM WALLIÆ. The statute of Wales. The title of a statute passed in the twelfth year of Edw. I, being a sort of constitution for the principality of Wales, which was thereby, in a great measure, put on the footing of England with respect to its laws and the administration of justice. 2 Reeve, Eng. Law, 93, 94.

STEAL. This term is commonly used in indictments for larceny, ("take, steal, and carry away,") and denotes the commission of theft, that is, the felonious taking and carrying away of the personal property of another, and without right and without leave or consent of owner. People v. Surace, 295 Ill. 604, 129 N.E. 504, 506; State v.
STEALING

STEALING CHILDREN. See Kidnapping.

STEALTH. Theft is so called by some ancient writers. "Stealth is the wrongful taking of goods without pretense of title." Finch, Law, b. 3, c. 17.

STEAM FITTER. A workman who installs steam pipes, their fittings, etc. Warburton-Beacham Supply Co. v. City of Jackson, 151 Miss. 503, 118 So. 606, 608.

STEELBOW GOODS. In Scotch law. Corn, cattle, straw, and implements of husbandry delivered by a landlord to his tenant, by which the tenant is enabled to stock and labor the farm; in consideration of which he becomes bound to return articles equal in quantity and quality, at the expiry of the lease. Bell.

STEERER. One who gains the confidence of the person intended to be fleeced and who may be said to steer or lead the victim to the place where the latter is to be robbed or swindled. Barron v. Board of Dental Examiners of California, 109 Cal. App. 382, 293 P. 144, 145.

STELLIONATAIRE. Fr. In French law. A party who fraudulently mortgages property to which he has no title.

STELLIONATE. In civil law. A name given generally to all species of frauds committed in making contracts but particularly to the crime of alienating the same subject to different persons. 2 Kames, Eq. 40.

STELLIONATUS. Lat. In the civil law. A general name for any kind of fraud not falling under any specific class. But the term is chiefly applied to fraud practiced in the sale or pledging of property; as, selling the same property to two different persons, selling another’s property as one’s own, placing a second mortgage on property without disclosing the existence of the first, etc.

STENOGRAPHER. One who is skilled in the art of short-hand writing; one whose business is to write in short-hand. See Rynerson v. Allison, 30 S.C. 534, 9 S.E. 656; In re Appropriations for Deputy State Officers, 25 Neb. 662, 41 N.W. 643; Chase v. Vandergrift, 88 Pa. 217.

STEP. When used as prefix in conjunction with a degree of kinship, is repugnant to blood relationship, and is indicative of a relationship by affinity. Grossenbacher v. State, 49 Ohio App. 451, 197 N.E. 382, 383.

STEP-CHILD. The child of one of the spouses by a former marriage. Dangerfield v. Indemnity Ins. Co., La.App., 19 So.2d 598, 600.

STEP-DOWN TRANSFORMER. An induction coil or a transformer so constructed that there is a higher voltage in the primary current than in the secondary current. General Electric Co. v. Butler Light, Heat & Motor Co., D.C.Pa., 205 F. 42, 44.

STEP-FATHER. The husband of one’s mother by virtue of a marriage subsequent to that of which the person spoken of is the offspring. Larsen v. Harris Structural Steel Co., 230 App.Div. 280, 243 N.Y.S. 654, 655. The husband of one’s mother by virtue of a marriage subsequent to that of which person spoken of is the offspring. Sharp v. Borough of Vineland, 14 N.J.Misc. 256, 183 A. 911, 912.

STEP-MOTHER. The wife of one’s father by virtue of a marriage subsequent to that of which the person spoken of is the offspring. Sharp v. Borough of Vineland, 14 N.J.Misc. 256, 183 A. 911, 912.

STEP-SON. The son of one’s wife by a former husband, or of one’s husband by a former wife.

STEP-UP TRANSFORMER. An induction coil or a transformer so constructed that there is a higher voltage in the secondary current than in the primary current. General Electric Co. v. Butler Light, Heat & Motor Co., D.C.Pa., 205 F. 42, 44.

STERBRECHE, or STREBRICH. The breaking, obstructing, or straitening of a way. Termes de la Ley.

STRRE. A French measure of solidity, used in measuring wood. It is a cubic meter.

STERILITY. Barrenness; unfruitfulness; incapacity to germinate or reproduce.

STERLING. In English law. Current or standard coin, especially silver coin; a standard of coinage.

STET BILLA. If the plaintiff in a plaint in the mayor’s court of London has attached property belonging to the defendant and obtained execution against the garnishee, the defendant, if he wishes to contest the plaintiff’s claim, and obtain restoration of his property, must issue a scire facias disprobandum debitum; if the only question to be tried is the plaintiff's debt, the plaintiff in appearing to the scire facias prays stet billa "that his bill original," i. e., his original plaint, "may stand, and that the defendant may plead there-to." The action then proceeds in the usual way as if the proceedings in attachment (which are founded on a fictitious default of the defendant in appearing to the plaint) had not taken place. Brand, F. Attachm. 115; Sweet.

STET PROCESSUS. An entry on the roll in the nature of a judgment directed that all further proceedings shall be stayed, (i. e., that the process may stand,) and it is one of the ways by which a suit may be terminated by an act of the party, as distinguished from a termination of it by judgment, which is the act of the court. It was used by the plaintiff when he wished to suspend the action without suffering a nonsuit. Brown.

STICK UP. Rob at the point of a gun. White v. State, 219 Ind. 290, 37 N.E.2d 937, 940.

STICKLER. (1) An inferior officer who cuts wood within the royal parks of Clarendon. Cowell. (2) An arbitrator. (3) An obstinate contender about anything.

STIFLING A PROSECUTION. Agreeing, in consideration of receiving a pecuniary or other advantage, to abstain from prosecuting a person for an offense not giving rise to a civil remedy; e. g., perjury. Sweet.

STILL. Any device used for separating alcoholic spirits from fermented substances. Moore v. State, 154 Ark. 13, 240 S.W. 1083, 1084; Davis v. State, 102 Tex.Cr.R. 546, 278 S.W. 848, 849. The word is sometimes applied to the whole apparatus for evaporation and condensation used in the manufacture of ardent spirits, but in the description of the parts of the apparatus it is applied merely to the vessel or retort used for boiling and evaporation of the liquid. Hodgkiss v. State, 156 Ark. 340, 246 S.W. 506, 507.

STILL WORM. The tube or coil used for condensation of the vapor which is passed through it from boiling mash for the purpose of being distilled into whisky. Rosslot v. State, 162 Ark. 340, 258 S.W. 348.

STILLBORN CHILD. A child born dead or in such an early stage of pregnancy as to be incapable of living, though not actually dead at the time of birth. Children born within the first six months after conception are considered by the civil law as incapable of living, and therefore, though they are apparently born alive, if they do not in fact survive so long as to rebut this presumption of law, they cannot inherit, so as to transmit the property to others. Marsellis v. Thalhimer, 2 Paige (N.Y.) 41, 21 Am.Dec. 66.

STILLICIDIIUM. Lat. In the civil law. The drip of water from the eaves of a house. The servitude stillicidii consists in the right to have the water drip from one's eaves upon the house or ground of another. The term "fiumen" designated the rain-water collected from the roof, and carried off by the gutters, and there is a similar easement of having it discharged upon the adjoining estate. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 317, par. 4.

STINT. In English law. Limit; a limited number. Used as descriptive of a species of common. See Common sans Nombre.

In English and Scotch law. A provision made for the support of the clergy.
STIPENDIARY

STIPENDIARY ESTATES. Estates granted in return for services, generally of a military kind. 1 Steph.Comm. 174.

STIPENDIARY MAGISTRATES. In English law. Paid magistrates; appointed in London and some other cities and boroughs, and having in general the powers and jurisdiction of justices of the peace.

STIPENDIUM. Lat. In the civil law. The pay of a soldier; wages; stipend. Calvin.

STEMS. Lat. In old English law. Stock; a source of descent or title. Communis stipes, the common stock. Fleta, lib. 6, c. 2.

STIPITATE. Relating to stipes, roots, or stocks. "Stipital distribution" of property is distribution Ter stipes; that is, by right of representation.

STIPULATED DAMAGE. Liquidated damage, (q. v.).

STIPULATE. Arrange or settle definitely, as an agreement or covenant. Mennen Co. v. Krauss Co., D.C.La., 37 F.Supp. 161, 163.

STIPULATIO. Lat. In the Roman law, stipulatio was the verbal contract, (verbis obligatio,) and was the most solemn and formal of all the contracts in that system of jurisprudence. It was entered into by question and corresponding answer thereto, by the parties, both being present at the same time, and usually by such words as "spondes? spondeo," "promittis? promitto," and the like. Brown.

STIPULATIO AQUILIANA. A particular application of the stipulatio, which was used to collect together into one verbal contract all the liabilities of every kind and quality of the debtor, with a view to their being released or discharged by an acceptilatio, that mode of discharge being applicable only to the verbal contract. Brown.

STIPULATION. A material article in an agreement.

The name given to any agreement made by the attorneys engaged on opposite sides of a cause, (especially if in writing,) regulating any matter incidental to the proceedings or trial, which falls within their jurisdiction. Such, for instance, are agreements to extend the time for pleading, to take depositions, to waive objections, to admit certain facts, to continue the cause. See Lewis v. Orpheus, 15 F.Cas. 492; Southern Colonization Co. v. Howard Cole & Co., 185 Wis. 469, 201 N.W. 817, 819.

Practice

An agreement between counsel respecting business before the court. It is not binding unless assented to by the parties or their representatives, and most stipulations are required to be in writing. Holland Banking Co. v. Continental Nat. Bank of Jackson County, Kansas City, Mo., D.C. Mo., 9 F.Supp. 988, 989.

"Stipulations" are of two types: First, those relating to merely precdural matters; and, second, those which have all essential characteristics of mutual contract. Paine v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co., 217 Wis. 601, 258 N.W. 846.

Admiralty Practice

A recognition of certain persons (called in the old law "fide iussors") in the nature of bail for the appearance of a defendant. 3 Bl.Comm. 108.

STIPULATOR. In the civil law. The party who asked the question in the contract of stipulation; the other party, or he who answered, being called the "promissor." But, in a more general sense, the term was applied to both the parties. Calvin.

STIRPES. Lat. Descents. The root-stem, or stock of a tree. Figuratively, it signifies in law that person from whom a family is descended, and also the kindred or family. Taking property by right of representation is called "succession per stirpes," in opposition to taking in one's own right, or as a principal, which is termed "taking per capita." Rotmanskey v. Heiss, 86 Md. 633, 39 A. 415. See, also, Per Stirpes and Representation.

STOCK.

Mercantile Law

In a larger sense. The capital of a merchant or other person, including his merchandise, money, and credits, or, in other words, the entire property employed in business.

Corporation Law

The term is used in various senses. It may mean the capital or principal fund of a corporation or joint-stock company, formed by the contributions of subscribers or the sale of shares; the aggregate of a certain number of shares severally owned by the members or stockholders of the corporation or the proportional share of an individual stockholder; also the incorporeal property which is represented by the holding of a certificate of stock; and in a wider and more remote sense, the right of a shareholder to participate in the general management of the Company and to share proportionally in its net profits or earnings or in the distribution of assets on dissolution, the term "stock" has also been held to embrace not only capital stock of a corporation but all corporate wealth and resources, subject to all corporate liabilities and obligations. Whitman v. Consoli-dated Gas, Electric Light & Power Co. of Balti-more, 148 Md. 90, 129 A. 22, 27. See also Thayer v. Wathen, 17 Tex.Civ.App. 382, 44 S.W. 906; Har-rison v. Vines, 46 Tex. 15; Seawright v. Dickson, 16 Ga.App. 436, 85 S.E. 625, 628; Hood Rubber Co. v. Commonwealth, 238 Mass. 369, 131 N.E. 201, 202.

"Stock" is distinguished from "bonds" and, ordinarily, from "debentures," in that it gives right of ownership in part of assets of corporation and right to interest in any surplus after payment of debt. Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co. v. Duffy-Powers, Inc., D.C.N.Y., 9 F.Supp. 199, 201.
The capital stock of a corporation differs widely in legal import from the aggregate shares into which it is divided by its charter (Farrington v. Tennessee, 95 U.S. 686, 24 L. Ed. 558; People v. Coleman, 126 N.Y. 437, 27 N.E. 818, 12 L.R.A. 762); the former includes only the fund of money or other property derived by it from the sale or exchange of its shares of stock, while the latter represents the totality of the corporate assets and property; Hamor v. Engineering Co., C.C.Del., 84 F. 396. See “Capital Stock.”

The funded indebtedness of a state or government, also, is often represented by stocks, shares of which are held by its creditors at interest.

Classes of Corporate Stock

Preferred stock is a separate portion or class of the stock of a corporation, which is accorded, by the charter or by-laws, a preference or priority in respect to dividends, over the remainder of the stock of the corporation, which in that case is called common stock. That is, holders of the preferred stock are entitled to receive dividends at a fixed annual rate, out of the net earnings or profits of the corporation, before any distribution of earnings is made to the common stock. If the earnings applicable to the payment of dividends are not more than sufficient for such fixed annual dividend, they will be entirely absorbed by the preferred stock. If they are more than sufficient for the purpose, the remainder may be given entirely to the common stock (which is the more usual custom) or such remainder may be distributed pro rata to both classes of the stock, in which case the preferred stock is said to "participate" with the common. The fixed dividend on preferred stock may be "cumulative" or "non-cumulative." In the former case, if the stipulated dividend on preferred stock is not earned or paid in any one year, it becomes a charge upon the surplus earnings of the next and succeeding years, and all such accumulated and unpaid dividends on the preferred stock must be paid off before the common stock is entitled to receive dividends. In the case of "non-cumulative" preferred stock, its preference for any given year is extinguished by the failure to earn or pay its dividend in that year. If a corporation has no class of preferred stock, all its stock is common stock. The word "common" in this connection signifies that all the holders of such stock are entitled to an equal pro rata division of profits or net earnings, if any there be, without any preference or priority among themselves. Deferred stock is rarely issued by American corporations, though it is not uncommon in England. This kind of stock is distinguished by the fact that the payment of dividends upon it is expressly postponed until some other class of stock has received a dividend, or until some certain liability or obligation of the corporation is discharged. If there is a class of "preferred" stock, the common stock may in this sense be said to be "deferred," and the term is sometimes used as equivalent to "common" stock. But it is not impossible that a corporation should have three classes of stock: (1) Preferred, (2) common, and (3) deferred; the latter class being postponed, in respect to participation in profits, until both the preferred and the common stock had received dividends at a fixed rate. See Cook, Corp. § 12; Scott v. Railroad Co., 93 Md. 475, 49 A. 327; Jones v. Railroad Co., 67 N.H. 234, 30 A. 614, 68 Am.St.Rep. 650; General Inv. Co. v. Bethlehem Steel Corp., 87 N.J.Eq. 234, 100 A. 347, 349; Day v. U. S. Cast Iron Pipe & Foundry Co., 96 N.J.Eq. 736, 126 A. 302, 304.

Law of Descent

The term is used, metaphorically, to denote the original progenitor of a family, or the ancestor from whom the persons in question are all descended; such descendants being called "branch es." Matter of Samson's Estate, 139 Misc. 490, 249 N.Y.S. 79, 83.

General Capital stock. See that title.

Certificate of stock. See Certificate.

Exchange of stock. See Exchange.

Guarantied stock. Stock of a corporation which is entitled to receive dividends at a fixed annual rate, the payment of which dividends is guarantied by some outside person or corporation. Field v. Lamson, etc., Mfg. Co., 162 Mass. 388, 38 N.E. 1126, 27 L.R.A. 136.

Public stocks. The funded or bonded debt of a government or state.

Special stock of a corporation, in Massachusetts, is authorized by statute. It is limited in amount to two-fifths of the actual capital. It is subject to redemption by the corporation at par after a fixed time. The corporation is bound to pay a fixed annual dividend on it as a debt. The holders of it are in no event liable for the debts of the corporation beyond their stock; and an issue of special stock makes all the general stockholders, liable for all debts and contracts of the corporation until the special stock is fully redeemed. American Tube Works v. Boston Mach. Co., 139 Mass. 5, 29 N.E. 63.

Stock association. A joint-stock company, (q. v.).

Stock corporation. A corporation having a capital stock divided into shares, and which is authorized by law to distribute to the holders thereof dividends or shares of the surplus profits of the corporation. Bucker v. Steele, Co.Ct., 43 N. Y.S. 350.

Stock dividend. See Dividend.

Stock exchange. A voluntary association of persons (not usually a corporation) who, for convenience in the transaction of business with each other, have associated themselves to provide a common place for the transaction of their business; an association of stock-brokers. Dos Passos, Stock-Brok. 14. The building or room used by an association of stock-brokers for meeting for the transaction of their common business.

Stock hi trade. Merchandise or goods kept for sale or traffic, Woodworth & Co. v. City of Concord, 78 N.H. 54, 96 A. 296, 297; Shasta Lumber Co. v. McCoy, 85 Cal.App. 468, 259 P. 965, 967, also that form of property owned by a craftsman upon which he exercises his art, skill, or workmanship, and upon which he uses the tools of his trade or business. Armstrong Turner Millinery Co. v. Round, 106 Kan. 146, 186 P. 979, 9 A.L.R. 1255.

Stock law district. A district in which stock, is by law prohibited from running at large. Griffin v. Fowler, 17 Ala.App. 44, 81 So. 426, 428.

Stock life insurance company. One in which capital stock investment is made by subscribers to stock, and business is thereafter conducted by board of directors elected by its stockholders, and, subject to statutes, distribution of earnings or profits, as between stockholders and policy holders, is determined by board of directors. Atlantic Life Ins. Co. v. Moncure, D.C.Va., 35 F.2d 360, 362.

Stock note. The term has no technical meaning, and may as well apply to a note given on the sale of stock which the bank had purchased or taken in the payment of doubtful debts as to a note given on account of an original subscription to stock. Dunlap v. Smith, 12 Ill. 402.

Watered stock. See that title.

Owner of shares in a corporation which has a capital stock. If a corporation has no capital stock, the corporators and their successors are called “members.” Civ.Code Dak. § 392 (Comp. Laws N.D.1913, § 4515; Rev.Code 1919, § 247).

STOCKHOLDER’S DERIVATIVE SUIT. An equity proceeding by a stockholder for purpose of sustaining in his own name a right of action existing in corporation itself, where corporation would be an appropriate plaintiff. Felsenheld v. Bloch Bros. Tobacco Co., 119 W.Va. 167, 192 S.E. 545, 546, 123 A.L.R. 334. It is based upon two distinct wrongs: The act whereby corporation was caused to suffer damage, and act of corporation itself in refusing to redress such act. Druckerman v. Harbord, 174 Misc. 1077, 22 N.Y.S.2d 595, 597.

STOCKHOLDER’S LIABILITY. Phrase is frequently employed to denote stockholder’s statutory, added or double liability for corporation’s debts, notwithstanding full payment for stock, but is often employed where stockholder, agreeing to pay full par value of stock, obtained stock certificate before complete payment or where stock, only partly paid for, is intentionally issued by corporation as fully paid up and all or part of ‘purported consideration therefor is entirely fictitious. Gray Const. Co. v. Fantle, 62 S.D. 345, 253 N.W. 464.

STOCKHOLDER’S SUIT. One by the corporation conducted by stockholder as its representative, and the stockholder is only a nominal plaintiff and the corporation is the real party in interest. Rettinger v. Pierpont, 145 Neb. 161, 15 N.W. 393, 397. See, also, Derivative Stockholders’ Suit.

STOCKS. A machine consisting of two pieces of timber, arranged to be fastened together, and holding fast the legs of a person placed in it. This was an ancient method of punishment.

STOP. Within a statute requiring a motorist striking a person with automobile to stop requires a definite cessation of movement for a sufficient length of time for a person of ordinary powers of observation to fully understand the surroundings of the accident. Moore v. State, 140 Tex.Cr. R. 482, 145 S.W.2d 887, 888.

STOP ORDER. The name of an order grantable in English chancery practice, to prevent drawing out a fund in court to the prejudice of an assignee or lienholder.

STOP SIGN. A legally erected and maintained traffic signal requiring all traffic to stop before entering into or crossing an intersection. Sweet v. Awtrey, 70 Ga.App. 334, 28 S.E.2d 154, 161.

STOPPAGE. In the civil law. Compensation or set-off.

STOPPAGE IN TRANSITU. The act by which the unpaid vendor of goods stops their progress and resumes possession of them, while they are in course of transit from him to the purchaser, and not yet actually delivered to the latter.

The right of stoppage in transitus is that which the vendor has, when he sells goods on credit to another, of resuming the possession of the goods while they are in the possession of a carrier or middle-man, in the transit to the consignee or vendee, and before they arrive into his actual possession, or the destination he has appointed for them on his becoming bankrupt and insolvent. 2 Kent, Comm. 702.

The right which arises to an unpaid vendor to resume the possession, with which he has parted, of goods sold upon credit, before they come into the possession of a buyer who has become insolvent, bankrupt, or pecuniarily embarrassed. In-slee v. Lane, 57 N.H. 454.

The right of stoppage in transitus continues during the transitus, that is, until the goods are delivered by the carrier to the buyer, or possession, actual or constructive, is taken by the buyer. M. Degaro Co. v. Cleveland, C., C. & St. L. Ry. Co., 123 Ohio St. 179, 174 N.E. 587, 590.

STOPPAGE OF WORK. Within unemployment compensation law denying workman benefits, if his unemployment was due to stoppage of work because of labor dispute in which workman participated means strike. Board of Review v. Mid-Continent Petroleum Corporation, 193 Okl. 36, 141 P.2d 69, 71 72.

STORE, v. To keep merchandise for safe custody, to be delivered in the same condition as when received, where the safe-keeping is the principal object of deposit, and not the consumption or sale. O’Niel v. Buffalo F. Ins. Co., 3 N.Y. 122. Town of Newberry v. Dorrah, 105 S.C. 28, 89 S.E. 402, 403.

Public Store

A government warehouse, maintained for certain administrative purposes, such as the keeping of military supplies, the storing of imported goods under bonds to pay duty, etc.

Stores

The supplies of different articles provided for the subsistence and accommodation of a ship’s crew and passengers.

STOREHOUSE. A house in which things are stored; a building for the storing of grain, food-stuffs, or goods of any kind; a magazine; a repository; a warehouse; a store. Moss v. Commonwealth, 271 Ky. 283, 111 S.W.2d 628, 630.

STOREROOM. A room in an apartment or flat house set apart and having conveniences such as shelves, hooks, etc., for storage purposes, and is not, for instance, a bedroom used by the tenant in part for storing his goods. Gardner v. Roosevelt Hotel, 175 Misc. 610, 24 N.Y.S.2d 261, 263.

STOUTHRIEFF. In Scotch law. Formerly this word included every species of theft accompanied with violence to the person, but of late years it has become the vox signata for forcible and masterful depredation within or near the dwelling-house; while robbery has been more particularly applied to violent depredation on the highway, or accompanied by house-breaking. Alis. Prin. Scotch Law, 227.

STOWAGE. In maritime law. The storing, packing, or arranging of the cargo in a ship, in such a manner as to protect the goods from friction, uising, or damage from leakage.

Money paid for a room where goods are laid; housage. Wharton.

STOWE. In old English law. A valley. Co.Litt. 4b.

STRADDLE. In stock-brokers’ parlance the term means the double privilege of a “put” and a “call,” and secures to the holder the right to demand of the seller at a certain price within a certain time a certain number of shares of specified stock, or to require him to take, at the same price within the same time, the same shares of stock. Harris v. Tumbridge, 83 N.Y. 95, 38 Am.Rep. 398; Henderson v. Usher, 125 Fla. 709, 170 So. 846, 852.

It is not per se a gaming contract, unless intended as a mere cover for a bet or wager on the future price of the stock or commodity. Palmer v. Love, 18 Tenn.App. 579, 80 S.W.2d 100, 106.

STRAGGLER. In Navy Department regulations. One absent without leave, with the probability that he does not intend to desert, but, if his absence continues for 10 days, he becomes a deserter. Reed v. U. S., C.C.A.N.Y., 252 F. 21, 22.

STRAIGHT LINE. The shortest distance between two points. Reed v. Iowa State Highway Commission, 221 Iowa 500, 266 N.W. 47, 50.

STRAIGHT-LINE DEPRECIATION. Division of original cost into as many years as the property would remain in service and deduction of that fraction of the cost for every past year. United States Industrial Alcohol Co. v. Helvering, C.C.A. 2, 137 F.2d 511, 516.

In estimating deterioration in a plant. Calculation from examination and experience in like constructions the total life period of the constituent parts of the plant, and then deducting from their value that proportion of decrease represented by the ratio of the years which it has been in use in relation to the entire life period as distinguished from the “sinking-fund method” which consists in charging for depreciation an annual sum, which, with compounding interest thereon, will at the termination of the estimated life of the investment replace the original cost, and if cut off at any given period the accumulation will represent the depreciated value to that date. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. v. Devlin, 188 Cal. 33, 203 P. 1058, 1062; People ex rel. Central Hudson Gas & Electric Co. v. State Tax Commission, 218 App.Div. 44, 217 N.Y.S. 707, 712.

STRAMINEUS HOMO. L. Lat. A man of straw, one of no substance, put forward as bail or surety.

STRANGER. As used with reference to the subject of subrogation, one who, in no event resulting from the existing state of affairs, can become liable for the debt, and whose property is not charged with the payment thereof and cannot be sold therefor. McBride v. McBride, 148 Or. 330, 331, 332. See, also, Strangers.

STRANGER IN BLOOD. Any person not within the consideration of natural love and affection arising from relationship.

STRANGERS. By this term is intended third persons generally. Thus the persons bound by a fine are parties, privies, and strangers; the parties are either the cognizors or cognizees; the privies are such as are in any way related to those who levy the fine, and claim under them by any right of blood, or other right of representation; the strangers are all other persons in the world, except only the parties and privies. In its general legal signification the term is opposed to the word “privy.” Those who are in no way parties to a covenant, nor bound by it, are also said to be strangers to the covenant. Brown. See Robbins v. Chicago, 4 Wall. 672, 18 L.Ed. 427; Wilson v. Smith, 213 Ky. 836, 281 S.W. 1008, 1010; State v. Mills, 23 N.M. 549,169 P. 1171, 1173; Gronewold v. Gronewold, 304 Ill. 11, 136 N.E. 489, 490. See, also, Stranger.

STRATAGEM. A deception either by words or actions, in times of war, in order to obtain an advantage over an enemy.

STRATOCRACY. A military government; government by military chiefs of an army.

STRATOR. In old English law. A surveyor of the “sinking-fund method” which consists in charging for depreciation an annual sum, which, with compounding interest thereon, will at the termination of the estimated life of the investment replace the original cost, and if cut off at any given period the accumulation will represent the depreciated value to that date. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. v. Devlin, 188 Cal. 33, 203 P. 1058, 1062; People ex rel. Central Hudson Gas & Electric Co. v. State Tax Commission, 218 App.Div. 44, 217 N.Y.S. 707, 712.

SUBSORNER. One who suborns or procures another to commit perjury. Steph.Crim.Law, 74.

SUBREPTIO. In French law. The fraud committed to obtain a pardon, title, or grant, by alleging facts contrary to truth.

SUBROGATION. The substitution of one person in the place of another with reference to a lawful claim, demand or right, Whyl v. Smith, 101 Fla. 971, 134 So. 552, 554; so that he who is substituted succeeds to the rights of the other in relation to the debt or claim, and its rights, remedies, or securities. Home Owners’ Loan Corporation v. Baker, 299 Mass. 158, 12 N.E.2d 199, 201; Gerken v. Davidson Grocery Co., 57 Idaho 670, 69 P.2d 122, 126. A legal fiction through which a person who, not as a volunteer or in his own wrong, and in absence of outstanding and superior equities, pays debt of another, is substituted to all rights and remedies of the other, and the debt is treated in equity as still existing for his benefit, and the doctrine is broad enough to include every instance in which one party pays the debt for which another is primarily answerable, and which in equity and good conscience should have been discharged by such other. Home Owners’ Loan Corporation v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 123 Conn. 232, 193 A. 769, 772. The principle which lies at the bottom of the doctrine is that the person seeking it must have paid the debt under grave necessity to save himself a loss. The right is never accorded to a volunteer. Callan Court Co. v. Citizens & Southern Nat. Bank, 184 Ga. 87, 190 S.E. 831, 856.

"Subrogation" is equitable remedy borrowed from civil law. Ierardi v. Farmers’ Trust Co. of Newark, 4 W.W. Harr. Del., 246, 151 A. 822, 825. And as a matter of right, independently of agreement, takes place only for the benefit of insurers; or of one who, being himself a creditor, has satisfied the lien of a prior creditor; or for the benefit of a purchaser who has extinguished an incumbrance upon the estate which he has purchased; or of a co-obligor or surety who has paid the debt which ought, in whole or in part, to have been met by another. The doctrine of "subrogation" is not applied for the benefit of the co-obligor or volunteer who has paid the debt of another without any assignment or agreement for subrogation, without being under any legal obligation to make the payment, and without being compelled to do so for the preservation of any

The writ of subpoena was originally proceeding in courts of common law to enforce attendance of witness, but was used in chancery for same purpose as citation in courts of civil and canon law, to compel appearance of defendant and to require him to answer plaintiff’s allegations on oath. Gondas v. Gondas, 99 N.J.Eq. 473, 134 A. 615, 618.

SUBPOENA DUCES TECUM. A process by which the court, at the instances of a suitor, commands a witness who has in his possession or control some document or paper that is pertinent to the issues of a pending controversy, to produce it at the trial. State ex rel. Everglades Cypress Co. v. Smith, 104 Fla. 91, 139 So. 794; Ex parte Hart, 240 Ala. 642, 200 So. 783, 785.

SUBPOENA. (Lat. Sub, under, poena, penalty). A mandatory writ or process directed to and used in chancery for same purpose as citation in courts of civil and canon law, to compel appearance of defendant and to require him to answer plaintiff’s allegations on oath. Gondas v. Gondas, 99 N.J.Eq. 473, 134 A. 615, 618.

This is called distinctively a subpoena ad testificandum.

Chancery Practice

A mandatory writ or process directed to and requiring one or more persons to appear at a time to come and answer the matters charged against him or them. Gondas v. Gondas, 99 N.J.Eq. 473, 134 A. 615, 618.

It is also said that its elements are: (1) That party claiming it shall have paid debt; (2) that he was not a volunteer, but had a direct interest in discharge of debt or lien; (3) that he was secondarily liable for debt or discharge of lien; (4) that no injustice would be done to the other party by allowance of the equity. Hampton Loan & Exchange Bank v. Lightsey, 155 S.C. 222, 152 S.E. 425, 427.

Subrogation is of two kinds, either conventional or legal; the former being where the subrogation is express, by the acts of the creditor and the third person; the latter being (as in the case of sureties) where the subrogation is effected or implied by the operation of the law. Gordon v. Stewart, 4 Neb., Unof., 852, 96 N.W. 628; Connecticut Mut. Ins. Co. v. Cornell, 72 Hun, 199, 25 N.Y.S. 348; French v. Grand Beach Co., 239 Mich. 575, 215 N.W. 13, 14; Meyer v. Florida Home Finders, 90 Fla. 128, 105 So. 267, 268; Combs v. Agee, 148 Va. 471, 139 S.E. 265, 266.

SUBROGEE. A person who is subrogated; one who succeeds to the rights of another by subrogation.

SUBSCRIBE. Literally to write underneath, as one's name; sub, under; scribere, to write; or, to write below a documentary statement, and in its popular meaning is usually limited to a signature at the end of a printed or written instrument. Corporation Commission of North Carolina v. Wilkinson, 201 N.C. 344, 160 S.E. 292, 294. In re Arcow's Will, 171 Mass. 41, 11 N.Y.S.2d 853, 854. Also to agree in writing to furnish money or its equivalent. Jefferson County Farm Bureau v. Sherman, 208 Iowa 614, 226 N.W. 182, 185.

SUBSCRIBER. One who writes his name under a written instrument; one who affixes his signature to any document, whether for the purpose of authenticating or attesting it, of adopting its terms as his own expressions, or of binding himself by an engagement which it contains.

One who becomes bound by a subscription to the capital stock of a corporation. Latimer v. Bennett, 37 Ga.App. 246, 139 S.E. 570, 572. A "subscriber" is one who has agreed to take stock from the corporation on the original issue of such stock. Jones v. Rankin, 19 N.M. 56, 140 P. 1120, 1121. "Subscriber," as used in the Workmen's Compensation Act, means an employer who has become a member of the association or insured under the act. In re Cox, 225 Mass. 220, 114 N.E. 281, 283.

SUBSCRIBING WITNESS. He who witnesses or attests the signature of a party to an instrument, and in testimony thereof subscribes his own name to the document.

One who sees a writing executed, or hears it acknowledged, and at the request of the party thereupon signs his name as a witness.

SUBSCRIPTIO. Lat. In the civil law. A writing under, or under-writing; a writing of the name under or at the bottom of an instrument by way of attestation or ratification; subscription.

That kind of imperial constitution which was granted in answer to the prayer of a petitioner who was present. Calvin.

SUBSCRIPTION. The act of writing one's name under a written instrument; the affixing one's signature to any document, whether for the purpose of authenticating or attesting it, of adopting its terms as one's own expressions, or of binding one's self by an engagement which it contains.

Subscription is the act of the hand, while attestation is the act of the senses. To subscribe a paper published as a will is only to write on the same paper the name of the witness; to attest a will is to know that it was published as such, and to certify the facts required to constitute an actual and legal publication. In re Downie's Will, 42 Wis. 66, 76.

A written contract by which one engages to take and pay for capital stock of a corporation, or to contribute a sum of money for a designated purpose, either gratuitously, as in the case of subscribing to a charity, or in consideration of, an equivalent to be rendered, as a subscription to a periodical, a forthcoming book, a series of entertainments, or the like. Davis v. Roney, 124 Kan. 132, 257 P. 746, 747; First Caldwell Oil Co. v. Hunt, 100 N.J.L. 308, 127 A. 209, 210.

SUBSCRIPTION LIST. A list of subscribers to some agreement with each other or a third person.

SUBSELLIA. Lat. In Roman law. Lower seats or benches, occupied by the judices and by inferior magistrates when they sat in judgment, as distinguished from the tribunal of the praetor. Calvin.

SUBSEQUENS MATRIMONIUM TOLLIT PECATUM PRIECEDENS. A subsequent marriage of the parties removes a previous fault, e., previous illicit intercourse, and legitimates the offspring. A rule of Roman law.

SUBSEQUENT. Following in time; coming or being later than something else; succeeding. Commonwealth v. Ellett, 174 Va. 403, 4 S.E.2d 762, 765.

SUBSEQUENT CONDITION. See Condition.

SUBSEQUENT CREDITOR. One who becomes a creditor after a transfer sought to be impeached as fraudulent is made. Edwards v. Monning, 63 Ohio App. 449, 27 N.E.2d 156, 158.

SUBSIDIARY CORPORATION. One in which another corporation owns at least a majority of the shares, and thus has control. Wheeler v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co., 112 Conn. 510, 153 A. 159, 160.

See, also, Corporation.

SUBSIDY. Something, usually money, donated or given or appropriated by the government through its proper agencies, in this country by the Congress. Kennecott Copper Corp. v. State Tax Commission, D.C.Utah, 60 F.Supp. 181, 182.

In American law. A grant of money made by government in aid of the promoters of any enterprise, work, or improvement in which the government desires to participate, or which is considered a proper subject for state aid, because likely to be of benefit to the public.

In English law. An aid, tax, or tribute granted by parliament to the king for the urgent occasions of the kingdom, to be levied on every subject of ability, according to the value of his lands or goods. Jacob.

In international law. The assistance given in money by one nation to another to enable it the better to carry on a war, when such nation does not join directly in the war. Vattel, bk. 3, § 82.

SUBSOIL. The word includes, prima facie, all that is below the actual surface, down to the center of the earth. 17 L.J.C.P. 162. It is a wider term than mines, quarries, or minerals. 2 L.R. Ir. 339.

SUBSTANCE. Essence; the material or essential part of a thing, as distinguished from "form." State v. Burgdoerfer, 107 Mo. 1, 17 S.W. 646, 14 L.R.A. 486; Pierson v. Insurance Co., 7 Houst., Del., 307, 31 A. 966; Metzroth v. City of New York, 241 N.Y. 470, 150 N.E. 519, 520; State v. Gregory, 198 Iowa 316, 198 N.W. 58, 60. That which is essential. Rose v. Osborne, 136 Me. 15, 1 A.2d 225, 226.

It means not merely subject of act, but an intelligible abstract or synopsis of its material and substantial elements, though the "substance" may be stated without recital of any details. State, on Inf. of Murphy, v. Brooks, 241 Ala. 55, 1 So.2d 370, 371.

A claim to bankrupt's property is "substantial" so as to preclude summary proceeding if there are probable facts or circumstances sufficient to support a reasonable legal hypothesis upon which it should be allowed. Atlanta Flooring & Insulation Co. v. Russell, C.C.A.Ga., 146 F.2d 884, 886, 888.

SUBSTANTIAL COMPLIANCE RULE. In like insurance law is that where insured has done substantially all he is required to do under policy to effect change in beneficiary and mere ministerial acts of insurer's officers and agents only remain to be done, change will take effect. Inter-Southern Life Ins. Co. v. Cochran, 259 Ky. 677, 83 S.W. 2d 11, 14.

SUBSTANTIAL DAMAGES. See Damages.

SUBSTANTIAL EQUIVALENT OF PATENTED DEVICE. Same as thing itself, so that if two devices do same work in substantially same way, and accomplish substantially same results, they are equivalent, even though differing in name, form, or shape. Bedell v. Dictograph Products Co., 251 App.Div. 243, 296 N.Y.S. 25, 32; Freeman v. Altwater, C.C.A.Mo., 66 F.2d 506, 511.

SUBSTANTIAL JUSTICE. Justice administered according to the rules of substantive law, notwithstanding errors of procedure. Interstate Bankers Corporation v. Kennedy, D.C.Mun.App., 33 A.2d 165, 166.

SUBSTANTIAL PERFORMANCE. Exists where there has been no willful departure from the terms of the contract, and no omission in essential points, and the contract has been honestly and faithfully performed in its material and substantial particulars, and the only variance from the strict and literal performance consists of technical or unimportant omissions or defects. Cotherman v. Oriental Oil Co., Tex.Civ.App., 272 S.W. 616, 619; Brown v. Aguilar, 202 Cal. 143, 259 P. 735, 737; Cramer v. Esswein, 220 App.Div. 10, 220 N.Y.S. 634; Connell v. Higgins, 170 Cal. 541, 150 P. 769, 774. Performance except as to substantial omissions with compensation therefor. Cassino v. Yacevich, 261 App.Div. 685, 27 N.Y.S. 2d 95, 97, 99.

SUBSTANTIVE. An essential part or constituent or relating to what is essential. Stewart-Warner Corporation v. Le Vally, D.C.Ill., 15 F.Sup. 571, 576.

SUBSTANTIVE EVIDENCE. That adduced for the purpose of proving a fact in issue, as opposed to evidence given for the purpose of discrediting a witness, (i.e., showing that he is unworthy of belief,) or of corroborating his testimony. Best, Ev. 246, 773, 803.

SUBSTANTIVE EVIDENCE. An independent fact or evidence given for the purpose of discrediting a witness, (i.e., showing that he is unworthy of belief,) or of corroborating his testimony. Best, Ev. 246, 773, 803.
SUBSTANTIVE LAW. That part of law which creates, defines, and regulates rights, as opposed to "adjective or remedial law," which prescribes method of enforcing the rights or obtaining redress for their invasion. Maurizi v. Western Coal & Mining Co., 321 Mo. 378, 11 S.W.2d 268, 272; Mix v. Board of Com'r's of Nez Perce County, 18 Idaho, 695, 112 P. 215, 220, 32 L.R.A.,N.S., 534.

SUBSTITUTE, n. One who or that which stands in the place of another; that which stands in lieu of something else. State v. Fargo Bottling Works Co., 19 N.D. 396, 124 N.W. 387, 391, 26 L.R.A.,N.S., 872. A person hired by one who has been drafted into the military service of the country, to go to the front and serve in the army in his stead.

SUBSTITUTE, v. To put in the place of another person or thing: to exchange. State ex rel. Woolsey v. Morgan, 138 Neb. 635, 294 N.W. 436, 438; Toledo Edison Co. v. McMaken, C.C.A.Ohio, 103 F.2d 72, 75.

SUBSTITUTE DEFENDANT. One who takes the place of another in the same suit or controversy and not one who is sued upon an entirely different cause of action. McCann v. Bentley Stores Corporation, D.C.Mo., 34 F.Supp. 231, 233.

SUBSTITUTED SERVICE. In American law. Service of process upon a defendant in any manner, authorized by statute, other than personal service within the jurisdiction; as by publication, by mailing a copy to his last known address, or by personal service in another state. See Ruhle v. Caffrey, 115 N.J.L. 517, 180 A. 834, 835.

In English practice. Service of process made under authorization of the court upon some other person, when the person who should be served cannot be found or cannot be reached.

SUBSTITUTES. In Scotch law. The person first called or nominated in a tailzie (entailment of an estate upon a number of heirs in succession) is called the "institute" or "heir-institute;" the rest are called "substitutes."

SUBSTITUTIO IIZEREDIS. Lat. In Roman law, was competent for a testator after instituting a hceres (called the "hceres institutus") to substitute another (called the "hceres substitutus") in his place in a certain event. If the event upon which the substitution was to take effect was the refusal of the instituted heir to accept the inheritance at all, then the substitution was called "vulgaris," (or common;) but if the event was the death of the infant (pupillus) after acceptance, and before attaining his majority, (of fourteen years if a male, and of twelve years if a female,) then the substitution was called "pupillaris," (or for minors,) Brown.

SUBSTITUTION. Putting in place of another thing, change of one thing for another, serving in lieu of another, having some of its parts replaced. In re Cooke's Estate, 147 Misc. 528, 264 N.Y.S. 336.

In the civil law. The putting one person in place of another; particularly, the act of a testator in naming a second devisee or legatee who is to take the bequest either on failure of the original devisee or legatee or after him.

"Substitution," with respect to wills, and in view of Civ. Code, art. 1520, prohibiting substitution, is the putting of one person in the place of another so that he may, in default of ability in the former, or after him, have the benefit of the devise or legacy, particularly the act of testator in naming a second devisee or legatee who is to take the bequest on failure of the original devisee or legatee, or after him. In re Courtin, 144 La. 971, 81 So. 457, 459.

In Scotch law. The enumeration or designation of the heirs in a settlement of property. Substitutes in an entail are those heirs who are appointed in succession on failure of others.

SUBSTATIONAL, SUBSTITUTIONARY. Where a will contains a gift of property to a class of persons, with a clause providing that on the death of a member of the class before the period of distribution his share is to go to his issue, (if any,) so as to substitute them for him, the gift to the issue is said to be substitutional or substitutionary. A bequest to such of the children of A. as shall be living at the testator's death, with a direction that the issue of such as shall have died shall take shares which their parents would have taken, if living at the testator's death, is an example. Sweet. Acken v. Osborn, 45 N.J.Eq. 377, 17 A. 767; In re De Laveaga's Estate, 119 Cal. 651, 51 P.1074.

SUBSTANTIATION EVIDENCE. Such as is admitted as a substitute for what would be the original or primary instrument of evidence; as where a witness is permitted to testify to the contents of a lost document.

SUBSTUTIONARY EXECUTOR. See Executor.

SUBTRACTION. In French law. The fraudulent appropriation of any property, but particularly of the goods of a decedent's estate.

SUBTENANT. An under-tenant; one who leases all or a part of the rented premises from the original lessee for a term less than that held by the latter. Forrest v. Durnell, 86 Tex. 647, 26 S.W. 481; Peak v. Gaddy, 152 Okl. 138, 3 P.2d 1042, 1043.

SUBTERFUGE. That to which one resorts for escape or concealment. Los Angeles Fisheries v. Crook, C.C.A.Cal., 47 F.2d 1031, 1035.

SUBTERRANEAN WATERS, See Water.

SUBTRACTION. The offense of withholding or withdrawing from another man what by law he is entitled to. There are various descriptions of this offense, of which the principal are as follows: (1) Subtraction of suit and services, which is a species of injury affecting a man's real property, and consists of a withdrawal of (or a neglect to perform or pay) the fealty, suit of court, rent, or services reserved by the lessor of the land. (2) Subtraction of tithes is the withholding from the parson or vicar the tithes to which he is entitled, and this is cognizable in the ecclesiastical courts.

(3) Subtraction of conjugal rights is the withdrawing or withholding by a husband or wife of those rights and privileges which the law allows to either party. (4) Subtraction of legacies is the withholding or detaining of legacies by an executor. (5) Subtraction of church rates, in English law, consists in the refusal to pay the amount of rate at which any individual parishioner has been assessed for the necessary repairs of the parish church. Brown.

SUBTRACTION OF CONJUGAL RIGHTS. The act of a husband or wife living separately from the other without a lawful cause. 3 Bl.Comm. 94. See, also, Subtraction.

SUBURBANI. Lat. In old English law. Husbandmen.

SUBVASSORES. In old Scotch law. Base holders; inferior holders; they who held their lands of knights. Skene.

SUCCESSIO. Lat. In the civil law. A coming in of another to take the property of one who dies without disposing of it by will or by the general appointment of law in case of intestacy, (ab intestato.) Inst. 2, 9, 7; Heinecc. Elem. lib. 2, tit. 10.

SUCCESSION. The devolution of title to property under the law of descent and distribution. State ex rel. Walker v. Payne, 129 Mo. 468, 31 S.W. 797, 798, 3 L.R.A. 576. The act or right of legal or official investment with a predecessor’s office, dignity, possession, or functions; also the legal or actual order of so succeeding from that which is or is to be vested or taken. Glascott v. Bragg, 111 Wis. 605, 87 N.W. 853, 854, 56 L.R.A. 258.

The word when applied to realty denotes persons who take by will or inheritance and excludes those who take by deed, grant, gift, or any form of purchase or contract. Olsan Bros. v. Miller, Tex.Civ.App., 108 S.W.2d 856, 857.

The right by which one set of men may, by succeeding another set, acquire a property in all the goods, moveables, and other chattels of a corporation. 2 Bl.Comm. 430. The power of perpetual succession is one of the peculiar properties of a corporation. 2 Kent, Comm. 267. See Perpetual.

Civil Law and Louisiana

The fact of the transmission of the rights, estate, obligations, and charges of a deceased person to his heir or heirs.

The right by which the heir can take possession of the decedent’s estate. The right of the heir to step into the place of the deceased, with respect to the possession, control, enjoyment, administration, and settlement of all the latter’s property, rights, obligations, charges, etc.

The estate of a deceased person, comprising all kinds of property owned or claimed by him, as well as his debts and obligations, and considered as a legal entity (according to the notion of the Roman law) for certain purposes, such as collecting assets and paying debts. Davenport v. Adler, 52 La.Ann. 263, 26 So. 836; Succession of Blumberg, 148 La. 1030, 88 So. 297, 299.

The transmission of the rights and obligations of the deceased to the heirs, also the estates, rights, and charges which a person leaves after his death, whether the property exceeds the charges or the charges exceed the property, or whether he has only left charges without any property. Delanauville v. Duhe, 114 La. 62, 38 So. 20, 22.

The succession not only includes the rights and obligations of the deceased as they exist at the time of his death, but all that has accrued thereto since the opening of the succession, as also the new charges to which it becomes subject.

The coming in of another to take the property of one who dies without disposing of it by will.

General

Artificial succession. That attribute of a corporation by which, in contemplation of law, the company itself remains always the same though its constituent members or stockholders may change from time to time. See Thomas v. Dakin, 22 Wend., N.Y., 100.

Hereditary succession. Descent or title, by descent at common law; the title whereby a man on the death of his ancestor acquires his estate by right of representation as his heir at law. See In re Donahue’s Estate, 36 Cal. 332; Barclay v. Cameron, 25 Tex. 241.

Intestate succession. The succession of an heir at law to the property and estate of his ancestor when the latter has died intestate, or leaving a will which has been annulled or set aside.

Irregular succession. That which is established by law in favor of certain persons, or of the state, in default of heirs, either legal or instituted by testament.

Legal succession. That which the law establishes in favor of the nearest relation of a deceased person.

Natural succession. Succession taking place between natural persons, for example, in descent on the death of an ancestor. Thomas v. Dakin, 22 Wend., N.Y., 100.

SUCCESSION DUTY. An American law. A tax placed on the gratuitous acquisition of property passing on the death of any person by transfer from one person to another. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Maxwell, 221 N.C. 528, 20 S.E.2d 840, 842.

In English law. A duty, (varying from one to ten per cent.,) payable under the statute 16 & 17 Viet. c. 51, in respect chiefly of real estate and leaseholds, but generally in respect of all property (not already chargeable with legacy duty) devolving upon any one in consequence of any death. Brown.

Succession tax. A tax imposed upon the privilege of receiving property from a decedent by de-
SUCCINCT. Brief, precise, exact. Logan v. Hite, 214 Ind. 233, 13 N.E.2d 702, 703.

SUCCESSIVE. Following one after another in a line or series. In re Buchholtz, Cust. & Pat.App., 54 F.2d 965, 966.

SUCCESSOR. One that succeeds or follows; one who takes the place that another has left, and sustains the like part or character; one who takes the place of another by succession. Thompson v. North Texas Nat. Bank, Tex.Com.App., 37 S.W.2d 735, 740; Wawak Co. v. Kaiser, C.C.A.Ill., 90 F.2d 694, 697.

One who has been appointed or elected to hold an office after the term of the present incumbent.

Term with reference to corporations, generally means another corporation which, through amalgamation, consolidation, or other legal succession, becomes invested with rights and assumes burdens of first corporation. Schmoele v. Atlantic City R. Co., 110 N.J.Eq. 597, 160 A. 524, 526.

Singular Successor
A term borrowed from the civil law, denoting a person who succeeds to the rights of a former owner in a single article of property, (as by purchase,) as distinguished from a universal successor, who succeeds to all the rights and powers of a former owner, as in the case of a bankrupt or intestate estate.

SUCCINCT. Brief, precise, exact. Logan v. Hite, 214 Ind. 233, 13 N.E.2d 702, 703.

SUCCURRITUR MINORI; FACILIS EST LAP-SUS JUVENTUTIS. A minor is [to be] aided; a mistake of youth is easy, [youth is liable to err.] Jenk. Cent. p. 47, case 89.

SUCH. Of that kind, having particular quality or character specified. In re Brock, 312 Pa. 92, 166 A. 785, 787. Identical with, being the same as what has been mentioned. In re Watson's Will, 144 Misc. 213, 258 N.Y.S. 755. Alike, similar, of the like kind; "such" represents the object as already particularized in terms which are not mentioned, and is a descriptive and relative word, referring to the last antecedent. Strawberry Hill Land Corporation v. Starbucks, 124 Va. 71, 97 S.E. 362, 366; People ex rel. Kelly v. Public Service Commission, 171 App.Div. 810, 157 N.Y.S. 703, 705.

SUCCENT, SUCCENT. In Scotch law. The whole lands astricted to a mill; that is, the lands of which the tenants are obliged to send their grain to that mill. Bell.

SUDEN. Happening without previous notice or with very brief notice; coming or occurring unexpectedly; unforeseen; unprepared for. Hagan v. Manley, 141 Kan. 647, 42 P.2d 946, 949.

SUDDEN AFFRAY. A difficulty or fight suddenly resulting from the mutual agreement of two or more parties. Cavanaugh v. Commonwealth, 172 Ky. 799, 190 S.W. 123, 126; Gibbons v. Commonwealth, 253 Ky. 72, 68 S.W.2d 753.

SUDDEN HEAT OF PASSION. In the common-law definition of manslaughter, this phrase means an access of rage or anger, suddenly arising from a contemporary provocation. It means that the provocation must arise at the time of the killing, and that the passion is not the result of a former provocation, and the act must be directly caused by the passion arising out of the provocation at the time of the homicide. Stell v. State, Tex.Cr. App., 58 S.W. 75; Farrar v. State, 29 Tex.App. 250, 15 S.W. 719; Violett v. Com., 24 Ky.Law Rep. 1720, 72 S.W. 1.

SUDDEN OR VIOLENT INJURY. Injury occurring unexpectedly and not naturally or in the ordinary course of events. State v. District Court of St. Louis County, 138 Minn. 131, 164 N.W. 585, L.R.A.1918C, 116.

SUDDEN PERIL RULE. Under this rule, a defendant who is guilty of primary negligence is not liable in case of sudden peril where the peril or alarm was caused by the negligence of the opposite party, apprehension of peril from the standpoint of defendant seeking to excuse his primary negligence was reasonable, appearance of danger was so imminent as to leave no time for deliberation. White v. Munson, Tex.Civ.App., 162 S.W.2d 429, 432.

But rule cannot be invoked by one bringing emergency on or not using due care, tb avoid it. McClelland v. Interstate Transit Lines, 142 Neb. 439, 6 N.W.2d 384, 391.

Sudder. In Hindu law. The best; the forecourt of a house; the chief seat of government, contradistinguished from "mofussil," or interior of the country; the presidency. Wharton.

SUE OUT. To obtain by application; to petition for and take out. Properly the term is applied only to the obtaining and issuing of such process as is only accorded upon an application first made; but conventionally it is also used of the taking out of process which issues of course. The term is occasionally used of instruments other than writs. Thus, we speak of "suing out" a pardon. See South Missouri Lumber Co. v. Wright, 114 Mo. 326, 21 S.W. 811; Kelley v. Vincent, 8 Ohio St. 420; U. S. v. American Lumber Co., 29 C.C.A. 431, 85 F. 830.

SUERTE. In Spanish law. A small lot of ground. Particularly, such a lot within the limits of a city or town used for cultivation or planting as a garden, vineyard or orchard. Building lots in towns and cities are called "solares." Hart v. Burnett, 15 Cal. 554.

SUFFER. To allow, to admit, or to permit. In towns and cities are called "solares." Hart v. Burnett, 15 Cal. 554.

SUFFICIENT. Adequate, enough, as much as is only accorded upon an application first made; but conventionally it is also used of the taking out of process which issues of course. The term is occasionally used of instruments other than writs. Thus, we speak of "suing out" a pardon. See South Missouri Lumber Co. v. Wright, 114 Mo. 326, 21 S.W. 811; Kelley v. Vincent, 8 Ohio St. 420; U. S. v. American Lumber Co., 29 C.C.A. 431, 85 F. 830.

To suffer an act to be done or a condition to exist is to permit or consent to it; to approve of it, and not to hinder it. It implies knowledge, a willingness of the mind and responsible control or ability to prevent. Wilsap v. Nelson, 183 U.S. 191, 22 S.Ct. 74, 46 L.Ed. 147; Selleck v. Selleck, 19 Conn. 505; Gregory v. U. S., C.C.N.Y., Fed.Cas. No.5,803; 10 Fed.Cas. 1197; In re Thomas, D.C.Pa., 103 F. 278, 279; Allison v. Commonwealth, 221 Ky. 205, 298 S.W. 680.

SUFFERANCE. Toleratio; negative permission, by not forbidding; passive consent; license implied from the omission or neglect to enforce an adverse right. See People on Inf. of Price v. Sheffield Farms-Slawson-Decker Co., 225 N.Y. 25, 121 N.E. 474, 476. SUFFERER WHARVES. In English law. Wharves in which goods may be landed before any duty is paid. They are appointed for the purpose by the commissioners of the customs. 2 Steph. Comm. 500, note.

SUFFERENTIA PACIS. Lat. A grant or sufferance of peace or truce.

SUFFERING A RECOVERY. A recovery was effected by the party wishing to convey the land suffering a fictitious action to be brought against him by the party to whom the land was to be conveyed, (the demandant,) and allowing the demandant to recover a judgment against him for the land in question. The vendor, or conveying party, in thus assisting or permitting the demand-are to be adjudged, acted on, or determined. Some writers call these suffragans by the name of "subsidiary bishops." Tomlins.

SUFFRAGE. A vote; the act of voting; the right or privilege of casting a vote at public elections. The last is the meaning of the term in such phrases as "the extension of the suffrage," "universal suffrage," etc. Spitzer v. Fulton, 33 Misc. 257, 68 N.Y.S. 660; Conwell v. Farrell, 38 Okt. 608, 134 P. 407, 409.

Participation in the suffrage is not of right, but is granted by the state on a consideration of what is most for the interest of the state, Cooley, Const., 2d Ed. 752; Spencer v. Board of Registration, 8 D.C. 169, 29 Am.Rep. 582; U. S. v. Anthony, 11 Blatchf. 200, Fed.Cas.No.14,459. The grant of suffrage makes it a legal right until it is recalled, and it is protected by the law as property is.

SIM RAGIUM. Lat. In Roman law. A vote., the right of voting in the assemblies of the people.

Aid or influence used or promised to obtain some honor or office; the purchase of office. Cod. 4, 3.

SUGGEST. To introduce indirectly to the thought; to propose with diffidence or modesty; to hint; to intimate. Sims v. Ratcliff, 62 Ind.App. 184, 110 N.E. 122, 123.

SUGGESTIO FALSII. Lat. Suggestion or representation of that which is false; false representation. To recite in a deed that a will was duly executed, when it was not, is suggestio falsi; and to conceal from the heir that the will was not duly executed is suppressio veri. 1 P. Wms. 240, and see Turney v. Avery, 92 N.J.Eq. 473, 113 A. 710.

SUGGESTION. A suggesting, presentation of an idea especially indirectly, as through association of ideas, bringing before the mind for consideration, action, solution, or the like. Artificial Ice & Cold Storage Co. v. Martin, 102 Ind.App. 74, 198 N.E. 446, 449.

It is in the nature of a hint or insinuation, and lacks the element of probability. Facts which merely suggest do not raise an inference of the existence of the fact suggested, and therefore a suggestion is much less than an inference or presumption. Lopa v. Smith, 37 Ohio App. 346, 174 N.E. 258, 259.

In practice. A statement, formally entered on the record, of some fact or circumstance which will materially affect the further proceedings in the cause, or which is necessary to be brought to the knowledge of the court in order to its right disposition of the action, but which, for some reason, cannot be pleaded. Thus, if one of the parties dies after issue and before trial, his death may be suggested on the record. C. J. Huebel Co. v. Mackinnon, 186 Mich. 617, 152 N.W. 1098, 1100.

SUGGESTION OF ERROR. Request for rehearing. White v. State, 190 Miss. 589, 195 So. 479, 482.

SUGGESTIVE INTERROGATION. A phrase used by some writers to signify "leading question." 2 Benth. Jud. Ev. b. 3, c. 3. It is used in the French law.
Modern Law

A generic term, of comprehensive signification, and applies to any proceeding by one person or persons against another or others in a court of justice in which the plaintiff pursues, in such court, the remedy which the law affords him for the redress of an injury or the enforcement of a right, whether at law or in equity. See Kohl v. U. S., 91 U.S. 375, 23 L.Ed. 449; Weston v. Charleston, 2 Pet. 464, 7 L.Ed. 481; Syracuse Plaster Co. v. Agostini Bros. Bldg. Corporation, 169 Misc. 564, 7 N.Y.S.2d 897. It is, however, seldom applied to a criminal prosecution. And it is sometimes restricted to the designation of a proceeding in equity, to distinguish such proceeding from an action at law. Patterson v. Standard Accident Ins. Co., 178 Mich. 288, 144 N.W. 491, 492, 51 L.R.A., N.S., 583. For "Ancillary" suit and suit "Jn Rem" see those titles.

General

Class suits. See Class or Representative Action.

Suit against state. Suit in which relief against the state is sought. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Bosworth, D.C.Ky., 209 F. 380, 401.

Within rule of state immunity from suit without its consent, one in which the subject matter must be an interest of value in a material sense to the state as a distinct entity. American Federation of Labor v. Mann, Tex.Civ. App., 188 S.W.2d 276, 279, 280. And in the determination of whether a suit is one against the state, it is not necessary that the state appear on the record as a party; but, if the state is the real party against which the relief is sought, the suit is a "suit against the state" although nominally it appears on the record as a suit against one of its officers. McKamey v. Aikin, Tex.Civ.App., 118 S.W.2d 482, 483, 484.

Suit money. An allowance, in the nature of temporary alimony, authorized by statute in some states to be made to a wife on the institution of her suit for divorce, intended to cover the reasonable expenses of the suit and to provide her with means for the efficient preparation and trial of her case. See Yost v. Yost, 141 Ind. 584, 41 N.E. 11.

Suit of a civil nature. A suit for the remedy of a private wrong, the test being whether the law is penal in the strict and primary sense, and whether the wrong is to the public or to the individual. City of Montgomery, Ala., v. Postal Telegraph-Cable Co., D.C.Ala., 218 F. 471, 474.

Suit of court. This phrase denoted the duty of attending the lord's court, and, in common with fealty, was one of the incidents of a feudal holding. Brown.

Suit of the king's peace. The pursuing a man for breach of the king's peace by treasons, insurrections, or trespasses. Cowell.

Suits or proceedings at law or in chancery. Suits instituted and carried on in substantial conformity with the forms and modes prescribed by the common law or by the rules in chancery excluding cases instituted and carried on solely in accordance with statutory provisions. Lavin v. Wells Bros. Co., 272 Ill. 609, 112 N.E. 271, 272.

Suit silver. A small sum of money paid in lieu of attendance at the court-baron. Cowell.

SUITE. Those persons who by his authority fol low or attend an ambassador or other public minister.

SUITORS’ DEPOSIT ACCOUNT. Formerly suitors in the English court of chancery derived no income from their cash paid into court, unless it was invested at their request and risk. Now, however, it is provided by the court of chancery (funds) act, 1872, that all money paid into court, and not required by the suitor to be invested, shall be placed on deposit and shall bear interest at two per cent. per annum for the benefit of the suitor entitled to it. Sweet.

SUITORS’ FEE FUND. A fund consisting of moneys which, having been paid into the court of chancery into which the fees of suitors in that court were paid, and out of which the salaries of various officers of the court were defrayed. Wharton.

SUITORS’ FUND IN CHANCERY. In England. A fund consisting of moneys which, having been paid into the court of chancery, are placed out for the benefit and better security of the suitors, including interest from the same. By St. 32 & 33 Vict. c. 91, § 4, the principal of this fund, amounting to over £3,000,000, was transferred to the commissioners for the reduction of the national debt. Mozley & Whitley.

SULCUS. In old English law. A small brook or stream of water. Cowell.

SULLERY. In old English law. A plowland. 1 Inst. 5.

SUM. In English law. A summary or abstract; a compendium; a collection. Several of the old law treatises are called "sums." Lord Hale applies the term to summaries of statute law. Burrill.

The sense in which the term is most commonly used is "money"; a quantity of money or currency; any amount indefinitely, a sum of money, a small sum, or a large sum. U. S. v. Van Auken, 96 U.S. 368, 24 L.Ed. 852; Donovan v. Jenkins, 52 Mont. 124, 155 P. 972, 973.

SUM IN GROSS. See In Gross.

SUM PAYABLE. As used within Negotiable Instruments Law is the amount for which, by the terms of the instrument, the maker becomes liable, and which he might tender and pay in fill satisfaction of his obligation. First Nat. Bank of Iowa City, Iowa, v. Watson, 56 Okl. 495, 155 P.
1152.

SUMAGE. Toll for carriage on horseback. Cowell.

SUMMA CARITAS EST FACERE JUSTITIAM
SINGULIS, ET OMNI TEMPORE QUANDO NEC-
ESSE FUERIT. The greatest charity is to do justice to every one, and at any time whenever it may be necessary. 11 Coke, 70.

SUMMA EST LEX QUIE PRO RELIGIONE FAC-
IT. That is the highest law which favors religion.
10 Mod. 117, 119; Broom, Max. 19.

SUMMA RATIO EST QUIE PRO RELIGIONE FACIT. That consideration is strongest which determines in favor of religion. Co. Litt. 341a;
Broom, Max. 19.

SUMMARILY. Without ceremony or delay, short or concise. In re Gabelmann, 136 Misc. 641, 241
N.Y.S. 405, 408.

SUMMARY, n. An abridgment; brief; compendium; also a short application to a court or judge, without the formality of a full proceeding. Wharton.

SUMMARY, adj. Short, concise. State v. Bett-man, 124 Ohio St. 24, 176 N.E. 664, 665. Immediate, peremptory; off-hand; without a jury; provisional; statutory. The term used in connection with legal proceedings means a short, concise, and immediate proceeding. Vance v. Noel, 143 La.
477, 78 So. 741, 742; and trial of a "summary" character is a trial without a jury. State v. King, 137 Tenn. 17, 191 S.W. 352, 354; City of St. Paul 1916E, 845.

Summary actions. In Scotch law. Those which are brought into court not by summons, but by petition, corresponding to summary proceedings in English courts. Bell; Brown.

Summary conviction. See Conviction.

Summary jurisdiction. The jurisdiction of a court to give a judgment or make an order itself forthwith; e. g., to commit to prison for contempt; to punish malpractice in a solicitor; or, in the case of justices of the peace, a jurisdiction to convict an offender themselves instead of committing him for trial by a jury. Wharton.

Summary procedure on bills of exchange. This phrase refers to the statute 18 & 19 Vict. c. 67, passed in 1855, for the purpose of facilitating the remedies on bills and notes by the prevention of frivolous or fictitious defenses. By this statute, a defendant in an action on a bill or note, brought within six months after it has become payable, is prohibited from defending the action without the leave of the court or a judge. See 2 Steph. Comm.
118, note; Lush. Pr. 1027.

Summary proceeding. See Proceeding.

SUMMARY PROCESS. See Process.

SUMMER FALLOWING. Plowing and harrowing of grounds preparatory to cropping during next season. Farmers’ & Merchants’ Bank of Walla Walla v. Small, 131 Wash. 197, 229 P. 531, 533.

SUMMER-HUS SILVER. A payment to the lords of the wood on the Wealds of Kent, who used to visit those places in summer, when their under-tenants were bound to prepare little summerhouses for their reception, or else pay a composition in money. Cowell.

SUMMING UP. On the trial of an action by a jury, a recapitulation of the evidence adduced, in order to draw the attention of the jury to the salient points. The counsel for each party has the right of summing up his evidence, if he has adduced any, and the judge sometimes sums up the State v. Ezzard, 40 S.C. 312, 18 S.E. 1025.

SUMMON. In practice. To serve a summons; to cite a defendant to appear in court to answer a suit which has been begun against him; to notify the defendant that an action has been instituted against him, and that he is required to answer to it at a time and place named.

SUMMONS.

Practice
A writ, directed to the sheriff or other proper officer, requiring him to notify the person named that an action has been commenced against him in the court whence the writ issues, and that he is required to appear, on a day named, and answer the complaint in such action. See Whitney v.

Under code procedure a summons is not process, but is a notice to defendant that an action against him has been commenced and that judgment will be taken against him if he fails to answer the complaint. Flanary v. Kusha, 143 Minn. 308, 173 N.W. 652; United States v. Van Dusen, C.C.
A.Minn., 78 F.2d 121, 124.
Scotch Law

A writ passing under the royal signet, signed by a writer to the signet, and containing the grounds and conclusions of the action, with the warrant for citing the defender. This writ corresponds to the writ of summons in English procedure. Bell; Paters. Comp.

SUMMONS AD RESPONDENDUM. Process issuing in a civil case at law notifying defendant therein named that he must appear on day designated and thereupon make answer to plaintiff’s statement of his cause of action. Walker Fertilizer Co. v. Race, 123 Fla. 84, 166 So. 283, 285, 105 A.L.R. 341.

SUMMONS AND ORDER. In English practice. The summons is the application to a common-law judge at chambers in reference to a pending action, and upon it the judge or master makes the order. Mozley & Whitley.

SUMMONS AND SEVERANCE. The proper name of what is distinguished in the books by the name of "summons and severance" is "severance;" for the summons is only a process which must, in certain cases, issue before judgment of severance can be given; while severance is a judgment by which one or more of parties joined in action is enabled to proceed without the other or others. Jacob.

SUMMUM JUS. Lat. Strict right; extreme right. The extremity or rigor of the law. See "Apex Juris."

SUMMUM JUS, SUISLMA INJURIA; SUMMA LEX, SUMMA CRUX. Extreme law (rigor of law) is the greatest injury; strict law is great punishment. Hob. 125. That is, insistence upon the full measure of a man’s strict legal rights may work the greatest injury to others, unless equity can aid.

SUMMER. See Somnour.

SUMPTUARY LAWS. Laws made for the purpose of restraining luxury or extravagance, particularly against inordinate expenditures in the matter of apparel, food, furniture, etc.

SUNDAY. The first day of the week is designated by this name; also as the "Lord’s Day," and as the "Sabbath." State v. Reade, 98 N.J.L. 596, 121 A. 288, 289.

For Work of Necessity see "Necessity."

SUNDRIES. Miscellaneous or various items which may be considered together, without being separately specified or identified. People v. Bernstein, 237 App.Div. 270, 261 N.Y.S. 381.

SUPERCARGO. In maritime law. A person especially employed by the owner of a cargo to take SUPERINSTITUTION. The institution of one in an office to which another has been previously instituted; as where A. is admitted and instituted to a benefice upon one title, and B. is admitted and instituted on the title or presentment of another. 2 Cro. Eliz. 463.

A church being full by institution, if a second institution is granted to the same church this is a superinstitution. Wharton.

SUPERINTEND. To have charge and direction of; to direct the course and oversee the details; to regulate with authority; to manage; to oversee with the power of direction; to take care of with authority. Burrell Engineering & Construction Co. v. Grisier, 111 Tex. 477, 240 S.W. 899, 900; State v. First State Bank of Jud, 52 N.D. 231, 202 N.W. 391, 402.

SUPERINTENDENT. One who superintends or has the oversight and charge of something with the power of direction; a manager. Indiana Fibre Products Co. v. Cyclone Mfg. Co., 81 Ind. App. 682, 143 N.E. 169, 171.

SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS. Officer having the highest authority under the board of education. Eelkema v. Board of Education of City of Duluth, 215 Minn. 590, 11 N.W.2d 76, 77.

SUPERINTENDENT REGISTRAR. In English law. An officer who superintends the registers of births, deaths, and marriages. There is one in every poor-law union in England and Wales.

SUPERIOR, n. One who has a right to command; one who holds a superior rank.

In estates, some are superior to others. An estate entitled to a servitude or easement over another estate is called the "superior" or "dominant," and the other, the "inferior" or "servient," estate. 1 Bouv. Inst. no. 161Z.

In the feudal law, until the statute quia emptores precluded subinfeudations, (q. v.,) the tenant who granted part of his estate to be held of and from himself as lord was called a "superior."

Superior and vassal. In Scotch law. A feudal relation corresponding with the English "lord and tenant." Bell.

Superior courts. In English law. The courts of the highest and most extensive jurisdiction, viz., the court of chancery and the three courts of common law, i. e., the King's bench, the common pleas, and the exchequer, which sit at Westminster, were commonly thus denominated. But these courts are now united in the supreme court of judicature. In American law. Courts of general or extensive jurisdiction, as distinguished from the inferior courts. As the official style of a tribunal, the term "superior court" bears a different meaning in different states. In some it is a court of intermediate jurisdiction between the trial courts and the chief appellate court; elsewhere it is the designation of the ordinary nisi prius courts.

Superior force. In the law of bailments and of negligence, an uncontrollable and irresistible force, of human agency, producing results which the person in question could not avoid; equivalent to the Latin phrase "vis major." See Via.

SUPER—JURARE. Over-swearing. A term anciently used when a criminal endeavored to excuse himself by his own oath or the oath of one or two witnesses, and the crime objected against him was so plain and notorious that he was convicted on the oaths of many more witnesses. Wharton.
SUPERSEDEAS. In Practice. The name of a SUPERSEDE. Obliterate, set aside, annul, re- plus; surplus; residue or balance. Bract. fol. place, make void, inefficacious or useless, repeal. 301; Spelman.

SUPERSEDEAS. In Practice. The name of a writ containing a command to stay the proceedings at law.

A suspension of the power of a trial court to issue an execution on judgment appealed from, or, if writ of execution has issued, it is a prohibition emanating from court of appeal against execution of writ. Stewart v. Hurt, 9 Cal.2d 39, 68 P.2d 726, 727.

An auxiliary process designed to supersede enforcement of trial court’s judgment brought up for review, and its application is limited to the judgment from which an appeal is taken. Mascot Pictures Corporation v. Municipal Court of City of Los Angeles, 3 Cal.App.2d 559, 40 P.2d 272.

Originally it was a writ directed to an officer, commanding him to desist from enforcing the execution of another writ which he was about to execute, or which might come in his hands. In modern times the term is often used synonymously with a “stay of proceedings,” and is employed to designate the effect of an act or proceeding which of itself suspends the enforcement of a judgment. Dulin v. Coal Co., 98 Cal. 306, 33 P. 123.

SUPERSEDED CAUSE. An act of a third person or other force which by its intervention prevents the actor from being liable for harm to an- other which his antecedent negligence is a sub- stantial factor in bringing about. Superior Oil Co. v. Richmond, 172 Miss. 407, 159 So. 850, 852. Shuster v. Vecchi, 203 Minn. 76, 279 N.W. 841, 844.

SUPERSEDED CAUSE. An act of a third person or other force which by its intervention prevents the actor from being liable for harm to another which his antecedent negligence is a substantial factor in bringing about. Superior Oil Co. v. Richmond, 172 Miss. 407, 159 So. 850, 852. Shuster v. Vecchi, 203 Minn. 76, 279 N.W. 841, 844.

SUPERSTITIOUS USE. In English law. When lands, tenements, rents, goods, or chattels are given, secured, or appointed for and towards the maintenance of a priest or chaplain to say mass, for the maintenance of a priest or other man to pray for the soul of any dead man in such a church or elsewhere, to have and maintain perpetual obits, lamps, torches, etc., to be used at certain times to help to save the souls of men out of purgatory,—in such cases the king, by force of several statutes, is authorized to direct and appoint all such uses to such purposes as are truly charitable. Bac. Abr. “Charitable Uses.” The doctrine has no recognition in this country; Appeal of Seibert, 18 Wkly. Notes Cas., Pa., 276; and a bequest to support a Catholic priest, and perhaps other uses void in England, would not be considered as superstitious uses. Harrison v. Brophy, 59 Kan. 1, 51 P. 883, 40 L.R.A. 721.

SUPPLEMENT. Letters of. In Scotch prac- tice. A process by which a party not residing within the jurisdiction of an inferior court may be cited to appear before it. Bell.
SUPPLEMENTAL

SUPPLEMENTAL ACT. That which supplies a deficiency, adds to or completes, or extends that which is already in existence without changing or modifying the original; Act designed to improve an existing statute by adding something thereto without changing the original text. Swanson v. State, 132 Neb. 82, 271 N.W. 264, 268.

SUPPLEMENTAL AFFIDAVIT. An affidavit made in addition to a previous one, in order to supply some deficiency in it. Callan v. Lukens, 89 Pa. 136.

SUPPLEMENTAL BILL IN NATURE OF BILL OF REVIEW. Employed to invoke jurisdiction of court of chancery to recall one of its adjudications made while some fact existed which, if before court, would have prevented rendition of final decree, and which, without negligence of party presenting it, was not earlier presented to chancellor. Brown v. Oehler, 114 Fla. 57, 152 So. 862.

SUPPLEMENTAL CLAIM. A further claim which was filed when further relief was sought after the bringing of a claim. Smith, Ch. Pr. 655.

SUPPLEMENTAL COMPLAINT. Under the codes of practice obtaining in many of the states, a complaint filed in an action to bring to the notice of the court and the opposite party matters occurring after the commencement of action and which may affect the rights asserted. Poudre v. Tate, 132 Ind. 327, 30 N.E. 880; Plumer v. McDonald Lumber Co., 74 Wis. 137, 42 N.W. 250; Title and Trust Co. v. U. S. Fidelity and Guaranty Co., 138 Or. 467, 7 P.2d 805, 812.

SUPPLEMENTAL PLEA'NING. One consisting of facts arising since filing of the original, State v. Patten, 209 Ind. 482, 199 N.E. 577, 579; or of which pleader at time of serving of original pleading had no notice. Fisher v. Bullock, 204 App. Div. 523, 198 N.Y.S. 538, 540.

SUPPLEMENTARY. Added as a supplement; additional; being, or serving as, a supplement. Swanson v. State, 132 Neb. 82, 271 N.W. 264, 268.

SUPPLEMENTARY PROCEEDINGS. Proceedings supplementary to an execution, directed to the discovery of the debtor's property and its application to the debt for which the execution is issued. They are purely statutory, they are in the nature of a creditor's bill for the collection of a judgment or tax, and are proceedings in personam and not in rem. In re Maltbie, 119 N.E. 389, 391, 223 N.Y. 227; Walker v. Staley, 89 Colo. 292, 1 P.2d 924, 925.

SUPPLETORY OATH. See Oath.

SUPPLIANT. The actor in, or party preferring, a petition of right.

SUPPLICATIO. Lat. In the civil law. A petition for pardon of a first offense; also a petition for reversal of judgment; also equivalent to "duplicatio," which corresponds to the common law rejoinder. Calvin.

SUPPLICAVIT. In English law. A writ issuing out of the king's bench or chancery for taking sureties of the peace. It is commonly directed to the justices of the peace, when they are averse to acting in the affair in their judicial capacity. 4 Bl.Comm. 253.

SUPPLICIUM. Lat. In the civil law. Punishment; corporal punishment for crime. Death was called "ultimum supplicium," the last or extreme penalty.

SUPPLIES. In English law. In parliamentary proceedings the sums of money which are annually voted by the house of commons for the maintenance of the crown and the various public services. Jacob; Brown.

Means of provision or relief; stores; available aggregate of things needed or demanded in amount sufficient for a given use or purpose; accumulated stores reserved for distribution; sufficiency for use or need; a quantity of something supplied or on hand. Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. Sanders County, 66 Mont. 608, 214 P. 596, 599.

In connection with building contracts, things other than labor, which are consumed in, but do not become a physical part of, the structure and is distinguished from the word "materials," which are things becoming a physical part of the structure. Hurley-Mason Co. v. American Bonding Co., 79 Wash. 564, 140 P. 575, 576, L.R.A.1915B, 1131.

SUPPLY. To furnish with what is wanted; available aggregate of things needed or demanded; anything yielded or afforded to meet a want; and the act of furnishing with what is wanted. Clayton v. Bridgeport Mach. Co., Tex.Civ.App., 33 S.W. 2d 787, 789.
SUPPLY, COMMISSIONERS OF. Persons appointed to levy the land-tax in Scotland, and to cause a valuation roll to be annually made up, and to perform other duties in their respective counties. Bell.

SUPPLY, COMMITTEE OF. In English law. All cause a valuation roll to be annually made up, and to perform other duties in their respective counties. Wharton.

SUPRA: Lat. Above; upon. This word occurring by itself in a book refers the reader to a previous part of the book, like "ante;" it is also the initial word of several Latin phrases.

SUPRA PROTEST. See Protest.

SUPRA-RIPARIAN. Upper riparian; higher up the stream. This term is applied to the estate, rights, or duties of a riparian proprietor whose land is situated at a point nearer the source of the stream than the estate with which it is compared.

SUPREMA POTESTAS SEIPSAM DISSOLVERE POTEST. Supreme power can dissolve itself. Bac. Max.

SUPREMACY. The state of being supreme, or in the highest station of power; paramount authority; sovereignty; sovereign power.

Act of Supremacy
The English statute 1 Eliz. c. 1, whereby the supremacy and autonomy of the crown in spiritual or ecclesiastical matters was declared and established.

Oath of Supremacy
An oath to uphold the supreme power of the kingdom of England in the person of the reigning sovereign.

SUPREME. Superior to all other things.

SUPREME COURT. A court of high powers and extensive jurisdiction, existing in most of the states. In some it is the official style of the chief appellate court or court of last resort. In others (such as New York) the supreme court is a court of general original jurisdiction, possessing also (in New York) some appellate jurisdiction, but not the court of last resort.

Supreme court of the United States. The court of last resort in the federal judicial system. It is vested by the constitution with original jurisdiction in all cases affecting ambassadors, public ministers, and consuls, and those in which a state is a party, and appellate jurisdiction over all other cases within the Judicial power of the United States, both as to law and fact, with such exceptions and under such regulations as congress may make. Its appellate powers extend to the subordinate federal courts, and also (in certain cases) to the supreme courts of the several states. The court is composed of a chief justice and eight associate justices.

Supreme Court of Judicature. The court formed by the English judicature act, 1873, (as modified by the judicature act, 1875, the appellate jurisdiction act, 1876, and the judicature acts of 1877, 1879, and 1881,) in substitution for the various superior courts of law, equity, admiralty, probate, and divorce, existing when the act was passed, including the court of appeal in chancery and bankruptcy, and the exchequer chamber. It consists of two permanent divisions, viz., a court of original jurisdiction, called the “high court of justice,” and a court of appellate jurisdiction, called the "court of appeal." Its title of "supreme" is now a misnomer, as the superior appellate jurisdiction of the house of lords and privy council, which was originally intended to be transferred to it, has been allowed to remain. Sweet.

High Court of Justice

That branch of the English supreme court of judicature (q.v.) which exercises (1) the original jurisdiction formerly exercised by the court of chancery, the courts of queen’s bench, common pleas, and exchequer, the courts of probate, divorce, and admiralty, the court of common pleas at Lancaster, the court of pleas at Durham, and the courts of tile judges or commissioners of assize; and (2) the appellate jurisdiction of such of those courts as heard appeals from inferior courts. Judicature act, 1873, § 16.

Supreme power. The highest authority in a state, all other powers in it being inferior there-to. State ex rel. Hartley v. Clausen, 146 Wash. 588, 264 P. 403, 405.

Supremus. Lat. Last; the last.

Supremus est quem nemo sequitur. He is last whom no one follows. Dig. 50, 16, 92.

Sur. Fr. On; upon; over. In the titles of real actions "sur" was used to point out what the writ was founded upon. Thus, a real action brought by the owner of a reversion or seigniory, in certain cases where his tenant repudiated his tenure, was called "a writ of right sur disclaimer." So, a writ of entry sur disseisin was a real action to recover the possession of land from a disseisor. Sweet.

Sur Cui Ante Divortium. See Cui Ante Divortium.

Sur Cui in Vita. A writ that lay for the heir of a woman whose husband had aliened her land in fee, and she had omitted to bring the writ of cui in vita for the recovery thereof, in which case her heir might have this writ against the tenant after her decease. Cowell. See Cui in Vita.

Sur disclaimer. A writ in the nature of a writ of right brought by the lord against a tenant who had disclaimed his tenure, to recover the land.

Sur Mortgage. Upon a mortgage. In some states the method of enforcing the security of a mortgage, upon default, is by a writ of "scire facias sur mortgage," which requires the defendant (mortgagor) to show cause why it should not be foreclosed.

Surcharge, n. An overcharge; an exaction, impost, or incumbrance beyond what is just and right, or beyond one’s authority or power. "Surcharge" may mean a second or further mortgage. Wharton.

Surcharge, v. To put more cattle upon a common than the herbage will sustain or than the party has a right to do. 3 Bl. Comm. 237.

Equity Practice

To show that a particular item, in favor of the party surcharging, ought to have been included, but was not, in an account which is alleged to be settled or complete. To prove the omission of an item from an account which is before the court as complete, which should be inserted to the credit of the party surcharging. Story, Eq. Jur. § 525; 2 Ves. 565; Perkins v. Hart, 24 U.S. 237, 11 Wheat. 237, 6 L.Ed. 463; Dempsey v. McGinnis, 203 Mo.App. 494, 219 S.W. 148, 150.

General

Second surcharge. In English law. The surcharge of a common a second time, by the same defendant against whom the common was before admeasured, and for which the writ of second surcharge was given by the statute of Westminster, 2. 3 Bl. Comm. 239.

Surcharge and falsify. This phrase, as used in the courts of chancery, denotes the liberty which these courts will occasionally grant to a plaintiff, who disputes an account which the defendant alleges to be settled, to scrutinize particular items therein without opening the entire account. The showing an item for which credit ought to have been given, but was not, is to surcharge the account; the proving an item to have been inserted wrongly is to falsify the account. Brown. See Philips v. Belden, 2 Edw. Ch., N.Y., 23; Rehill v. McTague, 114 Pa. 82, 7 A. 224, 60 Am.Rep. 341; Shores-Mueller Co. v. Bell, 21 Ga.App. 194, 94 S.E. 83, 84.

Surechere. In French law. A party desirous of repurchasing property at auction before the court, can, by offering one-tenth or one-sixth.
SURETY. One who undertakes to pay money or to do any other act in event that his principal fails therein. In re Brock, 312 Pa. 92, 166 A. 778, 781. One bound with his principal for the payment of a sum of money or for the performance of some duty or promise and who is entitled to be indemnified by some one who ought to have paid or performed if payment or performance be enforced against him. Anderson v. Trueman, 100 Fla. 727, 130 So. 12, 13. Everyone who incurs a liability in person or estate, for the benefit of another, without sharing in the consideration, stands in the position of a “surety,” whatever may be the form of his obligation. Howell v. War Finance Corporation, C.C.A.Ariz., 71 F.2d 237, 243.

SURETYSHIP, CONTRACT OF. Contract whereby one party engages to be answerable for debt, default, or miscarriage of another and arises when one is liable to pay debt or discharge obligation, and party is entitled to indemnity from person who should have made the payment in the first instance before surety was so compelled. Bradley v. Bentley, 163 So. 351, 231 Ala. 28. A contract whereby one person engages to be answerable for the debt, default, or miscarriage of another. Pitm.. Princ. & Sur. 1, 2; Scandinavian-American Bank of Fargo v. Westby, 41 N.D. 276, 172 N.W. 665, 670. An accessory promise by which a person binds himself for another already bound, and agrees with the creditor to satisfy the obligation, if the debtor does not. Hope v. Board, 43 La.Ann. 738, 9 So. 754. A lending of credit to aid a principal having insufficient credit of his own; the one expected to pay, having the primary obligation, being the “principal,” and the one bound to pay, if the principal does not, being the “surety.” Rollings v. Gunter, 211 Ala. 671, 101 So. 446, 448.

See Surety.

In contracts of “indemnity” against liability, the engagement is to indemnify another against liability on some obligation which he has incurred, or is about to incur, to a third person, and is not, as in ‘suretyship,’ a promise to one to whom another is answerable; in the former there is direct privity between the promisor and promisee and no debt owing by the third person to the promisee and the promisee has no remedy against the third person, whereas in the latter both principal and surety are bound to answer to the promisee. McManus v. Tralles, Mo.App., 253 S.W. 406, 409.

SUREFACE. This term, when used in law, is seldom, if ever, limited to mere geometrical. super-sificies, Clinchfield Coal Corporation v. Compton, 148 Va. 437, 139 S.E. 308, 312, 55 A.L.R. 1376; although when used without any qualifying phrase in a deed, it ordinarily signifies only the super-ficial part of land, Drummond v. White Oak Fuel Co., 104 W.Va. 368, 140 S.E. 57, 58, 56 A.L.R. 303. And when employed in connection with mining, it usually means that part of the earth or geologic section lying over the minerals in question, unless the contract or conveyance otherwise defines it. Marquette Cement Mining Co. v. Oglesby Coal Co., D.C.I11., 253 F. 107, 111. Thus, where the surface is granted to one and the underlying coal to another, the “surface” includes the soil and waters which lie above and are superincumbent on the coal. Clinchfield Coal Corporation v. Compton, 148 Va. 437, 139 S.E. 308, 312, 55 A.L.R. 1376. Nevertheless, a conveyance of the “surface,” except the oil and gas rights in the land, may be deemed, under certain circumstances, to constitute a conveyance of all the land (including coal deposits), except only the oil and gas rights specifically reserved. Ramage v. South Penn Oil Co., 94 W.Va. 81, 118 S.E. 162, 171, 31 A.L.R. 1509.

The term “surface,” when used as the subject of a conveyance, is not a definite one capable of a definition of universal application, but is susceptible of limitation according to the intention of the parties using it; and in determining its meaning, regard may be had, not only to the language of the deed in which it occurs, but, also to the situation of the parties, the business in which they were engaged, and to the substance of the transaction.

171, 31 A.L.R. 1509.

SURGEON. One whose profession or occupation is to cure diseases or injuries of the body by manual operation; one who practices surgery, Web-st; which is therapy of a distinctly operative kind, such as cutting operations, the reduction and putting up of fractures and dislocations and similar manual forms of treatment; Napier v. Greenz-weig, C.C.A.N.Y., 256 F. 196, 197.
Popularity, one possessing particular knowledge and skill to correct and relieve some unnatural condition of the human body. Maupin v. Southern

The practice of medicine, in contradistinction to the practice of surgery, denotes the treatment of disease by the administration of drugs or other salutary substances.
There cannot be a complete separation between the practice of medicine and surgery; the principles of both are the same throughout, and no one is qualified to practice either who does not properly understand the fundamental principles of both.
SURGICAL OPERATION. An act or series of acts performed on a patient's body by a surgeon to produce a cure. Hartford Live Stock Ins. Co.
v. McMillen, C.C.A.Ohio, 9 F.2d 961, 962.
SURMISE. Formerly where a defendant pleaded a local custom, for instance, a custom of the city of London, it was necessary for him to "surmise," that is, to suggest that such custom should be certified to the court by the mouth of the recorder, and without such a surmise the issue was to be tried by the country as other issues of fact are. 1
Burrows, 251; Vin. Abr. 246.
Something offered to a court to move it to grant a prohibition, audita querela, or other writ grant-able thereon. Jacob.

The "surplus" of a corporation may mean either the net assets of the corporation in excess of all liabilities including capital stock, Winkelman v. General Motors Corporation, D.C.N.Y., 44 F.Supp. 960, 966; or what remains after making provisions for all liabilities of every kind, except capital stock. Insurance Co. of North America v. McCoach, SURPLUSAGE. Extraneous, impertinent, superfluous, or unnecessary matter. In re Wolcott's Estate, 54 Utah, 165; 180 P. 169, 170, 4 A.L.R. 727.

A greater disbursement than the charge of the accountant amounts unto. In another sense, the remainder or overplus of money left. Jacob. A balance over. 1 Lew. 219.

Pleading

Allegations of matter wholly foreign and impertinent to the cause. All matter beyond the circumstances necessary to constitute the action.

SURPLUSAGIUM NON NOCET. Surplusage does not injure the remainder or overplus of money left. Jacob. A balance over. 1 Lew. 219.

Equity Practice.

The act by which a party who is entering into a contract is taken unawares, by which sudden confusion or perplexity is created, which renders it proper that a court of equity should relieve the party so surprised. 2 Brown, Ch. 150.

The situation in which a party is placed without any default of his own, which will be injurious to his interests. Rawle v. Skipwith, 8 Mart. N. S., La., 407.

Anything which happens without the agency or fault of the party affected by it, tending to disturb and confuse the judgment, or to mislead him, of which the opposite party takes an undue advantage, is in equity a surprise, and one species of fraud for which relief is granted. Giddens v. Union Depot R. Co., 129 Mo. 392, 31 S.W. 800; Heath v. Scott, 65 Cal. 548, 4 Pac. 557; Zimmerer v. Fremont Nat. Bank, 59 Neb. 661, 81 N.W. 849; Thompson v. Connell, 31 Or. 231, 48 P. 467, 65 Am.St.Rep. 818.

There does not seem anything technical or peculiar in the word "surprise," as used in courts of equity. Where a court of equity relies on the ground of surprise, it does so upon the ground that the party has been taken unawares, and that he has acted without due deliberation, and under confused and sudden impressions. 1 Story, Eq. Jur. 120, note. But Jeremy, Eq.Jur. 366, 383, note, seems to think that the word surprise is a technical expression, and nearly synonymous with fraud. It is sometimes used in this sense when it is deemed presumptive of, or approaching to, fraud. 1 Fonbl. Eq. 123; 3 Ch.Cas. 56, 74, 103, 114.

Law

As a ground for a new trial, that situation in which a party is unexpectedly placed without default on his part, which will work injury to his interests. State v. Price, 100 W.Va. 699, 131 S.E. 710, 711. He must show himself to have been diligent at every stage of the proceedings. Henderson v. Hazlett, 75 W.Va. 255, 83 S.E. 907, 908. And that the event was one which ordinary prudence could not have guarded against; Cupples v. Zupan. 35 Idaho, 458, 207 P. 328, 329; Jennings v. American President Lines, 61 Cal.App.2d 417, 143 P.2d 349, 356.

A situation, status, or result produced, having a substantive basis of fact and reason, from which the court may justly deduce, as a legal conclusion, that the party will suffer a judicial wrong if not relieved from his mistake. Levy v. Caledonian Ins. Co., D.C.Cal., 226 F. 336, 337.

The general rule is that when a party or his counsel is "taken by surprise," in a material point or circumstance which could not have been anticipated, and when want of skill, care, or attention cannot be justly imputed, and injustice has been done, a new trial should be granted. Hill. New Trials, 521.

SURRENDER. In pleading. The plaintiff's answer of fact to the defendant's rebutter. Steph. Pl. 59. It is governed by the same rules as the replication. See 6 Com. Dig. 185; 7 id. 389.

SURREJOINDER. In pleading. The plaintiff's answer of fact to the defendant's rejoinder. Steph. Pl. 59. It is governed in every respect by the same rules as the replication. Steph. Pl 77; 7 Com. Dig. 389.

SURRENDER. To give back; yield; render up; restore; and in law the giving up of an estate to the person who has it in reversion or remainder, so as to merge it in the larger estate; the giving up of a lease before its expiration; yielding up a tenancy in a copyhold estate to the lord of the manor for a specified purpose; a deed by which surrender is made; the giving up by a bankrupt of his property to his creditors or their assignees; also, his due appearance in the bankruptcy court for examination as formerly required by the bankruptcy acts. In re Emlen's Estate, 333 Pa. 238, 4 A.2d 143, 145; Nolander v. Burns, 48 Minn. 13, 50 N.W. 1016.

A yielding up of an estate for life or years to him who has an immediate estate in reversion or remainder, wherein the estate for life or years may be lost by voluntary agreement between them. Roberts Inv. Co. v. Hardie Mfg. Co., 142 Or. 179, 19 P.2d 429, 431; Kimberlin v. Hicks, 150 Kan. 449, 94 P.2d 335, 339.

"Surrender" is contractual act and occurs only through consent of both parties. Motch's Adm'r v. Portner, 237 Ky. 25, 34 S.W.2d 744, 745.

Surrender differs from "abandonment," as applied to leased premises, inasmuch as the latter is simply an act on the part of the lesssee alone; but to show a surrender, a mutual agreement between lessor and lessee that the lease is terminated must be clearly proved. Noble v. Sturm, 210 Mich. 462, 178 N.W. 99, 106.

A surrender is of a nature directly opposite to a release; for, as the latter operates by the greater estate descending upon the less, the former is the falling of a less estate into a greater, by deed. Shepp. Touchst. 300.

SURRENDER BY BAIL. The act, by bail or sureties in a recognizance, of giving up their principal again into custody, in their own discharge. 1 Burrill, Pr. 394.

SURRENDER BY OPERATION OF LAW. This phrase is properly applied to cases where the tenant for life or years has been a party to some act which the validity of which he is by law afterwards espoused from disputing, and which would not be valid if his particular estate continued to exist. Ledesinger v. Burke, 113 Ga. 74, 38 S.E. 313; Brown
SURRENDER

v. Cairns, 107 Iowa, 727, 77 N.W. 478. An implied surrender occurs when an estate incompatible with the existing estate is accepted, or the lessee takes a new lease of the same lands. Livingston v. Potts, 16 Johns., N.Y., 28; 1 B. & Ald. 50. See Beall v. White, 94 U.S. 389, 24 L.Ed. 173; Martin v. Stearns, 52 Iowa, 347, 3 N.W. 92.

The rule of law as now settled by recently adjudicated cases is that any acts which are equivalent to an agreement on the part of the tenant to abandon, and on the part of the landlord to resume the possession of the demised premises, amount to a "surrender by operation of law." Carlton Chambers Co. v. Trask, 261 Mass. 264, 158 N.E. 778, 788; 1375-83 Broadway Corporation v. Filler, 267 N.Y.S. 779, 149 Misc. 474. The rule may be safely said to be that a surrender is created by operation of law, when the parties to a lease do some act so inconsistent with the subsisting relation of landlord and tenant as to imply that they have both agreed to consider the surrender as made. Flannagan v. Dickerson, 103 Okt. 206, 229 P. 552, 553; Hodgkiss v. Dayton-Brower Co., 156 N.Y.S. 907, 908, 93 Misc. 109; Triest & Co. v. Goldstone, 173 Cal. 240, 159 P. 715, 716.

SURRENDER OF CHARTER. A corporation created by charter may give up or "surrender" its charter to the people, unless the charter was granted under a statute, imposing indefeasible duties subsisting relation of landlord and tenant as to imply that they have both agreed to consider the surrender as made. Flannagan v. Dickerson, 103 Okt. 206, 229 P. 552, 553; Hodgkiss v. Dayton-Brower Co., 156 N.Y.S. 907, 908, 93 Misc. 109; Triest & Co. v. Goldstone, 173 Cal. 240, 159 P. 715, 716.

SURRENDER OF COPYHOLD. The mode of conveying or transferring copyhold property from one person to another is by means of a surrender, which consists in the yielding up of the estate by the tenant into the hands of the lord for such purposes as are expressed in the surrender. The process in most manors is for the tenant to come to the steward, either in court or out of court, or else to two customary tenants of the same manor, provided there be a custom to warrant it, and there, by delivering up a rod, a glove, or other symbol, as the custom directs, to resign into the hands of the lord, by the hands and acceptance of his steward, or of the said two tenants, all his interest and title to the estate, in trust, to be again granted out by the lord to such persons and for such uses as are named in the surrender, and as the custom of the manor will warrant. Brown.

SURRENDER OF CRIMINALS. The act by which the public authorities deliver a person accused of a crime, and who is found in their jurisdiction, to the authorities within whose jurisdiction it is alleged the crime has been committed.

SURRENDER OF A PREFERENCE. In bankruptcy practice. The surrender to the assignee in bankruptcy, by a preferred creditor, of anything he may have received under his preference and any advantage it gives him, which he must do before he can share in the dividend. In re Richter's Estate, 1 Dill. 544, Fed.Cas.No.11,803. The word as generally defined may denote either compelled or voluntary action. Keppel v. Bank, 197 U.S. 356, 25 S.Ct. 443, 49 L.Ed. 790. In Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 57g (11 U.S.C.A. § 93 (g), providing that creditors must surrender preferences before having claims allowed, it is unqualified and generic, and hence embraces both meanings. Keppel v. Bank, supra.

SURRENDER TO USES OF WILL. Formerly a copyhold interest would not pass by will unless it had been surrendered to the use of the will. By St. 55 Geo. III. c. 192, this is no longer necessary. 1 Steph. Comm. 639; Mozley & Whitley.

SURRENDEREE. The person to whom a surrender is made.

SURRENDEROR. One who makes a surrender. One who yields up a copyhold estate for the purpose of conveying it.

SURREPTITIOUS. Stealthily or fraudulently done, taken away, or introduced.

SURROGATE. In American law. The name given to the state to the judge or judicial officer who has the administration of probate matters, guardianships, etc. See Malone v. Sts. Peter & Paul's Church, 172 N.Y. 269, 64 N.E. 961. In other states he is called judge of probate, register, judge of the orphans' court, etc. He is ordinarily a county officer, with a local jurisdiction limited to his county.

In English law. One that is substituted or appointed in the room of another, as by a bishop, chancellor, judge, etc.; especially an officer appointed to dispense licenses to marry without banns. 2 Steph. Comm. 247.

SURROGATE'S COURT. In the United States. A state tribunal, with similar jurisdiction to the court of ordinary, court of probate, etc., relating to matters of probate, etc. 2 Kent, Comm. 409, note D. And see Robinson v. Fair, 9 S.Ct. 30, 128 U.S. 53, 32 L.Ed. 415; In re Hawley, 104 N.Y. 250, 10 N.E. 352.

SURROUND. To inclose on all sides; to encompass. In re Creveling, Cust. & Pat.App., 61 F.2d 862, 863.

SURROUNDING CIRCUMSTANCES. Which may permit inference of culpability on part of defendant under res ipsa loquitur rule refers, not "co circumstances directly tending to show lack of care, but only to mere neutral circumstances of control and management by defendant, which may, when explained, appear to be entirely consistent with due care. Hepp v. Quickell Auto & Supply Co., 37 N.M. 525, 25 P.2d 197.

SURSISE. L. Fr. In old English law. Neglect; omission; default; cessation.

SURSUM REDDERE. Lat. In old conveyancing. To render up; to surrender.

SURSUMREDDEITIO. Lat. A surrender.

SURVEY. v. Of land, to ascertain corners, boundaries, divisions, with distances and directions, and not necessarily to compute areas included within defined boundaries. Keer v. Fee, 179 Iowa, 1097, 161 N.W. 545, 547.

Insurance

In insurance law, the term has acquired a general meaning, inclusive of what is commonly called the "application," which contains the questions propounded on behalf of the company, and the answers of the assured. Albion Lead Works v. Williamsburg City F. Ins. Co., C.C.A.II., 12 F. 2d 733, 737. A public document, looked to both by underwriters and owners, as affording the means of ascertaining, at the time and place, the state and condition of the ship and other property at hazard. Potter v. Ocean Ins, Co., 3 Sumn. 43, 19 Fed.Cas.1,173; Hathaway v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 8 Bosw., N.Y., 68.

SURVEYOR. One who makes surveys, determines area of. portion of earth's surface, length and direction of boundary lines, and contour of surface. Severance v. Ball, 93 Cal.App, 56, 268 P. 1068, 1070.

SURVEYOR OF HIGHWAYS. In English law. A person elected by the inhabitants of a parish, in vestry assembled, to survey the highways therein. He must possess certain qualifications in point of property; and, when elected, he is compellable, unless he can show some grounds of exemption, to take upon himself the office. Mozley & Whitley.

SURVEYOR OF THE PORT. A revenue officer of the United States appointed for each of the principal ports of entry, whose duties chiefly concern the importations at his station and the determination of their amount and valuation. Rev.St.U.S. § 1068, 1070.

SURVIVAL STATUTES. Statutory provision for the survival, after death of the injured person, of certain causes of action for injury to the person whether death results from the injury or from some other cause. The cause of action which survives is for the wrong to the injured person. In re Daniel’s Estate, 294 N.W. 465, 208 Minn. 420. See, also, Wrongful Death Statutes.

SURVIVE. To continue to live or exist beyond the life, or existence of; to continue to live or exist beyond (a specified period or event); to live through in spite of; live on after passing through; to remain alive; exist in force or operation beyond any period specified. Thompson v. New Orleans Ry. & Light Co., 145 La. 805, 83 So. 19, 20.

SURVIVOR. One who survives another; one who outlives another; one who lives beyond some happening; one of two or more persons who lives after the death of the other or others. Baker v. Baker, 182 Ala. 194, 62 So. 284, 286.

The word “survivor,” however, in connection with the power of one of two trustees to act, is used not only with reference to a condition arising where one of such trustees dies, but also as indicating a trustee who continues to administer the trust after his cotrustee is disqualified, has been removed, renounces, or refuses to act. Busch v. Schuttler, 216 Ill. App. 212, 217.

SURVIVORSHIP. The living of one of two or more persons after the death of the other or others. Survivorship is where a person becomes entitled to property by reason of his having survived another person who had an interest in it. In re Conklin’s Estate, 20 N.Y.S.2d 59, 62, 259 App.Div. 432; United States v. Jacobs, Ill. & N. Y., 306 U.S. 363, 59 S.Ct. 551, 555, 83 L.Ed. 763.

SUS. PER COLL. An abbreviation of “suspensa per collum,” let him be hanged by the neck. Words formerly used in England in signing judgment against a prisoner who was to be executed; being written by the judge in the margin of the sheriff’s calendar or list, opposite the prisoner’s name. 4 BL Comm. 403. Written, also, "sus' per coll.".

SUSPECT. To have a slight or even vague idea concerning;—not necessarily involving knowledge or belief or likelihood. Cheek v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co., 89 Kan. 247, 131 P. 617, 624.

"Suspect" with reference to probable cause as grounds for arrest without warrant is ordinarily used in place of the word believe. U. S. v. Rembert, D.C.Tex., 284 F. 996, 1001. But to "suspect and believe" that a person, claiming to have been falsely imprisoned by a deputy sheriff, is a felon, is not the legal equivalent of belief on probable cause. Hill v. Wyrosdick, 216 Ala. 235, 113 So. 49, 50.

SUSPEND. To interrupt; to cause to cease for a time; to postpone; to stay, delay, or hinder; to discontinue temporarily, but with an expectation or purpose of resumption. To forbid a public officer, attorney, employee, or ecclesiastical person from performing his duties or exercising his functions for a more or less definite interval of time.
SUSPEND

To cause a temporary cessation, as of work by an employee; to lay off;—not synonymous with remove. Thomas v. City of Chicago, 194 Ill.App. 526, 529.

Also, sometimes, to discontinue or dispense with (permanently) ; to remove permanently from office; to discharge (an employee) permanently. Phelps v. Connellee, Tex.Civ.App., 278 S.W. 939, 941. See Suspension.

SUSPENDER. In Scotch law. He in whose favor a suspension is made.

SUSPENSE. When a rent, profit a prendre, and the like, are, in consequence of the unity of possession of the rent, etc., of the land out of which they issue, not in esse for a time, they are said to be in suspense, tunc dormiunt; but they may be revived or awakened. Co. Litt. 313a.

A temporary stop of a right, of a law, and the like. Thus, we speak of a suspension of the writ of habeas corpus, of a statute, of the power of alienating an estate, of a person in office, etc..

A temporary’ cutting off or debarring one, as from the privileges of an institution or society. John B. Stetson University v. Hunt, 88 Fla. 510, 102 So. 637, 639.

An ad interim stoppage or arrest of official power and pay.;—not synonymous with “removal,” which terminates wholly the incumbency of the office or employment.. State v. Board of Police & Fire Com’rs of La Crosse, 159 Wis. 295, 150 N.W. 493, 494. Temporary withdrawal or cessation from public work as distinguished from permanent severance accomplished by removal, Bois v. City of Fall River, 257 Mass. 471, 154 N.E. 270; “removal” being, however, the broader term, which may on occasion include suspension. State v. Medler, 19 N.M. 252, 142 P. 376, 379.

Ecclesiastical Law

An ecclesiastical censure, by which a spiritual person is either interdicted the exercise of his ecclesiastical function or hindered from receiving the profits of his benefice. It may be partial or total, for a limited time, or forever, when it is called "deprivation" or "amotion." Ayl. Par. 501.

Scotch Law

A stay of execution until after a further consideration of the cause. Ersk. Inst. 4, 3, 5.

Suspension of a right. The act by which a party is deprived of the exercise of his right for a time. A temporary stop of a right, a partial extinguish.. ment for a time, as contrasted with a complete extinguishment, where the right is absolutely dead. In re Muser’s Estate, 122 Misc. 164, 203 N.Y.S. 619, 621. Suspension of a right in an estate is a temporary or partial withholding of it from use or exercise. It differs from extinguishment, because a suspended right is susceptible of being revived, which is not the case where the right was extinguished. Bac. Abr. Extinguishment (A).

Suspension of arms. An agreement between belligerents, made for a short time or for a particular place, to cease hostilities between them. See, also, Armistice.

Suspension of business. These words in a statute contemplate an interruption of ordinary business operations, evidenced by some objective features; an interruption of the ordinary course of business, other than a mere failure to meet maturings obligations. Hoover Steel Ball Co. v. Schafer Ball Bearings Co., 89 N.J.Eq. 433, 105 A. 500, 501..

SUSPENSIVE CONDITION. See Condition.

SUSPENSORY CONDITION. See Condition.

SUSPICION. The act of suspecting, or the state of being suspected; imagination, generally of something ill; distrust; mistrust; doubt. McCalla v. State, 66 Ga. 348. The apprehension of something without proof or upon slight evidence. State v. Hall, Mo.App., 285 S.W. 1009, 1011.

Suspicion implies a belief or opinion based upon facts or circumstances which do not amount to proof. Burton v. McNeill, 196 S. C. 250, 13 S.E.2d 10, 11, 133 A.L.R. 603.

SUSPICIOUS CHARACTER. In the criminal laws of some of the states, a person who is known or strongly suspected to be an habitual criminal, or against whom there is reasonable cause to believe that he has committed a crime or is planning or intending to commit one, or whose actions and behavior give good ground for suspicion and who can give no good account of himself, and who may therefore be arrested or required to give security for good behavior. See McFadin v. San Antonio, 22 Tex.Civ.App. 140, 54 S.W. 48; People v. Russell, 35 Misc.Rep. 765, 72 N.Y.Supp. 1; 4 Bl. Comm. 252.

To suffer; bear. To undergo. To endure or undergo without failing or yielding; to bear up under. Webster.

SUTHDURE. The south door of a church, where canonical purgation was performed, and plaints, etc., were heard and determined. Wharton.

SUTLER. A person who, as a business, follows an army and sells provisions and liquor to the troops. A small trader who follows an army and who is licensed to sell goods, especially edibles, to the soldiers. Keane v. U. S., C.C.A.Va., 272 F. 577, 582.

SUUM CUIQUE TRIBUERE. Lat. To render to everyone his own. One of the three fundamental maxims of the law laid down by Justinian.

SUUS HARES. See Hferes.

SUZERAIN. In French and feudal law. The immediate vassal of the king; a crown vassal; a tenant in capite. A lord who possesses a fief whence other fiefs issue. Note 77 of Butler & Hargrave's notes, Co. Litt. 1. 3. Also spelled "suzereign."

International Law

A state that exercises political control over another state, in relation to which it is sovereign. Webster.

The word has no clear or precise signification. It has been extended to the control of European Powers through their colonies over imperfectly civilized people. 12 L. Quart.Rev. 223; 1896, p. 122. See, also, Hershey, Int.L. 106.

In modern times suzerainty is used as descriptive of relations, ill-defined and vague, which exist between powerful and dependent states; its very indefiniteness being its recommendation. While protecting and protected states tend to draw nearer, the reverse is true of suzerain and vassal states; a protectorate is generally the preliminary to incorporation; suzerainty, to separation. Encycl.Br.

It is said that suzerainty is title without corresponding power; protectorate is power without corresponding title. Freund, Pol.Sci.Quart. 1899, p. 28.

SWAIN; SWAINMOTE. See Swein; Sweinmote.

SWAMP. A "swamp" has been defined as wet, spongy land, soft low ground saturated with water, but not usually covered by it, marshy ground away from seashore. Campbell v. Walker, 137 Or. 375, 2 P.2d 912, 914.

SWAMP AND OVERFLOWED LANDS. Lands unfit for cultivation by reason of their swampy character and requiring drainage or reclamation to render them available for beneficial use. Miller v. Eastern Ry. & Lumber Co., 84 Wash. 31, 146 P. 171, 173; Beer v. Whitewell Lumber Co., 170 N.C. 337, 86 S.E. 1024.

Such lands, when constituting a portion of the public domain, have generally been granted by congress to the several states within whose limits they lie. See Miller v. Tobin, C.C.Or., 18 F. 614; Keeran v. Allen, 33 Cal. 546; Hogaboom v. Ehrhardt, 58 Cal. 233; Thompson v. Thornton, 50 Cal. 144; Martin v. Busch, 93 Fla. 535, 112 So. 274, 284.

SWAINMOTE. See Sweinmote.

SWARF-MONEY. Warth-money; or guard-money paid in lieu of the service of castle-ward. Cowell.

SWATCH. Commercially, a small sample of cloth from which suits, etc., are to be ordered. U. S. Fashion & Sample Book Co. v. Montrose Cloak & Suit Co., Mo.Sup., 218 S.W. 867, 869.

SWEAR. To put on oath; to administer an oath to a person.

To take an oath; to become bound by an oath duly administered. To declare on oath the truth (of a petition, etc.). Indiana Quarries Co. v. Simms, 158 Ky. 415, 165 S.W. 422; Landrum v. Landrum, 159 Ga. 324, 125 S.E. 832, 833, 38 A.L.R. 217.

SWEARING THE PEACE. Showing to a magistrate that one has just cause to be afraid of another in consequence of his menaces, in order to have him bound over to keep the peace.

SWEATING. The questioning of a person in custody charged with crime with intent to obtain information concerning his connection therewith or knowledge thereof by plying him with questions, or by threats or other wrongful means, extorting information to be used against him. Under the statute mere questioning amounts to "sweating" if done for the purpose of extorting from the accused information to be used against him; that is, inducing him to unwillingly or involuntarily give such information. Commonwealth v., McClanahan, 153 Ky. 412, 155 S.W. 1131, 1132, Ann.Cas. 1915C, 132.

SWEET SHOP. A plant whose employees are overworked and paid low wages, or a place where employees are required to work to an extent hardly endurable, and in the public mind the term imputes unsavory and illegal business practices. Masters v. Sun Mfg. Co., 237 Mo.App. 240, 165 S.W.2d 701, 703.

SWEETSTAKES. In horse racing, the sum of the stakes for which the subscribers agree to pay for each horse nominated. Stone v. Clay, 10 C.C. A. 147, 61 F. 889.

SWEEN. In old English law. A freeman or freeholder within the forest.
SWELL. To enlarge or increase. In an action of tort, circumstances of aggravation may "swell" the damages.

SWIFT WITNESS. A term colloquially applied to a witness who is unduly zealous or partial for the side which calls him, and who betrays his bias by his extreme readiness to answer questions or volunteer information.

SWINDLER. A cheat; one guilty of defrauding divers persons. 1 Term, 748.

SWINDLING. Cheating and defrauding grossly with deliberate artifice. Wyatt v. Ayres, 2 Port., Ala., 157; Chase v. Whitlock, 3 Hill, N.Y., 140. Usually applied to a transaction where the guilty party procures the delivery to him, under a pretended contract, of the personal property of another, with the felonious design of appropriating it to his own use. 2 Russ.Cr. 130; Stevenson v. Hayden, 2 Mass. 406; Jones v. State, 97 Ga. 430, 25 S.E. 319.

The acquisition of any personal or movable property, money, or instrument of writing conveying or securing a valuable right, by means of some false or deceitful pretense or device, or fraudulent representation, with intent to appropriate the same to the use of the party so acquiring, or of destroying or impairing the rights of the party justly entitled to the same. May v. State, 15 Tex.App. 436; Cochrain v. State, 93 Tex.Cr.R. 483, 248 S.W. 43, 44.

To make out offense of "cheating" and "swindling" by false representations, state must prove that representations were made, that representations were knowingly and designedly false, that representations were made with intent to defraud, that representations did defraud, that representations related to existing fact or past event, and that party to whom representations were made, relying on their truth, was thereby induced to part with his property. Code 1618, § 26-7401 et seq. Diamond v. State, 52 Ga.App. 184, 15 Tex.App. 436; Cochrain v. State, 93 Tex.Cr.R. 483, 248 S.W. 43, 44.

As used in railroading, a device for moving a small section of track so that rolling stock may be run or shunted from one line to another. Jeffery v. Kewaunee, G. B. & W. Ry. Co., supra. A mechanical arrangement of movable parts of rails for transferring cars from one track to another; also a siding; a turnout. Pittsburgh Rys. Co. v. Borough of Carrick, 259 Pa. 333, 103 A. 106, 108. A track in the nature of a sidetrack adjacent to and used in connection with another line of track.

SWORN BROTHERS. In old English law. Persons who, by mutual oaths, covenant to share in each other’s fortunes.

SWORN CLERKS IN CHANCERY. Certain officers in the English court of chancery, whose duties were to keep the records, make copies of pleadings, etc. Their offices were abolished by St. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 103.

SYLLOBUS. An abstract; a headnote; a note prefixed to the report of an adjudged case, containing an epitome or brief statement of the rulings of the court upon the point or points decided in the case. In West Virginia it is the law of the case, whatever may be the reasoning employed in the opinion of the court. Kuhn v. Coal Co., 215 U.S. 360, 30 S.Ct. 140, 141, 54 L.Ed. 228. The syllabus, however, in that state, is never made up of finding of facts, but is limited to points of law determined. Sometimes the finding of facts is referred to for the purpose of explaining the point of law adjudicated, but only for that purpose. Koonce v. Doolittle, 48 W.Va. 592, 37 S.E. 644, 645. Likewise in Ohio, the authority of decisions of its Supreme Court is limited to points stated in the syllabus. Walsh v. E. G. Shinner Co., C.C.A. Del., 50 F.2d 586, 588. But ordinarily, where a headnote, even though prepared by the court, is given no special force by statute or rule of court, the opinion is to be looked to for the original and authentic statement of the grounds of decision. Burbank v. Ernst, 232 U.S. 162, 34 S.Ct. 299, 58 L.Ed. 551.

SYMBOLLUS ANIMIE. Lat. A mortuary, or soul scot. See Soul Scot.

SYMOND’S INN. Formerly an inn of chancery.

SYNALLAGMATIC CONTRACT. In the civil law. A bilateral or reciprocal contract, in which the parties expressly enter into mutual engagements, each binding himself to the other. Poth. Obl. no. 9. Such are the contracts of sale, hiring, etc. See State ex rel. Waterman v. J. S. Waterman and Co., 178 La. 340, 151 So. 422, 426.

SYNCHRONISM. Two things may be said to be operating in “synchronism,” not merely when they operate simultaneously, but also when their cycles of operation bear a timed relation to each other. Diamond Power Specialty Corporation v. Bayer, C.C.A.Mo., 13 F.2d 337, 342.

SYNCOPE. To cut short, or pronounce things so as not to be understood. Cowell.

SYNDIC. In the civil law. An advocate or pa, tron; a burgess or recorder; an agent or attorney who acts for a corporation or university; an ac, tor or procurator; an assignee. Wharton.

The word “syndic” in the civil law corresponds very nearly with that of assignee under the common law. Mobile & O. R. Co. v. Whitney, 39 Ala. 468, 471.

SYNCRONE. In English common law. An agent appointed by a corporation for the purpose of obtaining letters of guardianship and the like, to whom such letters were issued. Minnesota L. & T. Co. v. Beebe, 40 Minn. 7, 41 N.W. 232, 233, 2 L.R.A. 418.

In French law. The person who is commissioned by the courts to administer a bankruptcy. He fulfills the same functions as the trustee or assignee. Also, one who is chosen to conduct the affairs and attend to the concerns of a body corporate or community. In this sense the word corresponds to director or manager. Rodman Notes to Code de Com. p. 351; Dalloz, Dict. Syndic. See Field v. United States, 9 Pet. 182, 9 L.Ed. 94.

In Louisiana. The assignee of a bankrupt. Also, one of several persons to be elected by the creditors of a succession, for the purpose of ad. ministering thereon, whenever a succession has been renounced by the heirs, or has been accepted under the benefit of an inventory, and neither the beneficiary heirs, their attorney in fact, nor tutor will accept the administration and give the security required. Civ.Code. La. art. 1224.

'SYNDICALISM. The theory, plan, or practice of trade-union action which aims by the general strike and direct action to establish control by local organizations of workers over the means and processes of production. Webster.

A form or development of trade-unionism, originating in France, which aims at the possession of th means of production and distribution, and ultimately at the control of society and government, by the federated bodies of industrial workers, and which seeks to realize its purposes through the agency of general strikes and of terrorism, sabotage, violence, or other criminal means. New Cent. Dict.

Criminal Syndicalism

Defined by the California Criminal Syndicalism Act as any doctrine or precept advocating, teaching, or aiding and abetting the commission of crime, sabotage (defined in the act as willful and malicious physical damage or injury to physical property), or unlawful acts of force and violence or unlawful methods of terrorism, as a means of accomplishing a change in industrial ownership, or control, or effecting any political change. See People v. Lesse, 52 Cal.App. 280, 199 P. 46, 47; State v. Dingman, 37 Idaho, 253, 219 P. 760, 763.

SYNDICATE. A university committee. A combination of persons or firms united for the purpose of enterprises too large for individuals to undertake; or a group of financiers who buy up the shares of a company in order to sell them at a profit by creating a scarcity. Mozley & Whitley.

Merely "joint adventure," which is special combination in specific venture for profit without partnership or corporate designation. McCausey v. Burnet, 60 App.D.C. 201, 50 F.2d 491, 492.

SYNDICATING. Gathering materials suitable for newspaper publication from writers and artists and distributing the same at regular intervals, in the form of matrices, to newspapers throughout the country for publication on the same day. Star Co. v. Wheeler Syndicate, 91 Misc. Rep. 640, 155 N.Y.S. 782, 784.

SYNDICOS, or SYNDICUS. One chosen by a college, municipality, etc., to defend its cause. Calvin. See Syndic.

SYNGRAPIL The name given by the canonists to deeds or other written instruments of which both parts were written on the same piece of parchment, with some word or letters of the alphabet written between them, through which the parchment was cut in such a manner as to leave half the word on one part and half on the other. It thus corresponded to the chirograph or indenture of the common law. 2 Bl.Comm. 295, 296.

Formerly such writings were attested by the subscription and crosses of the witnesses; afterwards, to prevent frauds and concealments, they made deeds of mutual covenant in a script and rescript, or in a part and counterpart, and in the middle between the two copies they wrote the word syngraphus in large letters, which, being cut through the parchment and one being delivered to each party, on being afterwards put together proved their authenticity.

A deed, bond, or other written instrument under the hand and seal of all the parties. It was so called because the parties wrote together.

SYNOD. A meeting or assembly of ecclesiastical persons concerning religion; being the same thing, in Greek, as convocation in Latin. There are four kinds: (1) A general or universal synod or council, where bishops of all nations meet; (2) a national synod of the clergy of one nation only; (3) a provincial synod, where ecclesiastical persons of a province only assemble, being now what is called the "convocation;" (4) a diocesan synod, of those of one diocese. 'A synod in Scotland is composed of three or more presbyters. Wharton.

A convention of bishops and elders within a district including at least three presbyteries. Trustees of Pencader Presbyterian Church in Pencader Hundred v. Gibson, Del., 22 A.2d 782, 788.

A meeting of the few adjoining presbyteries,-not the same as an ecumenical council, which is a council of all, and not of a part. Groesbeeck v. Dunscomb, 41 How. Pract., N.Y., 344.

SYNODAL. A tribute or payment in money paid to the bishop or archdeacon by the inferior clergy, at the Easter visitation.

SYNODALES TESTES. L. Lat. Synods-men (corrupted into sidesmen) were the urban and rural deans, now the church-wardens. See Sidesmen.

SYNONYMOUS. Expressing the same or nearly the same idea. McCarthy v. Dunlevy-Franklin Co., 277 Pa. 467, 121 A. 409, 410; Hoffine v. Ewing, 60 Neb. 729, 84 N.W. 93, 95.

SYNOPSIS. A brief or partial statement, less than the whole; an epitome; synonymous with SYPHILIS. In medical jurisprudence. A venereal disease (vulgarly called “the pox”) of peculiar virulence, infectious by direct contact, capable of hereditary transmission, and the source of various other diseases and, directly or indirectly, of insanity.

SYSTEM. Orderly combination or arrangement, as of particulars, parts, or elements into a whole; especially such combination according to some rational principle; any methodic arrangement of parts. State v. Kistler, 119 Neb. 89, 227 N.W. 319, 320. Method; manner; mode. Fosche v. Union Traction Co., 108 Kan. 585; 196 P. 423, 424.

In mining usage, under the principle that a system or plan of development is sufficient to meet the requirements of annual expenditure in development of mining claims, the term “system” or “general system” of work means that work as it is commenced on the ground is such that if continued it will lead to a discovery and development of the veins or ore bodies that are supposed to be in the claims, or if these are known that the work will facilitate the extraction of ores and minerals. Golden Giant Mining Co. v. Hill, 27 N.M. 124, 198 P. 276, 279, 14 A.L.R. 1450.
T. As an abbreviation, this letter usually stands for either "Territory," "Trinity," "term," "tempore," (in the time of,) or "title."

Every person who was convicted of felony, short of murder, and admitted to the benefit of clergy, was at one time marked with this letter upon the brawn of the thumb. Abolished by 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27. Whart. Dict.

By a law of the Province of Pennsylvania, A. D. 1698, it was provided that a convicted thief should wear a badge in the form of the letter "T.," upon his left sleeve, which badge should be at least four inches long and of a color different from that of his outer garment. Linn, Laws Prov. Pa. 275.

T. R. E. An abbreviation of "Tempore Regis Edwardi," (in the time of King Edward,) of common occurrence in Domesday, when the valuation of manors, as it was in the time of Edward the Confessor, is recounted. Cowell.

TABARD. A short gown; a herald's coat; a surcoat.

TABARDER. One who wears a tabard or short gown; the name is still used as the title of certain bachelors of arts on the old foundation of Queen's College, Oxford. Enc. Lond.

TABLE. A synopsis or condensed statement, bringing together numerous items or details so as to be comprehended in a single view; as genealogical tables, exhibiting the names and relationships of all the persons composing a family; life and annuity tables, used by actuaries; interest tables, etc.

TABLE DE MARBRE. Fr. In old French law. Table of Marble; a principal seat of the admiralty, so called. These Tables de Marbre are frequently mentioned in the Ordonnance of the Marine. Burrill.

TABLE OF CASES. An alphabetical list of the adjudged cases cited, referred to, or digested in a legal text-book, volume of reports, or digest, with references to the sections, pages, or paragraphs where they are respectively cited, etc., which is commonly either prefixed or appended to the volume.

TABLE RENTS. In English law. Payments which used to be made to bishops, etc., reserved and appropriated to their table or housekeeping. Wharton.

TABLEAU OF DISTRIBUTION. In Louisiana. A list of creditors of an insolvent estate, stating what each is entitled to. Taylor v. Hollander, 4 Mart.N.S., La., 535.

TABULA. Lat. In Roman law. A tablet. Used in voting, and in giving the verdict of juries and decision of judges; and, when written upon, commonly translated "ballot." The laws which introduced and regulated the mode of voting by ballot were called "leges tabellarice." Calvin.; 1 Kent, Comm. 232, note.

TABELLIO. Lat. In Roman law. Tables. Writings of any kind used as evidences of a transaction. Brissonius. Contracts and written instruments of all kinds, especially wills. So called because originally written on tablets and with wax. Calvinus.

TABULAE NUPTIALES. In the civil law. A written record of a marriage; or the agreement as to the dos.

TABULARIUS. Lat. A notary, or tabellio. Calvin.
TAC, TAK. In old records. A kind of Customary payment by a tenant. Cowell.

TAC FREE. In old records. Free from the common duty or imposition of tac. Cowell.

TACHOMETER. A device used on automobiles to record speed. Cooper v. Hoeglund, 221 Minn. 446, 22 N.W.2d 450.

TACIT. Existing, inferred, or understood without being openly expressed or stated, implied by silence or silent acquiescence, understood, implied as a tacit agreement; a tacit understanding. State v. Chadwick, 150 Or. 645, 47 P.2d 232, 234. Done or made in silence, implied or indicated, but not actually expressed. Goree v. Midstates Oil Corporation, 205 La. 988, 18 So.2d 591, 596. Manifested by the refraining from contradiction or objection; inferred from the situation and circumstances, in the absence of express matter.

TACIT ACCEPTANCE. In the civil law, a tacit acceptance of an inheritance takes place when some act is done by the heir which necessarily supposes his intention to accept and which he would have no right to do but in his capacity as heir. Civ. Code La. art. 988.

TACIT DEDICATION. Of property for public use dedication arising from silence or inactivity, without express contract or agreement. Goree v. Midstates Oil Corporation, 205 La. 988, 18 So.2d 591, 596. Without express contract or agreement. 1 Bouv. Inst. no. 120.

TACIT LAW. A law which derives its authority from the common consent of the people without any legislative enactment. 1 Bouv. Inst. no. 120.

TACIT MORTGAGE. In the law of Louisiana. The law alone in certain cases gives to the creditor a mortgage on the property of his debtor, without it being requisite that the parties should stipulate it. This is called “legal mortgage.” It is called also “tacit mortgage,” because it is established by the law without the aid of any agreement. Civ. Code La. art. 3311.

TACIT RELOCATION. A doctrine borrowed from the Roman law. It is a presumed renovation of the contract from the period at which the former expired, and is held to arise from implied consent of parties, in consequence of their not having signified their intention that agreement should terminate at the period stipulated. Though the original contract may have been for a longer period than one year, the renewed agreement can never be for more than one year, because verbal contract of location can extend longer. Strygley v. City of Nashville, 175 Tenn. 417, 135 S.W.2d 451.

In Scotch law. The tacit or implied renewal of a lease, inferred when the landlord, instead of warning a tenant to remove at the stipulated expiration of the lease, has allowed him to continue without making a new agreement. Bell, “Relocation.”

TACIT TACK. In Scotch law. An implied tack or lease; inferred from a tacksman’s possessing peaceably after his tack is expired. 1 Forb. Inst. pt. 2, p. 153.

TACIT QUIEDAM HABENTUR PRO EXPRES- SIS. 8 Coke, 40. Things unexpressed are sometimes considered as expressed.

TACITE. Lat. Silently; impliedly; tacitly.

TACITURNITY. In Scotch law. In laches in not prosecuting a legal claim, or in acquiescing in an adverse one. Mozley & Whitley.

TACK, v. To annex some junior lien to a first lien, thereby acquiring priority over an intermediate one. See Tacking.

TACK, n. In Scotch law. A term corresponding to the English “lease,” and denoting the same species of contract.

Tack duty. Rent reserved upon a lease.

TACKING. The uniting of securities given at different times, so as to prevent any intermediate purchaser from claiming a title to redeem or otherwise discharge one lien, which is prior, without redeeming or discharging the other liens also, which are subsequent to his own title. 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 412. The term is particularly applied to the action of a third mortgagee who, by buying the first lien and uniting it to his own, gets priority over the second mortgagee.

The source and origin of the English doctrine is the case of Marsh v. Lee, 2 Ventr. 337; 1 Ch. Cas. 162; 1 Wit & T. L.C.Eq. 611, notes. This case and the doctrine founded upon it has been the subject of severe criticism. Lord Ch. J. Holt is said to have been one of the first to benefit by the right of tacking. H. v. Mill, 2 Vern. 279. This doctrine is inconsistent with laws which require the recording of mortgages, and in the United States, it does not exist to any extent. Brayee v. Bank, 14 Ohio 318; Dyer v. Graves, 37 Vt. 375; Parkist v. Alexander, 1 Johns.Ch., N.Y., 399; Bishp. Eq. § 159.

The term is also used in a number of other connections, as of possessions, disabilities, or items in accounts or other dealings. In these several cases the purpose of the proposed tacking is to avoid the bar of a statute of limitations. See Davis v. Coblens, 174 U.S. 719, 19 S. a. 832, 43 L. Ed. 1147; Knippenberg v. Morris, 80 Ind. 540; Eager v. Com., 4 Mass. 182; Sharp v. Stephenson Committee, 21 Ky.L.Rep. 687, 52 S.W. 977; Graham v. Stanton, 177 Mass. 321, 58 N.E. 1023; Moore v. Blackman, 109 Wis. 528, 85 N.W. 429. The term is applied especially to the process of making out title to land by adverse possession, when the present occupant and claimant has not been in possession for the full statutory period, but adds or “tacks” to his own possession that of previous occupants under whom he claims.

TACKSMAN

TACKSMAN. In Scotch law. A tenant or lessee; one to whom a tack is granted. 1 Forb. Inst. pt. 2, p. 153.

TACTIS SACROSANCTIS. Lat. In old English law. Touching the holy evangelists. Fleta, lib. 3, c. 16, § 21. "A bishop may swear visis evangeliiis, [looking at the Gospels,] and not tactis, and it is good enough." Freem. 133.

TAIL. Limited; abridged; reduced; curtailed, as by way of creation, or to certain heirs.

TAIL, ESTATE IN. An estate of inheritance, which, instead of descending to heirs generally, goes to the heirs of the donee’s body, which means his lawful issue, his children, and through them to his grandchildren in a direct line, so long as his posterity endures in a regular order and course of descent, and upon the death of the first owner without issue, the estate determines. 1 Washb. Real Prop. *72. Kolmer v. Miles, 270 Ill. 20, 110 N.E. 407, 408; Tantum v. Campbell, 83 N.J. Eq. 361, 91 A. 120, 121; Conover v. Cade, 184 Ind. 604, 112 N.E. 7, 11; Harwell v. Harwell, 151 Tenn. 587, 271 S.W. 353, 355.

A frehold of inheritance, limited to a person and the heirs of his body, general or special, male or female, and is the creature of the statute de Donis. The estate, provided the entail be not barred, reverts to the donor or reversioner, if the donee die without leaving descendants answering to the condition annexed to the estate upon its creation, unless there be a limitation over to a third person on default of such descendants, when it vests in such third person or remainder-man. Wharton. In re Reeves, 10 Del. Ch. 324, 92 A. 246, 247; 10 Del.C. 483, 94 A. 511, 513; Conover v. Cade, 184 Ind. 604, 112 N.E. 7, 11; Gardner v. Anderson, 114 Kan. 778, 227 P. 743, 748; Cox v. Fink, 200 Ky. 219, 254 S.W. 757, 758.

Several Tail
An entail severally to two; as if land is given to two men and their wives, and to the heirs of their bodies begotten; here the donees have a joint estate for their two lives, and yet they have a several inheritance, because the issue of the one shall have his moiety, and the issue of the other the other moiety. Cowell.

Tail after Possibility of Issue Extinct
A species of estate tail which arises where one is tenant in special tail, and a person from whose body the issue was to spring dies without issue, Or, having left issue, that issue becomes extinct. In either of these cases the surviving tenant in special tail becomes "tenant in tail after possibility of issue extinct." 2 Bl.Comm. 124.

Tail Female
When lands are given to a person and the female heirs of his or her body. The male heirs are not capable of inheriting it.

Tail General
An estate in tail granted to one "and the heirs of his body begotten," which is called "tail general" because, how often soever such donee in tail be married, his issue in general by all and every such marriage is, in successive order, capable of inheriting the estate tail per formam doni. 2 Bl.Comm. 113; Tantum v. Campbell, 83 N.J. Eq. 361, 91 A. 120, 122. This is where an estate is limited to a man and the heirs of his body, without any restriction at all; or, according to some authorities, with no other restriction than that in relation to sex. Thus, tail male general is the same thing as tail male; the word "general," in such case, implying that there is no other restriction upon the descent of the estate than that it must go in the male line. So an estate in tail female general is an estate in tail female. The word "general," in the phrase, expresses a purely negative idea, and may denote the absence of any restriction, or the absence of some given restriction which is tacitly understood. Mozley & Whitley.

Tail Male
When certain lands are given to a person and the male heirs of his or her body. The female heirs are not capable of inheriting it.

Tail Special
This denotes an estate in tail where the succession is restricted to certain heirs of the donee’s body, and does not go to all of them in general; e. g., where lands and tenements are given to a man and "the heirs of his body on Mary, his now wife, to be begotten;" here no issue can inherit but such special issue as is engendered between those two, not such as the husband may have by another wife, and therefore it is called "special tail." 2 Bl.Comm. 113. It is defined by Cowell as the limitation of lands and tenements to a man and his wife and the heirs of their two bodies. But the phrase need not be thus restricted. Tail special, in its largest sense, is where the gift is restrained to certain heirs of the donor’s body, and does not go to all of them in general. Mozley & Whitley.

TAILAGE. See Tallage.

TAILLE. Fr.
In old English law. The fee which is opposed to fee-simple, because it is so minced or pared that it is not in the owner’s free power to dispose of it, but it is, by the first giver, cut or divided from all other, and tied to the issue of the donee,—in short, an estate-tail. Wharton.

In old French law. A tax or assessment levied by the king, or by any great lord, upon his subjects, usually taking the form of an imposition upon the owners of real estate. Brande. The equivalent of the English tallage—the typical direct tax in France of the Middle Ages, as tonlieu was the generic term for an indirect tax. See Tallage.

TAKE. To lay hold of; to gain or receive into possession; to seize; to deprive one of the use or possession of; to assume ownership. City of Durham v. Wright, 190 N.C. 568, 130 S.E. 161, 163.

Thus, constitutions generally provide that a man’s property shall not be taken for public uses without just compensation. Evansville & C. R. Co. v. Dick, 9 Ind. 433; Gas Prec. Co. v. Rankin, 63 Mont. 372, 207 P. 993, 998, 24 A.L.R. 294; Piper v. Ekern, 180 Wis. 586, 194 N.W. 159, 162, 34 A.L.R. 32. Property may be deemed “taken” within the meaning of these constitutional provisions when it is totally destroyed or rendered valueless, Lund v. Salt Lake County, 58 Utah 546, 200 P. 510, 513; or when it is damaged by a public use in connection with an actual taking by the exercise of eminent domain. City of St. Louis v. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co., 372 Mo. 80, 197 S.W. 107, 111; or when there is interference with use of property to one’s prejudice, with resulting diminution in value thereof, Webster County v. Lutz, 234 Ky. 618, 28 S.W.2d 966, 967. But acquisition of title or total destruction of value is not essential to “taking,” for which compensation must be made. Cheves v. Whitehead, D.C.Ga., 1 F. Supp. 321, 324.

The word take has many shades of meaning, precise meaning which it is to bear in any case depending on the subject with respect to which it is used. Kennedy v. New York Life Ins. Co., 178 Misc. 258, 172 So. 743, 745.

In the law of larceny, to obtain or assume possession of a chattel unlawfully, and without the owner’s consent; to appropriate things to one’s own use with felonious intent. Thus, an actual taking is essential to constitute larceny. 4 Bl. Comm. 430. A “taking” occurs when a person with a preconceived design to appropriate property to his own use obtains possession of it by means of fraud or trickery. People v. Edwards, Cal.App. 102, 236 P. 944, 948.

To seize or apprehend a person; to arrest the body of a person by virtue of lawful process. Thus, a capias commands the officer to take the body of the defendant. Corn. v. Hall, 9 Gray, Mass., 267, 69 Am.Dec. 285.

To acquire the title to an estate; to receive or be entitled to an estate in lands from another person by virtue of some species of title. Thus one is said to take by purchase, “take by descent,” “take a life-interest under the devise,” etc. In re Bock, 125 Misc. 653, 211 N.Y.S. 621, 622.

To receive the verdict of a jury; to superintend the delivery of a verdict; to hold a court. The commission of assize in England empowers the judges to take the assizes; that is, according to its ancient meaning, to take the verdict of a peculiar species of jury called an “assize;” but, in its present meaning, “to hold the assizes.” 3 Bl. Comm. 59, 185. To choose; e. g., ad capiendas assisas, to choose a jury.

To procure or to obtain (an appeal). Nessans v. Colomes, 136 La. 1051, 68 So. 122; Cochran v. State, 206 Ala. 74, 89 So. 278.

See, also, Taking.

TAKE AWAY. This term in a statute punishing every person who shall take away any female under 18 from her father for the purpose of prostitution requires only that such person procure or cause her to go away by some persuasion, enticement, or inducement offered, exercised, or held out to the girl, or by furnishing her the means or money with which to go away. State v. Corrigan, 262 Mo. 195, 171 S.W. 51, 54.

TAKE BACK. To revoke; to retract; as, to take back one’s promise. Dimock State Bank v. Boehnen, 46 S.D. 50, 190 N.W. 485.

TAKE BY STEALTH. To steal; feloniously to take and carry away the personal goods of another; to take without right, secretly, and without leave or consent of the owner. Roach v. State, 23 Okl.Cr. 280, 214 P. 563, 564.

A party to a negotiable instrument, particularly an indorser or acceptor, is said to “take up” the paper, or to “retire” it, when he pays its amount, or substitutes other security for it, and receives it again into his own hands. See Hartzell v. McClurg, 54 Neb. 316, 74 N.W. 626; McKenzie v. Smith, 18 Ga.App. 626, 89 S.E. 1097, 1098.
TALENOKO. Chopped, cooked, and canned barn-boo sprouts from Japan, used as a vegetable in a manner similar to asparagus. Nippon Co. v. U. S., 12 Ct.Cust.App. 548, 549.

TAKEOVER BID. A tender offer, cL. v.

TAKER. One who takes or acquires; particularly, one who takes an estate by devise. When an estate is granted subject to a remainder or executory devise, the devisee of the immediate interest is called the "first taker."

TAKING. In criminal law and torts. The act of laying hold upon an article, with or without removing the same. It implies a transfer of possession, dominion, or control. See Take.

Under various statutes relating to sexual offenses, such as the abduction of a girl under the age of 18 years for the purpose of carnal intercourse, to constitute a "taking" no force, actual or constructive, need be exercised. State v. Lauzer, 152 Minn. 279, 188 N.W. 558, 559. The "taking" may be effected by persuasion, enticement, or inducement. State v. Richards, 88 Wash. 160, 152 P. 720. And it is not necessary that the girl be taken from the control or against the will of those having lawful authority over her. State v. Lauzer, 152 Minn. 279, 188 N.W. 558. But the state must prove conduct by defendant indicating a con-trol, complete or partial, of her person, having sexual inter-course as its object. State v. Clough, Del.Gen.Sess., 134 A. 172, 173.

TALE. The count or counting of money. Said to be derived from the same root as "tally." Cowell. Whence also the modern word "teller."

Old Pleading

The plaintiff's count, declaration, or narrative of his case. 3 Bl.Comm. 293.

TALES. Lat. Such; such men. A number of jurors added to a deficient panel to supply the de-ficiency. Nesbit v. People, 19 Colo. 441, 36 P. 221. See Shields v. Bank, 3 Hun, N.Y., 477, 479. When, by means of challenges or any other cause, a sufficient number of unexceptionable jurors does not appear at the trial, either party may pray a "tales," as it is termed; that is, a supply of such men as are summoned on the first panel in order to make up the deficiency. Brown. See State v. McCrystal, 43 La.Ann. 907, 9 So. 922; Railroad Co. v. Mask, 64 Miss. 738, 2 So. 360.

A list of such jurymen as were of the tales, kept in the king's bench office in England.

TALES DE CIRCUMSTANTIBUS. So many of the by-standers. The emphatic words of the old writ awarded to the sheriff to make up a deficiency of jurors out of the persons present in court. 3 Bl.Comm. 365.

The order of the judge for taking such by-standers as jurors. See Lee v. Evaul, 1 N.J.Law. 283; Fuller v. State, 1 Blackf., Ind., 65.

TALESMAN. A person summoned to act as a juror from among the by-standers in the court. Linehan v. State, 113 Ala. 70, 21 So. 497; Shields v. Niagara County Sa'y. Bank, 5 Thomp. & C., N.Y., 587. A person summoned as one of the tales added to a jury. Webster.

TALIO. Lat. In the civil law. Like for like; punishment in the same kind; the punishment of an injury by an act of the same kind, as an eye for an eye, a limb for a limb, etc. Calvin.

TALIS INTERPRETATIO SEMPER FIENDA EST, UT EVITETUR ABSURDUM ET INCONVENIENS, ET NE JUDICIUM SIT ILLUSORIUM. 1 Coke, 52. Interpretation is always to be made in such a manner that what is absurd and inconvenient may be avoided, and the judgment be not illusory [or nugatory].

TALIS NON EST EADEM; NAM NULLUM SIMILE EST IDEM, 4 Coke, 18. What is like is not the same; for nothing similar is the same.

TALIS RES, VEL TALE RECTUM, QUAE VEL QUOD NON EST IN HOMINE ADTUNC SUPERSTITE SED TANTUMmodo EST ET CON-SISTIT IN CONSIDERATIONE ET INTELLIGENTIA LEGIS, ET QUOD ALII DIERUNT TALEM REM VEL TALE RECTUM FORE IN NUBIBUS. Such a thing or such a right as is not vested in a person then living, but merely exists in the consideration and contemplation of law [is said to be in abeyance,] and others have said that such a thing or such a right is in the clouds. Co. Litt. 342.

TALITER PROCESSUM EST. So it has proceeded. Words formerly used in pleading, by which a defendant, in justifying his conduct by the process of inferior court, alleged the proceed-ings in such inferior court. Steph.P1. 5th ed. p. 369. Upon pleading the judgment of an inferior court, the proceedings preliminary to such judg-ment, and on which the same was founded, must, to some extent, appear in the pleading, but the rule is that they may be alleged with a general allegation that "such proceedings were had," instead of a detailed account of the proceedings themselves, and this general allegation is called the "taliter processum est." A like concise mode of stating former proceedings in a suit is adopted at the present day in chancy proceedings upon petitions and in actions in the nature of bills of revivor and supplement. Brown.

TALLAGE, or TAILAGE. A piece cut out of the whole. Cowell. Used metaphorically for a share of a man's substance paid by way of tribute, toll, or tax, being derived from the French "tailler," which signifies to cut a piece out of the whole. Cowell. See State v. Switzler, 143 Mo. 287, 45 S.W. 245, 40 L.R.A. 280; Lake Shore, etc., R. Co. v. Grand Rapids, 102 Mich. 374, 60 N.W. 767, 29 L.R.A. 195. A term used to denote subsidies, taxes, customs, and, indeed, any imposition whatever by the government for the purpose of raising a revenue. Bacon, Abr. Smuggling, etc. (B); Fort. De Laud. 26; Madd. Exch. c. 17; Co. 2d Inst. 531. A tax upon cities, townships and boroughs granted to the king as a part of the royal revenue. 2 Steph.Com. 622; 1 Poll. & Maitl. 647.
TALLAGER. A tax or toll gatherer; mentioned by Chaucer (and spelled “talaigier”).

TALLAGIUM. L. Lat. A term including all taxes.

TALLAGIUM FACERE. To give up accounts in the exchequer, where the method of accounting was by tallies.

TALLATIO. A keeping account by tallies. Cowell by Chaucer (and spelled “talaigier”).

TALLEY, or TALLY. A stick cut into two parts, on each whereof is marked, with notches or otherwise, what is due between debtor and creditor. It was the ancient mode of keeping accounts. One part was held by the creditor, and the other by the debtor. The use of tallies in the exchequer was abolished by St. 23 Geo. III. c. 82, and the old tallies were ordered to be destroyed by St 4 & 5 Wm. IV. c. 15. Wharton. By the custom of London, sealed tallies were effectual as a deed. Liber Albus 191a. They are admissible by the French and Italian Codes as evidence between traders. It is said that they were negotiable. See Penny Encycl.; Hall, Antiq. of Exch. 118.

Tallies of loan. A term originally used in England to describe exchequer bills, which were issued by the officers of the exchequer when a temporary loan was necessary to meet the exigencies of the government, and charged on the credit of the exchequer in general, and made assignable from one person to another. Briscoe v. Bank of Kentucky, 11 Pet. 328, 9 L.Ed. 709.

Tally trade. A system of dealing by which dealers furnish certain articles on credit, upon an agreement for the payment of the stipulated price by certain weekly or monthly installments. McCul. Dict.

TALLIA. L. Lat. A tax or tribute; tallage; a share taken or cut out of any one’s income or means. Spelman.

TALMUD. A work which embodies the civil and canonical law of the Jewish people.

TALTARUM’S CASE. A case reported in Yearb. 12 Edw. IV. 19-21, which is regarded as having established the foundation of common recoveries.

TALWEG. Germ. (Tal meaning valley, Weg meaning way.) Commonly used by writers on international law in definition of water boundaries between states, meaning the middle or deepest or most navigable channel, and while often styled “fairway” or “midway” or “main channel” the word has been taken over into various languages and the doctrine of Talweg is often applicable in respect of water boundaries to sounds, bays, straits, gulfs, estuaries and other arms of the sea and also applies to boundary lakes and landlocked seas whenever there is a deep water sailing channel therein. State of Louisiana v. State of Mississippi, 26 S.Ct. 408, 421, 202 U.S. 1, 50 L.Ed. 913.

TAM QUAM. A phrase used as the name of a writ of error from inferior courts, when the error is supposed to be as well in giving the judgment as in awarding execution upon it. (Tam in redditione judicij, quam in adjudicatone executionis.) Venire Tam Quam

One by which a jury was summoned, as well to try an issue as to inquire of the damages on a default. 2 Tidd, Pr. 722, 895.

TAME. Domesticated; accustomed to man; re-claimed from a natural state of wildness. In the Latin phrase, tame animals are described as domi- tice nature.

TAMEN. Lat. Notwithstanding; nevertheless; yet.

TAMPER. To meddle so as to alter a thing, especially to make corrupting or perverting changes; as, to tamper with a document or a text; to interfere improperly; to meddle; to busy oneself rashly; to try trifling or foolish experiments. United States v. Tomicich, D.C.Pa., 41 F.Supp. 33, 35.

TANAMOSHI. Japanese. An association usually consisting of from fourteen to seventeen members. Members are obligated to contribute an agreed amount per month to the association. Each month a drawing is held and the member who bids the highest amount by way of interest and who has not yet received a loan from the association is entitled to take the aggregate of contributions for that particular month, except that at the last meeting of the association no interest is paid. The interest bid each month is returned to each member of the Tanamoshi as his profit on the amount of his contribution to the association. Heylin v. Yil, 30 Haw. 606, 607.

TANGIBLE. Capable of being touched; also, perceptible to the touch; tactile; palpable, and as being capable of being possessed or realized; readily apprehensible by the mind; real; substantial; evidence. Moeller, McPherrin & Judd v. Smith, 127 Neb. 424, 255 N.W. 551.

TANGIBLE PROPERTY. That which may be felt or touched, and is necessarily corporeal, although it may be either real or personal. H. D. & J. K. Crosswell, Inc., v. Jones, D.C.S.C., 52 F.2d 880, 883.

TANISTRY. In old Irish law. A species of tenure, founded on ancient usage, which allotted the inheritance of lands, castles, etc., to the “oldest and worthiest man of the deceased’s name and blood.” It was abolished in the reign of James I. Jacob; Wharton.

TANKAGE. Waste matter from tanks, especially the dried, nitrogenous residue from tanks, in which fat has been rendered, used as a fertilizer. Jenkins v. Springfield Reduction & Chemical Co., 169 Mo.App. 534, 154 S.W. 832, 834. The refuse of meat-packing houses, unfit for human consumption, is known as “tankage” or “liquid stick” according to its water content. Darling & Co. v. U. S., 12 Ct.Cust.App. 86, 87.
TANNERIA. In old English law. Tannery; the trade or business of a tanner. Fleta. lib. 2, c. 52, § 35.

TANTO, RIGHT OF. In Mexican law. The right enjoyed by an usufructuary of property, of buying the property at the same price at which the owner offers it to any other person, or is willing to take from another. Civ. Code Mex. art. 992.

TANTUM BONA VALENT, QUANTUM VENDI POSSUNT. Shep. Touch: 142. Goods are worth so much as they can be sold for. 3 Inst. 305.

TANTUM HABENT DE LEGE, QUANTUM HABENT DE JUSTITIA. (Precedents) have value in the law to the extent that they represent justice. Hob. 270.

TARDE VENIT. Lat. In practice. The name of a return made by the sheriff to a writ, when it came into his hands too late to be executed before the return-day.

TARE. A deficiency in the weight or quantity of merchandise by reason of the weight of the box, cask, bag, or other receptacle which contains it and is weighed with it. Also an allowance or abatement of a certain weight or quantity which the seller makes to the buyer, on account of the weight of such box, cask, etc. Napier v. Barney, 5 Blatchf. 191, 17 Fed. Cas. 1149. See Tret.

TARIF. A cartel of commerce, a book of rates, a table or catalogue, drawn usually in alphabetical order, containing the names of several kinds of merchandise, with the duties or customs to be paid for the same, as settled by authority, or agreed on between the several princes and states that hold commerce together. Enc. Lond.; Railway Co. v. Cushman, 92 Tex. 623, 50 S.W. 1009; Pacific S. S Co. v. Cackette, C.C.A. Or., 8 F.2d 259, 261.

The list or schedule of articles on which a duty is imposed upon their importation into the United States, with the rates at which they are severally taxed. Also the custom or duty payable on such articles. And, derivatively, the system or principle of imposing duties on the importation of foreign merchandise.

TATH. In the counties of Norfolk and Suffolk, the lords of manors anciently claimed the privilege of having their tenants’ flocks or sheep brought at a fixed price upon their own demesne lands, there to be folded for the improvement of the ground, which liberty was called by the name of the "tath." Spelman.

TAURI LIBERI LIBERTAS. Lat. A common bull; because he was free to all the tenants within such a manor, liberty, etc.

TAUTOLOGY. Describing the same thing twice in one sentence in equivalent terms; a fault in rhetoric. It differs from repetition or iteration, which is repeating the same sentence in the same or equivalent terms; the latter is sometimes either excusable or necessary in an argument or address; the former (tautology) never. Wharton.

TAVERN. A place of entertainment; a house kept up for the accommodation of strangers. Originally, a house for the retailing of liquors to be drunk on the spot. Waitt Const. Co. v. Chase, 197 App.Div. 327, 188 N.Y.S. 589, 592; City of Birmingham v. Bollas, 209 Ala. 512, 96 So. 591, 592.

The word “tavern,” in a charter provision authorizing municipal authorities to “license and regulate taverns,” includes hotels. “Tavern,” “hotel,” and “public house” are, in this country, used synonymously; and while they entertain the traveling public, and keep guests, and receive compensation therefor, they do not lose their character, though they may not have the privilege of selling liquors. St. Louis v. Siegrist, 46 Mo. 595. And see Bonner v. Weldon, 7 Ga. 306; Rafferty v. Insurance Co., 18 N.J.L. 484, 38 Am. Dec. 525; In re Brewster, 39 Misc. 689, 80 N.Y.S. 666.

TAVERN KEEPER. One who keeps a tavern. One who keeps an inn; an innkeeper.

TAVERNER. In old English law. A seller of wine; one who kept a house or shop for the sale of wine.

TAX, ν. To impose a tax; to enact or declare that a pecuniary contribution shall be made by the persons liable, for the support of government. Spoken of an individual, to be taxed is to be included in an assessment made for purposes of taxation.

Practice

A pecuniary burden laid upon individuals or property to support the government, and is a payment exacted by legislative authority. In re Mytinger, D.C.Tex., 31 F.Supp. 977, 978, 979. Annual compensation paid to government for annual protection and for current support of government. Alabama Power Co. v. Federal Power Commission, C.C.A.5, 134 F.2d 602, 608. A ratable portion of the produce of the property and labor of the individual citizens, taken by the nation, in the exercise of its sovereign rights, for the support of government, for the administration of the laws, and as the means for continuing in operation the various legitimate functions of the state. Black, Tax Titles, § 2; New London v. Miller, 60 Conn. 112, 22 A. 499; Graham v. St. JosephTp., 67 Mich. 652, 35 N.W. 808; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L.Ed. 23; Tevander v. Ruyssdael, C.C.A.111., 299 F. 746, 753; Montgomery County v. City of Montgomery, 190 Ala. 366, 67 So. 311, 313; Strand v. Martin, 30 N.D. 165, 152 N.W. 280. An enforced contribution of money or other property, assessed in accordance with some reasonable rule or apportionment by authority of a sovereign state on persons or property within its jurisdiction for the purpose of defraying the public expenses. Heirs v. Mitchell, 95 Fla. 345, 116 So. 81, 85.

In a general sense, any contribution imposed by government upon individuals, for the use and service of the state, whether under the name of toll, tribute, tallage, gabel, impost, duty, custom, excise, subsidy, aid, supply, or other name. Story, Const. § 950. And in its essential characteristics is not a debt. City of Newark v. Jos. Hollander, Inc., 136 N.J.Eq. 539, 42 A.2d 872, 875.

Synonyms

In a broad sense, taxes undoubtedly include assessments, and the right to impose assessments has its foundation in the taxing power of the government; and yet, in practice and as generally understood, there is a broad distinction between the two terms. "Taxes," as the term is generally used, are public burdens imposed generally upon the inhabitants of the whole state, or upon some civil division thereof, for governmental purposes, without reference to pecuniary benefits to particular individuals or property. "Assessments" have reference to impositions for improvements which are specially beneficial to particular individuals or property, and which are imposed in proportion to the particular benefits supposed to be conferred. They are justified only because the improvements confer special benefits, and are just' only when they are divided in proportion to such benefits. Roosevelt Hospital v. New York, 84 N.Y. 112. Flansburg v. Shumway, 117 Neb. 125, 219 N.W. 956, 958. As distinguished from other kinds of taxation, "assessments" are those special and local impositions upon property in the immediate vicinity of municipal improvements which are necessary to pay for the improvement, and are laid with reference to the special benefit which the property is supposed to have derived therefrom. Hale v. Kenosha, 29 Wis. 599; Ridenour v. Saffin, 1 Handy (Ohio) 464; King v. Portland, 2 Or. 146; Withrow v. Board of Drainage Com'rs of Powder Springs Creek Drainage Dist. No. 2, 155 Ga. 476, 117 S.E. 329, 330.

Taxes differ from subsidies, in being certain and orderly, and from forced contributions, etc., in that they are levied by authority of law, and by some rule of proportion which is intended to insure uniformity of contribution, and a just apportionment of the burdens of government. Cool, Tax'n, 2.

To assess or determine; to liquidate, adjust, or settle. Spoken particularly of taxing costs (q. v.).

General

Ad valorem tax. See Ad Valorem.

Capitation tax. See that title.

Collateral inheritance tax. See Collateral Inheritance.

Direct tax. One which is demanded from the very persons who, it is intended or desired, should pay it. Indirect taxes are those which are demanded from one person, in the expectation and intention that he shall indemnify himself at the expense of another. Mill, Pol. Econ. Taxes are divided into "direct," under which designation would be included those which are assessed upon the property, person, business, income, etc., of those who are to pay them, and "indirect," or those which are levied on commodities before they reach the consumer, and are paid by those upon whom they ultimately fall, not as taxes, but as part of the market price of the commodity. Cool, Tax'n, 6.

Historical evidence shows that personal property, contracts, occupations, and the like, have never been regarded as the subjects of direct tax. The phrase is understood to be limited to taxes on land and its appurtenances, and on polls. Vezzie Bank v. Fenno, 8 Wall. 533, 19 L.Ed. 482; Railroad Co. v. Morrow, 87 Tenn. 406, 11 S.W. 348, 2 L.R.A. 853; People v. Knight, 174 N.Y. 475, 67 N.E. 65, 63 L.R.A. 87.

Estate tax. A tax upon the right to transfer, while a succession or legacy tax is a tax upon the right to receive. Hazard v. Bliss, 43 R.I. 431, 113 A. 469, 471, 23 A.L.R. 826; Frick v. Lewellyn, D.C., 298 F. 803, 810; In re Hamlin, 226 N.Y. 407, 124 N.E. 4, 6, 7 A.L.R. 701; In re Sherman's Estate, 179 App.Div. 497, 166 N.Y.S. 19, 23.

Excise and tax distinguished. See Excise.

Floor tax. A tax on all the distilled spirits "on the floor" of a warehouse, i. e., in the warehouse. Greenbrier Distillery Co. v. U. S., D.C.Ky., 288 F. 893, 895.

Franchise tax. See Franchise.

Income tax. See Income.

Indirect taxes are those demanded in the first instance from one person in the expectation and intention that he shall indemnify himself at the expense of another. "Ordinarily all taxes paid primarily by persons who can shift the burden upon some one else, or who are under no legal compulsion to pay them, are considered indirect taxes." Pollock v. Farmers' L. & T. Co., 15 S.Ct. 673, 157 U.S. 429, 39 L.Ed. 759; Thomasson v. State, 15 Ind. 451; Foster & Creighton Co. v. Graham, 154 Tenn. 412, 428 S.W. 570, 572, 47 A.L.R. 971.

Inheritance tax. See Inheritance.

Land tax. See Land Tax.

License tax. See License Fee or Tax.

Local taxes. Those assessments which are limited to certain districts, as poor-rates, parochial taxes, county rates, municipal taxes, etc.

Occupation tax. See Occupation.

Parliamentary taxes. Such taxes as are imposed directly by act of parliament, i. e., by the legislature itself, as distinguished from those which are imposed by private individuals or bodies under the authority of an act of parliament. Thus, a sewers rate, not being imposed directly by act of parliament, but by certain persons termed "commissioners of sewers," is not a parliamentary tax; whereas the income tax, which is directly imposed, and the amount also fixed, by act of parliament, is a parliamentary tax. Brown.
TAX

Personal tax. This term may mean either a tax imposed on the person without reference to property, as a capitation or poll tax, or a tax imposed on personal property, as distinguished from one laid on real property. See Jack v. Walker, C.C.Ohio, 79 F. 138, 141; Potter v. Ross, 23 N.J.L. 517.

Poll tax. See that title.

Proportional taxes. Taxes are "proportional" when the proportion paid by each taxpayer bears the same ratio to the amount to be raised that the value of his property bears to the total taxable value, and in the case of a special tax when that is apportioned according to the benefits received. In re Opinion of the Justices, 220 Mass. 613, 108 N.E. 570, 572; Perkins v. Inhabitants of Town of Westwood, 226 Mass. 268, 115 N.E. 411, 412; In re Opinion of the Justices, 77 N.H. 611, 93 A. 311, 312.

Public tax. A tax levied for some general public purpose or for the purposes of the general public revenue, as distinguished from local municipal taxes and assessments. Morgan v. Cree, 46 Vt. 783, 14 Am.Rep. 640; Buffalo City Cemetery v. Buffalo, 46 N.Y. 509.

Sinking fund tax. See Fund.

Specific tax. A tax imposed as a fixed sum on each article or item of property of a given class or kind, without regard to its value; opposed to ad valorem tax.

Succession tax. See Succession.

Surtax. An additional tax imposed upon certain kinds of income, such as dividends from corporate stock, royalties, interest from money, notes, credits, bonds and other securities. A surtax is sometimes imposed on incomes exceeding a specified amount.

Tax certificate. A certificate of the purchase of land at a tax sale thereof, given by the officer making the sale, and which is evidence of the holder's right to receive a deed of the land if it is not redeemed within the time limited by law. See Eaton v. Manitowoc County, 44 Wis. 492; Nelson v. Central Land Co., 35 Minn. 408, 29 N.W. 121.

Tax lease. The instrument (or estate) given to the purchaser of land at a tax sale, where the law does not permit the sale of the estate in fee for non-payment of taxes, but instead thereof directs the sale of an estate for years.

Tax levy. The total sum to be raised by a tax. Also the bill, enactment, or measure of legislation by which an annual or general tax is imposed.

Tax purchaser. A person who buys land at a tax-sale; the person to whom land, at a tax-sale thereof, is struck down.

Tax roll. See Roll.

Tax sale. See Sale.

Tax-deed. The conveyance given upon a sale of lands made for non-payment of taxes; the deed whereby the officer of the law undertakes to convey the title of the proprietor to the purchaser at the tax-sale.

Tax-lien. A statutory lien, existing in favor of the state or municipality, upon the lands of a person charged with taxes, binding the same either for the taxes assessed upon the specific tract of land or (in some jurisdictions) for all the taxes due from the individual, and which may be foreclosed for non-payment, by judgment of a court or sale of the land.

Taxing district. The district throughout which a particular tax or assessment is ratably apportioned and levied upon the inhabitants; it may comprise the whole state, one county, a city, a ward, or part of a street.

Taxpayer. A person chargeable with a tax: one from whom government demands a pecuniary contribution towards its support.

Taxpayers' lists. Written exhibits required to be made out by the taxpayers resident in a district, enumerating all the property owned by them and subject to taxation, to be handed to the assessors, at a specified date or at regular periods, as a basis for assessment and valuation.

Tax-title. The title by which one holds land which he purchased at a tax sale. That species of title which is inaugurated by a successful bid for land at a collector's sale of the same for non-payment of taxes, completed by the failure of those entitled to redeem within the specified time, and evidenced by the deed executed to the tax purchaser, or his assignee, by the proper officer.

Tonnage tax. See Tonnage Duty.

Wheel tax. A tax on wheeled vehicles of some kind and bicycles.

Window tax. See that title.

TAX FERRETS. Persons engaged in the business of searching for property omitted from taxation. Their activities when permitted are usually regarded as private rather than as part of a state agency. Pickett v. United States, C.C.A.Mo., 100 F.2d 909, 913.

TAXA. L. Lat. A tax. Spelman.

In old records. An allotted piece of work; a task.

TAXABLE. Subject to taxation; liable to be assessed, along with others, for a share in a tax. Mississippi State Tax Commission v. Brown, 188 Miss. 483, 466, 469, 127 A.L.R. 919. Something of value, subject to assessment, and to be levied upon and sold for taxes. Williams v. School Dist. No. 32 in County of Fremont, 56 Wyo. 1, 102 P.2d 48, 52.

Applied to costs in an action, the word means proper to be taxed or charged up; legally chargeable or assessable.
TAXABLE YEAR. This term in internal revenue statutes has different significations, according to its use. Waterman S. S. Corporation v. United States, Ct.C1., 32 F.Supp. 880, 882; but when used in ordinarily accepted meaning, refers to annual accounting period of taxpayer. American-Hawaiian S. S. Co. v. U. S., Ct.C1., 46 F.2d 592, 598.

TAXARE. Lat. To rate or value. Calvin.

To tax; to lay a tax or tribute. Spelman.

In old English practice. To assess; to rate or estimate; to moderate or regulate an assessment or rate.

TAXATI. In old European law. Soldiers of a garrison or fleet, assigned to a certain station. Spelman.

TAXATIO. Lat. In Roman law. Taxation or assessment of damages; the assessment, by the judge, of the amount of damages to be awarded to a plaintiff, and particularly in the way of reducing the amount claimed or sworn to by the latter.

TAXATIO ECCLESIASTICA. The value of ecclesiastical benefices made through every diocese in England, on occasion of Pope Innocent IV. granting to King Henry III. the tenth of all spirituals for three years. This taxation was first made by Walter, bishop of Norwich, delegated by the pope to this office in 38 Hen. III., and hence called "Taxatio Norwicensis." It is also called "Pope Innocent's Valor." Wharton.

TAXATIO EXPENSARUM. In old English practice. Taxation of costs.

TAXATIO NORWICENSIS. A valuation of ecclesiastical benefices made through every diocese in England, by Walter, bishop of Norwich, delegated by the pope to this office in 38 Hen. III. Cowell.

TAXATION. The process of taxing or imposing a tax. In practice. Adjustment. Fixing the amount; e.g. Taxation of costs. 3 Chitty, Gen. Pr. 602. See Tax.

The differences between taxation and taking property in right of eminent domain are that taxation exacts money or services from individuals, as and for their respective shares of contribution to any public burden; while private property taken for public use, by right of eminent domain, is taken, not as the owner's share of contribution to a public burden, but as so much beyond his share, and for which compensation must be made. Moreover, taxation operates upon a community, or upon a class of persons in a community, and by some rule of apportionment; while eminent domain operates upon an individual, and without reference to the amount or value exacted from any other individual, or class of individuals. People v. Brooklyn, 4 N.Y. 419, 55 Am. Dec. 266.

Double Taxation

See Double.

Taxation of Costs

In practice. The process of ascertaining and charging up the amount of costs in an action which a party is legally entitled, or which are specially one whose business or occupation is to legally chargeable. And, in English practice, the teach others; an instructor; preceptor. Ortega process of examining the items in an attorney's bill of costs and making the proper deductions, if any.

TAXERS. Two officers yearly chosen in Cambridge, England, to see the true gauge of all the weights and measures.

TAXICAB. A motor driven passenger conveyance propelled by electric or gas power, held for public hire, at designated places, charging upon a time or distance basis, carrying passengers to destinations without following any fixed routes. Tuggle v. Parker, 159 Kan. 572, 156 P.2d 533, 534. A conveyance similar to hackney carriage or old-fashioned hack or stage which is held for hire at designated places and has no regular schedule or route, but operates to carry passengers at any time to any point and subject to call. Jarrell v. Orlando Transit Co., 123 Fla. 776, 167 So. 664, 668.

A "taxicab" differs from a jitney bus, street car, or omnibus as a carrier in that it does not follow a well-defined route prescribed by ordinance, but is vehicle subject to contract by person desiring special trip from one point to another, without reference to any prescribed legal route. Jackie Cab Co. v. Chicago Park Dist., 366 Ill. 474, 9 N. E.2d 213, 215, 112 A.L.R. 1410.

TAXING MASTER. See Master.

TAXING OFFICER. Each house of parliament has a taxing officer, whose duty it is to tax the costs incurred by the promoters or opponents of private bills. May, Parl. Pr. 843.

TAXING POWER. The power of any government to levy taxes.

TAXT-WARD. An annual payment made to a superior in Scotland, instead of the duties due to him under the tenure of ward-holding. Abolished. Wharton.

TEA CHEST. A box containing a definite and prescribed amount of tea, otherwise called whole chest (a hundred weight to 140 pounds or more), now seldom shipped, the smaller package being spoken of as half chest (75 to 80 pounds, but the weight varies according to the kind of tea), and quarter chest (from 25 to 30 pounds) and thus a "tea chest" in the language of the trade is understood to be a half chest and not a whole chest. Japan Tea Co. v. Franklin MacVeagh & Co., 142 Minn. 152, 171 N.W. 305, 307.

TEACH. To impart knowledge by means of lessons; to give instruction in; communicating knowledge; introducing into or impressing on the mind as truth or information, and may be done as well through written communications, personal direction, through the public press, or through any means by which information may be disseminated, or it may be done by the adoption of sentiment expressed or arguments made by others which are distributed to others for their adoption and guidance. Ex parte Bernat, D.C.Wash., 255 F. 429, 432.

TEACHER. One who teaches or instructs; es-TEAM

TEAM. Two or more horses, oxen, or other beasts harnessed together for drawing. Inman v. C., M. & St. P. R. Co., 60 Iowa 462, 15 N.W. 286; with the vehicle in which they are customarily attached; Dains v. Prosser, 32 Barb. (N.Y.) 291; Wilcox v. Hawley, 31 N.Y. 655, in reference to an exemption law. It may mean a vehicle with animals drawing it and used for loads instead of persons. Hotchkiss v. Hoy, 41 Conn. 577. A horse driven with other horses unharnessed; Elliott v. Lisbon, 57 N.H. 29; and a single horse; Hoyt v. Van Alstyne, 15 Barb. (N.Y.) 568; are held teams; Jones v. Holland Furnace Co., 188 Wis. 394, 206 N.W. 57, 59; Tate v. Cody-Henderson Co., 11 Ala.App. 350, 66 So. 837, 838; American Mut. Liability Ins. Co. v. Witham, 124 Me. 240, 127 A. 719. Automobiles may also be included in the meaning of team. Bragdon v. Kellogg, 118 Me. 42, 105 A. 433, 434, 6 A.L.R. 669; Smith v. Howard, 42 R.I. 126, 105 A. 649, 650.

TEAM or THEAME. In old English law. A royalty or privilege granted, by royal charter, to a lord of a manor, for the having, restraining, and judging of bondmen and villeins, with their children, goods, and chattels, etc. Glan. lib. 5, c. 2.

TEAM TRACK. Analogous to freight depot in that it bears the same relation to carload freight that such depot bears to less than carload freight. Shippers have no part in its construction or maintenance. There is a difference between "industrial tracks" and "team tracks." The former are for the handling of carload freight from and to plants. The cost of construction is usually borne in part by the owners of the plants. Carload freight is switched to and from the plants irrespective of whether the carrier performing the switching service participated in the line haul or not. Miller Engineering Co. v. Louisiana Ry. & Na'y Co., 144 La. 786, 81 So. 314, 317.

TEAM WORK. Within the meaning of an exemption law, this term means work done by a team as a substantial part of a man's business; as in farming, staging, express carrying, drawing of freight, peddling, or the transportation of material used or dealt in as a business. Hickok v. Thayer, 49 Vt. 375.

Within an exemption statute, one who habitually makes his living by use of team, harness and wagon or some other form of horse-drawn vehicle. Wertz v. Hale, 212 Iowa, 294, 234 N.W. 534, 535.

TEARING OF WILL. Under statute providing that will may be revoked by tearing, any act of tearing of paper on which will is written, however slight, constitutes an act of "tearing," if done with intent to revoke the will, but no act of tearing or cutting accomplishes such purpose unless done with intent to revoke. Fleming v. Fleming, 367 Ill. 97, 10 N.E.2d 641, 642.

TECHNICAL. Belonging or peculiar to an art or profession. Technical terms are frequently called in the books "words of art."

TECHNICAL MORTGAGE. A true and formal mortgage, as distinguished from other instruments which, in some respects, have the character of equitable mortgages. Harrison v. Annapolis & E. R. R. Co., 50 Md. 514.

TEDEERING. Spreading. Tedding grass is spreading it out after it is cut in the swath. 10 East, 5.

TEDING-PENNY. In old English law. A small tax or allowance to the sheriff from each tithing of his county towards the charge of keeping courts, etc. Cowell.

TEEP. In Hindu law. A note of hand; a promissory note given by a native banker or money-lender to zemindars and others, to enable them to furnish government with security for the payment of their rents. Wharton.

TEGULA. In the civil law. A tile. Dig. 19, 1, 18.

TEIND COURT. In Scotch law. A court which has jurisdiction of matters relating to teinds, or tithes.

TEIND MASTERS. Those entitled to tithes.

TEINDS. In Scotch law. A term corresponding to tithes (q. v.) in English ecclesiastical law.

TEINLAND. Sax. In old English law. Land of a thane or Saxon noble; land granted by the crown to a thane or lord. Cowell; 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, 5.

TELEGRAM. A telegraphic dispatch; a message sent by telegraph.

TELEGRAM RACKET. Consists in a fictitious communication such as by radiogram or telephone call authorizing a trustee to pay out money. Cordovano v. State, 61 Ga.App. 590, 7 S.E.2d 45, 47.

TELEGRAPH. In the English telegraph act of 1863, the word is defined as "a wire or wires used for the purpose of telegraphic communication, with any casing, coating, tube, or pipe inclining the same, and any apparatus connected therewith for the purpose of telegraphic communication." St. 26 & 27 Vict. c. 112, § 3. An apparatus or device for transmitting messages to a distant point. State Public Utilities Com. v. Postal Telegraph-Cable Co., 285 Ill. 411, 120 N.E. 795, 796, Any ap-TELEGRAPHI2E. A word occasionally used in written evidence of things past. Blount.

TELEPHONE. In a general sense, any instrument or apparatus which transmits sound beyond the limits of ordinary audibility. But, since the recent discoveries in telephony, the name is technically and primarily restricted to an instrument or device which transmits sound by means of electricity and wires similar to telegraphic wires. In a secondary sense, however, being the sense in which it is most commonly understood, the word "telephone" constitutes a generic term, having reference generally to the art of telephony as an institution, but more particularly to the apparatus, as an entirety, ordinarily used in the transmission, as well as in the reception, of telephonic messages. Hockett v. State, 105 Ind. 261, 5 N.E. 178, 55 Am.Rep. 201; State Public Utilities Commission ex rel. Chicago Telephone Co. v. Postal Telegraph-Cable Co., 285 Ill. 411, 120 N.E. 795, 796.

TELETYPE MACHINE. A telegraph machine in general use in telegraph offices, which typewrites the telegram as the message is received instead of requiring an operator to receive it in the Morse code and transcribe it. In re Teletype Mach. No. 33335, 126 Pa.Super. 533, 191 A. 210, 211.

TELEVISION. Seeing at a distance by electrical means while "motion picture exhibit" is produced by projecting upon a screen with the aid of light rays images recorded upon a film in such rapid and changing succession of exposures as to give the optical effect of a continuous picture of the objects even when in motion. The former directly employs natural phenomena; the latter, mechanics. A notable objective difference is that a motion picture may be re-exhibited as often as desired for the life of the film but a television exposure is gone forever so far as assembly of the electronic waves upon which the images are carried are concerned. Philadelphia. Retail Liquor Dealers Ass'n v. Pennsylvania Liquor Control Bd., 360 Pa. 269, 62 A.2d 53, 55, 4 A.L.R. 1212.

TELLER. One who numbers or counts. An officer of a bank who receives or pays out money. Also one appointed to count the votes cast in a deliberative or legislative assembly or other meeting. The name was also given to certain officers formerly attached to the English exchequer.

A considerable officer in the exchequer, of which officers there are four, whose office is to receive all money due to the king, and to give the clerk of the pells a bill to charge him therewith. They also pay to all persons any money. payable by the king, and make weekly and yearly books of their receipts and payments, which they deliver to the lord treasurer. Cowell; Jacob.

TELLERS IN PARLIAMENT. In the language of parliament, the members of the house selected to count the members when a division takes place. In the house of lords a division is effected by the "non-contents" remaining within the bar, and the "contents" going below it, a teller being appointed for each party. In the commons the "ayes" go into the lobby at one end of the house, and the "noes" into the lobby at the other end, the house itself being perfectly empty, and two tellers being appointed for each party. May, Parl. Pr.; Brown.

TELEGRAPHUM. An Anglo-Saxon charter of land. 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, c. 1, p. 10.

TELTALIES. In railroad practice ropes suspended from a wire across the track warning of a low bridge. West v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 103 C.C. A. 293, 179 F. 801.

TELLWORC. That labor which a tenant was bound to do for his lord for a certain number of days.

EMENTALE, or TENEMENTALE. A tax of two shillings upon every plow-land, a decennary.

TEMERE. Lat. In the civil law. Rashly; inconsiderably. A plaintiff was said temere litigare who demanded a thing out of malice, or sued without just cause, and who could show no ground or cause of action. Brissounius.

TEMPERANCE. Habitual moderation in regard to the indulgence of the natural appetites and passions; restrained or moderate indulgence; moderation; as temperance in eating and drinking; temperance in the indulgence of joy or mirth. People v. Dashaway Ass'n, 84 Cal. 123, 24 P. 277, 12 L.R.A. 117. Not synonymous with abstinence.

TEMPERANCE. Habitual moderation in regard to the indulgence of the natural appetites and passions; restrained or moderate indulgence; moderation; as temperance in eating and drinking; temperance in the indulgence of joy or mirth. People v. Dashaway Ass'n, 84 Cal. 123, 24 P. 277, 12 L.R.A. 117. Not synonymous with abstinence.

TEMPEST. A violent or furious storm; a current of wind rushing with extreme violence, and usually accompanied with rain or snow. Stover v. Insurance Co., 3 Phila. (Pa.) 39; Thistle v. Union Forwarding Co., 29 U.C.C.P. 84.

TEMPLARS. A religious order of knighthood, instituted about the year 1119, and so called because the members dwelt in a part of the temple of Jerusalem, and not far from the sepulcher of our Lord. They entertained Christian strangers and pilgrims charitably, and their profession was at first to defend travelers from highwaymen and robbers. The order was suppressed A.D. 1307, and their substance given partly to the knights of St. John of Jerusalem, and partly to other religious orders. Brown.

TEMPLE. Two English inns of court, thus called because anciently the dwelling place of the Knights Templar. On the suppression of the common law, and converted into hospitia or inns of court. They are called the "Inner" and "Middle Temple," in relation to Essex House, which was also a part of the house of the Templars, and called the "Outer Temple," because situated without Temple Bar. Enc. Lond.
TEMPORAL LORDS. The peers of England; the bishops are not in strictness held to be peers, but merely lords of parliament. 2 Steph.Comp. 330, 345.

TEMPORALIS. Lat. In the civil law. Temporarily; limited to a certain time.

TEMPORALIS ACTIO. An action which could only be brought within a certain period.

TEMPORALIS EXCEPTIO. A temporary exception which barred an action for a time only.

TEMPORALITIES. In English law. The lay fees of bishops, with which their churches are endowed or permitted to be endowed by the liberality of the sovereign, and in virtue of which they become barons and lords of parliament. Spelman. In a wider sense, the money revenues of a church, derived from pew rents, subscriptions, donations, collections, cemetery charges, and other sources. See Barabasz v. Kabat, 86 Md. 23, 37 A. 720.

TEMPORALITY. The laity; secular people.

TEMPORARILY. Lasting for a time only, existing or continuing for a limited time, not of long duration, not permanent, transitory, changing, but a short time. Young v. Povich, 121 Me. 141, 116 A. 26, 27, 29 A.L.R. 48; Burdine v. Sewell, 92 Fla. 375, 109 So. 648, 653; Vercruysse v. Ulaga, 229 Mich. 49, 201 N.W. 192, 193.

TEMPORARY. That which is to last for a limited time only, as distinguished from that which is perpetual, or indefinite, in its duration. Opposite of permanent. Thus, temporary alimony is granted for the support of the wife pending the action for divorce. Dayton v. Drake, 64 Iowa 714, 21 N.W. 158; Wohlfort v. Wohlfort, 116 Kan. 154, 225 P. 746, 748, 40 A.L.R. 538; Flamm v. City of Passaic, 141 N.J.Misc. 362, 184 A. 748, 750.

A temporary receiver is one appointed to take charge of property until a hearing is had and an adjudication made. Boonville Nat. Bank v. Blackey, 47 C.C.A. 43, 107 F. 895.

As to temporary "Disability", "Insanity", "Injunction", and "Statute" see those titles.

TEMPORE. Lat. In the time of. Thus, the volume called "Cases tempore Holt" is a collection of cases adjudged in the king's bench during the time of Lord Holt. Wall.Rep. 398.

TEMPORIS EXCEPTIO. Lat. In the civil law. A plea of time; a plea of lapse of time, in bar of an action. Corresponding to the plea of prescription, or the statute of limitations, in our law. See Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 213.

TEMPUS. Lat. In the civil and old English law. Time in general. A time limited; a season; e.g., tempus pessonis, mast time in the forest.

TEMPUS CONTINUUM. In the civil law. A continuous or absolute period of time. A term which begins to run from a certain event, even though he for whom it runs has no knowledge of the event, and in which, when it has once begun to run, all the days are reckoned as they follow one another in the calendar. Dig. 3, 2, 8; Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 195.

TEMPUS ENIM MODUS TOLLENDI OBLIGA-
TIONES ET ACTIONES,quia TEMPUS CUR-
RIT CONTRA DESIDES ET SUI JURIS CON-
TEMPTORES. For time is a means of destroying obligations and actions, because time runs against the slothful and containers of their own rights. Fleta, 1. 4, c. 5, § 12.

TEMPUS SEMESTRE. In old English law. The period of six months or half a year, consisting of one hundred and eighty-two days. Cro.Jac. 166.

TEMPUS UTILE. In the civil law. A profitable or advantageous period of time. A term which begins to run from a certain event, only when he for whom it runs has obtained a knowledge of the event, and in which, when it has once begun to run, those days are not reckoned on which one has no experieundi potestas; e.g., on which one cannot prosecute his rights before a court. Dig. 3, 6, 6; Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 195. A period of time which runs beneficially: i.e., feast-days are not included, nor does it run against one absent in a foreign country, or on business of the republic, or detained by stress of weather. But one detained by sickness is not protected from its running; for it runs where there is power to act by an agent as well as where there is power to act personally; and the sick man might have-deputed his agent. Calvinus.

TENANCY.

The Estate of a Tenant
The estate of a tenant, as in the expressions "joint tenancy," "tenancy in common."

The Term or Interest of a Tenant
The term or interest of a tenant for years or at will. Sweet; Stone v. City of Los Angeles, 114 Cal.App. 192, 299 P. 838, 841.

It implies a right of possession in tenant exclusive even of landlord. Cleveland v. Milner, 141 Tex. 120, 170 S.W.2d 472, 475.

General Tenancy
A tenancy which is not fixed and made certain in point of duration by the agreement of the parties. Brown v. Bragg, 22 Ind. 122.

Joint Tenancy
An estate in fee-simple, fee-tail, for life, for years, or at will, arising by purchase or grant to two or more persons. Joint tenants have one and the same interest, accruing by one and the same conveyance, commencing at one and the same time, and held by one and the same undivided possession. The grand incident of joint tenancy is survivorship, by which the entire tenancy on the decease of any joint tenant remains to the survivor, and at length to the last survivor. Pub.St. Mass.1882, p. 1292; Simons v. McLain, 51 Kan. 153, 32 P. 319; Thornburg v. Wiggins, 135 Ind. 178, 34 N.E. 999, 22 L.R.A. 42, 41 Am.St.Rep. 422; Van Ausdall v. Van Ausdall, 48 R.I. 106, 135 A. 850, 851; In re Huggins' Estate, 96 N.J.Eq. 275, 125 A. 27, 30. See, also, Tenancy by the Entirety, infra.

Several Tenancy

A tenancy which is separate, and not held jointly with another person.

Tenancy by the Entirety

The grand characteristic which distinguishes it from a joint tenancy is that it can be terminated only by joint action of husband and wife during their lives, while "joint tenancy" may be terminated by one tenant's conveyance of his interest. Milan v. Boucher, 285 Mass. 590, 189 N.E. 576, 578. In re Cotter's Will, 287 N.Y.S. 670, 673, 159 Misc. 324.

Tenancy in Common

Where property is held by several and distinct titles by unity of possession, neither knowing his own severally, and therefore they all occupy promiscuously. Fullerton v. Storthz Bros. Inv. Co., 190 Ark. 198, 77 S.W.2d 966, 968. The holding of an estate in land by different persons under different titles, but there must be unity of possession and each must have right to occupy the whole in common with his cotenants. Fry v. Dewees, 151 Kan. 488, 99 P.2d 844, 847.

Although "tenancy in common" is generally used with reference to real property, a tenancy in common may exist in personality as well. Haster v. Blair, 41 Cal.App.2d 896, 107 P.2d 933, 934. See, also, Tenant (in Common).

TENANT. In the broadest sense, one who holds or possesses lands or tenements by any kind of right or title, whether in fee, for life, for years, at will, or otherwise. Cowell; Young v. Home Telephone Co., Mo.App., 201 S.W. 635, 636; Kavanaugh v. Cohoes Power & Light Corporation, 119 Neb. 692, 230 N.W. 682. Tenancy in personalty as well. Haster v. Blair, 41 Cal.App.2d 896, 107 P.2d 933, 934. See, also, Tenant (in Common).

In a more restricted sense, one who holds lands of another; one who has the temporary use and occupation of real property owned by another person, called the "landlord," for the duration and terms of his tenancy being usually fixed by an instrument called a "lease." Becker v. Becker, 13 App.Div. 342, 43 N.Y.S. 17; Bowe v. Hunking, 135 Mass. 383, 46 Am.Rep. 471; Clift v. White, 12 N.Y. 527; Lightbody v. Truielsen, 39 Minn. 310, 40 N.W. 67; Williams v. Treece, 184 Mo.App. 135, 168 S.W. 209, 211; Minneapolis Iron Store Co. v. Brun, urn, 36 N.D. 355, 162 N.W. 543, 545, L.R.A.1917E, 298. One who occupies another's land or premises in subordination to such other's title and with his assent, express or implied. In re Wilson's Estate, 349 Pa. 646, 37 A.2d 709, 710. One renting land and paying for it either in money or part of crop or equivalent. Wilcox & Co. v. Deines, 119 Neb. 692, 230 N.W. 682, 684.

Strictly speaking, a "tenant" is a person who holds land; but the term is also applied by analogy to personality. Thus, we speak of a person being tenant for life, or tenant in common, of stock. Sweet.

Feudal Law

One who holds of another (called "lord" or "superior") by some service; as fealty or rent.

Tenant at Will

One who holds possession of premises by permission of owner or landlord, but without fixed term. Wiedemann v. Brown, 190 Minn. 33, 250 N.W. 724; where lands or tenements are let by one man to another, to have and to hold to him at the will of the lessor, by force of which lease the lessee is in possession. In this case the lessee is called "tenant at will," because he hath no certain nor sure estate, for the lessor may put him out at what time it pleaseth him. Litt. §§ 68; Sweet. Post v. Post, 14 Barb. (N.Y.) 258; Spalding v. Hall, 6 D.C. 125; Freedman v. Gordon, 220 Mass. 324, 107 N.E. 982, 983; Norton v. Averholtzer, 63 Cal.App. 388, 218 P. 637, 640; O'Connor v. Brinsfield, 212 Ala. 68, 101 So. 679, 680.

General

Joint tenants. Two or more persons to whom are granted lands or tenements to hold in fee-simple, fee-tail, for life, for years, or at will. 2 Bl.Comm. 179. Persons who own lands by a joint title created expressly by one and the same deed or will. 4 Kent, Comm. 357. Joint tenants have one and the same interest, accruing by one and the same conveyance, commencing at one and the same time, and held by one and the same undivided possession. 2 Bl.Comm. 180. See, also, Tenancy (Joint Tenancy).

Land tenant. See that title.

Quasi tenant at sufferance. An under-tenant, who is in possession at the determination of an original lease, and is permitted by the reversioner to hold over.

Sole tenant. He that holds lands by his own right only, without any other person being joined with him. Cowell.

Tenant a volunta. L. Fr. A tenant at will.

Tenant at sufferance. One that comes into the possession of land by lawful title, but holds over by wrong, after the determination of his interest. 4 Kent, Comm. 116; 2 Bl.Comm. 150; Fielder v. Childs, 13 Ala. 577; Pleasant v. Claghorn, 2 Miles (Pa.) 304; Bright v. McOuat, 40 Ind. 525; Parker v. Smith, 211 Ky. 624, 277 S.W. 986, 987; Lawer See also, Year to Year, Tenancy from.

He has no estate nor title but only naked possession without right and wrongfuly, and stands in no privity to landlord and is not entitled to notice to quit, and is a bare licensee to whom landlord owes merely duty not wantonly nor willfully to injure him. Margossian v. Markarian, 288 Mass. 197, 192 N.E. 612, 613; Welch v. Rice, 61 Wyo. 511, 159 P.2d 502, 506, 509.

Tenant by copy of court roll (shortly, "tenant by copy") is the old-fashioned name for a copyholder. Litt. § 73.

Tenant by the curtesy. One who, on the death of his wife seised of an estate of inheritance, after having by her issue born alive and capable of inheriting her estate, holds the lands and tenements for the term of his life. Co.Litt. 30a; 2 Bl.Comm. 126.

Tenant by the manner. One who has a less estate than a fee in land which remains in the reversioner. He is so called because in avowries and other pleadings it is specially shown in what manner he is tenant of the land, in contradistinction to the very tenant, who is called simply "tenant." Ham. N.P. 393.

Tenant for life. One who holds lands or tenements for the term of his own life, or for that of any other person, (in which case he is called "pur cuter vie," or for more lives than one. 2 Bl.Comm. 120; In re Hyde, 41 Hun (N.Y.) 75.

Tenant for years. One who has the temporary use and possession of lands or tenements not his own, by virtue of a lease or demise granted to him by the owner, for a determinate period of time, as for a year or a fixed number of years. 2 Bl.Comm. 140.

Tenant from year to year. One who holds lands or tenements under the demise of another, where no certain term has been mentioned, but an annual rent has been reserved. See 1 Steph.Comm. 271; 4 Kent, Comm. 111, 114. One who holds over, by consent given either expressly or constructively, after the determination of a lease for years. 4 Kent, Comm. 112. See Shore v. Porter, 3 Term, 16; Rothschild v. Williamson, 83 Ind. 388; Hunter v. Frost, 47 Minn. 1, 49 N.W. 327; Coffman v. Sammons, 76 W.Va. 12, 84 S.E. 1061, 1063; Lawrence v. Goodstein, 91 Misc.Rep. 19, 154 N.Y.S. 229, 231. See, also, Year to Year, Tenancy from.

Tenant in capite. In feudal and old English law. Tenant in chief; one who held immediately under the king, in right of his crown and dignity. 2 Bl.Comm. 60.

Tenant in common. Tenants who hold the same land together by several and distinct titles, but by unity of possession, because none knows his own severalty, and therefore they all occupy promiscuously. 2 Bl.Comm. 191. Where two or more hold the same land, with interests accruing under different titles, or accruing under the same title, but at different periods, or conferred by words of limitation importing that the grantees are to take in distinct shares. 1 Steph.Comm. 323. See Coster v. Lorillard, 14 Wend., N.Y., 336; Taylor v. Millard, 118 N.Y. 244, 23 N.E. 376, 6 L.R.A. 667; Perry v. Jones, 48 Okl. 362, 150 P. 168, 169; Whyman v. Johnston, 62 Colo. 461, 163 P. 76, 77; Stewart v. Young, 212 Ala. 426, 103 So. 44, 45. See, also, Tenancy (Tenancy in Common).

Tenant in dower. This is where the husband of a woman is seised of an estate of inheritance and dies; in this case the wife shall have the third part of all the lands and tenements whereof he was seised at any time during the coverture, to hold to herself for life, as her dower. Co.Litt. 30; 2 Bl.Comm. 129; Combs v. Young, 4 Yerg. (Tenn.) 225, 26 Am.Dec. 225.

Tenant in fee-simple (or tenant in fee). He who has lands, tenements, or hereditaments, to hold to him and his heirs forever, generally, absolutely, and simply; without mentioning what heirs, but referring that to his own pleasure, or to the disposition of the law. 2 Bl.Comm. 104; Litt. § 1; Dows v. Board of Com'r's of City of Bayonne, 117 N.J.L. 337, 188 A. 509, 510.

Tenant in severalty. One who holds lands and tenements in his own right only, without any other person being joined or connected with him in point of interest during his estate therein. 2 Bl.Comm. 179.

Tenant in tail. One who holds an estate in fee-tail, that is, an estate which, by the instrument creating it, is limited to some particular heirs, exclusive of others; as to the heirs of his body or to the heirs, male or female, of his body.

Tenant in tail ex provisione viri. Where an owner of lands, upon or previously to marrying, a wife, settled lands upon himself and his wife, and the heirs of their two bodies begotten, and then died, the wife, as survivor, became tenant in tail of the husband's lands, in consequence of the husband's provision, (ex provisione viri.) Originally, she could bar the estate-tail like any other tenant in tail; but the husband's intention having been merely to provide for her during her widowhood, and not to enable her to bar his children of their inheritance, she was early restrained from so doing, by the statute 32 Hen. VII. c. 36. Brown.

Tenant of the demesne. One who is tenant of a mesne lord; as, where A. is tenant of B., and C. of A. B. is the lord, A. the mesne lord, and C. tenant of the demesne. Ham. N.P. 392, 393.

Tenant paravaile. The under-tenant of land; that is, the tenant of a tenant; one who held of a mesne lord.

Tenant to the prince. Before the English fines and recoveries act, if land was conveyed to a person for life with remainder to another in tail, the tenant in tail in remainder was unable to bar the entail without the concurrence of the tenant for life, because a common recovery could only be suffered by the person seised of the land. In such a case, if the tenant for life wished to cone ar in barring the entail, he usually conveyed his life-estate to some other person, in order that the precepipe in the recovery might be issued against the latter, who was therefore called the "tenant to the preceipe." Williams, Seis. 169; Sweet.

Tenants by the verge. The "same nature as Tenants by copy of court roll, [i. e., copyholders.] But Tenants by the verge" is for that, when they will surrender Tenants by the verge for this cause they are called 'tenants by Tenants by the verge, * * * and deliver to him that taketh the land the Tenants by the verge,' but they have no other evidence [title-deed] Tenants by the verge, but by copy of court roll." Litt. § 78; Co.Litt. 61a.

TENANT-RIGHT. A kind of customary estate
TENANT-RIGHT. To have a leaning; serve, contribute, TENANT-RIGHT. Such a repair as will render a house fit for present habitation.
TENANTABLE REPAIR. Such a repair as will render a house fit for present habitation.
TENCON. L. Fr. A dispute; a quarrel. Kel-
TEND. To have a leaning; serve, contribute,
TENDER. An offer of money; the act by which TENDER. An offer of money; the act by which TENEMENT

Property held by tenant, everything of permanent nature which may be held, and, in more restrictive sense, house or dwelling. Hughes v. Milby and Dow Coal and Mining Co., 127 Okl. 30, 259 P. 559, 560.

Dominant Tenement
One for the benefit or advantage of which an easement exists or is enjoyed.

Servient Tenement
One which is subject to the burden of an easement existing for or enjoyed by another tenement. See Easement.

TENEMENTAL LAND. Land distributed by a lord among his tenants, as opposed to the demesnes which were occupied by himself and his servants. 2 Bl.Comm. 90.

TENEMENTIS LEGATIS. An ancient writ, lying to the city of London, or any other corporation, (where the old custom was that men might devise by will lands and tenements, as well as goods and chattels,) for the hearing and determining any controversy touching the same. Reg.Orig. 244.

TENENDAS. In Scotch law. The name of a clause in charters of heritable rights, which derives its name from its first words, "tenendas prseedictas terras;" it points out the superior of whom the lands are to be held, and expresses the particular tenure. Ersk. Inst. 2, 3, 24.

TENENDUM. Lat. To be holden. It was used to indicate the lord of whom the land was to be held and the tenure by which it was to be held. But, since all freehold tenures have been converted into socage, the tenendum is of no further use, and is therefore joined in the habendum,—"to have and to hold." 2 Bl.Comm. 298; 4 Cruise, Dig. 26.

TENENS. A tenant; the defendant in a real action.

TENENTIBUS IN ASSISA. NON ONERANDIS. A writ that formerly lay for him to whom a disseisor had alienated the land whereof he disseised another, that he should not be molested in asse for damages, if the disseisor had wherewith to satisfy them. Reg. Orig. 214.

TENERE. Lat. In the civil law. To hold; to hold fast; to have in possession; to retain.

In relation to the doctrine of possession, this term expresses merely the fact of manual detention, or the corporeal possession of any object, without involving the question of title; while habere (and especially possidere) denotes the maintenance of possession by a lawful claim; i. e., civil possession, as distinguished from mere natural possession.

TENERE/L. The Latin name for that clause in a bond in which the obligor expresses that he is "held and firmly bound" to the obligee, his heirs, etc.

TENET; TENUIT. Lat. He holds; he held. In the Latin forms of the writ of waste against a tenant, these words introduced the allegation of tenure. If the tenancy still existed, and recovery of the land was sought, the former word was used, (and the writ was said to be "in the tenet.") If the tenancy had already determined, the latter term was used, (the writ being described as "in the tenuit,") and then damages only were sought.

TENHEDED, or TIENHEOFED. In old English law. A dean. Cowell.

TENMENTALE. The number of ten men, which number, in the time of the Saxons, was called a "decennary;" and ten decennaries made what was called a "hundred." Also a duty or tribute paid to the crown, consisting of two shillings for each plowland. Enc.Lond.

TENNE. A term of heraldry, meaning orange color. In engravings it should be represented by lines in bend sinister crossed by others bar-ways. Heralds who blazon by the names of the heavenly bodies, call it "dragon's head," and those who employ jewels, "jacinth." It is one of the colors called "stainand." Wharton.

TENOR. A term used in pleading to denote that an exact copy is set out. 1 Chit.Crim.Law. 235.

By the tenor of a deed, or other instrument in writing, is signified the matter contained therein, according to the true intent and meaning thereof. Cowell.

"Tenor," in pleading a written instrument, imports that the very words are set out. "Purport" does not import this, but is equivalent only to "substance." Corn. v. Wright, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 65; Dana v. State, 2 Ohio St. 93; State v. Bonney, 34 Me. 384; State v. Atkins, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 458; State v. Chinn, 142 Mo. 507, 44 S.W. 245; Sauger-ties Bank v. Delaware & Hudson Co., 204 App.Div. 211, 198 N.Y.S. 722, 723; State v. Collins, 297 Mo. 257, 248 S.W. 599, 602; Johns v. Rice, 165 Iowa, 233, 145 N.W. 290, 291.

The action of proving the tenor, in Scotland, is an action for proving the contents and purport of a deed which has been lost. Bell.

In Chancery Pleading

TENOR EST QUI LEGEM DAT FEUDO. It is the tenor [of the feudal grant] which regulates its effect and extent. Craigius, Jus Feud. (3d Ed.) 66; Broom, Max. 459.

TENORE INDICTAMENTI MITTENDO. A writ whereby the record of an indictment, and the process thereupon, was called out of another court into the queen's bench. Reg.Orig. 69.

TENORE PRZESENTIUM. By the tenor of these presents, i. e., the matter contained therein, or rather the intent and meaning thereof. Cowell.

TENSERLÆ. A sort of ancient tax or military contribution. Wharton.

TENTERDEN'S ACT. In English law. The statute 9 Geo. IV. c. 14, taking its name from Lord Tenterden, who procured its enactment, which is a species of extension of the statute of frauds, and requires the reduction of contracts to writing.

TENTATES PANIS. The essay or assay of bread.

TENTH. In English law. A temporary aid issuing out of personal property, and granted to the king by parliament; formerly the real tenth part of all the movables belonging to the subject. 1 Bl.Comm. 308.

In English ecclesiastical law. The tenth part of the annual profit of every living in the kingdom, formerly paid to the pope, but by statute 26 Hen. VIII. c. 3, transferred to the crown, and afterwards made a part of the fund called "Queen Anne's Bounty." 1 Bl.Comm. 284-286.

TENTUIT. A term used in stating the tenure in an action for waste done after the termination of the tenancy. See Tenet.

TENURA. In old English law. Tenure.

TENURA EST PACTIO CONTRA COMMUNEM FEUDI NATURAM AC RATIONEM, IN CONTRACTU INTERPOSITA. Wright, Ten. 21. Tenure is a compact contrary to the common nature and reason of the fee, put into a contract.

TENURE. The mode or system of holding lands or tenements in subordination to some superior, which, in the feudal ages, was the leading characteristic of real property.

Tenure is the direct result of feudalism, which separated the dominium directum, (the dominion of the soil,) which is placed mediatly or immediately in the crown, from the dominion utile, (the possessory title,) the right to the use and profits in the soil, designated by/the term "seisin," which is the highest interest a subject can acquire. Wharton: Kavanaugh v. Cohoes Power & Light Corporation, 187 N.Y.S. 216, 231, 114 Misc. 590.

Wharton gives the following list of tenures which were ultimately developed:

Lay Tenures

I. Frank tenement, or freehold. (1) The military tenures (abolished, except grand serjeanty, and reduced to free socage tenures) were: Knight service proper, or tenure in chivalry; grand serjeanty; cornage. (2) Free socage, or plow-service; either petty serjeanty, tenure in burgage, or gavelkind.

II. Villeinage. (1) Pure villeinage, (whence copyholds at the lord's [nominal] will, which is regulated according to custom). (2) Privileged villeinage, sometimes called "viltein socage," (whence tenure in ancient demesne, which is an exalted species of copyhold, held according to custom, and not according to the lord's will,) and is of three kinds: Tenure in ancient demesne; privileged copyholds, customary freeholds, or free copyholds; copyholds of base tenure.

Spiritual Tenures

I. Frankalmoigne, or free alms.

II. Tenure by divine service.

In its general sense, a mode of holding or occupying. Thus, we speak of the tenure of an office, meaning the manner in which it is held, especially with regard to time, (tenure for life, tenure during good behavior,) and of tenure of land in the sense of occupation or tenancy, especially with reference to cultivation and questions of political economy; e. g., tenure by peasant proprietors, cottiers, etc. Sweet. See Bard v. Grundy, 2 Ky. 169; People v. Waite, 9 Wend. (N.Y.) 58; Barrett v. Duff, 114 Kan. 220, 217 P. 918, 922; People ex rel. McCoy v. McCahey, 296 Ill.App. 310, 15 N.E.2d 988, 993.

TENURE BY DIVINE SERVICE. Where an ecclesiastical corporation, sole or aggregate, holds land by a certain divine service; as, to say prayers on a certain day in every year, "or to distribute in almes to an, hundred poore men an hundred pence at such a day." Litt. § 137.

TENURE IN OFFICE. Right to perform duties and receive emoluments thereof. State ex rel. Daly v. City of Toledo, 142 Ohio St. 123, 50 N.E.2d 338, 342.

TERCE. In Scotch law. Dower; a widow's right of dower, or a right to a life estate in a third part of the lands of which her husband died seised.

TERCER. In Scotch law. A widow that possesses the third part of her husband's land, as her legal jointure. 1 Kames, Eq. pref.

TERCERONE. A term applied in the West Indies to a person one of whose parents was white and the other a mulatto. See Daniel v. Guy, 19 Ark. 131.

TERM. A word or phrase; an expression; particularly one which possesses a fixed and known meaning in some science, art, or profession.

A fixed period, a determined or prescribed duration. Carpenter v. Okanogan County, 163 Wash. 18, 299 P. 400, 404.

Civil Law

A space of time granted to a debtor for discharging his obligation. Poth. Obl. pt. 2, c. 3, art. 3, § 1; Civ.Code La. art. 2048.

Estates

Bounds, limitation, or extent of time for which an estate is granted; as when a man holds an estate for any limited or specific number of years, which is called his "term," and he himself is called, with reference to the term he so holds, the "termor," or "tenant of the term." Gay Mfg. Co. v. Hobbs, 128 N.C. 46, 38 S.E. 26, 83 Am.St.Rep. 661; Sanderson v. Scranton, 105 Pa. 472; Hurd v. Whitsett, 4 Colo. 84; Rooney v. City of Omaha, 105 Neb. 447, 181 N.W. 143, 144; Curry v. Bacharach Quality Shops, 271 Pa. 364, 117 A. 435, 438.
TERM

Of Court

When used with reference to a court, signifies the space of time during which the court holds a session. A session signifies the time during the term when the court sits for the transaction of business, and the session commences when the court convenes for the term, and continues until final adjournment, either before or at the expiration of the term. The term of the court is the time prescribed by law during which it may be in session. The session of the court is the time of its actual sitting. Lipari v. State, 19 Tex.App. 43; Conkling v. Ridgely, 112 Ill. 36, 1 N.E. 261; 54 Am.Rep. 204; Lanier v. Shayne, 85 Fla. 212, 95 So. 617, 619; Trower v. Mudd, Mo.App., 242 S.W. 993, 994. But "term" and "session" are often used interchangeably. Nation v. Savelly, 127 Okl. 117, 260 P. 32, 35; Muse v. Harris, 122 Okl. 250, 254 P. 72, 73; Lewis County Pub. Co. v. Lewis County Court, 75 W.Va. 305, 83 S.E. 993, 995.

General

General term. A phrase used in some jurisdictions to denote the ordinary session of a court, for the trial and determination of causes, as distinguished from a special term, for the hearing of motions or arguments or the despatch of various kinds of formal business, or the trial of a special list or class of cases. Or it may denote a sitting of the court in banc. State v. Eggers, 152 Mo. 485, 54 S.W. 498.

Regular term. A term begun at the time appointed by law, and continued, in the discretion of the court, to such time as it may appoint, consistent with the law. Wightman v. Karsner, 20 Ala. 451; Glebe v. State, 106 Neb. 251, 183 N.W. 295, 296; Carter v. State, 14 Ga.App. 242, 80 S.E. 533, 534; State v. Thompson, 100 W.Va. 253, 130 S.E. 456, 460; Ex parte Daly, 66 Fla. 345, 63 So. 834, 835.

Special term. In New York practice, that branch of the court which is held by a single judge for hearing and deciding in the first instance motions and causes of equitable nature is called the "special term," as opposed to the "general term," held by three judges (usually) to hear appeals. Abbott; Gracie v. Freeland, 1 N.Y. 232.

Term attendant on the inheritance. See Attendant Terms.

Term fee. In English practice. A certain sum which a solicitor is entitled to charge to his client, and the client to recover, if successful, from the unsuccessful party; payable for every term in which any proceedings subsequent to the summons shall take place. Wharton.

Term for deliberating. The time given to the beneficiary heir, to examine if it be for his interest to accept or reject the succession which has fallen to him. Civ.Code La. art. 1033.

Term for years. An estate for years and the time during which such estate is to be held are each called a "term;" hence the term may expire before the time, as by a surrender. Co.Litt. 45.

Term in gross. A term of years is said to be either in gross (outstanding) or attendant upon the inheritance. It is outstanding, or in gross, when it is unattached or disconnected from the estate or inheritance, as where it is in the hands of some third party having no interest in the inheritance; it is attendant, when vested in some trustee in trust for the owner of the inheritance. Brown.

Term of lease. The word "term," when used in connection with a lease, means the period which is granted for the lessee to occupy the premises, and does not include the time between the making of the lease and the tenant's entry. Young v. Dake, 5 N.Y. 463, 55 Am.Dec. 356; De Pauw University v. United Electric Coal Cos., 299 Ill.App. 339, 20 N.E.2d 146, 149.

Term of office. The period during which elected officer or appointee is entitled to hold office, perform its functions, and enjoy its privileges and emoluments. State v. Knight, 76 Mont. 71, 245 P. 267, 268; Wilson v. McCarron, 112 Me. 181, 91 A. 839, 840; State v. Board of Com'rs of Sierra County, 29 N.M. 209, 222 P. 654, 655, 31 A.L.R. 1310; State v. Oklahoma City, 38 Okl. 349, 134 P. 58, 59, 60; Bayley v. Garrison, 190 Cal. 690, 214 P. 871, 872.

Term probatory. The period of time allowed to the promoter of an ecclesiastical suit to produce his witnesses, and prove the facts on which he rests his case. Coote, Ecc.Pr. 240, 241.

Term to conclude. In English ecclesiastical practice. An appointment by the judge of a time at which both parties are understood to renounce all further exhibits and allegations.

Term to propound all things. In English ecclesiastical practice. An appointment by the judge of a time at which both parties are to exhibit all the acts and instruments which make for their respective causes.

In the Law of Contracts and in Court Practice. The word is generally used in the plural, and "terms" are conditions; propositions stated or promissory promises made which, when assented to or accepted by another, settle the contract and bind the parties. Webster. See Hutchinson v. Lord, 1 Wis. 313, 60 Am.Dec. 381; State v. Fawcett, 58 Neb. 371, 78 Neb. 636; Nakdimen v. Ft. Smith & Van Buren Bridge Dist., 115 Ark. 194, 172 S.W. 272, 275.

Special terms. Peculiar or unusual conditions imposed on a party before granting some application to the favor of the court.

Under terms. A party is said to be under terms when an indulgence is granted to him by the court in its discretion, on certain conditions. Thus, when an injunction is granted ex parte, the party obtaining it is put under terms to abide by such order as to damages as the court may make at the hearing. Mozley & Whitley.

TERM INSURANCE. See Insurance.

TERMES DE LA LEY. Terms of the law, The name of a lexicon of the law French words and other technicalities of legal language in old times.

TERMINABLE PROPERTY. This name is sometimes given to property of such a nature that its duration is not perpetual or indefinite, but is limited or liable to terminate upon the happening of an event or the expiration of a fixed term; e.g., a leasehold, a life-annuity, etc.

TERRAGES. An exemption from all uncertain services. Cowell.

TERRARIUS. In old English law. A landholder.

TERRE-TENANT. He who is literally in the occupation or possession of the land, as distinguished from the owner out of possession. But, in a more technical sense, the person who is seized of the land, though not in actual occupancy of it, and locally, in Pennsylvania, one who purchases and takes land subject to the existing lien of a mortgage or judgment against a former owner. See Dengler v. Kiehner, 13 Pa. 38, 53 Am.Dec. 441; Hulett v. Insurance Co., 114 Pa. 142, 6 A. 554; Commonwealth Trust Co. of Pittsburgh v. Harkins, 312 Pa. 402, 167 A. 278, 280.

TERRIER. In English law. A landroll or survey of lands, containing the quantity of acres, tenants’ names, and such like; and in the exchequer there is a terrier of all the glebe lands in England, made about 1338. In general, an ecclesiastical terrier contains a detail of the temporal possessions of the church in every parish. Cowell; Tomlins; Mozley & Whitley.

TERRIS BONIS ET CATALLIS REHABENDIS POST PURGATIONEM. A writ for a clerk to recover his lands, goods, and chattels, formerly seized, after he had cleared himself of the felony of which he was accused, and delivered to his ordinary to be purged. Reg.Orig.

TERMS ET CATALLIS TENTIS ULTRA DEBITUM LEVATUM. A judicial writ for the restoring of lands or goods to a debtor who is distrained above the amount of the debt. Reg. Jud.

TERRIS LIBERANDIS. A writ that lay for a man convicted by attainder, to bring the record and process before the king, and take a fine for his imprisonment, and then to deliver to him his lands and tenements again, and release him of the strip and waste. Reg. Orig. 232. Also it was a writ for the delivery of lands to the heir, after homage and relief performed, or upon security taken that he should perform them. Orig. 293.

TERRITORIAL, TERRITORIALITY. These terms are used to signify connection with, or limitation with reference to, a particular country or territory. Thus, "territorial law" is the correct expression for the law of a particular country or state, although "municipal law" is more common. "Territorial waters" are that part of the sea adjacent to the coast of a given country which is by international law deemed to be within the sovereignty of that country, so that its courts have jurisdiction over offenses committed on those waters, even by a person on board a foreign ship. Sweet.

TERRITORIAL COURTS. The courts established in the territories of the United States.

TERRITORIAL JURISDICTION. Territory over which a government or a subdivision thereof has jurisdiction. State v. Cox, 106 Utah 253, 147 P.2d 858, 861.

Jurisdiction considered as limited to cases arising or persons residing within a defined territory, as, a county, a judicial district, etc. The authority of any court is limited by the boundaries thus fixed. See Phillips v. Thralls, 26 Kan. 781.

TERRITORIAL PROPERTY. The land and water over which the state has jurisdiction and control whether the legal title be in the state itself or in private individuals. Lakes and waters wholly within the state are its property and also the marginal sea within the three-mile limit, but bays and gulfs are not always recognized as state property.

TERRITORY. A part of a country separated from the rest, and subject to a particular jurisdiction.

American Law

A portion of the United States, not within the limits of any state, which has not yet been admitted as a state of the Union, but is organized, with a separate legislature, and with executive and judicial officers appointed by the president. See Ex parte Morgan, D.C.Ark., 20 F. 298, 304; People v. Daniels, 6 Utah, 288, 22 P. 159, 5 L.R.A. 444; Ex

Const. Amend. 18, prohibiting the transportation of intoxicating liquor within or the importation thereof into the United States and territory subject to its jurisdiction, uses the word "territory" as meaning the regional areas of land and adjacent waters over which the United States claims and exercises dominion and control as a sovereign power. Cunard S. S. Co. v. Mellon, 262 U.S. 100, 43 S. Ct. 504, 507, 67 L. Ed. 894, 27 A.L.R. 1306; International Mercantile Marine v. Stuart, D.C.N.Y., 285 F. 78, 81; State v. Morton, 31 Idaho, 329, 171 P. 495, 496.

TERRITORY OF A JUDGE. The territorial jurisdiction of a judge; the bounds, or district, within which he may lawfully exercise his judicial authority. Phillips v. Thralls, 26 Kan. 781.

TERROR. Alarm; fright; dread; the state of mind induced by the apprehension of hurt from some hostile or threatening event or manifestation; fear caused by the appearance of danger. In an indictment for riot, it must be charged that the acts done were "to the terror of the people." See Arto v. State, 19 Tex.App. 136.

TERTIA DENIJNCIATIO. Lat. In old English law. Third publication or proclamation of intended marriage.

TERTIUS INTERVENIENS. Lat. In the civil law. A third person intervening; a third person who comes in between the parties to a suit; one who interpleads. Gilbert's Forum Rom. 47.

TEST. To bring one to a trial and examination, or to ascertain the truth or the quality or fitness of a thing.

Something by which to ascertain the truth respecting another thing; a criterion, gauge, standard, or norm.

In public law, an inquiry or examination addressed to a person appointed or elected to a public office, to ascertain his qualifications therefor, but particularly a scrutiny of his political, religious, or social views, or his attitude of past and present loyalty or disloyalty to the government under which he is to act. See Attorney General v. Detroit Common Council, 58 Mich. 213, 24 N.W. 887, 55 Am.Rep. 675; People v. Hoffman, 116 Ill. 587, 5 N.E. 596, 56 Am.Rep. 793; Rogers v. Buffalo, 51 Hun 637, 3 N.Y.S. 674.

TEST ACT. The statute 25 Car. II. c. 2, which directed all civil and military officers to take the oaths of allegiance and supremacy, and make the declaration against transubstantiation, within six months after their admission, and also within the same time receive the sacrament according to the usage of the Church of England, under penalty of £500 and disability to hold the office. 4 Bl.Comm. 58, 59. This was abolished by St. 9 Geo. IV. c. 17, so far as concerns receiving the sacrament, and a new form of declaration was substituted.

TEST ACTION. An action selected out of a considerable number of suits, concurrently depending in the same court, brought by several plaintiffs against the same defendant, or by one plaintiff against different defendants, all similar in their circumstances, and embracing the same questions, and to be supported by the same evidence, the selected action to go first to trial, (under an order of court equivalent to consolidation,) and its decision to serve as a test of the right of recovery in the others, all parties agreeing to be bound by the result of the test action.

TEST OATH. An oath required to be taken as a criterion of the fitness of the person to fill a public or political office; but particularly an oath of fidelity and allegiance (past or present) to the established government.

TEST-PAPER. In practice. A paper or instrument shown to a jury as evidence. A term used in the Pennsylvania courts. Depue v. Clare, 7 Pa. 428.

TESTA DE NEVIL. An ancient and authentic record in two volumes, in the custody of the king's remembrancer in the exchequer, said to be compiled by John de Nevil, a justice itinerant, in the eighteenth and twenty-fourth years of Henry III. Cowell. These volumes were printed in 1807, under the authority of the commissioners of the public records, and contain an account of fees held either immediately of the king or of others who held of the king in capite; fees holden in frankalmoinge; sergeancies holden of the king; widows and heiresses of tenants in capite, whose marriages were in the gift of the king; churches in the gift of the king; escheats, and sums paid for scutages and aids, especially within the county of Hereford. Cowell; Wharton.

TESTABLE. A person is said to be testable when he has capacity to make a will; a man of twenty-one years of age and of sane mind is testable.

TESTACY. The state or condition of leaving a will at one's death. Opposed to "intestacy."

TESTAMENT. A disposition of personal property to take place after the owner's decease, according to his desire and direction. Pluche v. Jones, C.C.A.Tex., 54 F. 860, 865, 4 C.C.A. 622; Aubert's Appeal, 109 Pa. 447, 1 A. 336; Conklin v. Egerton, 21 Wendl., N.Y., 436; Ragsdale v. Booker, 2 Strob. Eq. (S.C.) 348; In re Lester's Will, 100 N.J.Eq. 521, 136 P. 322.

The act of last will, clothed with certain solemnities, by which the testator disposes of his property, either universally, or by universal title, or by particular title. Civ.Code La. art. 1571.

The common usage the world over is to employ the words 'will,' "testament," and "last will and testament" as exactly synonymous. Occidental Life Ins. Co. v. Powers, 192 Wash. 475, 74 P.2d 27, 32, 114 A.L.R. 531. But strictly speaking, the term testament denotes only a will of personal property; a will of land not being called a "testament." Wyers v. Arnold, 347 Mo. 413, 147 S.W.2d 644, 647, 134 A.L.R. 876. The word "testament" is now seldom used, except in the heading of a formal will, which usually begins: 'This is the last will and testament of me, A. B.,' etc. Sweet.

The true declaration of a man's last will as to that which he would have to be done, aster his death. It is compounded, according to Justinian, from testatio mentis; but the better opinion is that it is a simple word formed from the Latin testor, and not a compound word. Mozley & Whitley.
TESTAMENT

Military Testament

In English law. A nuncupative will, that is, one made by word of mouth, by which a soldier may dispose of his goods, pay, and other personal chattels, without the forms and solemnities which the law requires in other cases. St. 1 Vict. c. 26, § 11.

Mutual Testaments

Wills made by two persons who leave their effects reciprocally to the survivor.

Mystic Testament

A form of testament made under Spanish law which prevailed in Louisiana and California. See Broutin v. Vassant, 5 Mart. O.S. (La.) 182; Schoul. Wills § 9. In the law of Louisiana. A sealed testament. The mystic or secret testament, otherwise called the "closed testament," is made in the following manner: The testator must sign his dispositions, whether he has written them himself or has caused them to be written by another person. The paper containing those dispositions, or the paper serving as their envelope, must be closed and sealed. The testator shall present it thus closed and sealed to the notary and the witnesses. The notary shall then draw up the act of superscription, which shall be written on that paper, or on the sheet that serves as its envelope, and that act shall be signed by the testator, and by the notary and the witnesses. Civ.Code La. art. 1584.

TESTAMENTA CUM DUO INTER SE PUGNANTIA REPERIUNTUR, ULTIMUM RATUM EST; SIC EST, CUM DUO INTER SE PUGNANTIA REPERIUNTUR IN EODEM TESTAMENTO. Co.Litt. 112. When two conflicting wills are found, the last prevails; so it is when two conflicting clauses occur in the same will.

TESTAMENTA LATISSIMAM INTERPRETATIONEM HABERE DEBENT. Jenk.Cent. 81. Wills ought to have the broadest interpretation.

TESTAMENTARY. Pertaining to a will or testament; as testamentary causes. Derived from, founded on, or appointed by a testament or will; as a testamentary guardian, letters testamentary, etc.

A paper, instrument, document, gift, appointment, etc., is said to be "testamentary" when it is written or made so as not to take effect until after the death of the person making it, and to be revocable and retain the property under his control during his life, although he may have believed that it would operate as an instrument of a different character. Sweet. See In re Murphy’s Estate, 193 Wash. 400, 75 P.2d 916, 920.

Letters Testamentary

The formal instrument of authority and appointment given to an executor by the proper court, upon the admission of the will to probate, empowering him to enter upon the discharge of his office as executor.

Testamentary Capacity

That measure of mental ability which is recognized in law as sufficient for the making a will. See Nicewander v. Nicewander, 151 Ill. 156, 37 N. E. 698; Delafield v. Parish, 25 N.Y. 29; Duffield v. Robeson, 2 Har. (Del.) 379; Lowe v. Williamson, 2 N.J.Eq. 85.

A testator to have such capacity must have sufficient mind and memory to intelligently understand the nature of business in which he is engaged, to comprehend generally the nature and extent of property which constitutes his estate, and which he intends to dispose of, and to collect the objects of his bounty. In re Larsen’s Estate, 191 Wash. 257, 71 P.2d 47, 49. And it depends upon capacity at very time will was executed, and not previously or subsequently. Bishop v. Scharf, 214 Iowa 644, 241 N.W. 3, 7.

Testamentary Causes

In English law. Causes or matters relating to the probate of wills, the granting of administrations, and the suing for legacies, of which the ecclesiastical courts have jurisdiction. 3 Bl.Comm. 95, 98. Testamentary causes are causes relating to the validity and execution of wills. The phrase is generally confined to those causes which were formerly matters of ecclesiastical jurisdiction, and are now dealt with by the court of probate. Mozley & Whitley.

Testamentary Class

Body of persons, uncertain in number at time of gift, ascertainable. in future, and each taking in equal or in other definite proportions. Newlin v. Mercantile Trust- Co. of Baltimore, 161 Md. 622, 158 A. 51, 57.

Testamentary Disposition

A disposition of property by way of gift, which is not to take effect unless the grantor dies or until that event. Diefendorf v. Diefendorf, 56 Hun 639, 8 N.Y.S. 617; Chestnut St. Nat. Bank v. Fidelity Ins., etc., Co., 40 A. 486, 186 Pa. 333, 65 Am.St.Rep. 860; Patch v. Squires, 105 Vt. 405, 165 A. 919, 921.

Testamentary Guardian

A guardian appointed by the last will of a father for the person and real and personal estate of his child until the latter arrives of full age. 1 Bl.Comm. 462; 2 Kent, Comm. 224; In re De Saulles, 101 Misc. 447, 167 N.Y.S. 445, 453.

Testamentary Paper or Instrument

An instrument in the nature of a will; an unprobated will; a paper writing which is of the character of a will, though not formally such, and, if allowed as a testament, will have the effect of a will upon the devolution and distribution of property. Young v. O’Donnell, 129 Wash. 219, 224 P. 682, 684.

Testamentary Power

A power of appointment exercisable only by will. Restatement, Property, § 321(1).
Testamentary Succession

In Louisiana, that which results from the institution of an heir contained in a testament executed in the form prescribed by law. Civ.Code La. 1900, art. 876.

Testamentary Trustee

See Trustee.

TESTAMENTUM. Lat. In the civil law. A testament; a will, or last will.

In old English law. A testament or will; a disposition of property made in contemplation of death. Bract. fol. 60.

A general name for any instrument of conveyance, including deeds and charters, and so called either because it furnished written testimony of the conveyance, or because it was authenticated by witnesses, (testes.) Spelman.

TESTAMENTUM EST VOLUNTATIS NOSTRIE JUSTA SENTENTIA, DE EO QUOD QUIS POST MORTEM SUAM FIER' VELIT. A testament is the just expression of our will concerning that which any one wishes done after his death, [or, as Blackstone translates, "the legal declaration of a man's intentions which he wills to be performed after his death." ] Dig. 28, 1, 1; 2 Bl.Comm. 499.

TESTAMENTUM, 1. e., TESTATIO MENTIS, FACTA NUNNO PRIESENTE METU PERICULI, SED COGITATIONE MORTALITATIS. Co. Litt. 322. A testament, i.e., the witnessing of one's intention, made under no present fear of danger, but in expectancy of death.

TESTAMENTUM INOFFICIOSUM. Lat. In the civil law. An inofficious testament, (q. v.).

TESTAMENTUM OMNE MORTE CONSUMMATUR. Every will is perfected by death. A will speaks from the time of death only. Co. Litt. 232.

TESTARI. Lat. In the civil law. To testify; to attest; to declare, publish, or make known a thing before witnesses. To make a will. Calvin.

TESTATE. One who has made a will; one who dies leaving a will.

If deceased's property passed to the devisees under his will, then he died "testate" ; but, if no part of the property of his estate passed by will, but by the statute of descent and distribution, then he died "intestate". Leffler v. Leffler, 151 Fla. 455, 10 So.2d 799, 804.

TESTATION. Witness; evidence.

TESTATOR. One who makes or has made a testament or will; one who dies leaving a will. This term is borrowed from the civil law. Inst. 2, 14, 5, 6.

TESTATORIS ULTIMA VOLUNTAS EST PERIMPLENDA SECUNDUM VERAM INTENTIONEM SUAM. Co. Litt. 322. The last will of a testator is to be thoroughly fulfilled according to his real intention.

TESTATRIX. A woman who makes a will; a woman who dies leaving a will; a female testator.

TESTATUM. The name of a writ which is issued by the court of one county to the sheriff of another county in the same state, when defendant cannot be found in the county where the court is located: for example, after a judgment has been obtained, and a ca. sa. has been issued, which has been returned non est inventus, a testatum ca. sa. may be issued to the sheriff of the county where the defendant is. See Viner, Abr. Testatum 259.

In conveyancing. That part of a deed which commences with the words, "This indenture witnesseth."

TESTATUM WRIT. In practice. A writ containing a testatum clause; such as a testatum capias, a testatum / i. fa., and a testatum ca. sa. See Testatum.

TESTATUS. Lat. In the civil law. Testate; one who has made a will. Dig. 50, 17, 7.

TESTE MEIPSO. Lat. In old English law and practice. A solemn formula of attestation by the sovereign, used at the conclusion of charters, and other public instruments, and also of original writs out of chancery. Spelman.

TESTE OF A WRIT. In practice. The concluding clause, commencing with the word "Witness," etc. A writ which bears the teste is sometimes said to be tested.

"Teste" is a word commonly used in the last part of every writ, wherein the date is contained beginning with the words, "Teste meipso," meaning the sovereign, if the writ be an original writ, or be issued in the name of the sovereign; but, if the writ be a judicial writ, then the word "Teste" is followed by the name of the chief judge of the court in which the action is brought, or, in case of a vacancy of such office, in the name of the senior puisne judge. Mozley & Whitley.

TESTED. To be tested is to bear the teste, (q. v.).

TESTES. Lat. Witnesses.

TESTES PONDERANTUR, NON NUMERANTUR. Witnesses are weighed, not numbered. That is, in case of a conflict of evidence, the truth is to be sought by weighing the credibility of the respective witnesses, not by the mere numerical preponderance on one side or the other.

TESTES QUI POSTULAT DEBET DARE EIS SUMPTUS COMPETENTES. Whosoever demands witnesses must find them in competent provision.

TESTES, TRIAL PER. A trial had before a judge without the intervention of a jury, in which the judge is left to form in his own breast his sentence upon the credit of the witnesses examined; but this mode of trial, although it was common in the civil law, was seldom resorted to in the practice of the common law, but it is now becoming common when each party waives his right to a trial by jury. Brown.
TESTIBUS DEPONENTHIUS IN PARI NUMERO, DIGNIORIBUS EST CREDEMUNDUM. Where the witnesses who testify are in equal number, [on both sides.] the more worthy are to be believed. 4 Inst. 279.

TESTIFY. To bear witness; to give evidence as a witness; to make a solemn declaration, under oath or affirmation, in a judicial inquiry, for the purpose of establishing or proving some fact. See State v. Robertson, 26 S.C. 117, 1 S.E. 443; Gannon v. Stevens, 13 Kan. 459; Mudge v. Gilbert, 43 How.Prac. (N.Y.) 221; People v. Krotz, 341 Ill. 214, 172 N.E. 135, 137.

TESTIMONIA PONDERANDA SUNT, NON NUMERANDA. Evidence is to be weighed, not enumerated.

TESTIMONIAL. Besides its ordinary meaning of a written recommendation to character, "testimonial" has a special meaning, under St. 39 Eliz. c. 17, § 3, passed in 1597, under which it signified a certificate under the hand of a justice of the peace, testifying the place and time when and where a soldier or mariner landed, and the place of his dwelling or birth, unto which he was to pass, and a convenient time limited for his passage. Every idle and wandering soldier or mariner not having such a testimonial, or willfully exceeding for above fourteen days the time limited thereby, or forging or counterfeiting such testimonial, was to suffer death as a felon, without benefit of clergy. This act was repealed, in 1812, by St. 52 Geo. III. c. 31. Mozley & Whitley.

TESTIMONIAL PROOF. In the civil law. Proof by the evidence of witnesses, i. e., parol evidence, as distinguished from proof by written instruments, which is called "literal" proof.

TESTIMONIO. In Spanish law. An authentic copy of a deed or other instrument, made by a notary and given to an interested party as evidence of his title, the original remaining in the public archives. Guilbeau v. Mays, 15 Tex. 414.

TESTINUMONIO CLAUSE. In conveyancing. That clause of a deed or instrument with which it concludes: "In witness whereof, the parties to these presents have hereunto set their hands and seals."

Evidence and Testimony as Synonymous or Distinguishable

The words "testimony" and "evidence" are not synonymous. Bednarik v. Bednarik, 18 N.J.Misc. 633, 16 A.2d 80, 89.

Although testimony is evidence, evidence may or may not be testimony or may, and in most cases does, consist of more than testimony. Superior Meat Products v. Holloway, 113 Ill. App. 320, 48 N.E.2d 83, 86.

Anything perceptible in the five senses, constitutes evidence, when submitted to court or jury, if competent. In re Fisher's Estate, 47 Idaho 668, 279 P. 291, 293.

Application for policy, although evidence in suit on policy, was not "testimony." Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Lodzinski, 121 N.J Eq. 183, 188 A. 681, 688.

"Evidence" is the broader term and includes all testimony. Bednarik v. Bednarik, 18 N.J.Misc. 633, 16 A.2d 80, 89. In re Seigle's Estate, 26 N.Y.S.2d 410, 413, 176 Misc. 15.

"Evidence" of transaction between claimant and defendant, were not "testimony." In re Seigle's Estate, 264 App.Div. 76, 34 N.Y.S.2d 489, 491.

"Testimony" is found in spoken words of witnesses while "evidence" includes documents and other exhibits which may properly be submitted to jury. Madison v. State, 138 Fla. 467, 189 So. 832, 835.

"Testimony" is that species of evidence which is produced through language of witnesses. Weeks v. Bailey, 33 N.M. 193, 263 P. 29, 30.

Testimony is one species of evidence. But the word "evidence" is a generic term which includes every species of evidence. Bednarik v. Bednarik, 18 N.J. Misc. 633, 16 A.2d 80, 89.

Testimony properly means only such evidence as is delivered by a witness on the trial of a case, either orally or in the form of affidavits or depositions. Thus, an ancient deed, when offered under proper circumstances, is evidence but it could not strictly be called "testimony."

The words "testimony" and "evidence," are frequently used synonymously. Superior Lloyds of America v. Foxworth, Tex.Civ.App., 178 S.W.2d 724, 726; Roberts v. Carlisle, 142 Neb. 851, 857, 8 N.W.2d 175, 179; Wyuta Cattle Co. v. Connell, 43 Wyo. 135, 299 P. 279, 281.

As used in instruction "testimony" was used in the sense of "evidence." In re Burcham’s Estate, 211 Iowa 1305, 235, N.W. 764, 766.

The use of the word "testimony" instead of "evidence" in an instruction, where both oral evidence and physical facts and circumstances are defensively interposed, is not prejudicial where it is clear from all the instructions that it was intended that such physical facts should also be considered by the jury. Roberts v. Carlisle, 142 Neb. 851, 857, 8 N.W.2d 175, 179.

The word "testimony" as used in statute providing that when any deed, writing, or other document necessary as evidence but it could not strictly be called "testimony."

"Evidence" of transaction between claimant and defendant, were not "testimony." In re Seigle's Estate, 26 N.Y.S.2d 410, 413, 176 Misc. 15.

"Evidence" of transaction between claimant and defendant, were not "testimony." In re Seigle's Estate, 26 N.Y.S.2d 410, 413, 176 Misc. 15.

"Evidence" of transaction between claimant and defendant, were not "testimony." In re Seigle's Estate, 26 N.Y.S.2d 410, 413, 176 Misc. 15.

"Evidence" of transaction between claimant and defendant, were not "testimony." In re Seigle's Estate, 26 N.Y.S.2d 410, 413, 176 Misc. 15.

"Evidence" of transaction between claimant and defendant, were not "testimony." In re Seigle's Estate, 26 N.Y.S.2d 410, 413, 176 Misc. 15.

"Evidence" of transaction between claimant and defendant, were not "testimony." In re Seigle's Estate, 26 N.Y.S.2d 410, 413, 176 Misc. 15.

"Evidence" of transaction between claimant and defendant, were not "testimony." In re Seigle's Estate, 26 N.Y.S.2d 410, 413, 176 Misc. 15.

THINGS

THINGS OF VALUE. To be the subject of gaming may be any thing affording the necessary lure to indulge the gambling instinct. Painter v. State, 163 Tenn. 627, 45 S.W.2d 46, 47. Heartley v. State, 178 Tenn. 254, 157 S.W.2d 1, 3.

THINGS PERSONAL. Goods, money, and all other movables, which may attend the owner’s person wherever he thinks proper to go. 2 Bl. Comm. 16. Things personal consist of goods, money, and all other movables, and of such rights and profits as relate to movables. 1 Steph. Comm. 156; People v. Brooklyn, 9 Barb. (N.Y.) 546; Castle v. Castle, C.C.A.Hawaii, 267 F. 521, 522. Also all vegetable productions, as the fruit or other parts of a plant when severed from the body of it, or the whole plant itself, when severed from the ground. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Bush, 191 Ark. 1085, 89 S.W.2d 723, 725, 103 A.L.R. 367.

THINGS REAL. Such things as are permanent, fixed, and immovable, which cannot be carried out of their place; as lands and tenements and hereditaments. 2 Bl. Comm. 16. Western Union Telegraph v. Bush, 191 Ark. 1085, 89 S.W.2d 723, 725, 103 A.L.R. 367.

This definition has been objected to as not embracing incorporeal rights. Mr. Stephen defines things real to “consist of things substantial and immovable, and of the rights and profits annexed to or issuing out of these.” 1 Steph. Comm. 156. Things real are otherwise described to consist of lands, tenements, and hereditaments. People v. Brooklyn, 9 Barb., N.Y., 546; Sox v. Miracle, 35 N.D. 458, 160 N.W. 716, 719.

THINGS IN ACTION, ENTRY, OR RE-ENTRY CANNOT BE GRANTED OVER. Van Rensselaer v. Ball, 19 N.Y. 100, 103.

THINGS INCIDENT CANNOT BE SEVERED, Finch, Law, b. 3, c. 1, n. 12.

THINGS INCIDENT SHALL PASS BY THE GRANT OF THE PRINCIPAL, BUT NOT THE PRINCIPAL BY THE GRANT OF THE INCIDENT. Co. Litt. 152a, 151b; Broom, Max. 433.

THINGS SHALL NOT BE VOID WHICH MAY POSSIBLY BE GOOD.

THINGUS. In Saxon law. A thane or nobleman; knight or freeman. Cowell.

THIRD. Following next after the second; also, with reference to any legal instrument or transaction or judicial proceeding, any outsider or person not a party to the affair nor immediately concerned in it.

Third opposition. In Louisiana, when an execution is levied on property which does not belong to the defendant, but to an outsider, the remedy of the owner is by an intervention called a “third opposition,” in which, on his giving security, an injunction or prohibition may be granted to stop the sale. See New Orleans v. Louisiana Const. Co., 9 S.Ct. 223, 129 U.S. 45, 32 L.Ed. 607; Norton v. Walton, C.C.A.La., 288 F. 359, 360.

Third parties. See Party.

Third penny. A portion (one-third) of the amount of all fines and other profits of the county court, which was reserved for the earl, in the early days when the jurisdiction of those courts was extensive, the remainder going to the king.

THIRD CONVICTION. Before charge can be considered a “third conviction” of a felony in contemplation of Habitual Criminal Act, accused must have been convicted of a second felony subsequent to his conviction of first one and after he had paid penalty inflicted for it, and third conviction should be subsequent to second, and after he had paid penalty for it. Cobb v. Commonwealth, 267 Ky. 176, 101 S.W.2d 418, 420.

THIRD INTERNATIONAL. Communist International, Moscow International, Red International. An organization founded at Moscow in March, 1919, by delegates from twelve different countries, as a protest against the inactivity and bourgeois character of the Second International and as a call to Communists all over the world to support the Russian Revolution and inaugurate similar movements in other countries. It is still predominantly Russian. Garriga v. Richfield, 174 Misc. 315, 20 N.Y.S.2d 544, 547.

THIRD PARTY BENEFICIARY. In order for one not privy to a contract to maintain an action thereon as a “third party beneficiary”, it must appear that the contract was made and intended for his benefit. Fagiarone v. Consolidated Film Industries, 20 N.J.Misc. 193, 26 A.2d 425, 426. And the benefit must be one that is not merely incidental, but must be immediate in such a sense and degree as to indicate the assumption of a duty to make reparation if the benefit is lost. Associated THIRD PARTY CLAIM PROCEEDING. A proceeding for the purpose of determining whether the debtor has any right, title or interest in the property upon which the levy has been made and the judgment of the court in such proceedings is only made conclusive as to the right of the plaintiff or other person in whose favor the writ runs to have the property taken and to subject it to payment for other satisfaction of his judgment. Deevy v. Lewis, 54 Cal.App.2d 24, 128 P.2d 577, 579.

THIRDBOROUGH, or THIRDBOROW. An under-constable. Cowell.

THIRDINGS. The third part of the corn growing on the land, due to the lord for a heriot on the death of his tenant, within the manor of Turfat, in Hereford. Blount.

THIRD-NIGHT-AWN-HINDE. By the laws of St. Edward the Confessor, if any man lay a third night in an inn, he was called a “third-night-awn-hinde,” and his host was answerable for him if he committed any offense. The first night, forman-night, or uncouth, (unknown,) he reckoned a stranger; the second night, twa-night, a guest; and the third night, an awn-hinde, a domestic. Bract. 1. 3.

THIRDS. The designation, in colloquial language, of that portion of a decedent’s personal estate (one-third) which goes to the widow where there is also a child or children. See Yeomans v. Stevens, 2 Allen, Mass., 350; O’Hara v. Dever, 46 Barb. (N.Y.) 614.

THIRLAGE. In Scotch law. A servitude by which lands are astricted or “thirled” to a particular mill, to which the possessors must carry the grain of the growth of the astricted lands to be ground, for the payment of such duties as are either expressed or implied in the constitution of the right. Ersk. Inst. 2, 9, 18.

THIRTY-NINE ARTICLES. See Articles of Religion.

THIS. When “this” and “that” refer to different things before expressed, “this” refers to the thing last mentioned, and “that” to the thing first mentioned. Russell v. Kennedy, 66 Pa. 251. “This” is a demonstrative adjective, used to point out with particularity a person or thing present in place or in thought. Stevens v. Haile, Tex.Civ.App., 162 S.W. 1025, 1028.

THIS DAY SIX MONTHS. Fixing “this day six months,” or “three months,” for the next stage of a bill, is one of the modes in which the house of lords and the house of commons reject bills of which they disapprove. A bill rejected in this manner cannot be reintroduced in the same session. Wharton.

THISTLE-TAKE. It was a custom within the manor of Halton, in Chester, that if, in driving beasts over a common, the driver permitted them to graze or take but a thistle, he should pay a halfpenny a-piece to the lord of the fee. And at Fiskerton, in Nottinghamshire, by ancient custom, if a native or a cottager killed a swine above a year old, he paid to the lord a penny, which purchase of leave to kill a hog was also called “thistle-take.” Cowell.

THOROUGHFARE. The term means, according to its derivation, a street or passage through which one can fare, (travel;) that is, a street or highway affording an unobstructed exit at each end into another street or public passage. If the passage is closed at one end, admitting no exit there, it is called a “cul de sac.” Mankato v. Warren, 20 Minn. 150 (Gil. 128); Wiggins v. Talmadge, 11 Barb. (N.Y.) 462; Morris v. Blunt, 49 Utah, 243, 161 P. 1127, 1130; Burnham v. Holmes, 137 Me. 183, 16 A.2d 476, 477.

THRAVE. In old English law. A measure of corn or grain, consisting of twenty-four sheaves or four shocks, six sheaves to every shock. Cowell.

THREAD. A middle line; a line running through the middle of a stream or road. See Filum; Filum Aqua; Filum Vim; Thalweg.

THREAT. A declaration of intention or determination to inflict punishment, loss, or pain on another, or to injure another by the commission of some unlawful act. U. S. v. Daulong, D.C.Ca., 60 F.Supp. 235, 236. A menace; especially, any menace of such a nature and extent as to unsettle the mind of the person on whom it operates, and to take away from his acts that free and voluntary action which alone constitutes consent. Abbott, United States v. French, D.C.Ca., 243 F. 785, 786; State v. Brownlee, 84 Iowa 473, 51 N.W. 25. Cote v. Murphy, 159 Pa. 420, 28 A. 190, 23 L.R.A. 135, 39 Am.St.Rep. 686. A declaration of one’s purpose or intention to work injury to the person, property, or rights of another, with a view of restraining such person’s freedom of action. McKenzie v. State, 113 Neb. 576, 204 N.W. 60, 61. Kamenitsky v. Corcoran, 177 App.Div. 605, 164 N.Y.S. 297, 300.

THREATENING LETTERS. Sending threatening letters is the name of the offense of sending letters containing threats of the kinds recognized by the statute as criminal. See People v. Griffin, 2 Barb. (N.Y.) 429.

THREE-DOLLAR PIECE. A gold coin of the United States, of the value of three dollars; authorized by the seventh section of the act of February 21, 1853.

THREE-WEEKS COURT. In the Kentish custom of gavelot, it was the lord’s court. 18 Harv.L.R. 40.

THRENGES. Vassals, but not of the lowest degree; those who held lands of the chief lord.
THRITHING. In Saxon and old English law. The third part of a county; a division of a county consisting of three or more hundreds. Cowell. Corrupted to the modern “riding,” which is still used in Yorkshire. 1 Bl.Comm. 116.

THROUGH. By means of, in consequence of, by reason of; in, within; over; from end to end, or from one side to the other. Mississippi Cent. R. Co. v. Pace, 109 Miss. 667, 68 So. 926, 927; Hyde Park v. Oakwoods Cemetery Ass’n, 119 Ill. 147, 7 N.E. 627. By the intermediary of; in the name or as agent of; by the agency of; because of. Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. v. City of Richmond, 183 Va. 931, 33 S.E.2d 795, 802.

THROUGH LOT. A lot that abuts upon a street at each end. Illinois Surety Co. v. O’Brien, C.C.A. Ohio, 223 F. 933, 938.

THROW OUT. To ignore (a bill of indictment.)

THROWN FROM AUTOMOBILE. This phrase within accident policy means tossed or hurled out of automobile by some force. Independence Ins. Co. v. Blanford’s Adm’x, 276 Ky. 692, 125 S.W.2d 249, 251; Guaranty Trust Co. v. Continental Life Ins. Co., 159 Wash. 683, 294 P. 585, 587.

THRUSTING. Within the meaning of a criminal statute, is not necessarily an attack with a pointed weapon; it means pushing or driving with force, whether the point of the weapon be sharp or not. State v. Lowry, 33 La.Ann. 1224.

THRYMSA. A Saxon coin worth fourpence. Du Fresne.

THUDE-WEALD. A Woodward, or person that looks after a wood.

THURINGIAN CODE. One of the “barbarian codes,” as they are termed; supposed by Montesquieu to have been given by Theodoric, king of Austrasia, to the Thuringians, who were his subjects. Esprit des Lois, lib. 28, c. 1.

THUS. In the way just indicated. Schrader v. City of Los Angeles, 19 Cal.App.2d 332, 65 P.2d 374, 375.

THWERTNICK. In old English law. The custom of giving entertainments to a sheriff, etc., for three nights.

TICK. A colloquial expression for credit or trust; credit given for goods purchased.

TICKET. In contracts. A slip of paper containing a certificate that the person to whom it is issued, or the holder, is entitled to some right or privilege therein mentioned or described; such, for example, are railroad tickets, theater tickets, pawn tickets, lottery tickets, etc. See Allaire v. Howell Works Co., 14 N.J.L. 24; Interstate Amusement Co. v. Martin, 8 Ala.App. 481, 62 So. 404, 405.

In election law. A list of candidates for particular offices to be submitted to the voters at an election; a ballot. Barr v. Cardell, 173 Iowa 18, 155 N.W. 312, 313; Denny v. Pratt, 104 Conn. 396, 133 A. 107, 109.

TICKET OF LEAVE. In English law. A license or permit given to a convict, as a reward for good conduct, particularly in the penal settlements, which allows him to go at large, and labor for himself, before the expiration of his sentence, subject to certain specific conditions and revocable upon subsequent misconduct.

TICKET-OF-LEAVE MAN. A convict who has obtained a ticket of leave.

TICKET SPECULATOR. One who sells at an advance over the price charged by the management. Speculation of this kind frequently leads to abuse, especially when the theater is full and few tickets are left, so that extortionate prices may be exacted. Levine v. Brooklyn Nat. League Baseball Club, 179 Misc. 22, 36 N.Y.S.2d 474, 477.

TIDAL. In order that a river may be “tidal” at a given spot, it may not be necessary that the water should be salt, but the spot must be one where the tide, in the ordinary and regular course of things, flows and refloows. 8 Q.B.Div. 630.

Neap Tides

Those tides which happen between the full and change of the moon twice in every 24 hours. F. A. Hihn Co. v. City of Santa Cruz, 170 Cal. 430, 150 P. 62, 65.

Tide Land

Land between the lines of the ordinary high and low tides, covered and uncovered successively by the ebb and flow thereof; land covered and uncovered by the ordinary tides; land over which the tide ebbs and flows; land which is daily covered and uncovered by water by the ordinary ebb and flow of normal tides; land usually overflowed by the neap or ordinary tides; such land as is affected by the tide, that lies between ordinary high-water mark and low-water mark, and which is alternately covered and left dry by the ordinary flux and reflux of the tides; that portion of the shore or beach covered and uncovered by the ebb and flow of ordinary tides. Bolsa Land Co. v. Vaqueros Major Oil Co., Cal.App., 76 P.2d 519, 521; Hardy v. California Trojan Powder Co., 109 Or. 76, 219 P. 197, 199.

Tide-Water

Water which falls and rises with the ebb and flow of the tide. The term is not usually applied to the open sea, but to coves, bays, rivers, etc.

Tideway

TIDESMEN, in English law, are certain officers of the custom-house, appointed to watch or attend upon ships till the customs are paid; and they are so called because they go aboard the ships at their arrival in the mouth of the Thames, and come up with the tide. Jacob.

TIE, v. To bind. "The parson is not tied to find the parish clerk." 1 Leon. 94.

TIE, n. When, at an election, neither candidate receives a majority of the votes cast, but each has the same number, there is said to be a "tie."
So when the number of votes cast in favor of any measure, in a legislative or deliberative body, is equal to the number cast against it. See Wooster

TIEL, L. Fr. Such. Nul tiel record, no such record.

TIEMPO INHABL. Span. A time of inability; a time when the person is not able to pay his debts, (when, for instance, he may not alienate property to the prejudice of his creditors.) The term is used in Louisiana. Brown v. Kenner, 3 Mart.O.S. (La.) 270; Thorn v. Morgan, 4 Mart.
N.S. (La.) 292, 16 Am.Dec. 173.

TIERCE. L. Fr. Third. Tierce mein, third hand. Britt. c. 120.

TIERCE. A liquid measure, containing the third part of a pipe, 3r forty-two gallons.

TIGH. In old records. A close or intlosure, a croft. Cowell.

TIGHT. As colloquially applied to a note, bond, mortgage, lease, etc., this term signifies that the clauses providing the creditor's remedy in case of default (as, by foreclosures, execution, distress, etc.) are summary and stringent.

TIGNI IMMITTENDI. Lat. In the civil law.
The name of a servitude which is the right of inserting a beam or timber from the wall of one house into that of a neighboring house, in order that it may rest on the latter, and that the wall of the latter may bear this weight. Wharton.
See Dig. 8, 2, 36.

TIGNUM. Lat. A civil-law term for building material; timber.

TIHLER. In old Saxon law. An accusation.

TILLAGE. A place tilled or cultivated; land under cultivation, opposed to lands lying fallow or in pasture.

TIMBER. Wood felled for building or other such like use. In a legal sense it generally means (in England) oak, ash, and elm, but in some parts of England, and generally in America, it is used in a wider sense, which is recognized by the law.

The term "timber," as used in commerce, refers generally only to large sticks of wood, squared or capable of being squared for building houses or vessels; and certain trees only having been formerly used for such purposes, namely, the oak, the ash, and the elm, they alone were recognized as timber trees. But the numerous uses to which wood has come to be applied, and the general employment of all kinds of trees for some valuable purpose, has wrought a change in the general acceptance of terms in connection therewith, and we find that Webster defines "timber" to be

"that sort of wood which is proper for buildings or for tools, utensils, furniture, carriages, fences, ships, and the like." This would include all sorts of wood from which any useful articles may be made, or which may be used to advantage in any class of manufacture or construction.
App. 393; U. S. v. Soto, 7 Ariz. 230, 64 P. 420; Tuscarora
Nation of Indians v. Williams, 141 N.Y.S. 207, 210, 79 Misc.
445; Eagle Coal Co. v. Patrick's Adm'r, 161 Ky. 333, 170
S.W. 960, 961; Nettles v. Lichtman, 228 Ala. 52, 152 So.
450, 453, 91 A.L.R. 1455.

TIMBER CULTURE ENTRY. See Entry.

TIMBER-TREES. Oak, ash, elm, in all places, and, by local custom, such other trees as are used in building. 2 Bl.Comm. 281.

TIMBERLODE. A service by which tenants were bound to carry timber felled from the woods to the lord's house. Cowell.

TIME. The measure of duration.

The word is expressive both of a precise point or terminus and of an interval between two points.

Pleading

A point in or space of duration at or during which some fact is alleged to have been committed.

General

Cooling time, See that title.

Reasonable time. Such length of time as may fairly, properly, and reasonably be allowed or required, having regard to the nature of the act or duty, or of the subject-matter, and to the attending circumstances. It is a maxim of English law that "how long a 'reasonable time' ought to be is not defined in law, but is left to the discretion of the judges." Co. Litt. 50. See Hoggins
v. Becraft, 1 Dana (Ky.) 28; Hill v. Hobart, 16
Me. 168; Twin Lick Oil Co. v. Marbury, 91 U.S.
591, 23 L.Ed. 328; Hearne v. Fischer Lime & Cement Co., 220 Ky. 791, 295 S.W. 1012, 1013; Lumber-App., 272 S.W. 826, 827; Simmons v. Western In-

Time-bargain. In the language of the stock exchange, an agreement to buy or sell stock at a future time, or within a fixed time, at a certain price. It is in reality nothing more than a bargain to pay differences.

Time check. A certificate signed by a master mechanic or other person in charge of laborers, reciting the amount due to the laborer for labor for a specified time. Burlington Voluntary Relief Dept. v. White, 41 Neb. 547, 59 N.W. 747, 43

Time immemorial. Time whereof the memory of a man is not to the contrary.

Time is the essence of contract. Means that performance by one party at time or within period specified in contract is essential to enable him to require performance by other party. Hayes Mfg.
Corporation v. McCauley, C.C.A. Ohio, 140 F.2d 187, 190; Williams v. Shamrock Oil and Gas Co., 128 Tex. 146, 95 S.W.2d 1292, 1295, 107 A.L.R. 269.

A contract where the parties evidently contemplated a punctual performance, at the precise time named, as vital to the agreement, and one of its essential elements. Time is not of the essence of the contract in any case where a moderate delay in performance would not be regarded as an absolute violation of the contract.

Time of memory. In English law. Time commencing from the beginning of the reign of Richard I. 2 Bl.Comm. 31. Lord Coke defines time of memory to be "when no man alive hath had any proof to the contrary, nor hath any conusance to the contrary." Co. Litt. 86a, 86b.

Time out of memory. Time beyond memory; time out of mind; time to which memory does not extend.

Time-policy. A policy of marine insurance in which the risk is limited, not to a given voyage, but to a certain fiked term or period of time.

TIMOCRACY. An aristocracy of property; government by men of property who are possessed of a certain income.

TIMORES VANI SUNT AESTIMANDI QUI NON CADUNT CONSTANTEM VIRUM. 7 Coke, 17. Fears which do not assail a resolute man are to be accounted vain.

TINBOUNDING. A custom regulating the manner in which tin is obtained from wasteland, or land which has formerly been wasteland, within certain districts in Cornwall and Devon. The custom is described in the leading case on the subject as follows: "Any person may enter on the waste-land of another, and may mark out by four corner boundaries a certain area. A written description of the plot of land so marked out with metes and bounds, and the name of the person, is recorded in the local stannaries court, and is proclaimed on three successive court-days. If no objection is sustained by any other person, the court awards a writ to the bailiff to deliver possession of the said 'bounds of tinwork' to the 'bounder,' who thereupon has the exclusive right to search for, dig, and take for his own use all tin and tin-ore within the inclosed limits, paying as a royalty to the owner of the waste a certain proportion of the produce under the name of 'toll-tin,'" 10 Q.B. 26, cited in Elton Commons, 113. The right of tinbounding is not a right of common, but is an interest in land, and, in Devonshire, a corporeal hereditament. In Cornwall tin bounds are personal estate. Sweet.

TINEL. L. Fr. A place where justice was administered. Kelham.

TINEMAN. Sax. In old forest law. A petty officer of the forest who had the care of vert and venison by night, and performed other servile duties.

TINET. In old records. Brush-wood and thorns for fencing and hedging. Cowell; Blount.

TINEWALD. The ancient parliament or annual convention in the Isle of Man, held upon Midsummer-day, at St. John's chapel. Cowell.

TINKERMAN. Fishermen who destroyed the young fry on the river Thames by nets and unlawful engines. Cowell.

TINELLUS. In old Scotch law. The sea-mark; high-water mark. Tide-mouth. Skene.

TINPENNY. A tribute paid for the liberty of digging in tin-mines. Cowell.

TINSEL OF THE FEU. In Scotch law. The loss of the feu, from allowing two years of feu duty to run into the third unpaid. Bell.

TIPSTAFF. In American law. An officer appointed by the court, whose duty is to wait upon the court when it is in session, preserve order, serve process, guard juries, etc.

In English law. An officer appointed by the marshal of the king's bench to attend upon the judges with a kind of rod or staff tipped with silver, who take into their custody all prisoners, either committed or turned over by the judges at their chambers, etc. Jacob.

TITHER. One who gathers tithes.

TITHES. In English law. The tenth part of the increase, yearly arising and renewing from the profits of lands, the stock upon lands, and the personal industry of the inhabitants. 2 Bl.Comm. 24. A species of incorporeal herediment, being an ecclesiastical inheritance collateral to the estate of the land, and due only to an ecclesiastical person by ecclesiastical law. 1 Crabb, Real Prop.. § 133.

Great Tithes

Minute Tithes
Small tithes, such as usually belong to a vicar, as of wool, lambs, pigs, butter, cheese, herbs, seeds, eggs, honey, wax, etc.
Mixed Tithes
Those which arise not immediately from the ground, but from those things which are nourished by the ground, e. g., colts, chickens, calves, milk, eggs, etc. 3 Burn, Ecc. Law, 380; 2 Bl. Comm. 24.

Personal Tithes
Personal tithes are tithes paid of such profits as come by the labor of a man’s person; as by buying and selling, gains of merchandise and handicrafts, etc. Tomlins.

Predial Tithes
Such as arise immediately from the ground; as, grain of all sorts, hay, wood, fruits, and herbs.

Tithe-Free
Exempted from the payment of tithes.

Tithe Rent-Charge
A rent-charge established in lieu of tithes, under the tithes commutation act, 1836, (St. 6 & 7 Wm. IV. c. 71.) As between landlord and tenant, the tenant paying the tithe rent-charge is entitled, in the absence of express agreement, to deduct it from his rent, under section 70 of the above act. And a tithe rent-charge unpaid is recoverable by distress as rent in arrear. Mozley & Whitley.

TITHING. One of the civil divisions of England, being a portion of that greater division called a "hundred." It was so called because ten freeholders with their families composed one. It is said that they were all knit together in one society, and bound to the king for the peaceable behavior of each other. In each of these societies there was one chief or principal person, who, from his office, was called "teething-man," now "tithing-man." Brown.

TITHING-MAN,

Modern Law
A constable. "After the introduction of justices of the peace, the offices of constable and tithing-man became so similar that we now regard them as precisely the same." Willc. Const. Intro.

New England
A parish officer annually elected to preserve good order in the church during divine service, and to make complaint of any disorderly conduct. Webster, Diet.

In Saxon Law
The head or chief of a tithing or decennary of ten families; he was to decide all lesser causes between neighbors. Jacob, Law Dict. In modern English law, he is the same as an under-constable or peace-officer.

TITHING-PENNY. In Saxon and old English law. Money paid to the sheriff by the several tithings of his county. Cowell.

TITIUS. In Roman law. A proper name, frequently used in designating an indefthite or fictitious person, or a person referred to by way of illustration. "Titius" and "Seius," in this use, correspond to "John Doe" and "Richard Roe," or to "A. B." and "C. D."

TITLE. The radical meaning of this word appears to be that of a mark, style, or designation; a distinctive appellation; the name by which anything is known. Thus, in the law of persons, a title is an appellation of dignity or distinction, a name denoting the social rank of the person bearing it; as "duke" or "count." So, in legislation, the title of a statute is the heading or preliminary part, furnishing the name by which the act is individually known. It is usually prefixed to the statute in the form of a brief summary of its contents; as "An act for the prevention of gaming." State v. Thomas, 301 Mo. 603, 256 S.W. 1028, 1029. Again, the title of a patent is the short description of the invention, which is copied in the letters patent from the inventor's petition; e. g., "a new and improved method of drying and preparing malt." Johns. Pat. Man. 90.

The title of a book, or any literary composition, is its name; that is, the heading or caption prefixed to it, and disclosing the distinctive appellation by which it is to be known. This usually comprises a brief description of its subject-matter and the name of its author.

"Title" is also used as the name of one of the subdivisions employed in many literary works, standing intermediate between the divisions denoted by the term "books" or "parts," and those designated as "chapters" and "sections."

Law of Trade-Marks
A title may become a subject of property; as one who has adopted a particular title for a newspaper, or other business enterprise, may, by long and prior user, or by compliance with statutory provisions as to registration and notice, acquire a right to be protected in the exclusive use of it. Abbott.

Real Property Law

Title may be defined generally to be the evidence of right which a person has to the possession of property. The word "title" does not merely signify the right which a person has to the possession of property; because there are many instances in which a person may have the right to the possession of property, and at the same time have no title to the same. In its ordinary legal acceptance, however, it generally seems to imply a right of possession also. It, therefore, appears, on the whole, to signify the outward evidence of the right, rather than the mere right itself. Thus, when it is said that the "most Imperfect degree of title consists in the mere naked possession or actual occupation of an estate; it means that the mere circumstance of occupying the estate is the weakest species of evidence of the occupier's right to such possession. The word is defined by Sir Edward Coke thus: "Titulus est justa causa possidendi id quod nostrum est, (1 Inst. 34;) that is to say, the ground whether purchase, gift, or other such ground of acquiring; "titulus" being distinguished in this respect from "modus acquirendi," which is the traditio, e., delivery or conveyance of the thing. Brown.

Title is a man hath lawful cause of entry into lands, whereof another is seised; and it signifies also the lands, whereof another is seised; and it signifies also the gift, or other such ground of acquiring; "clear title" meaning that the land is free from incumbrances, "good title" being one free from litigation, palpable defects, and grave doubts, comprising both legal and equitable titles and fairly deducible of record. Ogg v. Herman, 71 Mont. 10, 227 P. 476, 477; Veselka v. Forres, Tex.Civ.App., 283 S.W. 303, 306; Sipe v. Greenfield, 116 Okl. 241, 244 P. 424, 425.

Clear title of record, or clear record title, means freedom from apparent defects, grave doubts, and litigious uncertainties, and is such title as a reasonably prudent person, with full knowledge, would accept. A title dependent for its validity on extraneous evidence, ex parte affidavits, or written guaranties against the results of litigation is not a clear title of record, and is not such title as equity will require a purchaser to accept. Ammerman v. Karnowski, 109 Okl. 156, 234 P. 774, 776; Cleval v. Sullivan, 258 Mass. 348, 154 N.E. 920, 921.

Color of title. See that title.

Covenants for title. Covenants usually inserted in a conveyance of land, on the part of the grantor, and binding him for the completeness, security, and continuance of the title transferred to the grantee. They comprise "covenants for seisin, for right to convey, against incumbrances, for quiet enjoyment, sometimes 'for further assurance, and almost always of warranty.'" Rawle, Co. § 21.

Doubtful title. See that title.

Examination of title, see Examination.

Imperfect title. One which requires a further exercise of the granting power to pass the fee in land, or which does not convey full and absolute dominion. Paschal v. Perez, 7 Tex. 367; Paschal v. Dangerfield, 37 Tex. 300; Lambert v. Gant. Tex. Civ.App., 290 S.W. 548, 551.

Legal title. See that title.

Lucrative title. In the civil law, title acquired without the giving of anything in exchange for it; the title by which a person acquires anything which comes to him as a clear gain, as, for instance, by gift, descent, or devise. Opposed to "onerous title," as to which see infra.

Marketable title. See that title.

Onerous title. In the civil law, title to property acquired by the giving of a valuable consideration for it, such as the payment of money, the rendition of services, the performance of conditions, the assumption of obligations, or the discharge of liens on the property; opposed to "lucrative" title, or one acquired by gift or otherwise without the giving of an equivalent. Scott v. Ward, 13 Cal. 471; Kircher v. Murray, C.C.A.Tex.,

1656
Paper title. A title to land evidenced by a conveyance or chain of conveyances; the term generally implying that such title, while it has color or plausibility, is without substantial validity.

Passive title. In Scotch law. A title incurred by an heir in heritage who does not enter as heir in the regular way, and therefore incurs liability for all the debts of the decedent, irrespective of the amount of assets. Paterson.

Perfect title. Various meanings have been attached to this term: (1) One which shows the absolute right of possession and of property in a particular person. Henderson v. Beatty, 124 Iowa, 163, 99 N.W. 716; Wilcox Lumber Co. v. Bullock, 109 Ga. 532, 35 S.E. 52; Donovan v. Pitcher, 53 Ala. 411, 25 Am.Rep. 634. (2) A grant of land which requires no further act from the legal authority to constitute an absolute title to the land, taking effect at once. Hancock v. McKinney, 7 Tex. 457. (3) A title which does not disclose a patent defect suggesting the possibility of a lawsuit to defend it; a title such as a well-informed and prudent man paying full value for the property would be willing to take. Birge v. Bock, 44 Mo.App. 77. (4) A title which is good both at law and in equity. Warner v. Middlesex Mut. Assur. Co., 21 Conn. 449. (5) One which is good and valid beyond all reasonable doubt. Sheehy v. Miles, 93 Cal. 288, 28 P. 1046; Reynolds v. Borel, 86 Cal. 538, 25 P. 67. (6) A marketable or merchantable title. Ross v. Smiley, 18 Colo.App. 204, 70 P. 766; McClarey v. Chipman, 32 Ind.App. 489, 68 N.E. 320.

Presumptive title. A barely presumptive title, which is of the very lowest order, arises out of the mere occupation or simple possession of property, (jus possessionis,) without any apparent right, or any pretense of right, to hold and continue such possession.

Record title. See Record.

Singular title. The title by which a party acquires property as a singular successor.

Tax title. See Tax.

Title by adverse possession or prescription. The right which a possessor acquires to property by reason of his adverse possession during a period of time fixed by law. Walker v. Steffes, 139 Ga. 520, 77 S.E. 580.

The elements of "title by prescription" are open, visible and continuous use under a claim of right, adverse to and with knowledge of owner. Dry Gulch Ditch Co. v. Hutton, 170 Or. 656, 133 P.2d 601, 610.

Such title is equivalent to a "title by deed" and cannot be lost or divested except in the same manner, and mere recognition of title in another after such acquisition will not operate to divest the adverse claimant of that which he has acquired. Maloney v. Bedford, 290 Ky. 647, 162 S.W.2d 198, 199.

Title by descent. That title which one acquires by law as heir to the deceased owner. Stabel v. Gertel, N.J.Sup., 11 N.J.Misc. 247, 165 A. 876, 879.

Title by prescription. See Title by adverse possession, supra.

Title deeds. Deeds which constitute or are the evidence of title to lands.

Title defective in form. Title on face of which some defect appears, not one that may prove defective by circumstances or evidence dehors the instrument. Title defective in form cannot be basis of prescription. Thompson v. Futral, 18 La. App. 685, 136 So. 654.

Title insurance. See Insurance.

Title of a cause. The distinctive appellation by which any cause in court, or other juridical proceeding, is known and discriminated from others.

Title of an act. The heading, or introductory clause, of a statute, wherein is briefly recited its purpose or nature, or the subject to which it relates.

Title of clergy men, (to orders.) Some certain place where they may exercise their functions; also an assurance of being preferred to some ecclesiastical benefice. 2 Steph.Comm. 661.

Title of declaration. That preliminary clause of a declaration which states the name of the court and the term to which the process is returnable.

Title of entry. The right to enter upon lands. Cowell.

Title retention. A form of lien, in the nature of a chattel mortgage, to secure the purchase price. American Indemnity Co. v. Allen, for Use and Benefit of Commerce Union Bank, 176 Tenn. 134, 138 S.W.2d 445, 446.

Title to orders. In English ecclesiastical law, a title to orders is a certificate of preferment or provision required by the thirty-third canon, in order that a person may be admitted into holy orders, unless he be a fellow or chaplain in Oxford or Cambridge, or master of arts of five years' standing in either of the universities, and living there at his sole charges; or unless the bishop himself intends shortly to admit him to some benefice or curacy. 2 Steph.Comm. 661.

Unmarketable title. See that title.

TITULADA. In Spanish law. Title. White, New Recop. b. 1, tit. 5, c. 3, § 2.

TITULARS OF ERECTION. Persons who in Scotland, after the Reformation, obtained grants from the crown of the monasteries and priories then erected into temporal lordships. Thus the titles formerly held by the religious houses, as well as the property of the lands, were conferred on these grantees, who were also called "lords of erection" and "titulars of the teinds." Bell.

TITULUS. Lat. Title. In the civil law. The source or ground of possession; the means whereby possession of a thing is acquired, whether such possession be lawful or not.
TITULUS

In old Ecclesiastical law. A temple or church; the material edifice. So called because the priest in charge of it derived therefrom his name and title. Spelman.

TITULUS EST JUSTA CAUSA POSSIDENDI ID QUOD NOSTRUM EST; DICITUR A TUENDO. 8 Coke, 153. A title is the just right of possessing that which is our own; it is so called from "tuen-do," defending.

TO. This is ordinarily a word of exclusion, when used in describing premises; it excludes the terminus mentioned. Littlefield v. Hubbard, 120 Me. 226, 113 A. 304, 306; Sindford v. Watts, 123 Me. 230, 122 A. 573, 574; Skeritt Inv. Co. v. City of Englewood, 79 Colo. 645, 248 P. 6, 8. It may be a word of inclusion, and may also mean "into." People v. Poole, 284 Ill. 39, 119 N.E. 916, 917; Thompson v. Reynolds, 59 Utah, 416, 204 P. 516, 518.

TO HAVE AND TO HOLD. The words in a conveyance which show the estate intended to be conveyed. Thus, in a conveyance of land in fee-simple, the grant is to "A. and his heirs, to have and to hold the said [land] unto and to the use of the said A., his heirs and assigns forever." Williams, Real Prop. 198.

Strictly speaking, however, the words "to have" denote the estate to be taken, while the words "to hold" signify that it is to be held of some superior lord, i.e., by way of tenure, (q.v.). The former clause is called the "habendum," the latter, the "tenendum." Co. Litt. 6a.

TOLL, n. To bar, defeat, or take away; thus, to toll the entry means to deny or take away the right of entry.

To toll the statute of limitations means to show facts which remove its bar of the action.

TOLL MONEY. A conventional medium of exchange consisting of pieces of metal, fashioned in the shape and size of coins, and circulating among private persons, by consent, at a certain value. No longer permitted or recognized as money. 2 Chit. Com. Law, 182.

TOLERATION. The allowance of religious opinions and modes of worship which are contrary to, or different from, those of the established church or belief. Webster.

TOLERATION ACT. The statute 1 W. & M. St. 1, c. 18, for exempting Protestant dissenters from the penalties of certain laws is so called. Brown.

TOLERATE. To allow so as not to hinder; to permit as something not wholly approved of; to suffer; to endure. Gregory v. U. S., 17 Blatchf. 330, Fed. Cas. No. 5,803.

TOKEN. A sign or mark; a material evidence of the existence of a fact. Thus, cheating by "false tokens" implies the use of fabricated or deceitfully contrived material objects to assist the person's own fraud and falsehood in accomplishing the cheat. See State v. Green, 18 N.J. Law, 181; State v. Leonard, 73 Or. 451, 144 P. 113, 118; Smith v. State, 74 Fla. 594, 77 So. 274, 277; State v. Whiteaker, 64 Or. 297, 129 P. 534, 537.

TOKEN MONEY. A conventional medium of exchange consisting of pieces of metal, fashioned in the shape and size of coins, and circulating among private persons, by consent, at a certain value. No longer permitted or recognized as money. 2 Chit. Com. Law, 182.
TOLLAGE. Payment of toll; money charged or paid as toll; the liberty or franchise of charging toll.

TOLLBOOTH. A prison; a customhouse; an exchange; also the place where goods are weighed. Wharton.

TOLLDISH. A vessel by which the toll of corn for grinding is measured.

TOLLE VOLUNTATEM ET ERIT OMNIS ACTUS INDIFFERENS. Take away the will, and every action will be indifferent. Bract. fol. 2.

TOLLER. One who collects tribute or taxes.

TOLLERE. Lat. In the civil law. To lift up or raise; to elevate; to build up.

TOLLS. In a general sense, any manner of customs, subsidy, pretation, impost, or sum of money demanded for exporting or importing of any wares or merchandise to be taken of the buyer. 2 Inst. 58. For "Fair and Reasonable Tolls," see that title.

TOLLESTER. An old excise; a duty paid by tenants of some manors to the lord for liberty to brew and sell ale. Cowell.

TOLSEY. The same as "tollbooth." Also a place where merchants meet; a local tribunal for small civil causes held at the Guildhall, Bristol.

TOLT. A writ whereby a cause depending in a court baron was taken and removed into a county court. Old Nat. Brev. 4.

TOLTA. In old English law. Wrong; rapine; extortion. Cowell.

TOLZEY COURT. An inferior court of record having civil jurisdiction, still existing at Bristol, England.

TOMB. An excavation in earth or rock, intended to receive the dead body of a human being. Leaphart v. Harmon, 186 S.C. 362, 195 S.E. 628, 629.

TOMBSTONE. Stone marking place of burial and usually inscribed with memorial of deceased. Anshe Sephard Congregation v. Weisblatt, 170 Md. 390, 185 A. 107, 108.

TON. A measure of weight; differently fixed, by different statutes, at two thousand pounds avoirdupois, (1 Rev.St.N.Y. 609, § 35,) or at twenty hundred-weights, each hundred-weight being one hundred and twelve pounds avoirdupois, [19 U.S. C.A. § 4201) ; Chemung Iron & Steel Co. v. Merseueau Metal Bed Co., Sup., 179 N.Y.S. 577, 578.

TONNAGE. The capacity of a vessel for carrying freight or other loads, calculated in tons. But the way of estimating the tonnage varies in different countries. In England, tonnage denotes the actual weight in tons which the vessel can safely carry; in America, her carrying capacity estimated from the cubic dimensions of the hold. See Roberts v. Opdyke, 40 N.Y. 259; Kiessig v. San Diego County, 51 Cal.App.2d 47, 124 P.2d 163, 166.

The "tonnage" of a vessel is her capacity to carry cargo, and a charter of "the whole tonnage" of a ship transfers to the charterer only the space necessary for that purpose. Thwing v. Insurance Co., 103 Mass. 405, 4 Am.Rep. 567.

The tonnage of a vessel is her internal cubical capacity, in tons. Inman S. S. Co. v. Tinker, 94 U.S. 238, 24 L.Ed. 118.

TONNAGE—DUTY.

In American law. A tax laid upon vessels according to their tonnage or cubical capacity.
TONNAGE-DUTY

A tonnage duty is a duty imposed on vessels in proportion to their capacity. The vital principle of a tonnage duty is that it is imposed, whatever the subject, solely according to the rule of weight; either as to the capacity to carry or the actual weight of the thing itself. Inman S. S. Co. v. Tinker, 94 U.S. 238, 24 L. Ed. 118; Ross v. Mayor and Council of Borough of Edgewater, 115 N.J.L. 477, 180 A. 866.

A tonnage tax is defined to be a duty levied on a vessel according to the tonnage or capacity. It is a tax upon the boat as an instrument of navigation, and not a tax upon the property of a citizen of the state. The Math Cape, 6 Biss. 505. Fed.Cas.No.10,316.

In English law. A duty imposed by parliament upon merchandise exported and imported, according to a certain rate upon every ton. Brown.

TONNAGE-RENT. When the rent reserved by a mining lease or the like consists of a royalty on every ton of minerals gotten in the mine, it is often called a “tonnage-rent.” There is generally a dead rent in addition. Sweet.

TONNAGIUM. In old English law. A custom or impost upon wines and other merchandise exported or imported, according to a certain rate per ton. Spelman; Cowell.

TONNETIGHT. In old English law. The quantity of a ton or tun, in a ship's freight or bulk, for which tonnage or tunnage was paid to the king. Cowell.

TONONERACH. In old Scotch law. A thieftaker.

TONSURA. Lat. In old English law. A shaving, or polling; the having the crown of the head shaven; tonsure. One of the peculiar badges of a clerk or clergymen.

TONSURE. In old English law. A being shaven; the having the head shaven; a shaven head. 4 Bl. Comm. 367.

TONTINE. In French law. A species of association or partnership formed among persons who are in receipt of perpetual or life annuities, with the agreement that the shares or annuities of those who die shall accrue to the survivors. This plan is said to be thus named from Tonti, an Italian, who invented it in the seventeenth century. The principle is used in some forms of life insurance. Merl. Repert; Cahn v. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co., 208 Ill. App. 317, 322; Gourley v. Northwestern Nat. Life Ins. Co., 94 Okl. 46, 220 P. 645, 646.

Under the “Tontine” plan of insurance, no accumulation or earnings are credited to the policy unless it remains in force for the Tontine period of a specified number of years. Thus those who survive the period and keep their policies in force share in the accumulated funds and those who die or permit their policies to lapse during period do not: neither do their beneficiaries participate in such accumulation. Commercial Travelers’ Ins. Co. v. Carlson, 104 Utah 41, 137 P.2d 656, 660.

TOOK AND CARRIED AWAY. In criminal pleading. Technical words necessary in an indictment for simple larceny.

Simple Tool

"Simple tool doctrine" is based on the idea that ordinarily an employee has better opportunity than employer to observe defects and guard himself against them and that the employer should not be charged with duty of care or safety of employee with respect to a matter in which the employee is in better position to care for himself. A "tool" is an instrument of manual operation. Tucker v. Holly Hill Lumber Co., 200 S.C. 259, 20 S.E.2d 704, 706.

Tools of Trade, Apparatus of Trade

And like terms under exemption statutes and bankruptcy act cover tools that vary according to the trade, handicraft or art in which they are used. The meaning of the word "tool" dominates the meaning of such terms. Corner v. Powell, Tex.Civ.App., 189 S.W. 88, 91; Lindquist v. Clayton, 54 Utah 79, 179 P. 655, 656; Hooper v. Kennedy, 100 Vt. 314, 137 A. 194, 196; Busse v. Murray Meat & Live Stock Co., 45 Utah 596, 147 P. 626, 628.

TORRENS TITLE SYSTEM. A system under which, upon the landowner's application the court may, after appropriate proceedings, direct the issuance of a certificate of title. With exceptions, this certificate is conclusive as to applicant's estate in land. This system is so called, the author being Sir Robert Torrens.

TORT (from Lat. torquere, to twist, tortus, twisted, wrested aside). A private or civil wrong or injury. A wrong independent of contract. 1 Hill, Torts 1. A violation of a duty imposed by general law or otherwise upon all persons occupying the relation to each other which is involved in a given transaction. Coleman v. California Yearly Meeting of Friends Church, 27 Cal.App.2d 579, 81 P.2d 469, 470. There -must always be a violation of some legal duty owing to plaintiff, and generally such duty must arise by operation of law and not by mere agreement of the parties. Diver v. Miller, Del.Super., 148 A. 291, 293.

Three elements of every tort action are: Existence of legal duty from defendant to plaintiff, breach of duty, and damage as proximate result. City of Mobile v. McClure, 221 Ala. 51, 127 So. 832, 835.

A legal wrong committed upon the person or property independent of contract. It may be either (1) a direct invasion of some legal right of the individual; (2) the infraction of some public duty by which special damage accrues to the individual; [3] the violation of some private obligation by which like damage accrues to the individual.

In the former case, no special damage is necessary to entitle the party to recover. In the two latter cases, such obligation by which like damage accrues to the individual.

In the former case, no special damage is necessary to entitle the party to recover. In the two latter cases, such obligation by which like damage accrues to the individual.

Maritime Tort

See Maritime.

Personal Tort

One involving or consisting in an injury to the person or to the reputation or feelings, as distinguished from an injury or damage to real or personal property, called a "property tort." Mumford v. Wright, 12 Colo.App. 214, 55 P. 744. Gray v. Blight, C.C.A.Colo., 112 F.2d 696, 699.

Property Tort

See Personal Tort, supra.

Quasi Tort

Though not a recognized term of English law, may be conveniently used in those cases where a man who has not committed a tort is liable as if he had. Thus, a master is liable for wrongful acts done by his servant in the course of his employment. Broom, Corn. Law, 690; Underh. Torts, 29.

Willful Tort

See that title.

TORT-FEASOR. A wrong-doer; one who commits or is guilty of a tort. Gordon v. Lee, 133 Me. 361, 178 A. 353, 355.

Joint Tort•Feasors

TORTIOUS. Wrongful; of the nature of a tort. Formerly certain modes of conveyance (e.g., feoffments, fines, etc.) had the effect of passing not merely the estate of the person making the conveyance, but the whole fee-simple, to the injury of the person really entitled to the fee; and they were hence called "tortious conveyances." Litt. § 611; Co. Litt. 271b, n. 1; 330b, n. 1. But this operation has been taken away. Sweet.

TORTURA LEGUM PESSIONA. The torture or wrestling of laws is the worst [kind of torture.] 4 Bacon’s Works, 434.

TORTURE. In old criminal law. The question; the infliction of violent bodily pain upon a person, by means of the rack, wheel, or other engine, under judicial sanction and superintendence, in connection with the interrogation or examination of the person, as a means of extorting a confession of guilt, or of compelling him to disclose his accomplices.

TORY. Originally a nickname for the wild Irish in Ulster. Afterwards given to, and adopted by, one of the two great parliamentary parties which have alternately governed Great Britain since the Revolution in 1688. Wharton.

The name was also given, in America, during the struggle of the colonies for independence, to the party of those residents who favored the side of the king and opposed the war.

TOT. In old English practice. A word written to a debt due the king, to denote that it was a good debt; which was hence said to be toted.

TOTA CURIA. L. Lat. In the old reports. The whole court.

TOTAL DISABILITY. See Disability.

TOTAL EVICTION. That which occurs when the possessor is wholly deprived of his rights in the premises.

Test whether building burned is "total loss" is whether substantial portion is left standing in condition reasonably suitable as basis on which to reconstruct building in like condition as to strength, security, and utility as it was before fire. Commerce Ins. Co. v. Sergi, Tex.Civ.App., 60 S.W.2d 1046.

Marine insurance. The entire destruction or loss, to the insured, of the subject-matter of the Actual total loss. The total loss of the vessel covered by a policy of insurance, by its real and substantive destruction, by injuries which leave it no longer existing in specie, by its being reduced to a wreck irretrievably beyond repair, or by its being placed beyond the control of the insured and beyond his power of recovery. Distinguished from a constructive total loss, which occurs where the vessel, though injured by the perils insured against, remains in specie and capable of repair or recovery, but at such an expense, or under such other conditions, that the insured may claim the whole amount of the policy upon abandoning the vessel to the underwriters. In such cases the insured is entitled to indemnity as for a total loss. An exception to the rule requiring abandonment is found in cases where the loss occurs in foreign ports or seas, where it is impracticable to repair. In such cases the master may sell the vessel for the benefit of all concerned, and the insured may claim as for a total loss by accounting to the insurer for the amount realized on the sale.

Constructive total loss. See Actual total loss, supra.

See, also, Fire Insurance, supra.

TOTIDEM VERB'S. Lat. In so many words.

TOTIES QUOTIES. Lat. As often as occasion shall arise.

TOTIS VIRIBUS. Lat. With all one's might or power; with all his might; very strenuously.

TOTTED. A good debt to the crown, i.e., a debt paid to the sheriff, to be by him paid over to the king. Cowell; Mozley & Whitley.

TOTTEN TRUST. See Trust.

TOTUM PRÆFERTUR UNICUIQUE PARTE. 3 Coke, 41. The whole is preferable to any single part.

TOUCH. In insurance law. To stop at a port. If there be liberty granted by the policy to touch, or to touch and stay, at an intermediate port on the passage, the better opinion now is that the insured may trade there, when consistent with the object and the furtherance of the adventure, by breaking bulk, or by discharging and taking in cargo, provided it produces no unnecessary delay, nor enhances nor varies the risk. 3 Kent, Comm. 314.

TOUCH AND STAY. Words frequently introduced in policies of insurance, giving the party in- assured the right to stop and stay at certain designated points in the course of the voyage. A vessel which has the power to touch and stay at a place in the course of the voyage must confine herself strictly to the terms of the liberty so given; for any attempt to trade at such a port during such a stay, as, by shipping or landing goods, will amount to a species of deviation which will discharge the underwriters, unless the ship have also liberty to trade as well as to touch and stay at such a place. 1 Marsh. Ins. 275.

TOUCHING A DEAD BODY. It was an ancient superstition that the body of a murdered man would bleed freshly when touched by his murderer. Hence, in old criminal law, this was resorted to as a means of ascertaining the guilt or innocence of a person suspected of the murder.

TOUJOURS ET UNCORE PRIST. L. Fr. Always and still ready. This is the name of a plea of tender.

TOUR D'ÉCHELLE. In French law. An ease-moment consisting of the right to rest ladders upon the adjoining estate, when necessary in order to repair a party-wall or buildings supported by it.

Also the vacant space surrounding a building left unoccupied in order to facilitate its reparation when necessary. Merl. Repert.

TOURIST. One who makes a tour; one who travels from place to place for pleasure or culture. Jones v. State, 64 Ga.App. 376, 13 S.E.2d 462, 465.

TOURN. In old English law. A court of record, having criminal jurisdiction, in each county, held before the sheriff, twice a year, in one place after another, following a certain circuit or rotation.

TOUT. Fr. All; whole; entirely. Tout temps prist, always ready.

TOUT CE QUE LA LOI NE DEFEND PAS EST PERMIS. Everything is permitted which is not forbidden by law.

TOUT TEMPS PRIST. L. Fr. Always ready. The emphatic words of the old plea of tender; the defendant alleging that he has always been ready, and still is ready, to discharge the debt. 3 Bl. Comm. 303; 2 Salk. 622.

TOUT UN SOUND. L. Fr. All one sound; sounding the same; idem sonans.

TOUTE EXCEPTION NON SURVEILLEE TEND À PRENDRE LA PLACE DU PRINCIPE. Every exception not watched tends to assume the place of the principle.

TOWAGE. The act or service of towing ships and vessels, usually by means of a small steamer called a "tug." That which is given for towing ships in rivers.

The drawing a ship or barge along the water by another ship or boat, fastened to her, or by men or horses, etc., on land. It is also money which is given by bargemen to the owner of ground next a river, where they tow a barge or other vessel. Jacob. And see Ryan v. Hook, 34 Hun (N.Y.) 191; The Kingaloch, 26 Eng. Law & Eq. 597; The Egypt, D.C.Va., 17 F. 359, 370.

TOWAGE SERVICE. In admiralty law. A service rendered to a vessel, by towing, for the mere purpose of expediting her voyage, without reference to any circumstances of danger. It is confined to vessels that have received no injury or damage. The Reward, 1 W. Rob. 177; The Athenian, D.C.Mich., 3 F. 248, 249; The Kennebec, C.C. A.Tex., 231 F. 423, 425; The Mercer, C.C.A.N.Y., 297 F. 981, 984.

TOWARD. The word has been held to mean not simply "to" but to include "about." Hudson v. State, 6 Tex.App. 565, 32 Am.Rep. 593. Also, in a course or line leading to, in the direction of. People v. Kreidler, 180 Mich. 654, 147 N.W. 559, 560; State v. Trent, 122 Or. 444, 259 P. 893, 898.

TOWN,

American Law

A civil and political division of a state, varying in extent and importance, but usually one of the subdivisions of a county. In the New England states, the town is the political unit, and is a municipal corporation. In some other states, where the county is the unit, the town is merely one of its subdivisions, but possesses some powers of local self-government. In still other states, such subdivisions of a county are called "townships," and "town" is the name of a village, borough, or smaller city. See Herrman v. Guttenberg, 62 N.J.Law, 605, 43 A. 703; Van Riper v. Parsons, 40 N.J.Law, 1; State v. Denny, 118 Ind. 449, 21 N.E. 274, 4 L.R.A. 65; Guadalupe County v. Poth (Tex.Civ.App.), 163 S.W. 1050, 1051; People v. Adams State Bank, 272 Ill. 277, 111 N.E. 989, 991; In re Opinion of the Justices, 229 Mass. 601, 119 N.E. 778, 781.

English Law

Originally, a vill or tithing; but now a generic term, which comprehends under it the several species of cities, boroughs, and common towns. 1 Bl. Comm. 114.

The word "town" is quite commonly used as a generic term and as including both cities and villages. Village of Ashley v. Ashley Lumber Co., 40 N.D. 515, 169 N.W. 87, 90; Plainfield-Union Water Co. v. Inhabitants of City of Plainfield, 84 N.J.L. 634, 87 A. 448, 450.

TOWN AGENT. Under the prohibitory liquor laws in force in some of the New England states a town agent is a person appointed in each town to purchase intoxicating liquors for the town and having the exclusive right to sell the same for the permitted purposes, medical, mechanical, scientific, etc. He either receives a fixed salary or is permitted to make a small profit on his sales. The stock of liquors belongs to the town, and is bought with its money. See Black, Intox. Liq. §§ 204, 205.

TOWN COLLECTOR. One of the officers of a town charged with collecting the taxes assessed for town purposes.

TOWN COMMISSIONER. In some of the states where the town is the political unit the town commissioners constitute a board of administrative officers charged with the general management of the town's business.

TOWN ORDER OR WARRANT. An official direction in writing by the auditing officers of a town, directing the treasurer to pay a sum of money.

TOWN POUND. A place of confinement maintained by a town for estrays.

TOWN PURPOSE. When it is said that taxation by a town, or the expenditure of the town's money, must be for town purposes, it is meant that the purposes must be public with respect to the town; i.e., concern the welfare and advantage of the town as a whole.

TOWN-REEVE. The reeve or chief officer of a town.

TOWN TAX. Such tax as a town may levy for its peculiar expenses; as distinguished from a county or state tax.

TOWN TREASURER. The treasurer of a town which is an organized municipal corporation.

TOWN-CLERK. In those states where the town is the unit for local self-government, the town-clerk is a principal officer who keeps the records, issues calls for town-meetings, and performs generally the duties of a secretary to the political organization. See Seamons v. Fitts, 21 R.I. 236, 42 A. 863.

TOWN-CRIER. An officer in a town whose business it is to make proclamations.

TOWN-HALL. The building maintained by a town for town-meetings and the offices of the municipal authorities.

TOWN-MEETING. Under the municipal organization of the New England states, the town-meeting is a legal assembly of the qualified voters of a town, held at stated intervals or on call, for the purpose of electing town officers, and of discussing and deciding on questions relating to the public business, property, and expenses of the town. See In re Foley, 8 Misc. 57, 28 N.Y.S. 608; Railroad Co. v. Mallory, 101 Ill. 588; Portland Water Co. v. Town of Portland, 97 Conn. 628, 118 A. 84, 86; In re Opinion of the Justices, 229 Mass. 601, 119 N.E. 778, 781.

TOWNSHIP. 1. In surveys of the public land of the United States, a "township" is a division of territory six miles square, containing thirty-six sections.

2. In some of the states, this is the name given to the civil and political subdivisions of a county. Town, and Liberty Tp. v. Rock Island Tp., 44 Okl. 398, 144 P. 1025, 1026; People v. Stewart, 281 Ill.

TOWNSHIP TRUSTEE. One of a board of officers to whom, in some states, affairs of a township are intrusted.

TOXIC. (Lat. toxicum; Gr. toxikon.) In medical jurisprudence. Poisonous; having the character or producing the effects of a poison; referable to a poison; produced by or resulting from a poison.

Toxic convulsions. Such as are caused by the action of a poison on the nervous system.

Toxic dementia. Weakness of mind or feeble cerebral activity, approaching imbecility, resulting from continued use or administration of slow poisons or of the more active poisons in repeated small doses, as in cases of lead poisoning and in some cases of addiction to such drugs as opium or alcohol.

Toxanemia. A condition of anemia (impoverishment or deficiency of blood) resulting from the action of certain toxic substances or agents.

Toxemia or toxicemia. Blood-poisoning; the condition of the system caused by the presence of toxic agents in the circulation; including both septicemia and pyecmia.

Toxicosis. A diseased state of the system due to the presence and action of any poison.

TOXICAL. Poisonous; containing poison.

TOXICANT. A poison; a toxic agent; any substance capable of producing toxification or poisoning.

TOXICATE. To poison. Not used to describe the act of one who administers a poison, but the action of the drug or poison itself.

Auto-Intoxication

Self-empoisionment from the absorption of the toxic products of internal metabolism, e. g., putmaine poisoning.

Intoxication

The state of being poisoned; the condition produced by the administration or introduction into the human system of a poison. This term is popularly used as equivalent to "drunkenness," which, however, is more accurately described as "alcoholic intoxication."

TOXICOLOGY. The science of poisons; that department of medical science which treats of poisons, their effect, their recognition, their antidotes, and generally of the diagnosis and therapeutics of poisoning.

TOXIN. In its widest sense, this term may denote any poison or toxicant; but as used in pathology and medical jurisprudence it signifies, in general, any diffusible alkaloidal substance (as, the ptomaines, abrin, brucin, or serpent venoms), and in particular the poisonous products of pathogenic (disease-producing) bacteria.

Anti-Toxin

A product of pathogenic bacteria which, in sufficient quantities, will neutralize the toxin or poisonous product of the same bacteria. In therapeutics, a preventive remedy (administered by inoculation) against the effect of certain kinds of toxins, venoms, and disease-germs, obtained from the blood of an animal which has previously been treated with repeated minute injections of the particular poison or germ to be neutralized.

Toxicomania

An excessive addiction to the use of toxic or poisonous drugs or other substances; a form of mania or affective insanity characterized by an irresistible impulse to indulgence in opium, cocaine, chloral, alcohol, etc.

Toxiphobia

Morbid dread of being poisoned; a form of insanity manifesting itself by an excessive and unfounded apprehension of death by poison.

TOY. A plaything, often but not necessarily always imaginative of some living or manufactured thing. Steel Stamping Co. v. N. N. Hill Brass Co., D.C.Conn., 17 F.Supp. 18, 20.

TRABES. Lat. In civil law. A beam or rafter of a house. Calvin.

TRACING. A tracing is a mechanical copy or fac simile of an original, produced by following its lines, with a pen or pencil, through a transparent medium, called tracing paper. Chapman v. Ferry, C.C.Or., 18 F. 539, 540.

TRAMES. Lat. In civil law. A beam or rafter of a house. Calvin.

In old English law. A measure of grain, containing twenty-four sheaves; a thrave. Spelman.

Dead Track

A track having a switch to other tracks at one end only with a bumper at the other end. Hoyer v. Central R. Co. of New Jersey, C.C.A.N.Y., 255 F. 493, 494.
Track Delivery Shipments

Carload shipments, as distinguished from ordinary freight unloaded from the cars, known as a "drop shipment" delivery. Boshell v. Receivers of St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 200 Ala. 366, 76 So. 282, 284.

TRACT. A lot, piece or parcel of land, of greater or less size, the term not importing, in itself, any precise dimension. See Edwards v. Derrickson, 28 N.J.L. 45; Holt v. Wichita County Water Improvement Dist. No. 2, Tex.Civ.App., 48 S.W.2d 527, 529.

As applied to a mineral location the word "tract" implies a surface location. Whildin v. Maryland Gold Quartz Mining Co., 33 Cal.App. 270, 164 P. 908, 910.

TRACTOR. That which draws or is used for drawing as a traction engine, or an automotive vehicle used for drawing or hauling something as a vehicle, plow, harrow, or reaper. State ex rel. Rice v. Louisiana Oil Corporation, 174 Misc. 585, 165 So. 423, 425.

TRACTENT FABRILIA FABRI. Let smiths perform the work of smiths. 3 Co. Epist.

TRADAS IN BALLIUM. You deliver to bail. In old English practice. The name of a writ which might be issued in behalf of a party who, upon the writ de olio et atia, had been found to have been maliciously accused of a crime, commanding the sheriff that, if the prisoner found twelve good and lawful men of the county who would be mainper- nor for him, he should deliver him in bail to those twelve, until the next assize. Bract. fol. 123; 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, 252.

TRADE. The act or business of exchanging commodities by barter; or the business of buying and selling for money; traffic; barter. May v. Sloan, 101 U.S. 237, 25 L.Ed. 797; U. S. v. Cassidy, D.C.Cal., 67 F. 698; State v. Deckebach, 113 Ohio St. 347, 149 N.E. 194, 196.

The business which a person has learned and which he carries on for procuring subsistence, or for profit; occupation or employment, particularly mechanical employment; distinguished from the liberal arts and learned professions, and from agriculture. Woodfield v. Colzey, 47 Ga. 124; People v. Warden of City Prison, 144 N.Y. 529, 39 N.E. 686, 27 L.R.A. 718; Detroit Taxicab & Transfer Co. v. Callahan, C.C.A.Mich., 1 F.2d 911, 912. A line of work or a form of occupation pursued as a business or calling, as for a livelihood or for profit; anything practiced as a means of getting a living, money, booty, etc.; mercantile or commercial business in general, or the buying and selling, or exchanging, of commodities, either by wholesale or retail within a country or between countries. Helvering v. Wilmington Trust Co., C.C.A.3, 124 F.2d 156, 158.

All wholesale trade, all buying in order to sell again by wholesale, may be reduced to three sorts: The home trade, the foreign trade of consumption, and the carrying trade. 2 Smith, Wealth Nat. b. 2, c. 5.

TRADE ACCEPTANCE. A draft or bill of exchange drawn by the seller on the purchaser of goods sold and accepted by such purchaser. Luikart v. Massachusetts Bonding & Insurance Co., 129 Neb. 771, 263 N.W. 124, 129.

TRADE AND COMMERCE. The words "trade" and "commerce," when used in juxtaposition impart to each other enlarged signification, so as to include practically every business occupation carried on for subsistence or profit, and into which the elements of bargain and sale, barter, exchange, or traffic, enter. State v. Tagami, 234 P. 102, 105, 195 Cal. 522.

TRADE AGREEMENT. See Collective Labor Agreement.

TRADE COMMISSION, FEDERAL. An act of congress was passed September 26, 1914, creating a Federal Trade Commission, composed of five commissioners appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate. The act provides: "That unfair methods of competition in commerce are hereby declared unlawful," and the commission is "directed to prevent persons, partnerships or corporations, except banks, and common carriers subject to the acts to regulate commerce, from using unfair methods of competition in commerce."

TRADE FIXTURES. See Fixtures.

TRADE-MARK. Generally speaking, a distinctive mark of authenticity, through which the products of particular manufacturers or the vendible commodities of particular merchants may be distinguished from those of others. It may consist in any symbol or in any form of words, but, as its office is to point out distinctively the origin or ownership of the articles to which it is affixed, it follows that no sign or form of words can be appropriated as a valid trade-mark which, from the nature of the fact conveyed by its primary meaning, others may employ with equal truth and with equal right for the same purpose. Jantzen Knitting Mills v. West Coast Knitting Mills, Cust. & Pat.App., 46 F.2d 182, 184.

A distinctive mark, motto, device, or emblem, which a manufacturer stamps, prints, or otherwise affixes to the goods he produces, so that they may be identified in the market, and their origin be vouched for. Trade-Mark Cases, 100 U.S. 87, 25 L.Ed. 550; Buffalo Rubber Mfg. Co. v. Batavia Rubber Co., 90 Misc.Rep. 418, 153 N.Y.S. 779, 783; Iowa Auto Market v. Auto Market & Exchange, 197 Iowa, 420, 197 N.W. 321, 322; Tillman & Bend-el v. California Packing Corporation, C.C.A.Cal., 63 F.2d 498, 503.

"Trade-mark" is created chiefly by use, which must be general, continuous, and exclusive and applied to goods and used in trade under such circumstances of publicity and length of time as to show intention to adopt mark for specific goods. Continental Corporation v. National Union Radio Corporation, C.C.A.111., 67 F.2d 938, 942.

Generally speaking, a "trade-mark" is applicable to a vendible commodity, to which it is affixed, and a "trade-name" to a business and its good will. American Steel Foundries v. Robertson, 46 S.Ct. 160, 162, 269 U.S. 372, 70 L.Ed. 317.

TRADE-MARKS REGISTRATION ACT, 1875. This is the statute 38 & 39 Vict. c. 91, amended by the acts of 1876 and 1877. It provides for the establishment of a register of trade-marks under the superintendence of the commissioners of patents, and for the registration of trade-marks as belonging to particular classes of goods, and for their assignment in connection with the good-will of the business in which they are used. Sweet.

TRADE-NAME. A name used in trade to designate a particular business of certain individuals considered somewhat as an entity, or the place at which a business is located, or of a class of goods, but which is not a technical trade-mark either because not applied or affixed to goods sent into the market or because not capable of exclusive appropriation by anyone as a trade-mark. "Trade-names" may, or may not, be exclusive. Non-exclusive "trade-names" are names that are publici juris in their primary sense, but which in a secondary sense have come to be understood as indicating the goods or business of a particular trader. "Trade-names" are acquired by adoption and user and belong to one who first used them and gave them a value. St. Louis Independent Packing Co. v. Houston, C.C.A.Mo., 215 F. 553, 560; Hartzler v. Goshen Churn & Ladder Co., 55 Ind.App. 455, 104 N.E. 34, 37. See, also, Trade-mark. For "Fanciful Trade-Name," see that title.

A "trade-name" is descriptive of the manufacturer or dealer for protection in trade, to avoid confusion in business, and to secure the advantages of a good reputation and is applied more to the good will of a business than as an identification of a product. Mary Muffet, Inc., v. Smelansky, Mo.App., 158 S.W.2d 168, 170.

TRADE-SECRET. A plan or process, tool, mechanism, or compound known only to its owner and those of his employees to whom it is necessary to confide it. Victor Chemical Works v. Iliff, 299 Ill. 532; 132 N.E. 806, 811; Progress Laundry Co. v. Hamilton, 208 Ky. 348, 270 S.W. 834, 835. A secret formula or process not patented, but known only to certain individuals using it in compounding some article of trade having a commercial value. Glucol Mfg. Co. v. Shulist, 239 Mich. 70, 214 N.W. 152, 153; U. S. ex rel. Norwegian Nitrogen Products Co. v. U. S. Tariff Commission, 6 F.2d 491, 495, 55 App.D.C. 366.

TRADE-UNION. A combination of workmen of the same trade or of several allied trades, for the purpose of securing by united action the most favorable conditions regarding wages, hours of labor, etc., for its members. People v. Distributors Division, Smoked Fish Workers Union, Local No. 20377, Sup., 7 N.Y.S.2d 185, 187; Keith Theatre v. Vachon, 134 Me. 392, 187 A. 692, 694.

TRADE-UNION ACT. The statute 34 & 35 Vict. c. 31, passed in 1871, for the purpose of giving legal recognition to trade unions, is known as the "trade-union act," or "trade-union funds protection act." It provides that the members of a trade union shall not be prosecuted for conspiracy merely by reason that the rules of such union are in restraint of trade; and that the agreements of trade unions shall not on that account be void or voidable. Provisions are also made with reference to the registration and registered offices of trade unions, and other purposes connected therewith. Mozley & Whitley.

TRADE USAGE. The usage or customs commonly observed by persons conversant in, or connected with, a particular trade.

TRADER. One who makes it his business to buy merchandise, goods, or chattels to sell the same at a profit. People v. Terkanian, 27 Cal.App.2d 460, 81 P.2d 251, 253. One who sells goods substantially in the form in which they are bought; one who has not converted them into another form of property by his skill and labor. Albuquerque Lumber Co. v. Bureau of Revenue of New Mexico, 42 N.M. 58, 75 P.2d 334, 336.

TRADESMAN. In England, a shopkeeper; in the United States, a mechanic or artificer of any kind, whose livelihood depends on the labor of his hands; Richie v. McCauley, 4 Pa. 472.

TRADING. Engaging in trade, (q. v.) pursuing the business or occupation of trade or of a trader.

TRADING CORPORATION. See Corporation.

TRADING STAMPS. The name for a method of conducting some kinds of retail business which consists of an agreement between a number of merchants and a corporation that the latter shall print the names of the former in its subscribers' dictionary and circulate a number of copies of the book, and that the merchants shall purchase of the corporation a number of so-called trading stamps, to be given to purchasers with their purchases, and by them preserved and pasted in the books aforesaid until a certain number have been secured, when they shall be presented to the corporation in exchange for the choice of certain articles kept in stock by the corporation. Lansburgh v. D. of Col., 11 App.D.C. 512.
TRADING VOYAGE. One which contemplates the touching and stopping of the vessel at various ports for the purpose of traffic or sale and purchase or exchange of commodities on account of the owners and shippers, rather than the transportation of cargo between terminal points, which is called a "freighting voyage."

TRADITIO. Lat. In the civil law. Delivery; transfer of possession; a derivative mode of acquiring, by which the owner of a corporeal thing, having the right and the will of alienating it, transfers it for a lawful consideration to the receiver. Hein. Elem. lib. 2, tit. 1, § 380.

Quasi Traditio
A supposed or implied delivery of property from one to another. Thus, if the purchaser of an article was already in possession of it before the sale, his continuing in possession is considered as equivalent to a fresh delivery of it, delivery being one of the necessary elements of a sale; in other words, a quasi traditio is predicated.

Traditio Brevi Manu
A species of constructive or implied delivery. When he who already holds possession of a thing in another's name agrees with that other that thenceforth he shall possess it in his own name, in this case a delivery and redelivery are not necessary. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 284.

Traditio Clavium
Delivery of keys; a symbolical kind of delivery, by which the ownership of merchandise in a warehouse might be transferred to a buyer. Inst. 2, 1, 44.

Traditio Longa Manu
A species of delivery which takes place where the transferor places the article in the hands of the transferee, or, on his order, delivers it at his house. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 284.

Traditio Rei
Delivery of the thing. See 5 Maule & S. 82.

TRADITIO LOQUI FACIT CHARTAM. Delivery makes a deed speak. Delivery gives effect to the words of a deed. 5 Coke, 1a.

TRADITIO NIHIL AMPLIUS TRANSFERRE DEBET VEL POTEST, AD EUM QUI ACCIPIT, QUAM EST APUD EUM QUI TRADIT. Delivery ought to, and can, transfer nothing more to him who receives than is with him who delivers. Dig. 41, 1, 20, pr.

The tradition or delivery is the transferring of the thing sold into the power and possession of the buyer. Civ. Code La. art. 2477.

In the rule respecting the admission of tradition or general reputation to prove boundaries, questions of pedigree, etc., this word means knowledge or belief derived from the statements or declarations of contemporary witnesses and handed down orally through a considerable period of time. See Westfelt v. Adams, 131 N.C. 379, 42 S.E. 823; Irre Hurlburt's Estate, 68 Vt. 366, 35 A. 77, 35 L.R.A. 794.

TRADITIONAL EVIDENCE. Evidence derived from tradition or reputation or the statements formerly made by persons since deceased, in regard to questions of pedigree, ancient boundaries, and the like, where no living witnesses can be produced having knowledge of the facts. Lay v. Neville, 25 Cal. 554.

TRADITOR. In old English law. A traitor; one guilty of high treason. Fl. lib. 1, c. 21, § 8.

TRADITUR IN BALLIUM. In old practice. Is delivered to bail. Emphatic words of the old Latin bail-piece. 1 Salk. 105.

TRAFFIC. Commerce; trade; sale or exchange of merchandise, bills, money, and the like. The passing of goods or commodities from one person to another for an equivalent in goods or money. Senior v. Ratterman, 44 Ohio St. 673, 11 N.E. 321; Fine v. Moran, 74 Fla. 417, 77 So. 533, 538; Bruno v. U. S., C.C.A.Mass., 289 F. 649, 655; Kroger Grocery and Baking Co. v. Schwer, 36 Ohio App. 512, 173 N.E. 633. The subjects of transportation on a route, as persons or goods; the passing to and fro of persons, animals, vehicles, or vessels, along a route of transportation, as along a street, canal, etc. United States v. Golden Gate Bridge and Highway Dist. of California, D.Cal., 37 F. Supp. 505, 512.

TRAILER. A separate vehicle, not driven or propelled by its own power, but drawn by some independent power; a semi-trailer is a separate vehicle which is not driven or propelled by its own power, but, which, to be useful, must be attached to and become a part of another vehicle, and then loses its identity as a separate vehicle. Leamon v. State, 17 Ohio App. 323, 326; Maryland Casualty Co. v. Cross, C.C.A.Tex., 112 F.2d 58, 60.
TRAIN

TRAIN. Continuous or connected line of cars or carriages being transported on railroad from one terminal to another, not merely cars being moved in switchyard for purpose of making up trains or placing them in another part of yard. Squibb v. Elgin, J. & E. Ry. Co., 99 Ind.App. 136, 190 N.E. 879, 881.

TRAIN WRECK. These words, in an accident insurance policy, mean either total or partial destruction of the train. The smashing in of a portion of a passenger car is a "train wreck," though the car is not derailed, and the train soon continues under its own power. Mochel v. Iowa State Traveling Men's Ass'n, 203 Iowa, 623, 213 N.W. 259, 261, 51 A.L.R. 1327.

TRAINBANDS. The militia; the part of a community trained to martial exercises.

TRAISTIS. In old Scotch law. A roll containing the particular ditty taken up upon malefactors, which, with the porteous, is delivered by the justice clerk to the coroner, to the effect that the persons whose names are contained in the porteous may be attached, conform to the ditty contained in the traistis. So called, because committed to the traist, [trust,] faith, and credit of the clerks and coroner. Skene; Burrill.

TRAITOR. One who, being trusted, betrays; one guilty of treason, (q. v.) Vulcan Detinning Co. v. St. Clair, 315 Ill. 140, 145 N.E. 657, 659.

TRAITOROUSLY. In criminal pleading. An essential word in indictments for treason. The offense must be laid to have been committed traitorously. Whart.Crim.Law, 100.

TRAJECTITIA PECUNIA. A loan to a shipper to be repaid only in case of a successful voyage. The lender could charge an extraordinary rate of interest, nautilicum fecunus. Holland, Jurispr. 250.

TRAJECTITIUS. Lat. In the civil law. Sent across the sea.

TRAMMER. A mine laborer shoveling the ore or dirt as it is mined or thrown down into tram cars. Mesich v. Tamarack Mining Co., 184 Mich. 363, 151 N.W. 564, 566.

TRAMP. One who roams about from place to place, begging or living without labor or visible means of support; a vagrant. See State v. Hogan, 63 Ohio St. 202, 58 N.E. 572, 52 L.R.A. 863, 81 Am.St.Rep. 626; Miller v. State, 73 Ind. 92; Railway Co. v. Boyle, 115 Ga. 836, 42 S.E. 242, 59 L.R.A. 104.

TRANSACT. In Scotch law. To compound. Amb. 185.

In common parlance, equivalent to "carry on," when used with reference to business. Territory v. Harris, 8 Mont. 140, 19 P. 286; In re Wellings' Estate, 192 Cal. 506, 221 P. 628, 631.

TRANSACTING BUSINESS. Doing or performing series of acts occupying time, attention, and labor of men for purpose of livelihood, profit or pleasure. Seidenbach's v. A. E. Little Co., 146 Okl. 247, 294 P. 126, 128.

TRANSACTIO. Lat. In the civil law. The settlement of a suit or matter in controversy, by the litigating parties, between themselves, without referring it to arbitration. Hallifax, Civil Law, b. 3, c. 8, no. 14. An agreement by which a suit, either pending or about to be commenced, was forborne or discontinued on certain terms. Calvin.

TRANSACTION. Act of transacting or conducting any business; negotiation; management; proceeding; that which is done; an affair. Sheehan v. Pierce, 23 N.Y.S. 1119, 1121, 70 Hun 62, 53 St. R. 438. Something which has taken place, whereby a cause of action has arisen. It must therefore consist of an act or agreement, or several acts or agreements having some connection with each other, in which more than one person is concerned, and by which the legal relations of such persons between themselves are altered. Baker v. S. A. Healy Co., 302 Ill.App. 634, 24 N.E.2d 228, 234.

A broader term than "contract". Hoffman Machinery Corp. v. Ebenstein, 150 Kan. 790, 96 P.2d 661, 663.

A group of facts so connected together as to be referred to by a single legal name; as a crime, a contract, a wrong. Steph.Dig.Evid. art. 3.

Evidence

"Transaction," as used in statutes permitting cause of action arising out of transaction, set forth in complaint to be foundation of counterclaim, properly embraces that combination of acts and events, whether in nature of contract or tort, out of which a legal right springs, or upon which a legal obligation is predicated. Haut v. Gunderson, 54 N.D. 826, 211 N.W. 982, 983; Southeastern Life Ins. Co. v. Palmer, 120 S.C. 490, 113 S.E. 310, 311; Scott v. Waggoner, 48 Mont. 536, 139 P. 454, 456, L.R.A.1916C, 491.

Civil Law

An agreement between two or more persons, who, for preventing or putting an end to a lawsuit, adjust their differences by mutual consent, in the manner which they agree on. This contract must be reduced into writing. Civ. Code La. art. 3071.

TRANSAZIONE. An Italian term which technically refers to an instrument whereby parties agree to put an end to a dispute by means of mutual concessions and is the equivalent of “transactio” under the Roman Law, the principles of which have been carried into the common law and are found in agreements of accord and satisfaction and compromise and settlement. Castelli v. Tolibia, Sup., 83 N.Y.S.2d 554, 562.

TRANSCRIPT. That which has been transcribed; a copy of any kind; a writing made from or after an original; a copy, particularly of a record; a copy of an original writing or deed and suggests the idea of an original writing. Stephenson v. State, 179 N.E. 633, 637, 205 Ind. 141; O’Quinn v. Tate, Tex.Civ.App., 187 S.W.2d 241, 243.

TRANSCRIPT OF RECORD. The printed record as made up in each case for the supreme court of the United States is so called; also in the Circuit Court of Appeals. If a necessary part has been omitted and is subsequently presented to the appellate court, duly certified, it may be made part of the record by direct order. Jurisdiction attaches upon the filing in the court above of the writ of error and is not defeated by irregularity in the transcript or its certification. Burnham v. North Chicago St. R. Co., 30 C.C.A. 594, 87 F. 168.

TRANSCRIPTIO PEDIS FINIS LEVATI MITTENDO IN CANCELLARIUM. A writ which certified the foot of a fine levied before justices in eyre, etc., into the chancery. Reg.Orig. 669.

TRANSCRIPTIO RECOGNITION’S FACTJE CORAM JUSTICIARIIS ITINERANTIBUS, Etc. An old writ to certify a cognizance taken by justices in eyre. Reg.Orig. 152.

TRANSFER, v. To convey or remove from one place, person, etc., to another; pass or hand over from one to another; specifically, to make over the possession or control of (as, to transfer a title to land); sell or give. Chappell v. State, 216 Ind. 666, 25 N.E.2d 999, 1001.

TRANSFER OF A CAUSE. The removal of a cause from the jurisdiction of one court or judge to another by lawful authority.

TRANSFER IN CONTEMPLATION OF DEATH. A transfer made under a present apprehension on the part of the transferor, from some existing bodily or mental condition or impending peril, creating a reasonable fear that death is near at hand. This apprehension must be direct and animating and the only cause of the transfer. Rea v. Heiner, D.C.Pa., 6 F.2d 389, 392.

TRANSFER TAX. A tax upon the passing of the title to property or a valuable interest therein out of or from the estate of a decedent, by inheritance, devise, or bequest. In re Hoffman’s Estate, 143 N.Y. 327, 38 N.E. 311; In re Brez’s Estate, 64 N.E. 958, 172 N.Y. 609. Sometimes also applied to a tax on the transfer of property, particularly of an incorporeal nature, such as bonds or shares of stock, between living persons.

TRANSFER TICKET. An undertaking on the part of a common carrier to continue the carriage further without additional charge if the passenger, in accordance with its terms, again presents himself at the proper place for carriage. It generally designates the point at which the journey is to be renewed, but contains no contract, express or implied, for safety in making the transfer. Anton v. St. Louis Public Service Co., 335 Mo. 188, 71 S. W.2d 702, 706.

TRANSFERABLE. A term used in a quasi legal sense, to indicate that the character of assignability or negotiability attaches to the particular instrument, or that it may pass from hand to hand, carrying all rights of the original holder. The words “not transferable” are sometimes printed upon a ticket, receipt, or bill of lading, to show that the same will not be good in the hands of any person other than the one to whom first issued.

TRANSFEREE. He to whom a transfer is made. Kramer v. Spradlin, 148 Ga. 805, 98 S.E. 487, 488.

TRANSFERENCE. In Scotch law. The proceeding to be taken upon the death of one of the parties to a pending suit, whereby the action is transferred or continued, in its then condition, from the decedent to his representatives. Transference is either active or passive; the former, when it is the pursuer (plaintiff) who dies; the latter, upon the death of the defender. Ersk. Inst. 4, 1, 60.

The transferring of a legacy from the person to whom it was originally given to another; this is a species of ademption, but the latter is the more general term, and includes cases not covered by the former.

TRANSFEROR. One who makes a transfer.

TRANSFRETATIO. Lat. In old English law. A crossing of the strait, [of Dover;] a passing or sailing over from England to France. The royal passages or voyages to Gascony, Brittany, and other parts of France were so called, and time was sometimes computed from them.

TRANSLATION. The reproduction in one language of a book, document, or speech in another language.

The transfer of property; but in this sense it is seldom used. 2 Bl.Comm. 294.

In ecclesiastical law. As applied to a bishop, the term denotes his removal from one diocese to another.

TRANSLATITIUM EDICTUM. Lat. In Roman law. The prmtor, on his accession to office, did not usually publish an entirely new edict, but retained the whole or a part of that promulgated by his predecessor, as being of an approved or permanently useful character. The portion thus repeated or handed down from year to year was called the "edictum translatitium." See Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 36.

TRANSLATIVE FACT. A fact by means of which a right is transferred or passes from one person to another; one, that is, which fulfills the double function of terminating the right of one person to an object, and of originating the right of another to it.

TRANSIMMERSION. In the civil law. The right which heirs or legates may have of passing to their successors the inheritance or legacy to which they were entitled, if they happen to die without having exercised their rights. Domat, liv. 3, t. 1, s. 10; 4 Toullier, no. 186; Dig. 50, 17, 54; Code, 6, 51.

TRANSPORT, v. To carry or convey from one place to another. Sacramento Na Co. v. Salz, 47 S.Ct. 368, 369, 273 U.S. 326, 71 L.Ed. 663; People v. One 1941 Cadillac Club Coupe, 63 Cal.2d 418, 147 P.2d 49, 51.

Criminal Law

A species of punishment consisting in removing the criminal from his own country to another TRANSUMPT. In Scotch law, an action of transumpt is an action competent to any one having a partial interest in a writing, or immediate use for it, to support his title or defenses in other actions. It is directed against the custodier of the writing, calling upon him to exhibit it, in order that a transumpt, e., a copy, may be judicially made and delivered to the pursuer. Bell.

TRAP. A device, as a pitfall, snare, or machine that shuts suddenly as with a spring, for taking game and other animals; a gin. Hence, any device or contrivance by which one may be caught unawares, strategem; snare; gin. Jones v. C. F. Smith Co., 280 Mich. 514, 273 N.W. 786, 787.

TRAVEL. To go from one place to another at distance; to journey; spoken of voluntary change of place. White v. Beazley, 1 Barn. & Ald. 171; Hancock v. Rand, 94 N.Y. 1, 46 Am.Rep. 112; State v. Smith, 157 Ind. 241, 61 N.E. 566, 87 Am. St.Rep. 205.

TRAVELER’S CHECK. A bill of exchange drawn by the issuing bank upon itself, accepted by the act of issuance, and the right of countermand applied to ordinary checks does not exist as to it. It has the characteristics of a cashier’s check of the issuing bank. Pines v. United States, C.C.A. Iowa, 123 F.2d 825, 828.

TRAVELING SALESMAN. A person who travels from town to town and who takes or solicits orders for goods, and forwards them to his principal for approval or rejection. T. C. May Co. v. Menzies Shoe Co., 184 N.C. 150, 113 S.E. 593, 594; Upchurch v. City of La Grange, 159 Ga. 113, 125 S.E. 47, 48.

A traveling salesman is not employed or authorized to fix prices. He cannot pass upon the credit or standing of customers. He does not collect accounts. He is not responsible for the quality, condition or delivery of the goods. He makes no personal contracts and he has no other interest in the sale than his compensation for those which are approved by his employer. The territory assigned to him may be confined to a single city or state, or it may cover cities or states. Commonly, the employer pays the salesman’s expenses, but sometimes, especially if he works for a commission, he pays his own expenses. Sometimes he is allotted a certain territory and he receives a commission upon all sales which are sent in from that territory. In some cases the employer may direct the routes he is to travel, and in other cases the salesman chooses his own routes. Sometimes the salesman sends the orders directly to his employer and sometimes the customers themselves send in the orders to the employer. He often sells after exhibiting samples. In re Herbert Candy Co., D.C.Pa., 43 F.Supp. 588, 591.

TRAVELING WAYS. As applied to coal mining, places for the passage of workmen to and from different parts of the mine. Ricardo v. Central Coal & Coke Co., 100 Kan. 95, 163 P. 641, 643.

TRAVEL. The act of child-bearing. A woman is said to be in her travail from the time the pains of child-bearing commence until her delivery. Scott v. Donovan, 153 Mass. 378, 26 N.E. 871.

TRAVERSE. In the language of pleading, a traverse signifies a denial. Thus, where a defendant denies any material allegation of fact in the plaintiff’s declaration, he is said to traverse it, and the plea itself is hence frequently termed a “traverse.” Brown.

Criminal Practice

To put off or delay the trial of an indictment till a succeeding term. More properly, to deny or take issue upon an indictment. 4 Bl.Comm. 351.
TRAVERSE

General

Common traverse. A simple and direct denial of the material allegations of the opposite pleading, concluding to the country, and without inducement or _absque hoc._

General traverse. One preceded by a general inducement, and denying in general terms all that is last before alleged on the opposite side, instead of pursuing the words of the allegations which it denies. Gould, P1. vii. 5.

Special traverse. A peculiar form of traverse or denial, the design of which, as distinguished from a _common_ traverse, is to explain or qualify the denial, instead of putting it in the direct and absolute form. It consists of an affirmative and a negative part, the first setting forth the new affirmative matter tending to explain or qualify the denial, and technically called the "inducement," and the latter constituting the direct denial itself, and technically called the "_absque hoc._" Steph.Pl. 169-180; Allen v. Stevens, 29 N.J.L. 513, Chambers v. Hunt, 18 N.J.L. 352; People v. Pullman's Car Co., 175 Ill. 125, 51 N.E. 664, 64 L.R.A. 366.

Traverse jury. A petit jury; a trial jury; a jury impaneled to try an action or prosecution, as distinguished from a grand jury. State v. James, 96 N.J.L. 132, 114 A. 553, 555, 16 A.L.R. 1141; De Krasner v. State, 54 Ga.App. 41, 187 S.E. 402, 405.

Traverse of indictment or presentment. The taking issue upon and contradicting or denying some chief point of it. Jacob.

Traverse of office. The proving that an inquisition made of lands or goods by the escheator is defective and untruly made. Tomlins. It is the denial, and technically called the "inducement," and the latter constituting the direct denial itself, and technically called the "_absque hoc._"

Traverse upon a traverse. One growing out of the same point or subject-matter as is embraced in a preceding traverse on the other side.

TRAVERSER. In pleading. One who traverses or denies. A prisoner or party indicted; so called from his traversing the indictment.

TRAVERSING NOTE. This is a pleading in chancery, and consists of a denial put in by the plaintiff on behalf of the defendant, generally denying all the statements in the plaintiff's bill. The effect of it is to put the plaintiff upon proof of the whole contents of his bill, and is only resorted to for the purpose of saving time, and in a case where the plaintiff can safely dispense with an answer. A copy of the note must be served on the defendant. Brown.

TREACHER, TRECHETOUR, or TREACHOUR. A traitor.

TREAD-MILL, or TREAD-WHEEL. An instrument of prison discipline, being a wheel or cylinder with an horizontal axis, having steps attached to it, up which the prisoners walk, and thus put the axis in motion. The men hold on by a fixed rail, and, as their weight presses down the step upon which they tread, they ascend the next step, and thus drive the wheel. Enc. Brit.

TREASON. The offense of attempting by overt acts to overthrow the government of the state to which the offender owes allegiance; or of betraying the state into the hands of a foreign power. Webster.

In England, treason is an offense particularly directed against the person of the sovereign, and consists (1) in compassing or imagining the death of the king or queen, or their eldest son and heir; (2) in violating the king's companion, or the king's eldest daughter unmarried, or the wife of the king's eldest son and heir; (3) in levying war against the king in his realm; (4) in adhering to the king's enemies in his realm, giving to them aid and comfort in the realm or elsewhere, and (5) slaying the chancellor, treasurer, or the king's justices of the one bench or the other, justices in eyre, or justices of assize, and all other justices assigned to hear and determine, being in their places doing their offices. 4 Steph.Comm. 185-193; 4 Bl. Comm. 76-84.

Constructive Treason

Treason imputed to a person by law from his conduct or course of actions, though his deeds taken severally do not amount to actual treason. This doctrine is not known in the United States.

High Treason

In English law. Treason against the king or sovereign, as distinguished from petit or petty treason, which might formerly be committed against a subject. 4 Bl.Comm. 74, 75; 4 Steph. Comm. 183, 184, note.

Misprision of Treason

See Misprision.

Petit Treason

In English law. The crime committed by a wife in killing her husband, or a servant his lord or master, or an ecclesiastic his lord or ordinary. 4 Bl.Comm. 75.

Treason-felony

Under the English statute 11 & 12 Vict. c. 12, passed in 1848, is the offense of compassing, devising, etc., to depose her majesty from the crown; or to levy war in order to intimidate either house of parliament, etc., or to stir up foreigners by any printing or writing to invade the kingdom. This offense is punishable with penal servitude for life, or for any term not less than five years, etc., under statutes 11 & 12 Vict. c. 12, § 3; 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3, § 2; 27 & 28 Vict. c. 47, § 2. By the statute first above mentioned, the government is enabled to treat as felony many offenses which must formerly have been treated as high treason. Mozley & Whitley.
TREASURE. Having the nature or guilt of treason.

TREASURE. A treasure is a thing hidden or buried in the earth, on which no one can prove his property, and which is discovered by chance. Civil Code La. art. 3423, par. 2. See Treasure-Trove.

TREASURE-TROVE. Literally, treasure found. Money or coin, gold, silver, plate or bullion found hidden in the earth or other private place, the owner thereof being unknown. 1 Bl.Comm. 295. Called in Latin "thesaurus inventus;" and in Saxon "fynderinga." Huthmacher v. Harris, 38 Pa. 499, 80 Am.Dec. 502; Vickery v. Hardin, 77 Ind.App. 558, 133 N.E. 922, 923.

TREASURER. An officer of a public or private corporation, company, or government, charged with the receipt, custody, and disbursement of its moneys or funds. See State v. Eames, 39 La. Ann. 986, 3 So. 93; In re Millward-Cliff Cracker Co.'s Estate, 161 Pa. 167, 28 A. 1072; Jones v. Marrs, 114 Tex. 62, 263 S.W. 570, 574.

TREASURER, LORD HIGH. Formerly the chief treasurer of England, who had charge of the moneys in the exchequer, the chancellor of the exchequer being under him. He appointed all revenue officers and escheaters, and leased crown lands. The office is obsolete, and his duties are now performed by the lords commissioners of the treasury. Stim. Gloss.

TREASURER OF THE UNITED STATES. An officer in the treasury department appointed by the president by and with the advice and consent of the senate. His principal duties are—to receive and keep the moneys of the United States, and disburse the same upon warrants drawn by the secretary of the treasury, countersigned by either comptroller and recorded by the register; to take receipts for all moneys paid by him; to render his account to the first comptroller quarterly, or oftener if required, and transmit a copy thereof, when settled, to the secretary of the treasury; to lay before each house, on the third day of every session of congress, fair and accurate copies of all accounts by him from time to time rendered to and settled with the first comptroller, and a true and perfect account of the state of the treasury; to submit at all times to the secretary of the treasury and the comptroller, or either of them, the inspection of the moneys in his hands. (31 U.S.C.A. § 141 et seq.).

The office of the Treasurer of the United States and certain other offices and agencies and their functions were consolidated into the Fiscal Service of the Treasury Department, the function of said office to be administered by the Treasurer of the United States by Reorg. Plan No. III, § 1(a), eff. June 30, 1940, set out in note under 5 U.S. C.A. § 133.

TREASURER'S REMEMBRANCER. In English law. He whose charge was to put the lord treasurer and the rest of the judges of the exchequer in remembrance of such things as were called on and dealt in for the sovereign's behoof. There is still one in Scotland. Wharton, TREASURY. A place or building in which stores of wealth are repositied; particularly, a place where the public revenues are deposited and kept, and where money is disbursed to defray the expenses of government. Webster.

That department of government which is charged with the receipt, custody, and disbursement (pursuant to appropriations) of the public revenues or funds.

TREASURY, FIRST LORD OF. A high office of state in Great Britain, usually held by the Prime Minister.

TREASURY BENCH. In the English house of commons, the first row of seats on the right hand of the speaker is so called, because occupied by the first lord of the treasury or principal minister of the crown. Brown.

TREASURY CHEST FUND. A fund, in England, originating in the unusual balances of certain grants of public money, which is used for banking and loan purposes by the commissioners of the treasury. Wharton.

TREASURY NOTE. A note or bill issued by the treasury department by the authority of the United States government, and circulating as money. See Brown v. State, 120 Ala. 342, 25 So. 182.

TREASURY SECURITIES. Such as have been lawfully issued and thereafter have been bought by corporation for a consideration out of corporate funds or otherwise acquired from owners, and not retired but placed as an asset of the corporation in its treasury for future use as such. Miners Nat. Bank of Pottsville v. Frackville Sewerage Co., 157 Pa.Super. 167, 42 A.2d 177, 179.

TREASURY STOCK. Ordinarily stock which has been issued as fully paid to stockholders and subsequently acquired by the corporation to be used by it in furtherance of its corporate purposes, and stock which is merely to be held as unsubscribed for and unissued is not usually regarded as "treasury stock". In re Public Service Holding Corporation, Del., 24 A.2d 584, 586.

TREATMENT. A broad term covering all the steps taken to effect a cure of an injury or disease; the word including examination and diagnosis as well as application of remedies. Kirschner v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of U. S. 157 Misc. 635, 284 N.Y.S. 506, 510; Hester v. Ford, 221 Ala. 592, 130 So. 203, 206.

TREATY. International Law

A compact made between two or more independent nations with a view to the public welfare. Louis Wolf & Co. v. United States, Cust. & Pat.App., 107 F.2d 819, 827; United States v. Belmont, N.Y., 57 S.Ct. 758, 761, 301 U.S. 324, 81 L.Ed. 1134.
TREATY

An agreement, league, or contract between two or more nations or sovereigns, formally signed by commissioners properly authorized, and solemnly ratified by the several sovereigns or the supreme power of each state. Edye v. Robertson, 5 S.Ct. 247, 112 U.S. 580, 28 L.Ed. 798; Ex parte Ortiz, C.C.Minn., 100 F. 962; Charlton v. Kelly, 33 S.Ct. 945, 954, 29 S.Ct. 447, 57 L.Ed. 1274, 46 L.R.A., N.S., 397.

A "treaty" is not only a law but also a contract between two nations and must, if possible, be so construed as to give full force and effect to all its parts. United States v. Reid, C.C.A. Or., 73 F.2d 153, 155.

Personal treaties relate exclusively to the persons of the contracting sovereigns, such as family alliances, and treaties guaranteeing the throne to a particular sovereign and his family. As they relate to the persons, they expire of course on the death of the sovereign or the extinction of his family. With the advent of constitutional government in Europe these treaties have lost their importance. Real treaties relate solely to the subject-matters of the convention, independently of the persons of the contracting parties, and continue to bind the state, although there may be changes in its constitution or in the persons of its rulers. Boyd's Wheat. Int. Law § 29.

Private Law

The discussion of terms which immediately precedes the conclusion of a contract or other transaction. A warranty on the sale of goods, to be carried out, must be made during the "treaty" preceding the sale. Chit. Cont. 419, Sweet.

TREATY OF PEACE. An agreement or contract made by belligerent powers, in which they agree to lay down their arms, and by which they stipulate the conditions of peace and regulate the manner in which it is to be restored and supported. Vattel, b. 4, c. 2, § 9.

TREBELLANIC PORTION. In consequence of this article, the trebellanic portion of the civil law—that is to say, the portion of the property of the testator which the instituted heir had a right to detain when he was charged with a fidei commissa or fiduciary bequest—is no longer a part of our law. Civ.Code La. art. 1520, par. 3.

TREBLE COSTS. See Costs.

TREBLE DAMAGES. In practice. Damages given by statute in certain cases, consisting of the single damages found by the jury, actually tripled in amount. The usual practice has been for the jury to find the single amount of the damages, and for the court, on motion, to order that amount to be trebled. 2 Tidd, Pr. 893, 894.

TREE. A woody plant, the branches of which spring from, and are supported upon, a trunk or body. Nettles v. Lichtman, 228 Ala. 228, 152 So. 450, 452, 91 A.L.R. 1455.

TREET. In old English law. Fine wheat.

TREMAGIUM, TREMESIUM. In old records. The season or time of sowing summer corn, being about March, the third month, to which the word may allude. Cowell.

TRES FACIUNT COLLEGIUM. Three make a corporation; three members are requisite to constitute a corporation. Dig. 50, 16, 8; 1 Bl.Comm. 469.

TRESAYLE. An abolished writ sued on ouster by abatement, on the death of the grandfather's grandfather.

TRESPASS. Doing of unlawful act or of lawful act in unlawful manner to injury of another's person or property. Waco Cotton Oil Mill of Waco v. Walker, Tex.Civ.App., 103 S.W.2d 1071, 1072. An unlawful act committed with violence, actual or implied, causing injury to the person, property, or relative rights of another; an injury or misfeasance to the person, property, or rights of another, done with force and violence, either actual or implied in law. Grunson v. State, 89 Ind. 536, 46 Am.Rep. 178; Southern Ry. Co. v. Harden, 101 Ga. 263, 28 S.E. 847; Brown v. Walker, 188 N.C. 52, 123 S.E. 633, 636. It comprehends not only forcible wrongs, but also acts the consequences of which make them tortious. Mawson v. Vess Beverage Co., Mo.App., 173 S.W.2d 606, 612, 613, 614.

Trespass, in its most comprehensive sense, signifies any transgression or offense against the law of nature, of society, or of the country in which we live; and this, whether it relates to a man's person or to his property. In its more limited and ordinary sense, it signifies an injury committed with violence, and this violence may be either actual or implied; and the law will imply violence though none is actually used, when the injury is of a direct and immediate kind, and committed on the person or tangible and corporeal property of the plaintiff. Of actual violence, an assault and battery is an instance; of implied, a peaceable but wrongful entry upon a person's land. Brown.

In practice a form of action, at the common law, which lies for redress in the shape of money damages for any unlawful injury done to the plaintiff, in respect either to his person, property, or rights, by the immediate force and violence of the defendant.

Continuing trespass. One which is in its nature a permanent invasion of the rights of another; as, where a person builds on his own land so that a part of the building overhangs his neighbor's land. H. H. Hitt Lumber Co. v. Cullman Property Co., 189 Ala. 13, 66 So. 720, 721.

Joint trespass. Where two or more persons unite in committing it, or where some actually commit the tort, the others command, encourage or direct it. Stephens v. Schadler, 182 Ky. 833, 207 S.W. 704.

Permanent trespass. One which consists of a series of acts, done on successive days, which are of the same nature, and are renewed or continued from day to day, so that, in the aggregate, they make up one indivisible wrong. 3 Bl.Comm. 212.
TRESPASS. One who has committed trespass.

Joint Trespassers

Two or more who unite in committing a trespass. Kansas City v. File, 60 Kan. 157, 55 P. 877; Bonte v. Postel, 109 Ky. 64, 58 S.W. 536, 51 L.R.A. 187.

Trespasser Ab Initio

Trespasser from the beginning. A term applied to a tort-feasor whose acts relate back so as to make a previous act, at the time innocent, unlawful; as if he enter peaceably, and subsequently commit a breach of the peace, his entry is considered a trespass. Stim. Gloss. See Wright v. Marvin, 59 Vt. 437, 9 A. 601.

TRESTORNARE. In old English law. To turn aside; to divert a stream from its course. Bract. fol. 115, 234b. To turn or alter the course of a road. Cowell.

TRESVIRI. Lat. In Roman law. Officers who had the charge of prisons, and the execution of condemned criminals. Calvin.

TRET. An allowance made for the water or dust that may be mixed with any commodity. It differs from tare, (q. v.).

TRETHINGA. In old English law. A trithing; the court of a trithing.

TREYT. Withdrawn, as a juror. Written also treat. Cowell.

TRIA CAPITA, in Roman law, were civitas, libertas, and familia; i. e., citizenship, freedom, and family rights.

It includes all proceedings from time when issue is joined, or, more usually, when parties are called to try their case in court, to time of its final determination. Molen v. Denning & Clark Livestock Co., 56 Idaho 57, 50 P.2d 9, 11.

And in its strict definition, the word “trial” in criminal procedure means the proceedings in open court after the pleadings are finished and the prosecution is otherwise ready, down to and including the rendition of the verdict. Thomas v. Mills, 117 Ohio St. 114, 157 N.E. 488, 489, 54 A. L.R. 1220.

New Trial Paper
In English practice. A paper containing a list of causes in which rules nisi have been obtained for a new trial, or for entering a verdict in place of a nonsuit, or for entering judgment non obstante veredicto, or for otherwise varying or setting aside proceedings which have taken place at nisi priâ. These are called on for argument in the order in which they stand in the paper, on days appointed by the judges for the purpose. Brown.

Public Trial
A trial held in public, in the presence of the public, or in a place accessible and open to the attendance of the public at large, or of persons who may properly be admitted. The requirement of a public trial is for the benefit of the accused; that the public may see, he is fairly dealt with and not unjustly condemned, and that the presence of interested spectators may keep his triers keenly alive to a sense of their responsibility and to the importance of their functions; and the requirement is fairly observed if, without partiality or favoritism, a reasonable proportion of the public is suffered to attend, notwithstanding that those persons whose presence could be of no service to the accused, and who would only be drawn thither by a prurient curiosity, are excluded altogether. Cooley, Const.Lim. *312. And see People v. Hall, 64 N.Y.S. 433, 51 App.Div. 57; Commonwealth v. Trinkle, 124 A. 191, 192, 279 Pa. 564; People v. Greeson, 203 N.W. 141, 149, 230 Mich. 124.

Trial at Nisi Prius
In practice. The ordinary kind of trial which takes place at the sittings, assizes, or circuit, before a single judge. 2 Tidd, Pr. 751, 819.

Trial by Certificate
A form of trial allowed in cases where the evidence of the person certifying was the only proper criterion of the point in dispute. Under such circumstances, the issue might be determined by the certificate alone, because, if sent to a jury, it would be conclusive upon them, and therefore their intervention was unnecessary. Tomlins.

Trial by Fire
See Ordeal.

Trial by Grand Assize
A peculiar mode of trial allowed in writs of right. See Assize; Grand Assize.

Trial by Inspection or Examination
A form of trial in which the judges of the court, upon the testimony of their own senses, decide the point in dispute.

Trial by Jury
A trial in which the issues of fact are to be determined by the verdict of a jury of twelve men, duly selected, impaneled, and sworn. The terms "jury" and "trial by jury" were used at the adoption of the constitution, and always, it is believed, before that time, and almost always since, in a single sense. A jury for the trial of a cause was a body of twelve men, described as upright, well-qualified, and lawful men, disinterested and impartial, not of kin nor personal dependents of either of the parties, having their homes within the jurisdictional limits of the court, drawn and selected by officers free from all bias in favor of or against either party, duly impaneled under the direction of a competent court, sworn to render a true verdict according to the law and the evidence given them, who, after hearing the parties and their evidence, and receiving the instructions of the court relative to the law involved in the trial, and deliberating, when necessary, apart from all extraneous influences, must return their unanimous verdict upon the issue submitted to them. State v. McClear, 11 Nev. 60. And see Gunn v. Union R. Co., 23 R.I. 289, 49 A. 999; State v. Harney, 168 Mo. 167, 67 S.W. 620, 57 L.R.A. 846; Branham v. Commonwealth, 209 Ky. 734, 273 S.W. 489, 490; Davis v. Central States Fire Ins. Co., 121 Kan. 69, 245 P. 1062, 1063; N. Wagman & Co. v. Schafer Motor Freight Service, 167 Misc. 681, 4 N.Y.S.2d 526, 529.

In a federal court a trial by jury as understood and applied at common law and includes all the essential elements as they were recognized in this country and England when the constitution was adopted, including a jury of 12 men, neither more nor less. U.S.C.A.Const.Amend. 7; Ransom v. Staso Milling Co., D.C.Vt., 2 F.R.D. 128, 130, 131.

A right to a "trial by jury" when given by a constitution means a trial by a jury of 12, but where the right to a jury trial is not given by the constitution, the legislature may fix the number of jurors at less than 12. Doyle v.
Police Court of City of Niagara Falls, 177 Misc. 359, 30 N. Y.S.2d 324, 325. And is right to a jury trial in such cases as it existed at time of adoption of constitution. Blum v. Fresh Grown Preserve Corporation, N.Y., 292 N.Y. 241, 54 N.E.2d 809, 810.

Trial by Proviso
A proceeding allowed where the plaintiff in an action desists from prosecuting his suit, and does not bring it to trial in convenient time. The defendant, in such case, may take out the venire facias to the sheriff, containing these words, "proviso quod," etc., i.e., provided that. If plaintiff take out any writ to that purpose, the sheriff shall summon but one jury on them both. This is called "going to trial by proviso." Jacob, tit. "Proviso."

Trial by the Record
A form of trial resorted to where issue is taken upon a plea of nulliel record, in which case the party asserting the existence of a record as pleaded is bound to produce it in court on a day assigned. If the record is forthcoming, the issue is tried by inspection and examination of it. If the record is not produced, judgment is given for his adversary. 3 Bl. Comm. 330.

Trial by Wager of Battel
See Wager of Battel.

Trial by Wager of Law
In old English law. A method of trial, where the defendant, coming into court, made oath that he did not owe the claim demanded of him, and eleven of his neighbors, as compurgators, swore that they believed him to speak the truth. 3 Bl. Comm. 343. See Wager of Law.

Trial by Witnesses
The name "trial per testes" has been used for a trial without the intervention of a jury, is the only method known to the civil law, and is adopted by depositions in chancery. The judge is thus left to form, in his own breast, his sentence upon the credit of the witnesses examined. But it is very rarely used at common law. Tomlins.

Trial De Novo
A new trial or retrial had in an appellate court in which the whole case is gone into as if no trial whatever had been had in the court below. See Karcher v. Green, 32 A. 225, 8 Houst. (Del.) 163; Ex parte Morales, Tex.Cr.App., 53 S.W. 108; Carlson v. Avery Co., 196 Ill.App. 262, 272; Bardwell v. Riverside Oil and Refining Co., 139 Okl. 26, 280 P. 1083, 1085.

Trial Jury
See Jury.

Trial List
A list of cases marked down for trial for any one term.

Trial With Assessors
Admiralty actions involving nautical questions, e.g., actions of collision, are generally tried in England before a judge, with Trinity Masters sitting as assessors. Rosc. Adm. 179.

TRIATIO IBI SEMPER DEBET FIERI, UBI JURABOARES MELIOREM POSSUNT HABERE NOTIATIAM. Trial ought always to be had where the jurors can have the best information. 7 Coke, I.

TRIBAL LANDS. Lands of Indian reservation which are not occupied by individual Indians and are the unallotted or common lands of the nation. Tuscarora Nation of Indians v. Williams, 79 Misc. 445, 141 N.Y.S. 207, 208.

Land allotted in severalty to a restricted Indian is no longer part of the "reservation" nor is it "tribal land" but the virtual fee is in the allottee with certain restrictions on the right of alienation. United States v. Oklahoma Gas & Electric Co., C.C.A.Okl., 127 F.2d 349, 353.

TRIBUERE. Lat. In the civil law. To give; to distribute.

TRIPLICACION. L. Fr. In old pleading. A rejoinder in pleading; the defendant's answer to the plaintiff's replication. Britt. c. 77.

TRIPLICATIO. Lat. In the civil law. The reply of the plaintiff to the rejoinder of the defendant. It corresponds to the surrejoinder of common law. Inst. 4, 14; Bract. 1. 5, t. 5, c.

TRIPPING. In Saxon law. One of the territorial divisions of England, being the third part of a county, and comprising three or more hundreds. Within the trithing there was a court held (called "trithing-mote") which resembled the court-leet, but was inferior to the county court.

TRITHING–MOTE. The court held for a trithing or riding.

TRITHING–REEVE. The officer who superintended a trithing or riding.

TRIUMVIRI CAPITALES. Lat. In Roman law. Officers who had charge of the prison, through whose intervention punishments were inflicted. They had eight licitors to execute their orders. Vicat, Voc. Jur.

TRIVERBIAL DAYS. In the civil law. Juridical days; days allowed to the praetor for deciding causes; days on which the praetor might speak the three characteristic words of his office, viz., do, dico, addico. Calvin. Otherwise called "dies fasti." 3 Bl.Comm. 424, and note u.

TRIVIAL. Trifling; inconsiderable; of small worth or importance. In equity, a demurrer will lie to a bill on the ground of the triviality of the matter in dispute, as being below the dignity of the court. 4 Bouv.Inst. no. 4237.

TRONAGE. In English law. A customary duty or toll for weighing wool; so called because it was weighed by a common trona, or beam. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 12.

TRONATOR. A weigher of wool. Cowell.

TROOPS. Within railroad land grant acts, requiring the railroads to transport free from toll or other charge troops of the United States, and in the land grant equalization agreements, whereby the railroads were to transport such troops at half rates, means soldiers collectively, a body of soldiers, and does not include discharged soldiers or military prisoners, rejected applicants for enlistment returning home from recruiting depots, accepted applicants for enlistment going to recruiting depots, retired soldiers or soldiers on furloughs, traveling as individuals and not as a body. United States v. Union Pac. R. Co., 39 S.Ct. 294, 295, 249 U.S. 354, 63 L.Ed. 643; Southern Pac. Co. v. U. S., 52 S.Ct. 324, 325, 285 U.S. 240, 76 L.Ed. 736. Or army engineers, engaged in improvement of rivers and harbors. Southern Pac. Co. v. U. S., 52 S.Ct. 324, 326, 285 U.S. 240, 76 L.Ed. 736.

TROPHY MONEY. Money formerly collected and raised in London, and the several counties of England, towards providing harness and maintenance for the militia, etc.

TROUPE. A part of any company of entertainers, joined together for the purpose of traveling and acting, according to a certain known and fixed order or dragnet; as "the troupe of actors." Hall v. Cartwright, 66 Vt. 227, 24 Am.Rep. 185; see Act of June 3, 1837, 4 & 5 Willm. IV., ch. 67, c. 1 (2 of 3 Stat. 398), for the establishment of an organization of travelling actors under the name of a troupe, to have the exclusive right of performing and playing to the public upon the lands, lakes, and rivers of the State of New York. 4 & 5 Willm. IV., ch. 67, c. 1 (2 of 3 Stat. 398).

TRUE. Conformable to fact; correct; exact; actual; genuine; honest. See First State Bank of Teague v. Hadden, Tex.Civ.App., 158 S.W. 1168, 1170.

In one sense, that only is "true" which is conformable to the actual state of things. In that sense, a statement is "untrue" which does not express things exactly as they are. But in another and broader sense the word 'true' is often used as a synonym of "honest," "sincere," hot "fraudulent." Zolintakis v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of United States, C.C.A.Utah, 108 F.2d 902, 905; Moulton v. American Life Ins. Co., 4 S.Ct. 466, 111 U.S. 335, 28 L.Ed. 447.
TRUE ADMISSION

A fiduciary relation with respect to property, subjecting person by whom the property is held to equitable duties to deal with the property for the benefit of another person which arises as the result of a manifestation of an intention to create it. Goodenough v. Union Guardian Trust Co., 267 N.W. 772, 773, 774, 275 Mich. 698. An obligation on a person arising out of confidence reposed in him to apply property faithfully and according to such confidence; as being in nature of deposition by which proprietor transfers to another property of subject intrusted, not that it should remain with him, but that it should be applied to certain uses for the behoof of third party. MacKenzie v. Union Guardian Trust Co., 262 Mich. 563, 247 N.W. 914, 919; Gurnett v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. of New York, 356 Ill. 612, 191 N.E. 250, 252.

A "trust" can be created for any purpose which is not illegal, and which is not against public policy. Collins v. Lyon, Inc., 181 Va. 230, 24 S.E.2d 572, 579.

Essential elements of "trust" are designated beneficiary and trustee, fund sufficiently identified to enable title to pass to trustee, and actual delivery to trustee with intention of passing title. City Bank Farmers' Trust Co. v. Charity Organization Soc. of City of New York, 238 App. Div. 720, 265 N.Y.S. 267.

Accessory trust. In Scotch law, equivalent to "active" or "special" trust. See infra.

Active trust. One which imposes upon the trustee the duty of taking active measures in the execution of the trust, as, where property is conveyed to trustees with directions to sell and distribute the proceeds among creditors of the grantor; distinguished from a "passive" or "dry" trust. In re Buch's Estate, 278 Pa. 185, 122 A. 239, 240; Welch v. Northern Bank & Trust Co., 100 Wash. 349, 170 P. 1029, 1032.

Cestui que trust. The person for whose benefit a trust is created or who is to enjoy the income or the avails of it.

Charitable trusts. Trusts designed for the benefit of a class or the public generally. They are essentially different from private trusts in that the beneficiaries are uncertain. Bauer v. Myers, C. C.A.Kan., 244 F. 902, 911.

Complete voluntary trust. One completely created, the subject-matter being designated, the trustee and beneficiary being named, and the limitations and trusts being fully and perfectly declared. In re Leigh's Estate, 186 Iowa 931, 173 N.W. 143, 146.

Constructive trust. A trust raised by construction of law, or arising by operation of law, as distinguished from an express trust. Wherever the circumstances of a transaction are such that the person who takes the legal estate in property cannot also enjoy the beneficial interest without necessarily violating some established principle of equity, the court will immediately raise a constructive trust, and fasten it upon the conscience of the legal owner, so as to convert him into a trustee for the parties who in equity are entitled to the beneficial enjoyment. Hill, Trustees, 116; 1 Spence, Eq. Jur. 511; Nester v. Gross, 66 Minn. 371, TRUNK RAILWAY. See Railway.

TRUST.

1. In General

A right of property, real or personal, held by one party for the benefit of another. See Goodwin v. McMinn, 193 Pa. 646, 44 A. 1094, 74 Am.St. Rep. 703; Boyce v. Mosely, 102 S.C. 361, 86 S.E. 771, 773; King v. Richardson, C.C.A.N.C., 136 F.2d 849, 856, 857. A confidence reposed in one person, who is termed trustee, for the benefit of another, who is called the cestui que trust, respecting property which is held by the trustee for the benefit of the cestui que trust. State ex rel. Wirt v. Superior Court for Spokane County, 10 Wash.2d 362, 116 P.2d 752, 755. Any arrangement whereby property is transferred with intention that it be administered by trustee for another's benefit. Raffo v. Foltz, 106 Cal.App. 51, 288 P. 884, 886.

See, also, Involuntary Trust infra.

"Constructive trusts" do not arise by agreement or from intention, but by operation of law, and fraud, active or constructive, is their essential element. Actual fraud is not necessary, but such a trust will arise whenever circumstances under which property was acquired made it inequitable that it should be retained by him who holds the legal title. Constructive trusts have been said to arise through the application of the doctrine of equitable estoppel, or unaes the broad doctrine that equity regards and treats as done what in good conscience ought to be done, and such trusts are also known as "trusts ex maleficio" or "ex delicto" or "involuntary trusts" and their forms and varieties are practically without limit, being raised by courts of equity whenever it becomes necessary to prevent a failure of justice. Union Guardian Trust Co. v. Emery, 292 Mich. 394, 290 N.W. 841, 845.

Directory trust. One which is not completely and finally settled by the instrument creating it, but only defined in its general purpose and to be carried into detail according to later specific directions.

Dry trust. One which merely vests the legal title in the trustee, and does not require the performance of any active duty on his part to carry out the trust. In re Shaw's Estate, 198 Cal. 352, 246 P. 48, 52; Blackburn v. Blackburn, 167 Ky. 113, 180 S.W. 48, 49.

Educational trusts. Trusts for the founding, endowing, and supporting schools for the advancement of all useful branches of learning, which are not strictly private. Richards v. Wilson, 185 Ind. 335, 112 N.E. 780, 794.

Executed trust. A trust of which the scheme has in the outset been completely declared. Adams, Eq. 151. A trust in which the estates and interest in the subject-matter of the trust are completely limited and defined by the instrument creating the trust, and require no further instruments to complete them. Bisq.Eq. 20; Pilot v. Landon, 46 N.J.Eq. 310, 19 A. 25; Egerton v. Brownlow, 4 H.L.Cas. 210;Mattson v. U. S. Ensilage Harvester Co., 171 Minn. 237, 213 N.W. 893, 895.

Executory trust. One which requires the execution of some further instrument, or the doing of some further act, on the part of the creator of the trust or of the trustee, towards its complete creation or full effect. Martling v. Martling, 55 N.J.Eq. 771, 39 A. 203; Carradine v. Carradine, 33 Miss. 729; In re Fair's Estate, 132 Cal. 523, 60 P. 442, 84 Am.St.Rep. 70; Pilot v. Landon, 46 N. J.Eq. 310, 19 A. 25.

Express active trust. Where will confers upon executor authority to generally manage property of estate and pay over net income to devisees or legatees, such authority creates an "express active trust." In re Thomas' Estate, 17 Wash.2d 674, 136 P.2d 1017, 1020, 147 A.L.R. 598.

Express private passive trust has been defined as existing where land is conveyed to or held by one person in trust for another, without any power being expressly or impliedly given trustee to take actual possession of land or exercise acts of ownership over it, except by beneficiary's direction. Elvins v. Seestedt, 141 Fla. 266, 193 So. 54, 57, 126 A.L.R. 1001.

Express trust. A trust created or declared in express terms, and usually in writing, as distinguished from one inferred by the law from the conduct or dealings of the parties. State v. Campbell, 59 Kan. 246, 52 P. 454; Kaphan v. Toney, Tenn.Ch., 58 S.W. 913; Sanford v. Van Pelt, 314 Mo. 175, 282 S.W. 1022, 1030; Holsapple v. Schrontz, 65 Ind.App. 390, 117 N.E. 547, 549.

Imperfect trust. An executory trust, (which see; ) and see Executed Trust.

Implied trust. A trust raised or created by implication of law; a trust implied or presumed from circumstances. Wilson v. Welles, 79 Minn. 53, 81 N.W. 549; Holsapple v. Schrontz, 65 Ind. App. 390, 117 N.E. 547, 549; Springer v. Springer, 144 Md. 465, 125 A. 162, 166.

Instrumental trust. See Ministerial Trusts, infra.

Involuntary trust. "Involuntary" or "constructive" trusts embrace all those instances in which a trust is raised by the doctrines of equity, for the purpose of working out justice in the most efficient manner, when there is no intention of the parties to create a trust relation. This class of trusts may usually be referred to fraud, either actual or constructive, as an essential element. Bank v. Kimball Milling Co., 1 S.D. 388, 47 N.W. 402, 36 Am.St.Rep. 739.

Massachusetts or business trusts. See "Trust Estates as Business Companies."

Ministerial trusts. (Also called "instrumental trusts."") Those which demand no further exercise of reason or understanding than every intelligent agent must necessarily employ; as to convey an estate. They are a species of special trusts, distinguished from discretionary trusts, which necessarily require much exercise of the understanding. 2 Bouv.Inst. no. 1896.

Naked trust. A dry or passive trust; one which requires no action on the part of the trustee, beyond turning over money or property to the cestui que trust. Cerri v. Akron-People's Telephone Co., D.C.Ohio, 219 F. 285, 292.

Passive trust. A trust as to which the trustee has no active duty to perform. Holmes v. Walter, 118 Wis. 409, 95 N.W. 380, 62 L.R.A. 986; Dixon v. Dixon, 123 Me. 470, 124 A. 198, 199.

Precatory trust. Where words employed in a will or other instrument do not amount to a positive command or to a distinct testamentary disposition, but are terms of entreaty, request, recommendation, or expectation, they are termed "precatory words," and from such words the law will raise a trust, called a "precatory trust," to carry out the wishes of the testator or grantor. See Bohon v. Barrett, 79 Ky. 378; Hunt v. Hunt, 18 Wash. 14, 50 P. 578; Aldrich v. Aldrich, 172 Mass. 101, 51 N.E. 449.

Private trust. One established or created for the benefit of a certain designated individual or individuals, or a known person or class of persons, clearly identified or capable of identification by the terms of the instrument creating the trust; as distinguished from trusts for public institutions or charitable uses. See Pennoyer v. Wadhams, 20 Or. 274, 25 P. 720, 11 L.R.A. 210; Doyle v. Whalen, 87 Me. 414, 32 A. 1022, 31 L.R.A. 118; Brooks v. Belfast, 90 Me. 318, 38 A. 222; Bauer v. Myers, C.C.A.Kan., 244 F. 902, 911.

Proprietary trust. In Scotch law, a naked, dry, or passive trust. See supra.

Public trust. One constituted for the benefit either of the public at large or of some considerable portion of it answering a particular description; public trusts and charitable trusts may be considered in general as synonymous expressions. Lewin, Trusts, 20; Bauer v. Myers, C.C.A.Kan., 244 F. 902, 911.

Resulting trust. One that arises by implication of law, or by the operation and construction of equity, and which is established as consonant to the presumed intention of the parties as gathered from the nature of the transaction. It arises where the legal estate in property is disposed of, conveyed, or transferred, but the intent appears or is inferred from the terms of the disposition, or from the accompanying facts and circumstances, that the beneficial interest is not to go or be enjoyed with the legal title. Lafkowitz v. Jackson, C.C.A.Alo., 13 F.2d 370, 372. See Sanders v. Steele, 124 Ala. 415, 26 So. 882; Farwell v. Wilcox, 73 Okl. 230, 175 P. 936, 938, 4 A.L.R. 156; Cummings v. Cummings, 55 Cal.App. 433, 203 P. 452, 455.

Savings bank trust. A Totten trust.

Secret trusts. Where a testator gives property to a person, on a verbal promise by the legatee or devisee that he will hold it in trust for another person. Sweet.

Shifting trust. An express trust which is so settled that it may operate in favor of beneficiaries additional to, or substituted for, those first named, upon specified contingencies. Civ.Code Ga.1910, § 3734.

Simple trust. A simple trust corresponds with the ancient use, and arises where property is simply vested in one person for the use of another, and the nature of the trust, not being qualified by the settlor, is left to the construction of law. Perkins v. Brinkley, 133 N.C. 154, 45 S.E. 541; Dods-son v. Ball, 60 Pa. 500, 100 Am.Dec. 586.

Special trust. One in which a trustee is interposed for the execution of some purpose particularly pointed out, and is not, as in case of a simple trust, a mere passive depository of the estate, but is required to exert himself actively in the execution of the settlor's intention; as, where a conveyance is made to trustees upon trust to convey, or to sell for the payment of debts. Lew.Tr. 3, 16.

Special trusts have been divided into (1) ministerial (or instrumental) and (2) discretionary. The former, such as demand no further exercise of reason or understanding than every intelligent agent must necessarily employ; the latter, such as cannot be duly administered without the application of a certain degree of prudence and judgment. 2 Bouv.Inst. no. 1896; Perkins v. Brinkley, 133 N.C. 154, 45 S.E. 541.

Spendthrift trust. See Spendthrift.

Totten trust. A trust created by the deposit by one person of his own money in his own name as a trustee for another and it is a tentative trust revocable at will until the depositor dies or completes the gift in his lifetime by some unequivocal act or declaration such as delivery of the pass book or notice to the beneficiary and if the depositor dies before the beneficiary without revocation or some decisive act or declaration of disaffirmance the presumption arises that an absolute trust was created as to the balance on hand at the death of the depositor. Murray v. Brooklyn Sav. Bank, 258 App.Div. 132, 15 N.Y.S.2d 915, 917; In re Totten, 179 N.Y. 112, 71 N.E. 748, 70 L.R.A. 711, 1 Ann. Cas. 900.

Transgressive trust. A name sometimes applied to a trust which transgresses or violates the rule against perpetuities. See Pulitizer v. Livingston, 89 Me. 359, 36 A. 635.

Trust allotments. Allotments to Indians, in which a certificate or trust patent is issued declaring that the United States will hold the land for a designated period in trust for the allottee. U. S. v. Bowling, 41 S.Ct. 561, 562, 256 U.S. 484, 65 L.Ed. 1054.

Trust company. A corporation formed for the purpose of taking, accepting, and executing all such trusts as may be lawfully committed to it, and acting as testamentary trustee, trustee under deeds of settlement or for married women, executor, guardian, etc. To these functions are sometimes (but not necessarily) added the business of acting as fiscal agent for corporations, attending to the registration and transfer of their stock and bonds, serving as trustee for their bond or mortgage creditors, and transacting a general banking and loan business. See Venner v. Farmers' L. & T. Co., 54 App.Div. 271, 66 N.Y.Supp. 773; Mercantile Nat. Bank v. New York, 7 S.Ct. 826, 121 U.S. 138, 30 L.Ed. 895; Loudoun Nat. Bank of Leesburg v. Continental Trust Co., 164 Va. 536, 180 S. E. 548, 551.

Trust deed. (1) A species of mortgage given to a trustee for the purpose of securing a numerous class of creditors, as the bondholders of a railroad corporation, with power to foreclose and sell on failure of the payment of their bonds, notes, or other claims. (2) In some of the states, and in the District of Columbia, a trust deed or deed of trust is a security resembling a mortgage, being a conveyance of lands to trustees to secure the payment of a debt, with a power of sale upon default, and upon a trust to apply the net proceeds to paying the debt and to turn over the surplus to the grantor. Dean v. Smith, 53 N.D. 123, 204 N.W. 987, 994; Guaranty Title & Trust Co. v. Thompson, 93 Fla. 983, 113 So. 117, 120.

A “trust deed” on real estate as security for a bond issue is, in effect, a mortgage on property executed by the mortgagor to a third person as trustee to hold as security for the mortgage debt as evidenced by the bonds, for the benefit of the purchasers of the bonds as lenders. Marden v. Elks Club, 138 Fla. 707, 190 So. 40, 42.

Trust deposit. Where money or property is deposited to be kept intact and not commingled with other funds or property of bank and is to be returned in kind to depositor or devoted to particular purpose or requirement of depositor or payment of particular debts or obligations of depositor. Also called “special deposit”. Maurello v. Broadway Bank & Trust Co. of Paterson, 114 N.J.L. 167, 176 A. 391, 394. See, also “Deposit.”

Trust estate. This term may mean either the estate of the trustee,—that is, the legal title,—or the estate of the beneficiary, or the corpus of the property which is the subject of the trust. See Cooper v. Cooper, 5 N.J.Eq. 9; Farmers’ L. & T. Co. v. Carroll, 5 Barb. (N.Y.) 643.

Trust ex delicto. Trust ex maleficio, which title see, infra.

Trust ex maleficio. A species of constructive trust arising out of some fraud, misconduct, or breach of faith on the part of the person to be charged as trustee, which renders it an equitable necessity that a trust should be implied. See Rogers v. Richards, 67 Kan. 706, 74 P. 255; Kent v. Dean, 128 Ala. 600, 30 So. 543; Chanowsky v. Friedman, Tex.Civ.App., 108 S.W.2d 752, 754. See, also, Constructive Trust, supra.

Trust fund. A fund held by a trustee for the specific purposes of the trust; in a more general sense, a fund which, legally or equitably, is subject to be devoted to a particular purpose and cannot or should not be diverted therefrom. In this sense it is often said that the assets of a corporation are a “trust fund” for the payment of its debts. See Henderson v. Indiana Trust Co., 143 Ind. 561, 40 N.E. 516; In re Beard’s Estate, 7 Wyo. 104, 50 Pac. 226, 38 L.R.A. 860, 75 Am.St. Rep. 882; Spencer v. Smith, C.C.A.Colo., 201 F. 647, 652; Thelune v. Weise, 132 Wash. 208, 231 P. 954, 955, 38 A.L.R. 94.

Trust fund doctrine. In substance, that where corporation transfers all its assets with a view to going out of business and nothing is left with which to pay debts, transferee is charged with notice of the circumstances of the transaction, and takes the assets subject to an equitable lien for the unpaid debts of the transferring company; the property of a corporation being a fund subject to be first applied to the payment of debts. Meikle v. Export Lumber Co., C.C.A.O., 67 F.2d 301, 304.

Under such doctrine, if insolvent corporation’s assets are distributed among its stockholders before its debts are paid, each stockholder is liable to creditors for full amount received by him. Scott v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.8, 117 F.2d 36, 39.

Trust in invitum. A constructive trust imposed by equity, contrary to the trustee’s intention and will, upon property in his hands. Sanford v. Hamner, 115 Ala. 406, 22 So. 117.

Trust legacy. See Legacy.

Trust receipt. Document in which is expressed security transaction, whereunder the lender having no prior title in the goods on which the lien is to be given, and not having possession which remains in the borrower, lends his money to the borrower on security of the goods, which the borrower is privileged to sell clear of the lien on agreement to pay all or part of the proceeds of the sale to the lender. In re Boswell, C.C.A.Cal., 96 F.2d 239, 242.

A term specifically applied to a written instrument whereby banker having advanced money for purchase of imported merchandise and having taken title in his own name, delivers possession to importer on agreement in writing to hold merchandise in trust for banker till he is paid. Simmons v. Northeastern Finance Corporation, 271 Mass. 285, 171 N.E. 643, 644.

Voluntary trust. An obligation arising out of a personal confidence reposed in, and voluntarily accepted by, one for the benefit of another, as distinguished from an "involuntary" trust, which is created by operation of law. Civ.Code Cal. §§ 2216, 2217. According to another use of the term, "voluntary" trusts are such as are made in favor of a volunteer, that is, a person who gives nothing in exchange for the trust, but receives it as a pure gift; and in this use the term is distinguished from "trusts for value," the latter being such as are in favor of purchasers, mortgagees, etc. A "voluntary trust" is an equitable gift, and in order to be enforceable by the beneficiaries must be complete. Cameron v. Cameron, 96 Okl. 98, 220 P. 889, 890; Logan v. Ryan, 68 Cal.App. 448, 229 P. 993, 996.

The difference between a "gift inter vivos" and a "voluntary trust" is that, in a gift, the thing itself with title passes to the donee, while, in a voluntary trust, the actual title passes to a cestui que trust while the legal title is retained by the settlor, to be held by him for the purposes of the trust or is by the settlor transferred to another to hold for the purposes of the trust. Allen v. Hendrick, 104 Or. 202, 206 P. 733, 740.

Voting trust. See that title.

2. Constitutional and Statutory Law

An association or organization of persons or corporations having the intention and power, or the tendency, to create a monopoly, control production, interfere with the free course of trade or transportation, or to fix and regulate the supply and the price of commodities.
TRUST

In the history of economic development, the "trust" was originally a device by which several corporations engaged in the same general line of business might combine for their mutual advantage, in the direction of eliminating duplicate competition, controlling the output of their commodity, and regulating and maintaining its price, but at the same time preserving their separate individual existence, and without any consolidation or merger. This device was the erection of a central committee or board, composed, perhaps, of the presidents or general managers of the different corporations, and the transfer to them of a majority of the stock in each of the corporations, to be held "in trust" for the several stockholders so assigning their holdings. These stockholders received in return "trust certificates" showing that they were entitled to receive the dividends on their assigned stock, though the voting power of it had passed to the trustees. This last feature enabled the trustees or committee to elect all the directors of all the corporations, and through them the officers, and thereby to exercise an absolutely controlling influence over the policy and operations of each constituent company, to the ends and with the purposes above mentioned. Though the "trust," in this sense, is now seldom if ever resorted to as a form of corporate organization, having given place to the "holding corporation" and other devices, the word has become current in statute laws as having given place to the "holding corporation" and other devices, the word has become current in statute laws as

In a looser sense the term "trust" is applied to any combination of establishments in the same line of business for securing the same ends by holding the individual interests of each subservient to a common authority for the common interests of all. Mallinckrodt Chemical Works v. State of Missouri, 35 S.Ct. 671, 673, 238 U.S. 41, 59 L.Ed. 1192.

TRUST ESTATES AS BUSINESS COMPANIES. A practice originating in Massachusetts of vesting a business or certain real estate in a group of trustees, who manage it for the benefit of the beneficiaries, is called a "trust estate." The title to property for the benefit of one or more others. In this sense, directors of a business or certain real estate in a group of trustees, who manage it for the benefit of the beneficiaries, is called a "trust estate." The title to property for the benefit of one or more others. In this sense, directors of

Joint Trustees

Two or more persons who are intrusted with property for the benefit of one or more others.

Judicial Trustee

A "judicial trustee," as distinguished from a conventional trustee, is an officer of a chancery court whose acts are generally limited and defined by familiar and settled rules and procedure. Kramme v. Mewshaw, 147 Md. 535, 128 A. 468, 472.

Public Trustee

An act of 1906 referring to England and Wales provides for the appointment of a public trustee to administer estates of small value, to act as custodian trustee, or as ordinary trustee or judicial trustee, or to administer the property of a convict under the Forfeiture Act.

Quasi Trustee

A person who reaps a benefit from a breach of trust, and so becomes answerable as a trustee. Lewin, Trusts (4th Ed.) 592, 638.

Testamentary Trustee

A trustee appointed by or acting under a will; one appointed to carry out a trust created by a will. The term does not ordinarily include an executor or an administrator with the will annexed, or a guardian, except when they act in the execution of a trust created by the will and which is separable from their functions as executors, etc. See In re Hazard, 51 Hun, 201, 4 N.Y.Supp. 701; In re Valentine's Estate, 1 Misc. 491, 23 N.Y. Supp. 289; In re Hawley, 104 N.Y. 250, 10 N.E. 352.
Trustee Acts

The statutes 13 & 14 Vic. c. 60, passed in 1850, and 15 & 16 Vic. c. 55, passed in 1852, enabling the court of chancery, without bill filed, to appoint new trustees in lieu of any who, on account of death, lunacy, absence, or otherwise, are unable or unwilling to act as such; and also to make vesting orders by which legal estates and rights may be transferred from the old trustee or trustees to the new trustee or trustees so appointed. Mozley & Whitley.

Trustee Ex Maleficio

A person who, being guilty of wrongful or fraudulent conduct, is held by equity to the duty and liability of a trustee, in relation to the subject-matter, to prevent him from profiting by his own wrong. Rice v. Braden, 243 Pa. 141, 89 A. 877, 880. Alabama Water Co. v. City of Anniston, 227 Ala. 579, 151 So. 457, 458.

Trustee in Bankruptcy

A person in whom the property of a bankrupt is vested in trust for the creditors.

Trustee Process

The name given, in the New England states, to the process of garnishment or foreign attachment.

Trustee Relief Acts

The statute 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96, passed in 1847, and statute 12 & 13 Vict. c. 74, passed in 1849, by which a trustee is enabled to pay money into court, in cases where a difficulty arises respecting the title to the trust fund. Mozley & Whitley.

TRUSTER. In Scotch law. The maker or creator of a trust.

TRUSTIS. In old European law. Trust; faith; confidence; fidelity.

TRUTH. There are three conceptions as to what constitutes "truth": Agreement of thought and reality; eventual verification; and consistency of thought with itself. Memphis Telephone Co. v. Cumberland Telephone & Telegraph Co., C.C.A. Tenn., 231 F. 835, 842. For "Fact" and "truth" distinguished, see Fact.

TRY. To examine judicially; to examine and investigate a controversy, by the legal method called "trial," for the purpose of determining the issues it involves.

TSAR. The better, though perhaps less common spelling of "czar" (q. v.).

TUAS RES TIBI HABETO. Lat. Have or take your things to yourself. The form of words by which, according to the old Roman law, a man divorced his wife. Calvin.

TUB. In mercantile law. A measure of wine or oil, containing four hogsheads.

TUB-MAN. In English law. A barrister who has a preaudience in the exchequer, and also one who has a particular place in court, is so called. Brown.

TUCKER ACT. The act of March 3, 1887, relating to the jurisdiction of the court of claims. Garl. & Ralston, Fed. Pr. 413.

TUERTO. In Spanish law. Tort. Las Partidas, pt. 7, tit. 6, 1, 5.

TUG. A steam vessel built for towing; synonymous with "tow-boat."

TUITION. The act or business of teaching the various branches of learning. State ex rel. Veeder v. State Board of Education, 97 Mont. 121, 33 P.2d 516, 522.

TULLIANUM. Lat. In Roman law. That part of a prison which was under ground. Supposed to be so called from Servius Tullius, who built that part of the first prison in Rome. Adams, Rom. Ant. 290.

TUMBREL. A castigatory, trebucket, or ducking-stool, anciently used as a punishment for common scolds.

TUMULTUOUS PETITIONING. Under St. 13 Car. II. St. 1, c. 5, this was a misdemeanor, and consisted in more than twenty persons signing any petition to the crown or either house of parliament for the alteration of matters established by law in church or state, unless the contents thereof had been approved by three justices, or the majority of the grand jury at assizes or quarter sessions. No petition could be delivered by more than ten persons. 4 B1.Comm. 147; Mozley & Whitley.

TUN. A measure of wine or oil, containing four hogsheads.

TUNING. The term as used with reference to signaling by electro-magnetic waves, or wireless telegraphy, means the bringing of two or more electrical circuits into resonance, or the adjustment of capacity and inductance to secure the time-period vibration or wave length desired. The wave length assigned to a station might be called its "tune." National Electric Signaling Co. v. Telefunken Wireless Telegraph Co. of United States, C.C.A.Pa., 208 F. 679, 695.

TUNGREVE. A town-reeve or bailiff. Cowell.

TUNNAGE. A duty in England anciently due upon all wines imported, over and above the prisage and butlerage. 2 Steph.Com. 628.
TURBA

TURBA. Lat. In the civil law. A multitude; a crowd or mob; a tumultuous assembly of persons. Said to consist of ten or fifteen, at the least. Calvin.

TURBARY. Turbarry, or common of turbarry, is the right or liberty of digging turf upon another man’s ground. Brown.

TURF AND TWIG. A piece of turf, or a twig or a bough, were delivered to the feoffor in making livery of seisin. 2 Bla.Com. 315.

TURN, or TOURN. The great court-leet of the county, as the old county court was the court-baron. Of this the sheriff is judge, and the court is incident to his office; wherefore it is called the “sheriff’s tourn;” and it had its name originally from the sheriff making a turn of circuit about his shire, and holding this court in each respective hundred. Wharton.

TURN KEY JOB. In oil drilling industry a job wherein driller of oil well undertakes to furnish everything and does all work required to complete well, place it on production, and turn it over ready to turn the key and start oil running into tanks. Retsal Drilling Co. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.Tex., 127 F.2d 355, 357.

TURNED TO A RIGHT. This phrase means that a person whose estate is divested by usurpation must have recourse to an action, either possessor or drioturnal. Mozley & Whiteley.

TURNKEY. A person, under the superintendence of a jailer, who has the charge of the keys of the prison, for the purpose of opening and fastening the doors.

TURNOUT. A short side-track on a railroad which may be occupied by one train while another is passing on the main track; a siding. Philadelphia v. R. Co., 133 Pa. 134, 19 A. 356; Indiana Rys. & Light Co. v. City of Kokomo, 183 Ind. 543, 108 N.E. 771, 772.

TURNPIKE. A gate set across a road, to stop travelers and carriages until toll is paid for the privilege of passage thereon.

TURNPIKE ROADS. These are roads on which parties have by law a right to erect gates and bars, for the purpose of taking toll, and of refusing the permission to pass along them to all persons who refuse to pay. Northam Bridge Co. v. London Ry. Co., 6 Mees. & W. 428. A public highway, established by public authority for public use, and is to be regarded as a public easement, and not as private property. The only difference between this and a common highway is that, instead of being made at the public expense in the first instance, it is authorized and laid out by public authority, and made at the expense of individuals in the first instance; and the cost of construction and maintenance is reimbursed by a toll, levied by public authority for the purpose. Corn. v. Wilkinson, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 175, 26 Am. Dec. 654.

TURNTABLE DOCTRINE. Also termed attractive nuisance doctrine. This doctrine requires the owner of premises not to attract or lure children into unsuspected danger or great bodily harm, by keeping thereon attractive machinery or dangerous instrumentalities in an exposed and unguarded condition, and where injuries have been received by a child so enticed the entry is not regarded as unlawful, and does not necessarily preclude a recovery of damages; the attractiveness of the machine or structure amounting to an implied invitation to enter. Heller v. New York N. H. & H. R. Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 265 F. 192, 194. It imposes a liability on a property owner for injuries to a child of tender years, resulting from something on his premises that can be operated by such a child and made dangerous by him, and which is attractive to him and calculated to induce him to use it, where he fails to protect the thing so that a child of tender years cannot be hurt by it. Barnhill’s Adm’r v. Mt. Morgan Coal Co., D.C. Ky., 215 F. 608, 609.

TURPIS. Lat. In the civil law. Base; mean; vile; disgraceful; infamous; unlawful. Applied both to things and persons. Calvin.

TURPIS CAUSA. A base cause; a vile or immoral consideration; a consideration which, on account of its immorality, is not allowed by law to be sufficient either to support a contract or found an action; e.g., future illicit intercourse.

TURPIS CONTRACTUS. An immoral or iniquitous contract.

TURPIS EST PARS QUIE NON CONVENIT CUM SUO TOTO. The part which does not agree with its whole is of mean account, [entitled to small or no consideration.] Plowd. 101; Shep. Touch. 87.

Moral Turpitude

A term of frequent occurrence in statutes, especially those providing that a witness’ conviction of a crime involving moral turpitude may be shown as tending to impeach his credibility. In general, it means neither more nor less than "turpitude," i. e., anything done contrary to justice, honesty, modesty, or good morals. In re Williams, 64 Okl. 316, 167 P. 1149, 1152; In re Humphrey, 174 Cal. 290, 163 P. 60, 62. Indeed, it is sometimes candidly admitted that the word "moral" in this phrase does not add anything to the meaning of the term other than that emphasis which may result from a tautological expression. Hughes v. State Board of Medical Examiners, 162 Ga. 246, 134 S.E. 42, 46. It is also commonly defined as an act of baseness, vileness, or depravity in the private and social duties which a man owes to his fellow man or to society in general, contrary to the accepted and customary rule of right and duty between man and man. Moore v. State, 12 Ala. App. 243, 67 So. 789, 791; United States v. Uhl, C.C.A.N.Y., 210 F. 860, 862.

Although a vague term, it implies something immoral in itself, regardless of its being punishable by law. Pippin v. State, 197 Ala. 613, 73 So. 340, 342; Coykendall v. Skrmetta, C.C.A.Ga., 22 F.2d 120; Thus excluding unintentional wrong, or an improper act done without unlawful or improper intent. Drazen v. New Haven Taxicab Co., 95 Conn. 500, 111 A., 861, 863. It is also said to be restricted to the gravest offenses, consisting of felonies, infamous crimes, and those that are malum in se and displeasing or depraved minds. Bartos v. United States District Court for District of Nebraska, C.C.A.Neb., 19 F.2d 722, 724.

TURPITUDO. Lat. Baseness; infamy; immorality; turpitude.

TUTA EST CUSTODIA QUE SIBI MET CREDI-

TUTEUR. In French law. A kind of guardian.

TUTEUR OFFICIEUX. A person over fifty years of age may be appointed a tutor of this sort to a child over fifteen years of age, with the consent of the parents of such child, or, in their default, the conseil de famille. The duties which such a tutor becomes subject to are analogous to those in English law of a person who puts himself in loco parentis to any one. Brown.

TUTEUR SUBROGE. The title of a second guardian appointed for an infant under guardianship. His functions are exercised in case the interests of the infant and his principal guardian conflict. Code Nap. 420; Brown.

TUTIUS ERRATUR EX PARTE MITIORE. It is always safer to err in acquitting than punishing, on the side of mercy than on the side of justice. Branch, Princ.; 2 Hale, P. C. 290; Broom, Max. 326; Corn. v. York, 9 Mete. (Mass.) 116, 43 Am.Dec. 373.

In the civil law. This term corresponds nearly to "guardian," (i. e., a person appointed to have the care of the person of a minor and the administration of his estate,) except that the guardian of a minor who has passed a certain age is called "curator," and has powers and duties differing somewhat from those of a tutor. See Washington Bank and Trust Co. v. Magee, 187 Miss. 198, 192 So. 438.

TUTOR ALIENUS. In English law. The name given to a stranger who enters upon the lands of an infant within the age of fourteen, and takes the profits. He may be called to an account by the infant and be charged as guardian in socage. Littleton, § 124; Co.Litt. 89b, 90a.

TUTOR PROPRIUS. The name given to one who is rightly a guardian in socage, in contradistinction to a tutor alienus.

TUTORSHIP. The office and power of a tutor. The power which an individual, sui juris, has to take care of the person of one who is unable to take care of himself.

There are four sorts of tutorships: Tutorship by nature; tutorship by will; tutorship by the effect of the law; tutorship by the appointment of the judge. Civ.Code La. art. 247.

TUTORSHIP BY NATURE. Upon the death of either parent, the tutorship of minor children belongs of right to the other. Upon divorce or judicial separation from bed and board of parents, the tutorship of each minor child belongs of right to the parent under whose care he or she has been placed or to whose care he or she has been entrusted. All those cases are called tutorship by nature. Civ.Code La. art. 250.
TUTORSHIP

TUTORSHIP BY WILL. The right of appointing a tutor, whether a relation or a stranger, belongs exclusively to the father or mother dying last. This is called "tutorship by will," because generally it is given by testament; but it may likewise be given by any declaration by the surviving father or mother, executed before a notary and two wit- nesses. Civ.Code La. art. 257.

TUTRIX. A female tutor.

TWA NIGHT GEST. In Saxon law. A guest on the second night. By the laws of Edward the Con- fessor it was provided that a man who lodged at an inn, or at the house of another, should be con- sidered, on the first night of his being there, a stranger, (uncuth;) on the second night, a guest; on the third night, a member of the family. This had reference to the responsibility of the host or entertainer for offenses committed by the guest.

TWELFTIME. An accusation, im- puted to another independent issue which will sup- port verdict is free from prejudicial error, unless it is disclosed that verdict is in fact based upon issue to which erroneous instruction related. As- teri v. City of Youngstown, Ohio App., 121 N.E.2d 143, 145.

TWELFTHMONDAY. The earliest statute or code of Roman law, framed by a commission of ten men, B.C. 450, upon the return of a commission of three who had been sent abroad to study foreign laws and institutions. The Twelve Tables consist- ed partly of laws transcribed from the institutions of other nations, partly of such as were altered and accommodated to the manners of the Romans, partly of new provisions, and mainly, perhaps, of laws and usages under their ancient kings. They formed the source and foundation for the whole later development of Roman jurisprudence. They exist now only in fragmentary form. See 1 Kent, Comm. 520. These laws were substantially a codification, and not merely an incorporation, of the customary law of the people. There were Greek elements in them, but still they were es- sentially Roman. Hunter, Rom.L. 16. See Steph-enson, Hist.Rom.L. 120; Sohm's Inst.Rom.L.

TWELVE-DAY WRIT. A writ issued under the-St. 18 & 19 Vict. c. 67, for summary procedure on bills of exchange and promissory notes, abolished by rule of court in 1880. Wharton.

TWELVE-MONTH BOND. "Twelve-month bond," under statute effective Jan. 20, 1837 (Hartley's Dig. art. 1277), had a double character, first as an obligation known to the Spanish civil law, and sec- ond, as a summary statutory judgment, with the force and effect of any other judgment of a court TULWITH. Brit. A tribe or family branching or of competent jurisdiction; it being also a consent issuing out of another. Cowell.

TYHTLAN. :n Saxon law. An accusation, im- peachment, or charge of any offense.

TYING. A term which, as used in a contract of lease of patented machinery means that the les-see has secured only limited rights of use, and that if he exceeds such limited rights by agreeing not to use the machines of others he may lose his lease. United States v. United Shoe Machinery Co. of New Jersey, D.C.Mass., 222 F. 349, 388, 394.

TYPEWRITING. The process of printing letter by letter by the use of a typewriter, Acme Coal
Co. v. Northrup Nat. Bank of Iola, Kan., 23 Wyo. 66, 146 P. 593, L.R.A.1915D, 1084, an instrument operated by hand, and used largely in business requiring much correspondence with others, or in connection with commercial transactions. Hooper v. Kennedy, 100 Vt. 314, 137 A. 194, 196. Typewriting, for certain purposes and under different statutes, is sometimes deemed to be included within the term "writing," and sometimes within the term "printing."

TYRANNY. Arbitrary or despotic government; the severe and autocratic exercise of sovereign power, either vested constitutionally in one ruler, or usurped by him by breaking down the division and distribution of governmental powers.

TYRANT. A despot; a sovereign or ruler, legitimate or otherwise, who uses his power unjustly and arbitrarily, to the oppression of his subjects.

TYROTOXICON. In medical jurisprudence. A poisonous ptomaine produced in milk, cheese, cream, or ice-cream by decomposition of albuminous constituents.

TYRRA, or TOIRA. A mount or hill. Cowell.

TYTHE. Tithe, or tenth part.

TYTHING. A company of ten; a district; a tenth part. See Tithing.

TZAR, TZARINA. Formerly, the emperor and empress of Russia. See Czar.
U. B. An abbreviation for "Upper Bench."

U. C. An abbreviation for "Upper Canada," used in citing the reports.

U. R. Initials of "uti rogas," be it as you desire, a ballot thus inscribed, by which the Romans voted in favor of a bill or candidate. Tayl. Civil Law, 191.

U. S. An abbreviation for "United States."

UBERRIMA FIDES. Lat. The most abundant good faith; absolute and perfect candor or openness and honesty; the absence of any concealment or deception, however slight. A phrase used to express the perfect good faith, concealing nothing, with which a contract must be made; for example, in the case of insurance, the insured must observe the most perfect good faith towards the insurer. 1 Story, Eq.Jur. § 317.

Contracts of life insurance are said to be "uberrime fidel" when any material misrepresentation or concealment is fatal to them. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. McElroy, 28 C.C.A. 365, 83 F. 631, 636.

UBI ALIQUID CONCEDITUR, CONCEDITUR ET ID SINE QUO RES IPSA ESSE NON POTEST. When anything is granted, that also is granted without which the thing granted cannot exist. Broom, Max. 483; 13 Mees. & W. 706.

UBI ALIQUID IMPEDITUR PROPTER UNUSVI, EO REMOTO, TOLLITUR IMPEDIMENTUM. Where anything is impeded by one single cause, if that be removed, the impediment is removed. Branch, Princ., citing 5 Coke, 77a.

UBI CESSAT REMEDIAM ORDINARIUM, IBI DECURRIT AD EXTRAORDINARIUM. Where the ordinary remedy fails, recourse must be had to an extraordinary one. 4 Coke, 92b.

UBI CULPA EST, IBI PENNA SUBESSE DEBET. Where the crime is committed, there ought the punishment to be undergone. Jenk.Cent. 325.

UBI DAMNA DANTUR, VICTUS VICTORI IN EXPENSIS CONDEMNARI DEBET. Where damages are given, the vanquished party ought to be condemned in costs to the victor. 2 Inst. 289; 3 Sharsw. Bla. Comm. 399.

UBI EADEM RATIO, IBI EADEM LEX; ET DE SIMILIBUS IDEM EST JUDICIIUM. 7 Coke, 18. Where the same reason exists, there the same law prevails; and, of things similar, the judgment is similar. Where there is the same reason, there is the same law, and the same judgment should be rendered on the same state of facts. Broom, Max. 103, n. 153, 155.

UBI EST FORUM, IBI ERGO EST JUS. The law of the forum governs. 31 Law Mag. & Rev. 471.

UBI EST SPECIALIS, ET RATIO GENERALIS GENERALITER ACCIPienda EST. See Ubi lex est specialis, etc.

UBI ET DANTIS ET ACCIPIENTIS TURPITUDO VERSATUR, NON POSSE REPETI DICIMUS; QUOTeni AUTem ACCIPIENTIS TURPITUDO VERSATUR, REPETI POSSE. Where there is turpitude on the part of both giver and receiver, we say it cannot be recovered back; but as often as the turpitude is on the side of the receiver [alone] it can be recovered back. Mason v. Waite, 17 Mass. 562.

UBI FACTUM NULLUM, IBI FORTIA NULLA. Where there is no principal fact, there can be no accessory. 4 Coke, 426. Where there is no act, there can be no force.

UBI JUS, IBI REMEDIA. Where there is a right, there is a remedy. Broom, Max. 191, 204; 1 Term R. 512; Co.Litt. 197b; 7 Gray (Mass.) 197; Henry v. Cherry & Webb, 73 A. 97, 101, 30 R.I. 13, 24 L.R.A. 991, 136 Am.St.Rep. 928, 18 Ann. Cas. 1006. It is said that the rule of primitive law was the reverse: Where there is a remedy, there is a right. Salmond, Jurispr. 645.

UBI JUS INCERTUM, IBI JUS NULLUM. Where the law is uncertain, there is no law.

UBI LEX ALIQUEM COGIT OSTENDERE CADAM, NECESSE EST QUOD CAUSA SIT JUSTA ET LEGITIMA. Where the law compels a man to show cause, it is necessary that the cause be just and lawful. 2 Inst. 289.

UBI LEX EST SPECIALIS, ET RATIO EJUS GENERALIS, GENERALITER ACCIPienda EST. 2 Inst. 43. Where the reason for a particular legislative act and acts of the same general character is the same, they should have the same effect. Guile v. La Crosse Gas & Electric Co., 145 Wis. 157, 130 N.W. 234, 241.

UBI LEX NON DISTINGUIT, NEC NOS DISTINGUERE DEBEMUS. Where the law does not distinguish, neither ought we to distinguish. 7 Coke, 5b.

UBI LEX NON Distinguit, Nec Nos Distinguerre DeBemus. Where the law does not distinguish, neither ought we to distinguish. 7 Coke, 5b.

UBI MAJOR PARS EST, IBI TOTUM. Where the greater part is, there the whole is. That is, majorities govern. Moore, 578.

UBI MATRIMONIUM, IBI DOS. Where there is marriage, there is dower. Bract. 92.

UBI NON ADEST NORMA LEGIS, OMNIA QUASI PRO SUSPECTIS HABENDA SUNT. When the law fails to serve as a rule, almost everything ought to be suspected. Bac. Aphorisms, 25.
ULTE}

UBI NON EST ANNUA RENOVATIO, IBI DECI-
M NON DEBENT SOLVI. Where there is no annual renovation, there tithes ought not to be paid.

UBI NON EST CONDENDI AUCTORITAS, IBI
NON EST PARENDI NECESSITAS. Da v. Ir. K.
B. 69. Where there is no authority for establishing a rule, there is no necessity of obeying it.

UBI NON EST DIRECTA LEX, STANDUM EST
ARBITRIO JUDICIS, VEL PROCEDENDUM AD
SIMILIA. Ellesm. Post. N. 41. Where there is no direct law, the opinion of the judge is to be taken, or references to be made to similar cases.

UBI NON EST LEX, IBI NON EST TRANSGRESS
SIO, QUOAD MUNDUM. Where there is no law, there is no transgression, so far as relates to the world. 4 Coke, 16b.

UBI NON EST MANIFESTA INJUSTITIA, JUDI-
CES HABENTUR PRO BONIS VIRIS, ET JUDI-CATUM PRO VERITATE. Where there is no manifest injustice, the judges are to be regarded as honest men, and their judgment as truth. Goix
v. Low, 1 Johns. Cas. (N.Y.) 341, 345.

UBI NON EST PRINCIPALIS, NON POTEST
ESSE ACCESSORIUS. 4
Coke, 43. Where there is no principal, there cannot be an accessory.

UBI NULLA EST CONJECTURA QUIE DUCAT
ALIO, VERBA INTELLIGENDA SUNT EX PRO-
PRIETATE, NON GRAMMATICA, SED POPUL-AR! EX USU. Where there is nothing to call for a different construction, [the] words [of an instrument] are to be understood, not according to their strict grammatical meaning, but according to their popular and ordinary sense. Grot. de Jure
B. lib. 2, c. 16.

UBI NULLUM MATRIMONIUM, IBI NULLA
DOS. Where there is no marriage, there is no dower. Bract. fol. 92; 2 Bl.Comm. 130; Co.Litt.
32a.

UBI PERICULUM, IBI ET LUCRUM COLLOCA-TUR. He at whose risk a thing is, should receive the profits arising from it.

UBI PUGNANTIA INTER SE IN TESTAMENTO
JUBERENTUR, NEUTRUM RATUM EST. Where repugnant or inconsistent directions are contained in a will, neither is valid. Dig. 50, 17, 110, 3. Where words are not conjoined, it is enough if one or other be complied with. Where words are used disjunctively, it is sufficient that either one of the things enumerated be performed.

UBICUNQUE EST INJURIA, IBI DAMNUM SE-QUITUR. Wherever there is a wrong, there damage follows. 10 Co. 116.

UBIQIUY. Omnipresence; presence in several places, or in all places, at one time. A fiction of English law is the "legal ubiquity" of the sov-eign, by which he is constructively present in all the courts. 1 Bl.Comm. 270.

UDAL. A term mentioned by Blackstone as used in Finland to denote that kind of right in real property which is called, in English law, "alodial." 2 Bl.Comm. 45, note f.

UFFER. See Huissierium.

UKAAS, UKASE. Originally, a law or ordinance made by the czar of Russia.

Hence, any official decree or proclamation.

Webster, Diet.

ULLAGE. In commercial law. The amount wanting when a cask, on being gauged, is found not to be completely full.

ULNA FERREA. L.Lat. In old English law.
The iron ell; the standard ell of iron, kept in the exchequer for the rule of measure.

ULNAGE. Alnage. See Alnager.

ULTERIOR. Beyond what is manifest, seen or avowed, intentionally kept concealed. Harding v.
McCullough, 236 Iowa 556, 19 N.W.2d 613, 616.

ULTIMA RATIO. Lat. The last argument; the last resort; the means last to be resorted to.

ULTIMA VOLUNTAS TESTATORIS EST PER-IMPLENDA SECUNDUM VERAM INTENTION-EM SUAM. The last will of a testator is to be fulfilled according to his true intention. Co.Litt.
322; Broom, Max. 566.

ULTIMATE. At last, finally, or at the end; the last in the train of progression or sequence tended toward by all that precedes; arrived at as the last result; final. Texas Employers Ins. Ass’n v.
Reed, Tex.Civ.App., 150 S.W.2d 858, 862.

ULTIMATE FACTS. In practice and pleading.
Averments in pleadings. Oliver v. Coffman, 113
Ind.App. 457, 45 N.E.2d 351, 354, 355; Issuable dfacts. Maxwell Steel Vault Co. v. National Casket Co., D.C.N.Y., 205 F. 515, 524. Facts essential to the right of action or matter of defense. Wichita Falls & Oklahoma Ry. Co. v. Pepper, 134
Tex. 360, 135 S.W.2d 79, 84. Facts necessary and

Those facts found in that vaguely defined field lying between evidential facts on the one side and the primary issue or conclusion of law on the other, being but the logical results of the proofs, or, in other words, mere conclusions of fact. Christmas v. Cowden, 44 N.M. 517, 105 P.2d 484, 487.

The final or resulting fact reached by processes of logical reasoning from the detached or successive facts in evidence, and which is fundamental and determinative of the whole case. Levins v. Rovegno, 71 Cal. 273, 12 P. 161; Kahn v. Central Smelting Co., 2 Utah, 371; Caywood v. Farrell, 175 Ill. 480, 51 N.E. 775; Maeder Steel Products Co. v. Zanello, 109 Or. 562, 220 P. 155, 159. The final resulting effect reached by processes of legal reasoning from the evidentiary facts. Oregon Home Builders v. Montgomery Inv. Co., 94 Or. 349, 184 P. 487, 489. See, also, Ultimate Facts.

ULTIMATUM. Lat. The last. The final and ultimate proposition made in negotiating a treaty, or contract, or the like. The word also means the result of a negotiation, and it comprises the final determination of a party concerned in the matter in dispute.

ULTIMUM SUPPLICIUM. Lat. The last or extreme punishment; the extremity of punishment; the punishment of death. 4 Bl.Comm. 17.

ULTIMUS HIERES. Lat. The last or remote heir; the lord. So called in contradistinction to the heres proximus and the heres remotior. Dalr. Feud. Prop. 110.

ULTRA. Lat. Beyond; outside of; in excess of.

Damages Ultra
Damages beyond a sum paid into court.

Ultra Mare
Beyond sea. One of the old essoins or excuses for not appearing in court at the return of process. Bract. fol. 338.

Ultra Reprises
After deduction of drawbacks; in excess of deductions or expenses.

Ultra Vires
The modern technical designation, in the law of corporations, of acts beyond the scope of the power of a corporation, as defined by its charter or act of incorporation. State ex rel. v. Holston Trust Co., 168 Tenn. 546, 79 S.W.2d 1012, 1016. The term has a broad application and includes not only acts prohibited by the charter, but acts which are in excess of powers granted and not prohibited. State ex rel. Supreme Temple of Pythian Sisters v. Cook, 234 Mo.App. 989, 136 S.W.2d 142, 146, and generally applied either when a corporation has no power whatever to do an act, or when the corporation has the power but exercises it irregularly. People ex rel. Barrett v. Bank of Peoria, 295 Ill.App. 543, 15 N.E.2d 333, 335. Act is "ultra vires" when corporation is without authority to perform it under any circumstances or for any purpose. Orlando Orange Groves Co. v. Hale, 107 Fla. 304, 144 So. 674, 676.

By doctrine of "ultra vires" a contract made by a corporation beyond the scope of its corporate powers is unlawful. Community Federal Sav. & Loan Ass'n of Independence, Mo., v. Fields, C.C.A.Mo., 126 F.2d 705, 708.

While the phrase "ultra vires" has been used to designate, not only acts beyond the express and implied powers of a corporation, but also acts contrary to public policy or contrary to some express statute prohibiting them, the latter class of acts is now termed illegal, and the "ultra vires" confined to the former class. In re Grand Union Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 219 F. 353, 363; Staacke v. Routledge, 111 Tex. 489, 241 S.W. 994, 998; Pennsylvania H. Co. v. Minis, 120 Md. 461, 496, 87 A. 1062, 1072.

ULTRA POSSE NON POTEST ESSE, ET VICE VERSA. What is beyond possibility cannot exist, and the reverse, [what cannot exist is not possible.] Wing. Max. 100.

ULTRONEOUS WITNESS. In Scotch law. A volunteer witness; one who appears to give evidence without being called upon. 2 Alis.Crim.Pr. 393.

UMPIRAGE. The decision of an umpire. Powell v. Ford, 4 Lea (Tenn.) 288. The word "Umpirage," in reference to arbitrators; but "award" is commonly applied to the decision of the umpire also.

UMPIRE. One clothed with authority to act alone in rendering a decision where arbitrators have disagreed. Hughes v. National Fuel Co., 121 W.Va. 392, 3 S.E.2d 621, 626.

When matters in dispute are submitted to two or more arbitrators, and they do not agree in their decision, it is usual for another person to be called in as "umpire," to whose sole judgment it is then referred. Brown. And see Ingraham v. Whitmore, 75 Ill. 30; Tyler v. Webb, 10 B. Mon. (Ky.) 123; Lyon v. Blossom, 4 Duer (N.Y.) 325. An "umpire," strictly speaking, makes his award independent of that of the arbitrators. Dennis v. Standard Fire Ins. Co., 90 N.J.Eq. 419, 107 A. 161, 163.

UN-. A prefix used indiscriminately, and may mean simply "not." Thus, "unlawful" means "not authorized by law." State v. Sanders, 136 La. 1059, 68 So. 125, 126, Ann.Cas.1916E, 105.

UN NE DOLT PRISE ADVANTAGE DE SON TORT DEMESNE. 2 And. 38, 40. One ought not to take advantage of his own wrong.
UNA PERSONA VIX POTEST SUPPLEMENTE VICE DUARUM. 7 Coke, 118. One person can scarcely supply the place of two. See 9 H.L.Cas. 274.

UNA VOCE. Lat. With one voice; unanimously; without dissent.

UNABLE. This term, as used in a statute providing that evidence given in a former trial may be proved in a subsequent trial, where the witness is unable to testify, means mentally and physically unable. Hansen-Rynning v. Oregon-Washington R. & Na'y. Co., 105 Or. 67, 209 P. 462, 464.

UNACCRUED. Not become due, as rent on a lease. Elms Realty Co. v. Wood, 285 Mo. 130, 225 S.W. 1002, 1005.

UNADJUSTED. Uncertain; not agreed upon. Richardson v. Woodbury, 43 Me. 214.

UNALIENABLE. Inalienable; incapable of being aliened, that is, sold and transferred. Richardson v. Woodbury, 43 Me. 214.

UNAMBIGUOUS. Susceptible of but one meaning. Lawrie v. Miller, Tex.Com.App., 45 S.W.2d 172, 173.

UNANIMITY. Agreement of all the persons concerned, in holding one and the same opinion or determination of any matter or question; as the concurrence of a jury in deciding upon their verdict. See Unanimous.

UNANIMOUS. To say that a proposition was adopted by a "unanimous" vote does not always mean that every one present voted for the proposition, but it may, and generally does, mean, when a viva voce vote is taken, that no one voted in the negative. State v. Stephens, 195 Mo.App. 34, 189 S.W. 630, 631.

UNASCERTAINED. Not certainly known or determined. Commissioner of Internal Revenue v. Owens, C.C.A.10, 78 F.2d 768, 773.

UNASCERTAINED DUTIES. Payment in gross, on an estimate as to amount, and where the merchant, on a final liquidation, will be entitled by law to allowances or deductions which do not depend on the rate of duty charged, but on the ascertained of the quantity of the article subject to duty. Moke v. Barney, 5 Blatchf. 274, Fed. Cas.No.9,698.

UNAVOIDABLE. Not avoidable, incapable of being shunned or prevented, inevitable, and necessary. Day Wood Heel Co. v. Rover, 123 Ohio St. 349, 175 N.E. 588, 590.

UNAVOIDABLE ACCIDENT. An inevitable accident. Leland v. Empire Engineering Co., 135 Md. 208, 108 A. 570, 575, which could not have been foreseen and prevented by using ordinary diligence, and resulting without fault. U. S. v. Kansas City Southern Ry. Co., D.C.Ark., 189 F. 471. Not necessarily an accident which it was physically impossible, in the nature of things, for the person to have prevented, but one not occasioned in any degree, either remotely or directly, by the want of such care or skill as the law holds every man bound to exercise. An accident which could not be prevented by the exercise of ordinary care and prudence. Wollaston v. Stiltz, 114 A. 198, 200, 1 W.W.Harr. 273; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Cook, 34 Ga.App. 1, 128 S.E. 75, 76. A casualty which occurs without negligence of either party and when all means which common prudence suggests have been used to prevent it. Bucktrot v. Partridge, 130 Okl. 122, 265 P. 768, 771.

UNAVOIDABLE CAUSALITY. An event or accident which human prudence, foresight, and sagacity cannot prevent, happening against will and without negligence. Fernwood Mining Co. v. Pluma, 211 S.W. 159, 163, 138 Ark. 193; Sabin v. Sunset Garden Co., 184 Okl. 106, 85 P.2d 294, 295. Welles v. Castles, 3 Gray (Mass.) 325. Within the meaning of statutes in several states relating to the vacation of judgments, means some casualty or misfortune growing out of conditions or circumstances that prevented the party or his attorney from doing something that, except therefor, would have been done, and does not include mistakes or errors of judgment growing out of misconstruction or misunderstanding of the law, or the failure of parties or counsel through mistake to avail themselves of remedies, which if resorted to would have prevented th' casualty or misfortune.

If by any care, prudence, or foresight a thing could have been guarded against, it is not unavoidable. Central Line of Boats v. Lowe, 50 Ga. 509; E. P. Barnes & Bro. v. Eastin, 190 Ky. 392, 227 S.W. 578, 580. The term is not ordinarily limited to an act of God. Kirby v. Davis, 211 Ala. 192, 97 So. 655, 656.

UNAVOIDABLE CAUSE. A cause which reasonably prudent and careful men under like circumstances do not and would not ordinarily anticipate, and whose effects, under similar circumstances, they do not and would not ordinarily avoid. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. U. S., 114 C.C.A. 334, 194 F. 342.

UNAVOIDABLE DANGERS. This term in a marine policy covering unavoidable dangers of the river includes the unexplained capsizing of a vessel, through human intervention existed in the operation of the vessel, for "unavoidable dangers" mean those unpreventable by persons operating the vessel, and, like the term perils of the sea, include all kinds of marine casualties, thus including accidents in which there is human intervention. A river vessel's tendency to turn over, due to topheavy construction, necessary on account of the shallowness of rivers, is an "unavoidable danger" within the policy. Hillman Transp. Co. v. Home Ins. Co. of New York, 268 Pa. 547, 112 A. 108, 111.

UNBOLTED CORN MEAL. The courts judicially know that corn meal is an unmixed meal made from entire grains of corn, and that "unbolted corn meal" is simply meal not bolted, or from which the bran has not been sifted or separated. Miller Grain & Commission Co. v. International Sugar Feed No. 2 Co., 197 Ala. 100, 72 So. 368.

UNCEASESATH. In Saxon law. An oath by relations not to avenge a relation's death. Blount.

UNCERTAINTY. The state or quality of being unknown or vague. Such vagueness, obscurity, or confusion in any written instrument, e. g., a will, as to render it unintelligible to those who are called upon to execute or interpret it, so that no definite meaning can be extracted from it.

UNCHASTITY. Impurity in mind and conduct, which may exist without actually engaging in unlawful sexual intercourse. State v. Valvoda, 170 Iowa 102, 152 N.W. 21, 23; Cooper v. State, 15 Ala.App. 657, 74 So. 753, 754.

UNCIA, Lat. In Roman law. An ounce; the twelfth of the Roman "as," or pound. The twelfth as to render it unintelligible to those who are called upon to execute or interpret it, so that no definite meaning can be extracted from it.

UNCHASTITY. Impurity in mind and conduct, which may exist without actually engaging in unlawful sexual intercourse. State v. Valvoda, 170 Iowa 102, 152 N.W. 21, 23; Cooper v. State, 15 Ala.App. 657, 74 So. 753, 754.

UNCIARIUS H!ERES. Lat. In Roman law. An heir to one-twelfth of an estate or inheritance.

UNCONSCIONABLE BARGAIN. All unconscionable bargain or contract is one which no man in his senses, not under delusion, would make, on the one hand, and which no fair and honest man would accept, on the other. Hume v. U. S., 10 S.Ct. 134, 132 U.S. 406, 33 L.Ed. 393; Edler v. Frazier, 174 Iowa 46, 156 N.W. 182, 187; Hall v. Wingate, 159 Ga. 630, 126 S.E. 796, 813; 2 Ves. 125; 4 Bouv. Inst. n. 3848.

UNCONSCIONABLE CONDUCT. Conduct that is monstrously harsh and shocking to the conscience. Domus Realty Corporation v. 3440 Realty Co., 179 Misc. 749, 40 N.Y.S.2d 69, 73.

UNCONSTITUTIONAL. That which is contrary to the constitution. The opposite of "constitutional." See State v. McCann, 4 Lea (Tenn.) 10; In re Rahrer, C.C.Kan., 43 F. 558, 10 L.R.A. 444; Norton v. Shelby County, 6 S.Ct. 1121, 118 U.S. 425, 30 L.Ed. 178. The word does not necessarily mean that the act assailed is contrary to sound principles of legislation. Ketterer v. Lederer, D. C.Pa., 269 F. 153, 154.

This word is used in two different senses. One, which may be called the English sense, is that the legislation conflicts with some recognized general principle. This is no more than to say that it is unwise, or is based upon a wrong or unsound principle, or conflicts with a generally accepted policy. The other, which may be called the American sense, is that the legislation conflicts with some provision of our written Constitution, which it is beyond the power of the Legislature to change. U. S. v. American Brewing Co., D.C.Pa., 1 F.2d 1001, 1002.

This expression as applied to an act of parliament means simply that it is, in the opinion of the speaker, opposed to the spirit of the English constitution; it cannot mean that the act is either a breach of the law or is void. When applied to a law passed by the French parliament, it means that the law is opposed to the articles of the constitution; it does not necessarily mean that the law in question is void, for it is by no means certain that any French court will refuse to enforce a law because it is unconstitutional. It would probably, though not of necessity, be, when employed by a Frenchman, a term of censure. Dicey, Const. 516.

UNCONTROLLABLE IMPULSE. As an excuse for the commission of an act otherwise criminal, this term means an impulse towards the commission of such fixity and intensity that it cannot be resisted by the person subject to it, in the enfeebled condition of his will and moral sense resulting from derangement or mania. See Insanity. And see State v. O'Neil, 51 Kan. 651, 33 P. 287, 24 L.R.A. 555.

UNCORE PRIST. L. Fr. Still ready. A species of plea or replication by which the party alleges that he is still ready to pay or perform all that is justly demanded of him. In conjunction with the phrase "tout temps prist," it signifies that he has always been and still is ready to do what is required, thus saving costs where the whole cause is admitted, or preventing delay where it is a replication, if the allegation is made out. 3 Bl. Comm. 303.

UNCUTH. In Saxon law. Unknown; a stranger. A person entertained in the house of another was, on the first night of his entertainment, so called. Bract. fol. 124b. See Twa Night Gest.

UNDE NIHIL HABET. Lat. , In old English law. The name of the writ of dower, which lay for a widow, where no dower at all had been assigned her within the time limited by law. 3 Bl. Comm. 183.

UNDEFENDED. A term sometimes applied to one who is obliged to make his own defense when on trial, or in a civil cause. A cause is said to be undefended when the defendant makes default, in not putting in an appearance to the plaintiff’s action; in not putting in his statement of defense; or in not appearing at the trial either personally or by counsel, after having received due notice. Mozley & Whittle.

UNDER. Sometimes used in its literal sense of below in position, beneath, but more frequently in its secondary meaning of “inferior” or “subordinate.” Mills v. Stoddard, Mo., 49 U.S. 345, 8 How. 356, 12 L.Ed. 1107; Biordi v. Yanosevich, 93 Pa.Super. 578, 582.

Also according to, as, “under the testimony.” Boughan v. State, 193 Ind. 66, 138 N.E. 87.

UNDER AND SUBJECT. Words frequently used in conveyances of land which is subject to a mortgage, to show that the grantee takes subject to such mortgage. See Walker v. Physick, 5 Pa. 203; Lavelle v. Gordon, 15 Mont. 515, 39 P. 740, 27 A.L.R. R.N.S., 337, 401.

UNDER CONTROL. This phrase does not necessarily mean the ability to stop instanter under any and all circumstances, an automobile being “under control” within the meaning of the law if it is moving at such a rate, and the mechanism and power under such control, that it can be brought to a stop with a reasonable degree of celerity. Esponette v. Wisner, 130 Me. 297, 155 A. 650, 653. Am. motorist is only bound to use that degree of care, caution, and prudence that an ordinarily careful, cautious, and prudent man would have used at the time under same or similar circumstances in operation of said automobile. Gregory v. Suhr, 221 Iowa 1283, 268 N.W. 14, 17. In general, as applied to street cars or railroad trains, the term denotes the control and preparation appropriate to probable emergencies. Lincoln v. Pacific Electric Ry. Co., 33 Cal.App. 83, 164 P. 412, 415; Torantolla v. Kansas City Rys. Co., Mo. App., 226 S.W. 617, 618. It is such control as will enable a train to be stopped promptly if need should arise. Missouri K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co., 103 Kan. 1, 175 P. 97, 102. It implies the ability to stop within the distance the track is seen to be clear. Fuller v. Oregon-Washington R. & Na’y, Co., 93 Or. 160, 181 P. 338, 341.

UNDER HERD. A term conveying the idea that a considerable number of domestic animals are gathered together and held together by herders in constant attendance and in control of their movements from place to place on a public range or within certain areas. Schreiner v. Deep Creek Stock Ass’n, 68 Mont. 104, 217 P. 663, 665.

UNDER THE INFLUENCE OF INTOXICATING LIQUOR. Phrase as used in statutes or ordinances prohibiting the operation of motor vehicle by a party under the influence of intoxicating liquor covers not only all well-known and easily recognized conditions and degrees of intoxication, but any abnormal mental or physical condition which is the result of indulging in any degree in intoxicating liquors, and which tends to deprive one of that clearness of intellect and control of himself which he would otherwise possess. Commonwealth v. Long, 131 Pa.Super. 28, 198 A. 474, 477. Any condition where intoxicating liquor has so far affected the nervous system, brain or muscles of the driver as to impair, to an appreciable degree, his ability to operate his automobile in the manner that an ordinary, prudent and cautious man, in full possession of his faculties, using reasonable care, would operate or drive under like conditions. Luellen v. State, 64 Okl.Cr. 382, 81 P.2d 323, 328.

Thus, a vessel lying with her nose against the bank of a stream and holding her position against the current by the movement of her wheel is a vessel under way, and not entitled to the rights of an anchored vessel. The Ruth, 108 C.C.A. 199, 186 F. 87. And a steamer being towed down stream by tugs without any steam on her boilers, except for steering purposes, is nevertheless “under way.” The Scandinavia, D.C.N.Y., 11 F.2d 542, 543.

UNDER–CHAMBERLAINS OF THE EXCHEQUER. Two officers who cleaved the tallies written by the clerk of the tallies, and read the same, that the clerk of the pell and comptrollers thereof might see their entries were true. They also made searches for records in the treasury, and had the custody of Domesday Book. Cowell. The office is now abolished.

UNDERCURRENT OR UNDERFLOW OF SURFACE STREAM. Those waters which slowly find their way through sand and gravel constituting bed of a stream, or lands under or immediately adjacent to stream, and are themselves part, of surface stream. Maricopa County Municipal Water Conservation Dist. No. 1 v. Southwest Cotton Co., 39 Ariz. 65, 4 P.2d 369, 380.

UNDERFLOW. See Undercurrent
UNDERGROUND WATERS. See Water, subtitle Subterranean Waters.

UNDERGROWTH. A term applicable to plants growing under or below other greater plants. Clay v. Telegraph Co., 70 Miss. 411, 11 So. 658.

See, also, that title under main title Lease.

UNDERLIE THE LAW. In Scotch criminal procedure, an accused person, in appearing to take his trial, is said "to compear and underlie the law." Mozley & Whiteley.

UNDER-SHERIFF. An officer who acts directly under the sheriff, and performs all the duties of the sheriff's office, a few only excepted where the personal presence of the high-sheriff is necessary. The sheriff is civilly responsible for the acts or omissions of his under-sheriff. Mozley & Whiteley. See Delfelder v. Teton Land and Investment Co., 46 Wyo. 142, 24 P.2d 702.

A sheriff's deputy, who, being designated by the sheriff as an "under sheriff," becomes his chief deputy with authority by virtue of his appointment to execute all the ordinary duties of the office of sheriff. Shirran v. Dallas, 21 Cal.App. 405, 132 P. 454, 458. A distinction is sometimes made between this officer and a deputy, the latter being appointed for special occasion or purpose, while the former discharges, in general, all the duties required by the sheriff's office.

UNDERSIGNED, THE. The person whose name is signed or the persons whose names are signed at the end of a document; the subscriber or subscribers. Farmers' Exchange Bank of Elavston v. Sollars, 353 Ill. 224, 187 N.E. 289, 290, 89 A.L.R. 398.

UNDERSTAND. To know; to apprehend the meaning; to appreciate; as, to understand the nature of an act. Western Indemnity Co. v. MacKechnie, Tex.Civ.App., 214 S.W. 456, 460; International Great Northern R. Co. v. Pence, Tex. Civ.App., 113 S.W.2d 206, 210. To have a full and clear knowledge of; to comprehend. Fox v. Schaeffer, 131 Conn. 439, 41 A.2d 46, 49.

Thus, to invalidate a deed on the ground that the grantor did not understand the nature of the act, the grantor must be incapable of comprehending that the effect of the act would divest him of the title to the land set forth in the deed. Miller v. Folsom, 49 Okl. 74, 149 P. 1185, 1188. As used in connection with the execution of wills and other instruments, the term includes the realization of the practical effects and consequences of the proposed act. Tillman v. Ogren, 99 Misc. 539, 166 N.Y.S. 39, 40.

A valid contract engagement of a somewhat informal character. Winslow v. Lumber Co., 32 Minn. 238, 20 N.W. 145. This is a loose and ambiguous term, unless it be accompanied by some expression to show that it constituted a meeting of the minds of parties upon something respecting which they intended to be bound. Camp v. Waring, 25 Conn. 529.

The term may also import simply a wish or hope, as in a will bequeathing property to another with the "understanding" that at the legatee's death, all property derived under the will should be given to the testatrix's sister. Vincent v. Rix, 127 Misc. 639, 217 N.Y.S. 393, 399.

UNDERSTOOD. The phrase "it is understood," when employed as a word of contract in a written agreement, has the same force as the words "it is agreed." Phoenix Iron & Steel Co. v. Wilkoff Co., C.C.A. Ohio, 253 F. 165, 167; Mertz v. Fleming, 185 Wis. 58, 200 N.W. 655, 656.

UNDERTAKE. To take on oneself; to engage in; to enter upon; to take in hand; set about; attempt; as, to undertake a task; a journey; and, specifically, to take upon oneself solemnly or expressly; to lay oneself under obligation or to enter into stipulation; to perform or to execute; to covenant; contract; hence to guarantee; be surety for; promise; to accept or take over as a charge; to accept responsibility for the care of; to engage to look after or attend to; as to undertake a patient or guest. Lowe v. Poole, 235 Ala. 441, 179 So. 536, 540. To endeavor to perform, try, to promise, engage, or agree, assume an obligation. Torelle v. Templeman, 94 Mont. 149, 21 P.2d 60.

UNDERTAKER. One who undertakes (to do something). In a mechanic's lien statute, the word has been held not to include a mere furnisher of material in connection with the erection of the building. In re American Lime Co., D.C.Tenn., 201 F. 433, 435.

One whose business is to prepare the dead for burial and to take the charge and management of funerals. Anderson v. State, 19 Ala.App. 606, 99 So. 778, 779; State v. Whyte, 177 Wis. 541, 188 N.W. 607, 608, 23 A.L.R. 67.

UNDERTAKING. A promise, engagement, or stipulation. An engagement by one of the parties to a contract to the other, as distinguished from the mutual engagement of the parties to each other. 5 East 17; 4 B. & Ald. 595, followed in Alexander v. State, 28 Tex.App. 186, 12 S.W. 595. It does not necessarily imply a consideration. Thompson v. Blanchard, 3 N.Y. 335.

In a somewhat special sense, a promise given in the course of legal proceedings by a party or his counsel, generally as a condition to obtaining some concession from the court or the opposite party. Sweet.

A promise or security in any form. Code, Iowa, § 48, par. 20.

An official undertaking, such as one by a county clerk or other officer under statutes, unlike an official bond, is not required to be signed by the principal. Fleischner v. Florey, 111 Or. 35, 224 P. 831, 832.
UNDISPUTED FACT. Within the meaning of a statute, an admitted fact, which the court has not deemed sufficiently material to add to the finding, or has inadvertently omitted from it; a fact not found by the court does not become an "undisputed fact," merely because one or more witnesses testify to it without direct contradiction. Dexter Yarn Co. v. American Fabrics Co., 102 Conn. 529, 129 A. 527, 532.

The terms "surplus" and "undivided profits" have different meanings in banking circles. State ex rel. Payne v. Exchange Bank of Natchitoches, 84 So. 481, 482, 147 La. 25. Surplus, like the capital stock, constitutes a part of the capital of the bank and is, in addition, a fund for the protection of the depositors. The "undivided profits" constitute a temporary fund changing in size from day to day and carried only until dividend periods when it is distributed to the stockholders or transferred to the permanent surplus. It is the fund from which the expenses and losses of the bank are paid. Saries v. Scandinavian American Bank, 33 N.D. 40, 156 N.W. 556, 557.

"Surplus" and "undivided profits," as commonly employed in corporate accounting, denote an excess in the aggregate value of the assets of the corporation over the sum of liabilities, including capital stock; "surplus" describing such part of the excess in the value of the corporate assets as is treated by the corporation as part of the permanent capital, while the term "undivided profits" designates such part of the excess as consists of profits neither distributed as dividends nor carried to the surplus account. Willcuts v. Milton Dairy Co., 48 S.Ct. 71, 72, 275 U.S. 215, 72 L.Ed. 247.

UNDIVIDED RIGHT. An undivided right or title, or a title to an undivided portion of an estate, that is owned by one of two or more tenants in common or joint tenants before partition. Held by the same title by two or more persons, whether their rights are equal as to value or quantity, or unequal. See In re Wellington, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 98, 26 Am.Dec. 631.

UNDRES. In old English law. Minors or persons under age not capable of bearing arms. Fleta, 1. 1, c. 9; Cowell.

UNDUE. More than necessary; not proper; illegal. Webb v. Superior Court in and for Del Norte County, 28 Cal.App. 391, 152 P. 957, 958. See, also, Elk Hotel Co. v. United Fuel Gas Co., 75 W.Va. 200, 83 S.E. 922, 924, L.R.A.1917E, 970. It denotes something wrong, according to the standard of morals which the law enforces in relations of men, and in fact illegal, and qualifies the purpose with which influence is exercised or result which it accomplishes. Morris v. Morris, 192 Miss. 518, 6 So.2d 311, 312.

UNDUE INFLUENCE. Any improper or wrongful constraint, machination, or urgency of persuasion whereby the will of a person is overpowered and one is induced to do or forbear an act which one would not do or would do if left to act freely. Powell v. Betchel, 340 Ill. 330, 172 N.E. 765, 768. Influence which deprives person influenced of free agency or destroys freedom of his will and renders it more the will of another than his own. Conner v. Brown, Del., 3 A.2d 64, 71, 9 W.W.Harr. 529; In re Villadao's Estate, 31 Cal.App.2d 355, 88 P.2d 187, 190.

"Undue influence" is not necessarily physical injury or threat of it, but is a species of pressure, or at least of peculiarly susceptible to external pressure on account of mental weakness, old age, ignorance, and the like, controlling the free action of the will, and preventing a true conscience, or the appeal of affection or considerations with them at the time of its execution. Mere general influence, not brought to bear on the testamentary act, is not undue influence; but in order to constitute undue influence, it must be used directly to procure the will, and must amount to coercion destroying the free agency of the testator. Mere suspicion that undue influence was brought to bear is not sufficient to justify the setting aside of the will. Myers v. Myers, 130 Okl. 184, 266 P. 452, 455. To constitute "undue influence," justifying denial or revocation of probate of will, testator's mind must have been so controlled or affected by persuasion or pressure, artful or fraudulent contrivances, or by influences of persons in close confidential relations with him, that he is not left to act intelligently, understandably, and voluntarily, but subject to will or purposes of another. In re Starr's Estate, 125 Fla. 536, 170 So. 620. Solicitation, importunity, persuasion, and persuade are not "undue influence" sufficient to avoid a contract or will. Influence obtained by persuasion and argument, or gained by kindness and affection, is not prohibited, where no imposition or fraud is practiced, and where the person's will is not overcome. Barron v. Reardon, 137 Md. 635, 119 A. 163, 167. Stump v. Sturn, C.C.A.W.Va., 524 F. 355, 358.

Undue influence at elections occurs where any one interfere with the free exercise of a voter's franchise, by violence, intimidation, or otherwise. It is a misdemeanor. 1 Russ.Crimes, 321; Steph. Crim. Dig. 79.

UNEXPIRED TERM. Remainder of a period prescribed by law after a portion of such time has passed, and phrase is not synonymous with "vacancy." State ex rel. Sanchez v. Dixon, La.App., 4 So.2d 591, 596.

UNFAIR. In the labor movement, unfriendly to organized labor; refusing to recognize its rules and regulations; —applied particularly to employers, e. g., one who refuses to employ members of a trade union. Steffes v. Motion Picture Mach. Operators' Union, 136 Minn. 200, 161 N.W. 524. A characterization of an employer who refuses to conduct his business in manner desired by union. John R. Thompson Co. v. Delicatessen and Cafeteria Workers Union Local 410, 126 N.J. Eq. 119, 8 A.2d 130, 133; Blossom Dairy Co. v.
UNFAIR LABOR PRACTICE

International Brotherhood of Teamsters, 125 W. Va. 165, 23 S.E.2d 645, 650.

UNFAIR COMPETITION. A term which may be applied generally to all dishonest or fraudulent rivalry in trade and commerce, but is particularly in which one party fraudulently seeks to sell his goods as those of another. Wisconsin Electric Co. v. Du- more Co., C.C.A. Ohio, 35 F.2d 555, 557.

Test of "unfair competition" is, not whether distinction between two competing products can be recognized when placed alongside each other, but whether, when the two products are not viewed together, a purchaser of ordinary prudence would be induced by reason of the marked resemblance in general effect to mistake one for the other despite differences in matters of detail. Ralston Purina Co. v. Checker Food Products Co., Mo.App., 80 S.W.2d 717, 719, 720.

UNFAIR HEARING. Where the defect, or the practice complained of, was such as might have led to a denial of justice, or where there was absent one of the elements deemed essential to due process. Ex parte Bridges, D.C.Cal., 49 F.Supp. 292, 302, 306; Bufalino v. Irvine, C.C.A.Kan., 103 F.2d 830, 832; Kielemo v. Crossman, C.C.A.Tex., 103 F.2d 292, 293.

UNFAIR LABOR PRACTICE. Within National Labor Relations Act for an employer: (1) To interfere with, restrain, or coerce employees in the exercise of their rights to self-organization, to form, join or assist labor organizations, to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and to engage in concerted activities, for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection. (2) To dominate or interfere with the formation or administration of any labor organization or contribute financial or other support to it. (3) By discrimination in regard to hire or tenure of employment or any term or condition of employment to encourage or discourage membership in any labor organization. (4) To discharge or otherwise discriminate against an employee because he has filed charges or given testimony under the Act. (5) To refuse to bargain collectively with the representatives of his employees. National Labor Relations Act, §§ 7, 8, 29 U.S.C.A. §§ 102.1 et seq., 157, 158.

The following has been held to be "unfair labor practice" under National Relations Act:

- The equitable doctrine of "unfair competition" is not confined to cases of actual market competition between similar products of different parties, but extends to all cases in which one party fraudulently seeks to sell his goods as those of another. Wisconsin Electric Co. v. Du- more Co., C.C.A. Ohio, 35 F.2d 555, 557.
UNFIT FOR USE AS A BEVERAGE. This language in a statute is not necessarily applicable to an alcoholic compound or preparation merely because it may be drunk in sufficient quantities to produce death. Thamann v. Merritt, 111 Neb. 639, 197 N.W. 413, 414.

UNFORESEEN CAUSE. With reference to causes excusing delay, under the Workmen's Compensation Act, in giving notice of injury, a cause which could not have been reasonably foreseen as likely to arise or occur, and yet is of such a nature as to have substantially interfered with the giving of the notice. Wardwell's Case, 121 Me. 216, 116 A. 447, 448. A reasonable cause. Donahue v. R. A. Sherman's Sons Co., 39 R.I. 373, 98 A. 109, L.R.A. 1917A, 76.

UNFORESEEN EVENT. In the civil law. A vis major; an uncontrollable force;—so used in Civ. Code La. art. 2697, relating to the termination of a lease by the total destruction of the property. Knapp v. Guerin, 144 La. 754, 81 So. 302, 305.

UNGELD. In Saxon law An outlaw; a person whose murder required no composition to be made, or weregeld to be paid, by his slayer.

UNICA TAXATIO. The obsolete language of a special award of venire, where, of several defendants, one pleads, and one lets judgment go by default, whereby the jury, who are to try and assess damages on the issue, are also to assess damages against the defendant suffering judgment by default. Wharton.

UNIFACTORAL OBLIGATION. See Contract.

UNIFORM, n. Within the meaning of an ordinance requiring a traction company to give free transportation to members of the police force and fire department when in uniform, a plain clothes man, whose only prescribed uniform was a metal badge which might be worn concealed, while wearing such badge was "in uniform." Montgomery Light & Traction Co. v. Avant, 202 Ala. 404, 80 So. 497, 498, 3 A.L.R. 384.

UNIFORM, adj. Conforming to one rule, mode, or unvarying standard; not different at different times or places; applicable to all places or divisions of a country. People v. Vickroy, 266 Ill. 384, 107 N.E. 638, 640. Equable; applying alike to all within a class. Buflkin v. Mitchell, 106 Miss. 253, 63 So. 458, 459, 50 L.R.A.N.S., 428.

A statute is general and uniform in its operation when it operates equally upon all persons who are brought within the relations and circumstances provided for, McNunich v. Mississippi & M. R. Co., 20 Iowa, 342. Stevens v. Village of Nashwauk, 161 Minn. 20, 200 N.W. 927, 929, when all persons under the same conditions and in the same circumstances are treated alike, and classification is reasonable and naturally inherent in the subject-master. Kelly v. Finney, 207 Ind. 557, 194 N.E. 157, 166.

The words "general" and "uniform" as applied to laws have a meaning antithetical to special or discriminatory laws. Ex parte Nowak, 184 Cal. 781, 195 P. 402, 404. The term "uniform," however, does not mean universal. Watson v. G. eely, 67 Cal.App. 328, 227 P. 664, 670.

The burdens of taxation, to be uniform, must have the essential of equality, and must bear alike upon all the property within the limits of the unit wherein it is lawful to levy taxes for a purpose, whether that unit be the state, county, or a municipality. Lang v. Commonwealth, 190 Ky. 29, 226 S.W. 379, 382. See, also, Jordan v. Duval County, 68 Fla. 48, 66 So. 298, 299. And requirement is met when tax is equal on all persons belonging to described class on which tax is imposed. Hilton v. Harris, 207 N.C. 465, 177 S.E. 411.

With reference to locality, a tax is "uniform" when it operates with equal force and effect in every place where the subject of it is found, and with reference to classification, it is uniform when it operates without distinction or discrimination upon all persons composing the described class. Hart v. Board of Comrs. of Burke County, 192 N.C. 161, 134 S.E. 403, 405; City of Cape Girardeau v. Fred A. Groves Motor Co., 346 Mo. 762, 142 S.W.2d 1040, 1042.

UNIFORM LAWS. A considerable number of laws have been approved by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws, and have been adopted in one or more jurisdictions in the United States and its possessions. Among the more important of these laws are the Uniform Negotiable Instruments Act which has been adopted in all the states as well as in the District of Columbia, Alaska, Hawaii, the Philippine Islands, and Porto Rico; the Uniform Sales Act, which in 1950 had been adopted in 37 jurisdictions; the Uniform Bills of Lading Act, in 32 jurisdictions; the Uniform Stock Transfer Act, in all the states as well as in the District of Columbia, Alaska and Hawaii; and the Uniform Partnership Act, in 32. Others which may be mentioned include the Uniform Warehouse Receipts, Declaratory Judgments, Fiduciaries, Fraudulent Conveyance, Desertion and Nonsupport, Veterans' Guardianship, Conditional Sales and Limited Partnership Acts.

UNIFORMITY. Conformity to one pattern; sameness. Naill v. Order of United Commercial Travelers of America, 103 Okl. 179, 229 P. 833, 837.

"Uniformity of operation" of laws does not require "universality of operation." The former term relates to similarity of conditions affecting subjects or localities of the state that are appropriately classified. The latter term relates to the whole and every part of the state. State v. Daniel, 87 Fla. 270, 99 So. 804, 809.

The constitutional requirement of "uniformity" is complied with when the law operates uniformly upon all persons brought within the relations and circumstances provided for it. Abbott v. Commissioners of Roads and Revenues of Fulton County, 160 Ga. 657, 129 S.E. 38, 41.

Uniformity in taxation implies equality in the burden of taxation, which cannot exist without uniformity in the mode of assessment, as well as in the rate of taxation. Further, the uniformity must be coextensive with the territory to which it applies. And it must be extended to all property subject to taxation, so that all property may be taxed alike and equally. Exchange Bank v. Hines, 3 Ohio St. 15. And see Edye v. Robertson, 5 S.Ct. 247, 112 U.S. 580, 28 L.Ed. 798; People v. Auditor General, 7 Mich. 90; Hilger v. Moore, 56 Mont. 146, 182 P. 477, 481. Department of Justice v. A. Overholt and Co., 331 Pa. 182, 200 A. 849, 853.

The rule of "uniformity" does not require that all subjects be taxed, nor taxed alike, but is complied with when the tax is levied equally and uniformly on all subjects of the same class and kind. Sims v. Ahrens, 167 Ark. 557, 271 S.W. 720, 729. The uniformity required in taxation is limited to a uniformity in rate, assessment, and valuation of the particular tax involved, and has no reference to a uniformity of the sum total of taxes which a citizen is required to pay. King v. Sullivan County, 128 Tenn. 393, 160 S.W. 847, 848, and does not require uniformity of collection, but only uniformity of assessment. Mississippi State Tax Commission v. Flora Drug Co., 167 Miss. 1, 148 So. 373, 378.

See, also, "Uniform, adj."

UNIFORMITY, ACT OF. An act which regulates the terms of membership in the Church of England and the colleges of Oxford and Cambridge, (St. 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 4.) See St. 9 & 10 Vict. c. 59. The act of uniformity has been amended by the St. 35 & 36 Vict. c. 35, which inter alia provides a shortened form of morning and evening prayer. Wharton.

UNIFORMITY OF PROCESS ACT. The English statute of 2 Wm. IV. c. 39, establishing a uniform process for the commencement of actions in all the courts of law at Westminster. 3 Steph. Comm. 566. The improved system thus established was more fully amended by the Procedure Acts of 1852, 1854, and 1860, and by the Judicature Acts of 1873 and 1875.

UNIFY. To cause to be one; to make into a unit; to unite; to become one; to consolidate. Adams v. Salt River Valley Water Users' Ass'n, 53 Ariz. 374, 89 P.2d 1060, 1071.

UNIGENITURE. The state of being the only begotten.

UNILATERAL. One-sided; ex parte; having relation to only one of two or more persons or things.

UNILATERAL CONTRACT. See Contract.

UNILATERAL MISTAKE. A mistake or misunderstanding as to the terms or effect of a contract, made or entertained by one of the parties to it but not by the other. Green v. Stone, 54 N.J. Eq. 387, 34 A. 1099, 55 Am.St.Rep. 577; Kant v. Atlanta, B. & A. R. Co., 189 Ala. 48, 66 So. 598, 599.

UNILATERAL RECORD. Records are unilateral when offered to show a particular fact, as a prima facie case, either for or against a stranger. Coligan v. Cooney, 107 Tenn. 214, 64 S.W. 31.
UNIMPEACHABLE WITNESS. Within a statute requiring proof of a holographic will by the unimpeachable evidence of at least three disinterested witnesses to the testator’s handwriting, one whom the jury finds to speak truly and whose conclusion they find to be correct, notwithstanding the presence of other evidence contradicting him. Snead v. Reynolds, 166 Ark. 581, 266 S.W. 686, 689; Murphy v. Murphy, 144 Ark. 429, 222 S.W. 721, 723.

UNIMPROVED LAND. A statutory term which includes lands, once improved, that have reverted to a state of nature, as well as lands that have never been improved. Moore v. Morris, 118 Ark. 516, 177 S.W. 6, 8.

UNINCLOSED PLACE. A place not entirely inclosed, an “inclosed” place being a place inclosed on all sides by some sort of material. Ex parte Wisner, 32 Cal.App. 637, 163 P. 868, 869.

UNINFECTED. Untainted or uncontaminated, not affected unfavorably, not impregnated or permeated with that which is bad or harmful. Leonard v. A. Habermann Provision Co., 143 Ohio St. 623, 56 N.E.2d 232, 237.

UNINTELLIGIBLE. That which cannot be understood.

UNIO. Lat. In canon law. A consolidation of two churches into one. Cowell.

UNIO PROLUM. Lat. Uniting of offspring. A method of adoption, chiefly used in Germany, by which step-children (on either or both sides of the house) are made equal, in respect to the right of succession, with the children who spring from the marriage of the two contracting parties. See Heinecc. Elem. § 188.

Ecclesiastical Law

Two or more benefices which have been united into one benefice. Sweet.

English Poor-Law

Two or more parishes which have been consolidated for the better administration of the poor-law therein.

Public Law

A popular term in America for the United States; also, in Great Britain, for the consolidated governments of England and Scotland, or for the political tie between Great Britain and Ireland.

Scotch Law

A “clause of union” is a clause in a feoffment by which two estates, separated or not adjacent, are united as one, for the purpose of making a single seisin sufficient for both.

UNION-JACK. The national flag of Great Britain and Ireland, which combines the banner of St. Patrick with the crosses of St. George and St. Andrew. The word “jack” is most probably derived from the surcoat, charged with a red cross, anciently used by the English soldiery. This appeal to have been called a “jaque,” whence the word “jacket,” anciently written “jacquit.” Some, however, without a shadow of evidence, derive the word from “Jacques,” the first alteration having been made in the reign of King James I. Wharton.

UNION MORTGAGE CLAUSE. A clause, as in a fire policy (together with the rider making the loss, if any, payable to the mortgagee), which provides that if the policy is made payable to a mortgagee of the insured real estate, no act or default of any person other than such mortgagee, or his agents or those claiming under him, shall affect his right to recover in case of loss on such real estate. Bankers’ Joint Stock Land Bank of Milwaukee, Wis., v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 158 Minn. 363, 197 N.W. 749. Prudential Ins. Co. of America v. German Mut. Fire Ins. Ass’n of Lohman, 231 Mo.App. 699, 105 S.W.2d 1001.

Such clause creates independent contract between insurer and mortgagee. Conard v. Moreland, 230 Iowa 520, 298 N.W. 628, 629. And is distinguished from “open mortgage clause” in that latter clause simply provides that policy is payable to mortgagee as his interest may appear. Prudential Ins. Co. of America v. German Mut. Fire Ins. Ass’n of Lohman, 231 Mo.App. 699, 105 S.W.2d 1001. And mortgagee under such latter clause is merely an appointee to receive fund recoverable in case of loss to extent of his interest. Capital Fire Ins. Co. of Cal. v. Langhorne, C.C.A.Minn., 146 F.2d 237, 241.

UNION OF CHURCHES. A combining and consolidating of two churches into one. Also it is when one church is made subject to another, and one man is rector of both; and where a conventual church is made a cathedral. Tomlins.

UNION SHOP. One in which none but members of labor union are engaged as workmen. People v. Fisher, 3 N.Y.S. 786, 788, 50 Hun, 552.

It was also said that “union shop” exists where employer is permitted to employ a non-union worker, but such worker is required to join the union as a requisite to his continuing work. And that it is distinguished from “closed shop” where the worker must be a member of the union as a condition precedent to his employment. Miners in General Group v. Hix, 123 W.Va. 637, 17 S.E.2d 810, 813.

UNION SOLDIERS. Those who fought in the American Civil War in support of the Union, in contradistinction to Confederate soldiers, who fought for the establishment of the new confederacy. Keely v. Board of Sup’rs of Dubuque County, 158 Iowa 205, 139 N.W. 473, 474.

UNIT CF PRODUCTION. The “unit of production” method of determining the taxable net income or profit in the oil or gas business is accomplished by a system of accounting by which is ascertained, as nearly as science will permit, the total amount of recoverable oil in the property, and to each barrel of this oil is assigned its part of the capital investment, and from the sale price of each barrel produced and sold there is deducted the expenses of producing it, and its proportion of the capital investment, leaving the balance as profit, and thus, when the property is exhausted, the operator has received back his capital and expenses, and accounted for his net income or loss. Carter v. Phillips, 88 Okl. 202, 212 P. 747, 750.

UNIT RULE. A method of valuing securities by multiplying the total number of shares held by the sale price of one share sold on a licensed stock exchange, ignoring all other facts regarding value. Citizens Fidelity Bank & Trust Co. v. Reeves, Ky., 259 S.W.2d 432, 434.

UNITAS PERSONARUM. Lat. The unity of persons, as that between husband and wife, or ancestor and heir.

UNITED GREEK CATHOLIC CHURCH. All the churches of the Byzantine Rite in communion with the See of Rome. The term is synonymous with "Uniate Greek Catholic Church" or "Uniat Greek Catholic Church," and signifies an ecclesiastical body in union with the Roman Catholic Church and acknowledging the primacy and supremacy of the pope. Morris v. Featro, 340 Pa. 354, 17 A.2d 403, 405.

UNITED IN INTEREST. A statutory term applicable to codefendants only when they are similarly interested in and will be similarly affected by the determination of the issues involved in the action; McCord v. McCord, 104 Ohio St. 274, 135 N.E. 548, 549; e. g., joint obligors upon a guaranty; Columbia Graphophone Co. v. Slawson, 100 Ohio St. 473, 126 N.E. 890, 891.

UNITED KINGDOM OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND. The official title of the kingdom composed of England, Scotland, Ireland, and Wales, and including the colonies and possessions beyond the seas, under the act of January 1, 1801, effecting the union between Ireland and Great Britain.

UNITED NATIONS. An organization started by the allied powers in World War II for the stated purposes of preventing war, providing justice and promoting welfare and human rights of peoples. It consists of a Security Council and a General Assembly and subordinate agencies.

UNITED STATES. This term has several meanings. It may be merely the name of a sovereign occupying the position analogous to that of other sovereigns in family of nations, it may designate territory over which sovereignty of United States extends, or it may be collective name of the states which are united by and under the Constitution.

UNITED STATES BONDS. Obligations for payment of money which have been at various times issued by the government of the United States.

UNITED STATES COMMISSIONER. Whose powers in federal matters, are in most respects the same as those of justices of the peace in felony offenses against laws of state, is not a judge or court, and does not hold court, but is an adjunct of court, possessing independent, though subordinate, judicial powers of his own. U. S. v. Napela, D.C.N.Y., 28 F.2d 898, 899.

UNITED STATES COURTS. Except in the case of impeachments the judicial power of the United States is vested by the Constitution in a supreme court and such other inferior courts as may be from time to time established by congress. All the judges are appointed by the president, with the advice and consent of the senate, to hold office during good behavior, and their compensation cannot be diminished during their terms of office. The judges, other than those of the supreme court, are circuit judges and district judges. The circuit judges compose the courts of appeals and the district judges hold the district courts, and also at times sit in the circuit courts of appeal. For a detailed statement of the territorial boundaries of the several districts and divisions of districts, see 28 U.S.C.A. § 81 et seq. and various special acts.

It shall be the duty of the district court of each judicial district to appoint such number of persons, to be known as United States commissioners, at such places in the district as may be designated by the district court. Rev.St.U.S. § 627 (28 USCA § 631). Austill v. United States, 58 Ct.C1. 232; United States v. Maresca, D.C.N.Y., 266 F. 713.

UNITED STATES CURRENCY. Commonly understood to include every form of currency authorized by the United States government, whether issued directly by it or under its authority. Appel v. State, 28 Ariz. 416, 237 P. 190, 191.

UNITED STATES NOTES. Promissory notes, resembling bank-notes, issued by the government of the United States.

UNITED STATES OFFICER. Usually and strictly, in United States statutes, a person appointed in the manner declared under Const. art. 2, § 2, McGrath v. U. S., C.C.A.N.Y., 275 F. 294, 300, providing for the appointment of officers, either by the President and the Senate, the President alone, the courts of law, or the heads of departments, Steele v. U. S., 45 S.Ct. 417, 418, 267 U.S. 505, 69 L.Ed. 761. Dropps v. U. S., C.C.A.Minn., 34 F.2d 15, 17.

UNITY. In the law of estates. The peculiar characteristic of an estate held by several in joint tenancy, and which is fourfold, viz., unity of interest, unity of title, unity of time, and unity of possession. In other words, joint tenants have one and the same interest, accruing by one and the same conveyance, commencing at one and the same time, and held by one and the same undivided possession. 2 Bl. Comm. 180.

UNITY OF INTEREST. Required in case of joint tenancy means that interests must accrue by one and same conveyance. Hernandez v. Becker, C.C. A.N.M., 54 F.2d 542, 547. It also signifies that no one of joint tenants can have a greater interest in the property than each of the others, while, in the case of tenants in common, one of them may have a larger share than any of the others. Williams, Real Prop. 134, 139.

UNITY OF POSSESSION. Joint possession of two rights by several titles. As if I take a lease of land from a person at a certain rent, and afterwards I buy the fee-simple of such land, by this I acquire unity of possession, by which the lease is extinguished. Cowell; Brown. It is also one of the essential properties of a joint estate, requiring that the joint tenants must hold the same undivided possession of the whole and enjoy same rights until death of one. Hernandez v. Becker, C.C.A.N.M., 54 F.2d 542, 547.

UNITY OF SEISIN. Where a person seised of land which is subject to an easement, profit à prendre, or similar right, also becomes seised of the land to which the easement or other right is annexed. Sweet.

UNITY OF TIME. One of the essential properties of a joint estate; the estates of the tenants being vested at one and the same period. 2 Bl. Comm. 181; Hernandez v. Becker, C.C.A.N.M., 54 F.2d 542, 547.

UNITY OF TITLE. Applied to joint tenants, signifies that they hold their property by one and the same title, while tenants in common may take property by several titles. Williams, Real Prop. 134.

Legal requirements of easement of "right of way of necessity" are unity of title, by which is meant that owner of dominant estate must show that his land and that of owner of servient estate once belonged to same person, severance of title, and necessity. Brasington v. Williams, 143 S.C. 223, 141 S.E. 375, 382.

UNIUS OMNINO TESTIS RESPONSIO NON AU-DIATUR. The answer of one witness shall not be heard at all; the testimony of a single witness shall not be admitted under any circumstances. A maxim of the civil and canon law. Cod. 4, 20, 9; 3 Bl. Comm. 370; Best, Ev. p. 426, § 390, and note.

UNIUSCUJUSQUE CONTRACTUS INITIUM SPECTANDUM EST, ET CAUSA. The commencement and cause of every contract are to be regarded. Dig. 17, 1, 8; Story, Bailm. § 56.

UNIVERSAL. Having relation to the whole or an entirety; pertaining to all without exception; a term more extensive than "general," which latter may admit of exceptions. See Blair v. Howell, 68 Iowa, 619, 28 N.W. 199; Koen v. State, 35 Neb. 676, 53 N.W. 595, 17 L.R.A. 821.

UNIVERSAL AGENT. One who is appointed to do all the acts which the principal can personally do, and which he may lawfully delegate the power to another to do. Story, Ag. 18; Baldwin v. Tucker, 112 Ky. 282, 63 S.W. 841, 57 L.R.A. 451.

UNIVERSAL LEGACY. See Legacy.

UNIVERSAL PARTNERSHIP. See Partnership.

UNIVERSAL REPRESENTATION. In Scotch law. A term applied to the representation by an heir of his ancestor. Bell.

UNIVERSAL SUCCESSION. In the civil law. Succession to the entire estate of another, living or dead, though generally the latter, importing succession to the entire property of the predecessor as a juridical entirety, that is, to all his active as well as passive legal relations. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 649.

UNIVERSALIA SUNT NOTIORA SINGULARI-BUS. 2 Rolle, 294. Things universal are better known than things particular.

UNIVERSITAS. Lat. In the civil law. A corporation aggregate. Dig. 3, 4, 7. Literally, a whole formed out of many individuals. 1 Bl. Comm. 469.

UNIVERSITAS FACTI. In the civil law. A plurality of corporeal things of the same kind, which are regarded as a whole; e. g., a herd of cattle, a stock of goods. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 162.

UNIVERSITAS JURIS. In the civil law. A quantity of things of all sorts, corporeal as well as incorporeal, which, taken together, are regarded as a whole; e. g., an inheritance, an estate. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 162.

UNIVERSITAS RERUM. In the civil law. A whole formed out of many individuals. 1 Bl. Comm. 162.

UNIVERSITAS SINGULARIBUS. 2 Rolle, 294. Things universal are better known than things particular.

UNIVERSITAS SORORITATIS. Lat. In the civil law. A corporation aggregate. Dig. 3, 4, 7. Literally, a whole formed out of many individuals. 1 Bl. Comm. 469.

UNIVERSITAS SUCCESSION. In the civil law. Succession to the entire estate of another, living or dead, though generally the latter, importing succession to the entire property of the predecessor as a juridical entirety, that is, to all his active as well as passive legal relations. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 649.

UNIVERSITAS RERUM. In the civil law. Literally, a whole of things. Several single things, which, though not mechanically connected with one another, are, when taken together, regarded as a whole in any legal respect. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 162.

UNIVERSITAS VEL CORPORATIO NON DICITUR ALIQUID FACERE NISI ID SIT COLLEGALITER DELIBERATUM, ETIAMSI MAJOR PARS ID FACIAT. A university or corporation is not said to do anything unless it be deliberated upon as a body, although the majority should do it. Da7. 48.

UNIVERSITY. An institution of higher learning, consisting of an assemblage of colleges united under one corporate organization and government, affording instruction in the arts and sciences and the learned professions, and conferring degrees. See Corn. v. Banks, 198 Pa. 397, 48 A. 277.

Whole body of teachers and scholars, engaged at particular place in giving and receiving instruction in higher branches of learning; also such persons, associated together as society or corporate body with definite organization and acknowledged powers and privileges, especially of conferring degrees, and forming institution for promotion of education in higher and more important branches of learning. West v. Board of Trustees of Miami University and Miami Normal School, 41 Ohio App. 367, 181 N.E. 144, 149.

UNIVERSITY COURT. See Chancellor's Courts in the Two Universities.

UNIVERSUS. Lat. The whole; all together. Calvin.

UNJUST. Contrary to right and justice, or to the enjoyment of his rights by another, or to the standards of conduct furnished by the laws. U. S. v. Oglesby Grocery Co., D.C.Ga., 264 F. 691, 695; Komen v. City of St. Louis, 316 Mo. 9, 289 S.W. 838, 841.

UNJUST ENRICHMENT, DOCTRINE OF. Doctrine that person shall not be allowed to profit or enrich himself inequitably at another's expense. American University v. Forbes, 88 N.H. 17, 183 A. 860, 862. Under this doctrine a defendant has something of value at the plaintiff's expense under circumstances which impose a legal duty of restitution. Herrmann v. Gleason, C.C.A.Mich., 126 F.2d 936, 940. Doctrine permits recovery in certain instances where person has received from another a benefit retention of which would be unjust. Seekins v. King, 66 R.I. 105, 17 A.2d 869, 871, 134 A.L.R. 1060. Doctrine is not contractual but is equitable in nature. State v. Martin, 59 Ariz. 438, 130 P.2d 48, 52.

"Unjust enrichment" of a person occurs when he has and retains money or benefits which in justice and equity belong to another. Hummel v. Hummel, 133 Ohio St. 520, 14 N.E.2d 923, 927. Thus one who has conferred a benefit upon another solely because of a basic mistake of fact induced by a nondisclosure is entitled to restitution on above doctrine. Conkling's Estate v. Champlin, 193 Okl. 79, 141 P.2d 569, 570.

UNKOUTH. Unknown. The law French form of the Saxon "uncouth." Britt. c. 12.

UNLAGE. Sax. An unjust law.

UNLARICH. In old Scotch law. That which is done without law or against law. Spelman.

UNLAW. In Scotch law. A witness was formerly inadmissible who was not worth the king's unlaaw; i. e., the sum of £10 Scots, then the common fine for absence from court and for small delinquencies. Bell.

UNLAWFUL. That which is contrary to law or unauthorized by law. State v. Chenaught, 20 N.M. 181, 147 P. 283, 285. That which is not lawful. State v. Bulot, 175 La. 21, 142 So. 787, 788. The acting contrary to, or in defiance of the law; disobeying or disregarding the law. While necessarily not implying the element of criminality, it is broad enough to include it. Sturgeon v. Crossby Mortuary, 140 Neb. 82, 299 N.W. 378, 383.

"Unlawful" and "illegal" are frequently used as synonymous terms, but, in the proper sense of the word, "unlawful," as applied to promises, agreements, considerations, and the like, denotes that they are ineffectual in law because they involve acts which, although not illegal, i. e., positively forbidden, are disapproved of by the law, and are therefore not recognized as the ground of legal rights, either because they are immoral or because they are against public policy. It is on this ground that contracts in restraint of marriage or of trade are generally void. Sweet. And see Hagerman v. Buchanan, 45 Iowa Eq. 292, 17 A. 946, 14 Am.St.Rep. 732; Tatsum v. State, 66 Ala. 467. People v. Chicago Gas Trust Co., 130 Ill. 268, 22 N.E. 798, 8 L.R.A. 497, 17 Am.St.Rep. 319.

UNLAWFUL ACT. Act contrary to law, and presupposes that there must be an existing law. State v. Campbell, 217 Iowa 848, 251 N.W. 717, 92 A.L.R. 1176.

In criminal jurisprudence, a violation of some prohibitory law and includes all willful, actionable violations of civil rights, and is not confined to criminal acts. State v. Hailey, 350 Mo. 300, 165 S.W.2d 422, 427.

The "unlawful acts" within manslaughter statutes consist of reckless conduct or conduct evincing marked disregard for safety of others. State v. Newton, 105 Utah 561, 144 P.2d 290, 293; State v. Thatcher, 108 Utah 63, 157 P.2d 258, 261.

UNLAWFUL ASSEMBLY. At common law. The meeting together of three or more persons, to the disturbance of the public peace, and with the intention of co-operating in the forcible and violent execution of some unlawful private enterprise. If they take steps towards the performance of their purpose, it becomes a rout; and, if they put their design into actual execution, it is a riot. 4 Bl. Comm. 146. To constitute offense it must appear that there was common intent of persons assembled to attain purpose, whether lawful or unlawful, by commission of acts of intimidation and disorder likely to produce danger to the public, or to the treachery or disturbance of others, become an "unlawful assembly." Koss v. State, 217 Wis. 325, 258 N.W. 860, 862.

UNLAWFUL BELLIGERENTS. Enemies passing the boundaries of the United States for purpose of destroying war industries and supplies without a uniform or other emblem signifying their belligerent status or discarding that means of identification after entry. Ex parte Quirin, App.D.C., 63 S.Ct. 2, 15, 317 U.S. 1, 87 L.Ed. 3.

UNLAWFUL DETAINER. The unjustifiable retention of the possession of lands by one whose original entry was lawful and of right, but whose right to the possession has terminated and who refuses to quit, as in the case of a tenant holding over after the termination of the lease and in spite of a demand for possession by the landlord. McDevitt v. Lambert, 80 Ala. 536, 2 So. 438; Silva v. Campbell, 84 Cal. 420, 24 Pac. 316; Brandley v. Lewis, 97 Utah 217, 92 P.2d 338, 339.

Actions of "unlawful detainer" concern only right of possession of realty, and differ from ejectment in that no ultimate question of title or estate can be determined. McDevitt v. Wright, 159 Kan. 615, 157 P.2d 514, 817.

Where an entry upon lands is unlawful, whether forcible or not, and the subsequent conduct is forcible and tortious, the offense committed is a "forcible entry and de-tainer;" but where the original entry is lawful, and the subsequent holding forcible and tortious, the offense is an "unlawful detainer" only. Pullen v. Boney, 4 N.J.L. 129.

UNLAWFUL ENTRY. An entry upon lands effected peaceably and without force, but which is without color of title and is accomplished by means of fraud or some other willful wrong. Blaco v. Haller, 9 Neb. 149, 1 N.W. 978.

UNLAWFUL TOUCHING OF PERSON'S BODY. Constituting physical injury to person may be indirect, as by precipitation on body of person of any material substance. Christy Bros. Circus v. Turnage, 38 Ga.App. 581, 144 S.E. 680, 681.

UNLAWFUL TRANSPORTATION OF INTOXICATING LIQUORS. To constitute this offense there must be a substantial movement or transporting of the liquor from one place or vicinity to another. Nelson v. State, 116 Neb. 219, 216 N.W. 556, 557.

This word is frequently used in indictments in the description of the offense; it is necessary when the crime did not exist at common law, and when a statute, in describing an offence which it creates, uses the word; 1 Mood.C.C. 339; but is unnecessary whenever the crime existed at common law and is manifestly illegal; 1 Chit. Cr.L. *241.

UNLESS. If it be not that, if it be not the case that, if not, supposing not, if it be not, except. West Lumber Co. v. Keen, Tex.Com.App., 237 S. W. 236; Ward v. Interstate Business Men's Acc. Ass'n, 185 Iowa, 674, 169 N.W. 451, 452. A reservation or option to change one's mind provided a certain event happens, a conditional promise. Federal Sign System v. Amavet, 7 La.App. 680, 682.

UNLESS LEASE. An oil and gas lease which provides that lease will be rendered null and void and lessee will automatically be relieved from liability, upon failure to commence operations or to pay rent. It must be expressly stipulated in the lease that lease shall become null and void at a certain time "unless" the lessee begins operations or pays the rental stipulated. Brunson v. Carter Oil Co., D.C.Okla., 259 F. 656, 663.

Where the word "unless" precedes the description of the act to be performed under an oil lease, no obligation to perform that act is imposed by the lease. McCrabb v. Moulton, C.C.A.Mo., 124 F.2d 689, 691.

UNLIQUIDATED. Not ascertained in amount., not determined; remaining unassessed or unsettled; as unliquidated damages; Davies v. Turner, 61 Ga.App. 531, 6 S.E.2d 356, 358.

A debt is spoken of as "unliquidated," if the amount thereof cannot be ascertained at the trial by a mere computation, based on the terms of the obligation or on some other accepted standard. Hetrick Mfg. Co. v. Barish, 120 Misc. 673, 199 N.Y.S. 755, 767.

Under the law of accord and satisfaction, a claim or debt will be regarded as unliquidated if it is in dispute as to the proper amount. Paulson Estate v. Naches—Selah Irr. Dist. 190 Wash. 205, 67 P.2d 856, 858.

UNLIQUIDATED DEMAND. Where it is admitted that one of two specific sums is due, but there is a dispute as to which is proper amount. Perryman Burns Coal Co. v. Seaboard Coal Co. of Connecticut, 128 Conn. 70, 20 A.2d 404, 405.

UNLIVERY. A term used in maritime law to designate the unloading of cargo of a vessel at the place where it is properly to be delivered. The Two Catharines, 24 F.Cas. 429.

An unloading clause in an automobile liability policy covers the entire process involved in the movement of articles by and from a motor vehicle to the place where they are turned over to the one to whom the insured is to make delivery, if the clause is construed in accordance with what may be called the "complete operation" rule. Pacific Auto. Ins. Co. v. Commercial Cas. Ins. Co. of N. Y., 161 P.2d 423, 108 Utah 500, 160 A.L.R. 1251. There are, however, two other rules or doctrines used by various courts in applying the unloading clause of such a policy. One is known as the "coming to rest" rule, and the other is the "continuous passage" rule. Blashfield, Cyc. of Automobile Law and Prac., Perm. Ed., § 3972.5. But the complete operation rule is said to be the modern doctrine, supported by the trend of the later cases. London Guarantee & Acc. Co. v. C. B. White & Bros., 49 S.E.2d 254, 188 Va. 195.

UNLOOKED FOR MISHAP OR UNTOWARD EVENT. One occurring unexpectedly and not naturally or in ordinary course of events. Fogg v. Van Saun Coal Co., 12 N.J.Misc. 680, 174 A. 419, 421.

UNMARKETABLE TITLE. When for vendee to accept title proffered would lay him open to fair probability of vexatious litigation with possibility of serious loss. Schoenberg v. O'Connor, 14 N.J. Misc. 412, 185 A. 377, 381. It being sufficient to render it so if ordinarily prudent man with knowledge of the facts and aware of legal questions involved would not accept it in the ordinary course.

Where some defect of substantial character exists and facts are known which fairly raise reasonable doubt as to title. Schul v. Clapp, 154 Kan. 372, 118 P.2d 570, 574. And mere quibbles and pecadillos which the ingenuity of counsel can raise against a title do not render it an “unmarketable title”. Barrett v. McMannis, 153 Kan. 420, 110 P.2d 774, 778.

UNMARRIED. Its primary meaning is never having been married; but it is a word of flexible meaning and it may be construed as not having a husband or wife at the time in question. 9 H.L. Cas. 601; People v. Weinstock, Mag.Ct., 140 N.Y.S. 177, 8 P.2d 693, 697. That which violates ethical code of profession or such conduct which is unbecoming member of profession in good standing. People v. Gorman, 346 Ill. 432, 178 N.E. 880, 885. It involves breach of duty which professional ethics enjoin. People v. Johnson, 344 Ill. 132, 176 N.E. 278, 282.

UNPRECEDEDENTED RAINFALL. An unusual and extraordinary rainfall as has no example or parallel in the history of rainfall in the vicinity affected, or as affords no reasonable warning or expectation that it will likely occur again. City of Birmingham v. Jackson, 229 Ala. 133, 155 So. 527. Trout Brook Co. v. Willow River Power Co., 221 Wis. 616, 267 N.W. 302, 305.

UNPROFESSIONAL CONDUCT. That which is by general opinion considered to be grossly unprofessional because immoral or dishonorable. State Board of Dental Examiners v. Savelle, 90 Colo. 177, 8 P.2d 693, 697. That which violates ethical code of profession or such conduct which is unbecoming member of profession in good standing. People v. Johnson, 344 Ill. 132, 176 N.E. 278, 282.

UNQUES. L. Fr. Ever; always. Ne unques, never.

UNREASONABLE REFUSAL TO SUBMIT TO OPERATION. An injured employee’s refusal to submit to an operation is unreasonable, so as to deprive him of right to workmen’s compensation if it appears that an operation of a simple character not involving serious suffering or danger will result in substantial physical improvement. Black Star Coal Co. v. Surgener, 297 Ky. 653, 181 S.W.2d 53, 54.

conspiracy that operates directly on prices or price structure and has for its purpose the fixing of prices. United States v. Waltham Watch Co., D.C.N.Y., 47 F.Supp. 524, 531.

UNREASONABLE RESTRAINT ON ALIENATION. Brought about by gift of absolute ownership in property followed by such condition as takes away incidents of such ownership. Bliven v. Borden, 56 R.I. 283, 185 A. 239, 244.

UNREASONABLE SEARCH. See Search.

UNRULY AND DANGEROUS ANIMALS. Within the meaning of the law, such as are likely to injure other domestic animals and persons. Fink v. United States Coal & Coke Co., 72 W.Va. 507, 78 S.E. 702, 703.

UNSEATED LAND. A phrase used in the Penn-sylvania tax laws to describe land which, though owned by a private person, has not been reclaimed, cultivated, improved, occupied, or made a place of residence. See Seated Land, supra. And see Stoetzel v. Jackson, 105 Pa. 567; McLeod v. Lloyd, 43 Or. 260, 71 P. 799. A tract of land ceases to be unseated as soon as it is actually occupied with a view to permanent residence. Wallace v. Scott, 7 Watts & S. (Pa.) 248.

UNTRUE. A statement is “untrue” which does not express things accurately, but not necessarily wilfully false. 3 B. & S. 929.

A statement is “untrue” which does not express things exactly as they are. Zolintakis v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of United States, C.C.A.Utah, 108 F.2d 902, 905.

UNUMQUODQUE DISSOLVITUR EODEM LIGA-TUR, DESTRUITUR. Everything is dissolved by the same means by which it is put together,—destroyed by the same means by which it is established. 2 Rolle, 39; Broom, Max. 891.

UNUMQUODQUE SOLEMNIUS VERITAS EST PRINCIPIORUM EST SIBI-PALIUS IN IPSO. Hob. 123. That which is the principal part of a thing is the thing itself.

UNUMQUODQUE EST ID QUOD EST PRINCI-PIALIS IN IPSO, DESTRUITUR. Everything is dissolved by the same solemnity with which it is created. Broom, Max. 884.

UNNUMERABLE FACTORS. See Factors.

UNUSUAL CIRCUMSTANCE. Requiring apportionment between life tenants and remaindermen of dividends declared upon stock held in corpus of trust is not one set up by fiduciary or court, but comes from some administrative or corporate act within corporation or some break down within corporate structure. In re Knox’ Estate, 328 Pa. 177, 195 A. 28, 30, 113 A.L.R. 1185.
UNVALUED POLICY. One where the value of property insured is not settled in policy, and in case of loss must be agreed on or proved. Hartford Live Stock Ins. Co. v. Gibson, 256 Ky. 338, 76 S.W.2d 17, 18.

UNWHOLESOME FOOD. Food not fit to be eaten; food which if eaten would be injurious.

UNWORTHY. Unbecoming, discretable, not having suitable qualities or value. Alsup v. State, 91 Tex.Cr.R. 224, 238 S.W. 667, 669.

UNWRITTEN LAW. All that portion of the law, observed and administered in the courts, which has not been enacted or promulgated in the form of a statute or ordinance, including the unenacted portions of the common law, general and particular customs having the force of law, and the rules, principles, and maxims established by judicial precedents or the successive like decisions of the courts. See Code Civ. Proc. Cal. § 1899; B. & C. Comp. Or. 1901, § 736 (Code 1930, § 9-609).

A popular expression to designate a supposed rule of law that a man who takes the life of his wife’s paramour or daughter’s seducer is not guilty of a criminal offence. Almerigi v. State, 17 Okl.Cr. 458, 188 P. 1094, 1096. A trial judge is said to have expressed to a jury his approval of a verdict based upon such a theory; see 43 Canada L. J. 764; see 19 Green Bag 721, an article from the London L. J.; see also 12 Law Notes 224.

The rule was much urged upon a jury in the common pleas of Philadelphia: Biddle, J., said to counsel: "In this court the ‘unwritten law’ is not worth the paper it isn’t written on." It was held that such defense is not available to one accused of homicide in Wenneken v. State, 116 Neb. 493, 218 N.W. 137, 138, and in People v. Young, 70 Cal. App.2d 28, 160 P.2d 132, 136.

UPKEEP. The act of keeping up or maintaining; maintenance, repair. Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co. v. Nisbet, 121 Conn. 682, 186 A. 643, 645.

UPLIFTED HAND. The hand raised towards the heavens, in one of the forms of taking an oath, instead of being laid upon the Gospels.

UPPER BENCH. The court of king’s bench, in England, was so called during the interval between 1649 and 1660, the period of the commonwealth, Rolle being then chief justice. See 3 BL Comm. 202.

UPSET PRICE. The price at which any subject, as lands or goods, is exposed to sale by auction, below which it is not to be sold. In a final decree in foreclosure, the decree should name an upset price large enough to cover costs and all allowances made by the court, receiver’s certificates and interest, liens prior to the bonds, amounts diverted from the earnings, and all undetermined claims which will be settled before the confirmation and sale. Blair v. St. Louis, H. & K R. Co., C.C.Mo., 25 P. 232; Brinckley v. Sager, 232 Wis. 88, 286 N.W. 570, 573.

UPSUN. In Scotch law. Between the hours of sunrise and sunset. Poinding must be executed with upsun. 1 Forb. Inst. pt. 3, p. 32.

URBAN. Of or belonging to a city or town. Derived from the Latin “urbanis,” which in that language imports the same meaning. City of South Pasadena v. City of San Gabriel, 134 Cal.App. 403, 25 P.2d 516.

URBAN HOMESTEAD. See Homestead.

URBAN SERVITUDE. City servitudes, or servitudes of houses, are called “urban.” They are the easements appertaining to the building and construction of houses; as, for instance, the right to light and air, or the right to build a house so as to throw the rain-water on a neighbor’s house. Mozley & Whitley; Civ. Code La. § 711.

URBS. Lat. In Roman law. A city, or a walled town. Sometimes it is put for civitas, and denotes the inhabitants, or both the city and its inhabitants; i.e., the municipality or commonwealth. By way of special pre-eminence, urbs meant the city of Rome. Ainsworth.

URE. L. Fr. Effect; practice. Mis en ure, put in practice; carried into effect. Kelham.

"Usage" cannot be proved by isolated instances, but must be certain, uniform and notorious. Unkovich v. New York Cent. R. Co., 128 N.J.Eq. 377, 16 A.2d 558, 561. It is distinguished from “custom” in that “usage” derives its efficacy from assent of parties to transaction, and hence is important only in consensual agreements, while “custom” derives its efficacy from its adoption into the law, is binding irrespective of any manifestation of assent by parties concerned, and may be of importance in any department of law. Gulf Refining Co. v. Universal Ins. Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 32 F.2d 555, 557.

"Usage," in French law, is the “uses” of Roman law, and corresponds very nearly to the tenancy at will or on sufferance of English law. Brown.

"Usage," in its most extensive meaning, includes both custom and prescription; but, in its narrower signification, the term refers to a general habit, mode, or course of proceeding. A usage differs from a custom, in that it does not require that the usage should be immemorial to establish it; but the usage must be known, certain, uniform, reasonable, and not contrary to law. Lowry v. Read, 3 Brewst. (Pa.) 452.

Fair Usage
See Fair Usage,
The word "trust" is employed since that statute to denote would have become a legal estate by force of the statute. However, widely different. The word "use" is employed principally the beneficial interest; a trust regards principally the relation between the party invested with the legal estate (whether by force of that statute or independently of it) and the party beneficially entitled, who has hitherto been said to have the equitable estate. Mozley & Whiteley.

A right of receiving so much of the natural profits of a thing as is necessary to daily sustenance.

It differs from "usufruct," which is a right not only to use, but to enjoy. 1 Browne, Civil & Adm. Law, 184.

Right given to any one to make a gratuitous use of a thing belonging to another, or to exact such a portion of the fruit it produces as is necessary for his personal wants and those of his family. Civ.Code La. art. 626.

Conveyancing

"Use" literally means "benefit;" thus, in an ordinary assignment of chattels, the assignor transfers the property to the assignee for his "absolute use and benefit." In the expressions "separate use," "superstitious use," and "charitable use," "use" has the same meaning Sweet.

Non-technical Sense

The "use" of a thing means that one is to enjoy, hold, occupy, or have some manner of benefit thereof. Bryson v. Hicks, 78 Ind.App. 111, 134 N.E. 874, 875. Use also means usefulness, utility, advantage, productive of benefit. Williams v. City of Norman, 85 Okl. 230, 205 P. 144, 148; National Surety Co. v. Jarrett, 95 W.Va. 420, 121 S.E. 291, 295, 36 A.L.R. 1171.

General

Cestui que use. A person for whose use and benefit lands or tenements are held by another. The latter, before the statute of uses, was called the "feoffee to use," and held the nominal or legal title.

Charitable use. See Charitable.

Contingent use. A use limited to take effect upon the happening of some future contingent event; as where lands are conveyed to the use of A. and B., after a marriage shall be had between them. 2 Bl.Comm. 334; Haywood v. Shreve, 44 N.J.L. 94; Jemison v. Blowers, 5 Barb. (N.Y.) 692.

Exclusive use. See Exclusive Use.

Executed use. The first use in a conveyance upon which the statute of uses operates by bringing the possession to it, the combination of which, e., the use and the possession, form the legal estate, and thus the statute is said to execute the use. Wharton.

Executory uses. These are springing uses, which confer a legal title answering to an executory devise; as when a limitation to the use of A. in fee is defeasible by a limitation to the use of B., to arise at a future period, or on a given event.

Existing use. See Existing Use.

Feoffee to use. A person to whom (before the statute of uses) land was conveyed "for the use" of a third person. He held the nominal or legal title, while the third person, called the "cestui que use," was entitled to the beneficial enjoyment of the estate.
Official use. An active use before the statute of uses, which imposed some duty on the legal owner or feoffor to uses; as a conveyance to A. with directions for him to sell the estate and distribute the proceeds among B., C., and D. To enable A. to perform this duty, he had the legal possession of the estate to be sold. Wharton.

Passive use. A permissive use (q. v.).

Permissive use. A passive use which was resorted to before the statute of uses, in order to avoid a harsh law; as that of mortmain or a feudal forfeiture. It was a mere invention in order to evade the law by secrecy; as a conveyance to A. to the use of B. A. simply held the possession, and B. enjoyed the profits of the estate. Wharton.

Resulting use. A use raised by equity for the benefit of a feoffor who has made a voluntary conveyance to uses without any declaration of the use. 2 Washb. Real Prop. 100. A resulting use arises where the legal seisin is transferred, and no use is expressly declared, nor any consideration or evidence of intent to direct the use. The use then remains in the original grantor, for it cannot be supposed that the estate was intended to be given away; and the statute immediately transfers the legal estate to such resulting use. Wharton.

Secondary use. A use limited to take effect in derogation of a preceding estate, otherwise called a “shifting use,” as a conveyance to the use of A. and his heirs, with a proviso that, when B. returns from India, then to the use of C. and his heirs. 1 Steph. Comm. 546.

Shifting use. A use which is so limited that it will be made to shift or transfer itself, from one beneficiary to another, upon the occurrence of a certain event after its creation. For example, an estate is limited to the use of A. and his heirs, provided that, upon the return of B. from Rome, it shall be to the use of C. and his heirs; this is a shifting use, which transfers itself to C. when the event happens. 1 Steph. Comm. 503; 2 Bi. Comm. 335. These shifting uses are common in all settlements; and, in marriage settlements, the first use is always to the owner in fee till the marriage, and then to other uses. The fee remains with the owner until the marriage, and then it shifts as uses arise. 4 Kent, Comm. 297.

Springing use. A use limited to arise on a future event where no preceding use is limited, and which does not take effect in derogation of any other interest than that which results to the grantor, or remains in him in the meantime. 2 Washb. Real Prop. 281; Smith v. Brisson, 90 N.C. 288.

Statute of uses. An English statute enacted in 1536, (27 Hen. VIII., c. 10,) directed against the practice of creating uses in lands, and which converted the purely equitable title of persons entitled to a use into a legal title or absolute ownership with right of possession. The statute is said to “execute the use,” that is, it abolishes the intervening estate of the feoffee to uses, and makes the beneficial interest of the cestui que use an absolute legal title. See Ohio & Colorado Smelting & Refining Co. v. Barr, 58 Colo. 116, 144 P. 552, 554.

Superstitious uses. See that title.

Use and habitation. Within a grant does not mean the exclusive use and habitation, but the necessities of the grantee are determinative of extent of privileges to be enjoyed. Barrett v. Barrett, La.App., 5 So.2d 381, 383.

Use and occupation. This is the name of an action, being a variety of assumpsit, to be maintained by a landlord against one who has had the occupation and enjoyment of an estate, under a contract to pay therefor, express or implied, but not under such a lease as would support an action specifically for rent. Thackray v. Ritz, 130 Misc. 403, 223 N.Y.S. 668, 669.

Use plaintiff. One for whose use (benefit) an action is brought in the name of another. Thus, where the assignee of a chose in action is not allowed to sue in his own name, the action would be entitled "A. B. (the assignor) for the Use of C. D. (the assignee) against E. F." In this case, C. D. is called the "use plaintiff."

USED FOR ILLEGAL CONVEYING OF LIQ- UOR. Automobile is so used, if liquor is in or on the car and is being intentionally conveyed by its movements, though it is upon the person of an occupant of the car while he is conveyed by it. Morris v. State, 220 Ala. 418, 125 So. 655.

USEE. A person for whose use a suit is brought; otherwise termed the "use plaintiff."

USEFUL. The term as used in the patent law, when applied to a machine, means that the machine will accomplish its purpose practically when applied in industry. Besser v. Merrilat Culvert Core Co., C.C.A. Iowa, 243 F. 611.

USEFULNESS. Capabilities for use. The word pertains to the future as well as to the past. Chesapeake, 0. & S. W. R. Co. v. Dyer Co., 87 Tenn. 712, 11 S.W. 943.

USER. The actual exercise or enjoyment of any right or property. It is particularly used of franchises.

Adverse User

Such a use of the property under claim of right as the owner himself would make, asking no permission, and disregarding all other claims to it, so far as they conflict with this use. Blanchard v. Moulton, 63 Me. 434; Murray v. Scribner, 74 Wis. 602, 43 N.W. 549; Thorworth v. Scheets, 269 Ill. 573, 110 N.E. 42, 45; Cummins v. Dumas, 147 Miss. 215.113 So. 332, 334.
USER DE ACTION

USER DE ACTION. L. Fr. In old practice. The pursuing or bringing an action. Cowell.

USHER. This word is said to be derived from "huissier," and is the name of a subordinate officer in some English courts of law. Archb.Pr. 25.

USHER OF THE BLACK ROD. The gentleman usher of the black rod is an officer of the house of lords appointed by letters patent from the crown. His duties are, by himself or deputy, to desire the attendance of the commons in the house of peers when the royal assent is given to bills, either by the king in person or by commission, to execute orders for the commitment of persons guilty of breach of privilege, and also to assist in the introduction of peers when they take the oaths and their seats. Brown.

USING MAIL TO DEFRAUD. The elements of this offense are the formation of a scheme or artifice to defraud, and use of mails for purpose of executing or attempting to execute such scheme or artifice; the latter element being gist of the offense. 18 U.S.C.A. § 1341. Stryker v. United States, C.C.A.Colo., 95 F.2d 601, 604, 605. The crime is complete when mails are used in such scheme, and what happened subsequently is not controlling. United States v. Ames, D.C.N.Y., 39 F.Supp. 885, 886.

USING THE SERVICE OF ANOTHER FOR PAY. This phrase as used in Compensation Act defining employer means right to control the means and manner of that service, as distinguished from results of such service, the word "service" meaning the performance of labor for the benefit of another. Rutherford v. Tobin Quarries, 336 Mo. 1170, 82 S.W.2d 918, 925.

USO. In Spanish law. Usage; that which arises from certain things which men say and do and practice uninterruptedly for a great length of time, without any hindrance whatever. Las Partidas, pt. 1, tit. 2, 1, 1.

USQUE. Lat. Up to; until. This is a word of exclusion, and a release of all demands usque ad a certain day does not cover a bond made on that day. 2 Mod. 28.

USQUE AD FILUM AQUIE, OR VUE. Up to the middle of the stream or road.

USUAL COVENANTS. See Covenant.

USUAL PLACE OF ABODE. Within meaning of statute relating to service of process is place where defendant is actually living at time of service. State ex rel. Merritt v. Heffernan, 142 Fla. 496, 195 So. 145, 147, 127 A.L.R. 1263; Caskey v. Peterson, 220 Wis. 690, 263 N.W. 658, 660.

USUAL TERMS. A phrase in the common-law practice, which meant pleading issuably, rejoining gratis, and taking short notice of trial. When a defendant obtained further time to plead, these were the terms usually imposed. Wharton.

USUARIUS. Lat. In the civil law. One who had the mere use of a thing belonging to another for the purpose of supplying his daily wants; a usu-ary. Dig. 7, 8, 10, pr.; Calvin.

USUCAPIO, or USUCAPTIO. A term of Roman law used to denote a mode of acquisition of property. It corresponds very nearly to the term “prescription.” But the prescription of Roman law differed from that of the English law, in this: that no mala fide possessor (i. e., person in possession knowingly of the property of another) could, by however long a period, acquire title by possession merely. The two essential requisites to usucapio were justa causa (i. e., title) and bona fides, (i. e., ignorance.) The term “usucapio” is sometimes, but erroneously, written “usuceptio.” Brown. See Pavey v. Vance, 56 Ohio St. 162, 46 N.E. 898.

As to "lucrativa usucapio," see that title.

USUCAPIO CONSTITUTA EST UT ALIQUIS LITIUM FINIS ESET. Prescription was instituted that there might be some end to litigation. Dig. 41, 10, 5; Broom, Max. 894, note.

USUFRUCT. In the civil law. The right of enjoying a thing, the property of which is vested in another, and to draw from the same all the profit, utility, and advantage which it may produce, provided it be without altering the substance of the thing. Civ.Code La. art. 533. Mulford v. Le Franc, 26 Cal. 102; Modern Music Shop v. Concordia Fire Ins. Co. of Milwaukee, 131 Misc. 305, 226 N.Y.S. 630, 635.

Imperfect Usufruct

An imperfect or quasi usufruct is that which is of things which would be useless to the usufructuary if he did not consume or expend them or change the substance of them; as, money, grain, liquors. Civ.Code La. art. 534.

See Quasi Usufruct infra.

Legal Usufruct

See that title.

Perfect Usufruct

An usufruct in those things which the usufructuary can enjoy without changing their substance, though their substance may be diminished or deteriorate naturally by time or by the use to which they are applied, as, a house, a piece of land, furniture, and other movable effects. Civ.Code La. art. 534.

Quasi Usufruct

In the civil law. Originally the usufruct gave no right to the substance of the thing, and consequently none to its consumption; hence only an inconvertible thing could be the object of it, whether movable or immovable. But in later times the right of usufruct was, by analogy, extended to consumable things, and therewith arose the distinction between true and quasi usufructs. See Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 307; Civ.Code La. art. 534. See Imperfect Usufruct, supra.

USUFRUCTUARY. In the civil law. One who has the usufruct or right of enjoying anything in which he has no property, Cartwright v. Cartwright, 18 Tex. 628.

USUFRUIT. In French law. The same as the usufruct of the English and Roman law.

USURA. Lat. In the civil law. Money given for the use of money; interest. Commonly used in the plural, “usurces.” Dig. 22, 1.

USURA EST COMMODUM CERTUM QUOD PROPER USUM REI MUTUATIONE RECIPITUR. SED SECUNDARIO SPIRARE DE ALIQUA RETRIBUTIONE, AD VOLUNTATEM EJUS QUI MUTUATUS JEST, HOC NON EST VITIOSUM.

Usury is a certain benefit which is received for the use of a thing lent. But to have an understanding [literally, to breathe or whisper] in an incidental way, about some compensation to be made at the pleasure of the borrower, is not lawful. Branch, Princ.; 5 Coke, 70b; Glan. lib. 7, c. 16.

USURA MANIFESTA. Manifest or open usury; as distinguished from usura velata, veiled or concealed usury, which consists in giving a bond for the loan, in the amount of which is included the stipulated interest.

USURA MARITIMA. Interest taken on bottomry or respondentia bonds, which is proportioned to the risk, and is not affected by the usury laws.

USURIOUS. Pertaining to usury; partaking of the nature of usury; involving usury; tainted with usury; as, a usurious contract.

USURIOUS CONTRACT. A contract if interest contracted to be paid exceeds the rate established by statute. Commerce Farm Credit Co. v. Ramp, Tex.Civ.App., 116 S.W.2d 1144, 1149. It being sufficient when there is contingency whereby lender may get more than lawful rate of interest. Reynolds Mortg. Co. v. Thomas, Tex.Civ.App., 61 S.W.2d 1011, 1013. See, also, Usury.

USURP. To seize and hold any office by force, and without right; applied to seizure of office, place, functions, powers, rights, etc. State ex rel. Scanes v. Babb, 124 W.Va. 428, 20 S.E.2d 683, 686.

USURPATIO. Lat. In the civil law. The interruption of a usucaption, by some act on the part of the real owner. Calvin.

USURPATION. The unlawful assumption of the use of property which belongs to another; an interruption or the disturbing a man in his right and possession. Tomlins.

The unlawful seizure or assumption of sovereign power; the assumption of government or supreme power by force or illegally, in derogation of the constitution and of the rights of the lawful ruler.

"Usurpation" for which writ of prohibition may be granted involves attempted exercise of power not possessed by inferior officer. Ex parte Wilkinson, 220 Ala. 529, 126 So. 102, 104.

USURPATION OF ADVOWSON. An injury which consists in the absolute ouster or dispossession of the patron from the advowson or right of presentation, and which happens when a stranger who has no right presents a clerk, and the latter is thereupon admitted and instituted. Brown.

USURPATION OF FRANCHISE OR OFFICE. The unjustly intruding upon or exercising any office, franchise, or liberty belonging to another. See, also, Usurpation.

“Usurpation” of public office authorizing quo warranto action under statute may be with or without forcible seizure of office and prerogatives thereof, and may consist of mere unauthorized assumption and exercise of power in performing duties of office upon claim of right thereto. State ex rel. Kirk v. Wheatley, 133 Ohio St. 104, 12 N.E.2d 491, 493.

USURPED POWER. In insurance. An invasion from abroad, or an internal rebellion, where armies are drawn up against each other, when the laws are silent, and when the firing of towns becomes unavoidable. These words cannot mean the power of a common mob. 2 Marsh.Ins. 791.

USURPER. One who assumes the right of government by force, contrary to and in violation of the constitution of the country. Toul, Droit. Civ. n. 32.

USURPER OF A PUBLIC OFFICE. One who either intrudes into a vacant office or ousts the incumbent without any color of title. Neal v. Parker, 200 Ark. 10, 139 S.W.2d 41, 44. One who intrudes on office and assumes to exercise its functions without legal title or color of right thereto. Alleger v. School Dist. No. 16, Newton County; Mo.App., 142 S.W.2d 660, 663; State ex rel. City of Republic v. Smith, 345 Mo. 1158, 139 S.W.2d 491, 493.
USURY

USURY,

Modern Law
An illegal contract for a loan or forbearance of money, goods, or things in action, by which illegal interest is reserved, or agreed to be reserved or taken. Midland Loan Finance Co. v. Lorentz, 209 Minn. 278, 296 N.W. 911, 914, 915. An un- conscientable and exorbitant rate or amount of inter- est. Heilos v. State Land Co., 113 N.J.Eq. 239, 166 A. 330, 332. An unlawful contract upon the loan of money, to receive the same again with ex- orbitant increase. 4 Bl.Comm. 156. The reserving and taking, or contracting to reserve and take, either directly or by indirect, a greater sum for the use of money than the lawful interest. See Henry v. Bank of Salina, 5 Hill. (N.Y.) 528; In re Elmore Cotton Mills (D.C.) 217 F. 810, 814. See, also, Usurious Contract.

"Usury" does not depend on question whether the lender actually gets more than the legal rate of interest or not; but on whether there was a purpose in his mind to make more than legal interest for the use of money, and whether, by the terms of the transaction, and the means used to effect the loan, he may by its enforcement be enabled to get more than the legal rate. American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Schenck, Tex.Civ.App., 85 S.W.2d 833, 837.

A profit greater than the lawful rate of interest, intentionally exacted as a bonus, for the forbearance of an existing indebtedness or a loan of money, imposed upon the necessities of the borrower in a transaction where the money is to be returned at all events. Monk v. Goldstein, 172 N.C. 516, 90 S.E. 519, 520; Anderson v. Beadle, 35 N.M. 654, 5 P.2d 528, 529.

Old English Law

USUS. Lat. In Roman law. A precarious enjoy- ment of land, corresponding with the right of usus. Usufruct; usufructuary right or possession. The temporary right of using a thing, without having the ultimate property, or full dominion, of the substance. 2 Bl.Comm. 327.

UT CURRERE SOLEBAT. Lat. As it was wont to run; applied to a water-course.

UT DE FEODO. L. Lat. As of fee.

UT HOSPITIÆ. Lat. As guests. 1 Salk. 25, pl. 10.

UT PANÉ AD PAUCOS, METUS AD OMNES PERVENIAT. That the punishment may reach a few, but the fear of it affect all. A maxim in criminal law, expressive of one of the principal objects of human punishment. 4 Inst. 6; 4 Bl. Comm. 11.

UT RES MAGIS VALET QUAM PEREAT. That the highest power of a king is to be able to do all he wishes, so the highest greatness of him is to wish all he is able to do.

UTAS. In old English practice. Octave; the octave; the eighth day following any term or feast. Cowell.

UTENSIL. A much broader term than "tool," though it may be applicable to many implements designated tools in common parlance. Murphy v. Continental Ins. Co., 178 Iowa, 375, 157 N.W. 855, 857, L.R.A. 1917B, 934. For "Farm Utensils," see that title.

UTERINE. Born of the same mother. A uterine brother or sister is one born of the same mother, but by a different father.

UTERQUE. Lat. Both; each. "The justices, be- ing in doubt as to the meaning of this word in an indictment, demanded the opinions of grammar- ians, who delivered their opinions that this word doth aptly signify one of them." 1 Leon. 241.

UTFANGTHEF, or UTFANGENETHEF. In Sax- on and old English law. The privilege of a lord of a manor to judge and punish a thief dwelling out of his liberty, and committing theft without the same, if he were caught within the lord's juris- diction. Cowell.
The right of the lord of a manor to hang a thief caught with the stolen goods, whether or not the capture was made on the manor. 1 Holdsw. Hist. E. L. 11. See Infangenthef.

UTI. Lat. In the civil law. To use. Strictly, to use for necessary purposes; as distinguished from "frui," to enjoy. Heinecc. Elem. lib. 2, tit. 4, § 415.

UTI FRL Lat. In the civil law. To have the full use and enjoyment of a thing, without damage to its substance. Calvin.

UTI POSSIDETIS. Lat.

The Civil Law

A species of interdict for the purpose of retaining possession of a thing, granted to one who, at the time of contesting suit, was in possession of an immovable, in order that he might be declared the legal possessor. Hallifax, Civil Law, b. 3, c. 6, no. 8. See Utrubi.

International Law

A phrase to signify that the parties to a treaty are to retain possession of what they have acquired by force during the war. Wheat. Int. Law, 627.

A treaty which terminates a war may adopt this principle or that of the status quo ante bellum, or a combination of the two. In default of any treaty stipulation, the former doctrine prevails. Guillermo Alvarez y Sanches v. U. S., 42 Ct.C1. 458.

UTILE PER INUTILE NON VITIATUR. The useful is not vitiated by the useless. Surplusage does not spoil the remaining part if that is good in itself. Dyer, 392; Broom, Max. 627; 2 Wheat. 221, 4 L.Ed. 224.

UTILIDAD. Span. In Spanish law. The profit expressed the same sentiment. Adams, Rom. Ant. 98, 100.

UTILIS. Lat. In the civil law. Useful; beneficial; equitable; available. Actio utilis, an equitable action. Calvin. Dies utilis, an available day.

UTILITY. In patent law. Industrial value; the capability of being so applied in practical affairs as to prove advantageous in the ordinary pursuits of life, or add to the enjoyment of mankind. Collison v. Dean, C.C.A.Okl., 70 F.2d 55, 58. The absence of frivolity and mischievousness, and utility for some beneficial purpose. Rob. Pat. § 339. But there is no utility if the invention can be used only to commit a fraud with, Klein v. Russell, 19 Wall. 433, 22 L.Ed. 116; or for some immoral purpose, Lowell v. Lewis, 1 Mason, 182, F. Cas.No.8,568; or can be used only for gambling purposes in saloons, Schultze v. Holtz, C.C.Cal., 82 F. 448; or if the invention is dangerous in its use, Mitchell v. Tilghman, 19 Wall. 287, 22 L.Ed. 125.

"Utility" is established if only partial success is attained. Emery Industries v. Schumann, C.C.A.111., 111 F.2d 209, 211.

The "utility" which an infringing defendant is estopped to deny means sufficient practical utility to make a device useful in the sense of the patent statute. The estoppel does not forbid him to deny that there is any useful function, or new result serving to give inventive character to the slight step which a patentee has taken in differentiation from prior art. Sandy MacGregor Co. v. Vaco Grip Co., C.C.A.Ohio, 2 F.2d 655, 656.

ULTAGATUS, or UTLAGATUM. In old English law. An outlawed person; an outlaw.

ULTAGATUS EST QUASI EXTRA LEGEM POS-ITUS. CAPUT GERIT LUPINUM. 7 Coke, 14. An outlaw is, as it were, put out of the protection of the law. He bears the head of a wolf.

ULTAGATUS PRO CONTUMACIA ET FUGA, NON PROPTER HOC CONVICTUS EST DE FAC-TO PRINCIPAL!. Fleta. One who is outlawed for contumacy and flight is not on that account convicted of the principal fact.

UTLESSE. An escape of a felon out of prison.

The “utmost care” which is required of a carrier of persons for reward, means the highest degree of care, but does not mean that in point of fact the same degree or quantum of care should be applied in every case, since the necessary degree of care varies with the dangers to be anticipated by a man of the utmost degree of prudence from the surrounding circumstances and conditions of each case. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co. v. Shelton, 135 Okl. 53, 273 P. 988, 990.

UTMOST RESISTANCE. This term, under the rule that to constitute rape there must be utmost resistance by the woman, is a relative rather than a positive term, and means that greatest effort of which she is capable must be used to foil assailant. State v. Brewster, 208 Iowa, 122, 222 N.W. 6. McLain v. State, 159 Wis. 204, 149 N.W. 771, 772.

UTRUBI, Civil Law

The name of a species of interdict for retaining a thing, granted for the purpose of protecting the possession of a movable thing, as the uti possidetis was granted for an immovable. Inst. 4, 15, 4; Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 260.

Scotch Law

An interdict as to movables, by which the colorable possession of a bona fide holder is continued until the final settlement of a contested right; corresponding to uti possidetis as to heritable property. Bell.

UTRUMQUE NOSTRUM. Both of us. Words used formerly in bonds.

To utter and publish an instrument, as a counterfeit note, is to declare or assert, directly or indirectly, by words or actions, that it is good; uttering it is a declaration that it is good, with an intention or offer to pass it. Whart.Crim.Law, § 703; Corn. v. Searle, 2 Binn., Pa., 338, 4 Am.Dec. 446; Terry v. State, 29 Ala.App. 340, 197 So. 44, 45.

To utter, as used in a statute against forgery and counterfeiting, means to offer, whether accepted or not, a forged instrument, with the representation, by words or actions, that the same is genuine. See State v. Horner, 48 Mo. 522; People v. Rathburn, 21 Wend., N.Y., 521; People v. Caton, 25 Mich. 392; Commonwealth v. Fenwick, 177 Ky. 685, 198 S.W. 32, 34, L.R.A.1918B, 1189; Jones v. State, 69 Okl.Cr. 244, 101 P.2d 860, 863; 2 Bish.Cr.L. § 605.

"Uttering" or "publishing" a check consists in presenting it for payment, and the act is then done although no money may be obtained. State v. Hobl, 108 Kan. 261, 194 P. 921, 924.

In a statute making utter desertion for three years a ground for divorce, it suggests an abnegation of all the duties and obligations resulting from the marriage contract. Moody v. Moody, 118 Me. 454, 108 A. 849.

UTTER BAR. In English law. The bar at which those barristers, usually junior men, practice who have not yet been raised to the dignity of king's counsel. These junior barristers are said to plead without the bar; while those of the higher rank are admitted to seats within the bar, and address the court or a jury from a place reserved for them, and divided off by a bar, Brown. Also called "outer bar."

UTTER BARRISTER. In English law. Those barristers who plead without the bar, and are distinguished from benchers, or those who have been readers, and who are allowed to plead within the bar, as the king's counsel are. Cowell. See Outer Bar.

UXOR. Lat. In the civil law. A wife; a woman lawfully married.

Et Uxor

And his wife. A term used in indexing, abstracting, and describing conveyances made by a man and his wife as grantors, or to a man and his wife as grantees. Often abbreviated "et ux." Thus, "John Doe et ux. to Richard Roe."

Jure Uxoris

In right of his wife. A term used of a husband who joins in a deed, is seised of an estate, brings a suit, etc., in the right or on the behalf of his wife. 3 Bl. Comm. 210.

UXOR ET FILIUS SUNT NOMINA NATURE. Wife and son are names of nature. 4 Bac. Works, 350.

UXOR NON EST SUI JURIS, SED SUB POTESTATE VIRI. A wife is not her own mistress, but is under the power of her husband. 3 Inst. 108.

UXOR SEQUITUR DOMICILIUM VIRI. A wife follows the domicile of her husband. Tray. Lat. Max. 606.

UXORICIDE. The killing of a wife by her husband; one who murders his wife. Not a technical term of the law.

That period of time between the end of one term of court and the beginning of another.
VACATION

Sometimes, any time when the court is not in session. St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. v. Ingram, 118 Ark. 377, 176 S.W. 692, 693.

Under practice statutes the intermission between the calls of the equity docket. West v. State ex rel. Matthews, 233 Ala. 588, 173 So. 46, 47.

Ecclesiastical Law

Vacation signifies that a church or benefice is vacant; e. g., on the death or resignation of the incumbent, until his successor is appointed. 2 Inst. 359; Phillim.Ecc.Law, 495.

VACATION BARRISTER. See Barrister.

VACATUR. Lat. Let it be vacated. In practice, a rule or order by which a proceeding is vacated; a vacating.

VACATURA. An avoidance of an ecclesiastical benefice. Cowell.

VACCARIA. In old English law. A dairyhouse. Co. Litt. 5b.

VACCINATION. Inoculation with vaccine or the virus of cowpox as a preventive against the small-pox; frequently made compulsory by statute. Daniel v. Putnam County, 113 Ga. 570, 38 S.E. 980, 54 L.R.A. 292; Zucht v. King, Tex.Civ.App., 225 S.W. 267.

VACUA POSSESSIO. Lat. The vacant possession, i.e., free and unburdened possession, which. (e. g.), a vendor had and has to give to a purchaser of lands.

VACUITY. Emptiness; vacancy; want of reality; nihility. McQueen v. Ahbe, 99 W.Va. 650, 130 S.E. 261, 262.

VACUUM. Practically synonymous with suction, although suction may be the result of vacuum. Pennsylvania Rubber Co. v. Dreadnaught Tire & Rubber Co., D.C.Del., 225 F. 138, 141.

VACUUS. Lat. In the civil law. Empty; void; vacant; unoccupied. Calvvin.

VADES. Lat. In the civil law. Pledges; sureties; bail; security for the appearance of a defendant or accused person in court. Calvvin.

VADIARE DUELLUM. L. Lat. In old English law. To wage or gage the duellum; to wage battle; to give pledges mutually for engaging in the trial by combat.

VADIUM MORTUUM. A mortgage or dead pledge; a security given by the borrower of a sum of money, by which he grants to the lender an estate in fee, on condition that, if the money be not repaid at the time appointed, the estate so put in pledge shall continue to the lender as dead or gone from the mortgagor. 2 Bl.Comm. 157.

VADIUM PONERE. To take bail for the appearance of a person in a court of justice. Tomlins.

VADIUM VIVUM. A species of security by which the borrower of a sum of money made over his estate to the lender until he had received that sum out of the issues and profits of the land. It was so called because neither the money nor the lands were lost, and were not left in dead pledge, but this was a living pledge, for the profits of the land were constantly paying off the debt. Litt. § 206; 1 Pow.Mortg. 3; Termes de la Ley; Spect v. Spect, 88 Cal. 437, 26 P. 203, 13 L.R.A. 137, 22 Am.St.Rep. 314; O’Neill v. Gray, 39 Hun (N.Y.) 566; Kortright v. Cady, 21 N.Y. 344, 78 Am.Dec. 145.

VADLET. In old English law. The king’s eldest son; hence the valet or knave follows the king and queen in a pack of cards. Bar. Obs. St. 344.

VADELET. See Valec.

VADUM. In old records, a ford, or wading place. Cowell.

VAGABOND. A vagrant or homeless wanderer without means of honest livelihood. Neering v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 383 Ill. 366, 50 N.E.2d 497, 502. One who wanders from place to place, having no fixed dwelling, or, if he has one, not abiding in it; a wanderer, especially such a person who is lazy and generally worthless and without means of honest livelihood. Goodman v. Eggers, 11 N.J.Misc. 811, 168 A. 317, 318.

Vagabonds are described in old English statutes as “such as wake on the night and sleep on the day, and haunt customizable taverns and ale-houses and routs about; and no man wot from whence they came, nor whither they went.” 4 Bl.Comm. 169. See Forsyth v. Forsyth, 46 N.J.Eq. 400, 19 A. 119; Johnson v. State, 28 Tex. App. 562, 11 S.W. 1005.

VAGABONDUM NUNCAPAMUS EUM QUI NUL-LIBI DOMICILIUM CONTRAXIT HABITATION- IS. We call him a "vagabond" who has acquired nowhere a domicile of residence. Phillim. Dom. 23, note.

VAGRANCY. At common law, the act of going about from place to place by a person without visible means of support, who is idle, and who, though able to work for his or her maintenance, refuses to do so, but lives without labor or on the charity of others. Ex parte Hudgins, 86 W. Va. 526, 103 S.E. 327, 328, 9 A.L.R. 1361. See Vagrant.

Ordinarily, a course of conduct or manner of life, rather than a single act, is necessary to give rise to charge of "vagrancy". State v. Suman, 216 Minn. 293, 12 N.W.2d 620, 621.

Under some statutes, however, a single act may be sufficient. 66 C.J. p. 401. Thus, it has been held that the act of prowling about and creeping up on parked automobiles and their occupants at night, under circumstances indicating an intent to commit a crime, constitutes vagrancy. Smith v. Drew, 26 F.2d 1040, 175 Wash. 11. It has also been held that, although traveling by automobile, a person may nevertheless be a vagrant, and, even though he travels without stop or hesitation for a considerable distance, he may still come within a statute punishing one who "wanders about" at late hours. Blashfield, Cyclopedia of Automobile Law and Practice, Permachrome, § 5528.84.

VAGRANT. At common law, wandering or going about from place to place by idle person who had no lawful or visible means of support and who sus- tained on charity and did not work, through able to do so. State v. Harlowe, 174 Wash. 227, 24 P.2d 601.

A general term, including, in English law, the several classes of idle and disorderly persons, rogues, and vagabonds, and incorrigible rogues. 4 Steph. Comm. 308, 309.

One who strolls from place to place, an idle wanderer, specifically, one who has no settled habitation, a vagabond. Neering v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 383 Ill. 366, 50 N.E.2d 497, 502. A person able to work who spends his time in idleness or immorality, having no property to support him and without some visible and known means of fair, honest and reputable livelihood. State v. Oldham, 224 N.C. 415, 30 S.E.2d 318, 319. One who is apt to become a public charge through his own laziness. People, on Complaint of McDonough, v. Gesino, Sp. Sess., 22 N.Y.S.2d 284, 285. See Vagrancy.

A person who lives without employment is not a "vagrant" if he has sufficient means belonging to himself or means provided for him in a legitimate way. People v. Banwer, Mag.Ct., 22 N.Y.S.2d 566, 569, 571.

VAGRANT ACT. In English law. The statute 5 Geo. IV. c. 83, which is an act for the punishment of idle and disorderly persons; rogues and vagabonds; and incorrigible rogues. 5 B. & C. 583

One who strolls from place to place, an idle wanderer, specifically, one who has no settled habitation, a vagabond. Neering v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 383 Ill. 366, 50 N.E.2d 497, 502. A person able to work who spends his time in idleness or immorality, having no property to support him and without some visible and known means of fair, honest and reputable livelihood. State v. Oldham, 224 N.C. 415, 30 S.E.2d 318, 319. One who is apt to become a public charge through his own laziness. People, on Complaint of McDonough, v. Gesino, Sp. Sess., 22 N.Y.S.2d 284, 285. See Vagrancy.

VAGUE. Indefinite. City of Cincinnati v. Schill, 125 Ohio St. 57, 180 N.E. 545, 547. Uncertain; not susceptible of being understood. 5 B. & C. 583.

Vague and unsatisfactory testimony is that which is dim and shadowy and fails to relieve the mind of the trier of facts from doubt or uncertainty. Weliska's Case, 125 Me. 147, 131 A. 860, 861.

VALEAT QUANTUM VALERE POTEST. It shall have effect as far as it can have effect. Cwmp. 600; 4 Kent, Comm. 493; Shep.Touch. 87.

VALEC, VALENT, or VADELET. In old English law. A young gentleman; also a servitor or gentleman of the chamber. Cowell.

VALENTIA. L. Lat. The value or price of anything.

VALESIIERIA. In old English law. The proving by the kindred of the slain, one on the father's side, and another on the t of the mother, that a man was a Welshman. Wharton. See Engleshire.

VALET. Anciently, a name denoting young gentlemen of rank and family, but afterwards applied to those of lower degree; now used for a menial servant, more particularly occupied about the person of his employer. Cab.Lawy. 800.

VALID. Having legal strength or force, executed with proper formalities, incapable of being rightfully overthrown or set aside. Edwards v. O'Neal, Tex.Civ.App., 28 S.W.2d 569, 572. Of binding force; legally sufficient or efficacious; authorized by law. Anderson, L.Dict.; Morrison v. Farmers' & Traders' State Bank, 70 Mont. 146, 225 P. 123, 125. Good or sufficient in point of law; efficacious; executed with the proper formalities; incapable of being rightfully overthrown or set aside; sustainable and effective in law, as distinguished from that which exists or took place in fact or appearance, but has not the requisites to enable it to be recognized and enforced by law. Thompson v. Town of Frostproof, 89 Fla. 92, 103 So. 118; United States v. McCutchen, D.C.Cal., 234 F. 702, 709.

A deed, will, or other instrument, which has received all the formalities required by law, is said to be valid.

VALID REASON. These words, in a statute providing for the withdrawal of the names of petitioners for a road improvement district when valid reasons therefor are presented, mean a sound sufficient reason, such as fraud, deceit, misrepresentation, duress, etc., a reason upon which the petitioner could support or justify his change in attitude. The word "valid" necessarily possesses an element of legal strength and force, and inconsistent positions have no such force. Echols v. Trice, 130 Ark. 97, 196 S.W. 801, 802.

VALIDATE. To test the validity of; to make valid; to confirm. Thompson v. Town of Frostproof, 89 Fla. 92, 103 So. 118. To sanction, to affirm. Peck v. Tugwell, 199 La. 125, 5 So.2d 524, 529.

VALIDATION. Statute, purpose of which is to cure past errors and omissions and thus make valid what was invalid, but it grants no indulgence for the correction of future errors. Petition of Miller, 149 Pa.Super. 142, 28 A.2d 257, 258.

VALIDITY OF A TREATY. The term "validity," as applied to treaties, admits of two descriptions—necessary and voluntary. By the former is meant which results from the treaties having been made by persons authorized by, and for purposes consistent with, the constitution. By voluntary validity is meant that validity which a treaty, voidable by reason of violation by the other party, still continues to retain by the silent acquiescence and will of the nation. It is voluntary, because it is at the will of the nation to let it remain or to extinguish it. The principles which govern and decide the necessary validity of a treaty are of a judicial nature, while those on which its voluntary validity depends are of a political nature.

VALIDITY OF A WILL. As used in will contest statute has reference only to the genuineness or legal sufficiency of will under attack. In re Elliott's Estate, 22 Wash.2d 334, 156 P.2d 427, 438, 157 A.L.R. 1335.

VALLEY. As applied to a mountainous country, lowlands, in contradistinction to mountain slopes and ridges. Whaley v. Northern Pac. R. Co., C.C. Mont., 167 F. 664.

VALOR BENEFICIORUM. L. Lat. The value of every ecclesiastical benefice and preference, according to which the first fruits and tenths are collected and paid. It is commonly called the "king's books," by which the clergy are at present rated. 2 StepheComm. 533; Wharton.

VALOR MARITAGII. Lat. Value of the marriage. The amount forfeited under the ancient tenures by a ward to a guardian who had offered her a marriage without disbaragement, which she refused. In feudal law, the guardian in chivalry had the right of tendering to his infant ward a suitable match, without "disbaragement," (inequality,) which, if the infants refused, they forfeited the value of the marriage (valor maritagii) to their guardian; that is, so much as a jury would assess, or any one would bona fide give, to the guardian for such an alliance. 2 Bl.Comm. 70; Litt. § 110.

A writ which lay against the ward, on coming of full age, for that he was not married, by his guardian, for the value of the marriage, and this though no convenient marriage had been offered. Termes de la Ley.

VALIDABLE. Of financial or market value; commanding or worth a good price; of considerable worth in any respect; estimable. Webster, Dict.

VALIDABLE CONSIDERATION. A class of consideration upon which a promise may be founded, which entitles the promisee to enforce his claim against an unwilling promisor. Cockrell v. McKenna, 103 N.J.L. 166, 134 A. 687, 688, 48 A.L.R. 234, some right, interest, profit, or benefit accruing to one party, or some forbearance, detriment, loss, or responsibility given, suffered, or undertaken by the other. Onsrud v. Paulsen, 219 Wis. 1, 261 N.W. 541, 542. Industrial Loan & Investment Bank v. Dardine, 207 N.C. 509, 177 S.E. 635.

A gain or loss to either party is not essential, it is sufficient if the party in whose favor the contract is made parts with a right which he might otherwise exert. Miller Ice Co. v. Crim, 299 Ill. App. 615, 20 N.E.2d 347. It need not be translatable into dollars and cents, but is sufficient if it consists of performance, or promise thereof, which promisor treats and considers of value to him. Asmus v. Longenecker, 131 Neb. 608, 269 N.W. 117, 119. It is not essential that the person to whom the consideration moves should be benefited, provided the person from whom it moves is, in a legal sense, injured. The injury may consist of a compromise of a disputed claim or forbearance to exercise a legal right, the alteration in promise being accompanied by a detriment that forms a consideration independent of the actual value of the right forborne. Boston Excelsior Co. v. Amerio, 147 Misc. 1, 263 N.Y.S. 174. Mutual promises in contract is sufficient. Adams, Payne & Gleaves v. Indiana Wood Preserving Co., 155 Va. 18, 154 S.E. 558, 562.

The following was said to be a valuable consideration: Extension of time for payment of an obligation. C. I. T. Corporation v. Furrow, 227 Iowa 961, 289 N.W. 697, 698; Farmers & Merchants State Bank of Cawker City v. Higgins, 149 Kan. 783, 89 P.2d 916. Marriage. Rutland v. Norris, 154 Fla. 894, 19 So.2d 418, 419. Release of property subject to execution. Bradley v. DeLoach, 176 Ga. 142, 167 S.E. 301, 303. Pre-existing debt. Yale Oil Corporation v. Sedlacek, 99 Mont. 411, 43 P.2d 887, 890. (Contra Duncan v. Jones, Tex.Civ.App., 153 S.W.2d 214, 216.) The distinction between a good and a valuable consideration is that the former consists of blood, or of natural love and affection; as when a man grants an estate to a near relative from motives of generosity, prudence, and natural duty; and the latter consists of such a consideration as money, marriage which is to follow, or the like, which the law esteems an equivalent given for the grant. 2 Bl.Comm. 297; Exum v. Lynch, 188 N.C. 392, 125 S.E. 15, 18; Gay v. Fricks, 211 Ala. 119, 99 So. 846, 847; Barton v. Wilson, 116 Ark. 400, 172 S.W. 1032, 1034.

VALUABLE IMPROVEMENTS. As used in a statute relating to the specific performance of a parol contract for the purchase of real estate, improvements of such character as add permanent value to the freehold, and such as would not likely be made by one not claiming the right to the possession and enjoyment of the freehold estate. Improvements of a temporary and unsubstantial character will not amount to such part performance as, when accompanied by possession alone, will take the contract out of the operation of the statute of frauds. Farr v. West, 152 Ga. 595, 110 S.E. 724. The valuable improvements may, however, be slight and of small value, provided they are substantial and permanent in their nature, beneficial to the freehold, and such as none but an owner would ordinarily make. Vickers v. Robinson, 157 Ga. 731, 122 S.E. 405, 408.

VALUABLE PAPERS. This term as used in statute relating to the holographic will devising estate to be found among the "valuable papers" of the decedent, in order to be effective, refers to such papers as are regarded by the testator as worthy of preservation and therefore in his estimation of some value. Fransioli v. Podesta, 21 Tenn.App. 554, 113 S.W.2d 769, 773, 777. And does not refer only to papers having money value. Pulley v. Cartwright, 23 Tenn.App. 690, 137 S.W.2d 336, 340.

VALUABLE THING. This phrase, as used in statutes relating to cheating and defrauding by-means of false pretenses, does not embrace a mere pecuniary advantage devoid of any physical attribution possessed by money, chattels, or valuable securities. See St. v. Town, 32 Kan. 165, 251 P. 401, 402, 52 A.L.R. 1160. The words include every-thing of value, State v. Thatcher, 35 N.J.L. 452; as a promissory note, State v. Tomlin, 29 N.J.L. 13; or a physician’s services; State v. Ball, 114 Miss, 505, 75 So. 373, 374, L.R.A.1917E, 1046.

Within gaming statutes, anything which affords the lure to indulge in the gambling instinct. State v. Betti, 21 N.J.Misc. 345, 34 A.2d 91, 94.

“Valuation” of itself does not levy tax upon person or property, but is necessary step preliminary thereto. Johnson v. Board of Park Comm’rs of Ft. Wayne, 202 Ind. 282, 174 N.E. 91, 94. For “Fair Valuation”, see that title.

VALUATION LIST. In English law. A list of all the ratable hereditaments in a parish, showing the names of the occupier, the owner, the property, the extent of the property, the gross estimated rental, and the ratable value; prepared by the overseers of each parish in a union under section 14 of the union assessment committee act, 1862 (St. 25 & 26 Vict. c. 103,) for the purposes of the poor rate. Wharton.

VALUE. The utility of an object in satisfying, directly or indirectly, the needs or desires of human beings, called by economists “value in use,” or its worth consisting in the power of purchasing other objects, called “value in exchange.” Joint Highway Dist. No. 9 v. Ocean Shore R. Co., 128 Cal.App. 743, 18 P.2d 413, 417. Also the estimated or appraised worth of any object or property, calculated in money.

In economic consideration, the word "value," when used in reference to property, has a variety of significations, according to the connection in which the word is employed. It may mean the cost of a production or reproduction of the property in question, when it is sold, or the so-called "sound value"; or it may mean the purchasing power of the property, or the amount of money which the property will command in exchange, if sold, this being called its "market value," which in the case of any particular property may be more or less than either the cost of its production or its value measured by its utility to the present or some other owner; or the word may mean the subjective value of property, having in view its palpability for some particular purpose, sometimes termed its "value for use." William H. Low Estate Co. v. Lederer Realty Corporation, 35 R.I. 352, 86 A. 881, 883, Ann.Cas. 1916A, 341. See Agency of Canadian Car & Foundry Co. v. Pennsylvania Iron Works Co., C.C.A.Pa., 256 P. 339, 344; Babbitt v. Read, C.C.A.N.Y., 236 F. 42, 46; James v.

Speer, 69 Mont. 100, 220 P. 535, 537; Burroughs v. School Dist. No. 2, Town of Richland, 155 Wis. 426, 144 N.W. 977, 978.

"Value," as used in Const. U.S. art. 1, § 8, giving Congres-s power to coin money and regulate the value thereof, is the true, inherent, and essential value, not depending upon accident, place, or person, but the same everywhere and to every one, and in this sense regulating the value of the coinage is merely determining and maintaining coinage composed of certain coins within certain limitations at a certain specific composition and weight. Klattenburg v. Quallett, 114 Neb. 18, 205 N.W. 577, 578.

"Value" of land for purpose of taxation is represented by price that would probably be paid therefor after fair negotiations between willing seller and buyer. Thaw v. Town of Fairfield, 132 Conn. 173, 43 A.2d 65, 67, 160 A.L.R. 679.

"Values," as used in tax statutes, are valuations of officials whose duty it is to make them. Wymore v. Markway, 338 Mo. 46, 89 S.W.2d 9, 13.

"Value" as it relates to stolen property is the market value at the time and place of the taking, or, in case of property without a market value, the cost of replacing it. Patterson v. State, 138 Tex.Cr.R. 551, 137 S.W.2d 1030; Givens v. State, 143 Tex.Cr.R. 277, 158 S.W.2d 535, 536.

As respects whether value of stolen property equals or exceeds jurisdictional amount fixed by the National Stolen Property Act, "value" of stolen property is market value at time and place of taking, if it has a market value. National Stolen Property Act, §§ 1-7, 18 U.S.C.A. § 413 et seq. Husten v. United States, C.C.A.Minn., 95 F.2d 168.

In action to recover chattel, "value" means value at time of trial, not at time of seizure thereof. Spear v. Auto Dealers’ Discount Corporation, 154 Misc. 801, 278 N.Y.S. 561.

Under the Uniform Sales Act, "value" is any considera-tion sufficient to support a simple contract. Blumberg v. Taggart, 213 Minn. 39, 5 N.W.2d 388, 392.

For purposes of corporate reorganization, "value" is a reasonable capitalization of future earnings as reasonably foreseeable at date of reorganization. Commissioner of Internal Revenue v. Marshall, C.C.A.2, 125 F.2d 943, 946.

Clear Value
Of an estate for the purpose of an inheritance tax is what remains after all claims against it have been paid. In re Hildebrand’s Estate, 262 Pa. 112, 104 A. 866.

Net Value
The "reserve" or "net value" of a life insurance policy is the fund accumulated out of the net premiums during the earlier years of the policy while the premium uniform throughout life or a term of years exceeds the actual value of the risk, and with the net premiums to be received in the future is the exact mathematical equivalent of the obligation incurred by the company. Hay v. Meridian Life & Trust Co., 57 Ind.App. 536, 101 N.E. 651, 654. The "net value" of a policy is equivalent to "reserve," and means that part of the annual premium paid by insured which, according to the American Experience Table of Mortality, must be set apart to meet or mature the company's obligations to insured, the net value of a policy on a given date being its actual value, its reserve. Jefferson v. New York Life Ins. Co., 151 Ky. 609, 152 S.W. 780, 783.

True Value
At which property must be assessed is price which would be paid therefor on assessing date to willing seller, not compelled to sell, by willing purchaser, not compelled to purchase. New York Bay R. Co. v. Kelly, 22 N.J.Misc. 204, 37 A.2d 624, 628.

Value of Matter in Controversy
As used in the Judicial Code, § 24 (28 U.S.C.A. § 1331, et seq.), the pecuniary result to either party which a judgment entered in the case would directly produce, either at once or in the future. Elliott v. Empire Natural Gas Co., C.C.A.Kan., 4 F. 2d 493, 497.

Value of Plant in Successful Operation
Synonymous with "going value," or "going concern value," meaning the additional value that a purchaser will give for the properties and business of the company because they are going concern with established businesses; the additional value, over and above the fair and reasonable value of the physical properties plus the working capital, which a customer would pay for the property because it is a going concern. Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co. v. Whitcomb, D. C.Wash., 12 F.2d 279, 284.

Value Received

The phrase when put in a bill of exchange, will bear two interpretations: The drawer of the bill may be presumed to acknowledge the fact that he has received value from the payee, 3 Maule & S. 351; Benjamin v. Tillman, 2 McLean 213, Fed.Cas.No.1,304; or when the bill has been made payable to the order of the drawer and accepted, it implies that value has been received by the acceptor. 5 Maule & S. 65; Thurman v. Van Brunt, 19 Barb., N.Y., 409. The words are not required by the Uniform Negotiable Instruments Act.

VALUED POLICY.

It is distinguished from an "open policy", which is one where the value of the property insured is not settled in the policy. Ellis v. Hartford Livestock Ins. Co., 293 Ky. 683, 170 S.W.2d 51, 53.

VALUER. A person whose business is to appraise or set a value upon property.

VALVASORS, or VIDAMES. An obsolete title of dignity next to a peer. 2 Inst. 667; 2 Steph. 612.

VANA EST ILLA POTENTIA QUZE NUNQUAM VENIT IN ACTUM. That power is vain [idle or useless] which never comes into action, [which is never exercised.] 2 Coke, 51.

VANDALISM. Willful or ignorant destruction of artistic or literary treasures; hostility to or contempt for what is beautiful or venerable. Unkelsbee v. Homestead Fire Ins. Co. of Baltimore, D.C.Mun.App., 41 A.2d 168, 170, 172.
VANI TDOIORES SUNT IESTIMANDL QUI NON CADUNT IN CONSTAMTEMP VIRM. Those are to be regarded as idle fears which do not affect a steady [firm or resolute] man. 7 Coke, 27.

VANI TIMORIS JUSTA EXCUSATIO NON EST. A frivololitis fear is not a legal excuse. Dig. 50, 17, 184; 2 Inst. 483; Broom, Max. 256, n.

VANTARIUS. L. Lat. In old records. A forefootman. Spelman; Cowell.

VARA, A Spanish-American measure of length, equal to 33 English inches or a trifle more or less, varying according to local usage. See U. S. v. Perot, 98 U.S. 428, 25 L.Ed. 251.

VARIANCE. In pleading and practice. A discrepancy or disagreement between two instruments or two steps in the same cause, which ought by law to be entirely consonant. Thus, if the evidence adduced by the plaintiff does not agree with the allegations of his declaration, it is a variance; and so if the statement of the cause of action in the declaration does not coincide with that given in the writ. See Keiser v. Topping, 72 Ill. 229; Mulligan v. U. S., 56 C.C.A. 50, 120 F. 98; State v. Wadsworth, 30 Conn. 57; Mathews v. U. S., C.C.A.Neb., 15 F.2d 139, 142. For "Fatal Variance," see that title.

A disagreement between the allegations and the proof in some matter which, in point of law, is essential to the charge or claim. Franks v. Reeder, 101 Okl. 18, 223 P. 126 127; State v. Brozich, 108 Ohio St. 559, 141 N.E. 491. A substantial departure in the evidence adduced from the issue as made by the pleadings. Splosedo v. Merriman, 111 Mont. 530, 90 A. 387, 392; Davidson Grocery Co. v. Johnston, 24 Idaho, 336, 132 P. 929, 931, Ann.Cas.1915C, 1129. The test of materiality of "variance" in an information is whether the pleading so fully and correctly informs a defendant of offense with which he is charged that, taking into account proof which is introduced against him, he is not misled in making his defense. People v. Guerrero, 22 Cal.2d 183, 137 P.2d 21, 24.

To constitute a "variance," there must be a real and tangible difference between the allegations in the pleading and the proof offered in its support. James A. C. Tait & Co. v. Stryker, 117 Or. 338, 243 P. 104, 106. The difference must be substantial and material. Epstein v. Waas, 28 N.M. 608, 216 P. 506, 508; Johnson v. Doubleday, 92 Vt. 267, 102 A. 1038, 1040. It must be one that actually misleads the adverse party to his prejudice in maintaining his action or defense on the merits, Franks v. Reeder, 101 Okl. 18, 223 P. 126, 127; State v. Brozich, 108 Ohio St. 559, 141 N.E. 491. A variance occurs when, though the pleading and proof do not exactly correspond, they may be made to do so by amendment in the discretion of the court and upon such terms and conditions as may be just. Deligny v. Tate Furniture Co., 170 N.C. 189, 86 S.E. 980, 984.

VARIATION. Difference in degrees between the direction of the true pole and the magnetic pole; it is comparatively fixed for any one locality, but is not the same in different localities. The Aakre, C.C.A.N.Y., 122 F.2d 469, 472.

VARRANTIZATIO. In old Scotch law. Warrantly.

VAS. Lat. In the civil law. A pledge; a surety; bail or surety in a criminal proceeding or civil action. Calvin.

VASECTOMY. A comparatively simple and painless operation, performed by section (cutting) of the vas deferens or spermatic cord, or by a tying off or ligaturing thereof;—sometimes performed on rapists and other criminals (especially sexual offenders), and on persons who are mentally defective. Laws Iowa 1911, c. 129; Rem. & Bal. Code (Wash.) § 2287 (Rem.Rev.Stat. § 2287); Rev. Laws Nev. § 6293 (Comp.Laws 1929, § 9797). Some of these and similar statutes have been declared unconstitutional; Williams v. Smith, 190 Ind. 526, 131 N.E. 2; Mickle v. Henrichs, D.C.Nev., 262 F. 687; Smith v. Bd. of Examiners, 85 N.J.L. 46, 88 A. 963; but in 1927, the validity of a Virginia statute (Laws 1924, c. 394) providing for vasectomy in the case of males and for salpingectomy in the case of females was sustained in Buck v. Bell, 47 S.Ct. 584, 274 U.S. 200, 71 L.Ed. 1000, affirming 143 Va. 310, 130 S.E. 516, 51 A.L.R. 855. Sterilization of the female may also be accomplished by an operation known as oPhorectomy or ovariotomy. Acts Conn.1909, c. 209.

VASSAL. In feudal law. A feudal tenant or grantee; a feudatory; the holder of a fief on a feudal tenure, and by the obligation of performing feudal services. The correlative term was "lord." The vassal himself might be lord of some other vassal.

In after-times, this word was used to signify a species of slave who owed servitude and was in a state of dependency on a superior lord. 2 Bla. Comm. 53.

VASSAL STATES. In international law. States which are supposed to possess only those rights and privileges which have been expressly granted to them, but actually they seem to be well-nigh independent. Hershey, Int. L. 106. Egypt was VASSALAGE. The state or condition of a vassal.
VASSELERIA. The tenure or holding of a vassal. Cowell.
VASTUM. L. Lat. A waste or common lying open to the cattle of all tenants who have right of commoning. Cowell.
VASTUM FORESTIE VEL BOSCI. In old rec-tords. Waste of a forest or wood. That part of a forest or wood wherein the trees and underwood were so destroyed that it lay in a manner waste and barren. Paroch. Antiq, 351, 497; Cowell.
VAUDHERIE. In old European law. Sorcery;
witchcraft; the profession of the Vaudois.
VECTIGAL, ORIGINE IPSA, JUS CAZESARUM
VECORIN. In old Lombardic law. The offense of stopping one on the way; forestalling. Speldords. Waste of a forest or wood. That part of
of commoning. Cowell.
VEHICLE. That in or on which a person or thing is or may be carried from one place to another, especially along the ground, also through the air;
ally moving support or container fitted or used for the conveyance of bulky objects; a means of Ass'n, 140 Neb. 578, 300 N.W. 837, 838. Any carriage moving on land, either on wheels or runners::
a conveyance; that which is used as an instrument of conveyance, transmission or communication. Burford-Toothaker Tractor Co. v. Curry, 241 Ala. 350, 2 So.2d 420, 421; People v. Curnuch, Any carriage, conveyance, or other artificial contrivance used, or capable of being used, as a means of transportation of bulky objects or persons, not one which is used for the conveyance of bulky objects or persons and street cars which run and are operated only over and upon a permanent track or fixed way, unless the context of the ordinance or statute in question clearly indicates an intention to the contrary. Conder v. Griffith, 61 Ind.
4). The word includes a street sprinkler, St. Louis v.
Woodruff, 71 Mo. 92; but not a ferry boat, Duckwall v.
Albany, 25 Ind. 286; nor a domestic animal, unattached to a vehicle or a conveyance. State v. One Black Horse Mule, 207 Ala. 277, 92 So. 548. It has also been held to include a scraper used to remove snow from ice which was to be cut, particularly since the scraper had facilities for dumping and unloading and was horse-drawn. Berg v. Hetzler Bros., 166 N.Y.S. 830, 179 App.Div. 551. A combined thresher and cleaner, mounted on axles and wheels, while being drawn from farm to farm. Vincent v. Taylor Bros., 180 App.Div. 818, 168 N.Y.S. 287, 288. A bicycle; Sharp-key v. Herman Bros., 3 N.J.Misc. 126, 127 A. 525, 526; Tulsa Ice Co. v. Wilkes, 54 Okl. 519, 153 P. 1169, 1171. A motor-S.E. 17. And it includes an automobile; Shepard v. Findley, 204 Iowa, 107, 214 N.W. 676, 678; Stanley v. Tomlin, 143 Va. 857, 129 S.E. 379, 382; even though, at the time of the enactment of the legislation involved, automobiles were not in use, U. S. v. One Cadillac Automobile, D.C.Tenn., 2 F.2d 886, 888; City of Henderson v. Lockett, 157 Ky.
VEHMGERICHT. See Fehmgericht.
VEIES. L. Fr. Distresses forbidden to be replevied; the refusing to let the owner have his cattle which were distrained. Kelham.

VEILINGS. As used in the tariff act, a material chiefly or exclusively used for the making of veils. It is thin and light, designed to be worn over the head and face as an ornament or to protect or wholly or partly conceal the face from view. The textile material which is used to mask or screen the features resting beneath the face panels of caskets would be commonly and popularly regarded as veiling. Tiedeman & Sons v. U. S., 8 Ct. Cust.App. 134, 135.

VEIN. In mining law. A continuous body of mineral or mineralized rock, filling a seam or fissure in the earth's crust, within defined boundaries in the general mass of the mountain (which boundaries clearly separately it from the neighboring rock), and having a general character of continuity in the direction of its length. San Francisco Chemical Co. v. Duffield, C.C.A.Wyo., 201 F. 830, 835; McMullin v. Magnunson, 102 Colo. 250, 78 P.2d 964, 968. It includes all deposits of mineral matter found through a mineralized zone or belt coming from the same source, impressed with the same forms, and appearing to have been created by the same processes. Inyo Marble Co. v. Loundagin, 7 P.2d 1067, 1072, 120 Cal.App. 298.

A requirement that a miner shall locate his claim "along the vein" means along the out-crop or course of the apex, and not along the strike. Stewart Mining Co. v. Bourne, C.C.A.Idaho, 218 F. 327, 329.

The terms "principal," "original," and "primary," as well as "secondary," "accidental," and "incidental," have all been employed to describe the different veins found within the same surface boundaries, but their meaning is not entirely clear in all cases. They may refer to the relative importance or value of the different veins, or the relations to each other, or to the time of discovery, but the words "secondary," "accidental," and "incidental" are most frequently used to distinguish between the discovery vein and other veins within the same surface boundaries. Northport Smelting & Refining Co. v. Lone Pine-Surprise Consol. Mines Co., D.C.Wash., 271 F. 105, 111.

Discovery Vein

That vein which served as a basis of the location, in contradistinction to secondary, accidental, and incidental veins. Northport Smelting & Refining Co. v. Lone Pine-Surprise Consol. Mines Co., D.C.Wash., 271 F. 105, 113. The primary vein for the purpose of locating a mining claim and determining which are the end and which the side lines. Where the discovery vein crosses the opposite side lines of the claim as located, the side lines become end lines, not only with respect to such vein, but for determination of extralateral rights in any other vein which apexes within the claim. Northport Smelting & Refining Co. v. Lone Pine-Surprise Consol. Mines Co., C.C.A. Wash., 278 F. 719, 720.

VEJOURS. Viewers; persons sent by the court to take a view of any place in question, for the better decision of the right. It signifies, also, such as are sent to view those that essoin themselves de malo lecti, (i. e., excuse themselves on ground of illness) whether they be in truth so sick as that they cannot appear, or whether they do counterfeit. Cowell.

VEL NON: Or not.

These words appear in the phrase "devisavit vel non" (q. v.), meaning, literally, "did he devise or not." 26 C. J.S. p. 1296. Examples of their use by the courts may be seen in the following quotations: "So the sufficiency vel non of the order of publication is important" (Cone v. Benjamin, 27 So.2d 90, 97, 157 Fla. 800); "the negligence vel non of the owner was  for the jury" (Johnson v. Wood, 21 So.2d 353, 355, 155 Fla. 753); and "We come at last to the merits vel non of this appeal" (Hollywood, Inc., v. Clark, 15 So.2d 175, 185, 153 Fla. 501).

VELITIS JUBEATIS QUIRITES? Lat. Is it your will and pleasure, Romans? The form of proposing a law to the Roman people. Tayl.Civil Law, 155.

VELE NON CREDITUR QUI OBSEQUITUR IMPERIO PATRIS VEL DOMINI. He is not presumed to consent who obeys the orders of his father or his master. Dig. 50, 17, 4.

VELTRARIA. The office of dog-leader, or coursers. Cowell.

VELTRARIUS. One who leads greyhounds. Blount.

VELETRARIA. The office of dog-leader, or coursers. Cowell.

VENABILIS. Admissible; acceptable; competent to be shown; proper. 1 Blount 360. It includes all deposits of mineral matter found through a mineralized zone or belt coming from the same source, impressed with the same forms, and appearing to have been created by the same processes. Inyo Marble Co. v. Loundagin, 7 P.2d 1067, 1072, 120 Cal.App. 298.

VENAL. Pertaining to something that is bought; capable of being bought; offered for sale; mercenary. Used usually in an evil sense, such purchase or sale being regarded as corrupt and illegal.

VENARIA. Beasts caught in the woods by hunting.

VENATIO. Hunting. Cowell.

VEND. To transfer to another for a pecuniary equivalent; to make an object of trade, especially by hawking or peddling; to sell. Goins v. State, 194 Ark. 598, 108 S.W.2d 1082, 1083. The term is not commonly applied to the sale of real estate, although its derivatives "vendor" and "vendee" are.

VENDEE. A purchaser or buyer; one to whom anything is sold. Generally used of the purchaser of real property, one who acquires chattels by sale being called a "buyer."

VENDENS EANDEM REM DUOBUS FALSARIUS EST. He is fraudulent who sells the same thing twice. Jenk.Cent. 107.

VENDETTA. A private blood feud, in which a family seeks to avenge one of its members on the offender or his family. Stephens v. Howells Sales Co., D.C.N.Y., 16 F.2d 805, 808.
VENDIBLE

VENDIBLE. Fit or suitable to be sold; capable of transfer by sale; merchantable.

VENDITIE. In old European law. A tax upon things sold in markets and public fairs. — Spelman.

VENDITIO. Lat. In the civil law. In a strict sense, sale; the act of selling; the contract of sale, otherwise called "emptio venditio." Inst. 3, 24. Calvin.

In a large sense, any mode or species of alienation; any contract by which the property or ownership of a thing may be transferred. Inst. 3, 24. Calvin.

VENDITION. Sale; the act of selling.

VENDITIONI EXPONAS. Lat. You expose to seizure or distrain to answer any debt due to the vendor. Rutland v. Brister, 53 Miss. 685; Canavan v. Coleman, 204 Iowa 901, 216 N.W. 292, 293.

VENDOR. The person who transfers property by sale, particularly real estate, "seller" being more commonly used for one who sells personalty. The latter may, however, with entire propriety, be termed a vendor; Atlantic Refining Co. v. Van Valkenburg, 265 Pa. 456, 109 A. 208, 210; e. g., a merchant; a retail dealer; Edgin v. Bell-Wayter & Bro. v. Bendy, Tex.Civ.App., 251 S.W. 265, 272; State ex rel. First Nat. Bank v. Ogden, 173 Okl. 285, 49 P.2d 565, 567.

The writ gives no new authority to the sheriff but only directs him to perform his duty under the execution. Fannin's Ex'r v. Haney, 283 Ky. 68, 140 S.W.2d 630, 632.

VENDOR AND PURCHASER ACT. The act of 37 & 38 Viet. c. 78, which substitutes forty for sixty years as the root of title, and amends in other ways the law of vendor and purchaser. Mozley & Whiteley.

VENDOR'S LIEN. A creature of equity, a lien implied to belong to a vendor for the unpaid purchase price of land, where he has not taken any other lien or security beyond the personal obligation of the purchaser. Special Tax School Dist. No. 1 of Orange County v. Hillman, 131 Fla. 725, 179 So. 805, 809. An equitable security which arises from the fact that a vendee has received from his vendor property for which he has not paid the full consideration, and such lien exists independently of any express agreement. Sturdy v. Smith, Mo.App., 132 S.W.2d 1033, 1037; Causer v. Wilmoth, Mo.App., 142 S.W.2d 777, 779; Mollett v. Beckman, Mo.App., 78 S.W.2d 886. 890.

Also, a lien existing in the unpaid vendor of chattels, the same remaining in his hands, to the extent of the purchase price, where the sale was for cash, or on a term of credit which has expired, or on an agreement by which the seller is to retain possession. See Morgan v. Dalrymple, 59 N. J. Eq. 22, 46 A. 664; Lee v. Murphy, 119 Cal. 364, 51 P. 549.

In English and American law a vendor's lien is exceptional in character, and is an importation from the civil law, which found its recognition through courts of chancery, on the equitable principle that the person who had secured the estate of another ought not in conscience to be allowed to keep it and not pay full consideration money, and that to enforce that payment it was just that the vendor should have a lien upon the property. Martin v. Becker, 169 Cal. 301, 146 P. 665, 671, Ann.Cas.1916D, 171.

VENDUE. A sale; generally a sale at public auction; and more particularly a sale so made under authority of law, as by a constable, sheriff, tax collector, administrator, etc.

VENDUE MASTER. An auctioneer.

VENEREAL. Sexual; as, venereal diseases. State v. Hollinshead, 77 Or. 473, 151 P. 710, 711.

VENIA. A kneeling or low prostration on the ground by penitents; pardon.

VENIA JETATIS. A privilege granted by a prince or sovereign, in virtue of which a person is entitled to act, sui juris, as if he were of full age. Story, Confl. Laws, § 74.

VENUE FACILITAS INCENTIVUM EST DELINQUENDI. 3 Inst. 236. Facility of pardon is an incentive to crime.

VENIRE. Lat. To come; to appear in court. Sometimes used as the name of the writ for summoning a jury, more commonly called a "venire facias."

VENIRE DE NOVO. Venire facias de novo, which title see.
VENIRE FACIAS. Lat. In practice. A judicial writ, directed to the sheriff of the county in which a cause is to be tried, commanding him that he "cause to come" before the court, on a certain day therein mentioned, twelve good and lawful men of the body of his county, qualified according to law, by whom the truth of the matter may be the better known, and who are in no wise of kin either to the plaintiff or to the defendant, to make a jury of the county between the parties in the action, because as well the plaintiff as the defendant, between whom the matter in variance is, have put themselves upon that jury, and that he return the names of the jurors, etc. 2 Tidd, Pr. 777, 778; 3 Bl.Comm. 352.

VENIRE FACIAS AD RESPONDENDUM. A writ to summon a person, against whom an indictment for a misdemeanor has been found, to appear and be arraigned for the offense. A justice's warrant is now more commonly used. Archb. Crim. P.1.81; Sweet.

VENIRE FACIAS DE NOVO. A fresh or new venire, which the court grants when there has been some impropriety or irregularity in returning the jury, or where the verdict is so imperfect or ambiguous that no judgment can be given upon it, or where a judgment is reversed on error, and a new trial awarded. See Bosseker v. Cramer, 18 Ind. 44; Maxwell v. Wright, 160 Ind. 515, 67 N.E. 267. "The ancient common-law mode of proceeding to a new trial was by a writ of venire facias de novo. The new trial is a modern invention, intended to mitigate the severity of the proceeding to attain. While a venire de novo and new trial are quite different, they are alike in that a new trial takes place in both. The material difference between them is that a venire de novo must be granted upon matters appearing upon the face of the record, but a new trial may be granted for things out of the record. Lowry v. Indianapolis Traction & Terminal Co., 77 Ind.App. 138, 126 N.E. 223, 225. See, also, 1 Wils. 48; 47 Am.L.Rev. 377.

The terms "venire facias de novo" and "venire de novo" are now used interchangeably to denote a new trial, Brodie v. State, 202 Ind. 471 N.E. 585.

VENIRE FACIAS JURATORES. A judicial writ directed to the sheriff, when issue was joined in an action, commanding him to cause to come to Westminster, on such a day, twelve free and lawful men of his county by whom the truth of the matter at issue might be better known. This writ was abolished by section 104 of the common-law procedure act, 1852, and by section 105 a precept directed to the sheriff, when issue was joined in an action, commanding him to cause to come to the better known, and who are in no wise of kin either to the plaintiff or to the defendant, to make a jury of the county between the parties in the action, because as well the plaintiff as the defendant, between whom the matter in variance is, have put themselves upon that jury, and that he return the names of the jurors, etc. 3 Bl.Comm. 352.

VENIRE FACIAS TOT MATRONAS. A writ to summon a jury of matrons to execute the writ de ventre inspiciendo.

VENIREMAN. A member of a panel of jurors; a juror summoned by a writ of venire facias.

VENIT ET DEFENDIT. L. Lat. In old pleading. Comes and defends. The proper words of appearance and defense in an action. 1 Ld. Raym. 117.

VENIT ET DICIT. Lat. In old pleading. Comes and says. 2 Salk. 544.

VENTE. In French law. Sale; contract of sale.

VENTE A RIENTRE. A conditional sale, in which the seller reserves the right to redeem or repurchase at the same price. The term is used in Canada and Louisiana.

VENTE ALEATOIRE. A sale subject to an uncertain event.

VENTE AUX ENCHERES. An auction.

VENTER. Lat. (ventre, Fr.) The belly; the womb; the wife. Used in law as designating the maternal parentage of children. Thus, where in ordinary phraseology we should say that A. was B.'s child by his first wife, he would be described in law as "by the first venter." Brown. A child is said to be en ventre sa mere before it is born; while it is a foetus.

VENTRE INSPICIENDO. See De Ventre Inspeciendo; Venire facias tot matronas.

VENUE. Formerly spelled visne. Co.Litt. 125a. In pleading and practice. A neighborhood; the neighborhood, place, or county in which an injury is declared to have been done, or fact declared to have happened. 3 Bl.Comm. 294; Johnson v. State, 187 Ind. 694, 121 N.E. 114, 115; 4 C. & P. 363; Heikes v. Com., 26 Pa. 513; Searcy v. State, 4 Tex. 450; People v. Lafuente, 6 Cal. 202.

Also, the county (or geographical division) in which an action or prosecution is brought for trial, and which is to furnish the panel of jurors. Armstrong v. Emmet, 41 S.W. 87, 16 Tex.Civ.App. 242; Paige v. Sinclair, 130 N.E. 177, 178, 237 Mass. 482; Commonwealth v. Reilly, 324 Pa. 558, 188 A. 574, 579; Heckler Co. v. Incorporated Village of Napoleon, 56 Ohio App. 110, 10 N.E.2d 32, 35. It relates only to place where or territory within which either party may require case to be tried. Cushing v. Douidstal, 278 Ky. 779, 129 S.W.2d 527, 528, 530. It has relation to convenience of litigants and may be waived or laid by consent of parties. Iselin v. La Coste, C.C.A.La., 147 F. 2d 791, 795.

"Venue," as a matter of procedure, does not arise until an action is started. State ex rel. Helmes v. District Court of Ramsey County, 206 Minn. 357, 287 N.W. 875.

"Venue" does not refer to jurisdiction at all. Arganbright v. Good, 46 Cal.App.2d Super. 877, 116 P.2d 186. "Jurisdiction" of the court means the inherent power to decide a case, whereas "venue" designates the particular county or city in which a court with jurisdiction may hear

In the common-law practice, that part of the declaration in an action which designates the county in which the action is to be tried. Sweet.

Local Venue

In pleading. A venue which must be laid in a particular county. When the action could have arisen only in a particular county, it is local, and the venue must be laid in that county. 1 Tidd, Pr. 427; Deacon v. Shreve, 23 N.J.L. 204.

VERANDA. A porch; a portico; a covered place of entrance to a building, differentiated from its principal mass. Hieronimus v. Moran, 272 Ill. 254, 111 N.E. 1022, 1025.

VERAY. L. Fr. True. An old form of vrai. Thus, veray, or true tenant, is one who holds in fee-simple; veray tenant by the manner, is the same as tenant by the manner, (q. v.,) with this difference only: that the fee-simple instead of remaining in the lord, is given by him or by the law to another. Ham. N.P. 393, 394.

VERBA. Lat. (Plural of verbum.) Words.

VERBA ACCIPIENDA SUNT CUM EFFECTU, UT SORTIANTUR EFFECTUM. Words are to be received with effect, so that they may produce effect. Bac.Max.

VERBA ACCIPIENDA SUNT SECUNDUM SUBJEC TAM MATERIAM. 6 Coke, 62. Words are to be understood with reference to the subject-matter.

VERBA ACCIPIENDA UT SORTIANTUR EFFEC TUIVI. Words are to be received with effect so that they may have some effect. 4 Bacon, Works 258.

VERBA 2EQUIVOCA, AC IN DUBIO SENSU PO SITA, INTELLIGUNTUR DIGNIORI ET POTEN TIORI SENSU. Equivocal words, and such as are put in a doubtful sense, are [to be] understood in the more worthy and effectual sense [in their best and most effective sense]. 6 Coke, 20a.

VERBA ALIQUID OPERARI DEBENT; DEB E NT INTELLIGI UT ALIQUID OPERENTUR. 8 Coke, 94. Words ought to have some operation; they ought to be interpreted in such a way as to have some operation.

VERBA ALIQUID OPERARI DEBENT, VERBA CUM EFFECTU SUNT ACCIPIENDA. Words are to be taken so as to have effect. Bacon, Max. Reg. 3, p. 47. See 1 Duer, Ins. 210, 211, 216.

VERBA ARTIS EX ARTE. Terms of art should be explained from the art. 2 Kent, Comm. 556, note.

VERBA CANCELARIX. Words of the chancery. The technical style of writs framed in the office of chancery. Fleta, lib. 4, c. 10, § 3.

VERBA CHARTARUM FORTIUS ACCIPIUNTUR CONTRA PROFERENTEM. The words of charters are to be received more strongly against the grantor [or the person offering them]. Co. Litt. 36; Broom, Max. 594; Bacon, Max.Reg. 3; Noy, Max., 9th ed. p. 48; 8 Term 605; 15 East 546; 1 Ball. & B. 335; 2 Pars. Con. 22.

VERBA CUM EFFECTU ACCIPIENDA SUNT. Bac. Max. 3. Words ought to be used so as to give them their effect.

VERBA CURRENTIS MONETAE, TEMPUS SOLUTIONIS DESIGNANT. Da. 20. The words "current money" designate current at the time of payment.

VERBA DEBENT INTELLIGI CUM EFFECTU, UT RES MAGIS VALEAT QUAM PEREAT. Words ought to be understood with effect, that a thing may rather be preserved than destroyed. 2 Smith, Lead. Cas. 530.

VERBA DEBENT INTELLIGI UT ALIQUID OPERENTUR. Words ought to be understood so as to have some operation. 8 Coke, 94a.

VERBA DICTA DE PERSONA INTELLIGI DEBENT DE CONDITIONE PERSONAE. Words spoken of a person are to be understood of the condition of the person. 2 Rolle, 72.

VERBA FORTIUS ACCIPIUNTUR CONTRA PROFERENTEM. Words are to be taken most strongly against him who uses them. Bac. Max. 11, reg. 3.

VERBA GENERALIA RESTRINGUNTUR AD HABILITATEM REI VEL AP TITUDEM PERSONAE. General words must be narrowed either to the nature of the subject-matter or to the aptitude of the person. Broom, Max.Reg. 10; 11 C.B. 254, 356.

VERBA ILLATA (RELATA) INESSE VIDENDA. Words referred to are to be considered as if incorporated. Broom, Max. 646; Bacon, Max.Reg. 10; 11 C.B. 254, 356.

VERBA IN DIFFERENTI MATERIA PER PRonus, NON PER POSTERIUS, INTELLIGENDA SUNT. Words on a different subject are to be understood by what precedes, not by what comes after. A maxim of the civil law. Calvin.
VERBA INTELLIGENDA SUNT IN CASU POSSIBILI. Words are to be understood in [or "of," or "in reference to"] a possible case. A maxim of the civil law. Calvin.

VERBA INTENTIONI, NON E CONTRA, DEBENT INSERVIRE. 8 Coke, 94. Words ought to be made subservient to the intent, not the intent to the words. 6 Allen (Mass.) 324; Bailey v. Abington, 201 Ark. 1072, 148 S.W.2d 176, 179.

VERBA ITA SUNT INTELLIGENDA, UT RES PSEAM PEREAT. The words [of an instrument] are to be so understood, that the subject-matter may rather be of force than perish, [rather be preserved than destroyed; or, in other words, that the instrument may have effect, if possible.] Bac. Max. 17, in reg. 3; Plowd. 156; 2 Bl.Comm. 380; 2 Kent, Comment. 555.

VERBA MERE, EQUOVA, SI PER COMMUN. EM USUM LOQUENDI IN INTELLECTU CERTO SIC INSTRUMENTUM, TALIS INTELLECTUS PRIEURANDUS EST. [In the case of] words merely equivocal, if they are taken by the common usage of speech in a certain sense, such sense is to be preferred. A maxim of the civil law. Calvin.

VERBA MELHJS EST QUAM ABSURDE. It is better that words should have no operation at all than [that there are any] absurdly. A maxim of the civil law. Calvin.

VERBA NON TAM INTUENDA, QUAM CAUSA ET NATURA REI, UT MENS CONTRAHENDI ISEM EQUOVA, SI PER REFERENTIAM, UT IN EIS INESSE VIDENTUR. Related words [words connected with others by reference] have this particular operation by the reference, that they are considered as being inserted in those [clauses which refer to them.] Co. Litt. 9b, 359a. Words to which reference is made in an instrument have the same effect and operation as if they were inserted in the clauses referring to them. Broom, Max. 673; 14 East 568.

VERBA RELATA HOC MAXIME OPERANTUR PER REFERENTIAM, UT IN EIS INESSE VIDENTUR. Words to which reference is made seem to be incorporated. 11 Cush. (Mass.) 137.

VERBA SECUNDUM MATERIAM SUBJECTAM INTELLIGI NEMO Est QIIJ EIESQCIAT. There is no one who does not know that words are to be understood according to their subject-matter. Calvin.

VERBA SEMPER ACCIPienda SUNT IN MITIORI SENSU. Words are always to be taken in the milder sense. 4 Coke, 13a.

VERBA STRICT +, SIGNIFICATION’S AD LATAM EXTENDI POSSUNT, SI SUBSIT RATIO. Words of a strict or narrow signification may be extended to a broad meaning, if there be ground in reason for it. A maxim of the civilians. Calvin; Spiegelius.

VERBA SUNT INDICES ANIMI. Words are the indices or indicators of the mind or thought. Latch, 106.

VERBAL. Strictly, of or pertaining to words; expressed in words, whether spoken or written, but commonly in spoken words; hence, by confusion, spoken; oral. Webster, Dict. Parol; by word of mouth; as, verbal agreement, verbal evidence; or written, but not signed, or not executed with the formalities required for a deed or prescribed by statute in particular cases. Musgrove v. Jackson, 59 Miss. 390.

VERBAL ACT DOCTRINE. Under this doctrine, utterances accompanying some act or conduct to which it is desired to give legal effect are admissible where conduct to be characterized by words is material to issue and equivocal in its nature, and Under doctrine, where declarations of an individual are so connected with his acts as to derive a degree of credit from such connection, independently of the declaration, the declaration becomes part of the transaction and is admissible. American Employers Ins. Co. v. Wentworth, 90 N.H. 112, 5 A.2d 265, 269.

The "verbal act doctrine" and the "res gestae doctrine" coincide practically and serve equally to admit certain sorts of statements, but they are nevertheless wholly distinct in their nature and in their right to exist. American Employers Ins. Co. v. Wentworth, 90 N.H. 112, 5 A.2d 265, 269.

VERBAL NOTE. A memorandum or note, in diplomacy, not signed, sent when an affair has continued a long time without any reply, in order to avoid the appearance of an urgency which perhaps is not required; and, on the other hand, to guard against the supposition that it is forgotten, or that there is an intention of not prosecuting it any further. Wharton.

VERBAL PROCESS. In Louisiana. Procès verbal. (q. v.).

VERBIS STANDUM UBI NULLA AMBIGUITAS. One must abide by the words where there is no ambiguity. Tray. Lat. Max. 612.

VERBUM IMPERFECT! TEMPORIS REM ADHUC IMPERFECTAM SIGNIFICAT. The imperfect tense of the verb indicates an incomplete matter. Mactier v. Frith, 6 Wend. (N.Y.) 103, 120, 21 Am.Dec. 262.

VERDERER, or VERDEROR. An officer of the king's forest, who is sworn to maintain and keep the assizes of the forest, and to view, receive, and enroll the attachments and presentments of all manner of trespasses of vert and venison in the forest. Manw. c. 6, § 5.

VERDICT. From the Latin "veredictum," a true declaration. State v. Blue, 134 La. 561, 64 So. 411, 413; Clark v. State, 170 Tenn. 499, 97 S.W.2d 644, 646. In practice. The formal and unanimous decision or finding made by a jury, impaneled and sworn for the trial of a cause, and reported to the court (and accepted by it), upon the matters or questions dully submitted to them upon the trial. Sitterson v. Sitterson, 191 N.C. 319, 131 S.E. 641, 642, 51 A.L.R. 760; Roth v. East Connellsville Coke Co., 242 Pa. 23, 88 A. 781. A declaration of the truth as to matters of fact submitted to jury. Groves v. State, 162 Ga. 161, 132 S.E. 769, 770; Arcadia Timber Co. v. Evans, 304 Mo. 674, 264 S.W. 810. The definitive answer given by the jury to the court concerning the matters of fact committed to the jury for their deliberation and determination. Ralston v. Stump, 75 Ohio App. 375, 62 N.E.2d 293, 294.

A true response of 12 men to the issues in the case, arrived at after a consideration of all the evidence in the case, by each juror acting independently and voluntarily in forming his conclusion, or the concurrent coincident conclusion of all 12. Roberts v. State, 26 Ala.App. 331, 159 So. 373, 374.

Explanations or comments in a written verdict are no part of the "verdict" of the jury but are mere "surplusage". Anderson v. Penn Hall Co., D.C.Pa., 47 F.Supp. 691, 692.

Until accepted by the court, a finding of the jury is not a "verdict." Schulman v. Stock, 89 Conn. 237, 93 A. 531. Anderson v. Penn Hall Co., D.C.Pa., 47 F.Supp. 691, 692. The only "verdict" is that which the jury announces orally to the court, and which is received and recorded at direction of court as the jury's finding.

Although in common language, the word may be used in a more extended sense, it has a well-defined signification in law. It means the decision of a jury, and not the decision of a court or a referee or a commissioner. Kerner v. Petigo, 25 Kan. 656. "Decision" bears the same relation to non jury cases as "verdict" to jury cases, and a "verdict" is a conclusion upon the facts, and in effect a direction for judgment, while a "decision" is an order for judgment, and determines the judgment to be entered. Schofield v. Baker, D.C.Wash., 242 F. 657, 658.

Adverse Verdict
Where a party, appealing from an allowance of damages by commissioners, recovers a verdict in his favor, but for a less amount of damages than had been originally allowed, such verdict is adverse to him, within the meaning of his undertaking to pay costs if the verdict should be adverse to him. Hamblin v. Barnstable County, 16 Gray (Miss.) 256.

Chance Verdict

A verdict is not a "chance verdict" merely because, in arriving at the amount, the jury took each juror's estimate of what should be assessed as the damages and divided the total by the number of jurors, and afterward knowingly and understandingly agreed that such quotients should be the amount of the verdict. Great Northern Ry. Co. v. Lenton, 31 N. D. 555, 154 N.W. 275, 277. See, also, Foley v. Hornung, 35 Cal.App. 304, 169 P. 705, 709. See Quotient Verdict, infra.

Compromise Verdict
One which is the result, not of justifiable cession of views, but of improper compromise of the vital principles which should have controlled the decision. Goelet v. Matt J. Ward Co., 155 C.A. 9, 242 F. 65, 67. Although it is proper for jurors to harmonize their views and reach a verdict with proper regard for each other's opinions, it is not proper for any juror to surrender his conscientious convictions on any material issue in return for a relinquishment by others of their like settled opinions on another issue, producing a result which does not command the approval of the whole panel. Snyder v. Portland Ry., Light & Power Co., 107 Or. 673, 215 P. 887, 889.

Excessive Verdict
See Excessive Verdict.

False Verdict
One obviously opposed to the principles of right and justice; an untrue verdict. Formerly, if a jury gave a false verdict, the party injured by it might sue out and prosecute a writ of attainder against them, either at common law or on the statute 11 Hen. VII. c. 24, at his election, for the purpose of reversing the judgment and punishing the jury for their verdict; but not where the jury erred merely in point of law, if they found according to the judge's direction. The practice of setting aside verdicts and granting new trials, however, so superseded the use of attaints that there is no instance of one to be found in the books or reports later than in the time of Elizabeth, and it was altogether abolished by 6 Geo. IV. c. 50, § 60. Wharton.

General Verdict

A verdict whereby the jury find either for the plaintiff or for the defendant in general terms; the ordinary form of a verdict. Glenn v. Summer, 10 S.Ct. 41, 132 U.S. 152, 33 L.Ed. 301; Childs v. Carpenter, 87 Me. 114, 32 A. 780. A finding by the jury in the terms of the issue referred to them. Settle v. Alison, 52 Am.Dec. 393, 8 Ga. 208. Tidd, Pr. 798. That by which the jury pronounces generally on all of the issues in favor of plaintiff or defendant. Skelton v. City of Newberg, 76 Or. 126, 148 P. 53, 55; Cleveland, C. C. & St. Ry. Co. v. Wolf, 189 Ind. 585, 128 N.E. 38, 40. That by which they pronounce generally upon all or any of the issues, either in favor of the plaintiff or defendant;--distinguished from a special verdict, which is that by which the jury finds facts only. Comp.Stat. Ok1.1921, § 551 (Code 1931, § 369).

Open Verdict

A verdict of a coroner's jury which finds that the subject "came to his death by means to the jury unknown," or "came to his death at the hands of a person or persons to the jury unknown," that is, one which leaves open either the question whether any crime was committed or the identity of the criminal.

Partial Verdict

In criminal law, a verdict by which the jury acquit the defendant as to a part of the accusation and find him guilty as to the residue. State v. McGee, 33 S.E. 353, 55 S.C. 247, 74 Am.St.Rep. 741; U. S. v. Watkins, 28 F.Cas. 419.

Privy Verdict

One given after the judge has left or adjourned the court, and the jury, being agreed, in order to be delivered from their confinement, obtain leave to give their verdict privily to the judge out of court. Such a verdict is of no force unless afterwards affirmed by a public verdict given openly in court. This practice is now superseded by that of rendering a sealed verdict. See Young v. Seymour, 4 Neb. 99.

Public Verdict

A verdict openly delivered by the jury in court. Withee v. Rowe, 45 Me. 571.

Quotient Verdict

A money verdict the amount of which is fixed by the following process: Each juror writes down the sum he wishes to award by the verdict, and these amounts are all added together, and the total is divided by twelve, (the number of jurors,) the quotient being the verdict of the jury by their agreement. Speer v. State, 130 Ark. 457, 198 S.W. 113, 115; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Brown, 45 Okl. 143, 144 P. 1075, 1077; Hamilton v. Oswego Water Works, 22 App.Div. 573, 48 N.Y.S. 106. To invalidate a verdict of this kind, it must appear that, in advance of the computation, there was an agreement to be bound by the result. In re Havenmaier's Estate, 163 Minn. 218, 203 N.W. 958, 959; Great Northern Ry. Co. v. Lenton, 154 N.W. 275, 277, 31 N.D. 555; Carter v. Marshall Oil Co., 185 Iowa 416, 170 N.W. 798, 800.

See Sealed.

Special Verdict

A "special verdict" exhibits the legitimate facts and leaves the legal conclusions to the court, and must cover all the issues in the case, while an answer to a special interrogatory may respond to but a single inquiry pertaining merely to one issue essential to the general verdict. Childress v. Lake Erie & W. R. Co., 182 Ind. 251, 105 N.E. 467, 470.

Verdict by Lot

This type of verdict was formerly held to be legitimate, 1 Keble 811; but such verdicts are now held to be illegal. See Barnard v. State, 221 S.W. 293, 294, 87 Tex.Cr.R. 365; Chance Verdict, supra.

Verdict Contrary to Law

A verdict which law does not authorize jury to render on evidence because conclusion drawn is not justified thereby. Gruhn v. J. H. Taylor Const. Co., 180 Misc. 956, 40 N.Y.S.2d 765, 770. One which is contrary to the principles of law as applied to the facts which the jury were called upon to try and contrary to the principles of law which should govern the cause. Piepho v. Gesse, 106 Ind.App. 450, 18 N.E.2d 468, 471.

Verdict of Guilty But Insane

A special verdict which amounts to an acquittal of the person tried. Rex v. Taylor, [1915] 2 K. B. 709, 712.

Verdict of No Cause of Action

Verdict of Not Guilty

Simply a verdict of not proven in the particular case tried; it is not a verdict of innocence, and hence is not conclusive against the state in favor of any other person than the defendant who was actually acquitted. Woody v. State, 10 Okl.Cr. 322, 136 P. 430, 432, 49 L.R.A.,N.S., 479.

Verdict Subject to Opinion of Court
A verdict returned by the jury, the entry of judgment upon which is subject to the determination of points of law reserved by the court upon the trial.

VERDICT, ESTOPPEL BY. The term is sometimes applied to the estoppel arising from a former adjudication of the same fact or issue between the same parties or their privies. Chicago Theological Seminary v. People, 189 Ill. 439, 59 N.E. 977; Swank v. Railway Co., 61 Minn. 423, 63 N.W. 1088. But this use is not correct, as it is not the verdict which creates an estoppel, but the judgment, and it is immaterial whether a jury participated in the trial or not. The doctrine of estoppel by verdict is but another branch of the doctrine of res judicata. Chicago Title & Trust Co. v. National Storage Co., 260 Ill. 485, 103 N.E. 227, 231; Citizen's Loan & Trust Co. of Washington, Ind. v. Sanders, 99 Ind.App. 77, 187 N.E. 396, 398. See, however, Coffman v. Hope Natural Gas Co., 74 W.Va. 57, 81 S.E. 575. See, also, Judgment, Estoppel By.

A former adjudication is conclusive in subsequent proceeding between same parties but on a different cause of action as to facts actually decided. Kimpton v. Spellman, 351 Mo. 674, 173 S.W.2d 886, 891; Holtz v. Beighley, 211 Minn. 153, 300 N.W. 445, 446.

It arises when material fact has been determined in former suit between same parties or those in privity with them, in which such fact was also material. Little v. Blue Goose Motor Coach Co., 346 Ill. 266, 178 N.E. 496, 497; Citizen's Loan & Trust Co. of Washington, Ind. v. Sanders, 187 N.E. 396, 99 Ind.App. 77. It is limited to matters actually or by necessary implication found and determined. In pror trial. Missouri District Telegraph Co. v. Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., 338 Mo. 692, 93 S.W.2d 19, 22. It operates only as to issues actually litigated. Gustafson v. Gustafson, 178 Minn. 1, 226 N.W. 412, 413.

It is not a decision on the law that concludes the parties, but the determination of a controlling fact or matter in issue. People v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 350 Ill. 274, 183 N.E. 233, 235.

The rules of "estoppel by verdict" apply to some fact or issue necessarily determined by the previous litigation. Skolnik v. Petella, 376 Ill. 500, 34 N.E.2d 825, 827.

To operate as "estoppel by verdict," it is necessary that there shall have been a finding of a specific fact in former judgment or record that was material and controlling in case, or was necessarily involved in verdict or judgment, and also material and controlling in pending case. Brown v. Brown, 286 Ill.App. 471, 3 N.E.2d 945, 946. Where controlling fact or question material to determination of both causes is decided in a former suit and is again in issue in a subsequent suit between same parties, first adjudication will, if properly presented, be conclusive. Brown v. Brown, 286 Ill.App. 471, 3 N.E.2d 945, 946; McKeever v. Producers & Refiners' Corporation, 170 Okl. 559, 41 P.2d 466, 469.

VEREDICT. L. Lat. In old English law. A verdict; a declaration of the truth of a matter in issue, submitted to a jury for trial.

VEREDICTUM, QUASI DICTUM VERITATIS; UT JUDICIUM QUASI JURIS DICTUM. Co. Litt. 226. The verdict is, as it were, the dictum [saying] of truth; as the judgment is the dictum of law.

VERGE, or VIRGE. In English law. The compass of the royal court, which bounds the jurisdiction of the lord steward of the household; it seems to have been twelve miles about. Brit. 68. An uncertain quantity of land from fifteen to thirty acres. 2 Edw. I. Also a stick, or rod, whereby one is admitted tenant to a copyhold estate. Old Nat. Brev. 17.

VERGELT. In Saxon law. A mulct or fine for a crime. See Weregild.

VERGENS AD INOPIAM, L. Lat. In Scotch law. Verging towards poverty; in declining circumstances. 2 Karnes, Eq. 8.

VERGERS. In English law. Officers who carry white wands before the justices of either bench. Cowell. Mentioned in Fleta, as officers of the king's court, who oppressed the people by demanding exorbitant fees. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 38.

VERIFICATION. Confirmation of correctness, truth, or authenticity by affidavit, oath, or deposition. McNamara v. Powell, Sup., 52 N.Y.S.2d 515, 527.

Pleading
A certain formula with which all pleadings containing new affirmative matter must conclude, being in itself an averment that the party pleading is ready to establish the truth of what he has set forth.

The usual form of verification of a plea containing matter of fact is, "And this he is ready to verify," etc. See 3 Bla. Comm. 309.

Practice
The examination of a writing for the purpose of ascertaining its truth. A certificate or affidavit that it is true.

"Verification" is not identical with "authentication." A notary may verify a mortgagee's written statement of the actual amount of his claim, but need not authenticate the act by his seal. Ashley v. Wright, 19 Ohio St. 291.

Confirmation of the correctness, truth, or authenticity of a pleading, account, or other paper, by an affidavit, oath, or deposition. Herbert v. Roxana Petroleum Corporation, D.C. Ill., 12 F.2d 81, 83; McDonald v. Rosengarten, 134 Ill. 126, 25 N.E. 429; Summerfield v. Phoenix Assur. Co., C.C. Va., 65 F. 296; Patterson v. Brooklyn, 6 App.Div. 127, 40 N.Y.S. 581.

The word "verified," when used in a statute, ordinarily imports a verity attested by the sanctity of an oath. Bristol v. Buck, 201 App.Div. 100, 194 N.Y.S. 53, 55. It is frequently used interchangeably with "sworn." Francesconi v. Independent School Dist. of Wall Lake, 204 Iowa, 307, 214 N.W. 882, 885.

To prove to be true; to establish the truth of; to confirm; to confirm the truth or truthfulness of; to check or test the accuracy or exactness of; to confirm or establish the authenticity of; to authenticate; to prove; to maintain; to affirm; to support; second; back as a friend. MacNeill v. Maddox, 194 Ga. 802, 22 S.E.2d 653, 654.

The word "verify" sometimes means to confirm and substantiate by oath, and sometimes by argument. When used in legal proceedings it is generally employed in the former sense. De Witt v. Hosmer, 3 How.Prac., N.Y., 284.

VERA TESTIMONIUM. Truth; truthfulness; conformity to fact. The records of a court "import uncontrollable verity." 1 Black, Judgm. § 276.

VERED. Lat. In the civil law. A slave born in his master's house.
poses of navigation; a craft for navigation of the water, often, specifically, one larger than a common row boat; as, a war vessel; a passenger vessel. City of Tampa v. Tampa Shipbuilding & Engineering Co., 136 Fla. 216, 186 So. 411, 412; Massman Const. Co. v. Bassett, D.C.Mo., 30 F. Supp. 813, 815.

Every description of water-craft or other artificial contrivances used, or capable of being used, as a means of transportation on water. Rev.St.U.S. § 3 (1 U.S.C.A. § 3); Maryland Casualty Co. v. Lawson, C.C.Fla., 94 F.2d 190, 192. Under this definition, the term has been held to include a large barge, without motive power of its own. Norton v. Warner Co., Pa., 64 S.Ct. 747, 751, 321 U.S. 565, 88 L.Ed. 760; and likewise a house boat, not permanently attached to the shore, though without motive power, The Ark, D.C.Fla., 17 F.2d 446, 447; but not a wharfboat, secured to the shore by cables and used as an office, warehouse, and wharf, and having water and electric light connections and telephone system, Evanwells & Bowling Green Packet Co. v. Chero Cola Bottling Co., 271 U.S. 19, 46 S.Ct. 379, 380, 70 L.Ed. 805; nor a dry dock used for the repair of vessels, though capable of being floated and moved from place to place; Berton v. Tietjen & Lang Dry Dock Co., D.C.N.J., 219 F. 763, 771.

As used in various other statutes, the word 'vessel' has been held applicable to a ferryboat, Port Huron & Sarnia Ferry Co. v. Lawson, D.C.Mich., 292 F. 216, 219; a pile driver scow, George Leary Const. Co. v. Matson, C.C.A.Va., 272 F. 461, 462; a derrick boat, carrying a derrick used for loading logs from the river bank upon boats, Patton-Tully Transp. Co. v. Turner, C.C.A.Tenn., 269 F. 334, 336; a hydro-aeroplane while moving on the water, Reinhardt v. Newport Flying Service Corporation, 232 N.Y. 115, 133 N.E. 37, 372, 18 A.L.R. 1324; and even to a log raft. The Libby Maine, D.C.Wash., 3 F.2d 79, 80. The term is broad enough to include a vessel’s tackle, apparel, furniture, chronometer and appurtenances. The Frolic, D.C.R.I., 148 F. 921.

The word has also been held to include a new ship as soon as its hull has been launched, The Finthus, C.C.A. N.J., 286 F. 122; and any structure which is so far completed as to be capable of being used as a means of transportation on water, R. R. Ricou & Sons Co. v. Fairbanks, Morse & Co., C.C.Fla., 11 F.2d 103, 104; but not an old hull built of timber taken from an old dry dock. The Dredge A, D.C.N.C., 217 F. 617, 630. Contra, Moores v. Underwriters, C.C.Tenn., 14 F. 236.

The words "boat," "craft," and "water craft" are usually applied to small vessels, while larger vessels, especially in those of large iron steamships, are usually referred to by the term "steamer," or "steamship," or "vessel." The Saxon, D.C.S.C., 269 F. 639, 641.

A utensil, such as a bottle, designed to hold liquids, etc. Old Tavern Farm v. Fickett, 125 Me. 123, 131 A. 305, 306.

Foreign Vessel

A vessel owned by residents in, or sailing under the flag of, a foreign nation. "Foreign vessel," under the embargo act of January, 1808, means a vessel under the flag of a foreign power, and not a vessel in which foreigners domiciled in the United States have an interest. The Sally, 1 Gall. 58, F. Cas.No.12,257.

Public Vessel

One owned and used by a nation or government for its public service, whether in its navy, its revenue service, or otherwise.

VESTA. The crop on the ground. Cowell.

VESTED. Fixed; accrued; settled; absolute. Orthwein v. Germania Life Ins. Co. of City of New York, 261 Mo. 650, 170 S.W. 885, 888. Having the character or giving the rights of absolute ownership; not contingent; not subject to be defeated by a condition precedent. Scott v. West, 63 Wis. 529, 24 N.W. 161; McGillis v. McGillis, 11 App. Div. 359, 42 N.Y.S. 924; Smith v. Proskey, 39 Misc. 385, 79 N.Y.S. 851.

VESTED DEVISE, See Devise.

VESTED ESTATE. An interest clothed with a present, legal, and existing right of alienation. Anderson v. Menefee, Tex.Civ.App., 174 S.W. 904, 908; Chaison v. Chaison, Tex.Civ.App., 154 S.W.2d 961, 964. Any estate, whether in possession or not, which is not subject to any condition precedent and unperformed. The interest may be either a present and immediate interest, or it may be a future but contingent, and therefore transmissible, interest. Brown. See Tayloe v. Gould, 10 Barb. (N.Y.) 388; estate by which present interest is invariably fixed to remain to determinate person on determination of preceding freehold estate. Story v. First Nat. Bank & Trust Co. in Orlando, 115 Fla. 436, 156 So. 101. An estate, when the person or the class which takes the remainder is in existence, or if capable of being ascertained when the prior estate vests. Commissioner of Internal Revenue v. Kellogg, C.C.A.3, 119 F.2d 54, 57; or when there is an immediate right of present enjoyment or a present right of future enjoyment. In re Kelly’s Estate, 167 Misc. 751, 4 N.Y.2d 675, 678.

A vested estate, whether present or future, may be absolutely or defeasibly vested. L’Etourneau v. Henquenet, 89 Mich. 428, 50 N.W. 1077, 28 Am.St.Rep. 310. If a present right exists to future possession, the estate is "vested," even though actual possession may be defeated by a future event. Wheaton Coal. Co. v. Harris, 288 Pa. 294, 135 A. 637, 638. See, also, Vest.

VESTED GIFT. A gift if it is immediate, notwithstanding that its enjoyment may be postponed. Bankers Trust Co. v. Garver, 222 Iowa 196, 268 N. W. 568, 571. A future gift when the right to receive it is not subject to a condition precedent. First & American Nat. Bank of Duluth v. Higgins, 208 Minn. 295, 293 N.W. 585, 594. Where future gift is postponed to let in some other interest. Barrett v. Barrett, 134 N.J.Eq. 138, 34 A.2d 579, 590.
VESTED IN INTEREST. A legal term applied to a present fixed right of future enjoyment; as reversions, vested remainders, such executory devisee, future uses, conditional legacies, and other future interests, as are not referred to, or made to depend on, a period or event that is uncertain. Wharton. See Smith v. West, 103 Ill. 337; Hawley v. James, 5 Paige (N.Y.) 466; Gates v. Seibert, 157 Mo. 254, 57 S.W. 1065, 80 Am.St.Rep. 625.

VESTED IN POSSESSION. A legal term applied to a right of present enjoyment actually existing. See Vest.

VESTED INTEREST. A present right or title to a thing, which carries with it an existing right of alienation, even though the right to possession or enjoyment may be postponed to some uncertain time in the future, as distinguished from a future right, which may never materialize or ripen into title, and it matters not how long or for what length of time the future possession or right of enjoyment may be postponed, if the present right exists to alienate and pass title. Fugazzi v. Fugazzi's Committee, 275 Ky. 62, 120 S.W.2d 779, 781. A future interest not dependent on an uncertain period or event, or a fixed present right of future enjoyment. In re Whiting, D.C.N.C., 3 F.2d 440, 441; McMannis v. Peerless Casualty Co., 114 Me. 98, 95 A. 510. When a person has a right to immediate possession on determination of preceding or particular estate. In re Clark's Estate, Orph., 13 N.J.Misc. 393, 178 A. 574, 575. One in which there is a present fixed right, either of present enjoyment or of future enjoyment. Painter v. Herschberger, 340 Mo. 347, 100 S.W.2d 532, 535. It is not the uncertainty of enjoyment in the future, but the uncertainty of the right of enjoyment, which makes the difference between a "vested" and a "contingent" interest. Mahoney v. Mahoney, 98 Conn. 525, 120 A. 342, 345; Grant v. Grant, 187 Ga. 807, 2 S.E.2d 421, 427. A future interest is vested when there is a person in being who would have a right, defeasible or indefeasible, to the immediate possession of the property, upon the ceasing of the intermediate or precedent interest. Civil Code Cal. § 694. See Allison v. Allison, 101 Va. 537, 44 S.E. 904, 63 L.R.A. 920; Hawkins v. Bohling, 168 Ill. 214, 48 N.E. 94; Stewart v. Harriman, 56 N.H. 25, 22 Am.Rep. 408; Bunting v. Speck, 41 Kan. 424, 21 P. 288, 3 L.R.A. 690.

VESTED LEGACY. A legacy given in such terms that there is a fixed, indefeasible right to its payment. In re Central Union Trust Co. of New York, 183 N.Y.S. 671, 673, 193 App.Div. 292. A legacy payable at a future time, certain to arrive, and not subject to conditions precedent, is vested, where there is a person in esse at the testator's death capable of taking when the time arrives, though his interest may be altogether defeated by his own death. In re Youngblood's Estate, 117 Pa. Super. 550, 178 A. 517, 518. A legacy is said to be vested when the words of the testator making the bequest convey a transmissible interest, whether present or future, to the legatee in the legacy. Thus a legacy to one to be paid when he attains the age of twenty-one years is a vested legacy, because it is given unconditionally and absolutely, and therefore vests an immediate interest in the legatee, of which the enjoyment only is deferred or postponed. Brown. See Magoffin v. Patton, 4 Rawle (Pa.) 113; Talmadge v. Seaman, 85 Hun 242, 32 N.Y.S. 906; Rubencane v. McKee, 6 Del.Ch. 40, 6 A. 639.

VESTED REMAINDER. See Remainder.

VESTED RIGHTS. In constitutional law. Rights which have so completely and definitely accrued to or settled in a person that they are not subject to be defeated or canceled by the act of any other private person, and which it is right and equitable that the government should recognize and protect, as being lawful in themselves, and settled according to the then current rules of law, and of which the individual could not be deprived arbitrarily without injustice, or of which he could not justly be deprived otherwise than by the established methods of procedure and for the public welfare. Cassard v. Tracy, 52 La.Anns. 835, 27 So. 368, 49 L.R.A. 272; Stimson Land Co. v. Rawson, C.C. Wash., 62 F. 429; Parker v. Schrimsher, Tex.Civ.App., 172 S.W. 165, 168. Which cannot be interfered with by retrospective laws, are interests which it is proper for state to recognize and protect and of which individual cannot be deprived arbitrarily without injustice. American States Water Service Co. of California v. Johnson, 31 Cal.App.2d 606, 88 P.2d 770, 774. Immediate or fixed right to present or future enjoyment and one that does not depend on an event that is uncertain. Dunham Lumber Co. v. Gresz, 71 N.D. 491, 2 N.W.2d 175, 179, 141 A.L.R. 60; Massa v. Nastri, 125 Conn. 144, 3 A.2d 839, 840, 120 A.L.R. 939; Wylie v. City Commission of Grand Rapids, 293 Mich. 571, 292 N.W. 668, 674. A right complete and consummated, and of such character that it cannot be divested without the consent of the person to whom it belongs, and fixed or established, and no longer open to controversy. State ex rel. Milligan v. Ritter's Estate, Ind.App., 46 N.E.2d 736, 743.

VESTIGIAL WORDS. Those contained in a statute which by reason of a succession of statutes on the same subject-matter, amending or modifying previous provisions of the same, are rendered useless or meaningless by such amendments. They should not be permitted to defeat the fair meaning of the statute. Saltonstall v. Birtwell, 17 S.Ct. 19, 164 U.S. 70, 41 L.Ed. 348.

VESTIGIUM. Lat. In the law of evidence, a vestige, mark, or sign; a trace, track, or impression left by a physical object. Fleta, 1. 1, c. 25, § 6.

VESTING ORDER. In English law. An order which may be granted by the chancery division of the high court of justice, (and formerly by chancery,) passing the legal estate in lieu of a conveyance. Commissioners also, under modern statutes, have similar powers. St. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 55; Wharton.

VESTRY. In ecclesiastical law. The place in a church where the priest's vestures are deposited. Also an assembly of the minister, church-wardens, and parishioners, usually held in the vestry of the church, or in a building called a "vestry-hall," to act upon business of the church. Mozley & Whiteley.
VESTRY-CESS

VESTRY-CESS. A rate levied in Ireland for parochial purposes, abolished by St. 27 Vict. c. 17.

VESTRY-CLERK. An officer appointed to attend vestries, and take an account of their proceedings, etc.

VESTRY-MEN. A select number of parishioners elected in large and populous parishes to take care of the concerns of the parish; so called because they used ordinarily to meet in the vestry of the church. Cowell.

VESTURA. A crop of grass or corn. Also a garment; metaphorically applied to a possession or seizin.

VESTURA TERRIE. In old English law. The vesture of the land; that is, the corn, grass, Underwood, sweepage, and the like. Co. Litt. 4b. See Simpson v. Coe, 4 N.H. 301.

VESTURE OF LAND. A phrase including all things, trees excepted, which grow upon the surface of the land, and clothe it externally. Ham. N.P. 151.

VETERA STATUTA. Lat. Ancient statutes. The English statutes from Magna Charta to the end of the reign of Edward II. are so called; those from the beginning of the reign of Edward III. being contradistinguished by the appellation of "Nova Statuta." 2 Reeve, Eng. Law, 85.

VETERAN. Within Civil Service Laws giving preference to veterans, any honorably discharged soldier, sailor, marine, nurse, or army field clerk, who has served in military service of the United States in any war. Ryan v. Civil Service Commission of New Jersey, 115 N.J.L. 316, 179 A. 848, 849.

VETERINARIAN. One who practices the art of treating diseases and injuries of domestic animals, surgically or medically. Tucker v. Williamson, D.C. Ohio, 229 F. 201, 210.

VETITUM NAMIAM. L. Lat. Where the bailiff comes to make replevin, the owner of the cattle may demand satisfaction in placitum de vetito namio. 2 Inst. 140; 2 Bl.Comm. 148.

VETO (Lat. I forbid). The refusal of assent by the executive officer whose assent is necessary to perfect a law which has been passed by the legislative body, and the message which is usually sent to such body by the executive, stating such refusal and the reasons therefor. It is either absolute or qualified, according as the effect of its exercise is either to destroy the bill finally, or to prevent its becoming law unless again passed by a stated proportion of votes or with other formalities. Or the veto may be merely suspensive. See People v. Board of Councilmen (Super. Buff.) 20 N.Y. Supp. 51.

A statement by the Governor that he objects to certain items of an appropriation bill, without stating his reasons therefor, is insufficient to constitute an effective veto of such items. State v. French, 133 Kan. 579, 300 P. 1082, 1083. And where Governor returned resolution to the house in which it originated for purpose of correction of typographical error only, such communication was also held not to constitute a "veto". In re Block 1, Donly Heights Addition, Oklahoma City, 194 Okl. 221, 149 P.2d 263, 267.

Pocket Veto

Non-approval of a legislative act by the president or state governor, with the result that it fails to become a law, not by a written disapproval, (a veto in the ordinary form,) but by remaining silent until the adjournment of the legislative body, when that adjournment takes place before the expiration of the period allowed by the constitution for the examination of the bill by the executive.

VETO POWER, Executive's power conditionally to prevent acts passed by Legislature which have not yet become law. Fitzsimmons v. Leon, C.C.A. Puerto Rico, 141 F.2d 886, 888.

VETUS JUS. Lat. The old law. A term used in the civil law, sometimes to designate the law of the Twelve Tables, and sometimes merely a law which was in force previous to the passage of a subsequent law. Calvin.

VEX. To harass, disquiet, annoy; as by repeated litigation upon the same facts.

VEXARI. Lat. To be harassed, vexed, or annoyed; to be prosecuted; as in the maxim, Nemo debet bis vexari pro una et eadem causa, no one should be twice prosecuted for one and the same cause.

VEXATA QUAESTIO. Lat. A vexed question; a question often agitated or discussed, but not determined or settled; a question or point which has been differently determined, and so left doubtful. 7 Coke, 45b; 3 Burrows, 1547.

VEXATION. The injury or damage which is suffered in consequence of the tricks of another.

VEXATIOUS. Without reasonable or probable cause or excuse. Gardner v. Queen Ins. Co. of America, 232 Mo.App. 1101, 115 S.W.2d 4, 7.

VEXATIOUS ACTIONS ACT. An act of parliaments of 1896, authorizing the Itigh Court to make an order, on the application of the attorney-general, that a person shown to be habitually and vexatiously litigious, without reasonable ground, shall not institute legal proceedings in that or any other court, without leave of the High Court judge thereof, upon satisfactory proof that such legal proceedings are not an abuse of the process of the court and that there is a prima facie ground therefor. The order when made is published in the Gazette. See 76 L.T. 351; [1913] W.N. 274 (Div.Ct.).

VEXATIOUS DELAY OR REFUSAL TO PAY. Under statute permitting recovery of damages for "vexatious 'delay" of an insurer in payment of a policy, no penalty can be inflicted unless it appears to a reasonable and prudent man before the trial that refusal was willful and without reasonable cause, and penalty will not be inflicted because of adverse outcome of trial. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Calhoun, C.C.A.Mo., 114 F.2d 526, 537.

An insurer is allowed an honest difference of opinion regarding its liability under a policy and so long as it acts in good faith, may contest either an issue of fact or an issue of law. Camp v. John Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co. of Boston, Mass., Mo.App., 165 S.W.2d 277, 283.

VEXATIONAL PROCEEDING. Proceeding instituted maliciously and without probable cause. Paramount Pictures v. Blumenthal, 256 App.Div. 756, 11 N.Y.S.2d 768, 772. Kind of malicious prosecution differing principally because based on civil action. Calvo v. Bartolotta, 112 Conn. 396, 152 A. 311. When the party bringing proceeding is not acting bona fide, and merely wishes to annoy or embarrass his opponent, or when it is not calculated to lead to any practical result. Such a proceeding is often described as "frivolous and vexatious," and the court may stay it on that ground. Sweet.

VEXATIONAL REFUSAL TO PAY. See Vexatious Delay.

VEXED QUESTION. A question or point of law often discussed or agitated, but not determined or settled.

VIALE. Livable, having the appearance of being able to live. Wehrman v. Farmers' & Merchants' Sa'y. Bank of Durant, 221 Iowa 249, 259 N.W. 564. Capable of life. This term is applied to a newly-born infant, and especially to one prematurely born, which is not only born alive, but in such a state of organic development as to make possible the continuance of its life.

VL'É SERVITUS. Lat. A right of way over another's land.

VIAGERE RENTE. In French law. A rent-charge or annuity payable for the life of the annuitant.

VIANDER. In old English law. A returning officer. 7 Mod. 13.

VIATOR. Lat. In Roman law. A summoner or apparitor; an officer who attended on the tribunes and fediles.

VICAR. One who performs the functions of another; a substitute. Also the incumbent of an appropriated or improperly ecclesiastical benefice, as distinguished from the incumbent of a non-appropriated benefice, who is called a "rector." Wharton. See Pinder v. Barr, 4 El. & Bl. 115.

VICARIAL TITHES. Petty or small tithes payable for the life of the annuitant.

VICAR. An officer through whom the Pope exercises authority in parts remote, and who is sometimes sent with episcopal functions into provinces where there is no bishop resident or there has been a long vacancy in the see, or into infidel or heretical countries. 2 Phill. Int.L. 529.

VICARIO, etc. An ancient writ for a spiritual person imprisoned, upon forfeiture of a recognizance, etc. Reg. Orig. 147.

VICARIUS APOSTOLICUS. An officer through whom the Pope exercises authority in parts remote, and who is sometimes sent with episcopal functions into provinces where there is no bishop resident or there has been a long vacancy in the see, or into infidel or heretical countries. 2 Phill. Int.L. 529.

VICARIUS NON HABET VICARIUM. A deputy has not [cannot have] a deputy. A delegated power cannot be again delegated. Broom, Max. 839.

VICE. A fault, defect, or imperfection.

As applied to an animal a bad habit or failing. F. Giovannozzi & Sons v. Luciani, Del.Super., 2 Terry 211, 18 A.2d 435, 437.

In the civil law, redhibitory vices are such faults or imperfections in the subject-matter of a sale as will give the purchaser the right to return the article and demand back the price.

VICE. Lat. In the place or stead. Vice mea, in my place.

Vice-admiral. An officer in the navy ranking below an admiral.

Vice-admiral of the coast. A county officer in England appointed by the admiral “to be answerable to the high admiral for all the coasts of the sea, when need and occasion shall be.” He also had power to arrest ships, when found within a certain district, for the use of the king. His office was judicial as well as ministerial. The appointment to the office is still made for a few countries of England.

Vice-admiralty courts. In English law. Courts established in the king’s possessions beyond the seas, with jurisdiction over maritime causes, including those relating to prize. 3 Steph.Comm. 435; 3 Bl.Comm. 69.

Vice-chamberlain. A great officer under the lord chamberlain, who, in the absence of the lord chamberlain, has the control and command of the officers appertaining to that part of the royal household which is called the “chamber.” Cowell.

Vice-chancellor. See Chancellor.

Vice-comes. A title formerly bestowed on the sheriff of a county, when he was regarded as the deputy of the count or earl. Co.Litt. 168.

Vice-commercial agent. In the consular service of the United States, this was formerly the title of a consular officer who was substituted temporarily to fill the place of a commercial agent when the latter was absent or relieved from duty. See Commercial Agent.

Vice-constable of England. An ancient officer in the time of Edward IV.

Vice-consul. In the consular service of the United States a consul who was substituted temporarily to fill the place of a consul who is absent or relieved from duty. 22 U.S.C.A. § 938. Schunior v. Russell, 83 Tex. 83, 18 S.W. 484. In international law generally the term designates a commercial agent who acts in the place or stead of a consul or who has charge of a portion of his territory. In old English law, it meant the deputy or substitute of an earl (comes), who was anciently called “consul,” answering to the more modern “vice-comes.” Burrill.

Vice-dominos. A sheriff.

Vice-dominus episcopi. The vicar general or commissary of a bishop. Blount.

Vice-gerent. A deputy or lieutenant.

Vice-judex. In old Lombardic law. A deputy judge.

Vice-marshall. An officer who was appointed to assist the earl marshal.

Vice-president of the United States. The title of the second officer, in point of rank, in the executive branch of the government of the United States.

Vice-principal. See Principal.

VIDAME. In French feudal law. Originally, an officer who represented the bishop, as the viscount represented the count. In process of time, these dignitaries erected their offices into fiefs, and became feudal nobles, such as the vidame of Chartres, Rheims, etc., continuing to take their titles from the seat of the bishop whom they represented, although the lands held by virtue of their fiefs might be situated elsewhere. Brande; Burrill.

VIDAMER. In French feudal law. Originally, an officer who represented the bishop, as the viscount represented the count. In process of time, these dignitaries erected their offices into fiefs, and became feudal nobles, such as the vidame of Chartres, Rheims, etc., continuing to take their titles from the seat of the bishop whom they represented, although the lands held by virtue of their fiefs might be situated elsewhere. Brande; Burrill.

VIDA. Lat. A word of reference. Vide ante, or vide supra, refers to a previous passage, vide post, or vide infra, to a subsequent passage, in a book.

VIDEBIS EA SAZEPE COMMITTI QUIE SIEPE VINDICANTUR. 3 Inst. Epil. You will see those things frequently committed which are frequently punished.

VIDELICET. Lat. The words "to-wit," or "that is to say," so frequently used in pleading, are technically called the "videlicet" or "scilicet," and when any fact alleged in pleading is preceded by, or accompanied with these words, such fact is, in the language of the law, said to be "laid under a videlicet." The use of the videlicet is to point out, particularize, or render more specific that which has been previously stated in general language only; also to explain that which is doubtful or obscure. Brown. See Stukeley v. Butler; Hob. 171; Gleason v. McVickar, 7 Cow. (N.Y.) 43; Com. v. Quinlan, 27 N.E. 8, 153 Mass. 483; People v. Shaver, 367 Ill. 339, 11 N.E.2d 400, 402. Its common office is to state time, place, or manner which are of the essence of the matter in issue. Board of Sup’rs, Warren County, v. Vicksburg Hospital, 173 Miss. 805, 163 So. 382.

VIDIMUS. An inspeximus, (q. v.). Barrington, Ob. St. 5.

VIDUA REGIS. Lat. In old English law. A king’s widow. The widow of a tenant in capite. So called, because she was not allowed to marry a second time without the king’s permission; obtaining her dower also from the assignment of the king, and having the king for her patron and defender. Spelman.

VIDUITATIS PROFESSIO. Lat. The making a solemn profession to live a sole and chaste woman.

VIDUITY. Widowhood.

VIE. Fr. Life; occurring in the phrases cestui que vie, pur autre vie, etc.

VIEW. The right of prospect; the outlook or prospect from the windows of one’s house. A species of urban servitude which prohibits the obstruction of such prospect. 3 Kent, Comm. 448.

At common law, the proceeding by which tribunal goes to an object which cannot be produced in court because it is immovable or inconvenient to remove, and there observes it. Conner v. Parker, Tex.Civ.App., 181 S.W.2d 873, 874. An inspection by the jury previously to the trial of property on the premises. Friend v. Childs Dining Hall Co., 231 Mass. 65, 120 N.E. 407, 5 A.L.R. 1100.

Vide supra, refers to a previous passage, vide post, or vide infra, to a subsequent passage, in a book.

What was seen by master, in suits to enjoin commonwealth's interference with outdoor advertising, who traveled to view billboards, etc., was in a sense "evidence." General Outdoor Advertising Co. v. Department of Public Works, 289 Mass. 149, 193 N.E. 799, 812.

VIEW AND DELIVERY. When a right of coinmon is exercisable not over the whole waste, but only in convenient places indicated from time to time by the lord of the manor or his bailiff, it is said to be exercisable after "view and delivery." Elton, Commons, 233.

VIEW OF FRANK-PLEDGE. In English law, an examination to see if every freeman above twelve years of age within the district had taken the oath of allegiance, and found nine freeman pledges for his peaceable demeanor. 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, 7.

VIEWERS. Persons appointed by a court to make an investigation of certain matters, or to examine a particular locality, (as, the proposed site of a new road,) and to report to the court the result of their inspection, with their opinion on the same.

Old Practice

VIF-GAGE. L. Fr. In old English law. A vivum vadium or living pledge, as distinguished from a mortgage or dead pledge. Properly, an estate given as security for a debt, the debt to be satisfied out of the rents, issues, and profits.

VIGIL. In ecclesiastical law. The eve or next day before any solemn feast.

VIGILANCE. Watchfulness; precaution; a proper degree of activity and promptness in pursuing one's rights or guarding them from infraction, or in making or discovering opportunities for the enforcement of one's lawful claims and demands.

It is the opposite of lathes. Wynne v. Conrad, 220 N.C. 355, 17 S.E.2d 514, 518.

VIGILANT. Watchful, awake, and on the alert; attentive to discover and avoid danger, or to pro- vide for safety; circumspect; cautious; wary. City Ice & Fuel Co. v. Center, 54 Ohio App. 116, 6 N.E.2d 580, 583.

VIGILANTIBUS ET NON DORMIENTIBUS JU- RA SUBVENIUNT. The laws aid those who are vigilant, not those who sleep upon their rights. 2 Inst. 690; Merchants' Bank of Newburyport, President, etc., of, v. Stevenson, 7 Allen (Mass.) 493; Broom, Max. 892.

VIGOR. Lat. Strength; virtue; force; efficiency. Proprio vigore, by its own force.

VIIS ET MODIS. Lat. In the ecclesiastical courts, service of a decree or citation viis et modis, i.e., by all "ways and means" likely to affect the party with knowledge of its contents, is equivalent to substituted service in the temporal courts, and is opposed to personal service. Phillim. Ecc. Law, 1258, 1283.

VILL. In old English law, this word was used to signify the parts into which a hundred or wapentake was divided. It also signifies a town or city.

Demi-vill
A town consisting of five freemen, or frankpledges. Spelman.

VILLA EST EX PLURIBUS MANSIONIBUS VIC- INATA, ET COLLATA EX PLURIBUS VICINIS, ET SUB APPELLATIONE VILLARUM CONTIN- ENTUR BURGI ET CIVITATES. Co. Litt. 115. Vill is a neighborhood of many mansions, a collection of many neighbors, and under the term of "vills" boroughs and cities are contained.

VILLA REGIA. Lat. In Saxon law. A royal residence. Spelman.

VILLAGE. A collection of houses collocated after something like regular plan regarding streets and lanes, without intervening farm land, but with convenient curtilages attached, an assemblage of houses, less than a town or city, but urban or semiurban in character, or any small assemblage of houses for dwellings, business, or both, in country, whether situated on regularly laid out streets and alleys or not. Supervisors of Manheim Tp., Lancaster County, v. Workman, 154 Pa.Super. 146, 35 A.2d 747, 750.

In some states, this is the legal description of a class of municipal corporations of smaller population than "cities" and having a simpler form of government, and corresponding to "towns" and "boroughs," as these terms are employed elsewhere.

So it was held that a "village" is a municipal corporation invested with particular franchises, and it may take and hold real and personal estate absolutely or in trust for any public use, and its corporate powers extend beyond the field of local government and the administration of local affairs. Village of Kenmore v. Erie County, 252 N.Y. 437, 169 N.E. 637, 639.

VILLAIN. An opprobrious epithet, implying great moral delinquency, and equivalent to knave, rascal, or scoundrel. The word is libelous. 1 Bos. & P. 331.

VILLANUM SERVITIUM. In old English law, Villein service. Fleta, lib. 3, c. 13, § 1.

VILLEIN. A person attached to a manor, who was substantially in the condition of a slave, who performed the base and servile work upon the manor for the lord, and was, in most respects, a subject of property belonging to him. 1 Washb. Real Prop. 26.

VILLEIN IN GROSS. A villein who was annexed to the person of the lord, and transferable by deed from one owner to another. 2 Bl. Comm. 93.

VILLEIN REGARDANT. A villein annexed to the manor of land; a serf.

VILLEIN SERVICES. Base services, such as villeins performed. 2 Bl. Comm. 93. They were not, however, exclusively confined to villeins, since they might be performed by freemen, without impairing their free condition. Bract. fol. 24b.

VILLEIN SOCAGE. In feudal and old English law. A species of tenure in which the services to be rendered were certain and determinate, but were of a base or servile nature; i. e., not suitable to a man of free and honorable rank. This was also called “privileged villeinage,” to distinguish it from “pure villeinage,” in which the services were not certain, but the tenant was obliged to do whatever he was commanded. 2 Bl. Comm. 61.

VILLENAGE. A servile kind of tenure belonging to lands or tenements, whereby the tenant was bound to do all such services as the lord commanded, or were fit for a villein to do. Cowell. See Villein.

Pure Villenage

A base tenure, where a man holds upon terms of doing whatsoever is commanded of him, nor knows in the evening what is to be done in the morning, and is always bound to an uncertain service. 1 Steph. Comm. (7th Ed.) 188.

VILLENOS JUDGMENT. A judgment which deprived one of his libera lex, whereby he was discredited and disabled as a juror or witness; forfeited his goods and chattels and lands for life; wasted the lands, razed the houses, rooted up the trees, and committed his body to prison. It has become obsolete. 4 Bl. Comm. 136; 4 Steph. Comm. 230; 4 Broom & H. Comm. 153. Wharton.

VIM VI REPELLERE LICET, MODO FIAT PROPINDIUM INJURIAM. It is lawful to repel force by force, provided it be done with the moderation of blameless defense, not for the purpose of taking revenge, but to ward off injury. Co. Litt. 162a.

VINAGIUM. A payment of a certain quantity of wine instead of rent for a vineyard. 2 Mon. Ang. p. 980.

VINCULO. In Spanish law. The bond, chain, or tie of marriage. White, New Recop. b. 1, tit. 6, c. 1, § 2.

VINCULO MATRIMONII. See A Vinculo Matrimonii; Divorce.

VINCULUM JURIS. In the Roman law, an obligation is defined as a vinculum juris, e., “a bond of law,” whereby one party becomes or is bound to another to do something according to law.

VINDEX. Lat. In the civil law. A defender.

VINDICARE. Lat. In the civil law. To claim, or challenge; to demand one’s own; to assert a right in or to a thing; to assert or claim a property in a thing; to claim a thing as one’s own. Calvin.

VINDICATIO. Lat. In the civil law. The claiming a thing as one’s own; the asserting of a right or title in or to a thing.

VINDICATORY PARTS OF LAWS. The sanction of the laws, whereby it is signified what evil or penalty shall be incurred by such as commit any public wrongs, and transgress or neglect their duty. 1 Steph. Comm. 37.

VINDICTA. In Roman law. A rod or wand; and, from the use of that instrument in their course, various legal acts came to be distinguished by the term; e. g., one of the three ancient modes of manumission was by the vindicta; also the rod or wand intervened in the progress of the old action of vindicatio, whence the name of that action. Brown.

VINDICTIVE DAMAGES. See Damages.

VINOUS LIQUORS. This term includes all alcoholic beverages made from the juice of the grape by the process of fermentation, and perhaps similar liquors made from apples and from some species of berries; but not pure alcohol nor distilled liquors nor malt liquors such as beer and ale. See Adler v. State, 55 Ala. 23; Reyfelt v. State, 73 Miss. 415, 18 So. 925; Lemly v. State, 70 Miss. 241, 12 So. 22, 20 L.R.A. 645; Corn. v. Reyburg, 122 Pa. 299, 16 A. 351, 2 L.R.A. 415; Feldman v. Morrison, 1 111.App. 462; Hinton v. State, 132 Ala. 29, 31 So. 563.

VINTNER. One who sells wine. A covenant prohibiting the trade of a vintner includes a person selling wines not to be drunk on the premises. 25 L. T. (N. S.) 312.

VIRGINATE. A quarter of an acre of land. It might also be used to express a quarter of a hide of land.
VIRTUOUS. A woman is a “virtuous female” if her body be pure and if she has never had sexual intercourse with another, though both her mind and heart be impure. Thomas v. State, 19 Ga.App. 104, 91 S.E. 247, 250.

VIRTUTE CJUS. Lat. By virtue whereof. This was the clause in a pleading justifying an entry upon land, by which the party alleged that it was in virtue of an order from one entitled that he entered. Wharton.

VIRTUTE OFFICI. Lat. By virtue of his office. By the authority vested in him as the incumbent of the particular office. An officer acts “virtute officii” when he acts by the authority vested in him as the incumbent of the particular office. Aldridge v. Wooten, 68 Ga.App. 887, 24 S.E.2d 700, 701. Where acts done are within the authority of the officer, but in doing them he exercises that authority improperly, or abuses the confidence which the law reposes in him, whilst acts done “colore officii” are where they are of such a nature that his office gives him no authority to do them. State v. Roy, 41 N.M. 308, 68 P.2d 162, 165; Yuma County v. Wisener, 45 Ariz. 475, 46 P.2d 115, 118, 99 A.L.R. 642.

VIS. Lat. Any kind of force, violence, or disturbance relating to a man’s person or his property. The plural is vire (q. v.).

VIS ABLATIVA. In the civil law. Ablative force; force which is exerted in taking away a thing from another. Calvin.

VISE. An indorsement made on a passport by the proper authorities, denoting that it has been examined, and that the person who bears it is permitted to proceed on his journey. Webster. See also Visa.
VISIBLE

VISIT. In international law. The right of visit or visitation is the right of a cruiser or war-ship to stop a vessel sailing under another flag on the high seas, and send an officer to such vessel to ascertain whether her nationality is what it purports to be. It is exercisable only when suspicious circumstances attend the vessel to be visited; as when she is suspected of a piratical character.

As applied to corporations, means, in law, the act of a superior or superintending officer who visits a corporation to examine into its manner of conducting business and to enforce an observance of its laws and regulations. Kawfield Oil Co. v. Illinois Refining Co., 169 Okt. 75, 35 P.2d 961, 963. Also a power given by law to the founders of all ecclesiastical corporations. 2 Kent, Comm. 300-303; 1 Bl. Comm. 480, 481. In England, the visitation of ecclesiastical corporations belongs to the ordinary. 1 Bl. Comm. 480, 481. See Trustees of Union Baptist Ass'n v. Hunn, 7 Tex. Civ.App. 249, 26 S.W. 755; Thompson v. Southern Connellsville Coke Co., 269 Pa. 500, 112 A. 533, 534.

VISITATION BOOKS. In English law. Books compiled by the heralds, when progresses were solemnly and regularly made into every part of the kingdom, to inquire into the state of families, and to register such marriages and descents as were verified to them upon oath; they were allowed to be good evidence of pedigree. 3 Bl. Comm. 105; 3 Steph.Comm. 724.

VISITOR. An inspector of the government of corporations, or bodies politic. 1 Bl.Comm. 482.

The ordinary is visitor of spiritual corporations. But corporations instituted for private charity, if they are lay, are visitable by the founder, or whom he shall appoint; and from the sentence of such visitor there lies no appeal. By implication of law, the founder and his heirs are visitors of lay foundations, if no particular person is appointed by him to see that the charity is not perverted. Manw. i. 195.

The term “visitor” is also applied to an official appointed to see and report upon persons found lunatics by inquisition, and to a person appointed by a school board to visit houses and see that parents are complying with the provisions in reference to the education of their children.

VISITOR OF MANNERS. The regarder's office in the forest. Manw. i. 195.

VISNE. L. Fr. The neighborhood; vicinage; venue. The district from which juries were drawn at common law. Ex parte McNeely, 36 W.Va. 84, 14 S.E. 436, 15 L.R.A. 226, 32 Am.St.Rep. 831; State v. Kemp, 34 Minn. 61, 24 N.W. 349.

VISUS. Lat. In old English practice. View; inspection, either of a place or person.

VITAL STATISTICS. Public records kept by a state, city or other governmental subdivision, under a statutory provision, of births, marriages and deaths, and disease.

VITAMIN. Nitrogenous substance found in some nucleic acids in the form of pyrimidine bases, as cytosin, minute quantities of which are essential to the diet of man, birds, and other animals. In re Wallerstein, Cust. & Pat. App., 53 F.2d 530, 531.

“Vitamin D” functions in regulating the metabolism of calcium and phosphorus in the body and is, therefore, concerned with the proper formation of bones and teeth. It is recognized as especially beneficial in the infant and growing child as a preventative and therapy of rickets and the building of strong bones and teeth. It is also an essential vitamin for adults. Vitamin D in nature is found almost exclusively in sunshine and certain fish livers which are unavailable to humans in the normal diet. Quaker Oats Co. v. Federal Security Administrator, C.C.A.7, 129 F.2d 76, 80.

VITIATE. To impair; to make void or voidable; to cause to fail of force or effect; to destroy or annul, either entirely or in part, the legal efficacy and binding force of an act or instrument; as when it is said that fraud vititates a contract.

VITILIGATE. To litigate cavilously, vexatiously, or from merely quarrelsome motives.

VITIOUS INTROMISSION. In Scotch law. An unwarrantable intermeddling with the movable estate of a person deceased, without the order of law. Ersk.Prin. b. 3, tit. 9, § 25. The irregular intermeddling with the effects of a deceased person, which subjects the party to the whole debts of the deceased. 2 Karnes, Eq. 327.

VITIUM CLERICI. In old English law. The mis- take of a clerk; a clerical error.

VITIUM CLERICI NOCERE NON DEBET. Jenk. Cent. 23. A clerical error ought not to hurt.

VITIUM EST QUOD FUGI DEBET, NISI, RATIONE ESSE CLAMES. Ellesm. Post. N. 86. It is a fault which ought to be avoided, that if you cannot discover the reason you should presently exclaim, that the law is without reason.

VITIUM SCRIPTORIS. In old English law. The fault or mistake of a writer or copyist; a clerical error. Gilb. Forum Rom. 185.

VITIUM EST QUOD FUGI DEBET, NISI, RATIONEM NON INVENIAT, MOX LEGEM SINE VITIUM NON INVENIAS, MOX LEGEM SINE RATIONE ESSE CLAMES. Ellesm. Post. N. 86. It is a fault which ought to be avoided, that if you cannot discover the reason you should presently exclaim, that the law is without reason.

VITIUM CLERICI. In old English law. The mistake of a clerk; a clerical error.

VITIUM CLERICI NOCERE NON DEBET. Jenk. Cent. 23. A clerical error ought not to hurt.

VITIUM EST QUOD FUGI DEBET, NISI, RATIONEM NON INVENIAT, MOX LEGEM SINE RATIONE ESSE CLAMES. Ellesm. Post. N. 86. It is a fault which ought to be avoided, that if you cannot discover the reason you should presently exclaim, that the law is without reason.

VITIUM CLERICI. In old English law. The mistake of a clerk; a clerical error.

VITIUM CLERICI NOCERE NON DEBET. Jenk. Cent. 23. A clerical error ought not to hurt.

VITIUM EST QUOD FUGI DEBET, NISI, RATIONEM NON INVENIAT, MOX LEGEM SINE RATIONE ESSE CLAMES. Ellesm. Post. N. 86. It is a fault which ought to be avoided, that if you cannot discover the reason you should presently exclaim, that the law is without reason.

VITIUM CLERICI. In old English law. The mistake of a clerk; a clerical error.

VITIUM CLERICI NOCERE NON DEBET. Jenk. Cent. 23. A clerical error ought not to hurt.
of voting, it signifies voting by speech or outcry, as distinguished from voting by a written or printed ballot.

The word “ballot” is used as a symbol of secrecy, while “viva voce” is used as a symbol of publicity. Day v. Walker, 124 Neb. 500, 247 N.W. 350, 351.

VIVARIUM. Lat. In the civil law. An inclosed place, where live wild animals are kept. Calvin.; Spelman.

VIVARY. In English law. A place for keeping wild animals alive, including fishes; a fish pond, park, or warren.

VIVUM VADlUM. See Vadium.

VIX ULLA LEX FIERI POTEST QU2E OMNIBUS COMMODA SIT, SED SI MAJORI PARTI PROSPICIAT, UTILIS EST. Scarce any law can be made which is adapted to all, but, if it provide for the greater part, it is useful. Plowd. 369.

VIZ. A contraction for videlicet, to-wit, namely, that is to say.

VOCABULA ARTIS. Lat. Words of art; technical terms.

VOCABULA ARTIIUM EXPLICANDA SUNT SECUNDUM DEFINITIONES PRUDENTUM. Terms of arts are to be explained according to the definitions of the learned or skilled [in such arts.] Bl. Law Tracts, 6.

VOCARE AD CURIAM. In feudal law. To summon to court. Feud. Lib. 2, tit. 22.

VOCATIO IN JUS. Lat. A summoning to court. In the earlier practice of the Roman law, (under the legis actiones,) the creditor orally called upon his debtor to go with him before the prtor for the purpose of determining their controversy, saying, “In jus eamus; in jus te voco.” This was called “vocatio in jus.”

VOCO. Lat. In the civil and old English law. 1 call; I summon; I vouch. In jus voco te, I summon you to court; I summon you before the prtor. The formula by which a Roman action was anciently commenced. Adams, Rom. Ant. 242.

VOID. Null; ineffectual; nugatory; having no legal force or binding effect; unable, in law, to support the purpose for which it was intended. McGary v. Village of Wilmette, 303 Ill. 147, 135 N.E. 96, 98; Hardison v. Gledhill, Ga.App., 33 S.E.2d 921, 924.

There is this difference between the two words “void” and “voidable:” void in the strict sense, means that an instrument or transaction is nugatory and ineffectual so that nothing can cure it; voidable, when an imperfection or defect can be cured by the act or confirmation of him who could take advantage of it. Wharton. The term “void,” however, as applicable to conveyances or other agreements, has not at all times been used with technical precision, nor restricted to its peculiar and limited sense, as contradistinguished from “voidable;” it being frequently introduced, even by legal writers and jurists, when the purpose is nothing further than to indicate that a contract was invalid, and not binding in law. But the distinction between the terms “void” and “voidable,” in their application to contracts, is often one of great practical importance; and, whenever entire technical accuracy is required, the term “void” can only be properly applied to those contracts that are of no effect whatsoever, such as are a mere nullity, and incapable of confirmation or ratification. Allis v. Billings, 6 Me., 415, 39 Am.Dec. 744.

The word “void,” in its strictest sense, means that which has no force and effect, is without legal efficacy, is incapable of being enforced by law, or has no legal or binding force, but frequently the word is used and construed as having the more liberal meaning of “voidable.” In re Validation of $50,000 Serial Funding Bonds of Clarke County, 187 Miss. 512, 193 So. 449, 452.

The word “void” is used in statutes in the sense of utterly void so as to be incapable of ratification, and also in the sense of voidable and resort must be had to the rules of construction in many cases to determine in which sense the Legislature intended to use it. An act or contract, whether wrong in itself nor against public policy, which has been declared void by statute for the protection or benefit of a certain party, or class of parties, is voidable only. U. S. v. New York & Porto Rico S. S. Co., 239 U.S. 88, 36 S.Ct. 41, 60 L. Ed. 161; Weede v. Iowa Southern Utilities Co. of Delaware, 231 Iowa 784, 2 N.W.2d 372, 397, 398.

VOID CONTRACT. One which never had any legal existence or effect, and such contract cannot in any manner have life breathed into it. National Union Indemnity Co. v. Bruce Bros., Inc., 44 Ariz. 454, 38 P.2d 648, 652. Expression denotes that the parties to the transaction have gone through the form of making a contract, but that none has been made in law because of lack of some essential element of a contract, and such contract creates no legal rights and either party thereto may ignore it at his pleasure, in so far as it is executory. Griffin v. Smith, C.C.A.Ind., 101 F.2d 348, 350.

VOID IN PART, VOID IN TOTO. Curtis v. Leavitt, 15 N.Y. 9, 96.

VOID JUDGMENT. One which has no legal force or effect, and such judgment cannot in any manner have life breathed into it. National Union Indemnity Co. v. Bruce Bros., Inc., 44 Ariz. 454, 38 P.2d 648, 652. Expression denotes that the parties to the transaction have gone through the form of making a contract, but that none has been made in law because of lack of some essential element of a contract, and such contract creates no legal rights and either party thereto may ignore it at his pleasure, in so far as it is executory. Griffin v. Smith, C.C.A.Ind., 101 F.2d 348, 350.

VOID IN PART, VOID IN TOTO. Curtis v. Leavitt, 15 N.Y. 9, 96.

VOID JUDGMENT. One which has no legal force or effect, invalidity of which may be asserted by any person whose rights are affected at any time and at any place directly or collaterally. Reynolds v. Volunteer State Life Ins. Co., Tex.Civ.App., 80 S.W.2d 1087, 1092. One which, from its inception is and forever continues to be absolutely null, without legal efficacy, ineffectual to bind parties or support a right, of no legal force and effect whatever, and incapable of confirmation, ratification, or enforcement in any manner or to any degree. Ex parte Myers, 121 Neb. 56, 236 N.W. 143,
VOID

144. One that has merely semblance without some essential elements, as want of jurisdiction or failure to serve process or have party in court. Wellons v. Lassiter, 200 N.C. 474, 157 S.E. 434, 436. It is subject to collateral attack. Owens v. Cocroft, 14 Ga.App. 322, 80 S.E. 906, 907.

VOID MARRIAGE. One not good for any legal purpose, the invalidity of which may be maintained in any proceeding between any parties, while a "voidable marriage" is one where there is an imperfection which can be inquired into only during the lives of both the parties in a proceeding to obtain a sentence declaring it void. State v. Smith, 101. S.C. 293, 85 S.E. 958, 959, Ann. Cas.1917C, 149.

"Voidable marriage" is valid for all civil purposes until annulled in direct proceedings, but "void marriage" is nullity and may be impeached at any time. Pridgen v. Pridgen, 203 N.C. 533, 166 S.E. 591, 593.

VOID PROCESS. One which fails in some material respect to comply with the requisite form of legal process. United States v. Van Dusen, C.C.A.Minn., 78 F.2d 121, 124.

VOID THINGS ARE AS NO THINGS. People v. Shall, 9 Cow. (N.Y.) 778, 784.

VOIDABLE. That may be avoided, or declared void; not absolutely void, or void in itself. 2 Kent, Comm. 234. That which operates to accomplish the thing sought to be accomplished, until the fatal vice in the transaction has been judicially ascertained and declared. Slaughter v. Qualls, Tex., 162 S.W.2d 671, 674. It imports a valid act which may be confirmed. Paulson v. McMillan, 8 Wash.2d 295, 111 P.2d 983, 985. See Void.

VOIDABLE CONTRACT. One which is void as to wrongdoer but not void as to wronged party, unless he elects to so treat it. Depner v. Joseph Zukin Blouses, 13 Cal.App.2d 124, 56 P.2d 574, 575. See, also, Void.

VOIDABLE MARRIAGE. See Void Marriage.

VOIDABLE PREFERENCE. Under Bankruptcy Act, where person while insolvent and within four months of bankruptcy transferred property, effect of which will be to enable one creditor to obtain greater percentage of his debt than other creditors of same class and person receiving it or to be benefited thereby has reasonable cause to believe that enforcement of transfer will result in preference. Bankr. Act §§ 60a, 60b, 11 U.S.C.A. § 96 (a, b). Haas v. Sachs, C.C.A.Ark., 68 F.2d 623, 625. But it is unnecessary that bankrupt should have intended to prefer person receiving or bene-

Without consideration; without valuable consideration; gratuitous, as a voluntary conveyance. London v. G. L. Anderson Brass Works, 197 Ala. 16, 72 So. 359, 363. Also, having a merely nominal consideration; as, a voluntary deed. Russ v. Blackshear, 88 Fla. 573, 102 So. 749, 750.

VOLUNTARY ABANDONMENT. As ground for divorce within statutes is constituted, if there is a final departure, without consent of other party, without sufficient reason and without intent to return. Nelson v. Nelson, 244 Ala. 421, 14 So.2d 155, 156.

VOLUNTARY COURTESY. A voluntary act of kindness; an act of kindness performed by one man towards another, of the free will and inclination of the doer, without any previous request or promise of reward made by him who is the object of the courtesy; from which the law will not imply a promise of remuneration. Holthouse.

VOLUNTARY DISCONTINUANCE. Voluntary action on part of plaintiff, whereby his case goes out of court without decision on merits. Ferber v. Brueckl, 322 Mo. 892, 17 S.W.2d 524, 527.

VOLUNTARY EXPOSURE TO UNNECESSARY DANGER. An intentional act which reasonable and ordinary prudence would pronounce dangerous. Archibald v. Order of United Commercial Travelers, 117 Me. 418, 104 A. 792, 793; Federal Sav. & Ins. Co. v. Rager, 75 Ind.App. 295, 128 N.E. 773, 774. Intentional exposure to unnecessary danger, implying a conscious knowledge of the danger. Empire Life Ins. Co. v. Allen, 111 Ga. 413, 81 S.E. 120, 122. The voluntary doing of an act which is not necessary to be done, but which requires exposure to known danger to which one would not be exposed if unnecessary act is not done. Landau v. Travelers' Ins. Co., 315 Mo. 760, 287 S.W. 346, 351. The term implies a conscious, intentional exposure, something of which one is conscious but willing to take the risk.

VOLUNTARY IGNORANCE. This exists where a party might, by taking reasonable pains, have acquired the necessary knowledge, but has neglected to do so.

VOLUNTARY JURISDICTION. In English law. A jurisdiction exercised by certain ecclesiastical courts, in matters where there is no opposition. 3 B1.Com. 66. The opposite of contentious jurisdiction, (q. v.). In Scotch law. One exercised in matters admitting of no opposition or question, and therefore cognizable by any judge, and in any place, and on any lawful day. Bell.

VOLUNTAS. Lat. Properly, volition, purpose, or intention, or a design or the feeling or impulse which prompts the commission of an act; but in old English law the term was often used to denote a will, that is, the last will and testament of a decedent, more properly called testamentum.

VOLUNTAS DONATORIS IN CHARTA DONI SUI MANIFESTE EXPRESSA OBSERVETUR. Co.Litt. 21. The will of the donor manifestly expressed in his deed of gift is to be observed.

VOLUNTAS EST JUSTA SENTENTIA DE EO QUOD QUIS POST MORTEM SUAM FIERI VELIT. A will is an exact opinion or determination concerning which each one wishes to be done after his death.

VOLUNTAS ET PROPOSITUM DISTINGUUNT MALEFICIA. The will and the proposed end distinguish crimes. Bract. fols. 2b, 136b.

VOLUNTAS FACIT QUOD IN TESTAMENTO SCRIPTUM VALEAT. Dig. 30, 1, 12, 3. It is intention which gives effect to the wording of a will.

VOLUNTAS IN DELICTIS, NON EXITUS SPEC-TATUR. 2 Inst. 57. In crimes, the will, and not the consequence, is looked to.

VOLUNTAS REPUTATUR PRO FACTO. The intention is to be taken for the deed. 3 Inst. 69; Broom, Max. 311.

VOLUNTAS TESTATORIS EST AMBULATORIA USQUE AD EXTREMUM VITAE EXITUM. 4 Coke, 61. The will of a testator is ambulatory until the latest moment of life.

VOLUNTAS TESTATORIS HABET INTERPRE-TATIONEM LATAM ET BENIGNAM. Jenk. Cent. 260. The intention of a testator has a broad and benign interpretation.

VOLUNTAS ULTIMA TESTATORIS EST PER-IMPLENDA SECUNDUM VERAM INTENTION-EM SUAM. Co.Litt. 322. The last will of the testator is to be fulfilled according to his true intention.

VOLUNTEER. A person who gives his services without any express or implied promise of remuneration. Chicago & E. I. R. Co. v. Argo, 82 Ill. App. 667. One who intrudes himself into a matter which does not concern him, or one who pays the debt of another without request, when he is not legally or morally bound to do so, and when he has no interest to protect in making such payment. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Hood (Tex.Civ.App.) 172 S.W. 1120. See Irvine v. Angus, 35 C.C.A. 501, 93 F. 633; Arnold v. Green, 116 N.Y. 566, 23 N.E. 1; In re Welton's Estate, 141 Misc. 674, 253 N.Y.S. 128, 140. One who, acting on his own initiative, pays debt of another without invitation, compulsion, or the necessity of self-protection. In re Farmers’ & Merchants’ State Bank of Nooksack, 175 Wash. 78, 26 P.2d 631. One who merely offers his service on his own free will, as opposed to one who is conscripted. Gooden v. Mitchell, 2 Terry 301, 21 A.2d 197, 202. Also an attorney, as to any persons other than those by whom he was retained. In re Greenberg, 174 Misc. 182, 20 N.Y.S.2d 432, 433.

Conveyancing

One who holds a title under a voluntary conveyance, i.e., one made without consideration, good or valuable, to support it.

Law of Master and Servant

The term "Volunteer" includes one who, without the assent of the master and without justification arising from a legitimate personal interest, unnecessarily assists a servant in the performance of the master's business. Kalmich v. White, 95 Conn. 568, 111 A. 845, 846; Goshen Furnace Corporation v. Tolley's Adm'r, 134 Va. 404, 114 S.E. 728, 730.

Military Law

One who freely and voluntarily offers himself for service in the army or navy; as distinguished from one who is compelled to serve by draft or conscription, and also from one entered by enlistment in the standing army.

VOTE. Suffrage; the expression of his will, preference, or choice, formally manifested by a member of a legislative or deliberative body, or of a constituency or a body of qualified electors, in regard to the decision to be made by the body as a whole upon any proposed measure or proceeding or in passing laws, rules or regulations, or the selection of an officer or representative. And the aggregate of the expressions of will or choice, thus manifested by individuals, is called the "vote of the body." See Maynard v. Board of Canvassers, 84 Mich. 228, 47 N.W. 756, 11 L.R.A. 332; Gillespie v. Palmer, 20 Wis. 546; Commonwealth v. Baker, 237 Ky. 380, 35 S.W.2d 548, 549; Sawyer Stores v. Mitchell, 103 Mont. 148, 62 P.2d 342, 348.

VOTING TRUST. One created by an agreement accumulating several owners' stock in hands of one or more persons in trust for voting purposes in and on behalf of the owner or persons designated by them of the power to direct how such control shall be used. Alderman v. Alderman, 178 S.C. 9, 181 S.E. 897, 105 A.L.R. 102. A device whereby two or more persons, owning stock with voting powers, divorce voting rights thereof from ownership, retaining to all intents and purposes the latter in themselves and transferring the former to trustees in whom voting rights of all depositors in the trust are pooled. Peyton v. William C. Peyton Corporation, Del.Ch., 194 A. 106, 111.

VOTER. The word has two meanings—a person who performs act of voting, and a person who has the qualifications entitling him to vote. Its meaning depends on the connections in which it is used, and is not always equivalent to electors. Board of Education of Oklahoma City v. Woodworth, 89 Okl. 192, 214 P. 1077, 1079; State v. Williams, 100 Fla. 996, 130 So. 428, 430.

When used in apposition to or in contrast with the word "elector," it has but one meaning. A voter in this sense is an elector who exercises the privilege conferred upon him by the Constitution and laws of voting. He is an elector who does vote. State v. Williams, 100 Fla. 996, 130 So. 428, 432.

In a limited sense a voter is a person having the legal right to vote, sometimes called a legal voter. Aczel v. United States, C.C.A., 232 F. 652, 657; State v. Stewart, 37 Mont. 397, 188 P. 904, 907.

VOTES AND PROCEEDINGS. In the houses of parliament the clerks at the tables make brief entries of all that is actually done; and these minutes, which are printed from day to day for the use of members, are called the "votes and proceedings of parliament." From these votes and proceedings the journals of the house are subsequently prepared, by making the entries at greater length. Brown.

VOTING BY BALLOT. The term is used to distinguish open voting from secret voting. The privilege of secrecy is of the essence of "voting by ballot." Smith & Son v. MacAulay, Vt., 196 A. 281, 283.

VOTING TRUST. One created by an agreement between a group of the stockholders of a corporation and the trustee, or by a group of identical agreements between individual stockholders and a common trustee, whereby it is provided that for a term of years, or for a period contingent upon a certain event, or until the agreement is terminated, control over the stock owned by such stockholders, either for certain purposes or for all, shall be lodged in the trustee, with or without a reservation to the owner or persons designated by them of the power to direct how such control shall be used. Alderman v. Alderman, 178 S.C. 9, 181 S.E. 897, 105 A.L.R. 102. A device whereby two or more persons, owning stock with voting powers, divorce voting rights thereof from ownership, retaining to all intents and purposes the latter in themselves and transferring the former to trustees in whom voting rights of all depositors in the trust are pooled. Peyton v. William C. Peyton Corporation, Del.Ch., 194 A. 106, 111.

Agreement accumulating several owners' stock in hands of one or more persons in trust for voting purposes in order to control corporate business and affairs. It differs from proxy or reciprocal proxy in that it does not make the owner of the shares a director and therefore does not entitle the owner to vote. Bankers' Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Sloss, 229 Ala. 26, 155 So. 371.

VOTUM. Lat. A vow or promise. Dies votorum, the wedding day. Fleta 1. 1, c. 4.

VOUCH. To call upon; to call in to warranty; to call upon the grantor or warrantor to defend the title to an estate.

To vouch is to call upon, rely on, or quote as an authority. Thus, in the old writers, to vouch a case or report is to quote it as an authority. Co.Litt. 70a.

VOUCHEE. In common recoveries, the person who is called to warrant or defend the title is called the “vouchee.” 2 Bouv. Inst. no. 2093.

Common Vouchee

In common recoveries, the person who is vouched to warranty. In this fictitious proceeding the crier of the court usually performs the office of a common vouchee. 2 Bl.Com. 358; 2 Bouv. Inst. n. 2093.

VOUCHER. A receipt, acquittance, or release, which may serve as evidence of payment or discharge of a debt, or to certify the correctness of accounts. An account-book containing the acquittances or receipts showing the accountant’s discharge of his obligations. Whitwell v. Willard, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 218. When used in connection with disbursement of money, a written or printed instrument in the nature of a bill of particulars, account, receipt, or acquittance, that shows on its face the fact, authority, and purpose of disbursement. Robertson’s Guardian v. Fidelity & Casualty Co. of New York, 227 Ky. 114, 12 S.W.2d 298, 300.

VULGO

Foreign Voyage

A voyage to some port or place within the territory of a foreign nation. The terminus of a voyage determines its character. If it be within the limits of a foreign jurisdiction, it is a foreign voyage, and not otherwise. Taber v. United States, 1 Story, 1, Fed.Cas.No.13,722; The Three Brothers, 23 Fed.Cas. 1,162.

Voyage Insured

In insurance law. A transit at sea from the terminus a quo to the terminus ad quam, in a prescribed course of navigation, which is never set out in any policy, but virtually forms parts of all policies, and is as binding on the parties there-to as though it were minutely detailed. 1 Arn. Ins. 333.

Voyage Policy

See Policy of Insurance.

VRAIC. Seaweed. It is used in great quantities by the inhabitants of Jersey and Guernsey for manure, and also for fuel by the poorer classes.

VS. An abbreviation for versus,(against,) constantly used in legal proceedings, and especially in entitling cases.

VULGAR. Lack of cultivation or refinement.

Darnell v. State, 72 Tex.Cr.R. 271, 161 S.W. 971.

VULGARIS OPINIO EST DUPLEX, VIZ., ORTA INTER GRAVES ET DISCRETOS, QUIE MULTUM VERITATIS HABET, ET OPINIO ORTA INTER LEVES ET VULGARES HOMINES ABSQUE SPECIE VERITATIS. 4 Coke 107. Common opinion is of two kinds, viz., that which arises among grave and discreet men, which has much truth in it, and that which arises among light and common men, without any appearance of truth.

VULGARIS PURGATIO. Lat. In old English law. Common purgation; a name given to the trial by ordeal, to distinguish it from the canonical purgation, which was by the oath of the party. 4 Bl.Com. 342.

VULGO CONCEPTI. Lat. In the civil law. Spurious children; bastards.

VULGO QUÆSITI. Lat. In the civil law. Spurious children; literally, gotten from the people; the offspring of promiscuous cohabitation, who are considered as having no father. Inst. 3, 4, 3; Inst. 3, 5, 4.

WAGE EARNER. Within Bankruptcy Act exempting wage earners from involuntary bankruptcy proceedings must have as his paramount oc-

upation the earning of salary or wages, indicia of wage earning being whether earner depends on his wages for his subsistence and whether wage earning is his paramount occupation. Bankr.Act §§ 1(27), 4b, 11 U.S.C.A. §§ 1(27), 22(b). In re Gainfort, D.C.Cal., 14 F.Supp. 788, 791.

WAGE. In old English practice. To give security for the performance of a thing. Cowell.

WAGE EARNER. Within Bankruptcy Act exempting wage earners from involuntary bankruptcy proceedings must have as his paramount oc-

upation the earning of salary or wages, indicia of wage earning being whether earner depends on his wages for his subsistence and whether wage earning is his paramount occupation. Bankr.Act §§ 1(27), 4b, 11 U.S.C.A. §§ 1(27), 22(b). In re Gainfort, D.C.Cal., 14 F.Supp. 788, 791.

WAGERER. A contract by which two or more parties agree that a certain sum of money or other thing shall be paid or delivered to one of them or that they shall gain or lose on the happening of an uncertain event or upon the ascertainment of a fact in dispute, where the parties have no interest in the event except that arising from the possibility of such gain or loss. H. Seay & Co. v. Moore, Tex.Com.App., 261 S.W. 1013, 1014; Young v. Stephenson, 82 Okl. 239, 200 P. 225, 228, 24 A.L.R. 978; Odle v. State, 139 Tex.Cr.R. 288, 139 S.W.2d 595, 597. See, also, Bet.

vals as distinguished from salary, but in general the word means that which is pledged or paid for work or other services; hire; pay. In its legal sense, the word "wages" means the price paid for labor, reward of labor, specified sum for a given time of service or a fixed sum for a specified piece of work. In re Hollingsworth's Estate, 37 Cal. App.2d 432, 99 P.2d 599, 600, 602.

Maritime Law

The compensation allowed to seamen for their services on board a vessel during a voyage.

Political Economy

The reward paid, whether in money or goods, to human exertion, considered as a factor in the production of wealth, for its co-operation in the process.

"Three factors contribute to the production of commodities,—nature, labor, and capital. Each must have a share of the product as its reward, and this share, if it is just, must be proportionate to the several contributions. The share of the natural agents is rent; the share of labor, wages; the share of capital, interest. The clerk receives a salary; the lawyer and doctor, fees; the manufacturer, profits. Salary, fees, and profits are so many forms of wages for services rendered." De Laveleye, Pol. Econ.

WAGON. A kind of four-wheel vehicle, especially one used for carrying freight or merchandise. McMullen v. Shields, 96 Mont. 191, 29 P.2d 652, 654. A vehicle moving on wheels and usually drawn by horses. The word wagon is a generic term and includes other species of vehicle by whatever name they may be called. An automobile is a vehicle propelled by power generated within itself, used to convey passengers or materials, and in a general sense is a wagon. Strycker v. Richardson, 77 Pa.Super.Ct. 252, 255, but see contra United States v. One Automobile, D.C. Mont., 237 F. 891, 892; Whitney v. Welnitz, 153 Minn. 162, 190 N.W. 57, 28 A.L.R. 68. For "Farm Wagon," see that title.

WAGONAGE. Money paid for carriage in a wagon.

WAGONWAY. That part of a street ordinarily used for the passage of vehicles within the curb lines. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Chiara, C.C.A. N.J., 95 F.2d 663, 666.

WAIF. Waifs are goods found, but claimed by nobody; that of which every one waives the claim. Also, goods stolen and waived, or thrown away by the thief in his flight, for fear of being apprehended. Wharton.

Waifs are to be distinguished from bona fuga-tiva, which are the goods of the felon himself, which he abandons in his flight from justice. Brown: See People v. Kaatz, 3 Parker, Cr.R. (N.Y.) 138; Hall v. Gildersleeve, 36 N.J.L. 237.

WAINABLE. In old records. That may be plowed or manured; tillable. Cowell; Blount.

WAINAGE. In old English law. The team and instruments of husbandry belonging to a countryman, and especially to a villein who was required to perform agricultural services.

WAIN-BOTE. In feudal and old English law. Timber for wagons or carts.

WAITING CLERKS. Officers whose duty it formerly was to wait in attendance upon the court of chancery. The office was abolished in 1842 by St. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 103. Mozley & Whitley.

WAIVE, v. To abandon or throw away; as when a thief, in his flight, throws aside the stolen goods, in order to facilitate his escape, he is technically said to waive them.

In modern law, to abandon, throw away, renounce, repudiate, or surrender a claim, a privilege, a right, or the opportunity to take advantage of some defect, irregularity, or wrong. See Brigham Young University v. Industrial Commission of Utah, 74 Utah 349, 279 P. 889, 893, 65 A.L.R. 152.

A person is said to waive a benefit when he renounces or disclaims it, and he is said to waive a tort or injury when he abandons the remedy which the law gives him for it. Sweet.

In order for one to "waive" a right, he must do it knowingly and be possessed of the facts. Barnhill v. Rubin, D.C.Tex., 46 F.Supp. 963, 966.

WAIVE, n. In old English law. A woman outlawed. The term is, as it were, the feminine of "outlaw," the latter being always applied to a man; "waive," to a woman. Cowell.

WAIVER. The intentional or voluntary relinquishment of a known right, Lehigh Val. R. Co. v. Ins. Co., 172 F. 364, 97 C.C.A. 62; Vermillion v. Prudential Ins. Co. of America, 230 Mo.App. 993, 93 S.W.2d 45, 51; or such conduct as warrants an inference of the relinquishment of such right, Rand v. Morse, C.C.A.Mo., 289 F. 339, 344; Dexter Yarn Co. v. American Fabrics Co., 102 Conn. 529, 129 A. 527, 537; Gibbs v. Bergh, 51 S.D. 432, 214 N.W. 838, 841; or when one dispenses with the performance of something he is entitled to exact or when one in possession of any right, whether conferred by law or by contract, with full knowledge of the material facts, does or forbears to do something the doing of which or the failure of forbearance to do which is inconsistent with the right, or his intention to rely upon it. Estoup Signs v. Frank Lower, Inc., La.App., 10 So.2d 642, 645. The renunciation, repudiation, abandonment, or surrender of some claim, right, privilege, or of the opportunity to take advantage of some defect, irregularity, or wrong. Christenson v. Carleton, 37 A. 226, 69 Vt. 91; Shaw v. Spencer, 100 Mass. 395, 97 Am.Dec. 107, 1 Am.Rep. 115; Smiley v. Barker, 28 C.C.A. 9, 83 F. 684; Boos v. Ewing, 17 Ohio 523, 49 Am.Dec. 478. A doctrine resting upon an equitable principle, which courts of law will recognize. Atlas Life Ins. Co. v. Schrimsher, 179 Okt. 643, 66 P.2d 944, 948. See, also, Estoppel.
WAIVER

"Waiver" is essentially unilateral, resulting as legal consequence from some act or conduct of party against whom it operates, and no act of party in whose favor it is made is necessary to complete it. Coleman Production Credit Ass'n v. Mahan, Tex.Civ.App., 168 S.W.2d 903, 904. And may be shown by acts and conduct and sometimes by nonaction. Concrete Engineering Co. v. Grande Bldg. Co., 230 Mo.App. 443, 86 S.W.2d 595, 608.

Waiver is distinguished from "estoppel" in that in "waiver" the essential element is an actual intent to abandon or surrender a right, while in "estoppel" such intent is immaterial; the necessary condition being the deception to his injury of the other party by the conduct of the one estopped. Insurance Co. of North America v. Williams, 42 Ariz. 331, 26 P.2d 117, 119. And "estoppel," may result though party estopped did not intend to lose any existing rights. Boyce v. Toke Point Oyster Co., 145 Or. 114, 25 P.2d 930.

Insurance Law

Substance of doctrine of "waiver" in insurance law is that if insurer, with knowledge of facts which would bar existing primary liability, recognizes such primary liability by treating policy as in force, it will not thereafter be allowed to plead such facts to avoid its primary liability. Protective Life Ins. Co. v. Cole, 230 Ala. 450, 161 So. 818, 819.

Express Waiver

Implied Waiver

A waiver is implied where one party has pursued such a course of conduct with reference to the other party as to evidence an intention to waive his rights or the advantage to which he may be entitled, or where the conduct pursued is inconsistent with any other honest intention than an intention of such waiver, provided that the other party concerned has been induced by such conduct to act upon the belief that there has been a waiver, and has incurred trouble or expense thereby. Asstitch v. German-American Ins. Co., C.C.A.Pa., 131 F. 20, 65 C.C.A. 251; Roumage v. Insurance Co., 13 N.J.L. 124.

To make out a case of implied "waiver" of a legal right, there must be a clear, unequivocal and decisive act of the party showing such purpose, or acts amounting to an estoppel on his part. Rosenthal v. New York Life Ins. Co., C.C.A.Mo., 99 F.2d 578, 579.

Waiver by Election of Remedies, Doctrine of Doctrine applies if there exist two or more coexisting remedies between which there is right of election, inconsistency as to such available remedies, and actual bringing of action or doing some other decisive act, with knowledge of facts, whereby party electing indicates his choice between such inconsistent remedies. Hertz v. Mills, D.C.Md., 10 F.Supp. 979, 981.

Waiver of Exemption

A clause inserted in a note, bond, lease, etc., expressly waiving the benefit of the laws exempting limited amounts of personal property from levy and sale on judicial process, so far as concerns the enforcement of the particular debt or obligation. Mitchell v. Coates, 47 Pa. 203; Wyman v. Gay, 90 Me. 36, 37 A. 325, 60 Am.St.Rep. 238; Howard B. & L. Ass'n v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co., 102 Pa. 223.

Waiver of Immunity

A means authorized by statutes by which a witness, in advance of giving testimony or producing evidence, may renounce the fundamental right guaranteed to him by constitutions, that no person shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself. In re Grae, 282 N.Y. 428, 26 N.E.2d 963, 966.

Waiver of Protest

An agreement by the indorser of a note or bill to be bound in his character of indorser without the formality of a protest in case of non-payment, or, in the case of paper which cannot or is not required to be protested, dispensing with the necessity of a demand and notice. First Nat. Bank v. Falkenhan, 94 Cal. 141, 29 P. 866; Coddington v. Davis, 1 N.Y. 190.

Waiver of Tort

The election, by an injured party, for purposes of redress, to treat the facts as establishing an implied contract, which he may enforce, instead of an injury by fraud or wrong, for the committing of which he may demand damages, compensatory or exemplary. Harway v. Mayor, etc., of City of New York, 1 Hun (N.Y.) 630.

WAKEMAN. The chief magistrate of Ripon, in Yorkshire.

WAKENING. In Scotch law. The revival of an action. A process by which an action that has lain over and not been insisted in for a year and a day, and thus technically said to have "fallen asleep," is wakened, or put in motion again. 1 Forb. Inst. pt. 4, p. 170; Ersk. Prin. 4, 1, 33.

WALAPAUZ. In old Lombardic law. The disguising the head or face, with the intent of committing a theft.

WALESCHERY. The being a Welshman.

WALENESIS. In old English law. A Welshman.

WALESCHERY. The being a Welshman. Spelman.

WALISCUS. In Saxon law. A servant, or any other person keeping or managing property of another for a certain space of ground assigned to them. Cowell.

WALKERS. Foresters who have the care of a certain space of ground assigned to them. Cowell.

WALL. An erection of stone, brick, or other material, raised to some height, and intended for purposes of security or inclosure. In law, this term occurs in such compounds as "ancient wall," "division-wall," etc.

Common Wall

A party wall; one which has been built at the common expense of the two owners whose properties are contiguous, or a wall built by one party

WAMPUM. Beads made of shells, used as money by the North American Indians, and which continued current in New York as late as 1693.

WAND OF PEACE. In Scotch law. A wand or staff carried by the messenger of a court, and by the North American Indians, and which continued current in New York as late as 1693.

WANDER. To ramble here and there without any certain course. Guidon v. Wheeler, C.C.A. Alaska, 230 F. 93, 96; Ex parte Karnstrom, 297 Mo. 384, 249 S.W. 595, 596.

WANLASS. An ancient customary tenure of lands; i.e., to drive deer to a stand that the lord may have a shot. Blount, Ten. 140.

WANT OF CONSIDERATION. Embraces transactions or instances where no consideration was intended to pass. In re Conrad's Estate, 333 Pa. 561, 3 A.2d 697, 699. Ranschenbach v. McDaniel's Estate, 122 W.Va. 632, 11 S.E.2d 852, 854. For distinction between "failure of consideration" and "want of consideration," see Failure of Consideration.

WANT OF JURISDICTION. A want of authority to exercise in a particular manner a power which the board or tribunal has, the doing of something in excess of authority possessed. Evans v. Superior Court in and for City and County of San Francisco, 14 Cal.2d 563, 96 P.2d 107, 116.

WANTON. Reckless, heedless, malicious, characterized by extreme recklessness, foolishness, reckless disregard of the rights or safety of others or of consequences. E.g., 88 F.2d 899, 902; Cover v. Hershey Transit Co., 290 Pa. 551, 139 A. 266, 268.

WANTON ACT. One done in reckless disregard of the rights of others, evincing a reckless indifference to consequences of the life, or limb, or health, or reputation or property rights of another, and is more than negligence, more than gross negligence, and is such conduct as indicates a reckless disregard of the just rights or safety of others or of the consequences of action, equivalent in its results to willful misconduct. Ziman v. Whitley, 110 Conn. 108, 147 A. 370, 372.

WANTONNESS is will is not a necessary element of a wanton act, but to constitute an act "wanton" party doing act or failing to act must be conscious of his conduct and, though having no intent to injure, must be conscious from his knowledge of surrounding circumstances and conditions that his conduct will naturally and probably result in injury. Proud v. Adelberg, 290 Ill.App. 319, 8 N.E.2d 678, 681.

WANTON ACTS AND OMISSIONS. Those of such character or done in such manner or under such circumstances as to indicate that a person of ordinary intelligence actuated by normal and natural concern for the welfare and safety of his fellowmen who might be affected by them could not be guilty of them unless wholly indifferent to their probable injurious effect or consequences. Pupke v. Pupke, 102 Colo. 337, 79 P.2d 290, 292.

WANTON AND FURIOUS DRIVING. An offense against public health, which under the stat. 24 & 25 Viet. c. 100, s. 56, is punishable as a misdemeanor by fine or imprisonment. In this country the offense is usually provided for by state, county, or municipal legislation.

WANT AND RECKLESS MISCONDUCT. Occurs when a person, with no intent to cause harm, intentionally performs an act so unreasonable and dangerous that he knows, or should know, that it is highly probable that harm will result. Donnelly v. Southern Pac. Co., 18 Cal.2d 863, 118 P.2d 465, 469, 470.

WANTON INJURY. Injury produced by conscious and intentional wrongful act, or omission of known duty with reckless indifference to consequences. Duke v. Gaines, 224 Ala. 519, 140 So. 600, 601. It must be predicated upon actual knowledge of another's peril and a failure to take available preventative action knowing that such failure will probably result in injury. Rainey v. State, 31 Ala.App. 271, 17 So.2d 683, 686.

WANTON NEGLIGENCE. Heedless and reckless disregard for another's rights with consciousness that act or omission to act may result in injury to another. Craig v. Stagner, 159 Tenn. 511, 19 S.W.2d 234, 236.

WANTONNESS. Conscious doing of some act or the omission of some duty with knowledge of existing conditions and consciousness that, from the act or omission, injury will likely result to another. Bedwell v. De Bolt, 221 Ind. 600, 50 N.E.2d 875, 877. First Nat. Bank V. Sanders, 227 Ala. 313, 149 So. 848, 849. Conscious failure by one charged with a duty to exercise due care and diligence to prevent an injury after the discovery of the peril, or under circumstances where he is charged with a knowledge of such peril, and being conscious of the inevitable or probable results of such failure. Stout v. Gallemore, 138 Kan. 385, 26 P.2d 573. A reckless or intentional disregard of the property, rights, or safety of others, implying, actively, a willingness to injure and disregard of the consequences to others, and, passively, more than mere negligence, that is, a conscious and intentional disregard of duty. Brasington v. South Bound R. Co., 40 S.E. 665, 62 S.C. 325, 89 Am.St.Rep. 905; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Webb, 12 So. 374, 97 Ala. 308; Walldren Express & Van Co. v. Krug, 291 Ill. 472, 126 N.E. 97, 98.

WAPENTAKE. In English law. A local division of the country; the name is in use north of the Trent to denote a hundred. The derivation of the name is said to be from "weapon" and "take," and indicates that the division was originally of a military character. Cowell; Brown.

Also a hundred court.

WAR. Hostile contention by means of armed forces, carried on between nations, states, or rulers, or between parties in the same nation or state. Gitlow v. Kiley, D.C.N.Y., 46 F.2d 227, 233. A contest by force between two or more nations, carried on for any purpose or armed conflict of sovereign powers or declared and open hostilities, or the state of nations among whom there is an interruption of pacific relations, and a general contention by force, authorized by the sovereign. West v. Palmetto State Life Ins. Co., 202 S.C. 422, 25 S.E. 2d 475, 477, 478, 145 A.L.R. 1461.

"War" does not exist merely because of an armed attack by the military forces of another nation until it is a condition recognized or accepted by political authority of government which is attacked, either through an actual declaration of war or other acts demonstrating such position. Savage v. Sun Life Assur. Co. of Canada, D.C.La., 57 F.Supp. 620, 621.

Civil War

An internecine war. A war carried on between opposing masses of citizens of the same country or nation. Before the declaration of independence, the war between Great Britain and the United Colonies was a civil war; but instantly on that event the war changed its nature, and became a public war between independent states. Hubbard v. Exp. Co., 10 R.I. 244; Brown v. Hiatt, 4 F.Cas. 387; Prize Cases, 2 Black, 667, 17 L.Ed. 459; Central R. & B. Co. v. Ward, 37 Ga. 515.

Imperfect War

See Perfect War.

Laws of War

This term denotes a branch of public international law, and comprises the body of rules and principles observed by civilized nations for the regulation of matters inherent in, or incidental to, the conduct of a public war; such, for example, as the relations of neutrals and belligerents, blockades, captures, prizes, truces and armistices, capitulations, prisoners, and declarations of war and peace.

Mixed War

A mixed war is one which is made on one side by public authority, and on the other by mere private persons. People v. McLeod, 1 Hill (N.Y.) 377, 415, 37 Am.Dec. 328.

Perfect War

Where whole nation is at war with another whole nation, but when the hostilities are limited as respects places, persons, and things, the war is termed "imperfect war." Bas v. Tingy, 4 Dall. 37, 40, 1 L.Ed. 731.

Private War

Public War

Every contention by force, between two nations, in external matters, under the authority of their respective governments. Prize Cases, 2 Black, 666, 17 L.Ed. 459; People v. McLeod, 25 Wend. (N.Y.) 483, 37 Am.Dec. 328.

Solemn War

A war made in form by public declaration; a war solemnly declared by one state against another. Bas v. Tingy, 4 Dall. 37, 40, 1 L.Ed. 731.

War Office

In England. A department of state from which the sovereign issues orders to his forces. Wharton.

WAR POWER of federal government is the power to wage war successfully. Brown v. Wright, C.C.A.W.Va., 137 F.2d 484, 489; United States v. Maviglia, D.C.N.J., 52 F.Supp. 946, 947. It embraces every aspect of national defense, including protection of war materials as well as members of armed forces from injury and danger. Schueller v. Drum, D.C.Pa., 51 F.Supp. 383, 387; but direct interference with liberty and property and abridgement of constitutional guaranties of freedom can be justified under the "war power" only where the danger to the government is real, impending and imminent. Schueller v. Drum, D.C.Pa., 51 F.Supp. 383, 387.

WARABI. Dried wild ferns from Japan, used as a vegetable in a manner similar to spinach. Nippon Co. v. U.S., 12 Ct.Cust.App. 548, 549.

WARD. Guarding; care; charge; as, the ward of a castle; so in the phrase "watch and ward."

A division in the city of London committed to the special ward (guardianship) of an alderman. A territorial division is adopted in most American cities by which the municipality is separated into a number of precincts or districts called "wards" for purposes of police, sanitary regula-
WAREHOUSE

Warehouses. Money paid and contributed to watch and ward. Domesday.

Wards of admiralty. Seamen are sometimes thus designated, because, in view of their general improvidence and rashness, and though they are not technically incapable of contracting, their contracts are treated like those of fiduciaries and beneficiaries, and if there is any inequality in terms or any disproportion in the bargain or any sacrifice of rights of seamen which are not compensated by extraordinary benefits, the judicial interpretation of the transaction is that the bargain is unjust and that pro tanto, the bargain ought to be set aside as inequitable. See Garrett v. Moore-McCormack Co., Pa., 63 S.Ct. 246, 251, 317 U.S. 239, 87 L.Ed. 239.

A corridor, room, or other division of a prison, hospital, or asylum.

A person, especially an infant, placed by authority of law under the care of a guardian.

Ward-corn. In old English law. The duty of keeping watch and ward, with a horn to blow upon any occasion of surprise. 1 Mon.Ang. 976.

Ward-fee. In old records. Ward-fee; the value of a ward, or the money paid to the lord for his redemption from wardship. Blount.

Ward-in-chancery. An infant who is under the superintendence of the chancellor.

Ward-patient. One who pays for his hospital care but receives free of charge medical and surgical care from members of the hospital staff. Sheridan v. Quarrier, 127 Conn. 279, 16 A.2d 479, 480.

Ward-penny. In old English law. Money paid to the sheriff or castellains, for the duty of watching and warding a castle. Spelman.

Ward-staff. In old records. A constable's or watchman's staff. Cowell.

Ward-wit. In old English law. Immunity or exemption from the duty or service of ward, or from contributing to such service. Spelman. Exemption from amercement for not finding a man to do ward. Fleta, lib. 1, c. 47, § 16.

Wardage. Money paid and contributed to watch and ward. Domesday.

Warehouses. In military tenures, the right of the lord to have custody, as guardian, of the body and lands of the infant heir, without any account of profits, until he was twenty-one or she sixteen. In socage the guardian was accountable for profits; and he was not the lord, but the nearest relative to whom the inheritance could not descend, and the wardship ceased at fourteen. In copyholds, the lord was the guardian, but was perhaps accountable for profits. Stim. Gloss. See 2 Bl. Comm. 67.

Wardship in chivalry. An incident to the tenure of knight-service.

Wardship in copyholds. The lord is guardian of his infant tenant by special custom.

WARDA. L. Lat.

In old English law. Ward; guard; protection; keeping; custody. Spelman.

A ward; an infant under wardship. Spelman.

In old Scotch law. An award; the judgment of a court.

WARDEN. A guardian; a keeper. This is the name given to various officers.

Warden of the Cinque Ports. In English law. The title of the governor or presiding officer of the Cinque Ports, (q. v.).

WARDS AND LIVERIES. In English law. The title of a court of record, established in the reign of Henry VIII. See Court of Wards and Liveries.

WARECTARE. L. Lat. In old English law. To fallow ground; or plow up land (designed for wheat) in the spring, in order to let it lie fallow for the better improvement. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 33; Cowell.

WAREHOUSE. A place adapted to the reception and storage of goods and merchandise. State v. Huffman, 136 Mo. 58, 37 S.W. 797; Owen v. Boyle, 22 Me. 47; Carter v. Bauman, C.C.A.Cal., 19 F.2d 855, 856. The term may include any structure used to hold goods, stores or wares temporarily or for a length of time. In re Miller Land & Livestock Co., D.C.Mont., 56 F.Supp. 34, 35.

WAREHOUSE BOOK. A book used by merchants to contain an account of the quantities of goods received, shipped, and remaining in stock.

WAREHOUSE SYSTEM. A system of public stores or warehouses, established or authorized by law, called “bonded warehouses,” in which an importer may deposit goods imported, in the custody of the revenue officers, paying storage, but not...

being required to pay the customs duties until the goods are finally removed for consumption in the home market, and with the privilege of withdrawing the goods from store for the purpose of re-exportation without paying any duties.

WAREHOUSEMAN. One engaged in business of receiving and storing goods of others for compensation or profit; person who receives goods and merchandise to be stored in his warehouse for hire; one who, as a business and for hire, keeps and stores goods of others. State ex rel. and for Use and Benefit of Cawrse v. American Surety Co. of New York, 148 Or. 1, 35 P.2d 487, 491.

The business is public or private as it may be conducted for storage of goods of general public or for those of certain persons. Tobacco Growers' Co-op. Ass'n v. Danville Warehouse Co., 144 Va. 456, 132 S.E. 482, 486; State, to Use of Hubbard & Moffitt Commission Co. v. Cochrane, 264 Mo. 581, 175 S.W. 599, 600.

WARNING. A pointing out of danger. Also a protest against incurring it. Keller v. Banks, 130 Me. 397, 156 A. 817, 821.

The purpose of a “warning” is to apprise a party of the existence of danger of which he is not aware to enable him to protect himself against it, and where the party is aware of the danger, the warning will serve no useful purpose and is unnecessary, and there is no duty to warn against risks which are open and obvious. Wiseman v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co., 214 Minn. 101, 7 N.W.2d 672, 675.

Under the old practice of the English court of probate, was a notice given by a registrar of the principal registry to a person who had entered a caveat, warning him, within six days after service, to enter an appearance to the caveat in the principal registry, and to set forth his interest, concluding with a notice that in default of his doing so the court would proceed to do all such acts, matters, and things as should be necessary. By the rules under the judicature acts, a writ of summons has been substituted for a warning. Sweet.

WARNISTURA. In old records. Garniture; furnishment; provision. Cowell.

WARNOTH. In old English law. An ancient custom, whereby, if any tenant holding of the Castle of Dover failed in paying his rent at the day, he should forfeit double, and, for the second failure, treble, etc. Cowell.

WARRANTANDICE. In Scotch law. Warranty; a clause in a charter or deed by which the grantor obliges himself that the right conveyed shall be effectual to the receiver. Ersk. Prin. 2, 3, 11. A clause whereby the grantor of a charter obliges himself to warrant or make good the thing granted to the receiver. 1 Forb. Inst. pt. 2, p. 113.

Absolute Warrantandice

A warranting or assuring of property against all mankind. It is, in effect, a covenant of title.

Real Warrantandice

An infeoffment of one tenament given in security of another.

Simple Warrantandice

An obligation to warrant or secure from all subsequent or future deeds of the grantor. A simple warranty against the grantor's own acts. Whishaw.

WARRANT, v.

In contracts. To engage or promise that a certain fact or state of facts, in relation to the subject-matter, is, or shall be, as it is represented to be.

In conveyancing. To assure the title to property sold, by an express covenant to that effect in the deed of conveyance. To stipulate by an express covenant that the title of a grantee shall be good, and his possession undisturbed.

WARRANT, n. 1. A writ or precept from a competent authority in pursuance of law, directing the doing of an act, and addressed to an officer or person competent to do the act, and affording him protection from damage, if he does it. People v. Wood, 71 N.Y. 376.

2. Particularly, a writ or precept issued by a magistrate, justice, or other competent authority, addressed to a sheriff, constable, or other officer, requiring him to arrest the body of a person therein named, and bring him before the magistrate or court, to answer, or to be examined, touching some offense which he is charged with having committed. See People v. Baxter, City Ct., 32 N.Y.S.2d 325, 327. See, also, Bench-Warrant; Search-Warrant.

3. An order by which the drawer authorizes one person to pay a particular sum of money. Shawnee County v. Carter, 2 Kan. 130.

4. An authority issued to a collector of taxes, empowering him to collect the taxes extended on the assessment roll, and to make distress and sale of goods or land in default of payment.

5. A command of a council, board, or official whose duty it is to pass upon the validity and determine the amount of a claim against the municipality, to the treasurer to pay money out of any funds in the municipal treasury, which are or may become available for the purpose specified, to a designated person whose claim therefor has been duly adjusted and allowed. Roe v. Roosevelt Water Conservation Dist., 41 Ariz. 197, 16 P.2d 967, 970; State v. State Board of Examiners, 74 Mont 1, 238 P. 316, 328.

A “warrant” differs from a “bond” in that a bond is a “negotiable instrument,” whereas a warrant is nonnegotiable and is subject at all times to the defenses it would be were it in the hands of the original payee, which is not the case with a negotiable bond. Adams v. McGill, Tex.Civ.App., 146 S.W.2d 332, 334.

6. In England, a dividend warrant or coupon. See Coupons.

Bench warrant. See Bench.

Death warrant. A warrant issued generally by the chief executive authority of a state, directed to the sheriff or other proper local officer or the warden of a jail, commanding him at a certain time to proceed to carry into execution a sentence of death imposed by the court upon a convicted criminal.

Distress warrant. See Distress.

General warrant. A process which formerly issued from the state secretary's office in England to take up (without naming any persons) the author, printer, and publisher of such obscene and seditious libels as were specified in it. It was declared illegal and void for uncertainty by a vote of the house of commons on the 22d April, 1766. Wharton.

Land warrant. See that title.

Landlord's warrant. See Landlord.

Search warrant. See that title.

Warrant creditor. See Creditor.

Warrant in bankruptcy. A warrant issued, upon an adjudication in bankruptcy, directing the marshal to take possession of the bankrupt's property, notify creditors, etc.

Warrant of arrest. See Arrest.

Warrant of attorney. In practice. An instrument in writing, addressed to one or more attorneys therein named, authorizing them, generally, to appear in any court, or in some specified court, on behalf of the person giving it, and to confess judgment in favor of some particular person therein named, in an action of debt. It usually contains a stipulation not to bring any writ of error, or file a bill in equity, so as to delay him. 2 Burrill, Pr. 239; Treat v. Tolman, 51 C.C.A. 522, 113 F. 892. Such writing usually being given as security for obligation on which judgment was authorized, and in such procedure service of process was not essential. Bonnett-Brown Corporation v. Coyle, 195 N.C. 491, 142 S.E. 772, 774.

Warrant of commitment. A written authority committing a person to custody.

Warrant officers. In the United States army, navy, coast and geodetic survey, coast guard, marine corps and air force, these are a class of inferior officers who hold their rank by virtue of a written warrant instead of a commission.

Warrant to sue and defend. In old practice. A written authority for obligation on which judgment was authorized, and in such procedure service of process was not essential. Bonnett-Brown Corporation v. Coyle, 195 N.C. 491, 142 S.E. 772, 774.

WARRANTOR. One who makes a warranty. Shep. Touch. 181.

WARRANTOR POTEST EXCIPERE QUOD QUERENS NON TENET TERRAM DE QUA PETIT WARRANTIAM, ET QUOD DONUM FUIT INSUFFICIENS. Hob. 21. A warrantor may object that the complainant does not hold the land of which he seeks the warranty, and that the gift was insufficient.

WARRANTY

Sales of Personal Property

A statement or representation made by the seller of goods, contemporaneously with and as a part of the contract of sale, though collateral to the express object of it, having reference to the character, quality, or title of the goods, by which he promises or undertakes that certain facts are or shall be as he then represents them. Schley v. Zalis, 172 Md. 336, 191 A. 563, 564; Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. v. Walker, Tex.Civ.App., 104 S.W.2d 627, 632. A promise or agreement by seller that article sold has certain qualities or that seller has good title thereto. Chanin v. Chevrolet Motor Co., D.C.Ill., 15 F.Supp. 57, 58. A statement of fact respecting the quality or character of goods sold, made by the seller to induce the sale, and relied on by the buyer. Hercules Powder Co. v. Rich, C.C.A.Ark., 3 F.2d 12, 14; Van Horn v. Stautz, 297 Ill. 530, 131 N.E. 153, 154.

"Warranty" in sale of personalty ordinarily applies only between seller and immediate buyer, and does not give such buyer right to sue original seller. Timberland Lumber Co. v. Climax Mfg. Co., C.C.A.Pa., 61 F.2d 391, 392.

Contracts

An undertaking or stipulation, in writing, or verbally, that a certain fact in relation to the subject of a contract is or shall be as it is stated or promised to be. United Iron Works Co. v. Henryetta Coal & Mining Co., 62 Okl. 99, 162 P. 209, 210; Hurley-Mason Co. v. Stebbins, Walker & Spinning, 79 Wash. 366, 140 P. 381, 384, L.R.A.1915B, 1131, Ann.Cas.1916A, 948. An express or implied statement of something undertaken as part of contract but collateral to its object. Pauls Valley Milling Co. v. Gabbert, 182 Okl. 500, 78 P.2d 685, 686.

A warranty differs from a representation in that a warranty must always be given contemporaneously with, and as part of, the contract; whereas a representation precedes and induces to the contract. And, while that is their difference in nature, their difference in consequence or effect is this: that, upon breach of warranty, (or false warranty,) the contract remains binding, and damages only are recoverable for the breach; whereas, upon a false representation, the defrauded party may elect to avoid the contract, and recover the entire price paid. Brown. And see Griswold v. Morrison, 53 Cal.App. 93, 200 P. 62, 65.

The same transaction cannot be characterized as a warranty and a fraud at the same time. A warranty rests upon contract, while fraud, or fraudulent representations have no element of contract in them, but are essentially a tort. When judges or law-writers speak of a fraudulent warranty, the language is neither accurate nor perspicuous. If there is a breach of warranty, it cannot be said that the warranty was fraudulent, with any more propriety than any other contract can be said to have been fraudulent, because there has been a breach of it. On the other hand, to speak of a false representation as a contract or warranty, or as tending to prove a contract or warranty, is a perversion of language and of correct ideas. Rose v. Hurley, 39 Ind. 81; Boysen v. Petersen, 203 Iowa 1073, 211 N.W. 894, 895.

Insurance

A "warranty" in the law of insurance consists of a statement by insured upon the literal truth of which the validity of the contract depends. Braddock, by Smith, v. Pacific Woodmen Life

Ass'n, 89 Utah 75, 54 P.2d 1189, 1192. Statement, made in insurance contract by insured, which is susceptible of no construction other than that parties mutually intended that policy should not be binding, unless such statement be literally true. Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen v. Wood, Tex. Civ.App., 79 S.W.2d 665, 668.

It is in the nature of a condition precedent and must appear on face of policy; or, if on another part of it, or on a paper physically attached to it, it must appear that the statements were intended to form part of policy; or, if on another paper, they must be so referred to in policy as clearly to indicate that the parties intended them to form a part of it, but it is not necessary that the statements in an application be set forth in the policy. City Bank & Trust Co. v. Commercial Casualty Co., La.App., 176 So. 27.

Warranty may be either "affirmative" or "promissory." The former affirms the existence of a fact at the time the policy is entered into, while the latter requires that something be done or not done after the policy has taken effect. Sentinel Life Ins. Co. v. Blackmer, C.C.A.Colo., 77 F.2d 347, 350.

General

Affirmative warranty. In the law of insurance, warranties may be either affirmative or promissory. Affirmative warranties may be either express or implied, but they usually consist of positive representations in the policy of the existence of some fact or state of things at the time, or previous to the time, of the making of the policy; they are, in general, conditions precedent, and if untrue, whether material to the risk or not, the policy does not attach, as it is not the contract of the insurer. Maupin v. Insurance Co., 53 W.Va. 557, 45 S.E. 1003; Orient Ins. Co. v. Van Zandt-Bruce Drug Co., 50 Okl. 558, 151 P. 323, 324. See, also, Insurance.

Collateral warranty. Existed when the heir's title was not derived from the warranting ancestor, and yet it barred the heir from claiming the land by any collateral title, upon the presumption that he might thereafter have assets by descent from or through the ancestor; and it imposed upon him the obligation of giving the warrantee other lands in case of eviction, provided he had assets. 2 B1.Com. 301.

Continuing warranty. One which applies to the whole period during which the contract is in force; e. g., an undertaking in a charter-party that a vessel shall continue to be of the same class that she was at the time the charter-party was made.

Covenant of warranty. See Covenant.

Executory warranties. See Executory Warranties.

Express warranty. In contracts and sales, one created by the apt and explicit statements of the seller or person to be bound. Borrekins v. Bevan, 3 Rawle (Pa.) 36, 23 Am.Dec. 85; White v. Stelloh, 74 Wis. 435, 43 N.W. 99; Hausken v. Hodson-FeeNaughty Co., 109 Wash. 606, 187 P. 319, 321. In the law of insurance, an agreement expressed in a policy, whereby the assured stipulates that certain facts relating to the risk are or shall be true, or certain acts relating to the same subject have

General warranty. The name of a covenant of warranty inserted in deeds, by which the grantor binds himself, his heirs, etc., to "warrant and forever defend" to the grantee, his heirs, etc., the title thereby conveyed, against the lawful claims of all persons whatsoever. Where the warranty is only against the claims of persons claiming "by, through, or under" the grantor or his heirs, it is called a "special warranty."

Implied warranty. When the law derives it by implication or inference from the nature of the transaction or the relative situation or circumstances of the parties. Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. v. Walker, Tex.Civ.App., 104 S.W.2d 627, 632.

Lineal warranty. In old conveyancing, the kind of warranty which existed when the heir derived title to the land warranted either from or through the ancestor who made the warranty.

Personal warranty. One available in personal actions, and arising from the obligation which one has contracted to pay the whole or part of a debt due by another to a third person. Flanders v. Seelye, 105 U.S. 718, 26 L.Ed. 1217.

Promissory warranty. In the law of insurance, a warranty which requires the performance or omission of certain things or the existence of certain facts after the beginning of the contract of insurance and during its continuance, and the breach of which will avoid the policy. See King v. Relief Asa'n, 35 App.Div. 58, 54 N.Y.S. 1057; McKenzie v. Insurance Co., 112 Cal. 548, 44 P. 922.

Special warranty. A clause of warranty inserted in a deed of lands, by which the grantor covenants, for himself and his heirs, to "warrant and forever defend" the title to the same, to the grantee and his heirs, etc., against all persons claiming "by, through, or under" the grantor or his heirs. If the warranty is against the claims of all persons whatsoever, it is called a "general" warranty.

Warranty deed. One which contains a covenant of warranty.

Warranty, voucher to. In old practice. The calling a warrantor into court by the party warranted, (when tenant in a real action brought for recovery of such lands,) to defend the suit for him. Co.Litt. 101b.

WARREN. A term in English law for a place in which birds, fishes, or wild beasts are kept.

A franchise or privilege, either by prescription or grant from the king, to keep beasts and fowls of warren, which are hares, coneys, partridges, pheasants, etc.

Also any place to which such privilege extends. Mozley & Whiteley.

Free Warren

A franchise for the preserving and custody of beasts and fowls of warren. 2 Bl.Comm. 39, 417; Co.Litt. 233. This franchise gave the grantee sole right of killing, so far as his warren extended, on condition of excluding other persons. 2 Bl. Comm. 39.

WARSCOT. In Saxon law. A customary or usual tribute or contribution toward armor, or the arming of the forces.

WARTH. In old English law. A customary payment, supposed to be the same with ward-penny. Spelman; Blount.

WASH. A shallow part of a river or arm of the sea.

WASH BANK. A bank composed of such substance that it is liable to be washed away by the action of the water thereon, so as to become unsafe to travelers on highway. Kerr v. Bouguer, 16 Ohio App. 434, 437.

WASH SALE or WASHED SALE. In the language of the stock exchange, this term is applied to the operation of simultaneously buying and selling the same stock. In re Wettengel, C.C.A.3, 238 F. 798, 799. Also a fictitious kind of sale, disallowed on stock and other exchanges, in which a broker who has received orders from one person to buy and from another person to sell a particular amount or quantity of some particular stock or commodity simply transfers the stock or commodity from one principal to the other and pockets the difference, instead of executing both orders separately to the best advantage in each case, as is required by the rules of the different exchanges. U. S. v. Keough, D.C.Nev., 48 F.2d 246, 252.

WASHING–HORN. The sounding of a horn for washing before dinner. The custom was formerly observed in the Temple.

WASHINGTON, TREATY OF. A treaty signed on May 8, 1871, between Great Britain and the United States of America, with reference to certain differences arising out of the war between the northern and southern states of the Union, the Canadian fisheries, and other matters. Wharton.

WASHOUT SIGNAL. In railroad parlance. Emergency signal meaning to stop immediately. Stinson v. Aluminum Co. of America, C.C.A.Tenn., 141 F.2d 682, 684.
WASTE

WASTE. An abuse or destructive use of property by one in rightful possession. Halifax Drainage Dist. of Volusia County v. Gleaton, 137 Fla. 397, 188 So. 374, 379. Spoil or destruction, done or permitted, to lands, houses, gardens, trees, or other corporeal hereditaments, by the tenant thereof, to the prejudice of the heir, or of him in reversion or remainder. 2 Bl.Comm. 281. Camden Trust Co. v. Handle, 132 N.J.Eq. 97, 26 A.2d 865, 869, 154 A.L.R. 602. A destruction or material alteration or deterioration of the freehold, or of the improvements forming a material part thereof, by any person rightfully in possession, who has not the fee title or the full estate. Hayman v. Rownd, 82 Neb. 598, 118 N.W. 328, 45 L.R.A.(N.S.) 623; Thomas v. Thomas, 166 N.C. 627, 82 S.E. 1032, 1033, L.R.A.1915B, 219. An unreasonable or improper use, abuse, mismanagement, or omission of duty touching real estate by one rightfully in possession, which results in its substantial injury. Thayer v. Shorey, 287 Mass. 76, 191 N.E. 435, 437, 94 A.L.R. 307. Any unlawful act or omission of duty on the part of the tenant which results in permanent injury to the inheritance. It is the violation of an obligation to treat the premises in such manner that no harm be done to them, and that the estate may revert to those having an underlying interest, undeteriorated by any willful or negligent acts. Camden Trust Co. v. Handle, 130 N.J.Eq. 125, 21 A.2d 354, 358.

The early English doctrine was to the effect that anything which changed the character or nature of the land, notwithstanding the fact that it was an improvement thereto, constituted "waste." Whitehead v. Whitehead, Del.Oorph., 181 A. 684, 685.

The primary distinction between "waste" and "trespass" is that in waste the injury is done by one rightfully in possession. Camden Trust Co. v. Handle, 132 N.J.Eq. 97, 26 A.2d 865, 867, 869.

Old English Criminal Law

A prerogative or liberty, on the part of the crown, of committing waste on the lands of felons, by pulling down their houses, extirpating their gardens, plowing their meadows, and cutting down their woods. 4 Bl.Comm. 385.

General

Commissive waste. Active or positive waste; waste done by acts of spoliation or destruction, rather than by mere neglect; the same as voluntary waste. See infra.

Double waste. See Double.

Equitable waste. Injury to a reversion or remainder in real estate, which is not recognized by the courts of law as waste, but which equity will interpose to prevent or remedy. Gannon v. Peterson, 193 Ill. 372, 62 N.E. 210, 55 L.R.A. 701; Crowe v. Wilson, 65 Md. 479, 5 A. 427, 57 Am.Rep. 343. Otherwise defined as an unconscionable abuse of the privilege of non-impeachability for waste at common law, whereby a tenant for life, without impeachment of waste, will be restrained from committing willful, destructive, malicious, or extravagant waste, such as pulling down houses, cutting timber of too young a growth, or trees planted for ornament, or for shelter of premises. Wharton.

Impeachment of waste. Liability for waste committed, or a demand or suit for compensation for waste committed upon lands or tenements by a tenant thereof who has no right to commit waste. On the other hand, a tenure "without impeachment of waste" signifies that the tenant cannot be called to account for waste committed.

Nul waste. "No waste." The name of a plea in an action of waste, denying the commission of waste, and forming the general issue.

Permissive waste. That kind of waste which is a matter of omission only, as by suffering a house to fall for want of necessary reparations. 2 Bl.Comm. 281; Willey v. Laraway, 64 Vt. 559, 25 A. 436; White v. Wagner, 4 Har. & J. (Md.) 391, 7 Am.Dec. 674.

Voluntary waste. Active or positive waste; waste done or committed, in contradistinction to that which results from mere negligence, which is called "permissive" waste. 2 Bouv. Inst. no. 2394. "Voluntary waste" is the willful destruction or carrying away of something attached to the freehold, and "permissive waste" is the failure to take reasonable care of the premises. Fisher's Ex'r v. Haney, 180 Ky. 257, 202 S.W. 495, 496. Voluntary or commissive waste consists of injury to the demised premises or some part thereof, when occasioned by some deliberate or voluntary act, as, for instance, the pulling down of a house or removal of floors, windows, doors, furnaces, shelves, or other things affixed to and forming part of the freehold. Regan v. Luthy, 11 N.Y.S. 709, 16 Daly 413. Contrasted with "permissive" waste.

Writ of waste. See that title.

WASTE BOOK. A book used by merchants, to receive rough entries or memoranda of all transactions in the order of their occurrence, previous to their being posted in the journal. Otherwise called a "blotter."

WASTE WATER. Water that is actually wasted or not needed by the claimant thereto; water which, after it has served the purpose of the lawful claimant thereto, has been permitted to run to waste or to escape; and water which from unavoidable causes escapes from the ditches, canals, or other works of the lawful claimants. Rock Creek Ditch & Flume Co. v. Miller, 93 Mont. 248, 17 P.2d 1074, 1077, 39 A.L.R. 200. But water is not "waste water" so long as it remains on the land of the original appropriator. Barker v. Sonner, 135 Or. 75, 294 P. 1053, 1054.

WASTEL. A standard of quality of bread, made of the finest white flour. Cocket bread was slightly inferior in quality. The statute of 1266 mentions seven kinds of bread. See Assisa; Studer, Oak Book of Southampton, Vol. II.
WASTING PROPERTY. Includes such property as leasehold interests; royalties; patent rights; interests in things the substance of which is consumed, such as mines, oil and gas wells, quarries and timber lands; interests in things which are consumed in the using or are worn out by use, such as machinery and farm implements. In re Pennock's Will, 285 N.Y. 475, 35 N.E.2d 177, 178.

WASTING TRUST. A trust in which the trustee may apply a part of the principal to make good a deficiency of income.

WASTORS. In old statutes. A kind of thieves.

WATCH, v. To keep guard; to stand as sentinel; to be on guard at night, for the preservation of the peace and good order.

WATCH, n. A body of constables on duty on any particular night.

A division of a ship's crew. At sea, the ship's company is divided into two watches, larboard and starboard, with a mate to command each. O'Hara v. Luckenbach S. S. Co., 46 S.Ct. 157, 160, 269 U.S. 364, 70 L.Ed. 313. Also the division of the day into time periods of service of the officers and crew, and, by immemorial Anglo-Saxon maritime custom, the time period of a watch never exceeds four hours. The Denali, C.C.A.Wash., 105 F.2d 413, 416.

WATCH AND WARD. "Watch" denotes keeping guard during the night; "ward," by day.

WATCHMAN. An officer in cities and towns having duty to watch and care for inhabitants' property; he possesses generally the common-law authority of a constable to arrest on reasonable ground to suspect felony, though without proof of commission of felony. Harris v. Sevier, 19 La. App. 165, 138 So. 459, 460. Also one whose services are constant watching or patrolling of the particular buildings or contiguous group of buildings. Bartholome v. Baltimore Fire Patrol & Despatch Co., D.C.Md., 48 F.Supp. 98, 103.

WATER. As designating a commodity or a subject of ownership, this term has the same meaning in law as in common speech; but in another sense, and especially in the plural, it may designate a body of water, such as a river, a lake, or an ocean, or an aggregate of such bodies of water, as in the phrases "foreign waters," "waters of the United States," and the like.

Water is neither land nor tenement nor susceptible of absolute ownership. It is a movable thing and must of necessity continue common by the law of nature. It admits only of a transient usufructuary property, and if it escapes for a moment, the right to it is gone forever, the qualified owner having no legal power of reclamation. It is not capable of being sued for by the name of "water," nor by a calculation of its cubical or superficial measure; but the suit must be brought for the land which lies at the bottom covered with water. As water is not land, neither is it a tenement, because it is not of a permanent nature, nor the subject of absolute property. It is not in any possible sense real estate, and hence is not embraced in a covenant of general warranty. Mitchell v. Warner, 5 Conn. 518.

Coast Waters

See that title.

Developed Water

Water which is brought to the surface and made available for use by the party claiming the water. Mountain Lake Mining Co. v. Midway Irr. Co., 47 Utah 346, 149 P. 929, 933.

Flood Waters

Waters which escape from a water course in great volume and flow over adjoining lands in no regular channel. The fact that such errant waters make for themselves a temporary channel or follow some natural channel, guily, or depression does not affect their character as "flood waters" or give to the course which they follow the character of a natural "water course." Mogle v. Moore, Cal.App., 96 P.2d 147, 150, 151; Everett v. Davis, Cal.App., 107 P.2d 650, 654, 655.

Foreign Waters

Those belonging to another nation or country or subject to another jurisdiction, as distinguished from "domestic" waters. The Pilot, 1 C.C.A. 523, 50 F. 437.

Inland Waters

See Inland.

Navigable Waters

See Navigable.

Percolating Waters

Those which pass through the ground beneath the surface of the earth without any definite channel, and do not form a part of the body or flow, surface or subterranean, of any water-course. They may be either rain waters which are slowly infiltrating through the soil or waters seeping through the banks or the bed of a stream, and which have so far left the bed and the other waters as to have lost their character as a part of the flow of that stream. Vineland Irr. Dist. v. Azusa Irr. Co., 126 Cal. 486, 58 P. 1057, 46 L.R.A. 820; Los Angeles v. Pomery, 124 Cal. 597, 57 Pac. 585; Clinchfield Coal Corporation v. Compton, 148 Va. 437, 139 S.E. 308, 311, 55 A.L.R. 1376; Flanagan v. State, 113 Misc. 91, 183 N.Y.S. 934, 935.

Private Waters

Non-navigable streams, or bodies of water not open to the resort and use of the general public, but entirely owned and controlled by one or more individuals. Piazzek v. Drainage Dist. No. 1 of Jefferson County, 119 Kan. 119, 237 P. 1059, 1060.

Public Waters

Such as are adapted for the purposes of navigation, or those to which the general public have a right of access, as distinguished from artificial lakes, ponds, and other bodies of water privately owned, or similar natural bodies of water owned exclusively by one or more persons. Lamprey v. Metcalf, 52 Minn. 181, 53 N.W. 1139, 18 L.R.A. 670, 38 Am.St.Rep. 541; State v. Theriault, 70 Vt. 617, 41 A. 1030, 43 L.R.A. 290, 67 Am.St. Rep. 648.
WATER

Subterranean Waters
Waters which lie wholly beneath the surface of the ground, and which either oozé and seep through the subsurface strata without pursuing any defined course or channel, (percolating waters,) or flow in a permanent and regular but invisible course, or lie under the earth in a more or less immovable body, as a subterranean lake.

Surface Waters
As distinguished from the waters of a natural stream, lake, or pond, surface waters are such as diffuse themselves over the surface of the ground, following no defined course or channel, and not gathering into or forming any more definite body of water than a mere bog or marsh. They generally originate in rains and melting snows, but the flood waters of a river may also be considered as surface waters if they become separated from the main current, or leave it never to return, and spread out over lower ground. See Schaefer v. Marthaler, 34 Minn. 487, 26 N.W. 726, 57 Am.Rep. 40; Crawford v. Rambo, 44 Ohio St. 279, 7 N.E. 429; San Gabriel Valley Country Club v. Los Angeles County, 182 Cal. 392, 188 P. 554, 556, 9 A.L.R. 1200; Thompson v. New Haven Water Co., 86 Conn. 597, 86 A. 585, 588, 45 L.R.A.,N.S., 457.

Water derived from rains and melting snows that is diffused over the surface of the ground, and it continues to be such and may be impounded by the owner of the land until it reaches some well-defined channel in which it is accustomed to, and does, flow with other waters, or until it reaches some permanent lake or pond, whereupon it ceases to be "surface water" and becomes a "water course" or a "lake" or "pond," as the case may be. State v. Hiber, 44 Wyo. 172, 44 P.2d 1005, 1008, 1011.

Surplus Water
Water running off from ground which has been irrigated; water not consumed by the process of irrigation; water which the land irrigated will not take up. Wedgworth v. Wedgworth, 20 Ariz. 518, 181 P. 952, 954.

Tide Waters
See Tide.

Water Course
See that title <infra>.

Water Front
Land or land with buildings fronting on a body of water. City of Long Beach v. Lisenby, 175 Cal. 575, 166 P. 333, 335.

Water Power
The water power to which a riparian owner is entitled consists of the fall in the stream when in its natural state, as it passes through his land, or along the boundary of it; or, in other words, it consists of the difference of level between the surface where the stream first touches his land, and the surface where it leaves it. McCalmont v. Whitaker, 3 Rawle (Pa.) 90, 23 Am.Dec. 102.

The use of water for power according to common understanding means its application to a water wheel to the end that its energy under the specified head and fall may be utilized and converted into available force. Holyoke Water Power Co. v. American Writing Paper Co., D.C.Mass., 17 F.Sup. 895, 898.

Water Right
A legal right, in the nature of a corporeal hereditament, to use the water of a natural stream or water furnished through a ditch or canal, for general or specific purposes, such as irrigation, mining, power, or domestic use, either to its full capacity or to a measured extent or during a defined portion of the time. See Hill v. Newman, 5 Cal. 445, 63 Am.Dec. 140; Murphy v. Kerr, D.C. N.M., 296 F. 536, 541; City of Los Angeles v. City of Glendale, Cal.App., 132 P.2d 574, 584. A usufruct in a stream consisting in the right to have the water flow so that some portion of it may be reduced to possession and be made private property of individual, and it is therefore the right to divert water from natural stream by artificial means and apply the same to beneficial use. Ronzio v. Denver & R. G. W. R. Co., C.C.A.Utah, 116 F.2d 604, 605. It includes right to change the place of diversion, storage, or use of water if rights of other water users will not be injured. Lindsey v. McClure, C.C.A.N.M., 136 F.2d 65, 70.

It was also said to be real property which may be sold and transferred separately from land on which it has been used. Federal Land Bank of Spokane v. Union Cent. Life Ins. Co., 54 Idaho 161, 29 P.2d 1009, 1011.

Water Right Claim
A "water right claim," as filed with the state engineer, is merely a declaration of intention to create a water right. Washington State Sugar Co. v. Goodrich, 27 Idaho 26, 147 P. 1073, 1076.

Water-Bailiff
The title of an officer, in port towns in England, appointed for the searching of ships. Also of an officer belonging to the city of London, who had the supervising and search of the fish brought thither. Cowell.

Water-Bayley
In American law. An officer mentioned in the colony laws of New Plymouth, (A. D. 1671,) whose duty was to collect dues to the colony for fish taken in their waters. Probably another form of water-bailiff. Burrell.

Water-Gage
A sea-wall or bank to restrain the current and overflowing of the water; also an instrument to measure water. Cowell.

Water-Gang
A Saxon word for a trench or course to carry a stream of water, such as are commonly made to drain water out of marshes. Cowell.

Water-Gavel
In old records. A gavel or rent paid for fishing in or other benefit received from some river or water. Cowell; Blount.

Water-Logged
A vessel is "water-logged" when she becomes heavy and unmanageable on account of the leak-

Water-Mark

See that title infra.

Water-Measure

In old statutes. A measure greater than Winchester measure by about three gallons in the bushel. Cowell.

Water-Packed

A "water-packed" bale of cotton is one to the lint of which water is added in such a manner that the weight is increased, or in which water-damaged cotton is placed, or the sampling sides of which are packed with lint cotton not so wet or water-damaged. Wallace v. Crosthwait, 196 Ala. 356, 71 So. 666, 667.

Waters of the United States

All waters within the United States which are navigable for the purposes of commerce, or whose navigation successfully aids commerce, are included in this term. The Daniel Ball, 6 F.Cas. 1161.

Waterscape

An aqueduct or passage for water.

WATER COURSE. A running stream of water; a natural stream fed from permanent or natural sources, including rivers, creeks, runs, and rivulets. There must be a stream, usually flowing in a particular direction, though it need not flow continuously. It may sometimes be dry. It must flow in a definite channel, having a bed or banks, and usually discharges itself into some other stream or body of water. It must be something more than a mere surface drainage over the entire face of the tract of land, occasioned by unusual freshets or other extraordinary causes. Leader v. Matthews, 192 Ark. 1049, 95 S.W.2d 1138, 1139; Los Angeles v. Pomeroy, 124 Cal. 597, 57 P. 587; Walt v. Phillips, 166 Ark. 163, 266 S.W. 71, 73; Turner v. Big Lake Oil Co., Tex.Civ.App., 62 S.W.2d 491, 493.

A "water course," in the legal meaning of the word, does not consist merely of the stream as it flows within the banks which form its channel in ordinary stages of water, but the stream still retains its character as a water course when, in times of ordinary high water, the stream extending beyond its own banks, is accustomed to flow down over the adjacent lowlands in a broader or still definable stream. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Hadley, 168 Okl. 588, 35 P.2d 463, 466.

Water flowing underground in a known and well defined channel is not "percolating water", but constitutes a "water course", and is governed by law applicable to "surface streams", rather than by law applicable to percolating waters. Bull v. Siegrist, 169 Or. 180, 126 P.2d 832, 834.

Natural Water Course

A natural stream flowing in a defined bed or channel; one formed by the natural flow of the water, as determined by the general superificies or conformation of the surrounding country, as distinguished from an "artificial" water course, formed by the work of man, such as a ditch or canal. See Barkley v. Wilcox, 86 N.Y. 140, 40 Am. Rep. 519; Hawley v. Sheldon, 64 Vt. 491, 24 Atl. 717, 33 Am. St. Rep. 941; Porter v. Armstrong, 129 N.C. 101, 39 S.E. 799; Gaskill v. Barnett, 52 Ind. App. 654, 101 N.E. 40, 42; Williams v. Bass, 179 Wis. 364, 191 N.W. 499, 500.

WATER MARK. A mark indicating the highest point to which water rises, or the lowest point to which it sinks.

High-Water Mark

This term is properly applicable to tidal waters, and designates the line on the shore reached by the water at the high or flood tide. With reference to the waters of artificial ponds or lakes, created by dams in unnavigable streams, it denotes the highest point on the shores to which the dams can raise the water in ordinary circumstances. Howard v. Ingersoll, 13 How. 423, 14 L.Ed. 189; Storer v. Freeman, 6 Mass. 437, 4 Am.Dec. 155; Brady v. Blackinton, 113 Mass. 245; Cook v. McClure, 58 N.Y. 444, 17 Am.Rep. 270. The high-water mark of a river, not subject to tide, is the line which the river impresses on the soil by covering it for sufficient periods to deprive it of vegetation, and to destroy its value for agriculture. Raide v. Dollar, 34 Idaho 682, 203 P. 469, 471; Union Sand & Gravel Co. v. Northcott, 102 W.Va. 519, 35 S.E. 589, 592; Tilden v. Smith, 94 Fla. 502, 113 So. 708, 712.

Low-Water Mark

WATER ORDEAL. See Ordeal.

WATERED STOCK. Stock which is issued by a corporation as fully paid-up stock, when in fact the whole amount of the par value thereof has not been paid in. Harn v. Smith, 85 Okl. 137, 204 P. 642, 644; Bank of Commerce v. Goolsby, 129 Ark. 416, 196 S.W. 803, 807; Loud v. Solomon, 188 Mich. 7, 154 N.W. 73, 75. Stock issued as bonus or otherwise without consideration or issued for a less sum of money than par value, or issued for labor, services, or property which at a fair valuation is less than the par value. Thomason v. Miller, Tex.Civ.App., 4 S.W.2d 668, 670.

WATERWAY. Water course. Smith v. Cameron, 123 Or. 501, 262 P. 946, 948. See Water Course.

WAVESON. In old records. Such goods as, after a wreck, swim or float on the waves. Jacob.

WAX SCOT. A duty anciently paid twice a year towards the charge of wax candles in churches. Spelman.
WAY

WAY. A passage, path, road, or street. In a technical sense, a right of passage over land.

"Ways are appurtenant or appurtenant" when they are incident to an estate, one terminus being on the land of the party claiming it; while "way in gross" must be a personal right, not assignable nor inheritable. Safety Building & Loan Co. v. Lyles, 131 S.C. 540, 128 S.E. 724, 725. See "Easement."

Private Way

Right of Way

See that title.

Way of Necessity

Exists where land granted is completely environed by land of the grantor, or partially by his land and the land of strangers. The law implies from these facts that a private right of way over the grantor’s land was granted to the grantee as appurtenant to the estate. Gwinn v. Gwinn, 77 W.Va. 281, 87 S.E. 371, 373; Violet v. Martin, 62 Mont. 335, 205 P. 221, 223. It is not merely one of convenience, and never exists where person may reach highway over his own land. Backhausen v. Mayer, 204 Wis. 286, 234 N.W. 904, 905, 74 A.L.R. 1245. And it cannot legally exist where neither the party claiming the way nor owner of land over which it is claimed, nor anyone under whom either of them claim, was ever seized of both tracts of land at same time. Bowles v. Chapman, 180 Tenn. 232, 175 S.W.2d 313, 314. It is not based on continuous adverse user, but arises by implication of law from necessities of case, and ceases when necessity therefor ceases. Waubun Beach Ass'n v. Wilson, 274 Mich. 598, 265 N.W. 474, 478, 103 A.L.R. 983.

The extent of a "way of necessity" is a way such as is required for complete and beneficial use of land to which the way is impliedly attached. New York Cent. R. Co. v. Yarian, Ind., 219 Ind. 477, 39 N.E.2d 604, 606, 139 A.L.R. 455.

WAY-BILL. A writing in which is set down the names of passengers who are carried in a public conveyance, or the description of goods sent with a common carrier by land. Wharton.

WAY-GOING CROP. A crop of grain sown by a tenant for a term certain, during his tenancy, but which will not ripen until after the expiration, of his lease. In the absence of an express agreement to the contrary tenant is entitled thereto. Commonwealth v. Peterman, 130 Pa.Super. 497, 198 A. 687, 688.

WAYLEAVE. A right of way over or through land for the carriage of minerals from a mine or quarry. It is an easement, being a species of the class called "rights of way," and is generally created by express grant or reservation. Sweet.

WAYNAGIUM. Implements of husbandry. 1 Reeve, Eng.Law, c. 5, p. 268.

WAYS AND MEANS. In a legislative body, the "committee on ways and means" is a committee appointed to inquire into and consider the methods and sources for raising revenue, and to propose means for providing the funds needed by the government.

WAYWARDENS. The English highway acts provide that in every parish forming part of a highway district there shall annually be elected one or more waywardens. The waywardens so elected, and the justices for the county residing within the district, form the highway board for the district. Each waywarden also represents his parish in regard to the levying of the highway rates, and in questions arising concerning the liability of his parish to repairs, etc. Sweet.

WEALD. Sax. A wood; the woody part of a country.

WEALREAF. In old English law. The robbing of a dead man in his grave.

WEALTH. All material objects, capable of satisfying human wants, desires, or tastes, having a value in exchange, and upon which human labor has been expended; e., which have, by such labor, been either reclaimed from nature, extracted or gathered from the earth or sea, manufactured from raw materials, improved, adopted, or cultivated.

"The aggregate of all the things, whether material or immaterial, which contribute to comfort and enjoyment, which cannot be obtained without more or less labor, and which are objects of frequent barter and sale, is what we usually call wealth." Bowen, Pol. Econ. See Branham v. State, 96 Ga. 307, 22 S.E. 957.

WEAPON. An instrument of offensive or defensive combat, or anything used, or designed to be used, in destroying, defeating or injuring an enemy. Perry v. Commonwealth, 286 Ky. 587, 151 S.W.2d 377, 379; People ex rel. Griffin v. Hunt, 150 Misc. 163, 270 N.Y.S. 248. Something to fight with. Highsaw v. Creech, 17 Tenn.App. 573, 69 S.W.2d 249.

The term is chiefly used, in law, in the statutes prohibiting the carrying of "concealed" or "deadly" weapons. See those titles. And see also "Offensive."

WEAR, or WEIR. A great dam or fence made across a river, or against water, formed of stakes interlaced by twigs of osier, and accommodated for the taking of fish, or to convey a stream to a mill. Cowell; Jacob.

WEAR AND TEAR. "Natural wear and tear" means deterioration or depreciation in value by WEARING APPAREL. As generally used in statutes, refers not merely to a person’s outer clothing, but covers all articles usually worn, and includes underclothing. Arnold v. U. S., 13 S.Ct. 406, 147 U.S. 494, 37 L.Ed. 253. All articles of dress generally worn by persons in the calling and condition of life and in the locality of the person in question. In re Steimes’ Estate, 150 Misc. 279, 270 N.Y.S. 339.

WEATHERING. Consists in subjecting raw natural gasoline to the atmosphere in open tanks until by evaporation, sometimes accelerated by steam coils, the required vapor pressure or vapor tension of the remaining liquid is had. Carbide & Carbon Chemicals Co. v. Phillips Petroleum Co., D.C.Del., 28 F.2d 218.

WEDBEDRIP. Sax. In old English law. A customary service which tenants paid to their lords, in cutting down their corn, or doing other harvest duties; as if a covenant to reap for the lord at the time of his bidding or commanding. Cowell.

WEDLOCK. As used in the phrase “born out of wedlock” in Uniform Intelligibility Act, means the ceremony or state of marriage or status of husband and wife and is equivalent to matrimony but does not include status of wife and her paramour. State v. Coliton, N.D., 73 N.D. 582, 17 N.W.2d 546, 549, 156 A.L.R. 1403.

WEEK. A period of seven consecutive days of time; and, in some uses, the period beginning with Sunday and ending with Saturday. See Leach v. Burr, 23 S.Ct. 393, 188 U.S. 510, 47 L.Ed. 567; Ronkendorff v. Taylor, 4 Pet. 361, 7 L.Ed. 882; United States v. Southern Pac. Co., C.C.A. Utah, 209 F. 562, 567; Progressive Building and Loan Ass’n v. McIntyre, 169 Tenn. 491, 89 S.W.2d 336, 337.

Words “two weeks” mean fourteen days. Fisher v. Booker, 269 Ky. 501, 107 S.W.2d 307, 309.

WEEK-WORK. In early English times, the obligation of a tenant to work two or three days in every week for his lord, during the greater part of the year, and four or five during the summer months. 1 Poll. & Maitl. 349.

WEIGHT. A measure of heaviness or ponderosity; and in a metaphorical sense influence, effectiveness, or power to influence judgment or conduct. The quantity of heaviness, the quality of being heavy, the degree or extent of downward pressure under the influence of gravity, or the quantity of matter as estimated by the balance or scale. Dwight & Lloyd Sintering Co. v. American Ore Reclamation Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 263 F. 315, 316.

Gross Weight

The whole weight of goods and merchandise, including the dust and dross, and also the chest or bag, etc., upon which tare and tret are allowed.

Miner’s Weight

Such quantity of mine-run material, as operators and miners may, from time to time, agree as being necessary or sufficient to produce a ton of prepared coal. Drake v. Berry, 259 Pa. 8, 102 A. 315, 320.

WEIGHT OF EVIDENCE. The balance of preponderance of evidence; the inclination of the greater amount of credible evidence, offered in a trial, to support one side of the issue rather than the other.

The “weight” or “preponderance of proof” is a phrase constantly used, the meaning of which is well understood and easily defined. It indicates clearly to the jury that the party having the burden of proof will be entitled to their verdict, if, on weighing the evidence in their minds, they shall find the greater amount of credible evidence sustains the issue which is to be established before them. Haskins v. Haskins, 9 Gray, Mass., 393. Weight is not a question of mathematics, but depends on its effect in inducing belief. It often happens that an uncorroborated witness may tell a story so natural and reasonable, and in manner so sincere and honest, as to command belief, that they contradicted by others. Braunschweiger v. Waits, 179 Pa. 47, 36 A. 153, 156. “Weight of proof” means greater amount of credible evidence and is synonymous with “preponderance of proof.” Haskins v. Haskins, 75 Mass. (9 Gray) 390, 393. For a contrary holding, see Shinn v. Tucker, 37 Ark. 580, 588. See, also, Preponderance.

WELDING. The art, practiced immemorially, of uniting two pieces of metal in one piece by heating those portions which are to be welded to a temperature at which they become plastic, and then pressing them strongly together, so as to effect a union. Thomson Spot Welder Co. v. Ford Motor Co., 44 S.Ct. 533, 534, 265 U.S. 445, 68 L.Ed. 1098.

WELFARE. Well-doing or well-being in any respect; the enjoyment of health and common blessings of life; exemption from any evil or calamity; prosperity; happiness. Wiseman v. Tanner, D.C. Wash., 221 F. 694, 698.

WELFARE OF CHILD. Under statutes requiring in awarding custody of minor that “welfare of child,” be guide, parents need only be honest and respectable, with disposition and capacity to maintain and educate child. In re Bourquin, 88 Mont. 118, 290 F. 250, 251. The “welfare of a child”, is gauged by father’s means and station in life and does not contemplate that child be taken from father because another can give child more in a material way. Starr v. Gorman, 136 N.J.L. 105, 40 A.2d 564, 565.

WESTMINSTER THE FIRST, STATUTE OF. The statute 3 Edw. I., A. D. 1275. This statute, which deserves the name of a code rather than an act, is divided into fifty-one chapters. Without extending the exemption of churchmen from civil jurisdiction, it protects the property of the church from the violence and spoliation of the king and the nobles, provides for freedom of popular elections, because sheriffs, coroners, and conservators of the peace were still chosen by the freeholders in the county court, and attempts had been made to influence the election of knights of the shire, from the time when they were instituted. It contains a declaration to enforce the enactment of Magna Charta against excessive fines, which might operate as perpetual imprisonment; enumerates and corrects the abuses of tenures, particularly as to marriage of wards; regulates the levying of tolls, which were imposed arbitrarily by the barons and by cities and boroughs; corrects and restrains the powers of the king’s escheator and other officers; amends the criminal law, putting the crime of rape on the footing... to which it has been lately restored, as a most grievous, but not capital, offense; and embraces the subject of procedure in civil and criminal matters, introducing many regulations to render it cheap, simple, and expeditious. 1 Camp. Lives Ld. Ch. p. 167; 2 Reeve, Eng. Law, c. 9, p. 107. Certain parts of this act are repealed by St. 26 & 27 Vict. c. 125. Wharton.

WESTMINSTER THE SECOND, STATUTE OF. The statute 13 Edw. I. St. 1, A. D. 1285, otherwise called the "Statute de Donis Conditionalibus." See 2 Reeve, Eng. Law, c. 10, p. 163. Certain parts of this act are repealed by St. 19 & 20 Vict. c. 64, and St. 26 & 27 Vict. c. 125. Wharton.

WHARF. A structure on the margin of navigable waters, alongside of which vessels can be brought for the sake of being conveniently loaded or unloaded, or a space of ground, artificially prepared, for the reception of merchandise from a ship or vessel, so as to promote the discharge of such vessel. State v. Louisiana Terminal Co., 179 La. 671, 154 So. 731.

A broad, plain place near a river, canal, or other water, to lay wares on that are brought to or from the water. Cowell.

Private Wharf

One whose owner or lessee has the exclusive enjoyment or use thereof. Hamilton v. Portland State Pier Site Dist., 120 Me. 15, 112 A. 836, 840; The M. L. C. No. 10, C.C.A.N.Y., 10 F.2d 699, 702.

Public Wharf

One to which vessels and the public can resort, either at will or on assignment of a berth by a harbor authority. Kafline v. Brooklyn Eastern Dist. Terminal Co., 168 N.Y.S. 120, 121, 180 App. Div. 858.

Sufferance Wharves

Such as may be appointed by the commissioners for the purpose of customs, under the British act of 1876.

WHARFING OUT, RIGHT OF. A right to the exclusive use of submerged lands as by the affixing thereto or the establishment thereon of a permanent structure to some point within the navigable body of water, deep and wide enough to dock ocean-going vessels, and it presupposes exclusive use and to that extent may interfere with fishing or navigation. City of Oakland v. Hogan, 41 Cal. App.2d 333, 106 P.2d 987, 994.

WHARFINGER. The owner or occupier of a wharf, one who for hire receives merchandise on his wharf, either for the purpose of forwarding or for delivery to the consignee on such wharf. Teahan v. Industrial Accident Commission, 210 Cal. 342, 292 P. 120, 121.

WHEELAGE. Duty or toll paid for carts, etc., passing over certain ground. Cowell.

WHEELERS. Persons employed by a motor carrier to load freight on outgoing truck or trailer bodies and to report physical defects in and need for repairs to such bodies. Crean v. M. Moran Transp. Lines, D.C.N.Y., 57 F.Supp. 212, 216.

WHELPS. The young of certain animals of a base nature or ferae naturae.

WHEN. At what time; at the time that; at which time; at that time. Gehrgun v. Collister, 52 Ohio App. 314, 3 N.E.2d 700, 701. At, during, or after the time that; at or just after the moment that. In re Morrow's Will, 41 N.M. 723, 73 P.2d 1360, 1364. In the event that, on condition that, in virtue of the circumstances that. Frequently employed as equivalent to the word "if" in legislative enactments and in common speech. Collins v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 183 S.C. 284, 190 S.E. 817, 825.

WHEN AND WHERE. Technical words in pleading, formerly necessary in making full defense to certain actions.
WHEN MANY JOIN IN ONE ACT, THE LAW SAYS IT IS THE ACT OF HIM WHO BEST DO IT; AND THINGS SHOULD BE DONE BY HIM WHO HAS THE BEST SKILL. Nov. Max.

WHEN NO TIME IS LIMITED, THE LAW APPOINTS TIRE MOST CONVENIENT.

WHEN THE COMMON LAW AND STATUTE LAW CONCUR, THE COMMON LAW IS TO BE PREFERRED. 4 Co. 71.

WHEN THE FOUNDATION FAILS, ALL FAILS.

WHEN THE LAW GIVES ANYTHING, IT GIVES A REMEDY FOR THE SAME.

WHEN THE LAW PRESUMES THE AFFIRMATIVE, THE NEGATIVE IS TO BE PROVED, 1 Rolle 83.

WHEN TWO TITLES CONCUR, THE BEST IS PREFERRED. Finch, Law. b. 1, c. 4, n. 82.

WHERE. At the place. Girl v. U. S. Railroad Admin., 194 Iowa 1382, 189 N.W. 834, 835; Shearer v. Farmers' Life Ins. Co., 106 Kan. 574, 189 P. 648, 650. As used in the statutory language, "where the prosecution is held," the word does not refer to the geographical location of the place of hearing, but rather to the tribunal or official before whom the case is tried. Barth v. State, 107 Ohio St. 154, 140 N.E. 650, 651.

WHERE THERE IS EQUAL EQUITY, THE LAW MUST PREVAIL. Bisp.Eq. § 40; 4 Bouv.Inst. n. 3727.

WHERE TWO RIGHTS CONCUR, THE MORE ANCIENT SHALL BE PREFERRED.

A "whereas" clause of a contract is but an introductory or prefatory statement meaning "considering that" or "that being the case", and is not an essential part of the operatin’s portions of the contract. Jones v. City of Paducah, 283 Ky. 628, 142 S.W.2d 365, 367.

WHEREUPON. Upon which; after which. Lee v. Cook, 1 Wyo. 419.

WHICH. A clause introduced by the relative pronoun "which" is a sufficient allegation of the fact stated in it, if, when read in connection with its context, it plainly manifests an intent on the part of the pleader to set up such fact and rely upon it. Bishop v. Wheeling & Foundry Co., 82 W.Va. 637, 96 S.E. 1020, 1022.

WHIG. This name was applied in Scotland, A. D. 1648, to those violent Covenanters who opposed the Duke of Hamilton’s invasion of England in order to restore Charles I. The appellation of "Whig" and "Tory" to political factions was first heard of in A. D. 1679, and, though as senseless as any cant terms that could be devised, they became instantly as familiar in use as they have since continued. 2 Hall. Const. Hist. c. 12; Wharton.

WHILE. Pending or during the time that. Fireman’s Fund Ins. Co. v. Jackson, 161 Ga. 559, 131 S.E. 359, 360. Often used adversatively and to imply contrast, and in some constructions introduces a parenthetical clause. Jackson v. Texas Co., C.C. A. Okt., 75 F.2d 549, 553.

WHIPLASH INJURY. A snapping of the neck when a person gets his head thrown forward or back or from side to side. Breitenberg v. Parker, 372 S.W.2d 828, 832, 237 Ark. 261. It is caused by a sudden and unexpected forced movement of the neck of an individual while he is in a relaxed position and against which he cannot protect himself. Hanover Fire Ins. Co. v. Sides, C.A.La., 320 F.2d 437, 441. It may result in several types of pathological findings, such as sprain, fracture, dislocation and so forth. Self v. Johnson, La.App., 124 So.2d 324, 325; Luquette v. Bouillion, La.App., 184 So.2d 766, 768.

WHITE PERSONS. As used in Rev.St.U.S. 2169 (Naturalization Act March 26, 1790, c. 3, 1 Stat. 103, as amended by Act Feb. 18, 1875, c. 80, § 1, 18 Stat. 318 [8 IT.S.C.A. § 703]), members of the white or Caucasian race, as distinct from the black, red, yellow, and brown races. Petition of Easurk Emsen Charr, D.C.Mo., 273 F. 207, 209; Takao Ozawa v. U. S., 43 S.Ct. 65, 68, 260 U.S. 178, 67 L.Ed. 199; In re Ah Yup, 5 Sawy. 155, F.Cas. No. 104.

Whether applicant for United States citizenship is a "white person" eligible for citizenship under statute enumerating classes of people eligible therefor depends, not upon ethnological classification of group to which he belongs, but upon whether members of such group with characteristics existing in 1790 when statute was first enacted were intended by Congress to be classified as white persons. In re Ahmed Hassan, D.C.Mich., 48 F.Supp. 843, 845: And statute uses the words "white persons" as meaning primarily the European peoples who constituted the class from which virtually all of immigration to United States has come and who readily become assimilated into our civilization. In re Ahmed Hassan, D.C.Mich., 48 F.Supp. 843, 845.

In the legislation of the slave period, persons without admixture of colored blood, whatever the actual complexion might be. Du Val v. Johnson, 39 Ark. 192. See also, White Race.

In South Africa, persons of European descent. [1905] T. S. 621.

WHITE RACE. Within the meaning of the Mississippi Constitution of 1890, § 207, providing that there shall be separate schools for the white and colored races, the Caucasian race;—the term "colored races," being used in contradistinction to the white race, and embracing all other races. Rice v. Gong Lum, 139 Miss. 760, 104 So. 105, 107. See, also, White Persons.

WHITE RENTS. In English law. Rents paid in silver, and called "white rents," or "redditus albi," to distinguish them from rents payable in corn, labor, provisions, etc., called "black-rent" or "black-mail." Co. 2d Inst. 19. See Alba Firma.

WHITE SLAVE. A term used in the United States statutes and in common talk (though not very appropriately) to indicate a female with reference to whom an offense is committed under the so-called Mann White Slave Traffic Act of June 25, 1910 (18 U.S.C.A. §§ 2421-2424), prohibiting the transportation in interstate and foreign commerce for immoral purposes of women and girls.

WHITE SPURS. A kind of esquires. Cowell.

WHITECAPS. The name of an unlawful organization against which Tennessee in 1897 enacted a statute (Acts 1897, c. 52) entitled, "An act to prevent and punish the formation or continuance of conspiracies and combinations for certain unlawful purposes," etc... commonly known as the "Law against Whitecaps." Persons guilty of any offense under the act were rendered incompetent for jury service. Jenkins v. State, 99 Tenn. 569, 42 S.W. 263.

WHITEFRIARS. A place in London between the Temple and Blackfriars, which was formerly a sanctuary, and therefore privileged from arrest. Wharton.

WHITEHART SILVER. A mulet on certain lands in or near to the forest of Whitehart, paid into the exchequer, imposed by Henry III. upon Thomas de la Linda, for killing a beautiful white hart which that king before had spared in hunting. Camd. Brit. 150.

WHITSUN FARTHINGS. Pentecostals, (q. v.).

WHITSUNTIDE. The feast of Pentecost, being the fiftieth day after Easter, and the first of the four cross-quarter days of the year. Wharton.

WHITTANWARII. In old English law. A class of offenders who whitened stolen ox-hides and horse-hides so that they could not be known and identified.

WHOLE BLOOD. See Blood.

WHOLLY AND PERMANENTLY DISABLED. Term within disability clause of life policy does not mean "partial" or "temporary," and is not to be construed literally so as to require condition of complete helplessness or utter hopelessness to be entitled to benefits. Duhaime v. Prudential Ins. Co. of America, 86 N.H. 307, 167 A. 269, 270, but must be given rational meaning. Clarkson v. New York Life Ins. Co., D.C.Fla., 4 F.Supp. 791, 793.

WHOLLY DESTROYED. A building is "wholly destroyed" within the meaning of statutes permitting recovery of the full amount of a fire insurance policy, when, although some part remains standing, it can no longer be designated as a building. Eck v. Netherlands Ins. Co., 203 Wis. 515, 234 N.W. 718, 719. The words mean totally destroyed as a building, although there is not an absolute extinction of all its parts. Hart v. North British & Mercantile Ins. Co., 182 La. 551, 162 So. 177.

WHOLLY DISABLED. These words within accident policy do not mean a state of complete physical and mental incapacity or utter helplessness but mean rather inability to do all the substantial and material acts necessary to carry on a certain business or occupation or any business or occupation in a customary and usual manner and which acts the insured would be able to perform in such manner but for the disability. Jacobson v. Mutual Ben. Health & Accident Ass'n, 70 N.D. 566, 296 N.W. 545, 552, 553. Total disability. Maryland Assur. Corporation v. Smith, 786 Ky. 513, 151 S.W. 409, 412. See, also, Disability.

WHOREMASTER. Ordinarily, one who practices lewdness; also, one who keeps or procures whores for others; a pimp; a procurer. Nickerson v. Masters, 190 Ky. 168, 226 S.W. 1072, 1073.

WIC. A place on the sea-shore or the bank of a river.

WICA. A country house or farm. Cowell.

WICK. Sax. A village, town, or district. Hence, in composition, the territory over which a given jurisdiction extends. Thus, "bailliwick" is the territorial jurisdiction of a bailiff or sheriff or constable. "Sheriff-wick" was also used in the old books.

WIDEN. To increase in width; to extend. In re Day, 109 A. 573, 7 Boyce (Del.) 556.

WHOLE GALE. A wind from 55 to 75 miles per hour. The President Madison, C.C.A.Wash., 91 F.2d 835, 841.

WHOLESALE BAKERY. A business or industry where food products composed principally of flour or meal are prepared and sold in gross to the retail dealer and vendor. Continental Baking Co. v. Campbell, 176 Okl. 218, 55 P.2d 114, 117.

WHOLESALE DEALER. One whose business is the selling of goods in gross to retail dealers, and not by the small quantity or parcel to consumers thereof. Veazey Drug Co. v. Bruza, 169 Okl. 418, 37 P.2d 294.

WHOLESALER. One who buys in comparatively large quantities, and who sells, usually in smaller quantities, but never to the ultimate consumer of an individual unit. He sells either to a "jobber," a sort of middleman, or to a "retailer," who sells to the consumer. Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. v. Cream of Wheat Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 227 F. 46, 47; Fischbach Brewing Co. v. City of St. Louis, 95 S.W.2d 335, 340, 231 Mo.App. 793.

WHOLLY DEPENDENT. A person is to be regarded as "wholly dependent" upon a workman, within meaning of compensation acts, when his support is derived wholly from the workman's wages. Baker v. Western Power & Light Co., 147 Kan. 571, 78 P.2d 36, 40; Central Surety and Insurance Corporation v. Industrial Commission, 94 Colo. 341, 30 P.2d 253, 255.

Person may be "wholly dependent" on workman though he may have some slight savings of his own, or some other slight property, or be able to make something by his own service. United States Coal & Coke Co. v. Sutton, 268 Ky. 405, 165 S.W.2d 173, 177.
WIDOW. A woman whose husband is dead, and who has not remarried. In re Embiricos' Estate, 184 Misc. 453, 52 N.Y.S.2d 425, 427.

Grass Widow
See that title.

Widow-bench
The share of her husband's estate which a widow is allowed besides her jointure.

Widow's Chamber
See Chamber, Widow's.

Widow's Quarantine
In old English law. The space of forty days after the death of a man who died seised of lands, during which his widow might remain in her husband's capital mansion-house, without rent, and during which time her dower should be assigned. 2 Bl.Comm. 135. See Vannoy v. Green, 206 N.C. 77, 173 S.E. 277.

Widow's Terce
In Scotch law. The right which a wife has after her husband's death to a third of the rents of lands in which her husband died intestate; dower. Bell.

Year of Mourning
See that title, and Annuus Luctus.

WIDOWER. A man who has lost his wife by death and has not married again. Abrams v. Unknown Heirs of Rice, 317 Mo. 216, 295 S.W. 83, 85.

WIDOWHOOD. The state or condition of being a widow, or, sometimes, a widower. An estate is sometimes settled upon a woman "during widowhood," which is expressed in Latin, "durante viduitate."

WIFA. L. Lat. In old European law. A mark or sign; a mark set up on land, to denote an exclusive occupation, or to prohibit entry. Spelman.

WIFE. A woman united to a man by marriage; a woman who has a husband living and undivorced. The correlative term is "husband." Davis v. Bass, 188 N.C. 200, 124 S.E. 566, 568; Estes v. Merrill, 121 Ark. 361, 181 S.W. 136, 137; Ex parte Suzanna, D.C.Mass., 295 F. 713, 714.

Workmen's Compensation Laws should be strictly interpreted where rights of legal wife as against putative wife would be defeated or lessened by liberal interpretation, and, as so interpreted, terms "wife" and "widow" within compensation law do not include wife of putative marriage. Fulton Bag & Cotton Mills v. Fernandez, La. App., 159 So. 339, 345.

"Examination of wife," see Private Examination.

WIFE AND CHILDREN. A conveyance or devise by a man to his wife and children will be presumed, in the absence of language indicating a contrary purpose, to be to wife for life, with remainder to her and grantor's or testator's children. Sower v. Lilard, 207 Ky. 283, 269 S.W. 330, 331.

WIFE'S EQUITY. When a husband is compelled to seek the aid of a court of equity for the purpose of obtaining the possession or control of his wife's estate, that court will recognize the right of the wife to have a suitable and reasonable provision made, by settlement or otherwise, for herself and her children, out of the property thus brought within its jurisdiction. This right is called the "wife's equity," or "equity to a settlement." See 2 Kent, Comm. 139.

WIFE'S PART. See Legitime.

WIGREVE. In old English law. The overseer of a wood. Cowell.

WILD ANIMALS (or animals ferus naturae). Animals of an untamable disposition; animals in a state of nature.

WILD FOWL. Any large eatable bird of a wild nature. Crabtree v. State, 123 Ark. 68, 184 S.W. 430.

WILD LAND. Land in a state of nature, as distinguished from improved or cultivated land. Clark v. Phelps, 4 Cow., N.Y., 203. Land in a wilderness state, not used in connection with improved estates. Central Maine Power Co. v. Rolins, 126 Me. 299, 138 A. 170, 174. When land is contiguous to improved and cultivated land, and commonly used therewith for fuel, fencing, repairs, or pasturing, it no longer has the character of "wild land." Holden v. Page, 107 A. 492, 494, 118 Me. 242.

WILD WELL. In the parlance of men in the gas industry, a gas well wherein the gas pipe develops a leak at a point beneath the surface of ground with the result that large amounts of gas escape. Mitchell v. Mitchell Drilling Co., 154 Kan. 117, 114 P.2d 841, 842.

WILD'S CASE, RULE IN. A devise to B. anc his children or issue, B. having no issue at the time of the devise, gives him an estate tail; but, if he have issue at the time, B. and his children take joint estates for life. 6 Coke, 16b; Tudor, Lead. Cas. Real Prop. 542, 581.

WILL, v. An auxiliary verb commonly having the mandatory sense of "shall" or "must." Tennessee Cent. R. Co. v. Morgan, 132 Tenn. 1, 175 S.W. 1148, 1153. State v. Summers, Mo.App., 281 S.W. 123, 124. It is a word of certainty, while the word "may" is one of speculation and uncertainty. Carson v. Turrish, 140 Minn. 445, 168 N.W. 349, 352, L.R.A.1918F, 154.

WILL, n. Wish; desire; pleasure; inclination; choice; the faculty of conscious, and especially of deliberate, action. State v. Schwab, 109 Ohio St. 532, 143 N.E. 29, 31. When a person expresses his "will" that a particular disposition be made of his property, his words are words of command, Temple v. Russell, 251 Mass. 231, 146 N.E. 679, 680, 49 A.L.R. 1, and the word "will" as so used is mandatory, comprehensive, and dispositive in nature, Mastellar v. Atkinson, 94 Kan. 279, 146 P. 367, 368, Ann.Cas.1917B, 502.

Law of Wills

The legal expression or declaration of a person's mind or wishes as to the disposition of his property, to be performed or take effect after his death. Swinb. Wills, § 2; Thomas v. House, 145 Va. 742, 134 S.E. 673, 674; In re McCune’s Estate, 135 Pa. 523, 109 A. 156, 157; Krause v. Krause, 113 Neb. 22, 201 N.W. 670, 673. A revocable instrument by which a person makes disposition of his property to take effect after his death. Howard’s Ev’r v. Dempster, 246 Ky. 153, 54 S.W.2d 660, 661. Any instrument whereby a person makes a disposition of his property to take effect after his death.

Todd v. Williams’ Adm’x, 264 Ky. 788, 95 S.W.2d 593, 596. A written instrument executed with the formalities of law, whereby a person makes a disposition of his property to take effect after his death. Tax Commission of Ohio v. Parker, 117 Ohio St. 215, 158 N.E. 89, 90.

To constitute "will," intention must appear that writer by document itself intended to make disposition of property effective only after death. In re Button’s Estate, 209 Cal. 478, 285 P. 964, 967.

A "will" is not a sheet of paper, nor a number of sheets or pages, but consists of the words written thereon. In re Golden’s Will, 165 Misc. 205, 300 N.Y.S. 737, 738. And the form of an instrument is of little consequence in determining whether it is a will, but if it is executed with formalities required by statute, and if it is to operate only after death of maker, it is a "will". In re Fowl’s Estate, 292 Mich. 500, 290 N.W. 883, 885.

Instruments conveying a present interest are deeds, and not wills, Jung v. Petermann, Tex.Civ.App., 194 S.W. 202, 205; Moss v. Hodges, 294 Ky. 677, 172 S.W.2d 584, 585. For wills pass no interest until after the death of the maker; Willis v. Fiveash, Tex.Civ.App., 297 S.W. 509, 510; Sims v. Brown, 252 Mo. 58, 158 S.W. 624, 627. An instrument rough in form of a bill or note, which is intended to have no operation until death of maker, is not "contractual" but is of the nature of a "will." In re Murphy’s Estate, 193 Wash. 400, 75 P.2d 916, 924.

"Codicil" to will is distinguished from new "will," in that the latter revokes the first in its entirety unless otherwise provided therein. In re Bissell’s Estate, 302 Pa. 27, 153 A. 692, 694.

The distinction between a "will" and a "power of appointment" is that a will concerns the estate of the testator, while an appointment under a power concerns that of the donor of the power. Thompson v. Pew, 214 Mass. 520, 102 N.E. 122.

The difference between a will and a trust is that a will operates from the moment of death, while a trust operates in respect to a certain extent. Allen v. Hendrick, 104 Or. 202, 206 P. 733, 740.

A gift inter vivos is distinguishable from a will in that such a gift may be made by parol and, upon the acceptance of the gift by the donee, the gift is irrevocable by the donor, while ordinarily a will is required to be in writing, and usually is made in view of the fact of death, and is ineffective until the death of the testator and the admission of the will to probate. York v. Trigg, 87 Old. 214, 209 P. 417, 423.

The term will, as an expression of the final disposition of one’s property, is confined to the English laws and those countries which derive their jurisprudence from that source. The term testamentum, or testament, is exclusively used in the Roman civil law and by the continental writers upon that subject.

A will, when it operates upon personal property, is sometimes called a “testament,” and when upon real estate, a devise; but the more general and the more popular denomination of the instrument embracing equally real and personal estate is that of “last will and testament.” 4 Kent, Comm. 501; In re Kiltz’s Will, 125 Misc.Rep. 475, 211 N.Y.S. 450, 461.

Criminal Law

The power of the mind which directs the action of a man.

Scotch Practice

That part or clause of a process which contains the mandate or command to the officer. Bell.

General

Ambulatory will. A changeable will (ambulatoria voluntas), the phrase merely denoting the power which a testator possesses of altering his will during his life-time. See Hattersley v. Bissett, 50 N.J.Eq. 577, 25 A. 332.

Conditional will. A conditional disposition is one which depends upon the occurrence of some uncertain event, by which it is either to take effect or to be defeated. Rogers v. Mosier, 121 Okl. 213, 245 P. 36, 38. If the happening of an event named in a will is the reason for making the will, it is "conditional"; but, if the testator intends to dispose of his property in case the event happens, the will is "conditional." Ferguson v. Ferguson, Tex.Civ.App., 288 S.W. 833, 835.

Conjoint will. See Joint Will, infra.

Double will. Called also a "counter," "mutual," or "reciprocal" will. Wright v. Wright, 215 Ky. 394, 285 S.W. 188, 189. See Double.

Estate at will. This estate entitles the grantee or lessee to the possession of land during the pleasure of both the grantor and himself, yet it creates no sure or durable right, and is bounded by no definite limits as to duration. It must be at the reciprocal will of both parties, (for, if it be at the will of the lessor only, it is a lease for life,) and the dissent of either determines it. Wharton.

Holographic will. One that is entirely written, dated, and signed by the hand of the testator himself. In re Hail’s Estate, 106 Okl. 124, 235 P. 916, 917; In re Cole’s Will, 171 N.C. 74, 87 S.E. 962; Code.Civ.La. art. 1588. Sometimes spelled "olo-

Joint and mutual will. One executed jointly by two persons with reciprocal provisions, which shows on its face that the devises are made one in consideration of the other. Wright v. Wright, 215 Ky. 394, 285 S.W. 188, 189; Bright v. Cox, 147 Ga. 474, 94 S.E. 572, 573.

Joint will. One where the same instrument is made the will of two or more persons and is jointly signed by them. Such wills are usually executed to make testamentary disposition of joint property. Bright v. Cox, 147 Ga. 474, 94 S.E. 572, 573; Campbell v. Dunkelberger, 172 Iowa 385, 153 N.W. 56, 58. A joint or conjoint will is a testamentary instrument executed by two or more persons, in pursuance of a common intention, for the purpose of disposing of their several interests in property owned by them in common, or of their separate property treated as a common fund, to a third person or persons. Ginn v. Edmundson, 173 N.C. 85, 91 S.E. 696.

Mutual will. One in which two or more persons make mutual or reciprocal provisions in favor of each other. Ginn v. Edmundson, 173 N.C. 85, 91 S.E. 696. "Mutual wills" are the separate wills of two persons which are reciprocal in their provisions, and such a will may be both joint and mutual. Campbell v. Dunkelberger, 172 Iowa 385, 153 N.W. 56, 58; Carle v. Miles, 89 Kan. 540, 132 S.W. 399, Ann.Cas.1917D, 615; United States v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., La., 58 S.Ct. 533, 535, 303 U.S. 239, 82 L.Ed. 773.

Mystic will. See Testament.

Non-intervention will. In some jurisdictions, one authorizing the executor to act without bond and to manage, control, and settle the estate without the intervention of any court whatsoever. In re MacDonald's Estate, 29 Wash. 422, 428, 69 P. 1111.

Nuncupative will. See that title.

Reciprocal will. One in which two or more persons make mutual or reciprocal provisions in favor of each other. Ginn v. Edmundson, 173 N.C. 85, 91 S.E. 696. Also known as a "mutual," "double," or "counter" will. Wright v. Wright, 215 Ky. 394, 285 S.W. 188, 189.

Self-proved wills. A will which eliminates some of the formalities of proof by execution in compliance with statute. It is made self-proved by affidavit of attesting witnesses in the form prescribed by statute. Most statutes provide that, unless contested, such a will may be admitted to probate without testimony of subscribing witnesses.

Statute of wills. See Wills Act, infra.

Unofficious will. In the civil law, testamentum inofficium, one made in disregard of natural obligations as to inheritance. Stein v. Wilinski, 4 Redy's Sur. (N.Y.) 450; 2 Bla.Comm. 502; Hadley, Rom.L. 317. It has no place in the common law; 1 Fost. & F. 578.

WILL CONTEST. A proceeding sui generis, a proceeding of question of whether there is or is not a will. cary v. Michael, 233 Mo.App. 797, 109S.W.2d of 50, 51. Any kind of litigated controversy concerning the eligibility of an instrument to probate as distinguished from validity of the contents of the will. In re Hesse's Estate, 62 Ariz. 273, 157 P.2d 347, 349.

WILLA. In Hindu law. The relation between a master or patron and his freedman, and the relation between two persons who had made a reciprocal testamentary contract. Wharton.

The word "wilful" is a word of many meanings depending on the context in which it is used. Zimberg v. United States, C.C.A.Mass., 142 F.2d 132, 137.

A "willful" act may be described as one done intentionally, knowingly, and purposely, without justifiable excuse, as distinguished from an act done carelessly, thoughtlessly, heedlessly, or inadvertently. Lobdell Car Wheel Co. v. American Surety Co., 125 A. 462, 464, 2 W.W.Harr. (Del.) 462.

"Willfulness" implies an act done intentionally and designedly; "wantonness" implies action without regard to the rights of others, a conscious failure to observe care, a conscious invasion of the rights of others, willful, unrestrained action; and "recklessness" a disregard of consequences, an indifference whether a wrong is done or not, and an indifference to natural and probable consequences. Jensen v. Denver & R. G. R. Co., 44 Utah, 100, 138 P. 1185, 1188. See also, Evans v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 289 Mo. 493, 233 S.W. 397, 399; Cover v. Hershey Transit Co., 290 Pa. 551, 139 A. 266, 268; Feore v. Trammel, 212 Ala. 325, 102 So. 539, 533; Crosman v. Southern Pac. Co., 44 Nev. 284, 286, 136 P. 583, 584.

Conscious; knowing; done with stubborn purpose, but not with malice. Bundy v. State, 206 N.W. 21, 22, 1141 Neb. 121; American Surety Co. v. New York v. Sullivan, C.C.A.N.Y., 7 F.2d 605, WILLFUL

Premeditated; malicious; done with evil intent, or with a bad motive or purpose, or with indifference to the natural consequences; unlawful; without legal justification. State v. Vander- veer, 11-5 Wash. 184, 196 P. 650; State v. Johnson, 194 N.C. 378, 139 S.E. 697, 698; Boyce v. Greeley Square Hotel Co., 228 N.Y. 106, 126 N.E. 647, 649; State v. Palmer, 94 Vt. 278, 110 A. 436, 437.

WILLFUL OR WANTON MISCONDUCT. Failure to exercise ordinary care to prevent injury to a person who is actually known to be or reasonably expected to be within the range of a dangerous act being done. Georgia Power Co. v. Deese, 78 Ga.App. 704, 51 S.E.2d 64, 65.

WILLFUL MURDER. The unlawful and intentional killing of another without excuse or mitigating circumstances. State v. Dalton, 178 N.C. 779, 101 S.E. 548, 549.

WILLFUL NEGLIGENCE. See Negligence.

WILLS ACT. In England. The statute 32 Hen. VIII. c. 1, passed in 1540, by which persons seized in fee-simple of lands held in socage tenure were enabled to devise the same at their will and pleasure, except to bodies corporate; and those who held estates by the tenure of chivalry were enabled to devise two-third parts thereof.

Also, the statute 7 Wm. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 26, passed in 1837, and also called "Lord Langdale's Act." This act permits of the disposition by will of every kind of interest in real and personal estate, and provides that all wills, whether of real or of personal estate, shall be attested by two witnesses, and that such attestation shall be sufficient. Other important alterations are effected by this statute in the law of wills. Mozley & Whiteley.

WINCHESTER MEASURE. The standard measure of England, originally kept at Winchester. 1 Bl.Comm. 274.

WINCHESTER, STATUTE OF. A statute passed in the thirteenth year of the reign of Edward I., by which the old Saxon law of police was enforced, with many additional provisions. 2 Reeve, Eng.Law, 163; Crabb, Hist.Eng.Law, 189. It required every man to provide himself with armor to aid in keeping the peace; and if it did not create the offices of high and petty constables, it recognized and regulated them, and charged them with duties answering somewhat to those of our militia officers. The statute took its name from the ancient capital of the kingdom. It was repealed by the Statute of 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27. See 1 Seld. Essays 153.

WIND SHIELD. On automobiles, the glass between the two front standards or posts—not ordinarily including wind deflectors placed outside of such standards. Hammond v. Benzer Corporation, D.C.N.Y., 295 F. 908, 912.

WIND UP. To settle the accounts and liquidate the assets of a partnership or corporation, for the purpose of making distribution and dissolving the concern. State v. Norman, 86 Okl. 36, 206 P. 522, 527; State v. Quigley, 93 Okl. 296, 220 P. 918; Barrett v. Skalsky, 118 Kan. 162, 233 P. 1043.

WINDING–UP ACTS. In English law. General acts of parliament, regulating settlement of corporate affairs on dissolution.

WINDOW. An opening made in the wall of a building to admit light and air, and to furnish a view or prospect. Hale v. Ins. Co., 46 Mo.App. 508; Benner v. Benner, 119 Me. 79, 109 A. 376, 377. The use of this word in law is chiefly in connection with the doctrine of ancient lights and other rights of adjacent owners.

WINDOW ENVELOPE. One which has on its face a patch of transparent paper forming a window through which an address written upon an inclosure can be seen. Outlook Envelope Co. v. Samuel Cupples Envelope Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 223 F. 327, 329.

WINDOW TAX. A tax on windows, levied on houses which contained more than six windows, and were worth more than £5 per annum; established by St. 7 Wm. III. c. 18. St. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 36, substituted for this tax a tax on inhabited houses. Wharton.

WINDSHAKES. Cracks in timber that are due to the wind when the timber stood, or to drying in the center after the timber is cut. Swartz v. Bergendahl-Knight Co., 259 Pa. 421, 103 A. 220, 221.

WINDSOR FOREST. A royal forest founded by Henry VIII.

WINDY SHOTS. In blasting operations, explosions which cause pieces of rock to fly up in the air. Brede v. Minnesota Crushed Stone Co., 146 Minn. 406, 178 N.W. 820, 821.

WINTER. A period of three months, whether reckoned astronomically from the winter solstice, on December 21, to the vernal equinox, on March 21, or according to the conventional method used in the United States as including December, January, and February. Saarela v. Hoglund, 198 Ill. App. 485, 487. In a popular sense, the cold months. Whitney v. Aronson, 21 Cal.App. 9, 130 P. 700.

WINTER CIRCUIT. An occasional circuit appointed for the trial of prisoners, in England, and in some cases of civil causes, between Michaelmas and Hilary terms.

WINTER HEYNING. The season between 11th November and 23d April, which is excepted from the liberty of commoning in certain forests. St. 23 Car. II. c. 3.

WISBY, LAWS OF. The name given to a code of maritime laws promulgated at Wisby, then the capital of Gotland, in Sweden, in the latter part of the thirteenth century. This compilation resembled the laws of Oleron in many respects, and was early adopted, as a system of sea laws, by the commercial nations of Northern Europe. It formed the foundation for the subsequent code of the Hanseatic League. A translation of the Laws of Wisby may be seen in the appendix to 1 Pet. Adm. And see 3 Kent, Comm. 13. They are also printed in 30 F.Cas. 1189.

WISTA. In Saxon law. Half a hide of land, or sixty acres.

WIT. To know; to learn; to be informed. Used only in the infinitive, to wit, which term is equivalent to "that is to say," "namely," or "videlicet."

WITAM. The purgation from an offense by the oath of the requisite number of witnesses.
WITAN

WITAN. In Saxon law. Wise men; persons of information, especially in the laws; the king’s advisers; members of the king’s council; the optimates, or principal men of the kingdom. 1 Spence, Eq. Jur. 11, note.

WITCHCRAFT. Under Sts. 33 Hen. VIII. c. 8, and 1 Jac. I. c. 12, the offense of witchcraft, or supposed intercourse with evil spirits, was punishable with death. These acts were not repealed till 1736. 4 Bl.Comm. 60, 61. In Salem, in 1692, 20 persons were put to death by hanging. The last victims in England were executed in 1716, and the last in Scotland in 1722. 29 Encyc. Americana, 430, 431; 1 Beard, Rise of Amer. Civilization, 150.

WITE. Sax. A punishment, pain, penalty, mulct, or criminal fine. Cowell.

An atonement among the early Germans by a wrong-doer to the king or the community. It is said to be the germ of the idea that wrong is not simply the affair of the injured individual, and is therefore a condition precedent to the growth of a criminal law. 2 Holdsw. Hist. E. L. 37. See 1 Sel.Essays, Anglo-Amer. L. H. 100.

WITEKDEN. A taxation of the West Saxons, imposed by the public council of the kingdom.

WITENA DOM. In Saxon law. The judgment of the county court, or other court of competent jurisdiction, on the title to property, real or personal. 1 Spence, Eq.Jur. 22.

WITENAGEMOTE. (Spelled, also, witenagemot, wittenagemot, witanagemote, etc.) “The assembly of wise men.” This was the great national council or parliament of the Saxons in England, comprising the noblemen, high ecclesiastics, and other great thanes of the kingdom, advising and aiding the king in the general administration of government.

It was the grand council of the kingdom, and was held, generally, in the open air, by public notice or particular summons, in or near some city or populous town. These notices or summonses were issued upon determination by the king’s select council, or the body met without notice, when the throne was vacant, to elect a new king. Subsequently to the Norman Conquest it was called commune concilium regni, curia regis and finally parliamen; but its character had become considerably changed. It was a court of last resort, more especially for determining disputes between the king and his thanes, and, ultimately, from all inferior tribunals. Great offenders, particularly those who were members of or might be summoned to the king’s court, were here tried. The casual loss of title-deeds was supplied, and a very extensive equity jurisdiction exercised. 1 Spence, Eq.Jur. 73; 1 Bla.Comm. 147; 1 Reeve, Hist.Eng.Law 7; 9 Co.Pref. It passed out of existence with the Norman Conquest, and the subsequent Parliament was a separate growth, and not a continuation of the Witenagemot. 29 Encyc. Americana, 432.

WITENS. The chiefs of the Saxon lords or thanes, their nobles, and wise men.

WITH ALL FAULTS. This phrase, used in a contract of sale, implies that the purchaser assumes the risk of all defects and imperfections, provided they do not destroy the identity of the thing sold.

WITH CONSENT. Phrase within a Constitution providing that Governor shall appoint officers with consent of senate, requires confirmation by senate and appointment under such provision is ineffective until confirmed. State, ex rel. Nagle v. Stafford, 97 Mont. 275, 34 P.2d 372, 379.

WITH PREJUDICE. The term, as applied to judgment of dismissal is as conclusive of rights of parties as if action had been prosecuted to final adjudication adverse to the plaintiff. Fenton v. Thompson, 352 Mo. 199, 176 S.W.2d 456, 460.

WITH STRONG HAND. In pleading. A technical phrase indispensable in describing a forcible entry in an indictment. No other word or circumlocution will answer the same purpose. Rex v. Wilson, 8 Term R. 357.

WITHDRAWAL. Removal of money or securities from a bank or other place of deposit. Hensch v. Metropolitan Savings & Loan Co., 50 Ohio App. 25, 197 N.E. 416, 418.

WITHDRAWING A JUROR. In practice. The withdrawing of one of the twelve jurors from the box, with the result that, the jury being now found to be incomplete, no further proceedings can be had in the cause. The withdrawing of a juror is always by the agreement of the parties, and is frequently done at the recommendation of the judge, where it is doubtful whether the action will lie; and in such case the consequence is that each party pays his own costs (in Pennsylvania it is held that the costs abide the event of the suit). It is, however, no bar to a future action for the same cause. 2 Tidd, Pr. 861, 862; 1 Archb. Pr.K.B. 196; Wabash R. Co. v. McCormick, 23 Ind.App. 258, 55 N.E. 251; People v. Judges of New York, 8 Cow. (N.Y.) 127; Glendening v. Canary, 64 N.Y. 636; Wolcott v. Studebaker, C.C. Ill., 34 F. 8; 3 Term 657; 1 Cr. M. & R. 64; Tr. & H. Pr. § 689; Ry. & M. 402; 3 B. & Ad. 349; 3 Chitty, Pr. 917. In American practice, it is usually a mere method of continuing a case, for some good reason. The cases are collected in a note in 48 L. R.A. 432.

WITHDRAWAL OF CHARGES. A failure to prosecute by the person preferring charges; distinguished from a dismissal, which is a determination of their invalidity by the tribunal hearing them. Butler v. McSweeney, 222 Mass. 5, 109 N.E. 653, 655.
WITHDRAWING RECORD. In practice. The withdrawing by a plaintiff of the nisi prius or trial record filed in a cause, just before the trial is entered upon, for the purpose of preventing the cause from being tried. This may be done before the jury are sworn, and afterwards, by consent of the defendant's counsel. 2 Tidd, Pr. 851; 1 Archb. Pr. K. B. 189; 3 Chit. Pr. 870; 2 C. & P. 185; 3 Camp. 333.

WITHERNAM. In practice. A taking by way of replevin, a taking or a replevin of other goods, in lieu of those that were formerly taken and eloigned or withhelden. 2 Inst. 141. A reciprocal distress, in lieu of a previous one which has been eloigned. 3 Bl.Comm. 148.

The name of a writ which issues on the return of longata to an alias or pluries writ of replevin, by which the sheriff is commanded to take the defendant's own goods which may be found in his bailiwick, and keep them safely, not to deliver them to the plaintiff until such time as the defendant chooses to submit himself and allow the distress, and the whole of it to be repleved; and he is thereby further commanded that he do return to the court in what manner he shall have executed the writ. Hamm.N.P. 453; 2 Inst. 140; Fitzh.N.B. 68, 69.

WITHERSAKE. An apostate, or perfidious rene-gade. Cowell.

WITHOLD. To retain in one's possession that which belongs to or is claimed or sought by an-

WITHOUT DAY. A term used to signify that an adjournment or continuance is indefinite or final, or that no subsequent time is fixed for another meeting, or for further proceedings. See Sine Die.

WITHOUT GIVING COMPENSATION THERE-FOR. This phrase within automobile guest stat-ute indicates an intention to exclude application of "guest" designation not only to one who has paid cash or equivalent for his transportation but also to one who pays such recompense as makes it worth the other's while to furnish the ride. Duvall v. Tashjian, 32 Cal.App.2d 444, 90 P.2d 140, 143.

WITHOUT HER CONSENT. This phrase, as used in the law of rape, is equivalent to "against the will," and signifies the manifestation of the utmost reluctance and greatest resistance on the woman's part. State v. Catron, 317 Mo. 894, 296 S.W. 141, 143.

WITHOUT IMPEACHMENT OF WASTE. The effect of the insertion of this clause in a lease for life is to give the tenant the right to cut timber on the estate, without making himself thereby liable to an action for waste. When a tenant for life holds the land without impeachment of waste, he is, of course, punishable for waste, whether wilful or otherwise. But still this right must not be wantonly abused so as to destroy the estate; and he will be enjoined from committing malicious waste. Bac.Abr. Waste (N) ; 2 Eq.Cas. Abr. Waste (A, pl. 8). And see Derham v. Hovey, 195 Mich. 243, 161 N.W. 883, 884, 21 A.L.R. 999.

WITHOUT JUSTIFICATION. In a statute punishing any parent who willfully or without justi-fication deserts a child under 16 years of age in destitute or necessitous circumstances, the term "without justification" is equivalent to "willfully." Ex parte Strong, 95 Tex.Cr.R. 250, 252 S.W. 767, 769.

WITHOUT NOTICE. As used of purchasers, etc., equivalent to "in good faith." Hunt v. Gragg, 19 N.M. 450, 145 P. 136, 138.

WITHOUT PREJUDICE. Where an offer or ad-mission is made "without prejudice," or a motion is denied or a suit dismissed "without prejudice," it is meant as a declaration that no rights or privi-leges of the party concerned are to be considered as thereby waived or lost except in so far as may be expressly conceded or decided. See Genet v. Delaware & H. Canal Co., 170 N.Y. 278, 63 N.E. 350; O'Keefe v. Irvington Real Estate Co., 87 Md. 196, 39 Atl. 428; Olson v. Coalfield School Dist. No. 16 of Divide County, 54 N.D. 657, 210 N.W. 180, 181.
A dismissal "without prejudice" allows a new suit to be brought on the same cause of action. Freidenbloom v. McAfee, Tex.Civ.App., 167 S.W. 28; McIntyre v. McIntyre, 205 Mich. 496, 171 N.W. 393, 394.

The words "without prejudice" import into any transaction that the parties have agreed that as between themselves the receipt of money by one and its payment by the other shall not of themselves have any legal effect on the rights of the parties, but they shall be open to settlement by legal controversy as if the money had not been paid. In re Bell, 344 Pa. 223, 25 A.2d 344, 350.

The words "without prejudice", as used in judgment, ordinarily import the contemplation of further proceedings, and, when they appear in an order or decree, it shows that the judicial act is not intended to be res judicata of the merits of the controversy. Fiumara v. American Surety Co. of New York, 346 Pa. 584, 31 A.2d 283, 287.

WITHOUT RECOOURSE. This phrase, used in making a qualified indorsement of a negotiable instrument, signifies that the indorser means to save himself from liability to subsequent holders, and is a notification that, if payment is refused by the parties primarily liable, recourse cannot be had to him. See Thompson v. First State Bank, 102 Ga. 696, 29 S.E. 610; Binswanger v. Hewitt, 79 Misc. 425, 140 N.Y.S. 143, 145.

An indorser "without recourse" specially declines to assume any responsibility for payment. Arthur v. Rosier, 217 Mo.App. 382, 266 S.W. 737, 738. He assumes no contractual liability by virtue of the indorsement itself; Kaill v. Bell, 88 Kan. 666, 129 P. 1135, 1136; and becomes a mere assignor of the title to the paper, Cameron v. Ham, 23 Ohio App. 359, 155 N.E. 655, 656; but such an indorsement does not indicate that the indorsee takes with notice of defects, or that he does not take on credit of the other parties to the note, Robertson v. American Inv. Co., 170 Ark. 413, 279 S.W. 1008, 1010.

Where a note and mortgage are transferred without recourse, legal effect of words "without recourse" constitutes indorser a mere assignor subject to no liability except as an implied guarantor that instruments are genuine, that he has good title to them, and that he is not aware of any illegality in them. Home Ins. Co. v. Citizens Bank, 181 Miss. 181, 178 So. 589, 590.

WITHOUT STINT. Without limit; without any specified number.

WITHOUT THE STATE. This phrase, in a statute providing that in computing limitations, the time during which the defendant shall be without the state shall be excluded, has no relation to time during which the defendant shall be without the state. This phrase, in a statute providing that in computing limitations, the time during which the defendant shall be without the state, was held not to apply to the defendant if he was in one state and the suit was brought in another. Williams v. Pinney, 175 Wis. 1, 183 N.W. 888, 889.

Without words used in pleadings by way of traverse, particularly by way of special traverse, (q. v.,) importing an express denial of some matter of fact alleged in a previous pleading, including the declaration, plea, replication, etc. Steph.P1. 168, 169, 179, 180. The Latin term is absque hoc. Com.Dig. Pledger (G 1); 1 Chitty, Pl. 576, note a.

WITNESS, v. To subscribe one's name to a deed, will, or other document, for the purpose of attesting its authenticity, and proving its execution, if required, by bearing witness thereto.

To see the execution of, as an instrument, and subscribe it for the purpose of establishing its authenticity. In re Harter's Estate, 229 Iowa 238, 294 N.W. 357, 360, 362.

WITNESS, n. In general, one who, being present, personally sees or perceives a thing; a beholder, spectator, or eyewitness. In re Harter's Estate, 229 Iowa 238, 294 N.W. 357, 362.

One who testifies to what he has seen, heard, or otherwise observed. Wigginton v. Order of United Commercial Travelers of America, C.C.A.Ind., 126 F.2d 659, 666.

A person whose declaration under oath (or affirmation) is received as evidence for any purpose, whether such declaration be made on oral examination or by deposition or affidavit. Code Civ.Proc.Cal. § 1878.

One who is called upon to be present at a transaction, as a wedding, or the making of a will, that he may thereafter, if necessary, testify to the transaction.

Accused, by availing himself of statute providing that accused shall be a competent witness at his own request but not otherwise, assumes position of "witness". State v. McKinnon, 223 N.C. 160, 25 S.E.2d 606, 609; State v. Auston, 223 N. C. 203, 25 S.E.2d 613, 614.

Hostile witness. See that title.

Prosecuting witness. See that title.

Subscribing witness. See that title.

Swift witness. See that title.

Witness to will. One who has attested the will by subscribing his name thereto. In re Johnson's Will, 175 Wis. 1, 183 N.W. 888, 889.

WITNESS AGAINST HIMSELF. The federal constitutional provision that no person shall be compelled in any criminal case, to be a "witness against himself" must be applied in a broad spirit to secure to citizen immunity from self-accusation and provision applies to all proceedings wherein defendant is acting as a witness in any investigation that requires him to give testimony that might tend to show him guilty of crime. U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 5. United States v. Goodner, D.Colo., 35 F.Supp. 286, 290.

WITNESSING PART. In a deed or other formal instrument, is that part which comes after the recitals, or, where there are no recitals, after the parties. It usually commences with a reference to the agreement or intention to be effectuated, then states or refers to the consideration, and concludes with the operative words and parcels, if any. Where a deed effectuates two distinct objects, there are two witnessing parts. 1 Day.Prec.

WITTINGLY. With knowledge and by design, excluding only cases which are the result of accident or forgetfulness, and including cases where one does an unlawful act through an erroneous belief of his right. Osborne v. Warren, 44 Conn. 357.

WITWORD. A legally allowed claim, more especially the right to vindicate ownership or possession by one’s affirmation under oath. Vinogradoff, Engl. Soc. in 11th Cent. 9.

WOLD. Sax. In England. A down or champaign ground, hilly and void of wood. Cowell; Blount.

WOLF’S HEAD. In old English law. This term was used as descriptive of the condition of an outlaw. Such persons were said to carry a wolf’s head, (caput lupinum;) for if caught alive they were to be brought to the king, and if they defended themselves they might be slain and their heads carried to the king, for they were no more to be accounted of than wolves. Termes de la Ley, “Wooltherfod.”

WOMEN. All the females of the human species. All such females who have arrived at the age of puberty. Dig. 50, 16, 13.

WONG. Sax. In old records. A field. Spelman; Cowell.

WOOD. The tough, hard substance of all trees and shrubs. It includes not only the hard fiber bundles of trees and shrubs in general, but also the tougher fibrous components of some herbaceous plants. It is a very broad term and includes not only material obtained from exogenous plants, but also like substances obtained from palms, from bamboo (which is a giant grass), and from ferns (which are herbaceous plants). Steinhardt & Bro. v. U. S., 9 Ct.Cust.App. 62, 63.

WOOD LEAVE. A license or right to cut down, remove, and use standing timber on a given estate or tract of land. Osborne v. O’Reilly, 42 N.J.Eq. 467, 9 A. 209.

WOOD PLEA COURT. A court held twice in the year in the forest of Clun, in Shropshire, for determining all matters of wood and agistments. Cowell.

WOOD-CORN. In old records. A certain quantity of oats or other grain, paid by customary tenants to the lord, for liberty to pick up dead or broken wood. Cowell.

WOOD-MOTE. In forest law. The old name of the court of attachments; otherwise called the “Forty-Days Court.” Cowell; 3 Bl.Comm. 71.

WOODS. A forest; land covered with a large and thick collection of natural forest trees. The old books say that a grant of “all his woods” (omnes boscos suos) will pass the land, as well as the trees growing upon it. Co.Litt. 4b. See Averitt v. Murrell, 49 N.C. 323; Hall v. Cranford, 50 N.C. 3; Achenbach v. Johnston, 84 N.C. 264.

WOODSRIDER. This term has been applied to an overseer of work in the woods for a private turpentine operator. Griffith v. Hulion, 90 Fla. 582, 107 So. 354, 355.

WOOD-STREET COMPTER. The name of an old prison in London.

WOODWARDS. Officers of the forest, whose duty consists in looking after the wood and vert and venison, and preventing offenses relating to the same. Manw. 189.

WOOL-SACK. The seat of the lord chancellor of England in the house of lords, being a large square bag of wool, without back or arms, covered with red cloth. Webster; Brande.

WORDS. Symbols indicating ideas and subject to contraction and expansion to meet the idea sought to be expressed. Association for Protection of Adirondacks v. MacDonald, 253 N.Y. 234, 170 N.E. 902, 903. But labels whose content and meaning are, continually shifting with the times. Massachusetts Protective Ass’n v. Bayersdorfer, C.C.A.Ohio, 105 F.2d 595, 597.

As used in law, this term generally signifies the technical terms and phrases appropriate to particular instruments, or aptly fitted to the expression of a particular intention in legal instruments. See the subtitles following.

WORDS ACTIONABLE IN THEMSELVES. In libel and slander, impute the guilt of some offense for which the party, if guilty, might be indicted and punished by the criminal courts. Parker v. Kirkland, 298 I1l.App. 340, 18 N.E.2d 709, 718.

WORDS OF ART. The vocabulary or terminology of a particular art or science, and especially those expressions which are idiomatic or peculiar to it. See Cargill v. Thompson, 57 Minn. 534, 59 N.W. 638.

WORDS OF LIMITATION. See Limitation.

WORDS OF PROCREATION. To create an estate tail by deed, it is necessary that words of procreation should be used in order to confine the estate to the descendants of the first grantee, as in the usual form of limitation,—"to A. and the heirs of his body." Sweet.
WORKS

WORDS OF PURCHASE, See Purchase.

WORK. To exert one’s self for a purpose, to put forth effort for the attainment of an object, to be engaged in the performance of a task, duty, or the like. The term covers all forms of physical or mental exertions, or both combined, for the attainment of some object other than recreation or amusement. Leathers & Martin v. Conley, La. App., 157 So. 607, 609. Tennessee Coal, Iron & R. Co. v. Muscoda Local No. 123, Ala., 64 S.Ct. 698, 703, 705, 321 U.S. 590, 88 L.Ed. 949, 152 A.L.R. 1014.

“Work,” so far as it refers to a provision regulating street trades for children, means selling, exposing or offering articles for sale, regardless of whether such activity is carried on under technical employment or for a wage. Commonwealth v. Prince, 313 Mass. 223, 46 N.E.2d 755, 757.

WORK AND LABOR. The name of one of the common courts in actions of assumpsit, being for work and labor done and materials furnished by the plaintiff for the defendant.

WORK FLOATS. Used to recover sunken logs, are rafts made of logs with boards nailed across on which men stand to work. Ledoux v. Joncas, 163 Minn. 498, 204 N.W. 635, 636.

WORK OF ART. As used in section 5 of the Copyright Act of 1919, 17 U.S.C.A. § 5, relating to the registration of models or designs for work of art, does not necessarily mean something displaying artistic merit, but means “objet d’art,” that is, something upon which the labors of an artist as such may have been employed. Jones Bros. Co. v. Underkoffler, D.C.Pa., 16 F.Supp. 729, 730.

WORK OF NATIONAL IMPORTANCE. Under the Selective Service Act providing that conscientious objectors should be assigned to such work means work of value to the nation for the common defense and general welfare. 50 U.S.C.A. Appendix § 305 (g). United States ex rel. Zucker v. Underkoffler, D.C.Pa., 16 F.Supp. 729, 730.

WORK OF NECESSITY. Exempted from operation of Sunday statutes embraces all work reasonably essential to the economic, social or moral welfare of the people, viewed in light of the habits and customs of the age in which they live and of the community in which they reside. Francis- co v. Commonwealth, 180 Va. 371, 23 S.E.2d 234, 238, 239.

WORK PRODUCT. This concept embraces matter representing work done by attorney in his professional capacity in the course of attorney-client relationship. Lundberg v. Welles, D.C.N.Y., 11 F.R.D. 136, 138.

WORK RELIEF. Wages paid by a city or town from money specifically appropriated for the purpose or from money provided by the federal government, or any agency thereof, to persons unemployed or whose employment is inadequate to provide the necessities of life. In re Youngs, 172 Misc. 155, 14 N.Y.S.2d 800, 802.

WORKAWAY. Extra man employed on vessel as an accommodation to himself. The Tashmoo, D.C.N.Y., 48 F.2d 366, 368.

WORK-BEAST, or WORK-HORSE. These terms mean an animal of the horse kind, which can be rendered fit for service, as well as one of maturer age and in actual use. Winfrey v. Zimmerman, 8 Bush (Ky.) 587.

WORK-HOUSE. A place where convicts (or paupers) are confined and kept at labor.

WORKING DAYS.

Construction Contracts

The term "working days" may exclude not only Sundays and holidays, but also days upon which no work can be done because of weather conditions. Christopher & Simpson Architectural Iron & Foundry Co. v. E. A. Steininger Const. Co., 200 Mo.App. 33, 205 S.W. 278, 283; F. J. Mumm Contracting Co. v. Village of Kenmore, 104 Misc. 268, 171 N.Y.S. 673.

Maritime Law

Running or calendar days on which law permits work to be done, excluding Sundays and legal holidays. Sherwood v. American Sugar Refining Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 8 F.2d 586, 588; The Olaf, D.C.Pa., 248 F. 807, 809.

WORKING INTEREST. See Royalty.

The word workmen in provision of Bankruptcy Act regarding priority of wage claims must be construed in accordance with its common and popular meaning, in which sense it would not include professional persons. Bankr.Act § 64, sub. a(2), 11 U.S.C.A. § 113, sub. a(2). In re Paradise Catering Corporation, D.C.N.Y., 36 F.Supp. 974, 975.

Workmen’s Compensation Act

The term "workman" in the Workmen’s Compensation Act means, as the act states, one who engages to furnish services subject to the control of an employer, and the relation necessary to constitute one an employer and another a workman under the act is the relation of master and servant originating in a contract for personal services, subject to complete control of the details of the work and the mode of its performance. Landberg v. State Industrial Accident Commission, 107 Or. 498, 215 P. 594, 596.

WORKMEN’S COMPENSATION. Name commonly used to designate the method and means created by statutes for giving greater protection and security to the workman and his dependents against injury and death occurring in the course of employment. United Air Lines Transport Corporation v. Industrial Commission, 107 Utah 52, 151 P.2d 591, 594. It is not health insurance, and was not intended to compensate for disability through sickness or disease not caused by accidental injury arising out of and in course of employment. Guintow v. Kalamazoo Motor Express, 266 Mich. 16, 253 N.W. 198.

WORKMEN’S COMPENSATION ACTS. Laws passed in most of the states of the Union which provide for fixed awards to employees or their dependents in case of industrial accidents and dispense with proof of negligence and legal actions. Some of the acts go beyond the simple determination of the right to compensation, and provide insurance systems, either under state supervision or otherwise.

Under the acts, methods are usually prescribed for the expression by employers and workmen of their preference as to the acceptance or rejection of the compensation system. This ranges from each workman filing a written rejection to a presumed acceptance in the absence of formal rejection.

Under the elective system in most of the states, it is made an inducement, that where employers refuse to come within the provisions of the compensation law, the customary defenses to actions for injuries shall not be allowed them.

WORKMEN’S COMPENSATION LOSS. See Loss.

WORKS. Sometimes, a mill, factory, or other establishment for performing industrial labor of any sort (South St. Joseph Land Co. v. Pitt, 114 Mo. 135, 21 S.W. 449); also, a building, structure, or erection of any kind upon land, as in the civil-law phrase “new works.”

New Works

A term of the civil law comprehending every sort of edifice or other structure which is newly commenced on a given estate or lot. Its importance lies chiefly in the fact that a remedy is given (“denunciation of new works”) to an adjacent proprietor whose property would be injured or subjected to a more onerous servitude if such a work were allowed to proceed to completion.

Public Works

Works, whether of construction or adaptation, undertaken and carried out by the national, state, or municipal authorities, and designed to serve some purpose of public necessity, use, or convenience; such as public buildings, roads, aqueducts, parks, etc. Ellis v. Common Council, 123 Mich. 567, 82 N.W. 244; Chattanooga & Tennessee River Power Co. v. U. S., C.C.A.Tenn., 209 F. 28, 29. All fixed works constructed for public use. State v. A. H. Read Co., 33 Wyo. 387, 240 P. 208, 211. The term usually relates to the construction of public improvements and not to their maintenance or operation. State v. Peters, 112 Ohio St. 249, 147 N.E. 81, 83.

WORKSHOP. Within Workmen’s Compensation Acts, a room or place wherein power-driven machinery is employed and manual labor is exercised by way of trade for gain or otherwise. Remsnider v. Union Savings & Trust Co., 89 Wash. 87, 154 P. 135, 136, Ann.Cas.1917D, 40.

It must be one provided or operated by the employer or one over which he has control or supervision. City of Hobart v. Wagoner, 191 Okl. 689, 132 P.2d 926, 927.

WORLD. This term sometimes denotes all persons whatsoever who may have, claim, or acquire an interest in the subject-matter; as in saying that a judgment in rem binds “all the world.”

WORLDLY. Of or pertaining to the world or the present state of existence; temporal; earthly; devoted to, interested in, or connected with this present life, and its cares, advantages, or pleasures, to the exclusion of those of a future life. Anderson v. Gibson, 116 Ohio St. 684, 157 N.E. 377, 379, 54 A.L.R. 92. Concerned with enjoyment of this present existence; secular; not religious, spiritual, or holy. Commonwealth v. American Baseball Club of Philadelphia, 290 Pa. 136, 138 A. 497, 499, 53 A.L.R. 1027.

WORLDLY EMPLOYMENT OR BUSINESS, which, on Sunday, is prohibited by statutes in some states, includes the operation of a motion picture show under the New Jersey Vice and Immorality Act, § 1 (4 Comp.St.1910, p. 5712), Rosenberg v. Arrowsmith, 82 N.J.Eq. 570, 89 A. 524, 525, and one who does this habitually is guilty of keeping a disorderly house. State v. Rosenberg, N.J.Sup., 115 A. 203. The words also include, in Delaware, under Rev.Code 1915, § 4784, the playing of football on Sunday, knowing that tickets of admission were being offered for sale and sold to the public, Walsh v. State, Del.Super., 136 A. 160, 163, and, in Pennsylvania, professional baseball, Commonwealth v. American Baseball Club of Philadelphia, 200 Pa. 136, 138 A. 497, 499, 53 A.L.R. 1027. But in the latter state it has been thought, at least by the lower courts, that notwithstanding Act April 22, 1794 (3 Smith’s Laws, p. 177), § 1 (18 P.S. § 1991) one may lawfully purchase a cigar on Sunday. Commonwealth v. Hoover, 25 Pa. Super.Ct. 133, 134.

WORRYING CATTLE OR SHEEP. Within statutes providing that any one finding a dog, nut on the premises of its owner, worrying cattle or sheep, may kill the dog, means to run after; to chase; to bark at. Bass v. Nofsinger, 222 Wis. 480, 269 N.W. 303, 304; Failing v. People, 105 Colo. 399, 98 P.2d 865, 867.

English Law

A title of honor or dignity used in addresses to certain magistrates and other persons of rank or office. Co. 2d Inst. 666; Bacon, Abr. Misnomer (A 2).

Public Worship

This term may mean the worship of God, conducted and observed under public authority; or it may mean worship in an open or public place, without privacy or concealment; or it may mean the performance of religious exercises, under a provision for an equal right in the whole public to participate in its benefits; or it may be used in contradistinction to worship in the family or the closet. In this country, what is called "public worship" is commonly conducted by voluntary societies, constituted according to their own notions of ecclesiastical authority and ritual propriety, opening their places of worship, and admitting to their religious services such persons, and upon such terms, and subject to such regulations, as they may choose to designate and establish. A mission v. Winsted Hosiery Co., 42 S.Ct. 384, 385, 330, 20 Am.St.Rep. 41; State v. Buswell, 40 Neb. 158, 58 N.W. 728, 24 L.R.A. 68; State v. Norris, 59 N.H. 536; Woodall v. State, 4 Ga.App. 783, 62 S.E. 485.

WORTHIER TITLE. At common law where testator undertook to devise to an heir exactly same interest in land as such heir would take by descent, descent was regarded as the "worthier title" and heir took by descent rather than by devise. Jones v. Petrie, 156 Kan. 241, 132 P.2d 396, 398.

WORTHIEST OF BLOOD. In the English law of descent. A term applied to males, expressive of the preference given to them over females. See 2 B1.Comm. 234-240. See some singular reasons given for this in Plowd. 305.

WORTHING OF LAND. A certain quantity of land so called in the manor of Kingsland, in Hereford. The tenants are called "worthies." Wharton.

WORTHLESS. Destructive of worth, of no value or use. Spring City Foundry Co. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 54 S.Ct. 644, 292 U.S. 182, 78 L.Ed. 1200.

WORTHY. Having worth; possessing merit; valuable; deserving of honor, or the "ike; of high station.; of high social position; deserved, merited. Woodstown Nat. Bank and Trust Co. v. Snelbaker, 136 N.J.Eq. Eq. 62, 40 A.2d 222, 227.

WOUND. An injury to the body of a person or animal, especially one caused by violence, by which the continuity of the covering, as skin, mucous membrane, or conjunctiva, is broken. Gasperino v. Prudential Ins. Co. of America, Mo.App., 107 S.W.2d 819, 827. Any breaking up or disintegration of the natural continuity of a tissue of the body. Gasperino v. Prudential Ins. Co. of America, Mo.App., 107 S.W.2d 819, 827. Also injuries of every kind which affect the body, whether they are cuts, lacerations, fractures, or bruises. State v. Hammerli, Kan.Sup., 58 P. 559; Gatlin v. State, 18 Ga.App. 9, 89 S.E. 345. Also, any lesion of the body, Robinson v. Masonic Protective Ass'n, 87 Vt. 138, 88 A. 531, 47 L.R.A.,N.S., 924, a "lesion" being a hurt, loss, or injury. People v. Durand, 307 Ill. 611, 139 N.E. 78, 83.

WOUNDED FEELINGS. Such as result from indignities to self-respect, sensibilities, or pride of a person, as distinguished from usual mental pain and suffering consequent to physical injury. Interstate Life & Accident Co. v. Brewer, 56 Ga.App. 599, 193 S.E. 458, 464.

WOUNDING. An aggravated species of assault and battery, consisting in one person giving another some dangerous hurt. 3 Bl.Comm. 121.

Wreck Commissioners
Persons appointed by the English lord chancellor under the merchant shipping act, 1876, (section 29.) to hold investigations at the request of the board of trade into losses, abandonments, damages, and casualties of or to ships on or near the coast of the United Kingdom, whereby loss of life is caused. Sweet.

WRECKFREE. Exempt from the forfeiture of shipwrecked goods and vessels to the king. Cowell.

WRESTLING. Engaging in a contest, usually between two persons, who seek to throw each other to the ground or floor, commonly in such a manner that one contestant’s shoulders are held against the ground or floor. Jacobs v. Loyal Protective Ins. Co., 97 Vt. 516, 124 A. 848, 852.

WRINKLE. A stria; furrow; channel; hollow; depression; rut; cup; pocket; dimple. Maxim Mfg. Co. v. Imperial Mach. Co., C.C.A.II., 286 F. 79, 83.

WRIST-DROP. A form of paralysis of the hand and wrist resulting from an affection of the nerve which supplies the muscles of the forearm, wrist, and hand. Freeman v. Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 52 Mont. 1, 154 P. 912, 913.

WRIT. A precept in writing, couched in the form of a letter, running in the name of the king, president, or state, issuing from a court of justice, and sealed with its seal, addressed to a sheriff or other officer of the law, or directly to the person whose action the court desires to command, either as the commencement of a suit or other proceeding or as incidental to its progress, and requiring the performance of a specified act, or giving authority and commission to have it done.

For the names and description of various particular writs, see the titles below.

Old English Law
An instrument in the form of a letter; a letter or letters of attorney. This is a very ancient sense of the word.

In the old books, "writ" is used as equivalent to "action;" hence writs are sometimes divided into real, personal, and mixed.

Scotch Law
A writing; an instrument in writing, as a deed, bond, contract, etc. 2 Forb. Inst. pt. 2, pp. 175-179.

General
Alias writ. A second writ issued in the same cause, where a former writ of the same kind has been issued without effect.

Close writ. In English law, a name given to certain letters of the sovereign, sealed with his great seal and directed to particular persons and for particular purposes, which, not being proper for public inspection, were closed up and sealed on the outside; also, a writ directed to the sheriff instead of to the lord. 2 BLComm. 346; 3 Reeve, Eng. Law. 45.
WRIT

Concurrent writs. Duplicate originals, or several writs running at the same time for the same purpose, for service on or arrest of a person, when it is not known where he is to be found; or for service on several persons, as when there are several defendants to an action. Mozley & Whitley.

Judicial writs. In English practice. The capias and all other writs subsequent to the original writ not issuing out of chancery, but from the court to which the original was returnable. Being grounded on what had passed in that court in consequence of the sheriff's return, they were called judicial writs, in contradistinction to the writs issued out of chancery, which were called original writs. 3 Bl.Comm. 282. Such writs as issue under the private seal of the courts, and not under the great seal of England, and are tested or witnessed, not in the king's name, but in the name of the chief judge of the court out of which they issue. The word "judicial" is used in contradistinction to "original;" original writs being such as issue out of chancery under the great seal, and are witnessed in the king's name. See 3 Bl. Comm. 282. Pullman's Palace-Car Co. v. Washington.

Juristic writ. One which is issued, or comes to the officer's hands, at a later time than a similar writ, at the suit of another party, or on a different claim, against the same defendant.

Original writ. In English practice. An original writ was the process formerly in use for the commencement of personal actions. It was a mandatory letter from the king, issuing out of chancery, sealed with the great seal, and directed to the sheriff of the county wherein the injury was committed, or was supposed to have been committed, requiring him to command the wrong-doer or accused party either to do justice to the plaintiff or else to appear in court and answer the accusation against him. This writ is now disused, the writ of summons being the process prescribed by the uniformity of process act for commencing personal actions; and under the judicature act, 1873, all suits, even in the court of chancery, are to be commenced by such writs of summons. Brown.

Patent writ. In old practice, an open writ; one not closed or sealed up.

Peremptory writ. An original writ, called from the words of the writ a "si to fecerit securum," and which directed the sheriff to cause the defendant to appear in court without any option given him, provided the plaintiff gave the sheriff security effectually to prosecute his claim. The writ was very occasionally in use, and only where nothing was specifically demanded, but only a satisfaction in general; as in the case of writs of trespass on the case, wherein no debt or other specific thing was sued for, but only damages to be assessed by a jury. Brown.

Prerogative writs. Those issued by the exercise of the extraordinary power of the crown (the court, in modern practice) on proper cause shown; namely, the writs of procedendo, mandamus, prohibition, quo warranto, habeas corpus, and certiorari.

WRIT DE BONO ET MALO. See De Bono et Malo; Assize.

WRIT DE EJECCTIONE FIRMAE. See Ejectione Firmw.

WRIT DE HIERETICO COMBURENDO. See De Haeretico Comburendo.

WRIT DE HOMINE REPLEGIANDO. See De Homine Replegiando.

WRIT DE ODIO ET ATIA. See De Odio et Atia.

WRIT DE RATIONABILI PARTE BONORUM. See De Rationabili Parte Bonorum.

WRIT OF AD QUOD DAMNUM. See Ad Quod Damnum.

WRIT OF ASSISTANCE. The name of a writ which issues from the court of chancery, in aid of the execution of a judgment at law, to put the complainant into possession of lands adjudged to him, when the sheriff cannot execute the judgment. Emerick v. Miller, Ind.App., 62 N.E. 285; Hagerman v. Heltzel, 21 Wash. 444, 58 R 580; Marblehead Land Co. v. Los Angeles County, D.C. Cal., 276 F. 305.

A form of process issued by an equity court to transfer the possession of lands, title or possession to which it has previously adjudicated, as a means of enforcing its decree, and performs the same office in a suit in equity as an execution in an action at law. Burney v. Lee, 57 Ariz. 41, 110 P.2d 554, 556. Its office is confined to lend aid to original equity jurisdiction, and the writ cannot be employed as a substitute for other common-law or statutory actions. Patterson v. McKay, 202 Ark. 241, 150 S.W.2d 196. It is essentially a mandatory injunction, effect of which is to bring about a change in the possession of realty—it dispossesses the occupant and gives possession to one adjudged entitled thereto by the court. Dusbabek v. Local Building & Loan Ass'n, 178 Okl. 592, 63 P.2d 756, 759.

A "writ of assistance" is equivalent to the writ of habeas facias possessionem at law, and issues as of course without notice, so far as the parties to the record are concerned, when necessary to execute a decree. Gardner v. Duncan, 104 Miss. 477, 61 So. 545, 546.

While the office of both a writ of assistance and a writ of possession is to put the party entitled thereto into the possession of property, the former issues from equity and the latter from law. Southern State Bank v. Leverette, 187 N.C. 743, 123 S.E. 68, 70.

An ancient writ issuing out of the exchequer. Moz. & W. A writ issuing from the court of exchequer to the sheriff commanding him to be in aid of the king's tenants by knight's service, or the king's collectors, debtors, or accountants, to enforce payment of their own dues, in order to enable them to pay their own dues to the king. 1 Madox, Hist. Exch. 675.

WRIT OF ASSOCIATION. In English practice. A writ whereby certain persons (usually the clerk of assize and his subordinate officers) are directed to associate themselves with the justices and sergeants; and they are required to admit the said persons into their society in order to take the assizes. 3 Bl.Comm. 59.

WRIT OF ATTACHMENT. A writ employed to enforce obedience to an order or judgment of the court. It may take the form of commanding the sheriff to attach the disobedient party and to have him before the court to answer his contempt. Smith, Act. 176.

In its generic sense, any mesne civil process in the nature of a writ on which property may be attached, including trustee process. Smith v. Smith, 120 Me. 379, 115 A. 87, 88. See, also, Attachment.

WRIT OF CONSPIRACY. A writ which anciently lay against persons who had conspired to injure the plaintiff, under the same circumstances which would now give him an action on the case. It did not lie at common law, in any case, except when the conspiracy was to indict the party either of treason or felony; all the other cases of conspiracy in the books were but actions on the case. Hutchins v. Hutchins, 7 Hill (N.Y.) 104.

WRIT OF COVENANT. A writ which lies where a party claims damages for breach of covenant; i.e., of a promise under seal.

WRIT OF DEBT. A writ which lies where the party claims the recovery of a debt; i.e., a liquidated or certain sum of money alleged to be due to him.

This is debt in the debet, which is the principal and only common for. There is another species mentioned in the books, called the debt in the detinet, which lies for the specific recovery of goods under a contract to deliver them. 1 Chitty, Pl. 101.

WRIT OF DECEIT. The name of a writ which lies where one man has done anything in the name of another, by which the latter is damnedified and deceived. Fitzh.Nat.Brev. 95, E.

WRIT OF DELIVERY. A writ of execution employed to enforce a judgment for the delivery of chattels. It commands the sheriff to cause the chattels mentioned in the writ to be returned to the person who has obtained the judgment; and, if the chattels cannot be found, to restrain the person against whom the judgment was given until he returns them. Smith, Act. 175; Sweet.

WRIT OF DETINUE. A writ which lies where a party claims the specific recovery of goods and chattels, or deeds and writings, detained from him. This is seldom used; trover is the more frequent remedy, in cases where it may be brought.

WRIT OF DOWER. This is either a writ of dower unde nihil habet, which lies for a widow, commanding the tenant to assign her dower, no part of which has yet been set off to her; or a writ of right of dower, whereby she seeks to recover the remainder of the dower to which she is entitled, part having been already received from the tenant. This latter writ is seldom used.

WRIT OF EJECTMENT. The writ in an action of ejectment, for the recovery of lands. See Ejectment.

WRIT OF ENTRY. A real action to recover the possession of land where the tenant (or owner) has been disseised or otherwise wrongfully dispossessed. If the disseisor has aliened the land, or if it has descended to his heir, the writ of entry is said to be in the per, because it alleges that the defendant (the aliencee or heir) obtained posses...sion through the original disseisor. If two alienations (or descents) have taken place, the writ is in the per and cui, because it alleges that the defendant (the second aliencee) obtained possession through the first aliencee, to whom the original disseisor had aliened it. If more than two alienations (or descents) have taken place, the writ is in the post, because it simply alleges that the defendant acquired possession after the original disseisin. Co.Litt. 238b; 3 Bl.Comm. 150.

The writ of entry was abolished, with other real actions, in England, by St. 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 27, § 36, but is still in use in a few of the states of the Union. Sweet. See, also, Entry, Writ of.

WRIT OF ERROR. A writ issued from a court of appellate jurisdiction, directed to the judge or judges of a court of record, requiring them to remit to the appellate court the record of an action before them, in which a final judgment has been entered, in order that examination may be made of certain errors alleged to have been committed, and that the judgment may be reversed, corrected, or affirmed, as the case may require. Siegel-schiffer v. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 248 F. 226, 228; Ward v. Williams, 270 Ill. 547, 110 N.E. 821, 823; Board of County Comrs of Harford County v. Jay, 122 Md. 324, 89 A. 715, 717.

It is brought for supposed error in law apparent on record and takes case to higher tribunal, which affirms or reverses. Chambers v. State, 117 Fla. 642, 158 So. 153. It is commencement of new suit to set aside judgment, and is not continuation of suit to which it relates. Winchester v. Winn, 225 Mo.App. 288, 29 S.W.2d 188, 190. And unless abolished by statute, is writ of right applicable to all cases in which jurisdiction is exercised according to course of common law, but is inapplicable to cases not known to or in derogation of common law, unless otherwise provided by statute. Freeport Motor Casualty Co. v. Madden, 354 Ill. 329, 188 N.E. 415, 416.

"Appeal" is a process of civil law origin that entirely removes cause to appellate court subjecting facts as well as law to review and retrial, while "writ of error" is a process of common-law origin and removes nothing to appellate court for re-examination except the law. Whidden v. Abbott, 119 Fla. 25, 160 So. 475.

WRIT OF ERROR CORAM NOBIS. A common-law writ, the purpose of which is to correct a judgment in the same court in which it was rendered, on the ground of error of fact. Washington v. State, 92 Fla. 740, 110 So. 259, 262; People v. Black, 89 Cal.App. 225, 264 P. 346; for which the statute provides no other remedy, which fact did not appear of record, Ernst v. State, 181 Wis. 155,
WRIT

193 N.W. 978, or was unknown to the court when judgment was pronounced, and which, if known, would have prevented the judgment, and which was unknown, and could not have been known to the party by the exercise of reasonable diligence in time to have been otherwise presented to the court, unless he was prevented from so presenting them by duress, fear, or other sufficient cause. Nickels v. State, 86 Fla. 208, 98 So. 502, 504; Smulski v. H. Feinstein Furniture Co., Del.Super., 193 A. 585, 587; as where judgment is rendered against a party after his death, or an infant not properly represented by guardian, or a femme covert where common-law disability still exists, or where some defect exists in the process or the execution thereof. Schneider v. Schneider, Mo.App., 273 S.W. 1081, 1083; 1 Saund. 101; Steph.P1. *119; Day v. Hamburg, 1 Browne, Pa. 75.

An ordinary "writ of error" is brought for a supposed error in law apparent on the record, and takes the case to a higher tribunal where the question is to be decided and the judgment, sentence or decree is to be affirmed or reversed, while the "writ of error coram nobis" is brought for an alleged error in fact not appearing on the record and lies to the same court in order that it may correct the error, which it is presumed would not have been committed had the fact been brought to the court's notice in the first instance. State v. Wagner, 232 Wis. 138, 286 N.W. 544, 545.

At common law in England, it issued from the Court of King's Bench to a judgment of that court. Its principal aim is to afford the court in which an action was tried an opportunity to correct its own record with reference to a vital fact not known when the judgment was rendered. Lamb v. State, 91 Fla. 396, 107 So. 535, 537, 538; Rhodes v. State, 199 Ind. 183, 156 N.E. 389, 392. It is also said that at common law it lay to correct purely ministerial errors of the officers of the court. Cramer v. Illinois Commercial Men's Ass'n, 260 Ill. 516, 103 N.E. 459, 461.

WRIT OF ERROR CORAM VOBIS. This writ, at the English common law, is distinguished from "writ of error coram nobis," in that the former is issued from the Court of King's Bench to a judgment of the Court of Common Pleas, whereas the latter is issued from the Court of King's Bench to a judgment of that court. Lamb v. State, 107 So. 535, 537, 91 Fla. 396.

WRIT OF EXECUTION. A writ to put in Three the judgment or decree of a court.

WRIT OF EXIGI FACIAS. See Exigent.

WRIT OF FALSE JUDGMENT. A writ which appears to be still in use to bring appeals to the English high court from inferior courts not of record proceeding according to the course of the common law. Archb.Pr. 1427.

WRIT OF FORMEDON. A writ which lies for the recovery of an estate by a person claiming as issue in tail, or by the remainder-man or reversioner after the termination of the entail. See Formedon.

WRIT OF INQUIRY. In common-law practice. A writ which issues after the plaintiff in an action has obtained a judgment by default, on an unliquidated claim, directing the sheriff, with the aid of a jury, to inquire into the amount of the plaintiff's demand and assess his damages. Lennon v. Rawitzer, 57 Conn. 583, 19 A. 334; Havens v. Hartford & N. R. Co., 28 Conn. 70; McGowin v. Dickson, 182 Ala. 161, 62 So. 685, 688.

WRIT OF MAINPRIZE, or MAINPRISE. In English law. A writ directed to the sheriff, (either generally, when any man is imprisoned for a bailable offense and bail has been refused, or specially, when the offense or cause of commitment is not properly bailable below,) commanding him to take sureties for the prisoner's appearance, commonly called "mainprors," and to set him at large. 3 Bl.Comm. 128. See, also, Mainprise.

WRIT OF MANDAMUS. See Mandamus.

WRIT OF MESNE. In old English law. A writ which was so called by reason of the words used in the writ, namely, "Unde idem A. qui medius est inter C. et præcipientem B."; that is, A., who is mesne between C., the lord paramount, and B., the tenant paravail. Co.Litt. 100a.

WRIT OF PREVENTION. This is the writ of execution employed to enforce a judgment to recover the possession of land. It commands the sheriff to enter the land and give possession of it to the person entitled under the judgment. Smith, Act. 175. For a distinction between this writ and the "Writ of Assistance," see that title.

WRIT OF PRIECIPE. This writ is also called a "writ of covenant," and is sued out by the party to whom lands are to be conveyed by fine, the foundation of which is a supposed agreement or covenant that the one shall convey the land to the other. 2 Bl.Comm. 349.

WRIT OF PROCLAMATION. In English law. A writ issued from the Court of King's Bench to a judgment of that court. 4 Reeve, Hist. Eng. Law 261.

WRIT OF PREVENTION. This name is given to certain writs which may be issued in anticipation of suits which may arise. Co.Litt. 100. See Quia Timet.

WRIT OF PROCLAMATION. In English law. By the statute 31 Eliz. c. 3, § 1, when an exigent is sued out, a writ of proclamation shall issue at the same time, commanding the sheriff of the county where the defendant dwells to make three proclamations thereof, in places the most notorious, and most likely to come to his knowledge, a month before the outlawry shall take place. 3 Bl.Comm. 284.

When it is not directed to the same sheriff as the exigent is, it is called a foreign writ of proclamation. 4 Reeve, Hist. Eng. Law 261.

WRIT OF PROHIBITION. See Prohibition.

WRIT OF PROTECTION. In England, the king may, by his writ of protection, privilege any person in his service from arrest in civil proceedings during a year and a day; but this prerogative is seldom, if ever, exercise. Archb.Pr. 687. See Co. Litt. 130a.

WRIT OF QUARE IMPEDIT. See Quare Impe-dit.

WRIT OF RECAPTION. If, pending an action of replevin for a distress, the defendant distrains again for the same rent or service, the owner of the goods is not driven to another action of replevin, but is allowed a writ of recaption, by which he recovers the goods and damages for the defendant’s contempt of the process of the law in making a second distress while the matter is sub judice. Woodf. Landl. & Ten. 484.

WRIT OF REPLEVIN, See Replevin.

WRIT OF RESTITUTION. A writ which is issued on the reversal of a judgment commanding the sheriff to restore to the defendant below the thing levied upon, if it has not been sold, and, if it has been sold, the proceeds. Bac.Abr. “Execution,” Q. A writ which lies, after the reversal of a judgment, to restore a party to all that he has lost by occasion of the judgment. 2 Tidd, Pr. 1186.

WRIT OF REVIEW. A general designation of any form of process issuing from an appellate court and intended to bring up for review the record or decision of the court below. Hopkins v. Benson, 21 Me. 401; West v. De Moss, 50 La.Ann. 1349, 24 So. 325. In Code practice, a substitute for, or equivalent of, the writ of certiorari. California & O. Land Co. v. Gowen, C.C.Ore., 48 F. 775; Burnett v. Douglas County, 4 Or. 389; In re Winegard, 78 Hun, 58, 28 N.Y.S. 1039.

WRIT OF RIGHT. A writ which lay for one who had the right of property, against another who had the right of possession and the actual occupation. The writ properly lay only to recover incorporeal hereditaments for an estate in fee-simple; but there were other writs, said to be “in the nature of a writ of right,” available for the recovery of incorporeal hereditaments or of lands for a less estate than a fee-simple. Brown; Fitzh. Nat.Brev. 125.

"Originally a writ of right is so called because it orders the feudal lord to do full right to the demandant, plenum rectum tenere . . . But when possessory actions have been established in the king’s court, ‘right’ is contrasted with ‘seisin,’ and all writs originating proprietary actions for land . . . come to be known as writs of right.” Maitland, in 2 Sel.Essa;’s, Anglo-Am.Leg. Hist. 563.

In another sense, a writ which is grantable as a matter of right, as opposed to a “prerogative writ,” which is issued only as a matter of grace or discretion.

WRIT OF SUMMONS. The writ by which, under the English judicature acts, all actions are commenced.

WRIT OF SUPERSEDEAS. See Supersedeas.

WRIT OF SUPERVISORY CONTROL. A writ which is issued only to correct erroneous rulings made by the lower court within its jurisdiction, where there is no appeal, or the remedy by appeal cannot afford adequate relief, and gross injustice is threatened as the result of such rulings. State v. District Court of First Judicial Dist. in and for Lewis and Clark County, 50 Mont. 428, 147 P. 612, 613. It is in nature of summary appeal to control course of litigation in trial court when necessary to prevent miscarriage of justice, and may be employed to prevent extended and needless litigation. State ex rel. Regis v. District Court of Second Judicial Dist. in and for Silver Bow County, 102 Mont. 74, 55 P.2d 1295.

Function of "writ of supervisory control" is to enable Supreme Court to control course of litigation in inferior courts where such courts are proceeding within their jurisdiction, but by mistake of law, or willful disregard of it, are doing gross injustice, and there is no appeal or remedy by appeal is inadequate. State ex rel. State Bank of Townsend v. District Court of First Judicial Dist. in and for Lewis and Clark County, 94 Mont. 551, 25 P.2d 396.

WRIT OF TOLT. In old English law. The name of a writ to remove proceedings on a writ of right patent from the court-baron into the county court.

WRIT OF TRIAL. In English law. A writ directing an action brought in a superior court to be tried in an inferior court or before the under-sheriff, under St. 3 & 4 Wm. IV, c. 42. It is now superseded by the county courts act of 1867, c. 142, § 6, by which a defendant, in certain cases, is enabled to obtain an order that the action be tried in a county court. 3 Steph.Comm. 515, n.; Mozley & Whitley.

WRIT OF WASTE. The name of a writ to be issued against a tenant who has committed waste of the premises. There were anciently several forms of this writ, adapted to the particular circumstances. Fitzh.Nat.Brev. 125.

WRIT PRO RETORNO HABENDO. A writ commanding the return of the goods to the defendant, upon a judgment in his favor in replevin, upon the plaintiff’s default.

WRITER OF THE TALLIES. In England, An officer of the exchequer whose duty it was to write upon the tallies the letters of tellers’ bills.

WRITER TO THE SIGNET. In Scotch law. An officer nearly corresponding to an attorney at law, in English and American practice. “Writers to the signet,” called also “clerks to the signet,” derive their name from the circumstance that they were anciently clerks in the office of the secretary of state, by whom writs were prepared and issued under the royal signet or seal; and, when the signet became employed in judicial proceedings, they obtained a monopoly of the privileges of acting as agents or attorneys before the court of session. Brande, voc. “Signet.”

WRITING. The expression of ideas by letters visible to the eye. Clason v. Bailey, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 491. The giving an outward and objective form to a contract, will, etc., by means of letters or marks placed upon paper, parchment, or other material substance.
In the most general sense of the word, "writing" denotes a document, whether manuscript or printed, as opposed to mere spoken words. Writing is essential to the validity of certain contracts and other transactions. Sweet. See "Instrument."

WRITING OBLIGATORY. The technical name by which a bond is described in pleading. Denton v. Adams, 6 Vt. 40.

WRITTEN CONTRACT. See Contract.

WRITTEN INSTRUMENT. Something reduced to writing as a means of evidence, and as the means of giving formal expression to some act or contract. Curlee Clothing Co. v. Lowery, Tex.Civ.App., 275 S.W. 730, 732.

WRITTEN LAW. One of the two leading divisions of the Roman law, comprising the leges, plebiscita, senatus-consulta, principium placita, magistratum edicta, and responsa prudentium. Inst. 1, 2, 3.

WRONG. A violation of the legal rights of another; an invasion of right to the damage of the parties who suffer it, especially a tort. State ex rel. and to Use of Donelon v. Deuser, 345 Mo. 628, 134 S.W.2d 132, 133. It usually signifies injury to person, property or relative noncontractual rights of another than wrongdoer, with or without force, but, in more extended sense, includes violation of contract. Daurizio v. Merchants' Despatch Transp. Co., 152 Misc. 716, 274 N.Y.S. 174.

The idea of rights naturally suggests the correlative one of wrongs; for every right is capable of being violated. A right to receive payment for goods sold (for example) implies a wrong on the part of him who owes, but withholds the price; a right to live in personal security, a wrong on the part of him who commits personal violence. And therefore, while, in a general point of view, the law is intended for the establishment and maintenance of rights, we find it, on closer examination, to be dealing both with rights and wrongs. It first fixes the character and definition of rights, and then, with a view to their effectual security, proceeds to define wrongs, and to devise the means by which the latter shall be prevented or redressed. 1 Steph.Comm. 126.

Private Wrong

Public Wrongs

Violations of public rights and duties which affect the whole community, considered as a community; crimes and misdemeanors. 3 Bl.Comm. 2; 4 Bl.Comm. 1.

Real Wrong

In old English law. An injury to the freehold.

WRONGDOER. One who commits an injury; a tort-feasor. The term ordinarily imports an invasion of right to the damage of the party who suffers such invasion. Merrill v. Comstock, 154 Wis. 434, 143 N.W. 313, 317.

WRONGFUL ACT. Any act which in the ordinary course will infringe upon the rights of another to his damage, unless it is done in the exercise of an equal or superior right. Victor v. Lewis, La.App., 157 So. 293, 295; Louis Kamm, Inc., v. Flink, 113 N.J.Law 582, 175 A. 62, 67, 99 A.L.R. 1.

No act is "wrongful" unless the probability of injury to some determinate person or class of persons raises the duty as to those persons to refrain from such act. Harper v. Remington Arms Co., 156 Misc. 53, 280 N.Y.S. 862.

WRONGFUL DEATH STATUTES. Statutory provision which operates upon the common-law rule that the death of a human being may not be complained of as an injury in a civil court. The cause of action for wrongful death is for the wrong to the beneficiaries. In re Daniel's Estate, 294 N.W. 465, 470, 208 Minn. 420.

See, also, Survival Statutes.

WRONGFUL LEVY. Which will entitle the owner of property levied on to damages for wrongful execution, has been made where there has been done to a third person's personality those acts that would constitute a valid and complete levy if the debtor's property had been seized. Farris v. Castor, 186 Okl. 668, 99 P.2d 900, 902, 903.

WRONGLY. In a wrong manner; unjustly; in a manner contrary to the moral law, or to justice. Board of Com'r's of Howard County v. Armstrong, 91 Ind. 536.

WRONGFULLY INTENDING. In the language of pleading, this phrase is appropriate to be used in alleging the malicious motive of the defendant in committing the injury which forms the cause of action.

WRONGOUS. In Scotch law. Wrongful; unlawful; as wrongous imprisonment. Ersk.Prin. 4, 4, 25.

WURTH. In Saxon law. Worthy; competent; capable. Athswurthe, worthy of oath; admissible or competent to be sworn. Spelman.

WYE. As applied to a street railway, a "wye" means a track with two branches, one joining the main track from one direction and the other joining the main track from another direction. Falls v. Grand Rapids, G. H. & M. Ry. Co., 189 Mich. 644, 155 N.W. 548, 549.

WYTE. In old English law. Acquittance or immunity from amercement.
X. In the written terminology of various arts and trades, where two or more dimensions of the same piece or article are to be stated, this letter is a well-known symbol equivalent to the word "by." Thus, the formula "3 x 5 in." will be understood, or may be explained by parol evidence, to mean "three by five inches," that is, measuring three inches in one direction and five in another. See Jaqua v. Witham & A. Co., 106 Ind. 547, 7 N.E. 314.

XENODOCHIUM. In the civil and old English law. An inn allowed by public license, for the entertainment of strangers, and other guests. Calvin.; Cowell.

A hospital; a place where sick and infirm persons are taken care of. Cowell.

XENODOCHY. Reception of stranger; hospitality. Enc. Lond.

XYLON. A punishment among the Greeks answering to our stocks. Wharton.
YACHT. Vessel larger than a rowboat used for private pleasure. Barker v. Inhabitants of Town of Fairhaven, 265 Mass. 333, 163 N.E. 901, 902.

YACHT BASIN. A system of channels, docks and wharves suitable for carrying, floating, anchoring, landing, loading and unloading yachts and other like sea-going craft. State v. City of Clearwater, 135 Fla. 148, 184 So. 790, 794.

YAHRTZEIT. In the Orthodox Jewish faith an annual prayer for repose of soul of dead person. In re Fleishfarb’s Will, 151 Misc. 399, 271 N.Y.S. 736.

YARD. A measure of length, containing three feet, or thirty-six inches.

A piece of land inclosed for the use and accommodation of the inhabitants of a house.

An enclosure, with or without buildings, devoted to some work or business. Grace Iron & Steel Corporation v. Ackerman, 123 N.J.L. 54, 7 A.2d 820, 822.

YARDLAND, or virgata terce, is a quantity of land, said by some to be twenty acres, but by Coke to be of uncertain extent.

YARDMAN. Employee who takes care of or assists in care of yards and grounds. Statter v. Herring, 217 Iowa 410, 251 N.W. 715.

YEA AND NAY. Yes and no. According to a charter of Athelstan, the people of Ripon were to be believed in all actions or suits upon their yea and nay, without the necessity of taking any oath. Brown.

See, also, Yeas and Nays.

YEAR. The period in which the revolution of the earth round the sun, and the accompanying changes in the order of nature, are completed. Generally, when a statute speaks of a year, twelve calendar, and not lunar, months are intended. Cro.Jac. 166. The year is either astronomical, ecclesiastical, or regnal, beginning on the 1st of January, or 25th of March, or the day of the sovereign’s accession. Wharton.

The civil year differs from the astronomical, the latter being composed of three hundred and sixty-five days, five hours, forty-eight minutes, forty-six seconds and a fraction, while the former consists sometimes of three hundred and sixty-five days, and at others, in leap-years, of three hundred and sixty-six days.

When the period of a “year” is named, a calendar year is generally intended, but the subject-matter or context of statute or contract in which the term is found or to which it relates may alter its meaning. J. L. Hammett Co. v. Alfred Peates Co., 105 N.E. 370, 217 Mass. 520, L.R.A.1915A, 334; United States Trust Co. v. Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation, 299 Mass. 296, 13 N.E.2d 6, 299 Mass. 296.

Natural Year

In old English law. That period of time in which the sun was supposed to revolve in its orbit, consisting of 365 days and one-fourth of a day, or six hours. Bract. fol. 359b.

Year and Day

This period was fixed for many purposes in law. Thus, in the case of an estray, if the owner did not claim it within that time, it became the property of the lord. So the owners of wreck must claim it within a year and a day. Death must follow upon wounding within a year and a day if the wounding is to be indicted as murder. Also, a year and a day were given for prosecuting or avoiding certain legal acts; e.g., for bringing actions after entry, for making claim for avoiding a fine, etc. Brown.

Year Books

Books of reports of cases in a regular series from the reign of the English King Edward I., inclusive, to the time of Henry VIII., which were taken by the prothonotaries or chief scribes of the courts, at the expense of the crown, and published annually; whence their name, “Year Books.” Brown.

Year, Day, and Waste

In English law. An ancient prerogative of the king, whereby he was entitled to the profits, for a year and a day, of the lands of persons attainted of petty treason or felony, together with the right of wasting the tenements, afterwards restoring the property to the lord of the fee. Abrogated by St. 54 Geo. III., c. 145. Wharton.

See An, Jour, et Waste.

Year of Our Lord

In England the time of an offense may be alleged as that of the sovereign’s reign, or as that of the year of our Lord. The former is the usual mode. Hence there “year” alone might not indicate the time intended, but as we have no other era, therefore, any particular year must mean that year in our era. Com. v. Doran, 14 Gray (Mass.) 38. The abbreviation A. D. may be omitted; and the word year is not fatal; State v. Bartlett, 47 Me. 393; contra, Com. v. McLoon, 5 Gray (Mass.) 92, 66 Am.Dec. 354.

Year to Year, Tenancy from

This estate arises either expressly, as when land is let from year to year; or by a general parol demise, without any determinate interest, but reserving the payment of an annual rent; or impliedly, as when property is occupied generally under a rent payable yearly, half-yearly, or quarterly; or when a tenant holds over, after the expiration of his term, without having entered into any new contract, and pays rent, (before which he is tenant on sufferance.) Wharton. See, also, Tenant, subtitle Tenant from Year to Year.

Years, Estate for

See Estate for Years.

YEAR OF MOURNING. The Roman "annus lucus" (q. v.).

The reason for the widow's year of mourning has been stated as follows: "But if a man dies, and his widow soon after marries again, and a child is born within such a time as by the course of nature it might have been the child of either husband, in this case he is said to be more than ordinarily legitimate; for he may, when he arrives at years of discretion, choose which of the fathers he pleases. To prevent this, the civil law ordained that no widow should marry for one year, and the same constitution was probably transmitted to our ancestors from the Romans, during their stay in Britain, for we find it established under the Saxon and Danish governments." 1 Bl. Comm. 456 (quoted from Browne's Abr., p. 151 [Gavit's Ed., p. 198]).

YEARLING. A young animal past its first year and not yet two years old. Moran v. State, 160 Miss. 598, 135 So. 209.

YEAS AND NAYS. The affirmative and negative votes on a bill or measure before a legislative assembly. "Calling the yeas and nays" is calling for the individual and oral vote of each member, usually upon a call of the roll.

YEAST. A small cellular micro-organism. In its ordinary significance, it is a conglomerate mass of infinitesimally small cells. Standard Brands v. National Grain Yeast Corporation, N.J., 60 S.Ct. 27, 28, 308 U.S. 34, 84 L.Ed. 17.

YELLOW DOG CONTRACT. A contract by which employer requires employee to sign an instrument promising as condition that he will not join a union during its continuance, and will be discharged if he does join. Denver Local Union No. 13 of International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablesmen, and Helpers of America v. Perry Truck Lines, 101 P.2d 436, 443, 106 Colo. 25.

YEME. In old records. Winter; a corruption of the Latin "hiems." See Hyems.

YEN HOCK. A piece of metal sharpened at one end and blunt on the other end, used to cook an opium pill or yen pock. People v. Graves, 84 Cal. App.2d 531, 191 P.2d 32, 33.

YEOMAN. In English law. A commoner; a freeholder under the rank of gentleman. Cowell. A man who has free land of forty shillings by the year; who was anciently thereby qualified to serve on juries, vote for knights of the shire, and do any other act, where the law requires one that is "probes et legalis homo." 1 Bl.Comm. 406, 407.

This term is occasionally used in American law, but without any definite meaning, except in the United States navy, where it designates an appointive petty officer. Who performs clerical duties usually associated with office workers.

YEOMANRY. The collected body of yeomen.

YEOMEN OF THE GUARD. Properly called "yeomen of the guard of the royal household;" a body of men of the best rank under the gentry, and of a larger stature than ordinary, every one being required to be six feet high. Enc. Lond.

YEVEN, or YEOVEN. Given; dated. Cowell.

YIDDISH. A Middle High German dialect, or number of dialects, spoken by Jews, containing a large number of Germanized Hebrew words, and using Hebrew characters for its literature. U. S. ex rel. Engel v. Tod, C.C.A.2, 294 F. 820, 822.

YIELD. In the law of real property. To perform a service due by a tenant to his lord. Hence the usual form of reservation of a rent in a lease begins with the words "yielding and paying." Sweet.

In patent law. The word "yielding," as used in a patent claim, is not the equivalent of "resilient," or "spring-supported," but may be applied to a part which is retractable at will. Mergenthaler Linotype Co. v. International Typesetting Mach. Co., D.C.N.Y., 229 F. 168, 192.

YIELD UPON INVESTMENT Proportionate rate which the income upon an investment bears to the total cost interest excepted on that investment, taking into consideration the time when the investment may be outstanding before being paid off. Baltimore Mail S. S. Co. v. United States, D.C. Md., 7 F.Supp. 651, 653.

YIELDING AND PAYING In conveyancing. The initial words of that clause in leases in which the rent to be paid by the lessee is mentioned and reserved.

YOKELET. A little farm, requiring but a yoke of oxen to till it.

YOM KIPPUR. Day of Atonement, is the most sacred and solemn holiday in the Jewish calendar, a day on which Jews throughout the world, after a period of fasting, congregate together at their respective synagogues to worship and pray and ask divine forgiveness for sins committed during the year. Hoffman v. Graber, Mo.App., 153 S.W. 2d 817, 818.

YORK—ANTWERP RULES. Certain rules relating to uniform bills of lading formulated by the Association for the Reform and Codification of the Laws of Nations, now the International Law Association.

These rules are commonly incorporated in contracts of affreightment. They are the result of conferences of representatives of mercantile interests from several countries, in the interest of uniformity of law. They have no statutory authority. The text is in Maclachlan's Merch. Shipping. For a history of them, see Lowndes, Gen. Av.

YORK, CUSTOM OF. A custom of the province of York in England, by which the effects of an intestate, after payment of his debts, are in general divided according to the ancient universal doctrine of the pars rationabilis; that is, one-third each to the widow, children, and administrator. 2 Bl.Comm. 518.

YORK, STATUTE OF. An important English statute passed at the city of York, in the twelfth year of Edward II., containing provisions on the subject of attorneys, witnesses, the taking of inquests by nisi priès, etc. 2 Reeve, Eng. Law, 299-302.

YOUNGER CHILDREN. This phrase, when used in English conveyancing with reference to settlements of land, signifies all such children as are not entitled to the rights of an eldest son. It therefore includes daughters, even those who are older than the eldest son. Mozley & Whiteley.

YOUTH. This word may include children and young persons of both sexes. Nelson v. Cushing, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 519, 528.

YULE. The times of Christmas and Lammas.

YVERNAIL BLE. L. Fr. Winter grain. Kelham.
ZAMINDAR. See Zemindar.

ZANJA. Span. A water ditch or artificial canal, and particularly one used for purposes of irrigation. See Pico v. Colimas, 32 Cal. 578.

ZEALOT. This word is commonly taken in a bad sense, as denoting a separatist from the Church of England, or a fanatic. Brown.

ZEALOUS WITNESS. An untechnical term denoting a witness, on the trial of a cause, who manifests a partiality for the side calling him, and an eager readiness to tell anything which he thinks may be of advantage to that side.

ZEIR. O. Sc. Year. "Zeir and day." Bell.

ZEMINDAR. In Hindu law. Landkeeper. An officer who under the Mohammedan government was charged with the financial superintendence of the lands of a district, the protection of the cultivators, and the realization of the government’s share of its produce, either in money or kind. Wharton.

ZEOLITE PROCESS. The "zeolite process" of softening water consists in passing hard water through a filter bed of granular sodium zeolites, which exchange their sodium base for the calcium and magnesium in the water. Permutit Co. v. Wadham, D.C.Mich., 294 F. 370, 371.

ZEOLITES. Chemical compounds existing in nature, and also produced chemically, possessing the unique and valuable property of being able, when saturated with solution of sodium chloride, to take up from water passed through them such hardening elements as calcium or magnesium, and to exchange the same for salt when brought in contact therewith. Permutit Co. v. Graver Corporation, D.C.Ill., 37 F.2d 385, 386.

ZETETICK. Proceeding by inquiry. Enc. Lond.

ZIGARI, or ZINGARI. Rogues and vagabonds in the middle ages; from Zigi, now Circassia.

ZOLL-VEREIN. A union of German states for uniformity of customs, established in 1819. It continued until the unification of the German empire, including Prussia, Saxony, Bavaria, Wurttemberg, Baden, Hesse-Cassel, Brunswick, and Mecklenburg-Strelitz, and all intermediate principalities. It was subsequently superseded by the German empire; and the federal council of the empire took the place of that of the Zoll-Verein. Wharton.

ZONE OF EMPLOYMENT. Within which injuries to employees are compensable under Workmen’s Compensation Acts is the place of employment and the area thereabout, including the means of ingress thereto and egress therefrom under the control of the employer. Merz v. Industrial Commission of Ohio, 134 Ohio St. 36, 15 N.E. 2d 632, 633. It implies reasonable proximity to place of employment. Evans v. Workmen’s Compensation Commissioner, 124 W.Va. 336, 20 S.E.2d 172, 173.

ZONING. The division of a city by legislative regulation into districts and the prescription and application in each district of regulations having to do with structural and architectural designs of buildings and of regulations prescribing use to which buildings within designated districts may be put. Miller v. Board of Public Works of City of Los Angeles, 195 Cal. 477, 234 P. 381, 384, 38 A.L.R. 1479; Elizabeth City v. Aydlett, 201 N.C. 602, 161 S.E. 78, 79.

ZYGOCEPHALUM. In the civil law. A measure or quantity of land. Nov. 17, c. 8. As much land as a yoke of oxen could plow in a day. Calvin.

ZYGOSTATES. In the civil law. A weigher; an officer who held or looked to the balance in weighing money between buyer and seller; an officer appointed to determine controversies about the weight of money. Spelman.

ZYTHUM. Lat. A liquor or beverage made of wheat or barley. Dig. 33, 6, 9, pr.

The Institutes of Justinian are divided into four books,—each book is divided into titles, and each title into paragraphs, of which the first, described by the letters pr., or princip., is not numbered. The old method of citing the Institutes was to give the commencing words of the paragraph and of the title; e. g., § si adversus, Inst. de Nuptiis. Sometimes the number of the paragraph was introduced, e.g. § 12, si adversus, Inst. de Nuptiis. The modern way is to give the number of the book, title, and paragraph, thus,—Inst. 1. 10, 12; would be read Inst., Lib. I. tit. 10, § 12.
